Soviet Launches Satellite Capable Of Carrying Man

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviets say their 4 1/2-ton dummy-manned space ship—the biggest satellite ever launched—is whizzing around the earth on course.

"There soon will be a man in space," the Soviets said. Hurling aloft by a super rocket, the giant ship was reported sending back signals confirming the "good agreement between its actual orbit and the calculated one for its flight around the globe every 91 minutes.

Dr. Viktor Bazekin, director of the Moscow Planetary, conceded there are still problems to be solved before sending up a live astronaut—the main one being how to get him back to earth safely.

The official news agency Tass said no attempt will be made to retrieve the dummy passenger riding in a pressurized cabinet with all the "necessary equipment for a future manned space flight."

Soviet scientists said the 2 1/2-ton cabinet would be separated from the satellite after the "necessary information" is received but would burn up in the atmosphere as it drops.

The Soviets gave only skimpy details Sunday in announcing the launching of their latest space vehicle on the eve of the Paris summit conference.

approximately 200 miles up and began sending back beeps that sounded like a distant train whistle. The Sputnik is visible to the naked eye in hours of darkness. It was first sighted in the United States at 4:10 a.m. by moonwatchers in Dayton, Ohio.

Analysis of the initial data received from the satellite ship shows that the installed instrumentation and equipment are "functioning normally," Tass said.

The satellite is fitted with special radio equipment to relay to ground stations data on the operations of its scientific and measuring instruments in the hermetically sealed cabin which are powered by chemical and solar batteries.

The exact time and place of the launching were not disclosed. "The launching was undertaken to perfect and check the satellite ship's system, insuring its safe flight and controls, its return to the earth and the necessary conditions for the space crew," the first official announcement said.

Astronomer Nikolai Barabashov asserted the success of the latest experiment "means a manned flight to the planets of the solar system is not far distant."

The space ship is following a charted course—225 miles from the earth at its highest, 188 1/2 at its lowest—that takes the satellite over such key cities as New York and Paris, where the Big Four are meeting.

Soviet scientists and propaganda broadcasts stressed that peaceful intentions inspired the launching. But they emphasized, too, that its success showed the might of the Soviet Union.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda carried a page of letters from leading Soviet scientists and others who coupled praise of the space ship launching with a denunciation of American spy flights.

Scientists the world over generally acclaimed the Soviet space ship.

American experts were divided, however, on whether it meant the Soviets are ahead of the United States in the race to put a man into space.

Dr. John P. Hagen of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration said: "If you can believe their announcement, they have not faced up to the most serious problem—how to solve the re-entry problem and recover a man safely from orbit. We think that we understand how to do this and do it well. It's not clear that the Russians do."

Another American scientist, who declined to be identified, suggested the "dummy" may be the real thing and there's the outside possibility that if the Soviets found everything worked all right, they "would then" make the dramatic announcement that they had a man in space."

PARIS (AP) — The summit conference collapsed in its first session today, with the Soviet Union and the United States accusing each other of torpedoing the historic session called in an effort to ease world tensions.

The meeting foundered over the U2 incident. Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, bitterly attacking U.S. policy, called for a six-month delay and said a later U. S. administration may understand the situation if the present administration can't.

He withdrew his invitation for President Eisenhower to visit the Soviet Union next month. President Eisenhower promised there will be no more U.S. spy flights over the Soviet Union but said:

"The only conclusion that can be drawn from this (Khrushchev's) behavior this morning was that he came all the way from Moscow to Paris with the sole intention of sabotaging the meeting on which so much of the hopes of the world have rested."

Today's 3-hour, 5-minute session may be the last for this summit conference. No further meetings were scheduled.

Eisenhower challenged Khrushchev to private two-way talks to save the conference. "We of the United States," the President said, "are here to consider in good faith the important problems before this conference. We are prepared either to carry this point no further or to undertake bilateral conversations between the United States and the U.S.S.R. while the main conference proceeds."

Aides said Eisenhower considered Khrushchev insulting in his charges that negotiations were hopeless as long as, in the Soviet Premier's words, the United States was threatening the Soviet Union.

Khrushchev dwelt at length on the May 1 flight of Francis G. Powers, downed in the Soviet Union as he flew his U2 plane near Sverdlovsk in an effort to gain reconnaissance information.

But Eisenhower told Khrushchev U.S. spy flights over the Soviet Union have been suspended "and are not to be resumed."

The President offered to negotiate agreements that could "eliminate the necessity for all forms of espionage."

Khrushchev repeated his statement that should American flights be made from countries in which the United States has overseas bases "the Soviet Union will take appropriate measures, including attacks against these bases."

The President proposed to take the issue of aerial security patroling to the United Nations. "Should it prove impossible, because of the Soviet attitude, to come to grips here in Paris with this problem and the other vital issues threatening world peace, I am planning in the near future to submit to the United Nations a proposal for the creation of a United Nations aerial surveillance to detect preparations for attack," Eisenhower said.

"This plan I had intended to place before this conference. "This surveillance system would operate in the territories of all nations prepared to accept such inspection. For its part, the United States is prepared not only to accept United Nations aerial surveillance, but to do everything in its power to contribute to the rapid organization and successful operation of such international surveillance."

Khrushchev proposed that the summit conference be postponed for six months to allow international tempers to subside.

He demanded that Eisenhower promise the United States will conduct no more intelligence flight over the Soviet Union. He also insisted the President punish all those responsible for the May 1 flight of the U2, downed over the Soviet Union.

A tentative agreement was reached for the summit meeting to reconvene Tuesday, but Western officials said this session promises to be only a formality.

After today's meeting, a Soviet spokesman asked how any agreement could be reached on easing tension—one of the aims of the summit session—"when the government of one of the great powers declares bluntly its policy is an intrusion into the affairs of another state."

The Soviet spokesman's version of today's session was that Eisenhower had confirmed flights like that of the U2 as part of "the calculated policy of the United States."

The spokesman quoted Khrushchev as saying: "Some time should be allowed so that questions can settle down."

Reactionary circles in the United States were torpedoes by "reactionary circles in the United States."

"We cannot under the present situation take part in negotiations," he was quoted as saying. Khrushchev and Eisenhower met for 3 hours 5 minutes today in the Cabinet Room of Elysee Palace. They sat around a 16-foot, green-topped table with Britain's Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and President Charles de Gaulle of France.

The Soviet spokesman quoted Khrushchev as saying it was impossible to ignore Eisenhower's statements that the President could not take part in talks with the Soviet threat of a separate German peace treaty hanging over such a conference.

He said Khrushchev asked how the Soviet government could negotiate in conditions of an actual threat that the U. S. government would continue to violate Soviet air space.

Khrushchev was quoted as saying: "It follows from all this that for the success of the conference, the governments of all represented countries must make a solemn promise: They will not take any acts against the others. This means that if the United States is really ready to cooperate with other powers it must condemn in the first place inadmissible provocative acts of the U.S. Air Force and refrain from continuing such acts and policies."

Johnson said "this is a time not to give vent to our emotions but to remain calm in the face of the danger which confronts us."

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill), the minority leader, told the Senate it is clear that Khrushchev and other Soviet leaders were "quite alarmed" over the effect the "warm personality of the President of the United States would have had on the Soviet Union and on the Russian people."

Some congress members called the affair a diplomatic triumph for President Eisenhower.

The first to take the latter tack was Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo) of the House Appropriations Committee.

He accused Khrushchev of stalling. "Khrushchev was all set, before the U2 incident, to try to force us to yield on the question of West Berlin," Cannon said.

"When he found out that we would not do that and that he has been stalemated, he had to start stalling for time to reassemble the situation.

"For him to find himself in his position of withdrawing his invitation to the President to visit Russia, after he himself had enjoyed our hospitality, is a decided diplomatic victory for President Eisenhower."

Nevertheless there was evident regret on all sides at the Capitol over the implications of the development.

New ECC Dorm Dedicated To Paul E. Jones

East Carolina College's newest dormitory was dedicated to Dr. Paul E. Jones of Farmville in exercises conducted in the cafeteria of the building Sunday afternoon.

Approximately 300 people attended the program of dedication. The Interfraternity Council of the college as hosts, and a tour of the residence hall.

Dr. Jones, a native of Bethel, N. C., and a graduate of the Medical College of Virginia, is a dentist and farmer. He served for five terms as Senator for Pitt County in the N. C. General Assembly. Offices which he has held include the presidency of the N. C. Dental Society and of the American Association of Dental Examiners.

His career has been marked by interest in and support of education on local, county and state levels.

We are here to honor the "life and character of an individual who has brought great honor to this state, his profession, his family, and himself," Dr. John C. Brauer, dean of the school of dentistry at the University of North Carolina, said as the dormitory for men was officially named in honor of Dr. Jones.

"Integrity and generosity," he continued, "have con' nued, 'have been exemplified in Dr. Jones' character and way of life."

Dr. Brauer pointed out that Dr. Jones' professional, civic, and social services have gained him national recognition.

A portrait of Dr. Jones, a gift to the college from his family, was unveiled by two of his grandchildren, Allyson Lank Duke of New Jersey and Jaul Jones III of Concord. J. Herbert Waldrop of Greenville, chairman of the college Board of Trustees, accepted the painting for East Carolina College.

Mike Kilpatrick of Robersonville, George Seymour of Elizabeth City, Leland Knight of Washington, D. C., and John Ratcliffe of Washington, N. C. East Carolina students, sang "The Halls of Ivy" as part of the dedication program.

President Leo W. Jenkins of the college, presiding at the exercises, expressed gratitude to Dr. Jones for his long service to East Carolina and described him as a "trusted friend and advisor." Dean Robert L. Holt closed the dedication ceremony with a prayer.

The Interfraternity Council reception in honor of Dr. Jones took place in the dining area of the Jones Hall Cafeteria. Refreshments were served from a table on which the centerpiece was a large square cake iced in purple and gold and representing a telegram. The message to Dr. Jones read, "Congratulations to you and the College Dormitory Which Will Bear Your Name."

Dishwasher "Does" Plastic Dishes

Plastic dinnerware is so durable that it's even safe in the slippery hands of bouncing children. But it needn't be utilitarian looking. The latest designs are as beautiful as fine china, and most of the brands can go into your automatic dishwasher safely.

If you're doubtful as to whether your plastic set can be washed automatically, designate one dish for testing. Then, each time you load your machine with china, include your test piece. If there is no damage after two weeks, your plastic dinnerware should be safe in the dishwasher.

Hint On Cooking Corn Outdoors

RALEIGH — How do you cook sweet corn? Sweet corn can be served in many pleasing ways but this time of the year with weather favoring cook-outs, wise outdoor chefs will make it a point to include corn-on-the-cob in their menu.

A liberal serving of corn-on-the-cob at outdoor events, especially if the corn is cooked "just right", is bound to please. The U. S. Department of Agriculture gives directions for cooking corn outdoors which will make it a springtime favorite.

Strip the husks down to the end of the ear, but do not tear off. Remove the silk and soak the corn in cold salted water for about 30 minutes. Drain and then brush kernels with butter or margarine and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pull the husks up around the corn again.

Wrap each ear of corn in heavy-duty aluminum foil and twist the ends to close tightly. Roast the corn in hot coals after the fire has died down to embers. Turn frequently and roast for about 25 minutes or until done to taste.

Here's A Word For It

In Britain, "washing up" is what you do to the dishes after a meal. On the other hand, you "have a wash"—with the help of a "face-flannel"—before eating.

Coastal N. C. Gains Tourist Appeal area to vacationers of the Tar Heel state and those from other states is reflected in the development of coastal areas of the state.

Each passing year sees the construction of more homes, more motels, more apartments as well as more commercial enterprises the entire length of the North Carolina coast. And these new facilities in turn provide an added attraction for people who look to the coastal areas for their vacations.

Although this spring has been unusually cool for North Carolina, most of the week-ends have found the beaches crowded, the boaters and fishermen numerous. To the casual observer at least, there also appears to be more out-of-state automobiles in the coastal area of North Carolina this year than in the past, even this early in the season.

All of these things indicate the growing popularity of the coastal area of the state as a summer playground. They also indicate that the coast, which once was viewed as a place to go only during the very hottest months, is now becoming more of a year-round resort area.

North Carolina's mountain areas have for years been a favorite spot for out-of-the-state vacationers. The coastal area of the state only recently has become a major attraction for vacationers from other states.

Not Much Time Left To Choose

By LYNN NISBET
SENSITIVE — As always happens during the final days of such contests the campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor has reached the sensitive stage. As time runs out opportunities for revising strategy and correcting mistakes are lessened, tempers flare and patience grows thin among the candidates and their responsible organizations.

With voting day less than two weeks off citizens are waking up to the fact they cannot much longer postpone the duty of choosing a candidate. There remains a big silent vote, but experienced observers from the sidelines can see the campaign beginning to shape up more nearly along traditional lines than has been the case up to now. The off-side observers, with varying degrees of impartiality, are aided in their appraisals by the sensitivity of the main actors.

SECOND PRIMARY — One conclusion seems inescapable. Nobody now is running for the nomination on May 28. All four of the candidates are running for position in the second primary. Of course, each of them will vigorously deny this attitude, but their campaign activities tend to discount their denials, and developments of the past two weeks seem to justify positive prediction that no majority will be obtained in the first primary. These developments however, do not afford assurance of who will be eligible for the run-off.

Big factors in that uncertainty are the questions of how many people will go to the polls on May 28; what sections of the state will produce heavy voting; the impact of accelerated registration of Negro voters, and the potency of old time political organizations to hold the line against the new concept of individual free-wheeling—without regard to party or factional loyalties.

POSITION — Terry Sanford, who has been actively running longer than anybody else, and who claimed a fairly efficient statewide organization when he formally announced, has been all along conceded first place. Preponderant evidence is he still holds it, though not as far in front as seemed certain a few weeks ago. There is widespread feeling that he reached his peak before the others really got started. Whether or not he has actually lost support, he has lost relative position because of gains by others. The objective of his forces is to hold top place, and to keep the spread between him and the next man as wide as possible.

His leading position is attested, perhaps unconsciously, by the other candidates who have singled him out mainly for their personal attacks. And he has, perhaps unwittingly, confessed vulnerability in his sensitive response to charges of lagor support and "die in the sky" promises of expanded services without increased taxes. Instead of earlier policy of ignoring other contenders, Sanford lately has been placed on the defensive, at least to the extent of recognizing opposition.

John Larkins, also a long-time prospective candidate, and actually first to formally announce, has puzzled many observers, and still does—by lack of aggressiveness in his campaign. In fact of complaints that he hasn't got off the ground he has built an organization based on the old line party workers at county and precinct levels. The roster of his advisers and local managers is replete with names that have been potent in North Carolina politics for a long time. His strategy conforms to the traditional, and traditionally his kind of operatives do not "put out" in full force until the last two or three days. For that reason it will not be surprising if Larkins' vote is a good bit more than some people not familiar with old time politics now forecast.

There is evidence that the big spurt in apparent support of Beverly Lake, which was going like a prairie fire a few weeks ago, has slowed down. He moved into the east, especially the northeast and southeast, and captured support which had been reckoned in the camps of Larkins and Sanford. His strength is spotted. Reports from the big mid-state counties indicate he has not made much headway there. The "silent vote" which had been considered a source of strength for Lake is becoming vocative and is found to be divided among all the candidates. It would appear that while Lake gains places, he has not maintained the rate of gain which marked the first weeks after his entry into the campaign.

Malcolm Seawell, latest comer into the race, and least known personality of all the candidates, started from scratch and worked fast to build an organization. His support is distributed over the state, but is stronger in the Piedmont counties. He is at the extreme other end from Lake in the race question, advocating the moderate approach of recognizing the efficacy of court decrees, and the existing plan as the best guarantee of keeping the schools open. He is more moderate in advocating additional government spending than Larkins and Sanford. He is credited with having support of the Hodges group. These factors contributed to his hope to be in the second primary.

When all the conditions are taken into account, it appears that as the campaign goes into next to its last week there are a month ago.

This year, however, it appears that the coastal area of North Carolina will begin to rival the mountain area in attracting tourists. If it is any indication of what will come in the future—and certainly it must be—we may expect the coastal area of the state to continue to develop as one of the most popular resort areas along the Atlantic seaboard.

The tourist potential of the state's coastal area has long been recognized by many people of North Carolina. The effort made to develop that over a period of years now appears to be bringing returns to an area of the state that once was one of the poorest, economically speaking, of any in North Carolina.

New 'Sputnik' Seems A Propaganda Gimmick

Russia's new Sputnik is impressive because of its size and it is impressive because of the timing which put it into space on the eve of the summit conference.

But other than these two factors, there appears little of importance about the new Soviet satellite. Apparently its importance for propaganda purposes outweighs its importance as a scientific device for space exploration.

The size of the new satellite—four and one-half tons—represents a payload far above that which the United States has achieved in its space program. The fact, however, that Soviet scientists have said they will not attempt to recover an escape capsule from the satellite suggests they are not ready to risk an unsuccessful attempt to recover the capsule.

In the case of the United States, efforts in this direction have been made several times, although without success. Efforts to put a man into space, of which this new Soviet satellite is a part, depend upon the successful return to earth of the man who makes the flight. On the surface it appears that the United States is farther advanced in this phase of the space program than is the Soviet Union.

If the Soviet space probe were primarily a scientific endeavor, why did it come at this particular moment? If it is a forerunner to a manned space flight, why is not some effort to be made to recover the dummy said to be contained in the satellite?

The four-ton satellite is impressive for its size, but other than that, there is little so far to indicate that this latest launching puts the Soviet program ahead of that of the United States.

Poor Output By This Congress

By RALPH ROBEY
No one knows exactly when the present Congress will adjourn. July 8 is a frequently mentioned date, and it will be about that time in order for the members to get to their national political conventions. This does not leave much room for enacting badly needed legislation, and this presumably was one of the reasons for President Eisenhower sending a special message a few days ago urging those items which he believes are essential to the national welfare.

It is, of course, common practice for a President to send messages spelling out the desirability of particular pieces of legislation, but it is highly unusual for him to transmit recommendations covering the same range of issues that were advised in his State of the Union and Budget Messages and his Economic Report. One should hasten to add, however, that it also is highly unusual for a Congress to come to this late date in its final session with so little accomplished.

Reasons for 'Poor Record'
This poor record of output by this Congress has been primarily the result of the endless debate on civil rights, plus the desire of the Democratic majority to create campaign issues by passing bills which, in many instances, it knows are contrary to the wishes of the Administration and hence probably will be vetoed by the President.

In his message, or "lecture," to the Congress the President used fairly strong language in taking the Congress to task for its devotion to politics rather than the well-being of the people. The reaction of the majority leaders was as might be expected. Speaker Rayburn of the House said "it sounds to me like the Republican platform," and Senator Johnson's answer was that the Congress if "proceeding in good order to transact the public business."

The nearest thing to a new suggestion in the President's message was the broad outlines of the Administration program for the care of our older citizens. This is the hottest political issue on Capitol Hill. It started with the Forand bill which would provide extensive medical aid to those under the Social Security system. Next came a compromise plan by Wilbur Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. Then a group of "liberal" Republican Senators offered their plan. And it has been known for some weeks that the Administration also would offer a program, granting it could get agreement within its own ranks.

That agreement within the Administration has now been reached and the plan has been presented by Secretary Flemming of Health, Education and Welfare. It is still too early to judge what the final result will be, but it can safely be predicted that we shall have legislation in this field before the Congress adjourns. Whether what is passed will be signed by the President is another matter, and will depend upon just how the program is set up.

An Important Reference
Not new, but extraordinarily important, was the President's reference to Labor Secretary Mitchell's recent statement that minimum wages can be increased moderately without disrupting the economy. A "moderate" increase would be from the present $1.00 to $1.10 or $1.15. Granted this would be better than lifting the minimum by 25 cents an hour, which is what labor union officials have been urging, it still remains true that raising the minimum by 10 or 15 cents an hour will disrupt the economy at many places. But with the Administration supporting an increase, it must be assumed that we shall have legislation to that effect by this Congress.

None of the other recommendations is of any particular significance from a legislative viewpoint. All in all, therefore, it was a well worded message, it probably deserves to be called a "political lecture."

Another Weather Observation

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

Line-Up For Second Place

Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Both parties are going to have more than considerable difficulty selecting a Vice President. Among the Democrats, those who do not favor Senator John Kennedy for President would prefer a Johnson-Kennedy or a Symington-Kennedy ticket depending upon whichever candidate for President is preferred. Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York and Governor Pat Brown of California are candidates for Vice President in the event that Kennedy is not nominated.

The situation regarding the Vice Presidency in the Democratic Party is fluid and no particular person is favored. What happens will depend upon who is nominated for the Presidency; what part of the country he comes from; whether he is a conservative or a liberal and other considerations.

In the Republican Party, there are those who favor Nelson Rockefeller for Vice President on the assumption that he has a sufficient following to be important. There are some Republicans who believe that a Nixon-Rockefeller ticket could win. On the other hand, there are Republicans who feel that Rockefeller is not a Republican, that he cannot really be associated with either party, but operates entirely on his own. They have observed him as Governor of New York State and are not over-enthusiastic.

The conservative Republicans want Senator Barry Goldwater to be chosen as Vice President and will put up a stiff fight for him. His following is growing because he is a man of sincerity. But it is generally held that Goldwater will not be nominated. First of all, he comes from a small state; secondly, he is a Westerner like Nixon; thirdly, he is too far on the Right for Nixon who cannot altogether cut loose from the Eisenhower Administration of which he has been a part.

It would seem that the one man in the Republican Party who fits the cut for Vice President in 1960 is Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge. Coming from a leading New England family, he is a resident of New York. As Nixon comes from California, Lodge fits the requirement for an Easterner for Vice President. He had had a long legislative experience, having served in the Massachusetts General Court, as the state legislature there is called. He has served in the United States Senate. He has been a newspaper reporter and has a good military record.

But his principal service to the country has been as the United States Ambassador to the United Nations and on the Security Council where he proved himself to be an excellent debater and diplomat, giving the Russians a hard time when necessary. He has withstood the attacks on the United States courageously and without compromise. His understanding of Russian techniques is better than most.

The Lodge family was brought up on the experience of governing. Henry Cabot Lodge's grandfather had a long and distinguished career in the United States Senate. His brother, John, was Governor of Connecticut and is now our Ambassador to Spain.

An excellent campaigner and a good mixer, Henry Cabot Lodge could be a valuable addition to Nixon's campaign.

Apart from Barry Goldwater and Henry Cabot Lodge, no names are seriously mentioned for the Vice Presidency on the Republican side. There has been some talk of Senator Kenneth Keating of New York, who is a good speaker and humorist, but he is hardly known to the country.

No one ever runs for the Vice Presidency. Many who are candidates for the Presidency hope that they will be able to settle for second place. The Democratic contest is more lively and exciting than the Republican and therefore there are more prospects for the Vice Presidency. In the Republican Party, one of the major difficulties is that few men are willing to give up governorships or seats in the Senate for banging the gavel in the Senate with a comparatively young President who, according to the averages, is likely to outlive two terms.

On the other hand, several members of President Eisenhower's Cabinet are of Vice Presidential proportions. Fred Seaton, Secretary of the Interior, and James Mitchell, Secretary of Labor, have often been mentioned in this connection. Both are prospects and possibilities, although Mitchell seemed to be in disfavor with Nixon on occasion. Seaton comes from Nebraska, is a newspaper owner and very personable.

Not As Free As Before

By ROGER BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass. — The days of rugged individualism have passed. Henry Ford was noted for it. He always wanted to "go alone, across lots and on foot." He had little use for committees or associations. For many years he would not join the National Automobile Manufacturers Association; he and others were in a position to go it alone, because they had some original ideas and were patient enough to work them.

I BELIEVE IN CO-OPERATION

The story of advancing civilization, however, is a record of man's willingness to co-operate. The Trade Association Directory, prepared by the U. S. Department of Commerce, shows that there are 3,000 regional and 7,000 local associations of businessmen. With these are affiliated 12,000 trade associations, 5,000 local Chambers of Commerce, and 30,000 businessmen's luncheon clubs. It seems as if everyone is a "joiner," and many join several business groups. Yet even the above figures do not cover the many purely social, church, labor, and farm fraternal groups. As for employees' organizations, there are 200 national and about 8,000 local unions.

There has been much fun poked at the "Organization Man," meaning a lower-echelon executive in big business corporations. But practically every man and many women are members of organized voluntary groups. In our free U.S., these members retain a very large degree of independence; and, except in cartels and some labor unions, individuals are not coerced or regimented or herded. On the whole, ours is a nation of free individuals—though not as free as were our pioneer fathers.

SMALL BUSINESSMEN

Freedom to organize is one of our basic American freedoms. Special and new interests keep arising in our world of rapid changes; one new bustling area is that of Small Business, which since 1938 has been self-organized solely and specifically to protect the legitimate interests of independent small and medium-sized business people. The largest of these Small Business Organizations is the National Federation of Independent Business, with headquarters at Burlingame, California. G. Wilson Harder, President. This Federation presents its point of view to the Small Business Committees of the Senate and House. It is outstanding in its co-operation with all Senators and Representatives — and in keeping them informed of grassroots opinion on all legislation affecting small business. It has a highly respected and competent Vice President in Washington giving full time to matters of legislative activity.

There was established by Congress in 1953 the Small Business Administration and a subsidiary, the Small Business Investment Administration. This latter has made total short-term loans of $856,403,000 to upwards of 20,000 individual independent small business firms, in addition it has advanced long-term equity capital of $3,785,000 during the past year. It is now administering over 19,000 business and disaster loans, including loans transferred from the former F. F. C. Sixty per cent of these loans were made in participation with banks. The cumulative losses through 1959 from SBA loans have been only 1.1 per cent, a remarkable showing. I am convinced that the "little people" have financial responsibility and character.

ARE WE OVER-ORGANIZED?

Is organization "cramping the style" of individuals and reducing their initiative? Are too many of us becoming "learners" instead of "lifters"? I believe that as long as organizations are voluntary they will wither away when they lose their usefulness. Individuals can make their influence felt within homogeneous groups of their choosing, dealing with problems about which they have direct knowledge.

For some years—with my associate Earnest Gaunt of Orlando, Florida—I have watched these "small businessmen and women." At least once each year I like to publicly testify to their integrity, industry, and importance. They are the hope of America.

Strength For Today Cut In Cuban Sugar Quota Likely

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
GOD'S ARMS OF WELCOME
The prophet Amos is a great figure in Biblical history. He was a shepherd and a "dresser of sycamore trees." By this latter employment he eked out a bit more of a living than he could hope to get as a herdsman.

Yet this humble man went up into the Northern Kingdom of Israel and at the shrine at Beth-el, the king's sanctuary and the royal house, he denounced the vain worship of people in high station. He looked upon the tyranny of the powerful and called it theft and murder. He looked upon the emptiness of men's worship in the temple and the weak and corrupt lives of those who pretended to be God's ministers. You are an abomination in the sight of the Lord, he cried. "I hate, I despise your feasts, and I will take no delight in your solemn assemblies. . . Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols. But let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream" (5:21-24).

There is nothing on earth so vain as vain worship—and nothing so blasphemous. When men speak evil out of one side of their mouths and attempt to praise God out of the other side, God is angry with fierce and fearful anger.

God's arms are held out in welcome to sinners—but to sinners who want to be something else. "No man can serve two masters." We cannot at one and the same time love good and evil, righteousness and the satanic spirit of wickedness.

By ELMER ROESSNER

A cut in Cuba's sugar quota is almost a certainty. Congress is almost sure to re-write sugar legislation to set a lower quota or to pass on to the President the power to set new quotas. The first step is more likely.

The quota system guarantees sugar-producing nations sales of certain amounts of sugar above the world price. This constitutes a subsidy to sugar-producing nations. We pay them a third more than their sugar is worth in the hope that they will spend receipts for American products.

The crackdown on Cuba's Premier Fidel Castro on American industries brought demands from those hurt for a cut in sugar quotas. The Administration, however, has been loath to act. It had hopes that matters could be worked out.

RISING TENSIONS
Then came the curious flight of Francis G. Powers into Russia, and the sharpening of international tensions. Congressmen are growing firmer in demands that America be tougher against the Communist world.

A cut in the Cuban quota would be a triple effect. It would rock Castro's power. It would be a blow against Communism that could not be challenged; and it would force the Communist nations to pick up the pieces.

They would have to buy large quantities of Cuban sugar whether they wanted it or not, and indications are that they want little of it. If we reduced our purchase price for sugar, depression would threaten the island. Russia would be faced with the choice of letting the world see a Communist depression, or of buying more sugar than it can use. Neither the Administration nor the Congress will overlook the propaganda and power-politics possible in this situation.

OTHER LOOK-AHEADS

Here are other likely futures in business:
High gas tax: Rising costs of highway construction is pushing the Federal highway program farther out the plank; it's only hope of rescue is an increase in the Federal gas tax.

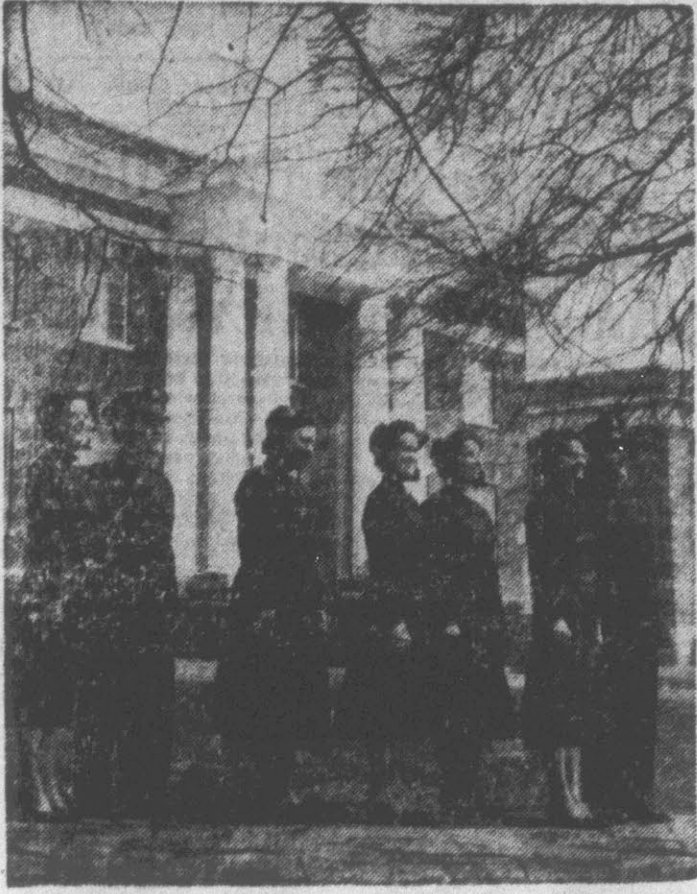

More foreign cars: The compact cars have not smothered imports of foreign autos; in some instances 1960 sales top those of 1959. Importers say they are still more economical and more stylish than American compacts.
Less Live: More tapes and less live bodies will appear on your television screen this fall. The film-to-live ratio will increase as more performers demand bigger shares of re-play rights, and as more producers try to cut costs and increase revenues by putting their shows on tape.

IF NO PAY DEMAND, IT'S NOT A UNION

The New York State Labor Relations Board has forbidden a union in the bowling alley field from operating. The union, called "Amalgamated Local 2-379" had signed a contract with one bowling alley. It was challenged by a Theatre and Amusement Service Union.

The State Board found it a phony union on several grounds, including the grounds that the signed contract provided no increase in wages or other benefits.

Turk Tensions See Mob Fight

IZMIR, Turkey (AP) — About 8,000 opponents and supporters of Premier Adnan Menderes skirmished for nearly an hour in the streets of Izmir Sunday just after he promised to hold national elections.

About 4,000 youths shouting "Menderes resign" clashed with about the same number of supporters of the 61-year-old premier.

Police and troops dispersed the mob without serious casualties, but tension continued high.

Menderes arrived in Izmir on a tour of western Turkey to test local sentiment toward his sharp repression of the opposition People's Republican party.

In an arrival speech he promised election of a new parliament if the nation stays calm. It was his first public mention of voting since the student riots in Istanbul and Ankara April 28-29. He indicated no election date, but under the constitution he must call a vote by the spring of 1961.

The premier was eating at a restaurant some distance away when the fight broke out.

Menderes has put a ban on all political activity inside Turkey while a parliamentary committee carries out a probe of the opposition. The ban runs two more months.

ECC Crushed Elon Before Packed House; Play High Point Tuesday

By JOHNNY HUDSON
Reflector Sports Editor

"We were real pleased with our boys. It looks like we came out of our slump, had more hustle, and played more heads-up ball." Thus, Coach Jim Mallory liked what he saw Saturday night as East Carolina crushed the challenge of visiting Elon, 12-1.

Free tickets issued by Jenkins Motor Company, Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company, and College View Cleaners brought a packed-Stadium crowd of close to 2,000 in to view the Pirates win their tenth conference victory and nudge closer to a second straight North State title.

Hefty Charlie Johnson and speed-merchant Glenn Bass buried a couple of batting slumps in the Guy Smith Stadium fracas to give crafty Larry Crayton all the backing he needed.

Crayton cut Elon batters down like timber and yielded only four scattered hits to the Christian lineup in winning his eighth game of the season. He has been charged with two defeats.

Sharing the spotlight with the above three was clutch-hitting Jimmy Martin who mustered the first hit off Elon starter Roger Knapp. Martin delivered a two-out bases-loaded single in the third inning to break a scoreless deadlock and drive in two runs.

Johnson followed Martin with a single to score the third run of the inning and send the Bucs off to the races. Spencer Gaylord, Wally Cockrell, and Gary Pierce had loaded the bases by working Knapp for walks.

Johnson collided with a Knapp fast ball in the seventh inning, sending the white object soaring over the head of left fielder Mike Little for a triple and scoring two more teammates. The stocky backstop came in to score on the same play when catcher Joe Del Gais threw the ball back into left field in an attempt to catch Johnson napping at third base.

All hope for Elon was destroyed in the eighth when East Carolina marched nine men to the plate and scored six more runs against two Elon hurriers.

The Bucs picked up five hits in the inning with base knocks by Cockrell, Pierce, and Bass accounting for most of the scoring.

Elon picked up its single run in fifth when Del Gais opened the inning with a walk, went to second when Crayton threw wild to first, and scampered to third on a passed ball charged to Johnson. Pete Jones lifted a little blooper that fell in front of Pierce, allowing Del Gais to score. Only two other runners advanced as far as third base. Jerry Pike got there in the first after walking and moving around on a couple of passed balls.

George Tucker Named New Elon College Coach

George Tucker, 30-year-old East Carolina College assistant football coach, was named head football coach of Elon College Saturday. He will succeed Sid Varney.

Tucker, an outstanding lineman during his playing days at East Carolina, returned to ECC last fall after coaching stints at Lancaster High School in Lancaster, South Carolina, Wingate Junior College, and Davidson.

While head coach at Wingate, Tucker brought the junior college nationwide fame with an undefeated record and produced several Junior College All-Americans. He was the first football coach of the Baptist college.

In 1958-59, he served as assistant to Bill Dole at Davidson College. He was also swim coach at the Southern Conference Institution.

Tucker expressed regret in leaving his alma mater but felt that "it is a step upward". In announcing that he was leaving, he praised his tutor Coach Jack Boone and the rest of the EC coaching staff.

In moving to Elon, Tucker will be able to carry two assistant coaches. He has failed to name any but it was expected that at least one would be an East Carolina graduate.

Tucker viewed the coming season of one of "rebuilding" for Elon. "We are way behind in our recruiting," he declared, "but still hope to land a few good boys."

A Monroe native, Tucker also coached golf at East Carolina. His golfers went through the conference undefeated and are currently favored in the North State meet in Greensboro.

Varney, former North Carolina University star, was informed by the college several weeks ago that his contract would not be renewed after several poor seasons.

NEW POSITION—George Tucker has accepted the head coaching job at Elon College. An assistant at East Carolina this past fall, Tucker is a graduate of ECC.

Julius Boros Wins Texas Tournament

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Julius Boros never will forget that 20-foot birdie putt he sank on the 17th green Sunday to win the $30,000 Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament.

It not only put $5,000 into his jeans but continued his reputation of being the man most likely to win the big ones.

Boros, the stoical Hungarian who looks like an Indian chief, shot a par 70 on the final round to take the 14th annual Colonial by a stroke over Gene Littler of Singing Hills, Calif., and Kel Nagle, the Australian. Boros finished with 280 for 72 holes.

He needed to sink that putt on 17 or be tied for the lead by Nagle and Littler, who had both birdied the hole.

Boros now has won nine tournaments since starting on the tour in 1950 and eight of them have been big money affairs. One was the National Open at Dallas in 1952. He has won $106,000 in the nine — an average of $11,778 per tournament.

The final round of Colonial started Sunday with Nagle, from Sydney, Australia, and Littler tied for the lead at 54 holes with 209.

Little Leaguers Table Tennis Open Tomorrow

Former major league pitching star Ray Scarborough plus the dedication of a new field will highlight the 10th Little League opener in Greenville tomorrow afternoon at Guy Smith Stadium.

Scarborough, a one-time great with the Washington Senators and Boston Red Sox, will be the guest speaker in the short dedication exercise planned prior to the first game of the season between Kiwanis and Jaycees. Scarborough is currently serving as a baseball scout with the Baltimore Orioles.

The addition of a new field for Greenville Little Leaguers comes as a climax to a ten-year period of steady growth in the program here.

Little League was formed in Greenville in 1951 when a group of parents decided the aims and goals of a Little League program were rewarding and would be an aid for the children of this community.

A community project, the program has been financed completely by sponsors, parents and other interested people of Greenville.

Starting with only six teams, expansion has been necessary through the years and with the addition of two more teams this summer, Greenville will field a total of 12 teams.

Doubleheader

A doubleheader will be played at the East Carolina field tomorrow afternoon North State leader East Carolina and visiting High Point.

Game time for the final North State games of the season will be 1:00. According to Coach Jim Mallory, the first game will be seven innings and the latter a nine-inning contest.

Mallory will start Johnny Ellen (4-3) in one game and will go with either Nathan Green (1-0) or Kenny Snyder (1-0) in the other. Larry Crayton (8-2) will be used in relief if needed.

Mike Little reached third in the sixth after getting on base on a fielders choice. He failed to come home when Crayton retired the side with a couple of successive strikeouts.

The win left only High Point standing between East Carolina and another North State crown. ECC plays the Panthers in a twin-bill tomorrow afternoon on the college field.

In praising his club, Coach Jim Mallory indicated that he felt his club was "over the hump". "After losing to Catawba earlier this year we have had our backs to the wall but we have come back. It hasn't been like last year when we coasted to the title", he explained.

In sizing up the big battles with High Point tomorrow afternoon, the veteran ECC skipper shrugged it off with "It ought to be a lot of fun."

Orioles Flourish In American Loop Race

The "Baby Birds" from Baltimore threaten to put the accent on youth in the American League race. With the help of one 21-year-old and another of 22, the Orioles have flown into a first place tie with the venerable Chicago White Sox.

Steve Barber, a left-hander, is the 21-year-old. Vaulting from the low minors Barber won his second for the Orioles with a fine three-hitter against Boston in the 2-1 first game of a double header Sunday.

Chuck Estrada, 22, wasn't even on the Baltimore roster in the spring but when he showed up there was no sending him home. He walked in to relieve Hector Brown with the bases loaded and none out in the sixth inning of the second game at Boston and struck out five men in a four-inning workout.

Brown got credit for the victory because the Orioles were well on their way to a 7-4 victory when he left.

Early Wynn, Chicago's 40-year-old ace, finally hit his stride, blanking Cleveland with five hits, 4-1, in his first complete game of the year. However, the Indians came back to beat Gerry Staley in the second game 6-3 on a three-run homer by Harvey Kuenn in the 10th inning.

New York rolled up five in the first inning, in which Elston Howard tripled with the bases loaded, and rolled to an 11-2 romp over Washington behind Art Ditmar.

Kansas City blasted Detroit's four-game winning streak by taking both ends of a doubleheader, 5-0 on Bud Daley's three-hitter and 5-4 on Harry Chitt's 10th inning clutch single.

Rookie Marv Breeding hit his first big league home run for Baltimore leading off in the first inning of the opener. Clint Courtney's sacrifice fly drove in the

Don Cardwell Hurls No-Hitter For Chicago Cubs' Win

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer
Don Cardwell is a good example of the old baseball cliché that a change of uniform is good for a man now and then.
Unable to last more than six innings for the Philadelphia Phillies who traded him Friday, the 24-year-old right-hander came through with a no-hit, no-run game Sunday, in his first start as a Chicago Cub.
Cardwell retired the first batter, walked Alex Grammas on a 3-2 pitch and then set down 26 St. Louis Cardinals in succession en route to his 4-0 victory.
It was the first no-hitter in the National League since Sal Maglie of the Dodgers, then Brooklyn, threw one against the Phillies in the waning days of the 1956 pennant race.
Pittsburgh's Harvey Haddix pitched 12 perfect innings last year only to give up a hit and lose the game to Milwaukee in the 13th. The last American League no-hitter was pitched by Hoyt Wilhelm of Baltimore against New York, Sept. 20, 1958. Cardwell's only previous 1960 win was in relief against Milwaukee. He had lost to Pittsburgh and Milwaukee and failed to go the route in four starts. Over the years he has had only fair success in the majors, never getting up to the .500 mark for a full season.

In the ninth pinch hitter Carl Sawatski slammed a long drive to right field that George Altman caught against the wall. With two out and a 3-2 count on Joe Cunningham, the batter hit a low liner to left which Walt Moryn grabbed for a shoestring catch. Cardwell's dramatic performance in the second game came after St. Louis finally had won its first game on the road. The Cards' 6-1 decision in the opener with the help of two home runs by Ken Boyer broke a 12-game losing streak away from home. Orlando Cepeda's two-run triple in the eighth gave first-place San Francisco a 2-0 decision over Los Angeles. Johnny Antonelli allowed only six hits in his first complete game of the year, boosting the Giants' lead over Pittsburgh to 1 1/2 games.

Pittsburgh had to be satisfied with a split at Milwaukee. The Pirates hopped on Warren Spahn for four runs in the first inning and took the opener 6-4 but bowed to the Braves in the second 4-2 on Hank Aaron's three-run homer off Bennie Daniels in the first inning.
Cincinnati and Philadelphia players engaged in a free-for-all in the eighth inning of their first game after the Reds' Raul Sanchez hit three Philly batters with low pitches. Manager Gene Mauch of the Phils charged the mound and players from both sides squared off. Billy Martin of the Reds went to the hospital from a punch on the jaw.

Bulls Win Third Straight With 6-5 Decision

The revived Durham Bulls made first-place Raleigh their third straight victory 6-5 Sunday in the Carolina League.

Greensboro mauling Wilson 10-8 and Winston-Salem routed Burlington 11-4 in other games.
The weekend's play left Raleigh 1 1/2 games in front of the pack. Greensboro remained in second, and Winston-Salem, five games off the pace, in third. Durham's wins pulled it within half a game of fourth-place Wilson, while Burlington continued in the cellar.

Durham went ahead for keeps with a four-run second inning. Joe Sullivan collected three of Durham's 10 hits.

Greensboro got off to an early start with five runs in the first inning. Phil Lutz homered for the Yanks, while George Banks had two round-trippers.

A three-run homer by pitcher Sam McIntyre climaxed a five-run second inning for Winston-Salem. Wayne Newberry and Bobby Pucchnelli both had home runs for losing Burlington.

Games tonight: Wilson at Greensboro, Winston-Salem at Burlington, and Durham at Raleigh.

Duke Champs Of 'College Bowl'

NEW YORK (AP)—Duke University, new champion of the "College Bowl" television quiz show, will face a team from Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, next Sunday.

Duke scored 140 to 110 for Michigan State Sunday and won a 1-500 scholarship fund for the university. The team includes Carol Corder of Atlanta, John Sheats of East Point, Ga., Sandy Levinson of Hendersonville, N.C., and George Schepher of New York City.

The Citadel Is Southern Champ

The Citadel's fine baseball team sat back and waited today for official confirmation of its role as Southern Conference representative in the NCAA district playoffs starting at Gastonia, N.C., June 2.

The Bulldogs tied with Richmond for the conference title in the flag race that ended Saturday, but there is hardly any doubt The Citadel will make the trip to Gastonia.

A few words from Richmond Coach Mac Pitt virtually cleared the path to the playoffs for the Bulldogs Sunday night.

"It wouldn't make any sense for us to go," said Pitt, whose Spiders and The Citadel each posted an 8-2 conference record. "We have too many important men who'd be ineligible, and we think the conference ought not to be represented by a team that's wrecked in this way."

Four of the best players Pitt has—catcher Chuck Boone, shortstop Alan Cole, and pitchers Berry Swilling and Mel Horowitz—couldn't play in the NCAA event because they've competed four carsey seasons.

The Citadel's athletic director, Eddie Teague, planned to confer with Pitt by telephone today for a decision on the conference's representation at Gastonia.

Though a few isolated games remain to be played, the conference title race ended last Saturday when Richmond downed William and Mary 3-2 and The Citadel out-slugged Davidson 14-8 to make sure of a first-place tie.

Final Play

Jane Sauve and Harriett White will meet in the finals of Women's Championship flight of the Greenville Country Club and Golf Course tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.
The match will climax a months play in the women's division. The Men's champion won't be decided for two more weeks.

Tar Heels Win ACC Crown, 6-3

North Carolina's mascot is a ram, symbol of persistence. And that's what the Tar Heels showed in capping an 11-game winning streak with their first Atlantic Coast Conference baseball title. They lost their first three league games and won all the rest.

It was persistence down to their last game, Saturday's grueling 14-inning battle with Duke's Blue Devils. The Tar Heels won 6-3.

The man-of-the-hour was right-hander Wayne Young of Mooresville, N.C. Not only did he blank Duke for 8 2-3 innings in relief, but singled in the decisive runs in the 14th. His pitching record is 6-3.

It was a hard loss for Duke's Don Altman, who has an .82 earned run average. Some hurling wildness and several errors affled brought on Altman's second loss against eight wins. Nonetheless, Altman didn't yield an earned run in the 14 frames.

North Carolina will represent the league in the District 3 NCAA playoffs starting June 2 at Gastonia, N.C. Other contenders include the Southern and Southeastern conference representatives and one at-large entry.

Season records for ACC clubs include North Carolina with 11 wins and three losses; Duke 9-4; N.C. State 9-5; Clemson 7-6; Wake Forest 7-7; Maryland 5-6; South Carolina 3-11; and Virginia 2-11.

DARLINGTON, S. C. (AP)—Stocky Joe Weatherly of Norfolk, Va., can spend that $9,777 first-place money this time. He got the checkered victory flag in the fourth annual Rebel 300-mile convertible automobile race here Saturday.

It was Weatherly's first major victory after being second in the last two Rebel 300s, and cracking up just before he was about to win the 1955 Southern 500.

"I was already spending that money in Miami in that 1955 race when, bam!" Weatherly recalled, "I knew I had this one locked up only when I saw that checkered flag come down."

He was driving a Ford. More than 30 caution laps during the split race, run on two Saturdays, slowed the time to a little better than an average 102 miles an hour in the $42,500 late model convertible grind.

The final two-thirds of the race was witnessed by an estimated 37,000 fans, after 30,000 on May 7 saw rain stop the running after 74 laps.

"The caution flags actually helped," Weatherly admitted after winning. He had protested re-starting the race under five caution laps. He had retuned under the rain caution flag a week earlier, but most drivers hadn't.

He wanted to pick up the race at full speed under a green flag and threatened court action if not allowed to do so.

"Let's not talk about that now," Weatherly grinned about the court action threat, after he had won. No refueling was allowed during the week the cars were idle.

Dick Petty, 22-year-old driver from Randolman, N.C., was second in a Plymouth and won $5,295. Rex White of Spartanburg, S.C., was third in a Chevrolet, good for $3,220.

Lee Petty, Dick's father, fourth in a Plymouth, won $2,020.
Buck Baker of Spartanburg in a Chevrolet was fifth and won $1,260.

The Pettys indicated a protest, but they didn't file it. They said Weatherly came out of the pits and passed cars under the caution flag. But the pace car had come into the pits and the race was on, although through error, the starter did not get the green flag out immediately.

He pointed out that you prolong the life of your car's engine and get real economy when it runs clean. Then he clinched it for me when he said: 'Buy Amoco's American Gas—it's a regular that's precision-refined to do just that—burn clean.' Ever since, I've bought American Gas at the Amoco station at regular price. And you know—my car's still running like new."

CHAPTER 33

Mr. Ellison, the gray, stocky engineer, was looking at the end of his cigar with great suspicion, sniffing at it.

He drew in smoke until the end glowed, then sniffed again, shaking his head and saying, "I thought it couldn't be this Havana at ten bob apiece—but then what the devil is it?"

Alexander Hero too was sniffing. Some execrable stench seemed suddenly to have invaded the room—a sickening, miasmic odor. The investigator wrenched the door open and went out with Ellison at his heels.

The stink filled the corridor—there was more of it and it was more noxious. From the west wing there came the distant sound of an agonized voice bawling, "Hero! Hero! Where are you?"

In spite of the change in pitch induced by some new agony of fear and tension, Hero recognized it as Sir Richard Lockerie's. He shouted, "Here, Sir Richard—coming," and ran.

Halfway he encountered the baronet, sheet-white, disheveled, in slippers, trousers, and dressing gown, his eyes almost starting from his head.

"For heaven's sake, Hero," he cried, "come at once—something ghastly has happened!"

Hero felt his heart sink within him. "Susan!"

"No, no—Beth."

Other cries arose: the voice of Lord Paradine shouting, "What the devil is that stink?" and then the agonized scream of a woman. Doors were opening. Susan appeared in dressing gown—Meg—somehow Cousin Freddie was there too.

They went pounding down the hall at the heels of Sir Richard until they came to Beth's room. They seemed to reach the door simultaneously and crowded inside.

Stretched out on the bed, still as death, lay a nun in black muslin habit, black hood with white starched lining. There was no mistaking the pale face and the figure within the cowl and habit—it was Beth Paradine.

She lay still as in sleep, unconsciousness, or death. On the night table by her bed was a glass with some milk still in the bottom. Beside it was a bottle of sleeping tablets.

Sir Richard was on his knees by the bed then in a frenzy of anguish, holding her, shaking her, calling to her, "Beth, Beth—oh, why did you do it? Is she dead, Hero? For Pete's sake, someone, get a doctor!"

Lady Paradine too was on her knees at her daughter's side, distraught and frightened, calling to her. "My baby! My baby!" she moaned, and then cried, "She was upset by what happened and said she was going to take a sleeping pill. Isobel brought her some hot milk—my child has killed herself—why, oh, why?" Mark stood anxiously up to his mother's aide.

Cousin Freddie, his fat face flushed and perspiring, said, "So it was Beth who was the nun all the time!"

The implication of his words reached everyone in the room and reduced them to stunned silence, except for one hoarse cry from Sir Richard, who looked as though he were about to be bereft of his reason. "Oh, Great God! My Beth the nun!"

There was the tableau then: the still figure on the bed who by her very stillness and the habit she wore seemed to admit to her guilt, and all the horrified people who had loved her—parent and friend, brother and lover—staring at her.

In the silence, his own thoughts and emotions in desperate turmoil because of things he now knew, Hero went to the bed. He picked up the glass, sniffed it, tasted the milk, kneit and put his ear to Beth's breast, where the heart was still faintly fluttering, sniffed at her lips and breathed open the eyelids and looked into the unseeing eyes, and said sharply, "Mark—call Dr. Winters at once! Meg—get some hot coffee going!"

Sir Richard's head was shaking from side to side, and he was saying, "My Beth the nun? But how could she be when we were together that night?"

Hero went over to him, took him by the shoulders and shook him, and said, "Pull yourself together, man. What night? When? Where?"

"The last time the nun was seen and the harp played. I found her in the library alone—terrified. I took her in my arms—she had tried to follow the nun. That was when—when we found one another. We were still together when the harp began to play."

As though the blackest of abysses had opened at his feet, Hero saw his mistake then, and the consequences of it, and groaned aloud, "What a fool I've been! Why didn't I see? Why didn't I know?"

For from the moment that Beth had found her way into Richard Lockerie's arms Susan Marshall had been as safe as though she had been in her own home. The hatred had transferred itself to Beth Paradine. The nun's habit lay empty in a crumpled heap upon the floor. Held upright in the grip of Dr.

Winters and Mark Paradine, Beth, clad in slippers and dressing gown, was being walked up and down, up and down the length of the room.

Her eyes were still glazed, her mouth vacuous, but locomotion had returned—she was moving her limbs of her own volition. Hero, with Meg, stood watching her narrowly.

Meg asked of her stepbrother, "Sandro, do you know who—what has happened?"

Hero nodded grimly. "I think I do." And then said, "She's had an overdose of barbiturate," and pointed in the direction of the night table on which the two-thirds empty glass and the bottle were still standing.

Sir Richard had regained some of his composure, though he was still a badly bewildered man. "Why did she do it?" he groaned. "We were happy. We had found one another. Had I not come to her room to see that she was all right she would be dead by now."

Hero said, "Have some faith, man. She didn't. Look at that bottle—it is almost full. She took a sleeping tablet, at the most two, then she drank her milk. The overdose had been dissolved in it. Afterwards, when she became unconscious, that thing was put on her."

They all looked with distaste at the empty habit on the floor, and Lord Paradine shouted, "You meant someone has tried to kill my daughter?" and Lady Paradine moaned, "But why—why? Why was this done to my baby?"

"I can give you two reasons, and one of them is probably symbolic," Hero asserted: "compulsory retirement from the world of love—and life. This case has been stiff with symbolism from the beginning, or have you forgotten the condition in which Susan's room was found, and the hand at her throat?"

Sir Richard cried, "Then you mean she wasn't the nun at all, Hero?"

"Certainly not!" the investigator snapped. "How could she be, man, when she was in your arms the night the harp played? If I had known that before—I might have prevented—Harp and nun are inseparable, and always have been!"

The harp playing will come to an end. So will Paradine Hall, if Hero isn't quick enough to capture the culprit tomorrow.

FALLS CHURCH, Va. (AP)—The Vatican's apostolic delegate to the United States, Archbishop Egidio Vagnozzi, recalls that in his childhood he "had a tendency to be somewhat wild."

As a result, he told a sodality meeting Sunday, he was frequently well spanked by his parents.

"In fact," he said, "my mother once said to me, 'I pity the poor woman who will marry you.'"

"But, as you can see, almighty God took care of that."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock market prices were irregular early this afternoon as Wall Street turned cautious on news that the summit conference apparently had foundered.

Gains and losses of fractions to a point prevailed among most key stocks.

The market was vigorous and higher at the start as it resumed Friday's sharp rally. There was an initial rush when a string of big blocks was traded, most of them at moderately higher prices.

News that Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev had withdrawn his invitation to President Eisenhower for a visit to Russia was followed by precautionary selling among many of the "growth" stocks which have made big gains lately. Some of the aircraft-rocket stocks held gains; others dipped.

Steels, motors and rails turned mixed.

Universal Match and Bell & Howell dipped about a point each. Essman Kodak, which has been strong lately, lost about 2.

Thokol and Raytheon were up well over a point.

Boeing was ahead about a point while Curtiss-Wright chopped a point gain to a fraction.

Steels and motors turned ragged. Ford was off about a point.

Most oils were easy from the start. Texaco was off about a point.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off .77 at 615.26.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .30 to 213.30 with the industrials up .30, the rails up .30 and the utilities up .20.

Feed And Grain Dealers Set Up New Association

A group of county feed and grain dealers last Friday organized the Pitt County Feed and Grain Dealers Association and elected the new group's officers.

R. H. McLawhorn was elected president of the new association designed to give assistance to county agricultural leaders in agriculture education and other programs.

Jay Boswell was named secretary and the charter membership elected Pitt County Farm Agent S. C. Winchester honorary member and advisor.

A second purpose of the new association is to create a closer relationship between feed and grain dealers in the county in staging special events, checking credit ratings, and other commonly-related occasions and situations.

The association's next meeting is set for the Silo Restaurant, June 13, at 7:30 p.m. Pitt feed and grain dealers not represented at last Friday's meeting are invited to attend the June gathering and to join the association.

Cracked Down On Local Union

FRONT ROYAL, Va. (AP)—The Textile Workers Union of America has cracked down on a local union that planned to buy $8,000 worth of bonds for construction of private, segregated high school facilities.

In what was described as an unprecedented action, TWUA headquarters notified Local 371 Saturday that its assets had been frozen and its officers had been relieved. All powers were vested in an administrator, Will Davis, while the TWUA holds a hearing on the case. The hearing is scheduled Thursday with Victor Canzano, general vice president, presiding.

The executive committee of the local, whose 2,000 members are employed at the American Viscose Corp. plant in Front Royal, condemned the TWUA action. In a statement, the local maintained it has the right to invest the local union's funds without interference from the international union.

Local officials contended the national office had been misinformed as to the financial structure of the private school and said if necessary they would carry their fight all the way to the national convention of the TWUA, which meets in Chicago late this month.

N.C. Candidates Together Again

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Democratic candidates for governor get together in Charlotte tonight for one of the mass appearances that has marked the campaign.

The Charlotte Executives Club will provide the forum for Malcolm B. Seawell, Terry Sanford, John D. Larkins, and I. Beverly Lake. Beforehand, each will put in a full day of campaigning.

Sen. B. Everett Jordan, running for Democratic nomination to a new term, said Sunday he feels such opportunities are provided for candidates to appear together without setting up special debates.

The senator said in a wire to Addison Hewlett, one of his opponents, he did not think any useful purpose "would be served by a joint televised debate suggested by Hewlett."

Jordan, named by Gov. Hodges to succeed the late W. Kerr Scott, will be in Waynesville tonight for a rally of supporters and campaign workers from 20 mountain area counties.

Hewlett, Wilmington lawyer and 1959 House speaker, is making his first statewide political race in an effort to unseat Jordan.

A breakfast for news reporters and a news conference in his Raleigh headquarters started off today for Sanford, Fayetteville lawyer and former state Senator. Sanford reported Sunday he feels his campaign is "going extremely well, and what we need now is to add hard work for two more weeks." The primary will be May 28.

On his way to Charlotte, Sanford will shake hands on a tour of Richmond County.

Seawell will be in Charlotte for a luncheon speech to a Rotary Club.

Diplomatic Salvo Fired At Castro

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has fired a delayed diplomatic salvo at Cuba for what it calls an unprovoked high seas attack on an American submarine.

The State Department demanded an explanation of the incident. It strongly disputed accusations by Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro that the United States has aggressive designs against Cuba.

The submarine Sea Poacher, according to the Navy, was five miles from Cuban territory on May 6 when crewmen noticed what appeared to be red signal flares from another vessel. After the surfaced sub determined the other craft was a Cuban patrol boat, the Cuban craft turned back without an exchange of messages. The Navy considered the incident as routine.

The next development came Friday night, when Castro made one of his mid night television speeches. He charged the sub had violated Cuban waters and was chased away by Cuban gunfire. He also claimed that the U.S. destroyer Norfolk cruised within 2 1/2 miles of a Cuban island.

The Navy made another check and decided that the sub had been fired on after all, probably with small caliber tracer bullets. It was not hit.

The State Department promptly protested. It told Cuba it wanted an explanation of why "an armed vessel of the Cuban navy fired, without provocation, on the USS Sea Poacher while the latter was pursuing a peaceful passage on the high seas."

Authorities said the Norfolk would have gone around if it had gotten within 2 1/2 miles of the Cuban island, as Castro charged.

Announce Okay Of REA Loan

The Edgecombe-Martin County Electric Membership Corporation has been approved for a quarter-million-dollar loan for expansion and improvements, it was announced by telegram today by Congressman Herbert C. Bonner from Washington.

The corporation will use the loan of $265,000 to improve its service to its nearly 5,000 members in an eight-county area. Northern Pitt County is served by the Edgecombe-Martin corporation.

Pitt areas served include rural sections around Bethel, Pactus, Grimesland, Belvoir, and Greenville.

The corporation's headquarters in Tarboro told the Daily Reflector this morning expansion and improvements are already underway. A spokesman said the funds will be used to add some 350 customers to the corporation's service that included 4,516 at the end of March.

Improvements, the spokesman said, will include enlarging the capacities of transformers and installing lines that will be capable of carrying increased power to farms in the eight-county area.

The corporation currently has about 1,025 miles of line with an average of 44 members per mile. Average consumption per member stands at 246.64 kilowatt hours per month at an average cost of $6.21.

Served by the corporation are parts of Pitt, Martin, Edgecombe, Beaufort, Bertie, Nash, Halifax and Wilson Counties.
