Speakers Honor New Head Of College At Inauguration

DR. LEO W. JENKINS INAUGURATED . . . Gov. Luther H. Hodges and Consolidated University of North Carolina Pres. William C. Friday participate in morning program.

Dr. Jenkins Is Formally Installed As President Of East Carolina

Dr. Leo Warren Jenkins was inaugurated this morning at ceremonies in College Stadium as the sixth president of East Carolina College. The 46-year-old New Jersey native succeeds Dr. John D. Messick, who resigned several months ago. Dr. Jenkins was appointed by the college's Board of Trustees in January. The oath of office was administered this morning by J. Friday, speaking at inauguration ceremonies that officially installed Dr. Leo W. Jenkins as the local college's sixth president, described the new EOC head as having a "high sense of dedication to the improvement of education at every level in North Carolina" that is "refreshing and encouraging."

As the East Carolina College Band played a processional, the group advanced to a decorated stage where they were seated during the exercises. Dr. James L. White, co-chairman of the Inauguration Committee, presided at the morning's program. EOC Dean Robert L. Holt gave the invocation. Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN
 Roses are loved by almost everyone and everything. Humans loved them for their beauty and fragrance—bugs for their gastronomical values.

Roses are the targets for many insects and diseases. These enemies attack the plants from their roots to the top of their stems. All parts, leaves, canes, flowers are eaten, disfigured, and eventually destroyed by a long list of pests.

To have a good clean rose garden, a knowledge of the insects and diseases, their symptoms and other tell tale signs must be recognized and dealt with. By count, in a recent book on pests, (insects and diseases) the rose is a target of twenty-three enemies and this list is not complete one.

With these many things to contend with, the most practical course, in controlling rose pests seems to be one of prevention. A weekly spray schedule should be the answer. This should be augmented with extra spraying (right after rain) and when other causes call for it.

You can't control black spot; you can only control its spread. If black spot is your problem, pick off diseased leaves before applying your spray. Don't waste spray material on sick leaves because it won't do any good.

By keeping spray material on your roses at all times, any insect or disease that happens to drop in can be controlled. This method will enable you to have good roses without worry and trouble of trying to track down each insect or disease.

If, however, you would like to be able to identify any insect or disease that gets through your spray net (due to your failure to have spray material on your roses because of weather conditions or neglect) the following things to look for will help you in knowing what's gnawing:

If the buds turn black and stop blooming, the rose midge is at work. Spraying with D.D.T. will control these pests. Spray bush and ground around the plant. Arsenate of lead or D.D.T. will control the Jap beetle. These beetles skeletonize the leaf and also eat the flowers.

Thrips cause the flower to fail to open or if they do open, petals are distorted and turn brown. Dusting with D.D.T. 5 per cent or malathion 4 per cent every two or three days will control thrips.

The rose slug eats "windows" in the rose leaf. Dusting with D. D.T. 5 per cent will kill off these pests. Yellowish brown beetles eat rose petals and ruin the flowers. This long spiny legged beetle is the rose chafer and is easily controlled by dusting with 5 per cent D.D.T. powder.

The rose leaf beetle (a small oval metallic-green beetle) chews holes in buds and eats the flowers. Dusting with D.D.T. also controls this beetle.

Aphids suck the plant juices, thus stunting the growth of the plant. Black leaf 40 in soapy water will destroy aphids or you can use malathion dust or spray to advantage. Phallan controls—does not cure black spot. Karathane or Mildelex will handle powdery mildew.

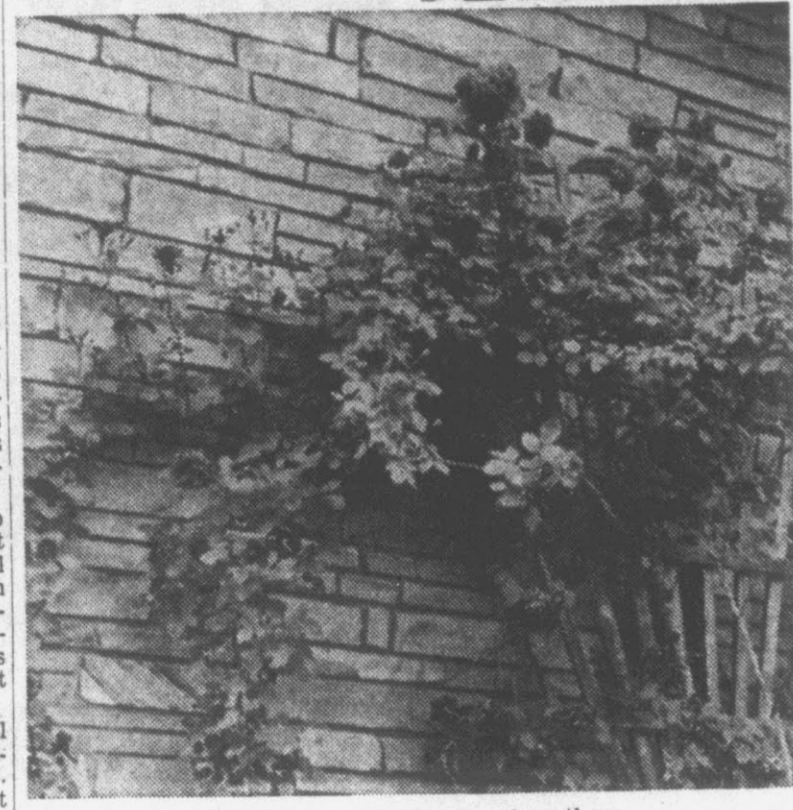

This, by no means, completes the lists of rose pests. You can see you have many things to contend with in your rose garden. To try to combat these by singling them out would mean much spraying with quite a few insecticides and fungicides.

The most sensible approach to control rose troubles should be in an all purpose spray (Triogen or Isotop plus Phaltan. Keep this material on your plants at all times. And to do this you must have and keep a weekly spray schedule.

Oregon Modifies Welfare Program

A number of Oregon Counties have adopted a modified version of the old WPA welfare-work program in conjunction with their county welfare programs in an effort to reduce county expenses and to trim the dead wood out of the welfare rolls.

If the program which began in Oregon last January proves satisfactory, it would be well for counties of North Carolina and other states to give consideration to some similar modification of its welfare programs.

According to the Wall Street Journal, the counties which have adopted the program are now getting some work for the welfare money they are spending, their welfare rolls and declining and the morale of most welfare recipients has improved.

Under the program so far, only physically able men on the welfare rolls of the counties have been assigned work jobs for the county. The jobs include such things as clearing brush along county roads, maintenance and other jobs on county property. In some cases the counties have reported that under the program they have been able to get done needed jobs which otherwise the county could not have paid for. Now that the program has been in operation for several months, there is talk of expanding it to include work for women on the welfare rolls who are physically able to do certain jobs.

Most states and most counties have seen their welfare costs rise constantly in recent years, and so far

Never Enough Campaign Cash

By LYNN NISBET

MONEY — Budget officers in the headquarters of the several candidates are beginning to get together figures for the preliminary financial statements required to be filed next Wednesday candidates who will be voted upon in more than one county must report to the Secretary of State. County candidates will file reports with the clerk of court.

These reports will be interesting, but perhaps not very informative. The statute is somewhat lax in its requirements and by long custom further evasions are permitted without question. The situation is much better than it was a few years back when the legal limit for spending for candidates for Governor and U. S. Senator was $12,000. In face of commonly known and provable expenditures of $100,000 or more the candidates or their managers managers filed sworn statements showing a few dollars more than $11,000 spent. There is presently no statutory limit, and most people expect each of the four leading candidates for Governor to report $75,000 to $100,000 spent.

While candidates are reluctant to report what they spent, and even more reluctant to tell where the money came from, there is reason to believe that popular estimates of spending are too high. In some respects the political spending estimates are like the precensus estimates of population. The actual nose-count by census takers in almost every instance showed fewer people in cities and towns than the local boosters had claimed. Audited figures of campaign spending very probably would show more than reported, but a good deal less than popular estimates.

NOT ENOUGH — The candidates are in full agreement on one or two points. None will admit he has enough money to carry on the kind of campaign he wants and needs, but each one insists that his opponents are having no monetary problems.

Early reports were that Terry Sanford and John Larkins had plenty of money before they started running for Governor. Malcolm Seawell told newspapermen at his announcement party that he would not have entered the race without what he thought was adequate financial backing. Beverly Lake withdrew from the contest because he said he did not have enough money, then got back in big because apparently the money had shown up. Now all of them say they are short of adequate financing.

Addison Hewlett started to run for Governor, changed to the Senate, because he said he they have shown no tendency to level off. Welfare costs have taken an increasingly larger percentage out of the local county budgets year after year.

While the old welfare-work WPA program was designed primarily to deal with unemployment and relief problems during the depression, it seems some of the fundamental points of the program can be applied on a county basis to the welfare program local governments face in this era of economic prosperity.

Certainly the program adopted by the Oregon counties does not mean that every person on the welfare rolls has to perform work for the county in order to receive their relief benefits. At the same time, it has afforded the counties a means of getting done some of the jobs they could not otherwise afford and it has enabled them to cope with some of the financial problems common to most local governments these days.

The new Oregon program seems, on the surface, to have sufficient merit to warrant careful study by other states to determine whether the new thinking that has been injected into the welfare programs there might be applied in counties in other states.

Other Hopefuls Must Now Challenge Kennedy

With Sen. Hubert Humphrey officially out of the race for the Democratic nomination, Sen. John Kennedy remains the undisputed leader of the field of candidates, his position greatly strengthened by his victory in West Virginia.

The Kennedy victory Tuesday was two-fold. Not only did he win in a state where experts had said the outcome was doubtful, but he managed to remove from future competition the contender who has met him at the ballot box in preferential primaries. Sen. Humphrey had not been given much of a chance of receiving the Democratic nomination at any point so far in the race. Even so, his efforts to pick up support by entering preferential primaries had kept Sen. Kennedy busy, and in the spotlight so far as the voters are concerned.

Now, with Sen. Humphrey removed as a challenger to Sen. Kennedy, the other presidential hopefuls in the party will be forced to move to the fore to challenge Kennedy.

Will they be effective with the people? Will they gain public support as Sen. Kennedy has done in primaries, or will they suffer setbacks as Sen. Humphrey did?

It is a chance the others in the field of candidates must take in an effort to stop the Kennedy bandwagon before it goes beyond the point where it will have sufficient momentum to carry it through the convention balloting.

Sen. Lyndon Johnson and Sen. Stuart Symington are both avowed candidates for the Democratic nomination although they have remained in the background while Kennedy and Humphrey slugged it out. The same applies to Adlai Stevenson who is regarded as a possible candidate although he has made no overt move so far to gain the nomination.

If someone other than Kennedy is to receive the nomination, it appears now that he will have to challenge Kennedy openly. Which of the other candidates will it be?

Counter-Charge U. S. Silent On

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Why hasn't the United States been tough enough to call Premier Nikita Khrushchev a phony for his hypocritical show about the American spy-plane downed over the Soviet Union?

That's one of the two most puzzling questions about this whole episode in which the Soviet captured the plane and the pilot and, through Khrushchevian propaganda, pictured the United States before the world as an international villain.

This is the other: Why for a week has Khrushchev been putting on the horrid and self-righteous performance against spying when he and the Soviet Union have been up to their necks in espionage?

The State Department — after first lying about it but then admitting it after Khrushchev produced the evidence of the one downed plane — acknowledged this country has been sending spy planes around and into the Soviet Union for years.

But the Soviet Union for years has been spying on other countries around the world, including this one. Nobody's kidding anybody. But Khrushchev chose to put on the injured innocence act because just one U.S. plane flight — to aerial spying on the Soviet Union.

Now Khrushchev says his attitude towards Eisenhower has changed — because of that State Department admission — and has indicated Eisenhower may not be welcomed in the Soviet Union. The President is supposed to go there in June to visit Khrushchev.

But this effort to diminish Eisenhower's stature is as phony as all the rest. As boss of the Soviet Union, Khrushchev has had to do exactly what Eisenhower did but in reverse: He has had to give general approval for Soviet spying.

This is the classic example of the upside-down and black-is-white world of communism. Still, for some unexplainable reason, Eisenhower and this government have been reluctant to wrap Khrushchev's own hypocrisy around his neck.

Their Favorite Picture

A class from Elmhurst Elementary School was touring the Greenville Art Center and viewing the exhibition of Old Masters.

Some little girls saw "us" (the camera and yours truly) getting ready to take a picture of George Washington, in his portrait form.

"Have you been taking pictures of all these paintings?" they asked. We said yes, most of them. "Did you see the picture of The Thompson Brothers Fishing (by John Constable)?" they asked. We nodded yes.

Then one of the young ladies said that was her favorite painting, the one she had looked forward most to seeing, and it had been sold during the exhibition here and had to be sent back to New York. She expressed her disappointment at not seeing the picture.

One of her friends agreed with her, and said, with a disappointed sigh, "I wish they hadn't sold THIS one."

All the young ladies were agreed on this being their favorite picture. They sounded so polite and interested in the exhibition.

Then we noticed the round yellow signs worn by almost every young girl in the class, all saying in red letters, "Vote for Jamie." This naturally aroused our interest in who was Jamie and what was the election, so we asked.

"They proudly pointed to Jamie, a sweet-looking young lady, who was running for secretary of her class. 'We're all voting for Jamie,' they said. Jamie wore one of these signs, too. But we noticed no signs for other candidates!"

One of the group explained the whole thing to us, laughing and saying, "It's all a lot of fun." Little people are really grown-ups.

All of them gathered around Mrs. J.H.B. Moore and thanked her for her courtesy during their tour. And they left, smiling and filled with art.

MISS NORTH CAROLINA... could be called "Miss Congeniality" of the next few years and some past. Judi Lynn Klipfel was here yesterday, and it wasn't the clothes she modeled or so much beauty, but her sincerity and sparkling personality that made her so welcome.

"It should be remembered that the United States is the most powerful country in the world, and certainly the richest, and therefore we encounter a certain amount of resentment or envy among the peoples of poor, less fortunate countries. If we flout our wealth and are loud and generally bombastic it makes a poor impression on the more quiet, less aggressive people of more downtrodden countries. Therefore, the conduct of American tourists will be increasingly important in the years to come."

—Plattsburgh (Neb.) Journal.

"The gang killing of a white youth in a street of Philadelphia will not be called a lynching, no matter what the facts show. Lynchings occur only south of the Mason-Dixon Line." — Charleston News and Courier.

What is not clear is what circumstances inside Soviet Russia are forcing Khrushchev to reorganize the political forces in his country. He has taken one of his ablest men out of the government and elevated him to the direction of the Communist Party. This elevation of Prok Kozlov would indicate that there is more trouble in Russia than we know. If the party is strong, under the Soviet system, the government will take care of itself. Stalin trusted no one with power in the party. Khrushchev apparently finds that the load is too heavy to carry and has to have assistance of younger men whose blood pressure is not too high.

But what is the load that has become so heavy? Is it internal? Has a generation which never knew the Revolution been asking too many questions? No (Continued on page six.)

Nikita Feeling Strains

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

COPYRIGHT, 1960, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC. It is beginning to appear that Nikita Khrushchev wants to call off the Summit Conference or President Eisenhower's visit to Soviet Russia or both. The Summit Conference can now amount to nothing. Too much is occurring before the conference to make it more than a meeting of an estranged husband and wife in a lawyer's office. The bloom has withered.

The visit of President Eisenhower to Russia in June is something else. There can be no question but that President Eisenhower ordinarily would bring cheer and good will to the Russian people. He has been blessed with a charming personality which quickly wins friendship. Khrushchev is doing everything conceivable to break down the will of the Russian people to receive Eisenhower with enthusiasm. He may be afraid of the political consequences of such a reception. It may no longer suit his purposes to have it happen.

Khrushchev is now engaged in a war of enterprise of anti-Americanism in Latin America, the center of which is presently Cuba. He may not want this enterprise interrupted even by the externals of friendship.

Khrushchev has a particular hatred for Vice President Nixon on whom he bowled him over in a free debate in public in Moscow. Khrushchev can give pretty insulting talk but he cannot take any back-talk. This was early learned by Malenkov, Molotov and Kaganovich. He chose the opening of the American Fair to give Nixon a bad time. With the skill of a trained debater, Nixon turned the tables and to use an old phrase, made a monkey out of Khrushchev. For this reason, Khrushchev hates Nixon and has made his hatred plain for all to see.

But there have been no prior indications that he also disliked Eisenhower. Nixon turned him down in the spirit of Camp David was a Khrushchev slogan for a while. Khrushchev's present conduct is making it increasingly difficult for President Eisenhower to go to Russia and the efforts are so persistent and so irritating that they are becoming unmistakable and sharply antagonistic.

Khrushchev's game apparently is to get Eisenhower to decline to go. Then the Russian will enter upon a world-wide denunciation of Eisenhower and the United States. If President Eisenhower sits tight, according to schedule, Khrushchev may find himself in the embarrassing position of being forced to tell Eisenhower that he does not want him to come.

Such a communication, after the reception that it might result in breaking off relations. It would if there were any grip left in the State Department. This much is clear: The honeymoon engineered by Cyrus Eaton, Robert Dowling, Eric Johnston and other businessmen is over. The United States has consistently appeased Khrushchev, not to gain time, but with the pacifistic objective of avoiding war. It is not possible to cringe more or to crawl more or to take many more insults. The rejection of Eisenhower's visit could be the last straw.

What is not clear is what circumstances inside Soviet Russia are forcing Khrushchev to reorganize the political forces in his country. He has taken one of his ablest men out of the government and elevated him to the direction of the Communist Party. This elevation of Prok Kozlov would indicate that there is more trouble in Russia than we know. If the party is strong, under the Soviet system, the government will take care of itself. Stalin trusted no one with power in the party. Khrushchev apparently finds that the load is too heavy to carry and has to have assistance of younger men whose blood pressure is not too high.

Other Editors Saying Challenge From The West

(Henderson Dispatch) As the date draws near for the approaching summit conference in Paris, some officials in Washington are looking a little more closely at a speech by Premier Khrushchev at Baku some days ago. The theory now is that the blunt talk was a Soviet ultimatum ordering the West out of Berlin.

An ultimatum usually contains a deadline for compliance with the demand presented. But this does not dispose of what Khrushchev said, and there are fears that President Eisenhower might brush it off as unimportant, only to arrive in Paris to learn that the Moscow ultimatum meant it as just what the President has said he would not attend the conference under threat or blackmail, but if he ignores the speech he could find himself present at the meeting under precisely such conditions.

One of the things that has always been amazing about dealings with the Communists by the West is that the West never or rarely ever at best-takes the initiative. There is contentment to sit idly by and allow international relations to drag along without stirring up strife and ill will. On the surface that is good, but underneath is found an attitude that is directly opposed to such procedure. To be content with allowing affairs to rock along as they may in the hope that in the end all will be well is not enough, as has often been demonstrated. To await a brazen demand from Moscow then react and wiggle and squirm in an effort to find a way out, is to be outsmarted.

Why not an ultimatum from the West? Why not now and then tell Khrushchev what he must do?

There could be several answers to this enigma. One is that the Western nations are not aggressors. They have no axe to grind, they only want peace in the world.

But wouldn't it be as sensible to demand that Russia get out of Poland, or Czechoslovakia or the captive Baltic states as for Khrushchev to demand that the Allies get out of Berlin? The West is in Berlin under terms of a solemn agreement, made in good faith. The Soviets are in the satellite states by force and remain there by force, and not because they are wanted. Khrushchev would be just as adamant in resisting Allied ultimatums as he is crusty and rigid in assuming the initiative toward the West. He knows any such demands from his adversaries would not be backed by force, should that become necessary. Therefore, he ignores Western policy and launches out into the deep on his own. That keeps the Allies in hot water most of the time, but provides the Kremlin chief with a device for further advances in his diabolical ambitions for world domination.

Nevertheless, it is difficult to see why anything could be lost by making some demands upon Khrushchev — except that our side in making them would back away in the face of Soviet threats and force rather than risk open conflict. He knows that. Does that explain Western timidity and hesitancy?

Large Problem In Small Orders

By ELMER ROESSNER

"American companies are finding solutions to the common and often costly problem of filling small orders," the National Industrial Conference Board reports today after a study among 254 companies.

That's nice. It's undoubtedly true as far as the Conference Board sample went. But from what businessmen tell me, small orders is one of their greatest problems. After net profits taxes and labor relations.

A small order is simply an order for fewer of an item than the producer can economically fill. For example: A distributor orders a carload of refrigerators at a carload price — wires in for one more each of models FX-756 and BX-999, at the carload price, match. Or a small shop writes to another supplier for one dozen copper gaskets 4-1,000ths of an inch thicker than usual for a special job.

orders, the Board added. Sometimes savings are achieved by skipping certain steps in the normal routine. Some firms, in fact, find it cheaper to fill small orders without charge than to incur the paper work otherwise necessary.

Other companies use price differentials, either to add enough on the price to make small orders profitable, to jack the price up to discourage small orders, or to provide incentives for purchasers to increase the size of orders.

Still other manufacturers avoid small orders by channeling them to distributors and jobbers, and many others have established minimum requirements. Some companies "take direct action" to eliminate accounts that fail to meet desired volume standards, or that show little promise of growth.

The facts on this last class might interest the Federal Trade Commission and the Small Business Administration. They can get the details from the National Industrial Conference Board, 460 Park Ave., New York 22, in the Board's 94th in its series of business policies. "Small Orders: Problems and Solutions."

NATIVE HANDICRAFTS HAVE LITTLE FUTURE Whenever American do-gooders run across an undeveloped country, the first impulse seems to be to suggest developing markets for the country's handicrafts. Those interesting carvings, weavings, and paintings, they like to believe, will help lift the country out of poverty.

Nonsense. Even the finest bits of handicraft in vast volume cannot lift a country out of its trouble. It needs a good material or product in high demand. Dolls, paper objects and carvings never did anything for the Japanese over a century, but electronic, photographic and optical equipment is working wonders. Venezuela's famous handicraft is a gold orchid set with a pearl from the island of Margarita, which means "pearl." But these orchids have not brought Venezuela one-millionth of the money it has gained by selling oil.

THE RELATION OF THE INDIVIDUAL DISCIPLE OF CHRIST TO THE UNREGENERATED WORLD

Scripture—Matthew 5:10-16; 13:31-35.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL THE FINAL BEATITUDE given by Christ in His Sermon on the Mount is, "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Then He says: "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven; for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you."—Matthew 5:10-12.

world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house."

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matthew 5:14-16.

This does not mean that we should boast of our good deeds, but that we should so live that others may say of us that we are good people because we practice Jesus' teachings.

Of the parables of the woman who leavened bread and the man who sowed the grain of seed in the earth we do not have space in this lesson; the teachers, of course, should comment on them.

We must, however, include Christ's teaching on Christian

Brazilian Livestock Men Visiting Pitt This Week

BRAZILIAN LIVESTOCK MEN . . . are shown as they inspect a pen at the Tarheel Landrace Farm near Bethel yesterday.

Seven Brazilian livestock men, representing both the Brazilian Government and private businesses, toured Pitt County swine producers yesterday and today as part of a three-week visit to North Carolina.

The men, who are studying swine production, have visited Raleigh, including N. C. State College and the Department of Agriculture and other counties in the state since their tour began May 2. Before the end of the tour May 20, the visitors will visit Johnston, Harnett and Lenoir counties.

The men have also attended lectures and classes at N. C. State College, explaining and outlining the entire swine program in North Carolina.

Dr. Wayne Robinson, in charge of Swine Breeding at North Carolina State College, acted as program leader for the group here.

while Kenneth G. MacDonald, Extension Animal Husbandryman at Purdue University is technical leader of the tour.

The officials have visited two other states while in the United States and will return to Brazil following their visit to North Carolina.

Concert Band At Its Best Last Evening

By GEORGE E. PERRY

The East Carolina College Concert Band, under the direction of Herbert L. Carter, was at its unparalleled best last evening when they presented their spring concert as part of the Inaugural Week. One remark I overheard I thoroughly agree with "They even out-sound the Navy Band!" To go a step further, no band that has ever been heard in Wright Auditorium has ever sounded as good. In addition, it was the finest concert that I have ever heard the East Carolina Concert Band play. It seems that on each of this group's concerts within the past few years they have shown decided improvement, and that on its last half-dozen performances they played what I thought was up to that time, their best. But, in every way, last evening they topped even their best. They displayed an intonation that most band conductors just dream about; there was such precision in their attacks and releases that it seemed almost unbelievable that the music was coming from a group of student musicians. Dynamics were so finely wrought and in such good taste that one could but show surprise at this aspect, which was truly professional.

Three times during the concert the band received a small ovation after a number, something I have not witnessed before in prior appearances of this group. One came after "In Quest of Truth", a work by Mr. James Parnell of the Music Faculty, which received its premiere performance. Written specifically for the Inaugural Concert, Mr. Parnell has set forth a most admirable selection, contemporary in style, but with the welcome moments of consonant repose. Basically it is a sustained chorale type of work, but with interesting contrasting material interspersed throughout, the contrapuntal sections being especially effective.

The second ovation followed the performance of the Concertino for Percussion and Band, by Clifton Williams. Here, if ever, was demonstrated rhythmic precision, and the percussion section, trained by Andrew Preston, graduate assistant of the music faculty, really demonstrated what an excellent group of musicians they are. The work ended with the expected blazing climax, after which a few brave souls even let out a "bravo."

But the third ovation was the biggest, coming after the very stirring and soulful rendition of Bach's immortal "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring." This one selection was beyond all doubt the band at its inconceivable best. Even though there was a weak start, the rest of the number more than made up for it. Here was the rare listening pleasure of hearing a selection really and truthfully molded by the conductor and the players into something of great beauty. The dynamics and shadings in the brass section were beyond description. If the concert band never played another number, the performance of this one work alone would be sufficient to grant them an uncontestable place in the East Carolina hall of fame. It was the first time this band ever brought tears to my eyes, and they weren't the result of hay-fever either, but rather from being moved by an unmatched performance. A very important point, the tempo was just right; too often it is rushed so that it sounds more like a giggle than the magnificent example of the genius of Bach.

Another major work performed was the Overture to Oberon by von Weber, which showed forth the horn choir, and a fine trumpet solo by Charles Meyers, plus some virtuoso unison work in the clarinet choir. Rounding out the program were lighter numbers—"Holiday for Winds" by Osner, "Horse and Buggy" by Leroy Anderson, and three rousing marches, plus Grainger's "Lincolnshire Posy." This band may have played inspired.

It's a wonderful feeling to be able to represent your city in Greenville, 1960," Sandra Wrenn told Jaycees last night.

"I can't say I will be Miss North Carolina of 1961," she continued, "but I can certainly say I will give it my best and with so many wonderful men with me, what have I got to lose?"

Grifton Board In Routine Meet

GRIFTON — The Grifton Town Board this week approved a contract with LeRoy Construction Co. to construct a small building over switches at the town well.

The contract was approved at a cost of about $60 to $70 according to Mrs. Joyce McCoy, town clerk. The town of Grifton has ordered the building, and the construction company will put it up.

A motion was made in other business, that no more tiling be done on private property. The discussion related to the draining of property.

The board also approved reports from Recorder's Court, the Police Department and the Building Inspector. A balance of about $709 was reported for the April-May term. Mrs. McCoy said. The board voted to buy a used typewriter for the Police Department, at a cost of $75 to be taken from the court funds.

The board discussed the dog situation and agreed to comply with the county law on dogs. The discussion arose following a campaign to eliminate stray dogs from the city streets a few weeks ago.

In another motion, the board declared Queen Street Extension closed.

Petitions on N. Pitt Street and St. Joseph's Street were reviewed, with no action taken. The petition on N. Pitt Street asks for curb and gutters; the one on St. Joseph's asks for paving.

So far the town of Grifton has no information regarding the 1960 preliminary census report on its population.

PICTURE TALK

By DENNIS WARREN

I LOVE A PARADE
Professor, a little marching music . . . if you please. Now with the tempo set, allow me to invite you to step off briskly in our direction to see the new Kodak 1960 Camera Parade that's now filling our shelves. And I mean filling!

Seems as if we've been unwrapping and stacking new cameras all week. But it's been worthwhile.

We now can show you new Brownie snapshot cameras with built-in flasholders so small you'll have to see 'em to believe 'em. They are only about two-inches wide.

We've got another Brownie snapshot camera with a built-in electric eye for the amazingly low price of $19.95.

Somebody ask about new movie cameras? We've got a new Brownie Movie Camera, new any way you look at it, priced at an all-time low of $24.50. (Yes, that's the full price.)

We've even got a new Brownie Movie Projector that threads itself.

Getting the impression that we have lots of exciting new products on hand? Good. Then all we want to add is a bit of guidance.

If you get lost on your way to our front door, keep an eye peeled for a high-stepping drum majorette. When you see her you know our Kodak 1960 Camera Parade is just a few steps away.

Red Sox Win Fourth In Row, Surge Into Second

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer
Boston's Red Sox, playing their best at home, as usual, suddenly have won four in a row and six of their last seven, barging into second place, only a half-game shy of the American League lead.

And it's all happened just 2½ weeks after that talk about club dissolution and a quick gate for Manager Billy Jurges.

They made it with their second straight victory over Chicago's first place White Sox Thursday, a 1-0 decision on Tom Brewer's two-hit pitching and a ninth-inning single by Pete Runnels, who took over the AL batting lead at .426. Bob Shaw was the loser, giving up nine hits.

Boston leap-frogged the New York Yankees, who skidded from second to fourth with a 3-2 11-inning defeat by Cleveland. The Indians, taking third place and also within a half-game of the lead, put it away on Russ Nixon's home run as right-hander Gary Bell out-dueled Ralph Terry for his first victory over the Yankees in six career decisions.

The second division clubs—Baltimore, Detroit, Washington and Kansas City—were rained out.

In the National League, Jack Sanford hurled the second straight two-hitter by San Francisco's staff and the first place Giants defeated Philadelphia 1-0 for the second time in two days. The Giants, winning six straight, now lead Pittsburgh's second place Pirates, who were idle, by two games. Third place Milwaukee handed St. Louis a sixth consecutive defeat, 4-3 on Ed Mathews' tie-breaking home run. And Cincinnati made it eight straight with a 1-1 job on the Chicago Cubs.

The Red Sox beat Shaw (2-2) for the first time in three career decisions with the help of his two-base error. Rookie Lu Clinton opened the ninth with a single and went to third when Shaw threw wild on Don Gile's bunt. Pinch-hitter Gary Geiger then got a hit off Shaw's glove that loaded the bases, and Runnels broke it up.

Runnels was 3-for-4, gaining 15 points, while Yankee Roger Maris fell to second place in the batting race at .393 with an 0-for-5 day that cost him 38 points.

Nixon's first home run of the season sent the Yankees to their third straight defeat, all in extra innings. Bell struck out seven and gave up 10 hits, one a tying solo home run in the eighth by Yogi Berra, who marked his 35th birthday with two singles in addition to his 305th career homer.

The Indians, getting nine hits off Terry (1-1), scored an unearned run in the second, then broke a 1-1 tie in the seventh on a two-out squeeze bunt by Johnny Temple.

East Carolina Risks Lead Against Elon Tomorrow

East Carolina sends its ace, Larry Crayton, to the mound tomorrow night in hopes of keeping the Pirates in first place with a victory over Elon College.

The game will be played in Guy Smith Stadium at 8:00 and free tickets are available at Jenkins Motor Company, Pepsi Cola Bottling Company, and College View Cleaners.

Crayton, 7-2 for the season, pitched the Bucs to the title last season and has carried more than part of the struggle this spring.

He lost his first conference game in two years Saturday night when Catawba ruined his masterful one-hitter with a 2-0 victory.

Elon is expected to offer the biggest obstacle in ECC's bid for a second straight title. With a 9-2 conference mark, Coach Jim Mallory's club has three games remaining. They meet High Point in a doubleheader on Tuesday of next week.

The Christians, currently in fourth place, boast one of the league's best hurlers in Gary Henson. The chunker lost a 4-1 decision to EC and Crayton earlier this season but spilled Catawba in his most recent outing.

Mallory is hopeful that his defense will be improved over the last couple of weeks. The Pirate defense collapsed in a weekend series with Lenoir Rhyne and Catawba and wasn't razor-sharp against Atlantic Christian College on Tuesday night.

Little change is expected in the ECC lineup which has Jimmy Martin, Spencer Gaylord, Glenn Bass, Wilbur Castellow, and Burl Morris in the infield, and Gary Pierce, Wally Cockrell, and Jerry Carpenter in the outfield.

The Saturday game will be the final one for East Carolina, under the lights of Guy Smith Stadium. Their contests with High Point will be in the afternoon.

Maxwell Holds Lead In Forth Worth Tourney

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Billy Maxwell, the Texan who has been coming frustratingly close for two years, led a tournament undisputed for the first time in that span today. He was out front in the $30,000 Colonial National Invitation with a 3-under-par 67.

Back in 1955 Maxwell tried winning a tournament a year—and this continued until 1959 when he failed to scratch although taking down $27,182 in prize money—the most money to be won by a golfer without a tournament championship.

This year Maxwell has been on the same track—winning $14,109 in 16 events but failing to capture a tournament. He missed at Yorba Linda by a stroke, tied for fifth at DeSoto and in four other tournaments tied for sixth. The last time he was in first place was 1959 and then it was at it—with Julius Boros in the Big Crosby tournament.

But Thursday, the chunky fellow who registers from Ocean-Calif., and who's sharp with the press, when he's playing poorly, shot a fine round indeed. He was hot with the putter and sure with his irons and he set out today with a one-stroke lead over the field of 54 playing in this 14-year tournament.

Just behind Maxwell was Jerry Barber, the little fellow from Los Angeles who last weekend wrapped up the Tournament of Champions at Las Vegas. Barber, shooting his fifth sub-par round in a row, had a 68 although he scrambled for it.

Ben Hogan of Fort Worth, five times winner of the Colonial and a top favorite to repeat his 1959 triumph, was tied for third at 69 with six others—Johnny Palmer of Tulsa, Kel Nagle of Sydney, Australia, Don January of Dallas, Doug Sanders of Miami, Fla.; Ken Venturi of Palo Alto, Calif.; and Gene Littler of Singing Hills, Calif.

Arnold Palmer, who has won five tournaments and almost $50,000 this year and is the No. 1 favorite here, shot a steady 71 and was playing well.

Hole-In-One

Young Billy Davenport, a 12-year-old with between two and three years of golfing experience, scored a hole-in-one on the 149 yard third hole of the Greenville Golf Course yesterday afternoon.

The youth was playing with Robby Powell and Charles Vincent. He used a five-iron on the par three hole.

Carolyn Thomas, wife of pro Harold Thomas, reported this morning that it was the first child she could recall making a hole-in-one.

Little League Season Opens

W. C. James reports that Little League baseball will start on May 17 with the Kiwanis and Jaycees meeting in the dedication game at Guy Smith Stadium.

The season will open with six teams in each league. One club has been added to each league in order to take care of more boys.

A short opening program is planned for the Guy Smith Stadium opener. This is the first year that the field has been in operation. Games will be played here and at Elm Street Park this summer.

The Tar Heel League will wait until Wednesday afternoon before kicking off its new season.

Also, the annual Little League supper will be served on Wednesday afternoon at the Elm Street field. This is one of the main sources for raising money for the operation of the program.

Tickets are now being sold and may be obtained from any Little League player or by calling W. C. James, Mrs. J. B. Keel or Mrs. A. H. Campbell.

Fate Of Continental Loop Will Be Decided

By JACK CLARY
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—The fate of the Continental League will be decided in Washington beginning next Thursday as the third major baseball league battles the present majors for survival from its current embryonic state.

The battle lines were drawn here Thursday by Continental League founder Bill Shea when he declared his loop's endorsement of a proposed bill by Tennessee Sen. Estes Kefauver that would limit the number of players controlled by the American and National leagues.

Earlier this week, Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick said that the present majors would oppose such legislation, declaring it would not only harm the two big leagues but kill the minor leagues as well. The bill would limit the number of players a club could control to 100 and make 60 available for an annual player draft.

Representatives of both factions will testify before a Senate Antimonopoly subcommittee headed by Sen. Kefauver.

If the bill becomes law, then the CL would have a good chance to survive because it would be able to obtain players for its major league teams and begin stocking minor league clubs.

If the bill dies?

"Declare war or quit," she emphasized Thursday.

Pitching—Tom Brewer, Red Sox, blanked the defending champion White Sox on two hits, none after the third inning, for 1-0 victory.

Hitting—Ed Mathews, Braves, singled and scored in three-run first, then broke tie in eighth inning with a third hit, his third home run in two days, for a 4-3 victory.

AC Student Wins Putt Tourney

John Kramer of Edenton and Atlantic Christian College fired a 33 in the last two rounds to post a total score of 101 to win the first Greenville Putt Putt Tournament last night.

Over 75 persons entered the first tournament at the Greenville course and a total of only seven broke a three round record on the rained-out carpet.

Shooting a 72 on the final round, Ray Caulder, EC freshman from Rockingham, took second place with a total of 103.

First round leaders Henry Howard of Greenville and Gary Nunally of East Carolina College hooked up in a three-way tie with Bobby Darling of Wilson for third place. The three posted scores of 104.

Howard, Daily Reflector reporter, gained the third spot in a "sudden death" playoff. Darling finished in fourth.

Owen Robert Barnes expressed satisfaction with the response of the first tournament although he contended that rain slowed things down considerably.

Burton Homers For Wilson Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Greensboro put on an eighth inning sport to beat Burlington, 6-2, Thursday night and pull within a half-game of first place Raleigh in the Carolina League.

The Caps were stymied again by the weather. A doubleheader with Winston-Salem was postponed because of rain and chilly weather.

Wilson, third in the loop, used Jim Burton's two-run homer to blank Durham, 2-0. All the scoring came in Wilson's side of the initial inning.

The count was 2-2 when Greensboro went into the last of the eighth inning. The Yanks got four singles off Burlington relief pitchers Don Koudis and Tom Dooling—enough for four runs and the victory. Don Maisand limited the Indians to three hits for the win.

Burton's two-run homer was one of only two hits collected by Wilson batters. The other was a single by Jesus Torres in the fifth. Joe Kaiser allowed Durham five hits in picking up his first victory of the season.

The games tonight: Winston-Salem at Wilson, Burlington at Raleigh and Greensboro at Durham.

North Staters Plan Study

ELON COLLEGE, N.C. (AP)—Presidents of the nine North State Conference colleges plan further discussions of the part athletic and academic scholarships should play in college education.

Dr. A. R. Keppel of Catawba College, who has chaired the meetings, said the third gathering on this topic was held here this week.

His statement said discussions reflected "unanimity of mind" and added that "much thought was given to more unified practices in the administration of scholarships, both athletic and academic, and to the wholesale matter of student recruitment."

CHAPTER 31
"Sandro, I'm worried," said Meg to her stepbrother. "I wasn't before, but I am now. What is going to happen? Something, don't you feel? Something horrid! This house has suddenly become filled with it."

Alexander Hero looked at her. "Ah—you too?" he said. I wondered whether it was only myself. Meg was looking at her stepbrother now, her eyes widely distended. "Sandro," she said, "I'm frightened for the first time—for you."

Hero said, "Never mind me. I can look after myself—but something is going to happen unless I can prevent it. Something or someone is going to try to destroy Susan Marshall, and I don't know who or where or how. I feel so damn helpless."

Meg went to him and put her arm in his. She said, "Don't be discouraged, Sandro. Don't give up. Try. Keep on trying. There's only you who can do it. I don't even seem to be able to help you any more."

Hero gave her shoulders a little squeeze and said, "Thanks, Hag." He bent over and brushed the top of her head with his lips and turned to leave.

She asked, "Where are you going?" "Back to that confounded music room," he replied, and went out.

The music room was becoming a kind of Chamber of Frus-tration to Alexander Hero. Each time he visited it he came away empty-handed—or rather, empty-minded, so to speak—and yet he was certain that somewhere in it lay the key to the puzzle and the secret of what was trou-bling him.

One way or another, either as a genuine manifestation or a cruel hoax, the answer must lie within these four walls, for here the harp was kept and here the im-possible had been made possible. He concentrated upon the lay-out and contents of the room to try to remember what it was that had troubled him once about it—some slight change, something he had forgotten.

This time he laid the harp carefully on its side and went over it with magnifying glass and small steel rod to tap for hollow places where hollow places should not be. He found none.

He examined particularly the pedals, and that portion of them which would come into contact with the player, for marks and scratches, which certainly should have appeared upon the pedals. There were none.

Apparently after the death of Lord Paradine's mother the in-strument had been groomed and polished to its pristine form. He next dusted it for fingerprints, and found some, but they were in the wrong places. Obviously the maids moved the harp when they swept and cleaned.

He was beginning to feel the old sense of frustration again. "Give up, Hero. Whoever or whatever plays this harp does it without touching it."

To calm his nerves he went over to the piano, opened and braced the lid, and sat down to play and wait for the therapy of music to do its work.

He struck the opening chords of the Bach Toccata and Fugue in D Minor. He played well and soon was losing himself in the music, and for the moment he forgot Paradine Hall, the dan-gers and the problems that beset him.

The fugue swelled and rolled, modulated, and then rose again in the climactic crescendo lead-ing to the firm, thundering satisfying chords with which Bach closed.

Hero sat at the piano with his eyes closed and the last of the sound died away. Then something caught his attention that caused him to open them very quickly.

He swung around on the piano stool and gazed at the harp hard and long. He arose and went over to it and stood there looking as though he could not get enough of looking and thinking about what had so suddenly struck him.

He did not touch the instru-ment, but very softly he began to apostrophize himself: "You fool!" he said. "You blithering, blithering half-wit! You feeble-minded simpleton! You abso-lute, unmitigated clot!"

He turned and ran from the room, down the corridor, through the great hall into the pantry and down the cellar steps, until he had regained the storeroom beneath the music room. This time he gave it another thorough going over, but looked elsewhere than he had before, and in odd places. When he had finished he thought he knew how the trick might be done.

"But where is it?" he asked himself. "Where would it be? Where would someone keep it—and who? It must be some-where."

Then began for him the most meticulous search he had ever bestowed on any premises. Once again he went over every bin, room and enclosure in the cellars, and the storerooms in the attic as well.

He was aided in his hunt by the fact that the object for which he was looking was large and unwieldy—so large that it would not be easy to conceal—and therefore he expected to find it if it was there.

By the time he had completed his work in cellars, attics, and public rooms the dinner bell had gone, which meant that shortly family and guests would for-gather.

Hero waited a good half hour to give them a chance and make sure they had all left their rooms, and then began a thor-ough and shameless examina-tion of the apartments of the Paradines, rooms both occupied and unoccupied, to which Lady Paradine's great cluster of keys gave him access. Had anyone come upon him as he searched? He had not. They would have thought surely every bed, into clothes presses and cupboards, and delved into broom closets, and bathrooms large enough to hold the object he was seeking.

Not satisfied with this, though he knew by now his chances were diminishing and he must hurry, he ranged through all of the guest rooms in the east wing and, to the astonishment and indignation of cook, butler, and waitresses, pried into kitchen and pantry cupboards and recesses.

Hero had no doubt that Huggins would report his actions to the Hon. Isobel or Lord Paradine himself, but he did not care.

He was not satisfied with go-ing over the house alone; at that time of year it stayed light through the day, and he sallied forth from the back of the manor and investigated stables and nearby barns. And when in the end he had completed his search he was exhausted, discouraged, and ul-terly defeated.

There was no doubt in his mind—there was no possibility for that, which he sought to be there, and if it was not, the theory that for a moment had given him such hope and excite-ment was of no avail. He was right back where he had started from, and no nearer any solution.

He went back to his room, and flung himself on his bed, almost too tired even to think. It struck him then that it was growing late, and that whatever danger threatened usually struck at night.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Industrials and rails advanced in a continued stock market rally early this afternoon. Trading was fairly active. Key stocks rose from fractions to about a point while more volatile issues produced some wider gains.

Some optimistic forecasts about business and a rise in auto assemblies helped foster a more bullish attitude.

Despite a production cutback by U.S. Steel, the leading steelmaker made respectable gains. Most of the motors, chemicals, rubbers and drugs were up. Rails gained on average.

Oils were unchanged to easy. Aircrafts, nonferrous metals and utilities were mixed.

Gains of about 3 were made by Universal Match and Havel, Varian Associates and Outboard Marine picked up more than a point apiece.

Lockheed, under further publicity as wing flutter was given as the cause of its Electra plane crashes, dropped fractionally.

Gains of about a point were scored by U.S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet and Lukens, Jones & Laughlin rose about 2 points.

Up about a point were Ford and Chrysler.

American Cyanamid was up about a point and Eastman Kodak added about 2.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon rose 3.43 to 611.30.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .90 to 212.10 with the industrials up 1.60, the rails up .30 and the utilities up .10.

Jones, Lake Lead In Straw Vote

ELIZABETH CITY — An Elizabeth City "Daily Advance" straw vote poll had Walter Jones and L. Beverly Lake leading in the newspaper's county on Wednesday.

The paper announced that its reader poll showed Jones with 266 votes and Herbert C. Bonner with 244 for Pasquotank County.

An adjoining county, Perquimans, however, gave Congressman Bonner 28 votes to two for Jones. Three votes from Camden went to Jones with two for Bonner.

Jones is seeking to unseat the veteran Bonner as First Congressional District representative. The two are campaigning for the Democratic nomination on May 28.

In the gubernatorial race, Lake had received 245 votes in the straw vote from Pasquotank County. He was closely followed by Terry Sanford with 236. Malcolm Sewall received 214 and John Larkins 16.

In Perquimans, Larkins received 26 votes, Sanford, two and Lake, one.

In the Senate race, Addison Hewlett had collected 254 Pasquotank votes to 241 for Jordan and 20 for Bob Gregory. Jordan got 28 and Hewlett one in Perquimans.

Welfare And State Pay Raises Figure

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A positive approach for welfare programs and pay raises for state workers figured in Thursday's political campaign talks.

Terry Sanford, speaking at a High Point barbecue, said he would strive for a welfare program to give hope to disabled, aged and needy persons if he is elected governor.

John D. Larkins told a ladies group in Durham that, if elected, he would urge a 10 per cent pay increase for all state workers other than school personnel. He already has proposed a 15 per cent boost for teachers and others in the schools.

A luncheon today on the program of the annual meeting of radio and television news directors brought many candidates to Raleigh.

All five men running for the U.S. Senate accepted invitations they are: Sen. B. Everett Jordan, Hewlett, Wilmington lawyer and 1959 House speaker; Robert W. Gregory of Greensboro; Robert N. McIntosh of Charlotte, all after the Democratic nomination; and Republican Kyle Hayes.

An afternoon news conference at his state campaign headquarters in Raleigh is on the program for Sanford.

Larkins will be in High Point for a rally.

I. Beverly Lake, Raleigh lawyer running for governor, will spend today handshaking in Columbus County.

Malcolm B. Sewall, the fourth candidate running for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, will tour Wake County during the afternoon before going to Louisville College for a talk and question-answer period.

Seawall, speaking Thursday night in Mooresville, lashed out at the stand Lake has taken on integration in public schools. He asserted that Lake, in opposing the present policy of "the ghost of closed schools" to destroy North Carolina's public educational system.

cern" of the college, particularly in the training of its undergraduates.

"For more than a century and a half," Dr. Jenkins said in conclusion, "our schools and colleges have given us a standard of living not only unexcelled, but not even closely approached by any other country in the world. They have made possible a citizenry as enlightened as any other on earth. If the citizens of North Carolina will define any new duties that they wish East Carolina College to fulfill and if they will support the college with money, confidence, and most important, faith, this great college will assume them and justify this faith and support in the future as it has in the past."

Hodges said "East Carolina College made a good name for itself as a teachers college. It has the potential to attain true greatness as a teaching college. It has built up an institution of size. It will continue to improve in quality."

Pres. Friday was introduced to the audience by Dr. Messick, and the Consolidated University president delivered his address expressing faith in Dr. Jenkins' abilities to serve as East Carolina's head.

A program of music by student organizations, including college bands and choruses, was presented under the direction of Earl Beach, director of the department of music. Grouped on tiered risers, the student musicians appeared in Francis H. McKay's "Hymn to America" and "Voice of Freedom" by Rubinstein-Galliet.

A luncheon for 800 people followed the inaugural exercises. Vice-President F. D. Duncan of East Carolina presided.

Greetings were extended by speakers representing groups at East Carolina as follows: James Speight of Kinston, the student body, Z. W. Frazelle of Kenansville, the alumni and Dr. Elmer R. Browning and Ovid W. Pierce, the faculty.

Off-campus speakers presenting greetings to the college and its new president were Maj. Gen. J. P. Berkeley, U. S. Marine Corps, of Camp Lejeune; Chairman Callias Herring of the State Board of Education; N. C. Supt. of Public Instruction Charles F. Carroll; Executive Secretary A. C. Dawson of the N. C. Education Association; Pres. William H. Flemmons of the N. C. College Conference; Chairman L. P. McLendon of the State Board of Higher Education; Chairman Waldrop of the EC Board of Trustees; and Pres. Friday.

Other events scheduled for the day-long celebration included an open house at the president's home during the afternoon, an Inaugural Ball staged by the Student Government Association in the Wright Building, and a dinner held by the Society of Buccaneers, alumni organization.

Aly Khan Dies In Auto Collision

PARIS (AP)—Prince Aly Khan—playboy, sportsman, lover of beautiful women and apprentice diplomat—was killed Thursday night at the wheel of a sports car.

After an afternoon at Long-champs race track outside Paris, the 48-year-old prince was driving to his half-brother's home at St. Cloud for a dinner party when his Lancia coupe and a light sedan collided head-on in suburban Suresnes.

The wealthy prince met death in a dinner jacket with a beautiful woman by his side.

Bettina, former French model who has been his constant companion in Europe in recent years, suffered a face cut and blood poured over her green silk evening gown. She was given first aid treatment at a hospital and released.

Aly's chauffeur, riding in the back seat, was only slightly hurt.

The fun-loving prince, who turned to sober diplomacy in 1958 as Pakistan's ambassador to the United Nations, was rushed to a hospital but died in an elevator on the way to the operating room.

The hospital director said a head gash was the only outward sign of injury. Hospital attaches said he suffered a fractured skull, broken legs and perhaps a broken neck.

Herve Bichaton, driver of the other car, escaped with minor injuries. Police said he told them he could remember nothing about the crash. The French News Agency said reports from the scene indicated Bichaton was on the wrong side of the road, but police gave no confirmation of this.

Bettina, whose real name is Simone Bodin, told investigators Aly—a racing driver in his youth—was not driving fast at the time of the accident.

Acress Rita Hayworth, whose marriage to Aly was a glittering Riviera affair in 1949, said in Hollywood that she and their 10-year-old daughter Yasmin were tremendously shocked.

"It will be a great loss to Yasmin, who has always been most attached to her father," she said in a statement issued through her present husband, movie producer James Hill.

Miss Hayworth and Aly were divorced in 1954.

Aly is survived by two sons—Karim and Amin—by his first marriage to Joan Yarde-Buller Guinness, daughter of an English nobleman. That marriage also ended in divorce.
