Hail Does Some Crop Damage In County

Bethel Area Is Especially Hard Hit; Windows Broken

BETHEL — A sudden storm with hail the size of golf balls hit here yesterday afternoon and left in its wake some crops completely destroyed.

Mayor Clifton Everett said some farmers would have to start all over on their crops. Damaged crops included tobacco, cotton and corn, as well as others.

The damage was not confined to crops, however, Everett said. Hail beat holes in roofing shingles, hundreds of window panes were reported broken out, tree limbs were blown and cars in the open were also pelted with the hail, he Everett described the storm as "terrific." He said it came with no warning. Current in parts of Bethel was off for about an hour, and many residents experienced telephone trouble. Everett said, however, that he knew of no telephone lines or poles being blown down.

When the storm had spent itself, Everett said leaves beaten from the trees by wind and hail covered the streets, yards and roofs. Street crews were cleaning all morning to clear the debris. The storm, which came from the northwest, started about 6 p.m. yesterday, with the severe hail lasting over 10 minutes, Everett estimated.

Rest of County Other parts of Pitt County escaped the severe storm. In Greenville, only moderate winds were reported and not enough rain to measure at the Greenville Utilities Plant.

J. M. Fleming of the utilities plant said high temperatures yesterday were about 92 degrees. Tuesday morning's low was 62, rising to 78 at 8 a.m. The Tar River level remained the same as Monday, 3.7 feet, Fleming said.

Three Safety-Check Lanes Begin Operations In City

Going Ahead On School Building

The Greenville Board of Education decided yesterday afternoon to proceed with construction of an additional building at Fleming St. School.

Supt. J. H. Rose said this morning the combination lunch room-auditorium will be built on existing property.

"They are going ahead with this building regardless of the fact that they have not been able to acquire property they wanted," Rose stated. "We are going ahead anyway with the property we already have."

The superintendent said board members met at the school site with Dudley and Shoe, architects for the project. The group designated the spot where the building will be constructed on the eastern end of the present building.

Rose stated that the $50,000 addition to Fleming St. School will be built as a separate structure connected to the old portion by a covered walkway.

He said architects are proceeding with plans for the building and bids will be called for when plans are completed.

The present Fleming St. School auditorium will be converted into four class rooms upon completion of the additional structure.

Three vehicle safety check lanes began operation in Greenville today to provide free safety inspections to Greenville and Pitt County motorists.

The lanes, sponsored by the Pitt County Safety Council with cooperation from the State Highway Patrol, local police, and civic clubs, will operate from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and from 2 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. today and tomorrow.

Thursday, one lane each will be operated in Ayden, Bethel, and Farmville.

The Greenville lanes are located N. Greene St. at Farmers Warehouse, Dickinson at Shack's Electric Co., and E. 10th St. at the East Carolina College gymnasium.

Each check lane will be manned by at least five officials. The team consists of one highway patrolman, a city policeman, a qualified auto mechanic, and two men to serve refreshments and record data.

The Greenville Pepsi-Cola Co. furnished the refreshments, the Pitt County Auto Dealers Association, the mechanics; the Pitt County Insurance Exchange, the supplies; and the local civic organizations, funds to hire the personnel to record data.

Luther Moore, chairman of the Pitt County Safety Council's committee for planning the lanes, said today the purpose of the program is to provide an opportunity for every motorist in Pitt County to have his vehicle safety-checked. He urged all motorists to visit the check lanes.

Vehicles are being checked for condition of brakes, front and rear lights, directional signals, brake lights, tires, steering, windshield wipers, horn, and windshield wipers.

Blue and white windshield stickers are applied to cars passing the inspection.

Larkins Attacks ABC Member In Political Wars

RALEIGH (AP)—Candidate for governor John D. Larkins took a poke today at an opponent, Terry Sanford, today because Sanford's manager in a five-county area around Shelby is Clint Newton—a member of the State ABC Board. Larkins declared in a statement that "an unhealthy situation exists when a member of the ABC Board puts the board squarely in politics."

"Of all the state agencies that should stay out of politics in any shape or form whatever, the ABC Board leads the list of those demanded by good government, public morality and business ethics to stay out of any political campaign," Larkins stated. "I think the present administration should take steps to get members of the ABC Board out of politics," he added. "Its members must not get themselves obligated politically."

Reds Free Plane, 9 Americans

WIESBADEN, Germany (AP)—The U.S. Air Force announced that Soviet authorities today freed a C47 that strayed into Communist East Germany last Friday and the nine Americans aboard it.

The Soviet high command in East Germany issued a vigorous protest against the twin-engine transport's flight and declared the American command in West Germany would have to take full responsibility for the incident.

A Soviet statement said the Soviets forced down the plane to protect the frontiers of East Germany as a member of the Warsaw Pact, a Soviet-led Communist military alliance.

A U.S. Air Force spokesman said the plane with its occupants—eight Air Force men and a woman—had taken off from East Germany and was en route to Air Force headquarters at Wiesbaden.

But a short time later the spokesman withdrew this and said he could not say exactly when the plane would arrive.

The Soviet protest was directed to Gen. Clyde D. Eddleman, U.S. Army commander in Europe. Eddleman had asked for release of the Americans and their plane in a message Saturday to Col. Gen. I. I. Yakubovsky, commander of Soviet forces in East Germany.

The East German news agency ADN announced the protest in Berlin.

It reported that Eddleman was told "Soviet fighters on duty repeatedly gave the border violator the established signal to land. However, the latter did not react, which resulted in the Soviet fighters taking justified decisive action."

It was not officially specified whether this action included warning shots.

The protest concluded with a statement that Yakubovsky was ready to turn over the plane, crew and passengers to a representative of Eddleman whenever the American found it convenient. The C47 transport was forced down when it got over the border into East Germany while on a flight from Copenhagen Denmark to Hamburg, Germany.

The plane landed near the East German town of Grundshagen, about 20 miles from the West German border. Soviet spokesmen in Berlin said it landed undamaged.

The Soviets made no attempt to whip up an international incident over the plane as they had over the U2 spy plane forced down over the Soviet Union on May Day.

ACL Advertisises Greenville Site

Greenville Industries' 270-acre industrial site was nationally advertised in the Wall Street Journal last week by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad.

The southeastern railway firm devoted a half-page advertisement to promoting the site one mile north of Greenville on US Highway 13. An aerial photograph with the local site indicated by surrounding dotted lines dominated the ad.

The advertisement described the local site: "For instance, you'll find a ready-made location for your plant on this site just one mile north of Greenville's city limits. Here're 270 acres cleared for construction — good, level land in the Coastal Plain region. Here, too, are city and deep well water, electric power, immediate rail services from Coast Line, and road access from U.S. Highway 13."

Appearing on page 12 of the May 18 issue of the New York paper, the advertisement urged industry to locate "in the growing Southeast where the market's as big as your welcome." According to local observers, the railroad company plans to sponsor other similar advertisements in the future.

Senate Committee Votes Inquiry Into U-2 Incident

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted unanimously today to conduct a "full and bipartisan inquiry" into the spy plane incident and events leading up to the collapse of the summit conference.

The inquiry will get underway Friday at 9:30 a.m. (EST) with testimony from Secretary of State Christian A. Herter.

It will be conducted at closed sessions, but edited transcripts of testimony will be made public after being censored for security reasons.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) told reporters he thought the hearings would last "only a matter of days."

He said they would be patterned along the lines of the Senate inquiry in 1951 into President Truman's dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from his Far Eastern command.

In the MacArthur hearings, security experts screened the testimony and censored transcripts were made available to newsmen.

In a Senate speech, Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas called for a calm inquiry. He said national unity must be preserved in a critical period.

Fulbright said that while no roll call was taken at the committee session the decision to go ahead with an inquiry was "unanimous — no one objected." There were 12 of the 17 committee members present.

He said that in addition to Herter, the committee plans to question Allen W. Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency and Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates Jr., who likely will be accompanied by Gen. Nathan Twining, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Officials of the National Space Agency also will be questioned, Fulbright said.

He said there was no discussion of whether James C. Hagerty, President Eisenhower's news secretary, will be invited to testify, but that the committee "didn't foreclose on the calling of any one."

Fulbright said the hearings would be opened to all members of the Senate, but that the questioning would be reserved for members of the Foreign Relations Committee.

"This is not to be an investigation—but an inquiry or study into the spy plane incident and the chain of events which preceded and followed it," the senator added. "An investigation has certain political overtones."

"I am going to strive to keep it to an objective, impartial inquiry in which we will try to understand what took place and the policies that influenced the events."

"It is our desire that the Senate and the country have an understanding of the events and the policies that brought about these events."

Fulbright said he personally saw no purpose in calling Adlai E. Stevenson, 1952 and 1956 Democratic presidential nominee, who has criticized administration actions in relation to the spy plane incident. "I don't know that he has any knowledge of what went on," Fulbright said of Stevenson.

But he said he was not foreclosing the calling of any one the committee might later decide to invite.

The same would apply, he said, to Robert Boulay, writer for the Paris-Presee, whose purported interview with Stevenson on foreign policy has figured in Senate debate.

"I think we should generally confine ourselves to questioning people who had a part in the events and are able to contribute information rather than private citizens," Fulbright said.

Greenville Man Drowns In Pamlico River Yesterday

DRAGGING OPERATIONS CONTINUE . . . Washington Rescue Squad Capt. Buz Cayton points out a spot to search.

Bulletin

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The United States today rocketed an experimental Midas "spy in the sky" satellite toward an orbit about the earth. Midas' mission is to provide almost instant warning of a ballistic missile attack.

The launching, coinciding with the United Nations spy plane debate, underscored a United States desire to develop measures to protect the free world from surprise aggression.

A powerful Atlas-Agena rocket boosted the 5,000-pound satellite aloft at 12:37 p.m. EST. The entire Agena second stage, 22 feet long and 5 feet in diameter, was intended to go into orbit in a nose-down position. The instruments are located in the nose.

WASHINGTON, N.C.—Members of the Greenville and Washington Rescue Squads searched in vain last night for the body of a Greenville man drowned in the Pamlico River late yesterday near the Whitchard's Beach Road.

The search was called off about 11 p.m. and resumed at 7 a.m. today.

Members of the local squad taking part in the search include Jimmy Smith, III, Roger Page, Roy Hardee, Bill Woolfolk, Stuart Savage, Harold Ross, and Bobby Harrington.

boat, the motor would not start and Forbes and Smith had to paddle to shore to summon aid. The Greenville squad was called to assist the Washington unit about 6:30 or 7 p.m.

The Washington Rescue Squad was called about 6 p.m. to the river just off the Old Fort development on the South bank of the Pamlico River to search for the body of C.L. "Charlie" Harris who fell from a boat in which he was riding with two other Greenville men.

According to rescue personnel, Harris was exchanging places with the operator of the outboard boat, Gray Smith when he toppled into the water.

The boat drifted away and the third man in the boat, identified as Al Forbes, jumped into the water to aid Harris. He was said to have located Harris twice, only to have him slip from his grasp each time.

After Forbes returned to the Lake Campaign Headquarters Opening Here

CAMPAIGN HEADQUARTERS for gubernatorial candidate Dr. I. Beverly Lake officially opened this morning at Five Points, downtown Greenville. Pictured above are Dr. K. B. Pace, Lake's Pitt County campaign chairman, Miss Ray Lane (seated beside Dr. Pace), and Miss Judy Jolly. Miss Lane and Miss Jolly will serve as hostesses at the headquarters as the campaign goes into its stretch drive before Saturday's Democratic primary. Dr. Pace extended "a most cordial invitation" to the public to visit the headquarters "to ask questions about Beverly Lake—his background and how he really stands on all the issues."

Who Wears Size 3 Dress?

AS AMERICA'S girls now grow slimmer, dress sizes grow smaller. Newest to hit the national ready-to-wear market is size 3 — for grown-up girls.

The new size is for girls or women under five-feet-two, with the following measurements: bust 32 to 33, waist 20 to 21, hips 32 to 33.

This petite section of the population has had great difficulty up to now finding clothes to fit without extreme and expensive alterations. The new size range will solve their problems.

A few years ago the smallest junior size dress was 7. Then came size 5 and now size 3. What's next? Maybe size one.

America's Worship Of Anything Imported May Sink The American Fashion Industry: Designer

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

America's worship of anything imported may sink the American fashion industry, says Oleg Cassini, designer, dress manufacturer and man-about-town.

"I expect my business to fall off one million dollars next year, just because of the hysteria of American stores over French copies," says the suave Cassini. "All over the country stores are displaying French fashions—some are copies of couture designs and others are French ready-mades. Within a month of the Paris openings you'll see copies selling for as low as $14.95.

"Some stores even have the nerve to ask well-known American designers, like me, to make French copies. That's the ultimate insult."

Cassini points out that U.S. stores now can buy French ready-made clothes at much less than they would cost here, even including import duties. And the glamour of a French label continues to dazzle the American public, even if it's sewed on a gunny sack.

Cassini announces that he is tired of the American custom of following every new fashion silhouette introduced in Paris.

"No matter how ugly, grotesque and unflattering a new style may be, Americans rush to buy it and copy it, if it's first shown in Paris."

The rage for French labels is more widespread now than ever before, says Cassini. And if American designers don't take a firm stand, he says, many of them are going to find themselves out of business.

"The public can help, too," he so common and so inexpensive all their value as status symbols. That's when women will rush back over this country, they'll soon lose that French clothes are becoming to American designers—but it observes. "And of course, now may be too late."

One Bridge Table Cover Bid And Made

By DOROTHY ROE
 AP Newsfeatures Writer
 EVERY hard-working bridge table needs a new cover now and then, especially when it performs as a luncheon table, a sewing table and a homework table in between card sessions.
 For the next bridge game, local sewing center experts suggest giving your bridge table a new cover of bright felt, scalloped at the edges and featuring cheery appliques and a handy cigarette pocket.
 This is an exceptionally easy cover to make, for it is all cut in one piece. It requires one and a quarter yards of 72-inch felt, plus scraps of assorted colors of felt for appliques. A pair of new scalloping shears will provide the fancy scalloped edging.

BRIDGE TABLE COVER... Easy to make at home from felt, scalloped at edges and appliqued with card, dice and chess motifs.

Measure card table (most are 30 inches square) and allow five inches extra all around for overhang. Cut out felt, using scalloping shears. Cut 5-inch slits at each corner, so extra felt may be lapped to fit snugly at corners. Cut out pockets, to measure about five inches across and three and a half inches deep. Slash corners. Draw applique designs on paper and trace onto felt. Cut out, leaving a half-inch extra all around for seam allowances. Baste in place on corners. Set your automatic sewing machine for a fine zigzag stitch, and work around outlines. Trim away excess fabric close to line of stitching.
 After appliques are in place, place cloth on table and lap corners so cloth fits snugly. Top-stitch lapped sections in place. Put cigarette pockets at each corner, sewing them over the place where the fabric is double.
 A game motif is a popular one, with the four suits represented at each corner or group the red and black together, adding a chessman and a pair of dice to the other two corners.
 If you decide on dice, it will be easier to cut the dots out of iron-on mending tape, rather than attempting to applique anything so small.
 Other effective designs are: a splashy monogram; a section of floral design from left-over drapery fabric; geometric designs; fruit or vegetables; stylized flowers or whatever theme you like.
 With a little imagination, yours can be the most distinguished bridge table on the block.

Cleanliness Connotes Good "Eatery"

Restaurantier Jan Mitchell, who operates New York City's famous Luchow's and also the Long-champs chain, believes that you can tell a good restaurant from a bad one by two things—cleanliness and a friendly greeting.
 Mr. Mitchell should know the importance of both these factors, because under his stewardship Luchow's business has increased from $800,000 yearly to an amazing $3,500,000. His lifetime in the food field has convinced him that the restaurant which emphasizes cleanliness and friendly service is also likely to have a good menu.

CURRIED TOMATOES
 Ingredients: 4 medium-sized or large tomatoes, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1 teaspoon curry powder, 1 tablespoon butter.
 Method: Wash tomatoes and dry cut a thin slice from both ends of each; halve crosswise. Mix together the salt, sugar and curry powder; sprinkle over cut surfaces of tomatoes; dot with butter. Broil several inches from source of heat until tomatoes are hot through and tops are lightly browned—about 4 minutes. Makes 4 servings—2 halves for each portion.

Alumnae Day Set Saturday At Flora Macdonald College

Flora Macdonald College will hold its 1960 Alumnae Day Saturday, May 28.
 Mrs. Phoebe Emmons of Raleigh, president of the Flora Macdonald College Alumnae Association, has announced the program which will feature Mrs. J. Z. Watkins of Charlotte as luncheon speaker.
 Mrs. Watkins is immediate past president of the N. C. Parent-Teacher Congress, and has been prominent in various phases of this work throughout the state and held a number of offices prior to becoming State President.
 A coffee hour for the incoming alumnae will be held in the college parlors at 10:15, with members of the local chapter as hostesses.
 The business meeting in the auditorium will begin at 11 o'clock after which reunion classes may hold get-togethers in classrooms and senior majors in piano, organ, voice and flute will be presented in a program.
 Reunion classes this year will be the class of 1900 (first time for a 60-year class reunion); 1910; 1935; 1950; 1940; 1955; and 1950.
 At the luncheon program, all reunion classes will be recognized. Dr. Charles Vardell, acting president, will bring greetings to the alumnae, Professor Robert Gustafson will give the invocation and Dean Rodger Decker, senior class sponsor, will present the graduates to the Alumnae Association. The senior class numbers 79 this year.
 The annual Commencement Concert to be presented Saturday evening of Alumnae Day, will open with two numbers by the College Choral Club under the direction of Professor Lawrence M. Skinner. Following intermission, junior

Girls Won't Propose Even In Leap Year

By BEATRICE WEIN
 AP Newsfeatures
 (Editor's note—The author of this article is a 16-year-old Philadelphia high school junior who reports the Leap Year views of her contemporaries, as guest columnist for Vivian Brown.)
 Today few young people pay any attention to Leap Year traditions. However, girls at least are still aware of their old right to pop the question, even though they say that Leap Year has no significance for them.
 The general feeling is that a girl might, without compunction, resort to every sneaky, underhand trick that might ensnare a boy—but to pop the question herself?
 "I'd sooner die than ask a boy to marry me!" says a freshman college coed. "I can just hear the guy turning around 10 years after and saying, 'I didn't want to marry you, but you asked me.'"
 Modern girls feel that they are so advanced in the scientific techniques of stalking, baiting and trapping the male animal that they don't need any unusual privileges to capture him.
 Each girl to whom we spoke cited the same single situation in which she would take matters into her own hands: "If I were 39 years old and still single and I knew a man very well and knew he was made about me but was very shy—then I'd grab him up fast! If Leap Year were handy, I'd use it as an excuse."
 As to having their question-popping rights infringed upon in Leap Year or any other time, most boys are against it but not adamantly.
 "It would depend on which girl asked me," said one sophomore. "You could always refuse."
 As far as general teen-age dating goes, though, both boys and girls have rather definite and conservative ideas about the relative attitude of the sexes. Girls still want boys to be dominant and the boys want to maintain it.
 A few girls (and boys) did feel that girls asking for dates would be a good idea.
 "It would give us a chance to pick out what we want for a change, instead of having to settle for what we get," says a senior high school girl.
 Says a discouraged Penn State University freshman youth, "It's too much work looking around for girls all the time. Let them do the work for awhile and see all the trouble we go through. Maybe then they'll appreciate us more!"
 "The trouble they go to!" exclaims an irate high school girl. "I'd like to see just one boy go through waiting by the phone day after day like we have to. Many's the time I've wished I could take matters into my own hand."
 It is taken for granted that as well as doing the asking, a boy will assume full financial responsibility for a date. But although most older teens don't approve of it, "going Dutch" is not quite as generally frowned upon as a girl's Leap Year proposal.
 "It's all right in the younger set, when neither one has much money," says a senior girl. "But if a boy is working at all, then it's out. If he can't afford to pay for a date, he shouldn't try to make one."
 Most of the boys share this viewpoint. "I think Dutch dating is very cheap," says a young man of the junior high set. "I'd rather sit home and listen to rec-

JANE GODDEN'S SALMON LOAF
 Ingredients: 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, 1/2 cup soft bread crumbs (crusts removed), 2 eggs, 1/2 cup milk, 1 can (1 pound) red salmon, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1-4 teaspoon salt, pepper, 1-8 teaspoon sage, 2 tablespoons minced parsley.
 Method: Melt butter in a 6-inch skillet; cook onion gently about 5 minutes; stir in bread crumbs. In a medium-sized mixing bowl beat the eggs and milk just until combined; mix in the salmon, including liquid and bones with meat broken into fairly large chunks; mix in the lemon juice, salt, pepper to taste, sage, parsley and onion-crumbs. Turn into buttered loaf pan (8 by 4 by 2 1/2 inches). Bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven 40 to 60 minutes or until knife inserted in center shows custard set. Remove from oven and let stand down on serving platter. Cut servings in thick slices. Makes 4 servings.

Feed the Kids
 It's a good idea to have children's snacks ready for them when they come home from school. If they come home from school with sandwich, crackers, fruit or usual fare is at hand, they will not interrupt you in the event you are busy with other chores or entertaining guests in the afternoon.
 Give each piece of clean laundry a good flip before hanging to remove wrinkles and shorten drying time.

ECC Role Underlined By Its Grads

The place of increasing importance East Carolina College occupies in higher education in North Carolina is emphasized by this year's graduating class.

The graduating class of 938 students set a new record for the college which has seen its number of graduates increase steadily over a period of years.

Of those receiving degrees at East Carolina on Sunday, 94 per cent were from North Carolina, representing 74 of the 100 counties in the state.

There was a time not too many years ago when East Carolina was looked upon as a little college serving a relatively few counties in the Eastern section of the state. Its sphere of influence was regarded as limited, and its position in higher education in North Carolina was viewed as one of secondary importance among the colleges and universities.

Such an interpretation of East Carolina's position in higher education has now almost completely vanished. No college which graduates the number of students that East Carolina does can be regarded as a relatively unimportant part of the structure of higher education in North Carolina. No school whose graduating class includes students from almost 75 per cent of the counties of the state can be looked upon as an institution serving only one specific area. In addition to these factors, few if any of the major institutions of higher learning in North Carolina will have a graduating class with a higher percentage of Tar Heels than does East Carolina College.

As East Carolina has expanded its enrollment and its facilities in recent years, North Carolina as a whole has come to depend more heavily upon it for providing college education for young people. Year after year the number of applicants for admission at East Carolina grows. The demands for its services comes from an increasingly larger area of the state. In order to

Fluctuations In Voters' Support

By LYNN NISBET
REPERCUSSION—With the state convention four or five days ahead and the primary three or four days ahead, politically minded folk are listening for echoes that might enable them to determine how much influence convention activities had on results of primary voting. The reverberating echoes leave the political prophets even more confused than they were before the convention.

Apparently authentic factual reports indicate considerable regional and county fluctuation in the strength of the several candidates for Governor. The candidates themselves and their avowed supporters delight in pointing out how much they have gained here and there, but of course never mention just as obvious loss in position elsewhere.

Two or three facts seem certain: There are four candidates for Governor in the Democratic primary Saturday, not just one or two as some enthusiasts to politicians claim. There will be no majority for any candidate, and there is small chance that any one will have a sufficient plurality to discourage the second man from calling a run off.

As of now, it looks like Sanford will be high, with Larkins and Seawell accorded almost equal chances for second place. Lake to run fourth. Some experienced observers predict less than 25,000 votes difference between high and low men. There was evidence at the convention, and more has developed since, that agreements have been made for combining forces of all the other against the high man in the run off.

The race for Lieutenant Governor among C.V. Henkel, David McConnell and Cloyd Phillips is still uncertain, with a run off assured—if there is a second race for Governor.

FUTURISTIC—The concept of long range planning which has been emphasized by the incumbent State administration, and the old belief that Governors are hand-picked years in advance, both found support in sideline activities at the recent convention.

Most interest naturally was in the current campaign, with arguments about the qualifications of the several candidates. But there was a good deal of back stage propaganda for Woodrow Jones of Rutherford for Governor in 1962 and Lawrence H. Fountain of Edgecombe in 1968.

Jones is present state chairman, former representative of Rutherford county in the General Assembly and of the 11th district in Congress. Fountain is the second district congressman, following a career as reading clerk and member of the State Senate. The promoters of these candidates respect the east-west rotation plan, under which the governorship next time will go to the west and four years later back to the east. Neither of the principals participated in the discussions about future candidates, only smiling when asked about their interest in the idea.

Of course there are hundreds of other men of equal or younger age who may develop ambitions to the Governor before the next election comes around. The Jones and Fountain backers see no harm in getting in on the ground floor with suggestion but not with actual campaigning.

While the record will not support the popular belief that governors are picked far in advance, it is true that no man has been elected Governor of North Carolina who had not established a prior record of service to the State and to the Democratic party.

LAWYER—Friends of E. L. Potat, Jr., candidate for the Legislature in Caswell county, have taken a different approach from that used by most sections of the state. In face of the common voiced resentment that the General Assembly is dominated by lawyers, and there ought to be more laymen elected to the law-making body, the Potat supporters have bought advertising space in the county newspapers urging the nomination of their candidate on the grounds that it has been 28 years since Caswell county had a lawyer in the House of Representatives and it is time to elect one—because legal training is essential to the enactment of good laws.

Time was when lawyers did comprise a majority of the membership in the Legislature. That has not been true in recent years. The 1959 Manual lists 23 lawyers among the 50 senators, and 47 among the half representatives in each instance. And several of the members listed as lawyers do not earn the major part of their livelihood from the practice of law.

keep pace and meet these demands, the college requires greater support not only from the state legislature, but from the citizens of the state who realize East Carolina's importance to higher education in North Carolina.

East Carolina's potential for service to the state is limited only by the means with which the state provides for it to be of service to North Carolina.

We Can Expect More Strain On Relations

Little by little more irritated relations between the United States and Russia can be expected to come from the U. N. Security Council debate of the espionage issue.

Espionage—spying—has long been accepted as a part of the vital game of international politics in which all nations have participated. It should be realized, however, that the United States is a Johnny-come-lately into high-powered espionage activities. Only since World War II has the United States developed a widespread intelligence network to keep tabs on the activities of other nations around the globe.

Further it should be realized that the United States violated a long-standing tradition by openly admitting a few weeks ago that it had sent planes over the Soviet Union for the explicit purpose of gaining information the Soviets did not want anyone to have. Traditionally it has been policy of nations to deny any spy activities, regardless of how effective or widespread their operations of this nature were.

It is extremely unlikely that members of the Security Council will condemn the United States as Russia will insist in its debate before the U. N. agency. It is not unlikely, however, that what the Soviet representative and the United States representative say in the debate will cause a further deterioration in the relationship which now exist between the two nations.

'Messengers' Doing The Job

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—Twice in two years Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev demanded a summit conference; twice he blew it up. He said only the heavyweights could settle anything; now he's compromising for the heavyweights' messengers.

Two years ago he balked at doing business in the United Nations Security Council because he said it was loaded in America's favor; now he's going to the council which is still loaded in America's favor.

In 1958 when this country sent troops into Lebanon to defend it, Khrushchev demanded a summit meeting, finally agreed to hold it in the Security Council.

The council is made up of 11 nations. It has five permanent members: The United States, Britain, France, the Soviet Union, and the pro-American Nationalist Chinese. Some of the other six always have been, and still are, pro-American, thus giving this country a majority.

One week before the meeting Khrushchev called it off, saying the lineup was rigged on the American side.

Soon he was crusading for another summit meeting, this time outside the Security Council. President Eisenhower said the Big Four's foreign ministers would have to meet first to lay the groundwork.

Khrushchev agreed but said it was a waste of time. He talked of the ministers as if they were messengers for the big men, which in a sense they are. He said they couldn't do much because only the heavyweights can settle things.

Eventually he got agreement to hold his summit conference and then last Monday blew that one up too, with bitter words about the American U2 spy-plane down over the Soviet Union.

Now he is charging this country with aggression and demanding that the U2 case go before the Security Council which meets today. The heavyweights won't be there. Only their representatives will.

But Khrushchev not only contradicts himself; he repeats himself.

This year, after breaking up the summit meeting, he excited the West by announcing he would visit Communist East Germany on the way home. He did, but he did the same thing after the summit conference in 1955.

When he first demanded — in November 1958 — that the Allies get their troops out of West Berlin, he gave them a six-month deadline. That would have been in May 1959.

But by March 1959, when the Allies said they wouldn't budge, he said he wasn't putting a deadline on Berlin at all. He said: "If it is not settled in six months, let it be settled in seven."

That sounds like what he said this year. After the last week's summit conference he said another could be held in six to eight months.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
THE WILL TO BE HAPPY
Most people are happy or unhappy depending upon how they feel.

If we allow feelings to dominate us in matters of this sort, we can be pretty sure that most of the time we shall be unhappy. For a poor night's rest, a badly digested meal, a protracted season of a poor night's rest, a badly digested meal, a protracted season of work which leaves the nerves frayed, will furnish the physical basis for bad mental states which range from petulance to melancholy.

Psychologists today lay great stress on mental states in their diagnoses of the many bizarre attitudes which people frequently assume. It would probably be better if they emphasized a bit more the physiological conditions which contribute so often to dejection and a sense of despair. The body is a delicate chemical instrument, and a little mal-adjustment can interfere with its normal functioning as surely as the grounding of electric current can bring an internal combustion engine to a standstill.

If we are going to be happy, we must make the exercise of the will the chief factor in producing happiness. This is not another way of saying that we are usually about as happy as we make up our minds to be. Fatigue, indigestion, irritation, and the influence of the unconscious mind can make us unhappy if we let them, but we can overwhelm them with good cheer and wholesome sense of courage if we will.

Opinions In Brief

"War, we don't like to think about. Maybe that's why we have forgotten, to a degree, the men who prepare to fight it."—Gastonia Gazette.

"Our government is doing a good job trying to tell other countries the truth about things here and abroad, but no one is telling us here at home. It is hard for Americans to realize life under Communism, since we have never experienced it. All of us are too nonchalant. Neither our schools or parents are bothering to help the children to get on the right track."—Elizabeth City Daily Advance.

"Nobody loves North Carolina who makes it his business to stir hate in it."—Raleigh News and Observer.

"It could be that behind all the Summit row lies the shock of the Russian people that any enemy plane could have penetrated 1200 miles into their country before it was detected."—Raleigh (N.C.) News and Observer.

"Raising the floor of the minimum wage will almost automatically move the unions to demand comparable pay raises. Labor leaders say this would be necessary to maintain existing wage differentials."—Elizabeth City Daily Advance.

"The elderly are becoming a more important political and social factor each year. In this matter of retirement, we pay them not to work, while there is plenty of evidence that plenty of the aged would much rather be paid to work, and are willing and able to continue as productive members of society."—The Atlanta Journal.

Feet's Bit Of Freedom

With the return of summery weather we have an added attraction (which will soon become a bore): that would be washing the family chariot.

Now that the thermometer is reaching the perspiration-level, no one minds a little unnecessary splashing. Too, those tender, sensitive feet, protected through the fall, winter and spring months, can be let out to breathe.

I'm not a back-to-nature faddist, but after the first tentative barefoot steps there is a certain sense of exhilarating freedom around the pedal extremities while walking on wet grass.

One is a bit mistrustful, at first; but so too, is a bird on being let out of a cage. But, without shoes there is a lightness long forgotten; and treading the springy grass adds to the lightness of step and spirit.

When the really hot weather arrives there'll be less inclination to wash the car (a la barefoot) and a greater tendency to avoid physical effort and the bright sunshine.

Welcome though it was, the weekend sun did slightly sear forehead and nose.

Still, it was fun while it lasted.

It's a rare thing, but perhaps every five or six years a copy of an Orlando (Fla.) newspaper falls into my hands.

Orlando used to be "home" to me. That, of course, was a long time ago.

Nearly all of my grade school and high school days were lived in that central Florida city. It was then known as "The City Beautiful," and it was pretty. The population then ran about 35,000; I'm told it has more than tripled over the past twenty years.

I haven't wanted to go back... just no inclination. But those infrequent newspapers that come my way are gone over with a fine tooth comb in an effort to piece together the gaps in the picture caused by time. Even the advertisements provide some clues.

Yesterday another copy of The Orlando Sentinel fell into my hands and provided hours of reading. In it, I learned for the first time one of my buddies in school had been killed in action, in Germany, during WW II. As news goes, it was pretty old; but to me, still news.

On Saturday night we'll have a new election scoreboard mounted in front of The Reflector building.

It's going to be a king-size job. Counting up all the candidates, the precincts, and a special panel for the First District race, we figured the board would have to run not less than 20 feet wide and 8 feet deep.

That's the largest scoreboard we've had since I've been here; and the figuring and head-scratching it has already occasioned makes it quite a thing.

One goal... One gift... One time

Other Editors Saying Record Of Achievement

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
In reviewing the problems encountered by other Southern states, such as Virginia and Arkansas, and to a less extent by some other states, one must agree with Col. W. T. Joyner when he told the North Carolina Democratic Convention in Raleigh that the major accomplishment of the last four years is the keeping open of our public schools without a defiance of the courts or a breach of the peace.

Joyner, in delivering the keynote address to Democrats gathered at the convention said: "The magnificent result of our Democratic leadership up to this date is that our schools are open, our children are being educated — there has been no school-connected violence." Under the state's law for pupil assignment, local school boards in several cities have admitted that Negro students to previously all-white schools.

There are those who believe this is surrender to integrationists to the extent that North Carolina is complying with the U. S. Supreme Court's 1954 order to end segregation, then one could, by some stretch of the imagination, term it a surrender. But if one were to take a look at public schools in Washington, D. C., there it is plain to see that North Carolina has done a commendable job in maintaining the status quo in the school system.

Most Democrats are of one mind when it comes to the school integration question in North Carolina. One prominent Democrat, I. Beverly Lake, has taken issue with the state's method of meeting the problem. But the other three candidates, Terry Sanford, Malcolm Seawell and John Larkins, have endorsed the present approach.

Several items included on the proposed platform to be adopted by the convention are worthy to be adopted by the convention are worthy of mention. One long overdue matter is the question of legislative reapportionment. The platform would pledge Democratic members of the 1961 General Assembly to take some positive action on the question of reapportionment. Members of the platform committee agreed this plank would leave the way open for the Legislature to reapportion its membership under present provisions of the state constitution or to submit to the people and amendment changing the constitution. For the last decade the Legislature has refused to reapportion — although the constitution says it should be done after every federal census.

Another matter vital to the working people of North Carolina concerns the state's right to work law. The proposed platform endorses this by pledging support to laws "which will guarantee employees the right to work, and employers the right to conduct their business, as citizens in a free and democratic society." This policy is entirely correct, for no organization, group or authority should have the right to tell a man he cannot work in a certain place merely because he does not choose to join some union.

Overall the Democratic party meeting in Raleigh, has adopted a sane and reasonable, as well as constructive attitude toward major problems that are besetting the state. These same problems face other states. That we have met and dealt so successfully with them in the past is a credit to the state and its leaders.

Everybody Cheated By Inflation

By ELMER ROESSNER
Inflation, it has been said over and over in this column and elsewhere, is a tax on savings, annuities, pensions and insurance. It is a levy on the old and thrifty to pass a simulated prosperity on to others.

But it bites more than the aged and weak. It bashes big corporations and little businesses, and it bashes the young.

Examples: In 1940, the father of a new-born son took out a 20-year endowment policy for $5,000 to send the son through college. That sum would have done it in those days, draft laws permitting. Now the $5,000 will barely get the boy through his sophomore year, even if he washes dishes for his meals.

In 1940, the Top Acme Corporation spent $1,000,000 for a new plant with a 20-year life expectancy. Under tax laws, it has been allowed to accumulate $1,000,000 tax-free dollars as amortization over the years.

ROOKED
This being 1960, twenty years after the original plant was calculated to wear out, Top Acme finds it necessary to replace the plant.

But to buy the equivalent plant, it would cost Top Acme $3,000,000. And to buy a replacement plant geared to modern production methods, it would cost $10,000,000.

As Father William T. Hogan, S.J., Fordham economist, writes in the current New York University Challenge, "American industry finds itself faced with a curious paradox. In spite of record profits, many companies have not had the capital necessary to replace and modernize their plant and equipment. One third of the American industrial machine is obsolete."

Father Hogan cited inflation — the decline in purchasing power of the dollar, especially the construction dollar, which had dropped to 35 cents in the last 20 years, and the tax laws, FORCED TO RAISE MONEY He gave this example: "Equipment installed in 1939 at a cost of $1,000,000 cannot be replaced today for less than $3,000,000. Nevertheless, under the present tax laws it is possible to reclaim only the original cost of the equipment: $1,000,000."

He observed that a 55-ton freight car cost railroads $2,550 in 1940 and $9,000 today; a blast furnace installed for $8,000,000 in 1945 can't be built today for less than $26,000,000.

To raise the money for costlier plants and equipment, a company may borrow, but this would be feasible only when the return on newly installed equipment is great enough to amortize the debt and pay interest on it as well, he pointed out. Selling additional stock would reduce the original stockholders' share of the business.

A third alternative is to reinvest profits, but this had drawbacks. Because industries are not allowed to charge off adequate sums for depreciation, profits are overstated and excessively taxed, he pointed out.

They Can But Guess

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Politicians usually regard themselves as very practical. This obviously cannot be so, for one of these Jove-like creatures must be defeated at each election. It can then be reasoned that the one who is out is the one who knows less than the one who gets in. Actually no such clear-cut conclusion can be reached. Politicians guess, the same as you and I.

This is a curious country because the population is in a constant state of flux. It was not so many years ago that the number of Americans who attended college was few. Colleges were comparatively costly. Graduate schools were not too available in this country. Those who sought higher education went to Europe, principally to Germany. In fact, our system of higher education was modeled on the German rather than the British universities.

Today, although some of our colleges are not superior to earlier high schools, it is true that millions of young people attend colleges of some kind. They learn how to read and if they are over-majorized, they nevertheless have had some contact with ideas. Politicians do not find it so easy to deal with the current crop of young people. Some of them, like the Beatniks, may look queer and even have funny ideas, but they can, if they want to, read. This makes it very rough for the practical politicians.

Look at the ages of the current breed of Presidential candidates: Kennedy, 42; Nixon, 47; Johnson, 51; Symington, 58. These are comparatively young men, younger than candidates usually have been, although Theodore Roosevelt was only 42 years old when he became President.

Candidates for public office have to speak the language of their own generation. The brassy, shouting, boy-from-the-log-cabin candidate has nothing to say to the current generation. Hubert Humphrey talked an era of inflation, he sounded about what might be called bread-and-butter questions and in an era of inflation, he sounded like William Jennings Bryan berating William McKinley. It had no meaning against John Kennedy who spoke a Harvard broad A and looked literate. Humphrey had once been a university professor, come to Earth and gone liberal. So what? The youngsters know lots of professors and many are squares.

Also the politician has to note the rise in white collar workers. Their income amounts to 53.4 per cent of all income. They own lots of small houses all over the place. They have pretty wives who dress up and like good things. An astonishingly large number of these workers are professionals, chemists, physicists, biologists, technicians of various kinds, accountants, and all sorts of specialists. Most of these are not only college graduates; many have at least an M.A. They are employed in every growing industry and hit the time clock the same as any other worker but they have the advantage of being specialists.

Actually, there is always a shortage of top white-collar workers, from presidents of corporations down to first-rate stenographers.

The politician has a hard time with this new element. Adlai Stevenson thought in two campaigns that he had these college-trained voters. He talks their language and he has advertised himself as an intellectual rather than a politician, but twice, he was defeated. Whatever it was, Stevenson has never been able to win so much popularity among this element in our population as he had expected.

Stevenson, in fact, is a political phenomenon. Practically unknown, he became Governor of Illinois. The politicians permitted him to run for the Presidency during two campaigns when no Democrat could have been elected. This gave Stevenson stature, but he hardly did much about it. He saw John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson. Johnson garner the delegates for the 1960 Convention, but he went traveling in South America, whence (Continued on page five)

(Continued from Page 4) Little news came from him. When the Humphrey effort failed and he withdrew, Stevenson became more active, perhaps to benefit by a transfer of A.D.A. influence from Humphrey to Stevenson. But how many delegates did Humphrey garner? Too few to matter. The white collar element does not seem to turn to a political oddity for leadership. It is rather establishing a new type of middle class - not an employing class, but intellectuals who work not so much in schools and colleges but in industry and government. This change in population characteristics cannot be ignored in this campaign.

An issue for such a debate, which Jordan said would serve "non useful purpose," would be whether Jordan contributed to a 1940 campaign fund to defeat President Franklin D. William Fulbright (D-Ark), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, asking for an investigation of the U-2 spy plane incident, Jordan said events set off by the incident "would seriously endanger the peaceful settlement of many tense world problems." Five Negroes Arrested For Attacking Officers

MOUNT HOLLY, N.C. (AP)—A hearing is scheduled in Recorder's Court Monday for five Negroes arrested after a fight Saturday night involving about 15 Negroes and several Gaston County officers.

Rural Policemen Purvey Hedgepath and Billy Abercrombie said their car was almost forced off the road by a car driven by Lonnie Mack Sherrill, 24. The officers gave chase, and caught up with him when he turned into his driveway. They said he resisted efforts to arrest him.

The policemen said they followed Sherrill onto his porch, and were suddenly "surrounded" by a group of Negroes. They fought clear and summoned help by radio.

Mount Holly Police Chief W. L. McKinney also was attacked, officers said, when he tried to persuade Sherrill to give up. Then officers used tear gas.

After that, Hedgepath said, "I think they got the impression someone had been killed, because it got worse than ever."

More officers arrived and brought the fight to an end. No serious injuries were reported.

Sherrill was charged with four counts of assault on an officer, and single counts of resisting arrest, larceny of a pistol, and reckless driving.

Others arrested were Boyce Sherrill, 17, charged with four counts of assault on an officer and with resisting arrest and interfering with an officer; Torrence Pe-

Summit Failure Flares Up Into Issue Among Senators

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW!

By FAGALY and SHORTEN

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—The summit conference debacle flared up today as a top issue likely to be kept boiling during the presidential campaign.

Although both sides disclaimed any political motives, a Senate explosion Monday over the term "appeaser" apparently triggered a Democratic-Republican battle over foreign policy that might last till November.

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) expressed surprise at what he called a "violent partisan attack" in the Senate on Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Adlai E. Stevenson.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee headed by Fulbright decides today whether to conduct closed-door hearings on the events leading up to collapse of the scheduled Big Four summit meeting in Paris last week.

Subject to expected committee approval, Fulbright invited Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and Allen W. Dulles, head of the Central Intelligence Agency to appear later in the week. He wants them to explain, among other matters, why an American spy plane was sent over the Soviet Union shortly before the scheduled opening of the Paris meeting.

Like some Republicans in Congress, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York said Monday there is a "clear and compelling need to face the facts" of the summit failure. But he cautioned both sides to avoid "a clash of absurd partisan absolutes."

Kennedy, a leading contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, told the Senate that Democrats will continue to discuss and criticize foreign policies of the Eisenhower administration with which they disagree.

"It is our function and responsibility," he said. "We propose to do it. I would think the Democratic party would be unworthy of its opportunities and responsibilities if it did not fulfill that function."

Kennedy called Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) to account for suggesting that he and Stevenson, a possible rival for the nomination, ought to "relieve themselves of the gross suspicion of appeasement" because of their statements on the conference breakdown.

Kennedy conceded that, in replying to a question at a Portland, Ore., political rally, he had said it might have been possible for President Eisenhower to have met Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's demand for an apology for the plane incident.

But he said he had immediately added that if Khrushchev had merely asked the President to express regret "that might have been a more reasonable term."

"I do not have to purge myself of any suspicion of appeasement," Kennedy told Scott tartly. "No one deduced from my statement that I wanted the President to apologize to Khrushchev."

Kennedy said the spy plane incident "has destroyed the chances of a successful summit. It has destroyed the prestige of the President in the eyes of the Russian people. It has given the impression that the President does not dominate some of the military or some of his intelligence officers."

"So I would have expressed regret. That does not make me in any way a party to appeasement. I have never abused the President personally. I do not advocate a policy which I think would weaken the United States."

The criticism of Stevenson stemmed from a purported interview with him published in the French newspaper French-Press just before the date of the summit meeting. It quoted him as favoring concessions on Berlin, reduction of American forces there and a pullback and cutback in both East and West forces in central Europe.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said the published interview may have helped torpedo the summit meeting.

Stevenson, who had at first denied giving the interview, said he had talked with the French reporter but contended the reporter "evidently confused discussion with opinion." Stevenson added, "What he reports me as saying have, of course, never been my views and are not my views today."

Scott insisted he hadn't called either Kennedy or Stevenson as appeaser and after lengthy wrangling said he was willing to abide by Kennedy's interpretation of his own statement.

Church Report Critical Of Some Faith-Healers

CLEVELAND (AP)—Methods of some faith healers and healing evangelists have drawn criticism from a special committee of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

The committee's 74-page report on the relation of christianity to health was released Monday at the church's 172nd General Assembly. It said religion is an aid to health but is not a substitute for medical, psychological or other assistance.

Delegates will consider the report in closed session Wednesday. Although pastors and medical men have criticized each other for mutual lack of understanding, a "new era of cooperation" has dawned, the report stated.

The study, made by 15 persons during a four-year period, stated that, on the whole, pastors respect doctors, but the reverse is not so generally true.

While physicians sometimes treat pastors as intruders, and sometimes a pastor's ministrations may do more harm than good, similar charges can be made on occasion about the work of physicians, the report continued.

While commending the positive element of "faith healing," the report condemned this practice's distortion of the christian ministry to the sick and warned against religion's "degeneration into magic."

Aycock Will Ask $16 Millions

GREENSBORO (AP)—The University of North Carolina, Chancellor William B. Aycock says, will ask the 1961 General Assembly for 16 million dollars capital improvements.

Chancellors of the two other branches of the Consolidated University of North Carolina added their plans to spend another 17 million for improvements. Trustees met here Monday.

John T. Caldwell of North Carolina State said he would like 13 million for projected needs, and Gordon W. Blackwell of Woman's College said he would ask four million.

Larkins Points To Powder-Keg

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP)—The emotional powder keg of school segregation can explode unless North Carolina maintains "a clear-headed approach to the problem," John D. Larkins declared today.

Although this state has avoided violence in connection with school integration problems, "the emotions that produce such violence are visible in this campaign," the candidate for governor declared in a prepared statement.

Larkins repeated his support for the state's moderate course on school integration. He said he would continue it if elected. At the same time, he said he believes with many Tar Heels that "separate but equal school facilities was the wisest policy."

In an indirect attack on I Beverly Lake, one of his opponents for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, Larkins asserted that "now is not the time to stir up racial troubles with talk about changing the climate of opinion."

Lake, a Raleigh lawyer and advocate of strict racial segregation, has said he would seek to promote a climate of public opinion opposed to any racial mixing in schools if he is elected.

"The climate of opinion in North Carolina is ripe for progress. We can make it ripe for tragedy if we attempt to change it to a climate of open racial hatred," Larkins said.

To keep progress rolling...

The Carolina Telephone trucks, which you see on the go throughout Eastern Carolina, are being used in our continuing program of expansion. During our 60th Anniversary, as in other years, we are striving to bring more and better telephone service to our state.

It takes many thousands of miles of wires and cables to expand and improve our service. Last year, in rural areas alone, we installed over 10,000 miles of wire in adding 9,300 phones, and we're rolling ahead with more growth and progress in '60.

This telephone development is a large factor in our state's economic growth. Carolina Telephone spent over $7 million in expansion last year, in addition to operating expenses of over $14 million. By putting these millions into circulation, your telephone calls help boost progress and prosperity throughout this entire section.

Telephone progress, too, adds more value, convenience and pleasure to your telephone service, day by day. More phones, finer equipment and new methods mean you can reach more people... do more things... more quickly and easily... by telephone.

VAN WYCK MASON'S newest thriller Secret Mission to Bangkok

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

"All we need now to make this plane trip complete," Hugh North told himself, "are the four Marx Brothers chasing the stewardess up and down the aisle."

But the business on which Hugh North was traveling to Bangkok under the name of "Charles Boyden" did not allow his mind to dwell on comedy for a minute. As a top agent of the U. S. Army's Intelligence Division, G-2, he had been detailed to guard the life and identity of another passenger, Dr. Hans Bracht, the missile genius head of the Army's Project Galaxy.

North was under instructions not to let Bracht suspect that he was being tailed, for fear of raising the wrath of the unpredictable genius. This order proved difficult to enforce, for North had to intercept a Frenchman who recognized Bracht.

CHAPTER 4

"You have been in Bangkok before, mein Herr?" Mary Hollberg addressed the man listed as "Charles Boyden" as the airliner began sloping down toward Don Muang Airport.

"A few times," Hugh North responded. "Have you?"

"No, I have never been in Siam and I confess I am frightened."

"Is someone meeting you?" Hugh asked.

She shook her head. "No, I will be all alone unless some kind gentleman rescues me."

"But surely the people who arranged your concert must be going to have somebody meet you," North could not resist saying.

Mary recognized the slip and attempted to recover. "Oh, them I have forgotten," she acknowledged. "Yes, probably they will have somebody to meet me."

"By the way, where are you appearing in Bangkok?" North continued.

A shrug. "That I leave up to the people who arrange the performance. I do not bother with such things. They have told me, of course, but I forget."

"No doubt the Prajadhapok," Hugh suggested. "All the better artists give their concerts there."

Fraulein Hollberg studied the G-2 colonel with a long glance that told North he had gone too far. Now Mary knew that he knew she was no concert pianist because Mary Hollberg had been in Bangkok before the realized there was no Prajadhapok Theater. If Mary Hollberg had made a slip, Hugh North had made one too.

He waited, his face reflecting none of the cursing he was giving himself for overplaying his hand. And Mary Hollberg, who ever she really was, proved equal to the occasion.

"I do not think that is the name of the place," she said dubiously, "but it may be. All these strange names out here confuse me so. But I do know that I will stay at the Hotel Imperial. You too?"

North nodded, and the girl gave a tiny crow of delight.

"Then I shall have a friend in Bangkok after all," she exclaimed. "You must phone me and we shall get to know each other better."

"I'll do my very best," North promised solemnly.

The night landing at Don Muang brought with it a chaos provided by Lita Naline's presence.

Lita's publicity men apparently worked under the threat that if Lita should ever arrive anywhere where she leave anyplace without the greeting or farewell of a screaming mob of fans, heads would roll.

At Hong Kong, Hugh had watched Lita wave good-by to a seething cauldron of humanity which shouted ecstatic godspeeds in English, Mandarin Chinese, and Cantonese.

Here at Don Muang was an identical mob with an identical enthusiasm, although here the shouts were in Siamese, with a sprinkling of Chinese and a few words cried in broken English.

Airport officials announced that Miss Naline would remain aboard the airplane until all persons not authorized on the field were back behind the fence, even if the waiting took all night.

Aboard the plane, Miss Naline expressed energetic disapproval.

"These dear, dear people have come here to see me and what right has some lousy Bangkok jerk to deny them the privilege?" she cried in rich, throaty tones. "Anton, make them open that door and let me meet my public!"

Anton Carss moved his bulging self up beside Naline and took one of her hands, between his. "But what if this—ah—demonstration of affection should get out of hand?" he asked. "What if you were injured? Imagine an unlucky accident, a broken nose—"

"Hell!" squealed Miss Lita Naline. "Me get my face messed up? Not on your life!"

"Of course not," Carss said soothingly. "For then there would be no epic, no world recognition of my Oita as the greatest actress Carss has ever directed, no chance for Lita to show the Italian that she is far greater—"

"Somebody do something," Lita said hoarsely. "Get those damn maniacs off the field."

"Go out and sing to them, sweetheart," John Wallen, Lita's leading man, sniggered. "That'll drive 'em to cover fast enough."

Hugh, standing in the aisle to block any approach to the silent, unmoving Hans Bracht, almost laughed aloud at Lita's expression. The siren faced "dear Jack" with a glare gone ashen with fury.

Anton Carss stepped in again. "Let me go out and see if I can find somebody who has control over this crowd," he said.

"Sure, Anton," Wallen laughed. "Find the bright boy who staged this and tell him to pay off the hired cheering section."

"I'm very weak in Siamese,"

Carss spoke to the stewardess urgently and was allowed to leave the plane. North saw the pudgy director plunge into the crowd and wedge his way to the rear of the throng where two men who looked like Americans stood.

Out of the knot of irked, impatient, or amused passengers came a small round man who approached North, smiling. It was the goateed patent-medicine king, Chu Hoong, concocter of that cure-all of unequalled potency, Dragon's Tooth Elixir.

"Excuse me," he said to North, "but does it happen that you understand Siamese? You have the oook of one who has traveled much and I must find someone to share my amusement."

Hugh went on guard instinctively. It might be that brother Chu had something on his mind besides seeking companionship for a laugh. North edged himself a bit to the left to shield Hans Bracht's chair more completely.

"I'm very weak in Siamese,"

he told Chu. "What's the joke?"

The Chinese said, "While the door was open I heard enough to decide that joyous excitement must have unhinged that crowd outside. What they were shouting was, liberally translated: Let the sameless foreign female show herself so we can get our pay."

Then Hugh North saw the Chinese patent-medicine king gape at a point just beyond him, his jaw dropping, his eyes reflecting a surprise that was entirely out of keeping with the cultured Oriental's unshakable composure.

Hugh turned and saw the reason for this startling change. Behind him, Hans Bracht had risen from his seat and had moved so that Chu Hoong had come face to face with him.

Bracht had reacted almost as violently as had Chu. The tall, balding scientist staggered back a step against the seat in front of his and put out a long, bony

Two Jailed In Chase, Gunfight

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A man and woman were jailed here in lieu of $7,500 bond each on charges growing out of a Sunday night police chase and gun battle that attracted about 15 police cars. No one was injured.

It started when Highway Patrolman J. C. Taylor stopped a truck driven by Frank Anglin Jr., 43, of Wilmington. The officer said he was going to arrest Anglin on a drunken driving charge, but before he could get him into the car, the man pulled a gun and disarmed him.

Just then, the officer said, another patrolman drove up. Anglin, holding a gun on the officers, jumped back into the truck with the woman, identified as Aline Floyd, 33, also of Wilmington, and they fled toward Wilmington, 10 miles to the north on the Carolina Beach road.

Officers finally stopped the truck in Wilmington after a running gun battle most of the way.

Anglin was charged with drunken driving, assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and assault on an officer. The woman was charged with concealing a weapon and assault with a deadly weapon on an officer.

Tobacco Queen Going To Turkey

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (AP) — A Pretty young South Carolinian, Gloria Penny of Mullins, was to leave here today on a goodwill trip to Turkey as international tobacco queen.

The 19-year-old brunette and Mrs. Carolyn Waddell of Mount Airy, who will accompany her, will leave New York tonight for Istanbul. She will spend five days in Turkey.

Miss Penny wasn't the least disturbed about recent anti-government demonstrations in Turkey. She said she felt the riots in that country were mainly aroused by students and "it seems that most of the Turkish people are going about their normal, everyday lives."

Highway Patrol Checking Points Slated Over Pitt

The Highway Patrol in Pitt County has announced that Patrolmen in the county will be operating checking stations at different locations throughout Pitt during the next three weeks to check operators licenses, registrations and equipment.

Three such check-points were operated during the past weekend, one on N.C. 11-U.S. 13, one on the Prison Camp Road and one on U.S. 264 By-pass around Farmville.

According to officers, an estimate 300 cars were stopped on N.C. 11-U.S. 13 during a six-hour check and six arrests were made. Two drivers were charged with having no operators license while four were charged with having improper equipment.

On the prison camp road, 200 cars were checked during a one and one-half hour check with four drivers being charged with having faulty equipment and one cited for having no drivers license.

One man was charged with having no drivers license as the result of the one-hour check point on the U.S. 264 by-pass which checked about 100 vehicles.

Over 20 drivers who passed through the three checking stations were warned by Patrolmen that their licenses would expire within 30 days.

According to Cpl. John T. Jenkins, vehicle registrations with the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles show that there should be more licensed drivers in the State. This decline in licensed operators is due to the fact that many persons have failed to renew their license, Jenkins noted.

According to the law-man, an operator's license expires "on your birthday in the fourth year following the year of issuance." Chauffeur's license are valid for one year and they, like the regular operators license, expire on your birthday. According to Jenkins, an operator may renew a license 60 days before the expiration of the license by taking a written test given by a License Examiner. A vision test is also given at the time of renewal of the license.

Maximum fine for driving without an operators license or driving after a license has expired is $500 plus cost of court.

In both cases, prison terms of not more than six months can be handed down for a violation of the law.

Dr. Teller Quits Position At Lab

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Dr. Edward Teller, a key man in the development of the H-bomb, has resigned as director of the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory to devote full time to teaching and research.

He will become a professor at large in the statewide University of California, a post shared by another distinguished scientist, Dr. Harold Urey, now at U.C.'s La Jolla campus.

Succeeding Dr. Teller will be Dr. Harold Brown, 32, deputy director. The change is effective July 1.

Baccalaureate Service Held For Robinson Union Grads This Week

WINTERVILLE—The Rev. I. J. Williams told Robinson School seniors this week to "live so that life may be a constant joy."

The Rev. Williams, speaking at the Baccalaureate service, used the topic, "Seeking the Abundant Life." Williams is pastor of Spring Garden Baptist Church in Washington, N. C.

He said that an abundant life comes not by wishing but by experience. The Rev. Williams told students graduating that the three great factors which are assets are a sunny disposition, ability to get along with others and the willingness to spend and be spent. "Stand for the better things of life," he said.

Concluding his address, he challenged seniors to "Lay a foundation and build on the principles of Christian dignity and face the issues that be."

Prayer was offered by Bennie Anderson, scripture by Delores Brooks and the choral club gave three selections.

Awards and graduation for the eighth grade were held this afternoon.

Commencement exercises will be held Friday night. Ranking students of the senior class are Hilda Daniels and Mary King, according to an announcement from J. W. Maye, principal.

Society Honors Greenville Man

CHARLOTTE — Dr. Sam T. White of Greenville, vice president of the North Carolina Optometric Society in charge of public information, was honored here Monday at the society's 53rd annual convention.

Dr. White, whose department has distributed more than a quarter million copies of the booklet "Your Eyes and Your Optometrist" to the public in the past year, was recognized by the society for outstanding service in the field of public information.

"Your Eyes and Your Optometrist" is a 36-page booklet which explains in simple terms the myriad vision care services of the optometric profession.

A special section of the booklet, a pictorial, is devoted to a step by step explanation of the complete eye examination and subsequent prescribing and fitting of corrective lenses.

In addition to distribution of the booklet, Dr. White's department published during the year a community planning kit for "Save Your Vision Week." The kit has been lauded throughout the nation as a vital public relations tool.

The three-day convention of optometrists opened here Sunday with an educational program. Featured speakers were Dr. George N. Jensen, world famous contact lens researcher, and Dr. H. Russell Blackwell, director of vision research at Ohio State University.

Mopping Up In California After Turbulent Tides

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Mopping up operations began today on the California coastline, strewn with debris from turbulent tides stirred by Chilean earthquakes here Sunday. Coast Guard boats rounded up hundreds of small boats swept into Los Angeles harbor by the flood-like currents Monday.

Damage, estimated in the millions, ranged from San Diego near the Mexican border to Crescent City, 23 miles from the Oregon line, where the quake-stirred tide flooded two main streets under two feet of water.

Hardest hit was the Los Angeles harbor, still closed to shipping as Coast Guardmen cleared the water of floating debris.

Savage currents, rising and ebbing sometimes several times an hour, ripped docks, sunk at least 30 small boats and damaged 400 more.

In San Diego bay, the tide smashed away 100 feet of dock at a yacht club. Ferry service was stopped.

TERRY SANFORD has already influenced industry to come to North Carolina

Every new industry that comes to North Carolina benefits every citizen. So the enthusiasm and dedication of those who sponsor industrial development on the local level is essential to North Carolina's progress. They should be led and supported by a Chief Executive who has been active in this field and understands the problems involved. In Fayetteville, Terry Sanford gained valuable experience as a member of the local industry hunting team . . . made significant contributions as a leader.

Read what some of his fellow-townsmen say:

"Terry Sanford has been a dynamic leader, a faithful, effective and tireless worker in our program to attract new industry."

"He was primarily responsible for the location of a $20 million industry here, and was the moving force in obtaining the regional office of a national life insurance company."

"Through Terry Sanford's efforts the Charlotte area will soon get a new industrial plant."

"Our community has been fortunate to have a leader of his ability, his zeal and his vision to give us the boost we needed on many occasions. These same attributes, we feel, will be used on a much broader scale to implement a program of industrial progress for the State as a whole."

"We invite our fellow Tar Heels to join us in supporting Terry Sanford—the Candidate with the most practical experience in Industrial Development."

Decade Of Growth In League

The last decade has seen the North State Conference take a role of eminence in the small college circles.

East Carolina's swimming team has also helped the conference with two national titles in the last four years.

Period Of Decline Ahead???

Yet, recent developments by conference administrators may tend to cause a decline in the conference's athletic growth.

Last week, conference voters accepted Pfeiffer into the league by a 6-3 vote.

Pfeiffer just recently became a four year school and enters the North State without a football program.

Pfeiffer will make the third school without a football program. They will, like ACC and High Point, be able to channel all their athletic funds into basketball, baseball and other minor sports.

Plans For Limited Scholarships

Besides the acceptance of Pfeiffer, a group of college presidents within the conference have proposed to lessen the athletic emphasis that already exists.

Earlier reports claim they hope to limit the number to 35 with 22 going for football.

Burden Would Be Put On ECC

Such a cut-down in the number of scholarships would force East Carolina College to withdraw and play as an independent team or to abide by the conference rules and give up almost all hope of entering the Southern Conference.

It is believed to be a necessity that ECC schedule some Southern Conference schools in the future in hopes of convincing the league that East Carolina would be a good member.

The acceptance of Pfeiffer has already been completed but it will probably bring on future complications.

Koufax Cools Pittsburgh Big Bats, 1-0

Bucs Limited To One Hit By Los Angeles Lefty

By ED WILKS

Associated Press Sports Writer Success has come slow of late for Sandy Koufax.

It was Sandy's first victory since he tied the major league strikeout record with 18 in a 5-2 decision over San Francisco last August 31.

Just one game was scheduled in the American League and the New York Yankees won it, sweeping a two-game series at Kansas City with a 4-3 decision.

The only hit off Koufax was a second-inning single by losing pitcher Bennie Daniels.

The Dodgers had four hits, all off Daniels (1-2), who gave way to a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

Koufax, 24, now has 43 strikeouts for 38 2-3 innings this season, good for third behind teammate Don Drysdale (77) and Bob Friend (55) of the Pirates.

Chicago's Cubs, now the only club in the majors to escape a shutout this season, dealt reliever Bob Grim a defeat in his first NL decision with Altman's second home run of the season.

The Yankees, blowing a 3-1 lead, scored the winning run in the ninth without a hit.

Hegan Will Sign With Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jim Hegan, catcher for the Cleveland Indians for 16 years, says he is returning to action and will sign a contract with the Chicago Cubs.

Lemon, also 39, was a 20-game winner for the Indians in seven seasons from 1948 to 1956.

He said Monday night he will go Thursday to Chicago, where his former teammate and fanager, Lou Boudreau, is the new manager of the Cubs.

By WILL GRIMSLEY

Bob Jones would like to see the name "Robert T. Jones" on the big scoreboard at the National Open golf tournament again, and he is halfway there.

A stocky, blond man with many of his father's characteristics, the younger Jones led at the trials at Albany, N.Y., by shooting rounds of 71-74-145.

He has qualified for the National Amateur but the younger Jones never has played in the Open championship, which his dad won four times.

Like others who qualified Monday, Jones still must survive the sectional trials June 6-7 when the field will be cut to 150.

Most of the top name golfers were exempt from the district qualifying. The biggest casualty was Jim Ferree of Winston-Salem, N.C., one of the regulars on the tour, who collapsed in the 90-degree heat at Little Rock and failed to finish.

Eddie Langert, young Minneapolis pro, also was 7 under with 66-69-135 and Joe Taylor of Charleston, W. Va., had 71-65-135—both on par 72 courses.

Kilpatrick Defeated In Finals Of State Tourney

Herbert Horton, nationally ranked player from Wheaton, Maryland, defeated Greenville's Norman Kilpatrick to win the men's championship of the North Carolina Open Table Tennis Championships, held May 21 in Burlington. Horton, who is one of the nation's top twenty players, stopped Kilpatrick 21-12, 22-20, and 21-16 in the finals, with his steady defensive and powerful backhand and forehand drives. In the second game the Tarheel champion's spin defense tied the score at 20-all, when Horton hit two backhand shots, to take the game. Horton then wore the defense of the former nationally ranked N.C. player down, with his chop defense and sudden backhand drives, to take the third game and the title 21-16.

Kilpatrick had defeated several of the South's top table tennis players on his way to the finals, while Horton defeated the top Norfolk, Va. junior player and the 1958 North Carolina men's champion, Bob Shoaf of Winston-Salem. In the semi-finals Kilpatrick finally stopped the fast-moving attack of one of Washington, D.C.'s top players, Paul Hudson, 22-20, 11-21, 21-17 with his spin defense, and job returns that rose over 15 feet high. The quarter-finals saw the Greenville player squeeze by Norfolk, Va. champion Sol Lewis, 21-23, 21-12, 21-19. This was one of the tourney's best matches, and, in the second game, found the forehand attack of the Norfolk player giving him a 10-4 lead, when Kilpatrick's backhand drives and push shots won 17 out of the next 19 points, and the game. In the final game of this match Kilpatrick led 20-19, when Lewis forced the East Carolina champion to return a drive high enough for an easy shot, only to miss his kill shot, and lose the game and match, 21-19. In earlier matches Kilpatrick defeated the second ranked North Carolina player, Joe Corne of Burlington, and the number two player of Spartanburg, S.C., Clifford Hayslip. Kilpatrick then used a series of topspin drives and smashes to crush the defense of Long Vu of Greensboro, 21-7 and 21-9. Vu, a former Viet Nam player, had easily defeated last year's North Carolina champion, Gary Preston of Graham, in two straight games, and had been favored by some to upset the Greenville paddle ace. In other men's singles play, East Carolina's second ranked player, Nelson Tugwell of Farmville, defeated Larry Taylor of Raleigh, before losing to Winston-Salem's Bob Shoaf. In the under 19 years of age event, Greenville junior champion William Stanell defeated Clifford Smith of Wilmington, the Eastern North Carolina title holder, by using his hard hit backhand drives, before losing to the state junior champion, Stafford Warren of Chapel Hill, 15-21, 24-22, and 13-21, in a very well played match. Warren also had defeated Greenville's Andrew Kilpatrick, two games to one, before falling to the steady defensive play of Norfolk junior champ Michael Burke. Burke lost the finals of the junior singles to the hard hitting Paul Hudson of Washington, D.C. Burke and Hudson

Wilson Loses To Winston-Salem;

Greensboro tamed Durham twice, by scores of 1-0 and 4-3, Monday night to end a six-game winning streak for the Bulls. Other Carolina League action saw Raleigh rap out a 7-2 triumph over Burlington, while Winston-Salem beat Wilson, 3-1. Greensboro, holding down second in the loop, gained half a game on first-place Raleigh with its doubleheader win. The Yanks are now 1 1/2 games out of first. An error let in Greensboro's only run in the first game. Errors also hampered Durham in the second game. The Yanks' Jack Cullen, who gave up four hits, was credited with the first game win. Dom Maisano scattered eight hits safely to get credit for the second game victory. Burlington shut out Raleigh for five innings, but the Caps got going in the sixth inning. Two hits—one of them a bases loaded pinch homer by Jack Brown—brought in four runs. Then, three more scores were added in the ninth. Chuck Behrends allowed Wilson five hits, and got hitting support from Winston-Salem teammates to edge the Tots. Behrends missed a shutout in the ninth when Jim Burton's ringing triple brought in the only Wilson score.

Carolina Places Four On All ACC

RALEIGH (AP) — Conference Joel Gibson, North Carolina State, pitcher. GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) — Eight Carolinas area pros and a lone amateur have moved into sectional qualifying rounds for the U.S. Golf Assn. Open championship tournament next month in Denver, Colo. Harold Kneece, 155-pound assistant pro at Greenville, S.C., fired rounds of 66-73 for a 139 to lead area qualifiers here Monday. The nine will compete June 6 and 7 at either Washington or Atlanta for a chance at the Open June 16-18. Following Kneece were the only amateur, Peter Green of the University of North Carolina and Orchard Hills, Mich., and pros Gene Hamm of Raleigh, Tom Case of Greensboro and lefty Thorne Wood of Asheboro, all with 141s. Mac Main of Danville, Va., and Brien Charter of Greenville, S.C., had 142 totals and Ernie Boros of Mid Pines and Billy Hoover of Greensboro had 144 rounds to complete the qualifiers.

Thomas, Dumas Meet Outdoors

COMPTON, Calif. (AP)—America's biggest hopes for a gold medal in the Olympic high jump—John Thomas and Charlie Dumas—will meet outdoors for the first time at the Compton Relays, June 3. Thomas, the world record holder from Boston University, has jumped 7 feet, 2 1/2 inches indoors and 7-1 3/4 outdoors. He has beaten Dumas three times indoors. Dumas, 1956 Olympic champion from Southern California, has a best of 7-1/2.

Sports Scope ...

Many schools are already dissatisfied with conference rules now and would like to see some changes. Instead of imposing a de-emphasis attitude toward the league, the individual schools should unite to form a stronger league with a more solid constitution and a more centralized setup.

Big Bats Spell Optimist Win

The Optimist blew a four run lead in the fourth inning yesterday but forged back with eight runs in the last two innings for a 12-3 victory over the Jaycees. The winners picked up 11 hits with Stephen Fullel hammering a couple of homers. Bobby Jackson picked up three hits in four official trips to the plate and Chippy Calloway homered. Kyle Highsmith worked the first three innings and received credit for the victory. He was relieved by Gary Fields.

Elks Rally For 6-2 Win

The Elks saved its scoring punch until the sixth inning yesterday but unloaded for six big runs in that inning to topple Security Life 6-2. Jerry Clark pitched a neat one-hitter in the victory but trailed most of the game when the losers, assisted by three errors, scored two runs in the second inning. Ben Irons had a bunt single in the second inning for the only hit off Clark who struck out 15. David Fowler and Charles Gaskins had two hits each for the winners. Milton Hadley had a two-run double in the fifth inning.

ELECT EXPERIENCED JOHN D. LARKINS GOVERNOR OF NORTH CAROLINA

"We need to help our farmers find their way out of their economic problem. Our farmers are caught in a two-way squeeze. They are paying more for things they buy and they are getting less for the things they sell. The state can help them most by providing facilities that will attract more markets for our farmers and by providing farm education centers so that the farmhouse in North Carolina can become the business and sales office for the production that goes on in the field."—John D. Larkins.

Democratic Primary May 28th

The Best Qualified Man For Governor

Experienced...

9 Sessions in the State Senate
President Pro Tempore of the State Senate
Has served on all of the Senate's standing committees
Twice chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee
Chairman of the State Democratic Party (1954-1958)
Democratic national committeeman from North Carolina (1958-1960)
Served 2 terms as chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission and Board of Awards

Civic Responsibility

John Davis Larkins is a Trenton (Jones County) attorney with a deep sense of civic responsibility. He has been a deacon of the Trenton Baptist Church for 25 years and has been chairman of the church's Board of Deacons and superintendent of the Sunday School, and is the son of a Baptist minister. He has been state chairman of the North Carolina Division of the American Cancer Society and was president in 1952-53. He is a trustee of the University of North Carolina, a graduate of Wake Forest College and a trustee of the Baptist Hospital at Winston-Salem and New Bern. He is a past commander of the Trenton American Legion Post.

Responsible Candidate...

John Larkins has been a responsible candidate in his campaign for governor. He has not made promises he cannot keep, but has stood for steady, sound progress based on responsible state government. John Larkins does not believe in adding additional heavy state taxes to the already overburdened taxpayer. A vote for John Larkins is a vote for sane, sound spending of your tax money.

John Larkins' 4 Big Decisions...

John Larkins made his first important decision, dedicating his life to Christ, very early because of the influence of life in the Baptist pastorium in which he was raised. He has attended the same church for 30 years.

His second important decision came when he decided to become an attorney. He attended Wake Forest Law School and passed the bar examination at the age of 20—which meant he had to wait until his 21st birthday before he could get his license to practice.

John Larkins' third important decision... his marriage to the former Miss Pauline Alexander Murrill of Jacksonville... has brought him 30 years of marital happiness. They met in Charlotte where she was a student at Queens College and he was working in a law office.

The fourth decision in John Larkins' life—the decision to run for governor—was the most difficult to make.

To decide, he would weigh the accumulated experiences of a lifetime against the needs of the State of North Carolina and its people. His answer—based on 25 years of governmental experience, his vast knowledge of North Carolina and the support of his family—was "yes."

What John Larkins Says On Basic Issues...

"At this point in the progress of North Carolina, nothing is more important than raising the income level of our people. The problems of state government are largely money problems, and they must be met by raising the income level of the people of this state. Additional income will mean a more equitable distribution of the financial burdens of state government."

"The next administration must give top priority to the matter of improving the quality of our public schools. But most of all, the next administration will have to see to it that means are devised to attract teachers into our public school system and to retain the teachers we now have. That will mean raising the pay of our teachers. I believe, too, that we must provide more facilities for higher education in this state, and I submit that community colleges offer a positive solution to this part of our education problem. It is time now to work toward providing every capable student with the opportunity to get a college education."

"I think we should expand our agricultural research program. I also believe that we need improved roads to help us attract food processing industries into our agricultural areas to provide the farmer with more markets. In addition, I think we can take a lesson from our industrial education centers, using existing personnel and existing buildings to acquaint larger numbers of our farmers with modern marketing methods, business practices, and production techniques."

"We are doing a great deal to improve our highways, but we need to do more and we need to do it as soon as possible. It is important that we launch a major road-building program in North Carolina in the 1960s."

"North Carolina must continue her drive toward industrialization. It is my feeling that we must expand this drive by strengthening our industry-hunting division. Industry will provide more jobs, and this is the key that will unlock the solution to our money problems in many vital fields."

Child's Chores Said Unrelated

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Children of the world, unite. You have nothing to lose but your chores.

So says Professor Dale B. Harris of Pennsylvania State University, who took a verbal swipe today at a cherished American tradition.

Harris told the National Congress of Parents and Teachers there is absolutely no relation between the number and kind of chores a child is assigned, and the sense of responsibility he shows later as an adult.

"Indeed," he said, "from some of our data there is a suggestion that too many urgent and serious duties, assumed too early, can have an adverse effect on children."

But what about the many distinguished Americans whose biographies show that heavy responsibilities in childhood lead to responsibility as an adult?

A lot of guff, says the professor.

"The truth of the matter probably is that for each such person

TV Wisely Showed Age Of Old Suspense Story

By CYNTHIA LOWRY AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wilkie Collins, the father of the modern suspense story, wrote "The Woman in White" 100 years ago. NBC's Hour of Great Mysteries adapted it to television Monday night. Wisely it allowed it to show its age.

It proved to be a gloriously ornate old chestnut, chock full of once spine-tingling situations which have since become dramatic cliches.

The play opened in a misty cemetery inhabited by a mad wraith. It closed with the forces dead—one accidentally by his own hand, the other shot by his wife—and virtue rewarded. In between we had the helpless heirs wed to the brutal schemer, the revealing diary, the convenient eavesdropper, the drugged, kidnaped heroine—oh, we had everything, including 1860 costumes and candlelight.

However, Siobhan McKenna, Walter Slezak and company somehow worked their way brightly and entertainingly through the Victorian clutter to provide a delightful and amusing hour.

The three networks covered both the Andrei Gromyko and Henry Cabot Lodge addresses to the United Nations. NBC's Pauline Frederick provided the most intelligent and helpful commentary

No Heart Attack, His Foot Asleep

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The meeting of the county supervisors was dull and a spectator, apparently bored, got up to leave.

Suddenly he slumped to the floor. A county official called an ambulance and the fire department resuscitator squad.

"Nonsense," said the 73-year-old gentleman. "I didn't have a heart attack. My foot went to sleep and gave way when I stood on it."

Fear Toll Of 375 On Memorial Day

CHICAGO (AP)—The National Safety Council says as many as 375 persons may die on the nation's highways during the three-day Memorial Day holiday.

The previous record of 371 was set during a three-day observance in 1958.

In addition to the fatalities, the council said Monday, 13,000 persons could suffer disabling injuries from auto accidents.

Yet To Achieve Polaris Goal

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A major goal of the Polaris submarine missile test program—a completely successful shipboard launching—still eludes the Navy.

A source reported the 28-foot rocket fired Monday was ejected successfully from the USS Observation Island and both stages on the same day of the week. The rocket fired Monday was ejected normally, but that certain and 12,000 disabling injuries time of year, the council said.

on the situation.

Something pretty rare in the way of a TV special turns up tonight on NBC: an hour-long show with exactly two minutes of talking—plus, of course, those un-avoidable commercials.

The program is "Sing Along with Mitch," the Mitch being host Mitch Miller, an indefatigable bearded records company executive who leads a double life as regular radio interviewer. Recently Miller hit the jackpot with a series of record albums consisting of a male chorus singing familiar old songs. The idea is that the listener sings along with the chorus. The public has been buying the $4.95 records as if they were nickel candy bars.

"During the last 12 minutes of the show," promised Miller, "we'll play 32 old songs. And we'll flash the words on the screen. We hope everybody will open their windows and sing out to make the biggest chorus in the world."

Study Wreckage Of New Jet

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Investigators examined today the remnants of a new Convair 800 jet plane to see what caused it to crash and burn, killing four Delta Air Line employees.

No passengers were aboard when it took off on a training flight. Witnesses said it was airborne and its landing gear was retracting when suddenly it started rocking and appeared to stall. The airliner crashed to the right of the runway, broke up and immediately caught fire, sending orange-red flames several hundred feet into the air. The four men died immediately.

The victims were listed as Capt. James H. Longino, and Capt. H.L. Laube, 45, both of College Park, Ga., First Officer Bryan E. Boll, 31, of Morrow, Ga., and Capt. William F. Williams, 50, of Miami, Fla.

No Tears By That Old Army Sergeant, Now Civilian

BY HUGH A. MULLIGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — My old Army sergeant—
For 15 years I yearned and waited for the day when I'd meet him in civilian life.
In my mind's eye, I saw the scene a thousand times. He'd be out of work, homeless, friendless, driven by desperation to look me up and beg for a job.
Of course I wouldn't have any jobs to give, but I'd be magnanimous anyway.
I'd forget about the time he put me on KP for both the Christmas and New Year weekends. I'd overlook all the passes I didn't get, and the rifles that didn't pass inspection, and the beds that weren't made to his satisfaction. I'd never even mention the foxhole I had to dig behind the barracks for talking after taps, or the crap game he broke up when I had $40 in the pot, or the mountains of peeled potatoes that still loom in my memory like peaks of the Himalayas.

Yes, I'd let bygones be bygones. Gladly, willingly, I'd reach into my wallet and give him my lunch money. All of it. "Here, old buddy," I'd say, "this is for you. Don't mention it."
And do you know what he'd do? He'd cry. That great big mass of misanthropy would stand there and cry. The tears would roll down that rough, red face and trickle one by one off that crazy, granite jaw, like rain on Mt. Rushmore.
Have you ever seen a sergeant cry? It would have been worth the whole war and a good part of the occupation just to have seen it. But then, suddenly, one day last week I did meet him. Not in the office but on a subway platform. And it didn't work out at all the way I had planned.
He was well-dressed in a conservative business suit, with a tightly wrapped umbrella hung on one arm and a leather attache case in his massive hand. But he was smiling, actually smiling, so at first I almost didn't recognize him.
"Mull!" he roared. His voice was at parade-ground volume so that passengers on both sides of the platform immediately shared his research into my family tree. "Putting on the old duff, ain't you?" he boomed, playfully probing my abdomen with a few bayonet thrusts of his index finger. "Look at me; retired two years and still hard as a rock. Pushups . . . a-a-five a night. Never miss."

I was dying to ask what he was doing now, but when he tipped the newsboy 20 cents for a nickel paper the question somehow didn't seem important anymore.
"We had great times, didn't we, Mull?" he reminisced as we headed up the escalator. "Remember the night on bivouac we snuk into town and bought a juke? And the time the guys rigged up a still out behind the battalion C.P.? But for laughs nothing matched those dames from town we passed off as members of the Junior League at that big USO dance."
Funny, but I didn't recall any of these incidents, nor did I remember him ever calling me "Mull," when a variety of more picturesque soubriquets always seemed to hop so readily to his mind. But I did recall the four nights in a row we spent scrubbing down the barracks for falling to win the honor banner, and the 20-mile-hike we took because somebody left a light on in the latrine.

These little ghosts out of the past sent him into convulsions. "That was nothing," he cried, barely able to control himself. "The bunch after you had to scrub the floors with toothbrushes and I once made them double time all the way out to the range with full field packs. Laugh?"

You'd have died. There was one fat guy, who looked something like you—hey, maybe it was your gang after all."
He was laughing so hard now that tears, great big tears, came to his eyes and rolled down off his chin.
Did you ever see a sergeant cry?
I did, and it's not a pretty sight at all.
Oh well, anyhow, at least I still had my lunch money, and my memories. I'll save them until I run into a certain lieutenant.

BETHEL—Bethel's Rescue Unit, which will serve a tri-county area of Pitt, Martin and Edgecombe, will be one of the best equipped units outside Greenville when it is completed, says Fire Chief George Abeyounis.
The truck arrived recently and is in the process of being equipped and paid for, Abeyounis said.
Equipment will include a resuscitator, scot air packs, hydrolic rescue equipment, power saws, portable electric plant, acetylene equipment, dragging equipment, ambulance type cot and stretchers. A stretcher has been given to the unit, and a resuscitator is on hand that will go with the truck.
Financing of the truck and equipment, which will run into about $4,000, is being donated and solicited from interested individuals and organizations. Contributions will be accepted from anyone, Abeyounis said.
He said that "It is hoped we can start using it by July 1 at the latest." The unit is a memorial to Willie Abeyounis, brother of George Abeyounis, who died while fighting a fire.
The Bethel Rescue Squad at the present time is connected with the Fire Department, as one and the same. Efforts to establish the Rescue Squad as its own unit began sometime in March.

Denominations Approve Merger

BOSTON (AP)—A new denominational group, the Unitarian Universalist Assn., appears on the American scene next May—a 200,000-member consolidation of Unitarians and Universalists in nearly 800 churches.
The new association, brought into being through ratification of a merger agreement Monday, was hailed as "nothing less than a new world faith."
The Rev. Donald S. Harrington of New York said at a joint worship service: "It (the new association) is taking its place beside the big three religious groups on this continent, the Catholics, Protestants and Jews."
The agreement merges the headquarters organizations of the two denominations but spells out "the independence and autonomy of local churches, fellowships and associate members."
Delegates to the annual meeting of the American Unitarian Assn. voted 725 to 143 for the merger. A simultaneous special general assembly of the Universalist Church of America accepted the plan 365 to 65. Two-thirds votes were required in each case.
The merger becomes effective in May 1961.
The new association's members are scattered through every state in the union, most American territories and possessions and in Mexico.

Communist In Italy Accused Of Insulting Ike

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — A Communist member of the Italian Parliament, Giancarlo Pajetta, has been charged with insulting President Eisenhower.
Police broke up a Communist rally in this north Italian city Saturday night after Pajetta declared that Italy's Christian Democrat government was an accomplice of the United States in "imperialist war-mongering" acts against the Soviet Union.
A police officer went to the rostrum and told Pajetta to stop talking because he had made remarks offensive to the Italian government and to a friendly country. Ten policemen and at least six Communists were injured as club-swinging riot police dispersed the crowd of about 20,000.
The charge of "offending a foreign chief of state" filed against Pajetta carries a possible penalty of up to five years imprisonment. Pajetta cannot be brought to trial until the Chamber of Deputies lifts his parliamentary immunity.

Two Women Hanged Selves

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Two women hanged themselves in the closets of their homes Monday and both were found by their daughters.
Dr. Robert Hausman, county medical examiner, ruled both deaths suicides.
One of the women was Francis D. McAshan, 53, wife of the president of the First National Bank. The other was Frances Duman.
Mrs. McAshan's body was found by her daughter, Alice, 15, when the girl returned from school. The 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. Duman found her mother's body in a closet as the girl prepared to go to school.

Seaton Cites GOP Civil Rights Work

RALEIGH (AP)—The Republican administration has led the way in historic advances for civil rights, a cabinet member said Monday at commencement exercises for a Raleigh Negro college. Interior Secretary Fred A. Seaton told the Shaw University graduating class that President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon head an administration on "which recognizes the aspirations of the American Negro... as legitimate and fundamental rather than something to be manipulated for political advantage." He assured the students that "federal law and millions of other Americans stand with you, as American Negroes, in your quest for the elementary right of being treated as any other American citizen."

Nat'l PTA Congress Told Must Deal With Present

By G. K. HODENFIELD AP Education Writer PHILADELPHIA (AP)—It is high time we stopped talking about the good old days that never were and take a realistic view of education in this rapidly changing world, a college president said today. Dr. Harry D. Gideonse of Brooklyn College told the National Congress of Parents and Teachers "our national weaknesses today are real and terrifying but they can be remedied in short order by crash programs if the will and the purpose can be found." But, he said in a prepared address, "we are not dealing with the past that never was. We are dealing with a present that is even if some people are trying very hard not to see it." For instance, he said, it is naive indeed to assume that education is only that which goes on in the school. "Much more than in the past," he added, "Education is what goes on in the American culture as a whole." He cited "competitive advertising in the press and magazine, and radio and television. Sadistic and violent dramatic sketches for six and eight year old children. Advertising designed to create a discontent with what you have, to make you reach out for more than you can immediately hope to attain."

SBI Continuing Its Inquiry Into Political Leaflet

RALEIGH (AP)—The State Bureau of Investigation will continue a probe of a campaign leaflet circulated in Cleveland County. SBI Chief Walter Anderson said Monday a further check will seek to determine if the leaflet violates state law. At the same time, Anderson said another leaflet which carried a reprint of a Lenoir County newspaper editorial "is not in violation of the criminal statute." Terry Sanford, one of four candidates for governor, had complained of both pieces of campaign literature. However, he had shown little concern for the leaflet distributed in Cleveland County, but had described the other as an appeal to "racial hatred and bitterness." Anderson said he conferred with Atty. Gen. Wade Bruton before announcing results of the probe to date. The attorney general and Gov. Luther Hodges asked for an investigation late last week, after Sanford reported circulation of the leaflets. The editorial reprint was entitled "We're Still for Larkins" and appeared to be from the March 26, 1959, issue of the Lenoir County News, Kinston. The other leaflet, which was unsigned, concerned Clint Newton of Shelby, a member of the State ABC Board and Sanford campaign manager for several counties. John D. Larkins and Malcolm B. Seawell, two other candidates for governor, had demanded that Sanford make public the leaflets which he complained of. However, Sanford had refused to do so. The leaflet which appeared to be an editorial report, had this to say, among other things: "Our spies in Cumberland County report Sanford as saying, 'I'll win if they don't hang the Negro around my neck.' The most logical inference one might draw from this is that Sanford fears his record, or his stand on the burning issue of public school segregation."

Rockefeller Calls For Summit Failure Debate

NEW YORK (AP)—Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has called for a national debate, free of political partisanship, on why the summit conference failed. He said Monday Republicans and Democrats both were duty bound to "speak and act with frankness and a responsibility transcending the conventional restraints and formulas of partisan behavior." By implication, the governor's statement was an endorsement of Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson's call last week for a full discussion of the summit failure in Paris. But it was also a rebuke to any who might seek political advantage from the collapse. "I fervently hope," said Rockefeller, "that the Democratic party in its proper desire to get at the facts, will not engage in any shallow partisan effort to assign all error to its adversaries, all wisdom to itself. I hope—no less fervently for being a Republican—that Republicans will not try to disguise the present situation for equally partisan reasons. For it would be false and frivolous—and ultimately damaging to both nation and party—to dismiss sober criticism of specific American conduct as a peril to national unity." The statement came less than 48 hours before a scheduled meeting of New York GOP leaders at Albany to consider their course at the Republican National Convention in July. Among the items to be discussed is whether Rockefeller's name should be entered for the party's presidential nomination. Rockefeller, who last December gave up a bid for the nomination in the face of overwhelming party support for Vice President Richard M. Nixon, noted that he had explained five months ago he intended "to speak plainly on national issues of serious moment." He referred to the dignity of President Eisenhower in the face of the aggressiveness of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev at the Paris meeting. Then he added: "The crudity of Soviet conduct gives neither reason nor excuse for denying that some aspects of American conduct, immediately prior to the conference, demanded examination of their purpose and prudence."

Tobacco Exports Show A Decline

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Foreign Agricultural Service rechecked today that exports of U.S. unmanufactured tobacco in March were 17 per cent below those of March last year. They totaled 27,800,000 pounds with a value of $22,320,002. Exports of all kinds except flue-cured, black fat and cigar wrapper were lower than a year earlier. Burley exports were down 17 per cent while flue-cured was about unchanged from a year earlier. Exports during the first three months of this year totaled 76,300,000 pounds, down about 2 per cent from the like period of last year. Exports of U.S. tobacco products in March were valued at $7,700,000, down 7 per cent from a year earlier.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—A few of the "science" stocks made some wide moves in a mixed and uncertain stock market early this afternoon. Trading was moderately active.

Key stocks showed gains or losses of fractions to about a point. Moves of several points were made by some "glamour" issues.

Electronics and space age designs stocks were as irregular as the rest of the market. Steels were mainly lower as steel production headed for one of its sharpest drops of the year.

Wall Street analysts saw the market as undergoing another consolidation phase following last week's turbulent action.

Texas Instruments was ahead about 7 points when cut the gain to about 3. Polaroid ran up about 4. Zenith added a couple of points. Litton Industries rose about a point.

Thiokol continued to back away, dropping a fraction. Raytheon and Sperry Rand were off slightly. Motorola, up 9 1/2 Monday, erased an early 1-point gain and showed a net loss of a fraction. American Machine & Foundry and Decca Records advanced about a point each.

U.S. Steel gyrated between losses ranging from a fraction to more than a point. Bethlehem was about a point lower.

General Motors dropped a fraction and DuPont dropped about a point in further reaction to news the Supreme Court has agreed to review the decision permitting DuPont to retain its GM stock holdings.

General Instrument had a sharp rise in earnings and advanced about 2. Union Carbide and Schering gained more than a point. Goodyear, International Harvester and Montgomery Ward dropped more than a point each.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 49 at 623.17.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off .10 at 216.10 with the industrials up .30, the rails off .10 and the utilities off .40.

Corporate bonds drifted lower in slow trading.

U.S. government bonds edged off in quiet dealings.

Japan Battered By Tidal Waves

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Japan today bore the brunt of quake-born tidal waves that raced across the Pacific from Chile. Hundreds of miles of Japan's east coast were battered.

The international tidal wave toll of dead and missing reached 354. Combined casualties of the Chilean quakes and the tidal waves were 528 dead and 888 missing.

The Japanese counted 90 dead and 75 missing from the tidal waves.

Thirty-three persons were killed and 23 missing in Hawaii. The waves claimed the lives of three Okinawans.

Of Chile's quake-tidal wave toll of 400 dead and 800 missing, 130 were reported lost in the high seas that broke on coastal communities late Sunday. The rest of Chile's toll was presumed due directly to the quakes that started last weekend.

French possessions in the South Pacific were hit, but reports reaching Paris said there were no deaths and little damage. Coastal roads of Tahiti were temporarily submerged.

Pacific coasts of the United States, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and Formosa were hit in varying degrees.

The tide hit as high as 30 feet at some points in Japan. The average was six or seven feet. Warnings were not broadcast until after the waves began pounding the coast. Weather Bureau officials said there had been a slipup in the warning system.

Tokyo and Yokohama, sheltered by Tokyo Bay, were spared direct blows. The greatest damage was along the northern 200 miles of Honshu's coast. Villages there became a tangled mass of shattered buildings and debris and ships washed ashore.

Salvation Army Week In Progress

National Salvation Army Week is being observed this week through Sunday throughout the nation and in Greenville, Lt. Walter Norris, local commanding officer, said today.

Lt. Norris noted that the Greenville Corps, located at 1813 Dickinson Ave., offers a wide program of worship and spiritual guidance, and also serves as a neighborhood center, with activities for all age groups.

The religious program includes Sunday School, Adult Bible Class, two worship services, Prayer Meeting and Open-Air Meetings on Sunday.

An extensive program is offered for children and teenagers. Instruction in Biblical history, spiritual guidance and recreational educational activities program for all age groups.

The Sunbeams, a girls' group similar to Brownies, meet on Wednesday and the Girl Guards, similar to Girl Scouts, on Tuesday. In addition, the center is open daily after school hours to children in the community interests is arts and crafts, wood-working, basketball, volleyball and other activities taught and supervised by Salvationists and community volunteers.

At the Home League, which meets Thursday at 7:30 p.m., mothers have an opportunity to study home management and child care. The League of Mercy, whose members are all Salvationists, meet at the Corps Tuesday before beginning their visits to the sick in local hospitals and invalids confined to their homes.

The Salvation Army lends assistance at disasters, secure food and shelter for those stranded in the community or aids families with personal problems, such as marital discord, unwed motherhood and children's behavior problems, Lt. Norris said.

Citizens of Greenville are invited to visit the Greenville Corps during Salvation Army Week to see how The Salvation Army serves the community, Lt. Norris said.

Dick Jones Talks To Optimists

Dick Jones of local radio station WGTC described the mechanics of radio advertising to the Greenville Optimist Club at its weekly dinner meeting last night.

Jones pointed out what he termed "failures" of radio and private business personnel to utilize radio advertising to its full productivity.

Following his brief talk, Jones opened the floor for questions from the membership.

In a brief business session, the club discussed the possibility of combining the installation ceremony for the new officers and the annual Ladies Night dinner into one meeting—June 27.

Plans are now underway for the dual occasion.

Complain Planes Making Passes

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet Union charged today that U.S. planes made a series of spying passes over the new Soviet atomic icebreaker Lenin.

The official news agency Tass said that on a recent trip from the Baltic to Murmansk the icebreaker "was repeatedly overflown by spying American planes."

"They usually made three to four passes, flying close to the masts on both sides of the ship," Tass said.

Tass did not elaborate. Its brief mention came in a dispatch from the Arctic port of Murmansk telling of preparations to send the atomic icebreaker on its first scientific expedition to the Arctic.

Funeral

Funeral services for Joseph Jeffreys Jr., son of the late Addie and Joseph Jeffreys, will be held Thursday at 4 p.m. at Cornerstone Baptist Church. The Rev. J. E. Tillett will officiate. Burial will follow in Brown Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Jeffreys died at his home Saturday after a brief illness.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ollie B. Jeffreys; two daughters, Josephine of the home and Jane Vera of Brooklyn, N. Y.; one foster daughter, Barbara Ann of the home; one grandchild; one sister, Mrs. Katie Day of New York City; two brothers, Allen of Raleigh and Willie of Philadelphia, Pa.

All members of the Junior Choir of Mt. Calvary Church are asked to meet at the church Wednesday night at 7:00 for rehearsal before service.

Special Meet By Security Council

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower called his National Security Council into special session today in advance of his report to the nation on the collapse of the summit conference.

So far as his formal appointment calendar showed, Eisenhower was devoting his entire day to the meeting with his top level strategy board and work on the speech he will deliver by radio and television Wednesday night.

Newsmen rarely are told what transpires at meetings of the council, and there was no indication any decisions or actions would be announced today.

Press secretary James C. Hagerty said that in addition to reporting on the summit failure, the radio-TV talk would report "on the future aims and goals of the United States and, indeed, of its scientific expedition to the Arctic."

Plan Services On Memorial Day

Dr. H. G. Haney, Chairman of the American Legion Memorial Day Committee for Post No. 39 of Greenville, has announced the program for the annual Memorial Day Services.

The services will be held at the Veterans' Plot in Greenwood Cemetery Sunday, May 29, at 4:00 p.m.

Principal Speaker for the occasion will be Dr. Leo Jenkins of East Carolina College. Paul A. Hickfang, of the Music Department.

The article did not give any source of information but began with a profile of Allen W. Dulles, Central Intelligence Agency director. The information on the U-2 flights was not directly attributed to Dulles and the writer, Claus Jacobi, refused to say whether he had interviewed the intelligence chief.

Mrs. W. C. Eagles and Mrs. Alfred F. Kennedy are contacting Gold Star Mothers for the Auxiliary; and George W. Evans, Chief of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, is assisting Dr. Haney with the program.

College Students In City Census

U. S. Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr. of North Carolina has notified the Greenville Chamber of Commerce that East Carolina College students have been included in the local census count in 1960 as well as 1960.

When Greenville's population count jumped 34.4 percent over the 1950 figure, a substantial increase, the question arose as to the status of East Carolina College students in relation to the census count.

Those boarding in dormitories or living in the college town were counted as citizens of Greenville this year. Ervin advised Willard T. Kizer of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce yesterday that students were counted in the 1950 census the same way.

The population count for Greenville in the 1960 preliminary census report is 22,476, with an increase of 5,752 residents. These figures are subject to slight revisions upon further checking, the District Census Office Supervisor, John R. Brinson, said, though significant changes are unlikely.

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) U. S. reconnaissance planes have photographed "every square centimeter" of the Soviet Union except some steep and inaccessible mountain areas, the West German news magazine Der Spiegel reported.

The magazine said the work was done by 12 U-2 jets in about 150 flights over a four-year period.

The article did not give any source of information but began with a profile of Allen W. Dulles, Central Intelligence Agency director. The information on the U-2 flights was not directly attributed to Dulles and the writer, Claus Jacobi, refused to say whether he had interviewed the intelligence chief.

Reprint of a letter to The Hertford County Herald from Mr. J. N. Vann, prominent Hertford County farmer and former Representative in the North Carolina General Assembly.

The Editor,
Hertford County Herald,
Ahoskie, N. C.
Dear Mr. Editor:

It has been my privilege for more than a half century to help elect a Democrat Congressman in the First Congressional District of North Carolina; beginning with the late Honorable John H. Small and Hallett S. Ward, my very personal friend, Honorable Lindsey Warren and our encumbered and affable Herbert Bonner. ALL OF THEM ELECTED FROM BEAUFORT COUNTY.

Why should the county of Beaufort be continually crowned with the honor by electing a man to represent the First Congressional District of North Carolina?

Our present Congressman from Beaufort County has been perpetuated in office for twenty years. What are the requirements of our Democratic Party to satisfy the MACHINE? If elected, what does Mr. Bonner contemplate doing in Washington for my County of Hertford, and the other Counties embracing the First Congressional District, that he has been unable to accomplish, politically undisturbed, for a period of twenty years?

Not all of us are Marines and Coast Guardsmen. To the contrary, we are a disappointed and discouraged farming people, who feel that we have been neglected too long. A new broom is in order and needed.

I urge you to vote to nominate Honorable Walter Jones, of PITT COUNTY, to be our First District Congressman. A change will be refreshing.

Respectfully,
J. N. Vann
