Accused Hustled Off By Law Enforcers

Farmville Policeman Is Shot From Ambush; Man Bound Over For Trial

By STUART SAVAGE, Reflector Staff Writer. FARMVILLE—Over 30 men, including at least 15 officers from Pitt and adjoining counties, searched three hours Saturday night and early Sunday morning for a Negro man who ambushed a Farmville Police officer, shooting him with a .12 gauge shot gun. The officer, Elbert Hawkins Negro, a veteran of seven years' service with the department, was shot in the left upper arm and chest as he walked along the sidewalk on South Main St. about 10 p.m., according to acting Police Chief Joe Gregory.

Hawkins was taken immediately to Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville where, today, doctors said his condition was good. However, doctors added that his left wrist and fingers were paralyzed as a result of the injury. Immediately following the shooting, local officers, Pitt, Greene and Edgecombe County deputies, ABC officers, members of the Highway Patrol and constables converged on Farmville to search for the alleged assailant, James Gay, 35-year-old Negro resident of the Walker Building on South Main St., near the scene of the shooting.

Original Foreign Aid Sums Trimmed By $790 Millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee today cut 790 1/2 million dollars from President Eisenhower's original foreign aid requests, including 400 million from military assistance. If the action is sustained by the House later this week, the aid program would get $3,384,500,000 of the $4,175,000,000 Eisenhower requested for the fiscal year starting July 1. In addition, it would have available an estimated 400 million in previous funds which have not been obligated in spending.

of the free world," Eisenhower said in a telegram to House members. Presumably the Senate, which regularly has been more generous than the House in foreign aid funds, will be asked to restore some of the cuts. The committee's action was taken on recommendation of subcommittee headed by Rep. Otto E. Passman (D-La.). The military phase of the program, which finances fighting equipment, training, supplies and services for friendly nations, was limited by the committee to $1,600,000,000 of the two billion requested. The committee offered no explanation for the cut, but noted that the amount approved is 300 million more than was appropriated for the present year and said more than two billion in unexpended balances was available. Here's what the committee recommended for other phases of the program: 1. Defense support, economic aid to bolster defense programs: The President requested 724 million; Congress limited this to 675 million in the authorization, and the committee pared it to 600 million. 2. Technical Cooperation, a program designed to develop economic resources and productive capacities of underdeveloped areas. The President wanted 172 million dollars, which Congress authorized. The committee cut it to 150 million. 3. United Nations program for technical help: The committee approved the entire 33 million dollars requested. 4. Special assistance program: The President requested 268 1/2 million dollars. Congress limited this to 256 million and the committee cut it to 206 million. 5. President's special emergency fund (to meet unforeseen contingencies). The President asked for 175 million dollars. Congress authorized only 150 million and the committee approved that figure. 6. Development loan fund: The President asked for 700 million dollars. The committee cut this to 550 million, the amount authorized by Congress.

President Leaves Alaska, Still Plans Stop In Tokyo

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—President Eisenhower took off today for a three-day visit to the Philippines—still determined to go or this weekend to riot-plagued Japan. The President, pleased by a warm reception in Alaska, left Elmendorf Air Force Base aboard his jet airliner. He scheduled a refueling stop at Wake Island 7 1/2 hours later and arrival at Clark Field near Manila at about 3:45 p.m. Philippine Time—2:45 a.m. EST Tuesday. Prospects were for a rousing welcome for Eisenhower in Manila, where he was stationed as an Army officer in 1935-39. But there was a risk of danger—the possibility of physical harm to the 69-year-old President—on his scheduled arrival in Tokyo. In the Japanese capital left-wing mobs, now perhaps controlled by Communists, still are intent on trying to prevent or wreck the projected Eisenhower visit. The President arrived in sunny Anchorage, biggest city in the new 49th state, Sunday morning after a 3,700-mile nonstop flight from Washington. He said he had rejected advice that he abandon or postpone his visit to Tokyo. He is going ahead, he said, because the visit "represents an important phase of a program whose paramount objective was, and is, to improve the climate of international understanding." Alluding then to the hate-propaganda campaign in Tokyo, the President added: "We should not permit unpleasant incidents and sporadic turmoil, inspired by misled or hostile agents, to dim for us the concrete and gratifying results. They have been to the great good of the entire world."

At Anchorage Eisenhower was met by his press secretary, James C. Hagerty, who last week was besieged by a screaming Tokyo mob from which he narrowly escaped. "Hello, Jim," the President chuckled as he shook hands. The press secretary still declined to make public the details of the scheduled June 19-22 Eisenhower stay in Tokyo. Again he refused to say whether he was satisfied that Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi can make good his "guarantee" of Eisenhower's personal safety in the Japanese capital. At a news conference, Hagerty predicted only slight changes in original plans for the visit. He said he knew of no intention to eliminate a 15-mile motorcade from Emperor Hirohito's downtown residence Sunday. Hagerty added there had been no United States request that Japanese authorities supplement their police force with army units. He said in response to a question that he believes it "a well proven fact" that the demonstrations in Japan are led by the Communists.

Reports from Tokyo were that security plans are being beefed up and call now for deployment of 25,000 police—10,000 more than originally planned. After three days in the Philippines the President will sail aboard the cruiser St. Paul from Manila Bay to Formosa for a visit there before going on to Tokyo by way of Okinawa. His 23,000-mile tour also will take him to Korea and America's newest state, Hawaii. On arrival in Anchorage for his first visit to Alaska in 14 years, he was applauded and cheered at the airport by a crowd of about 4,000 persons. An estimated 30,000 others turned out on a tour through the city of about 47,000 population. "There were 'Welcome Ike' signs distributed by the Republican Women's Club. And from the crowd came shouts of 'Yeah Ike' and 'Welcome Mr. President.' At the airport, Alaska's Democratic Gov. William A. Egan told the President the prayers of the nation accompany him on his risky journey to the Far East.

Employment Up By One Million People In May

WASHINGTON (AP)—A million-man increase in employment in May was reported by the Labor Department today. The substantial gain, about normal or slightly better for the season, carried the nation's total civilian employment to a record for the month at 67,208,000. Unemployment fell by about 200,000 to 3,459,000. This also was about an average movement for May.

The unemployment rate—4.9 per cent of the civilian labor force—was a bit better than April's 5 per cent, but not down to the 4.8 per cent in February. The decline in unemployment meant that 951 of every 1,000 men and women who wanted jobs had them. But factory employment declined seasonally by 45,000, mainly because of continued cutbacks in the steel and machinery industries. There were about 150,000 fewer factory jobs than there were a year ago.

Despite these declines, and the release of 120,000 temporary census workers, the total number of persons on nonfarm payrolls rose by 80,000 in May to 53,100,000. This was 900,000 higher than a year ago and a record for the month. The expansion of employment reflected gains in farming, construction and other outdoor work. They brought the employment total to a level 1 1/4 million above that of a year ago. Department officials were cheered by a decline of 300,000 in the number of long-term unemployed — those who have been hunting jobs for 15 weeks or longer. This reduced the total of long-term unemployed to about 900,000.

Argentina Sees Revolt Collapse

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—President Arturo Frondizi's government announced today that a vest-pocket revolt in western Argentina had collapsed a scant six hours or so after it started. Frondizi told newsmen the bulk of Argentina's armed forces had rallied to his side within a few hours after the small-scale rebellion last night in San Luis. The President confidently announced he would leave a planned this afternoon on a month-long tour of Europe. Before dawn a spokesman for the Interior Ministry said loyal troops had captured Gen. Mauricio Gomez, commander of the 2nd Argentina Army, who reportedly joined the rebels. The other rebels fled from the strategic sites they captured a few hours earlier in San Luis, including the local radio station, the spokesman said. Gen. Rodolfo Larcher, the secretary of war, had warned the rebels to surrender by dawn or to face an assault by loyal troops from the surrounding area. He said the rebel force numbered only 300 to 400 men of an anti-aircraft group.

Hundreds Of Presbyterian Delegates Arriving Today

Hundreds of delegates and ruling elders of the North Carolina Presbyterian Synod arrived this morning for the opening session of the annual conference on evangelism, held this afternoon. The conference on evangelism precedes the Synod's 147th annual meeting which begins tomorrow at East Carolina College. The two-day conference is expected to attract more than 700 ministers and ruling elders. The conference opens the celebration of the centennial of the Presbyterian Church, U.S., which separated from the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. in 1861. The Rev. W. D. McInnis presided over the opening worship service this afternoon, which included interpretation of the Mission to the Nation. The Rev. McInnis spoke on "Friendship." Dr. Harry M. Moffett Jr. spoke on "Action," and the Rev. R. Don Carson spoke on "Proclamation." Dr. John F. Anderson was the featured speaker and will speak again at a worship service this evening. All sessions are being held in McGinnis Auditorium of East Carolina College.

The Tuesday conference will begin at 2 p.m. and will include the election of the 1960 Moderator and clerks as well as the election of the 1961 moderator-nominee. The Synod is attracting names well known through North Carolina in political as well as religious circles. The Hon. Malcolm B. Seawell, former Attorney General of N. C., will direct one of four seminar meetings during the evangelistic meeting. Ralph Scott, brother of the late governor and senator Kerr Scott, and recently elected state representative, will preside at the concluding session of the evangelism conference. The Synod last met in Greenville in 1939, the Rev. Richard R. Gammon, host pastor, said. The evangelism conference being held here today and tomorrow morning probably will attract the largest delegation to ever attend a state Presbyterian meeting.

Planning Employ Extra Guards

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Prison Department will employ 136 additional guards beginning July 1 in an effort to shorten hours and improve working conditions. Prison Director George Randall said when the increase in the guard force goes into effect the work will average 66 hours over a five-day period. Guards now work 72 hours in five alternate weeks and 80 hours in six days on. Noting that the guards still will be working longer than other state employees, Randall said, "It is heartening to be able to make this first step in improving the working conditions of prison personnel, and efforts will be continued to reduce the hours of prison guards."

Church Ceremony Unites Miss Smith, Mr. Bland

In a ceremony of picturesque loveliness which took place, Sunday, June 12, in the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church conducted by the Rev. Henry Melvin, Miss Elizabeth Ann Smith daughter of Mrs. Vida S. Crawford of Greenville and Thomas Bland son of Mr. Levie L. Smith of Baltimore, Md., of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Eiland, of Norfolk, Va., were united in marriage.

The altar of the church was decorated with bridal greenery, white gladioli, cathedral candles in wrought iron seven-branched candelabrum. A prie-dieu was used as the altar where the bride and groom knelt for the benediction. Wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Ruth Taylor, organist and Miss Patsy Jones, a soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Robert M. Smith. She wore an original formal length gown of white Skinner satin fashioned with a fitted bodice.

The gown featured a sabrina neckline of Alencon lace, which was repeated in the long sleeves coming to a point over her hands. The full skirt featured a bussel back which backswept to a butterfly bow and chapel train. Her headpiece was a matching lace crown with a bouffant veil in silk-illusion sprayed with see pearls and sequin.

She carried a satin covered prayer book with a pure white orchid and showered with French carnations.

The only attendant was Mrs. Robert M. Smith, sister-in-law of the bride. She wore a waltz-length dress of blue nylon organza over taffeta. Her head-piece was of matching organza with an illusion blush veil. She carried a colonial bouquet of summer mixed flowers in pastel shades tiered with pink satin.

The groom had as his best man, Robert L. Jamison of Norfolk, Va. Ushers were Edward Phaeher and Mr. Edward Hargrove, both of Norfolk.

Mrs. Crawford, mother of the bride, chose a dress of Empress Blue batiste and lace with matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a navy blue laced dress over taffeta with matching accessories. Both wore white carnation corsages.

Mrs. Bland is a graduate of Greenville High School and attended East Carolina College. She

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newstfeatures

One of the virtues of proper insulation is that it keeps heat out of the house during the summer as well as cutting heat loss during the winter. Aside from the comfort value, this saves money by reducing power used for air conditioning and slicing fuel consumption.

A considerable percentage of the insulating materials sold today is applied by the home owner himself. One of the easiest, last expensive forms of insulation is applied by pouring mineral fibers between the joists of an unfinished attic. It requires no mechanical skill and no special tools, since the insulation comes in convenient bags from which it can be poured directly in place. Generally, an 11-pound bag insulates 25 square feet of attic space to a depth of 3 and 1/2 inches. An average attic of 1,000 square feet can be insulated for $50 to $75, depending on the depth applied.

In spreading the insulation, it is a good idea to use a stick or the handle of a mop. Doing it this way has a tendency to fluff the material, giving it maximum insulating efficiency.

Most of the time, the man of the house knows how to turn off the water in the main line. More often than not, however, he keeps it a secret from his wife and other members of the family.

Thousands of words have been written and spoken over the years about the necessity of placing tags on the various shut-off valves and controls so that everybody in the house can find the proper fixture in an emergency. We had supposed that the warnings had made some impression — until we talked the other day to William Mulholland, a tube engineer for a leading copper water tube manufacturer.

Discussing the subject of plumbing in general, he pointed out that home owners waste millions of dollars a year because they do not know what to do when a leak occurs. Much of this money could be saved if the person at home at the time knew exactly how to turn off the water until the plumber arrived.

In some cases, it is necessary only to use the shut-off valve for that section of the water line involved. In other, the main supply water line should be turned off—as, for instance, when the specific point of leakage can not be located.

Thus, this new warning: if you're the only one in the house who knows where the various components of your water supply system are located, let somebody else know about them. The simplest way, after a quick verbal briefing, is to place a tag on each valve or control with a description of its function.

Completes Solo Flight To Sweden

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—An electronics engineer relaxed happily with his family today after flying his single-engine airplane to his native Sweden against his wife's wishes.

"Everything is all right now," said Carl Olsson. "I got big hugs from my wife, three girls and a boy."

Olsson, 38, returned Sunday from Stockholm aboard a commercial plane.

"It certainly was a lot faster than the trip I made," he said. He began his solo hop from Wilmington, N.C., May 26 and arrived in Stockholm June 3 after stops at Bermuda, the Azores, Lisbon and Geneva.

His wife didn't know he was going to make the flight when he left Atlanta and was considerably upset when she learned about it.

Olsson said he originally intended to fly the plane to New York and then ship it by boat. He changed his mind, however, when he found it would cost $3,500 to ship the plane and about $300 to fly it.

The native of Eskilstuna, Sweden, wanted the aircraft in Stockholm because he plans to return there with his family in July.

"I have to go back for business reasons," he explained. "I also want my children to be educated in Sweden." He owns Oltrox Corp. in Stockholm.

Olsson came to the United States in 1955 to work as an engineer in the Marietta, Ga., division of Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Later he began the manufacture and sale of electronic instruments in Atlanta.

REASON TO CLUCK

Not A Drop, But Buffalo On Road

SANTA MARIA, Calif. (AP)—All the callers were apologetic. "I haven't had a drop to drink," a man telephoned the state highway patrol Sunday. "I don't expect you to believe this, but there's a buffalo on U.S. 101 near Nipomo and he won't let traffic by."

Patrolmen hurried 10 miles north to Nipomo.

The buffalo standing in the middle of the southbound lane of the freeway was real enough, and he was angry and determined no car would get by him. Nobody knows just why.

Anyway, patrolmen were relieved when he jumped a fence, pursued by his owner, Jay Doty, who maintains a small herd of bison.

Charles Becton and Robert Brown, 4-H'ers from the Ayden club, won first place in the district with their tobacco demonstration on "Planning a Nematode Control Program." Becton and Brown won a scholarship to attend 4-H Club Week June 20-25 at A & T College, Greensboro.

The two second place winners in the dress revue will participate in a state dress revue program June 25.

Parents attending the District Federation included Mrs. Caston Monk and family of Bell Arthur and Mrs. Wooten and family of Falkland.

Other Pitt County towns participating in the District Federation included the following: William Council, Bethel club, peanut production, second place winner; Miles Wilson and Stettinius Hemby, Grimesland club, electric, third place winner; Morris Harper and Walter Inghram, Grifton club, forage crops, third place; James Roy Barrett and Roland Suggs, Nichols club, cotton production, fourth place.

Gloria Monk and Fannie Wooten, Falkland club, electric, third place; Edith Bemby, Farmville club, school dress revue, second place; Martha Mills, Grimesland club, party dress revue, second place.

Annie Hall of the Bethel club won a jewel box of 24 spoons of thread for participating in a sewing demonstration.

Tyrone Hopkins of the Grimesland club on first place in the talent program with a Sacred Clarinet Solo. The Pitt County Tobacco Team and Talent participant will compete in a State Federation to be held in Greensboro.

Didn't Realize Billfold In Fire

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Fred L. Thames burned his billfold, containing $1,700 and titles to three autos, Sunday.

Thames told police he had placed a stack of newspapers in an incinerator, but didn't realize his billfold was among the papers. Thames saw the billfold burning in time to salvage a number of charred notes.

Old Glory Sees 183rd Birthday This Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP)—Old Glory, which now contains 49 stars, is 183 years old Tuesday, but it is still proper to display your flag even if it has fewer stars.

There are only two firm rules; the flag should be in reasonably good condition and without a 50th star.

The 50th star for Hawaii will be added officially July 4. Until then it is improper to display the new flag.

The 49th star for Alaska became official July 4, 1959.

Even after the 50-star flag becomes official, most agencies of the federal government will continue to display 48-star and 49-star flags so long as they remain in good condition and until present supplies of unused flags are exhausted.

By act of Congress, the President each year proclaims June 14 as flag day.

This year President Eisenhower said, "It is proper on the birthday of the Stars and Stripes that we should recall the qualities of greatness that our Founding Fathers displayed when, with firm reliance on divine providence, they pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor to bring this nation into being."

He called upon the people to observe Flag Day by flying the colors in their homes and other suitable places, by organizing and taking part in appropriate ceremonies, and "by giving grateful thought to the treasured national heritage which the flag represents."

While Betsy Ross generally is credited with being the "maker of the first flag," there is no unanimous agreement on this. Lonelle Aikman of the National Geographic Society, for example, says Francis Kopkinson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, more likely was the flag's principal designer.

Nevertheless, Betsy's home state of Pennsylvania has made Flag Day a legal holiday, the only state to do so.

The 50-star flag will be flown officially for the first time July 4 over Baltimore's Ft. McHenry where, by the dawn's early light, Francis Scott Key wrote the words for the Star Spangled Banner.

Ft. McHenry is a national monument and Secretary of Interior Fred A. Seaton has been designated by the President to run up the new flag. It will be raised at 12:01 a.m. in ceremonies like those of a year ago when Alaska became the 49th star.

Needing More Industrial Diversity

North Carolina occupies an enviable position among 16 Southern and Border states because it has the largest number of people employed in manufacturing of any of these states.

With 505,000 people engaged in manufacturing, North Carolina is two thousand ahead of Texas which occupies the second rung of the regional ladder.

Aside from the number of persons employed in manufacturing, however, North Carolina has reason to be envious of the position Texas occupies. Although North Carolina has more people employed in manufacturing, the total value of the products manufactured in this state last year was slightly more than nine billion dollars while the value of products manufactured in Texas reached 15 1/2 billion dollars.

It is apparent therefore that the wealth added to Texas' economy through manufacturing is considerably more than that of North Carolina. It is also apparent from the figures that with almost half its total manufacturing employes engaged in textiles, North Carolina still has considerable distance to go to achieve the diversity of industrial capacity which it has been seeking.

As North Carolina continues to develop from an industrial standpoint, it is important that consideration be given not only to the number of jobs that will be added to the economy, but also to the kind of industry located in the state and to the value of the products these industries will produce. These are factors which have a bearing on the economy of the state just as the number of industrial jobs has a bearing on the economy.

The figures released by the State Department of Conservation and Development likewise point out that Tar Heels engaged in manufacturing jobs are employed by 7,300 different firms in the state. This means, of course, that of the manufacturing firms in the state, the average employment is about 69 persons, certainly not a large number by comparison with the figures announced for some of the new plants being located in the state.

This factor also has a bearing upon the economy of the state. The industrial structure of the state is, by and large, made up principally of small manufacturing firms scattered in many communities rather than a relatively few very large plants. From the standpoint of a state which has a major agricultural economy, this is likewise a healthy situation.

North Carolina obviously needs more manufacturing jobs and it needs to continue to diversify its industrial economy. It needs more small industrial plants as well as large plants. These factors should not escape the attention of those primarily responsible for the state's economic development or individual citizens of the state whose economic future is closely tied to the progress of the state as a whole.

Far West Votes To Decide Race?

By LYNN NISBET
BALANCE — Mountain Democrats, especially those living in the 12th congressional district, believe they hold the balance of power in the run-off primary for Governor. Their reasoning is that Sanford and Lake will come out of the east and piedmont just about even, and a lopsided vote in the far west will turn the trick.

These counties are more responsive to organization leadership than those in the eastern part of the state, and while they often distribute votes when a number of candidates are in the running, they usually tighten up when the choice is mainly between two. Witness the 1948 contest when a preponderant mountain majority for Johnson was not sufficient to overcome the Scott margin in the east. The organization leadership is lining up now behind Sanford, and indications are that in these counties he will get a large part of the Larkins and Seawell first primary vote. It isn't all rosy for the Sanford folks. There were several upsets in legislative and local contests, with candidates who were believed to be safe finding themselves voted out. Some of these defeated candidates and their supporters are resentful at alleged desertion and let-down on part of the organization—and they are leaning toward Lake for a protest vote. There is some evidence that a few original Sanford supporters, mostly of the strong Scott "branch head" faction, are switching because of resentment at reports of alignments between Sanford and Senator Everett Jordan in other parts of the state.

These defections do not greatly concern the organization leaders, who feel sure of at least three-to-one margin for Sanford. They are disturbing to some degree because of memories of 1948, and lack of assurance that anything less than a solid mountain vote for Sanford will fail to overcome Lake's eastern margin.

CONGRESSIONAL — Decision of Thad Bryson not to call for a run-off primary against Roy Taylor for Congress and the official order by Governor Hodges for a special election on June 25 (date of the second primary) to name a congressman to fill out the term of the late Dave Hall, are not expected to have much effect on the voter turnout. Taylor came so near to a majority in the first round, and the third candidate being a Buncombe man, a second primary would have been recognized as futile so far as hopes of the little counties were concerned.

There are complications due to the fact that only Democrats can vote in the primary to nominate a candidate for Governor, but republicans will participate in the election to name a congressman. Writings are not permitted in the primary, but may be used in the congressional election.

HEINZ Rollman, Republican nominee, is protesting the special election as unnecessary, and has tried to withdraw from the short term race. He will be in the regular election this fall for the full term in Congress. Democratic leaders concede that for all practical purposes the special election is of little consequence, since the result can be forecast with certainty. For most part they like the idea of having the special election concurrently with the primary because it will save the expense of a separate election. They also believe that the voting record will serve as precedent for the general election in November, and to some extent offset the influence of Rollman Republican money in local county races.

None of the Democrats who were interviewed by your reporter voiced any fear of the congressional result in November. Several of them are apprehensive about legislative and courthouse Democratic candidate in the close counties.

CROSS-VOTING — Traditional party lines have been more tightly drawn in the mountains than in the piedmont counties. With rare exceptions there has been no Republican "problem" in the east. In recent years there has been noticeable trends toward cross-voting all over the state. In what used to be recognized as close, or almost certain Republican counties, late elections have shown preponderant Democratic majorities for State and county offices, while an increasing number of counties have given majorities to Republican candidates for Congress and President. This being a presidential year Democratic leaders frankly admit some concern about this trend. The worry is enhanced by the belief that some instances Republican money is available to local Democratic candidates—if they will encourage support for the national Republican ticket.

In counties where the party margin is narrow local Republican candidates sometimes have the benefit of big national money. That is what bothers the Democrats in the 12th congressional district as they go into the general election campaign.

As a candidate for Congress in the Democratic primary two years ago Heinz Rollman reported spending more money to get the nomination than had ever been spent by any other North Carolina candidate. When he failed to get the nomination, he changed his party registration, entered the primary and won the Republican nomination this year, for both the short and long terms in Congress. The short term is of little importance, as Rollman has pointed out in his efforts to withdraw as a candidate.

Democrats want the special election held, and cite mandatory law for it, because they think it will afford campaign material for the regular November election. For these reasons the June 25th primary and special congressional election in the 12th district may give the nomination area more than usual prestige in influencing State Government.

It's That Deliberate Secrecy We Mistrust

On top of the questions raised about the lack of accounting for expenses of members of Congress in conducting committee business has come the story of the secret pool to be constructed for the pleasure of Senators in the basement of the old Senate Office Building.

So far there has been no explanation of why the approval for funds for the pool construction was kept a closely guarded secret by the Senate. For lack of any other explanation, it must be assumed the matter was handled as it was in an effort to keep the public from knowing the tax funds were being spent in such a manner.

The question again arises, why did members of the Senate seek to hide the expenditure? Why were they not willing for the public to know they planned to spend tax money for this purpose?

Compared with federal government expenditures, the money earmarked secretly for the white tile pool will not amount to a drop in the bucket. Nevertheless, the fact that it was a matter carefully shielded from public knowledge should be a matter of concern to all the citizens of the country.

How many other projects of similar nature have been accomplished with tax funds that the public was not aware of, and how much tax money has been spent in this manner?

Citizens throughout the country look to their elected representatives in the House and Senate to keep the channels of information open in public matters and to prevent the waste of tax funds in every area of government. When matters such as the white tile pool crop up, it cannot help but shake the confidence of the people in those who are primarily responsible for preventing waste.

Flexible Policy As To Money

By RALPH ROBEY
FOR weeks it has been evident that the Federal Reserve System was keeping the commercial banks under a little less restraint in the making of loans. This now has been confirmed by a reduction in the reserve discount rate, which is the charge made by the Reserve System for loans to its member commercial banks.

All the Federal Reserve System can do in the way of controlling the lending policies of its member banks, aside from seeing that they comply with the law, is to increase or decrease the reserves of the member banks. Since every bank is required by law to maintain a reserve of a designated percentage of its deposits, this item of control is quite effective.

There are three methods by which the Reserve banks can exercise an effective influence upon member bank reserves. First is to change the reserve requirements themselves. There is both an upper and a lower limit to what the reserves must be, but within these limits the Reserve Board may set any figure it believes wise. This power is relatively seldom used because it is of massive proportions.

Secondly, the reserve position of member banks may be changed by the purchase or sale of Treasury obligations by the Reserve banks. This is what is known as open market operations, and is the method used for day-by-day and week-by-week control.

Finally, the Reserve banks may change their discount rates. This does not change the volume of reserves but it does change the cost at which reserves may be obtained by borrowing from the Reserve banks, and it is important as a reflection of the attitude of the Reserve Board on the credit and business outlook.

At all times there are some banks which have more reserves than are required and other banks which are rediscounting in order to meet the reserve requirement. The degree of pressure exerted by the Federal Reserve System upon the lending policies of the commercial banks is determined by the difference between the excess reserves and the deficient reserves. This difference may be either plus or minus, but when the Reserve banks are exerting restraint the deficient reserves necessarily exceed the excess reserves.

The evidence of an easier credit policy over the past several months is as follows: (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
THE BEST TIME IS NOW

In seventeenth century Britain, when war had bitterly divided the people, there was built the chapel of Staunton Harold in Leicestershire. The dedication inscription is as follows: "In the year 1653 when all things were throughout ye nation either demolished or profaned, Sir Robert Shirley, Barronet, founded this church; whose singular praise it is to have done the best things in ye worst times, and hoped them in the most calamitous."

The Apostle Paul writing to the Romans declares that "tribulation worketh steadfastness; and steadfastness, approval; and approval, hope; and hope, patience; and patience, the love of God."

has been shed abroad in our hearts." Sir Robert Shirley was like the great Apostle—in the worst times he attempted to do the best of things "and hoped them in times most calamitous."

Certainly the time to do good things would appear to be a season in which people appreciate the value of good things. Why cast pearls before swine? But the Apostle Paul preached the gospel in an age when all he got for his troubles were blows, curses, and finally death. And Sir Robert Shirley when all things throughout England were "either demolished or profaned" built a chapel. It remains to this day a temple to the glory of God and a monument to a man who hoped for better things in times "most calamitous."

Unfair Tax Distinctions?

Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Tax exemption is a privilege granted organizations which raise funds for charity, education and similar unprofitable enterprises. (The preferred usage is "non-profit" which begs the question.) The concept is that the income tax is collected on money profits, spiritual profits being unmeasurable. At one stage, the mere assertion of intent was sufficient to make an organization or a Foundation tax exempt. Today the Treasury is more strict, requiring evidence that the association exists for a good purpose and not to give jobs to its organizers and trustees who evade the tax by taking the profits as salaries and expenses. Furthermore, it is essential that the evidence be clear that the organization, whatever its stated purpose, has not been established as an income tax evasion gimmick, as is so often the case. When a Foundation comes into existence which gives evidence that those in control of it, or a number of them, draw off the funds as salaries for themselves, the Treasury is entitled to investigate the bona fides of the operation.

On the other hand, the Treasury sometimes makes distinctions which are political in nature and therefore unfair. For instance, it seems to be that a sharp political distinction is made when the Committee of One Million Against the Admission of Communist China to the United Nations is refused tax exemption whereas such exemption is granted to the Institute of Pacific Relations.

The Committee of One Million exists to publish educational material in opposition to the admission of Red China into the United Nations. Its officers include a number of distinguished persons. On the other hand, in 1955, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue revoked the tax-exempt privilege of the Institute of Pacific Relations, after hearings before the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, for Communist involvement. On March 31, 1960, the I.P.R.'s tax-exempt privilege was restored. This was done perhaps in the Spirit of Camp David. Will the privilege be revoked now that Camp David has laid its ghost?

In a word, there seems to be no fixed policy except that the Treasury goes easy on Left Wing organizations and is tough on Right Wing organizations or vice versa which is equally unjust. If this view is correct, it means that the Treasury is using the tax-exempt privilege as a political weapon to strengthen organizations which a current administration favors or to weaken and even eliminate organizations which are not favored.

A tax-exempt organization ought to be defined as a charitable or educational body which earns no profit and none of whose officers and directors (except an executive or administrator) draws a salary or an expense account. When, for instance, a Foundation consists of a few front names but all its other officers draw salaries, have expense accounts, or in any other way enjoy a monetary profit because of its existence, then it requires investigation. Also if money is raised for one purpose and expended for another, the Foundation is a fraud. This obviously is happening to a large number of Foundations, the purposes of which are perverted by the hired staff. The front-runner trustees are usually "great names" busy on a hundred fronts and attending to few.

Heretofore every effort by Congress to investigate Foundations and tax exemptions has failed largely because the very rich and influential Foundations have succeeded in bringing pressure against investigation. (Continued on page 5)

Other Editors Saying... Suppressing Scandal

(The Washington Post)

Without any debate—indeed, without any discussion or even explanation—the House of Representatives on Monday adopted an amendment offered by Mr. McMillan to a bill already passed by the Senate amending the law relating to indecent publications in the District of Columbia.

However good its intentions, the amendment would be hard to match for maladroitness. The District has long had in its code a provision for punishment of anyone who "sells, or offers to sell, or give away . . . any obscene, lewd, or indecent book, pamphlet, drawing," etc. The terms used in this statute are terms of art to lawyers; "obscene," "lewd," and "indecent" while of uncertain meaning, have been given a degree of definiteness through judicial interpretation. The McMillan proposal employs very different terms, however. It would punish anyone "shall engage in the business of editing, publishing or disseminating any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or any printed paper devoted mainly to the publication of scandals, whores, lechery, assignments, intrigues between men and women, and immoral conduct of persons, or shall knowingly have in his possession for sale . . . or shall give away such newspaper, pamphlet, magazine or printed matter."

Here is a catalogue of riddles. What is covered, for instance, by prohibition of the "publication of scandals"? Is the padding of expense accounts by Congressmen a scandal? What is covered by the intriguing phrase "intrigue between men and women"? A great deal of what is reported in any newspaper—a great deal of life—involves "intrigue between men and women." Unhappily, a great deal of what goes on in any city, and of what must be reported in any newspaper commanding the confidence of the public, involves "immoral conduct."

It is all very well to say, as proponents of this legislation will no doubt say in great good faith, that the McMillan proposal is not aimed at reputable publications but seeks to strike only at disreputable purveyors of pornography. The plain truth is, however, that it affords another example of a current tendency to deal with social ills—juvenile delinquency, for instance—by giving the police and the public prosecutors unlimited discretion. This is simply not consonant with a government of laws.

In 1948, the Supreme Court in Winters vs. New York struck down an unconstitutional New York statute making it a misdemeanor to publish, sell or give away "any book, pamphlet, magazine, newspaper or other printed paper devoted to the publication, and principally made up of criminal news, police reports, or accounts of criminal deeds, or pictures, or stories of deeds of bloodshed, lust or crime. . . ." The Court said this was so vague as to violate the First and Fourteenth Amendments. We think the same must be said of the McMillan proposal. The sloppiness of its language is shocking. It is even more shocking that the House should have passed the amendment with a whoop and a holler and not a single dissenting vote. The Senate should stop it.

'Most Overpromised Setback'

By ELMER ROESSNER

"The recession of 1961" has been called "the most overpromised setback of the century." Certainly, many economists, forecasters and soothsayers are talking about it as if it were as certain as the outcome of the Johnson-Patterson fight.

One investment service is advising subscribers, "We think it would be prudent to prepare for a business recession in 1961." Other commentators have remarked on the failure of the "Surging Sixties" to start surging.

There are six faults to predictions for a slump in '61:

1. The economy is basically sound.
2. Consumer buying is holding up and is showing no sign of future slackening.
3. Personal income is continuing to rise.
4. The gross national product has already topped the half-trillion-dollar rate.
5. The rise in defense spending will keep on as long as Russian intransigence does, adding to both income and national production.

6. Predictions themselves will require the government to have remedies at hand if a slump starts.

Of course, even with all those assets, there can be minor ups and downs in the last half of this year and into 1961. But the dips cannot be great as long as those six factors prevail.

OTHER FORECASTS

Here are more peeks into the future:
A good auto year. However, it will be irregular. There was a dip in the first three months, but sales rose in April and in May hit the highest mark for that month since 1955. June sales seem to be doing even better so far, and orders will probably be good through most of the summer.
However, they will dip in early fall if not in late summer due to the confusion manufacturers themselves are stirring up. If "leaked" rumors about new cars in the 1961 line continue to increase as they have in recent weeks, many prospects will begin to hold off in late summer to see what these changes amount to.

Bikinis. Orders this spring show that retailers in almost all sections of the country expect a brisk demand for bikini suits. This indicates their local public opinion surveys show that the girls want them more than conservative elements want to outlaw them.

PLASTIC PIPE

Rise in plastic pipe sales. Greater possibilities for high-density plastic piping are increasing sales prospects this year. While most uses are industrial, several manufacturers are working to develop plastics that will be cheaper and will outwear present metal plumbing.
Less inflation. Some observers are already predicting deflation, and these have been given color by the drop in in-

Labor Costs' Effect

By ROGER BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass. — Dow-Jones Industrial Stock Average has declined from a high of 685 on January 5, 1960 to under 600, from which it is just rebounding. Manufacturers are wondering why commodity prices have remained high. It not only costs retailers more to sell small items, but the cost of packages and displays is greater. Supermarkets present a fine show which appeals to consumers, but in reality their prices are not as low as is generally supposed.

SUPPLIES ADEQUATE

This over-all price stability does not apply to all commodity quotations. We have seen widespread declines in wholesale prices for foodstuffs; and farmers expect to receive less for 1960 crops.

However, owing to the demand by consumers for small quantities of foodstuffs which they purchase at the supermarkets, retail prices have remained high. It not only costs retailers more to sell small items, but the cost of packages and displays is greater. Supermarkets present a fine show which appeals to consumers, but in reality their prices are not as low as is generally supposed.

In most cases, supplies of raw materials are sufficient or can be increased rapidly if prices should rise. Therefore, changes in most commodity prices may be downward rather than upward for a while. An analysis of price trends should consider foreign demand and supply also. Not only will competition become more severe within this country, but foreign imports are crowding us more and more.

When I was in Europe recently, I was astounded at the low prices which are being paid there to labor. Japan does not produce many basic commodities, but confines her exports to manufactured products. Wages are very low in Japan. Reports from China vary, but presumably wages there are even lower than in Japan. If I can get a visa, I will visit China and get the facts about China's wages and her exports which now go largely to Russia.

OUTLOOK FOR COPPER AND OIL

Copper production in the U.S. is affected by gradually rising wages; hence the price of copper should be well maintained. Copper producers are, however, handicapped by the fact that the metal has a long life; some of that now being used in the electronics industry once existed in the form of trolley wires or our grandmothers' kettles.

In the case of oil, gasoline, and other petroleum products, the effect of "fallout" when these are used up they are totally consumed. However, the world now faces a surplus of oil. Not only have the Arab States large supplies which they are anxious to sell, but the production of the Sahara Desert must be considered. France is very much interested in this Sahara production. President De Gaulle is striving for self-sufficiency in order to regain world status. EXCEPTIONS TO THE ABOVE

The main bullish argument for oil is that Nasser, President of Egypt, may succeed in becoming the "sales manager" for all the Arab countries and stop them from cutting prices or giving special favors.

I have recently made studies on the effect "fallout" might have on commodity prices in case of World War III. I asked various authorities whether farmers would be obliged to buy more or less fertilizer to offset the radioactivity which might be absorbed by surface crops. In case of World War III, our government might not allow the planting of new crops. Milk, beef, and other products from livestock which feed on grass would be severely affected if contaminated by unfavorable fallout winds. I, however, am confidentially informed that this contamination could be offset by the free use of water and lime. The price of lime has not varied much in the past three years, but has been around $10 per ton. O.B. quarry. In short, I believe that downward pressure will continue in most industrial commodities, especially the metals and oils, and in farm and other commodities where large surpluses exist; but lime may be an exception.

Lucille Ball Joins Bob Hope In Movie

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Lucille Ball is breaking in her first new leading man in nine years. Fellow from Cleveland named Bob Hope.

The famed pair is making a movie—the real, big-screen kind for theaters, not the living room box. The provocative title is "The Facts of Life."

The facts of Lucille's life are that she is as happy as could be expected, that she is plunging into work following her marital and professional divorce from Desi Arnaz.

We shared lunch in her dressing room at the Desilu-Cahuenga lot, where she tolled her years in "I Love Lucy." She and Desi still own the studio, along with two others.

Lucille seemed restrained and contemplative as she talked about the present and future. She appeared less willing to glance at the past.

"I love working with Bob," she said. "He's always such fun and such a professional. It's sounds funny, but I always feel like a real working with him.

"Doing a feature again after all these years is kind of hard. I had forgotten what pains they take to make movies.

"Another thing I had forgotten is how much time they take with your personal appearance. In TV, it didn't matter so much how I looked, so I never worried about it. But with the big screen, they're very careful. I guess it wouldn't hurt me to look good for a change."

She looks very good. She has taken off several pounds and seems as pretty and perky as in her glamor days at MGM.

As soon as she finishes the film in mid-summer, she takes off for New York to begin work on a stage musical, "Wildcat."

"It's the story of a gal who works in the oilfields in the 1920s," she said.

"We'll open in New York around Thanksgiving. If it's a hit, I'll stay in it a year and a half. It's a rough role, with lots of rough stuff and signing and some dancing. I'm not worried that it will be too strenuous. I always wanted to be a stage actress and I never made it because I always had contracts in Hollywood. Now I can realize my ambition."

Is all this work to fill the void left in her personal life?

"No," she replied. "I was all set to do the show before it happened; I had signed the contracts and enrolled the kids in school in New York. No, it's not a substitute. Nothing could substitute for what has been lost."

Annul Bergman's Proxy Marriage

ROME (AP)—An Italian court has granted Ingrid Bergman and Roberto Rossellini an annulment of their Mexican proxy marriage.

The court's opinion, filed by Judge Orlando Falco, was made public today by one of the attorneys involved in the case.

The ruling paves the way for the Italian film director to marry Sonali Das Gupta, the wife of an Indian movie man who left her husband for Rossellini, bore the Italian a daughter and now is in Italy with him.

Miss Bergman did not contest Rossellini's suit for the annulment. Now 42, she is married to Swedish impresario Lars Schmidt, and they live outside Paris.

Still before the Rome courts is a case to settle final custody of Miss Bergman's three children by Rossellini, 53. The actress has temporary custody of them.

Furthermore, many businesses would fall apart if the Foundations which hold their stock were subjected to too much scrutiny. The income tax and the inheritance tax do mischief to family businesses and to smaller enterprises. The only way to keep such businesses intact is to leave their stock to a non-profit making Foundation, which uses the money for good causes if it can find any. The heirs of the founder are usually kept on, working for a substantial salary, on which, of course, they pay income taxes.

The income and inheritance taxes of this country tend toward monopoly. The only way honestly to meet the current tax requirements and to keep some money is to sell out and make a capital gain. Sociologically, this is very bad because it tends to strengthen monopolistic practices. The Department of Justice attempts to balk this process by anti-trust procedures but it has not been successful. One significant result has been the managerial seizure of authority.

Constitution Is Drawn For Turks

ANKARA, Turkey (AP)—A committee of 38 military leaders who overthrew strongman Premier Adnan Menderes has drawn up a provisional constitution giving it supreme power in Turkey.

Gen. Cemal Gursel and his military associates said they would remain in authority until a new National Assembly can be elected. No election date was mentioned.

Gursel is now provisional president and premier. The constitution promised a show trial of Menderes, former President Celal Bayar and other leaders of the ousted government.

It said an investigation committee has been named to determine their responsibility "for crimes which may have been committed against the state."

It also provided for a "high justice court" to try Menderes, Bayar, former government members and former members of the Assembly. It said the court would be made up of a president, eight active and six "reserve" members, to be selected by the ruling cabinet.

"Sentences handed down by the high court of justice cannot be appealed," the constitution said, "only execution of death sentences is subject to confirmation of the national unity committee."

Robey ...

es. For a while this figure was held at about $400 million, then through open market operations the figure was reduced to around $200 million, and for the past few weeks the figure has approximated zero.

In the face of this, and in view of the fact that open market rates of interest have been declining, it was natural for the rediscout rate to be reduced from 4 to 3 1/2 percent. This reduction does not indicate that the Reserve System believes we are on the verge of a business decline. All it indicates is that in the judgment of Reserve authorities the forces of inflation are appreciably less strong than they were a few months ago, that we are not faced with a boom, and that the demand for bank credit will not become excessive.

This is very different from what is known as an easy money policy. The Federal Reserve is not attempting to force interest rates downward; it is merely recognizing the change which has taken place in the open market in the demand for and supply of funds. This is, in other words, an example of flexible monetary policy—and that is the best policy that any nation can have.

Truman Warns Of Weak Entry

NEW YORK (AP)—Former President Harry S. Truman says the nation's big-city press is trying to nominate the Democrats' weakest candidate for the presidency.

He made the statement on a television show Sunday but didn't say which candidate he had in mind. His own favorite is fellow Missourian Sen. Stuart Symington.

A student moderator asked Truman on ABC-TV's "College News Conference": "Do you mean that the metropolitan press is making an effort to nominate the Democrats' weakest candidate?"

"That's exactly what they're up to," said Truman.

When moderator Ruth Hagy asked, "Whom do you have in mind?" Truman didn't answer, but the student put in: "Sen. Kennedy."

Sunday's show was taped here Saturday. At the time it was broadcast Truman was in East Lansing, Mich., for a commencement address at Michigan State University.

Truman departed from a prepared speech there to urge prayers for the safe return of President Eisenhower from his Far Eastern trip.

I may not agree with him politically," said Truman, and I reserve the right to say whether he is doing his work well or badly. But I hope every one of you will pray for his safe return from his trip because if he thinks it is necessary it must be."

President To Be Visiting Only Former Colony Of The U.S.

By JIM BECKER

MANILA (AP)—The Philippines, where President Eisenhower will begin his Asian tour Tuesday, is a fascinating blend of Latin America and the Orient, in a shiny American dress.

It is the only former colony the United States has. The American flag flew over the Philippines for 45 years. Independence came in 1946.

The economic, military and social ties still are very close. The Spanish were here for almost 400 years before the Americans came.

"We sometimes forget we are a part of Asia—but we are geographically and mentally," insists a Filipino leader.

Geographically the Philippines certainly is part of Asia—an hour's jet flight from Red China, next door neighbor to Chiang Kai-shek's Formosa and Sukarno's neutralist Indonesia.

The country stretches a thousand miles from north to south, with the southern tip only a few degrees above the Equator. It has 7,000 islands, 1,000 inhabited.

The weather comes in two sizes—hot and dry, for about seven months of the year, and hot and rainy for the rest.

Because of its Western ways, the new nation has been called a logical bridge between its Western past and its Eastern neighbors.

Roman Catholicism is the religion of almost all the 24 million Filipinos. Rice is the basic food. The people are mostly brown-skinned and of Malayan stock. Asians. There is a generous mixture of Chinese, Spanish and American blood.

In the countryside, life is lazy, tropical and centered around the family farm or sugar plantation. There is a Latin-American pace.

In Manila, a city of two million, men scurry about in the cosmopolitan manner. The women are carefully groomed and often breathtakingly beautiful.

The Philippines is staunchly pro-American. The two major political parties sometimes seem bent on outdoing each other in calling for close bonds with the United States.

The Communist party, which financed and backed a rebellion here in postwar years, is beaten and outlawed.

American ways are widely imitated, especially among the younger folk. More people speak English fluently—about 50 percent—than the official national language, Tagalog. Spanish has about died out as a language, although the Spanish ways in courtship and courtesy remain.

American motion pictures draw big audiences, and the radio and TV stations carry American programs. The major newspapers are printed in English. The national drink is cola, pressed hard by beer.

Unemployment and underemployment haunt the Philippine economy. It has made some advances since the war devastated the nation physically and economically, but is still lagging behind that of Japan and some other Asian nations.

Some Filipinos say that the United States is rewarding its former enemy, Japan, and neutral nations such as India with large amounts of aid and taking its firm friend, the Philippines, for granted. There is no American aid program of any size operating in the Philippines.

Nevertheless, most Filipinos are firmly convinced that the United States will bail them out if things get too bad.

Three Workshops At ECC Slated In The Humanities

Three workshops in the field of the humanities will be offered at East Carolina College during the summer session. Topics and dates are: Moral and Modern Man, June 20-27; The Bible and Its Background, June 27-July 8; and Developing a Philosophy of Life, July 14-27.

Dr. Cleveland J. Bradner, Jr., director of religious activities at the college, will act as director of each of the courses of study.

A graduate of Atlantic Christian College in Wilson, Dr. Bradner holds the B.D. degree from the University of Chicago and the M.A. and Ph. D. degrees from Columbia University. He has been a member of the East Carolina faculty since 1957 and, in addition to his other duties, has been instructor of several of televised courses of study presented by the college over Channel 7.

Each of the workshops to be offered this summer will offer three quarter-hours of college credit. Those who do not wish credit may attend as auditors. Meetings for each of the workshops will be held Monday through Friday in Room 214, Joyner Library.

Moral and Modern Man, cataloged as Humanities 90, is designed, Dr. Bradner states, to give a better understanding of the many problems that arise when modern man asks himself "What ought I to do?" Emphasis will be placed on Christian attitudes toward morals and modern man. Hours of meetings are 3 to 6 p.m.

The Bible and Its Background, Humanities 50, will be presented especially for public school and Sunday School teachers, church workers, ministers, and students who meet problems arising out of the direct or indirect use of the Bible in their lives and work. The hours of meeting are 9 a.m. to noon.

Developing a Philosophy of Life, Humanities 150, will include discussion and lectures through which those who attend will be introduced to the various approaches modern man has more successfully made in the development of a philosophy of life. The hours of meetings are 3 to 6 p.m.

Superstition Of The Albatross Rears Its Head

By ANTHONY WHITE
LONDON (AP) — There's a legend among seafaring men that it's unlucky to fool around with an albatross, said to be the soaring spirit of dead sailors.

Crewmen of the British freighter Calpean Star believe the legend — after what happened to their ship.

The sailors flew home from Montevideo, Uruguay, Friday night. They left the Calpean Star behind, stranded and derelict.

The Calpean Star's last voyage was as a transport with the Norwegian Antarctic whaling fleet.

But before that it had gone on a voyage to bring back animals for a zoo in Germany.

One of the creatures was an albatross.

In Liverpool, someone fed the bird a sausage. The albatross died. "After that the Calpean Star was a hoodoo vessel," said Henry Kennedy, 49-year-old greaser. "The death of the albatross put a jinx on it."

The freighter began its fateful last voyage in August last year.

First the generators failed. Diesel oil seeped into the water supply.

The main engine compressor broke.

The ship drifted for days—like the ship of the Ancient Mariner, who shot an albatross with his crossbow, after which he, the ship and all the crew were cursed.

In the Antarctic, the Calpean Star damaged a rudder.

It was towed to Montevideo, and in the harbor it went aground.

As the old ship lay aground, an explosion rent its engine room.

It was abandoned.

Found floating in the harbor was the body of one of the crewmen, William Rogan, 61. The explosion hadn't killed him. What had? The returning seamen didn't know.

Even after they had left the ship, the men said, the curse of the albatross stayed with them. Their homeward bound airplane damaged its undercarriage landing at Rio de Janeiro.

First Shut-Ins Day Program Held By Moose Lodge

FIRST ANNUAL SHUT-IN DAY . . . local Moose Lodge feted area shut-ins yesterday at special occasion which may become an annual lodge project.

A group of nearly 50 attended the First Annual Shut-In Day Dinner at the local Moose Lodge yesterday afternoon.

A total of 13 area invalids, of 78 invited, were able to attend the special event sponsored by the local lodge to eat a turkey dinner with all the trimmings.

Lodge members transported the guests of honor to the dinner that began at 12:30 in the lodge auditorium. Several of the guests were in wheel chairs.

Both expressed appreciation to the lodge for beginning such an opportunity for the area's shut-ins. They expressed the desire to help in expanding the program for next year to include as many guests as possible.

M.H. Bynum and James Harris, co-chairmen of the dinner, were disappointed that more guests could not attend but were optimistic that the affair's success would grow each year. Harris said, "It's important to get the assistance of other local organizations may be solicited next year."

Members of the local Women of the Moose chapter, served the dinner.

Eli Bloom, lodge trustee, was master of ceremonies for the special dinner.

Airline Goes To Court Over Wildcat Strike

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Eastern Air Lines goes into federal court today in the hope of getting its planes in the air again after a wildcat strike that has idled an estimated 50 per cent of the big carrier's fleet.

Eastern wants a permanent injunction to replace a temporary injunction against the walkoff. And some pilots may face contempt of court proceedings for failing to heed the temporary injunction, issued by U.S. District Court Judge Joseph P. Lieb last Tuesday after pilots objected to a Federal Aviation Agency inspector sitting directly behind the captain on jet flights.

The pilots claim this practice is unsafe. They say it interferes with copilot performing his duties.

No flights have left Miami since pilots began their walkout at midnight Friday. Normally Eastern operates 118 flights daily into and out of Miami, affecting an estimated 9,400 passengers.

Flight attendants and engineers reported for work as usual, but pilots did not show up. All scheduled EAL flights out of Idlewild Airport in New York Sunday night were canceled. LaGuardia and Newark, N.J. airports reported some flights, but a spokesman said operations were sharply curtailed at Boston and Detroit.

Eastern said it is operating most of the regularly scheduled flights between New York, Houston and Atlanta. It called the pilots' action illegal but the pilots said it was a temporary work stoppage.

Malcolm A. MacIntyre, president of Eastern, said the line will continue operating as long as possible with pilots who report for work, but added "all services may eventually cease" unless the striking pilots return.

Clarence Sayen, president of the Air Line Pilots Assn., said in Chicago he had written individual letters to EAL pilots instructing them to comply with the federal court order issued last Tuesday.

Recruit Prison Guards In Area

Immediate job openings for prison guards in this vicinity were announced today by W.B. Dillingham, manager of the Employment Security Commission local office.

The local office manager said the drive to recruit guards in this area is part of an effort taking place all over the State to fill 130 new guard positions in the Prison Department. The new guards will begin work on July 1 in 51 Prison units scattered over the State.

After passing initial screening, applicants will be interviewed on June 21 by a committee from the Prison Department. These interviews will take place at ESC offices in Elizabeth City, Greenville, Wilmington, Wilson, Durham, Fayetteville, Greensboro, Asheville, Winston-Salem, Albemarle, North Wilkesboro, Lincolnton, Hendersonville and Asheville.

Salaries for the jobs begin at $3,132 and rise to a maximum of $3,996 annually.

The ESC manager said all applicants should be between the ages of 21 and 45, in good physical shape, with at least an eighth grade education (high school preferred), and have no police record of arrests. All applicants will be required by the Prison Department to pass a short series of screening tests to be administered by the ESC, the manager said.

Chile Continues To Feel Tremors

SANTAGO, Chile (AP)—Earth tremors continued to plague quake-battered Valdivia, in southern Chile, over the weekend.

Six earth shocks were reported Sunday. The strongest, late in the afternoon, demolished several houses already damaged by earlier quakes.

Torrential rains and high winds forced suspension of evacuation from Valdivia of women and children, being removed because of the danger of floods.

Woman Tried To Drink Evidence

Launa Brown, Negro, of 204 Blount Street, Ayden, was arrested on charges of possession of non-tax-paid whiskey for the purpose of sale by Pitt ABC officers and Ayden Police, even after she allegedly tried to drink up all the evidence.

ABC Enforcement Chief J. M. Ward gave this account of the happenings: The Brown woman refused to admit officers and ran into the kitchen where the window was looking through the window. She took up a tea pot full of liquor and tried to drink the evidence before officers forced their way into the dwelling.

The woman failed in her attempt and the raiders retrieved a small amount of non-taxed booze. She was recognized to appear in the Ayden Recorder's court to answer the charge today.

A warrant was issued for a second Negro, Charlie Brown, 56 of Route 1, Ayden by ABC enforcement charging him with possession of non-tax-paid whiskey for the purpose of sale.

According to the officers, three pints of illegal whiskey was found in his home west of Ayden when the group searched the dwelling.

Oscar Cherry, 56-year-old Negro of 521 Sheppard St. also fell victim to ABC men over the weekend when three pints of whiskey were allegedly found in a trap in the wall of his dwelling.

Charged with possessing non-taxed whiskey for the purpose of sale, he was placed under a $300 bond for his appearance in Greenville Recorder's Court June 20.

ABC officers taking part in the arrests included Ward, H. B. Lilley and Walter Taylor.

Tar Heel State Still Has Talent

The first All-Star game is now history and the West has gone one-up in the series. It was a poor crowd that turned out for the Friday night game but those that did come were not the least bit bored.

It was baseball with all of its old-fashioned play—homers, clutch pitching, alert base running, and stolen bases. Forty young boys displayed enough skill on Friday night to make the small crowd aware that baseball talent in the Tar Heel state is far from being on the strict decline that many feel it is.

The fact that slightly less than 1,000 showed up for the game may give reason for officials to choose another site next summer. Yet, the coaches and players were overwhelmed with the facilities that were made available to them.

Serves As Public Relations Agent

The game, no doubt, served as an ideal public relations endeavor for East Carolina College. It gave the 40 stars an opportunity of seeing the campus and the two head coaches were caught off guard in their estimations of the college.

For Coach Glenn Bunning of the East, it was his first visit to ECC and he stated that he had no idea the college was the size that it is. Coach Fred Withers was making his first visit also and was surprised with the resources of the college.

Future Site Is Uncertain

Jack Sink, president of the High School Baseball Coaches Association, said the future site of the All-Star games was still an uncertainty. The first reaction of the coaches, according to Sink, was to shift the site of the game each year. Yet, it was felt that if the game received a good response in a city and had a worthwhile project behind it, such as the Lions Club in Greenville, the game might remain permanently in one place.

There was also speculation on the part of the visiting coaches that Greensboro might try to add the baseball All-Star game to its fall agenda, joining the football and basketball games.

The coaches here over the weekend leaned toward a June game instead of August, reasoning that the boys had just completed high school play and would be more interested in playing than in the fall when they might be out of shape and bothered with future plans for college.

Coaches Impressed With Interest

Sink and the two respective head coaches of the All-Star teams were deeply impressed with the enthusiasm showed on the part of the boys participating. Coach Fred Withers noted, "They talk baseball on and off the field..." and referring to a skull practice, "... they listened to everything I had to say and would have been glad to have stayed a couple more hours."

Coach Glenn Bunning, associated with the sport for 23 years at Durham High, remarked "The game is the best thing that has happened for baseball since I have been connected with it."

Jim Rossi, catcher from Asheville, really wanted to play in the game. Wednesday, Jack Sink received a phone call from Rossi telling him that his wife had a baby and he would be late. Sink unsuccessfully tried to talk Rossi out of coming down for the game. He flew in to Rocky Mount on Thursday and hitch-hiked to Greenville from there.

Five boys on the West squad from Greensboro and two on the East from Siler City had to return home Thursday night for graduation but they immediately turned around and raced back to Greenville for the game.

As long as interest such as this exists in the game, it is far from a dying sport.

McArthur Sparks 10-4 Win With Four Hits

AHOSKIE — The Pitt County American Legion nine jumped on Ahoskie starter Tommy Hill and his successor Larry West for ten runs in the first three innings Saturday night to cruise to their second straight win, 10-4.

The Pitt Countians will throw their undefeated record on the line Wednesday night against defending Legion champ and current pace-setter Rocky Mount in Guy Smith Stadium.

Alan McArthur, playing shortstop, triggered the Pitt County win with four hits, including a bases-loaded triple in the second inning. The winners scored six runs in the big second inning.

Billy James helped add icing to the cake in the third with a two-run triple. James later scored on an error to account for the three-run third inning.

After the third inning, West limited the Pitt club to only three hits and held them scoreless. For the second straight time, Pitt coach Bud Phillips got a complete game performance out of his pitching staff. James Braxton of Winterville, a lanky hurler, went the route for the winners and cut the Ahoskie juniors down on six hits.

Spells of wildness by Braxton plus an oversupply of errors kept the Pitt team walking the line most of the night, fighting back attempted rallies of Ahoskie.

Pitt opened the scoring in the first when Castelleo was hit by a pitched ball. Billy James walked and McArthur got his first hit, a single. Castelleo was cut down on the base tracks before scoring but Larry Roberts poked a single, scoring James.

Ahoskie tied it in the first on a walk, a single by West and an error by Jack Foley.

The home club scored two more runs in the fifth and clinaxed the scoring with a single marker in the ninth. McArthur had three singles to go with his triple and scored one run. In his other official appearance in the first three innings, he reached base on an error.

West was the leading hitter for Ahoskie with four hits in five trips, including a double and triple. Parker and Braddy had the only other hits given up by Braxton.

Coach Bud Phillips, well-pleased with the play of his club, started pointed to the Rocky Mount game as the "big one" Wednesday night. Larry Roberts, who has played infield and outfield in the first two games, may get the starting nod against the defending champs.

Shortstop Kroghie Andresen missed the Saturday night game but J. Y. Monk of Farmville made his debut in a Pitt uniform. Monk is slated to be the regular first-sacker.

Bragg Hopeful Of Breaking Record

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Don Bragg decided today to lower his sights temporarily.

"As of now," the big Villanova graduate said, "I will be happy merely to break the world outdoor record (the only one that's officially accepted around the world) for the pole vault."

"I'm still hopeful of getting up to 16 feet, but I'll settle for the record."

The current world mark of 15 feet, 8 1/4 inches is held by Bob Gutowski of the Marine Corps. He set it more than three years ago.

Bragg, for his part, has cleared 15-9 1/2 indoors, but indoor records are not passed on by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, so he still is second best on the books.

Both Bragg and Gutowski cleared 15-3 in the Armed Forces Championships here Saturday. Bragg was awarded first place because he had fewer misses. For Gutowski, who has been having his troubles getting over 15 feet or late, it marked his best performance of the year.

"I was pleased with my performance," said Bragg. "Considering that I hurt my back at Compton (Calif.) last week, it wasn't a bad vault. I had my doubt that I'd be able to compete. I think I'll lay off now until the Olympic tryouts July 1-2."

What about Gutowski?

"I can't figure him out," said West Virginia's Jerry West averaged 29.3 points for 31 games last season. He has been drafted for service with Minneapolis of the National Basketball Assn.

BOBBY THOMAS... won his third Jaycee Golf Tournament yesterday by posting a 76 on the Greenville Golf course. He will lead the four man Greenville team when they compete in the State Jaycee Tournament in Morganton.

Bobby Thomas Wins Jaycee Tournament

Serious-minded Bobby Thomas gained a two-stroke lead on the first nine holes and built on it the rest of the way to become the champion of the local Jaycee Junior Golf Tournament for the third straight year yesterday afternoon.

Thomas had a 39 on the first nine and a 37 on the final nine to finish with a 76.

Dallas Clark, who just recently won the club title, and Chappy Bradner tied for second place with an identical 82. Both had 41 on the first nine and the same on the second nine.

Wally Howard, 12-year-old youth, gained the fourth spot in the tournament with a score of 88. Howard had a 47 on the first nine but came back with a 41 to capture fourth spot.

The above four will enter the State Jaycee Junior Tournament to be held in Morganton during the month of July. The four winners in the state tournament will advance on to the national tournament.

Advancement to the national tournament has eluded Thomas the past two years. Last summer, he finished sixth in the state tournament held in Kinston.

Due to construction work on the front nine holes, the golfers played their 18-hole round on the back nine yesterday afternoon.

Higgins Returns As Sox Manager

BOSTON (AP) — Patient Mike Higgins has accepted a double challenge in returning to the Boston Red Sox as manager.

The heavy-set Texan, who was replaced "with regret" last July 4, agreed to come back as field pilot Sunday from his Dallas home during a phone conversation with owner Tom Yawkey.

Higgins said he was "mighty happy" and added, "If I can help I will be tickled to death to do it. I had been in the field for 30 years and this book work is a little different. I am glad to get back actively with the game."

Higgins, scheduled to join the Red Sox in Detroit tonight or Tuesday morning to open a road trip, takes over a club wallowing after losing 25 of its last 32 starts.

The second challenge is that of battling the percentages. Only one AL manager ever returned to the same club at a later date and enjoyed increased success. Chicago's James Callahan finished seventh in 1963. When he came back in 1912-14 the White Sox came in fourth, fifth and sixth.

The naming of Higgins, who had been retained by the Sox as a "special assistant" operating out of the Southwest, climaxed a series of developments in the Boston front office.

Higgins' successor Billy Jurges, was given several votes of confidence by General Manager Bucky Harris and Yawkey, the first of which came at the end of a 10 game losing streak.

On June 8, the Sox announced Jurges had been given a temporary leave after a doctor's examination.

Two days later Jurges was given his unconditional release. Higgins has the confidence of many of his players and a thorough knowledge of the personnel and farm system.

In eight years managing Sox farm teams, beginning at Class B Roanoke in 1947, Higgins, third base veteran of Boston's last pennant winner (1946), was in the first division seven times and fifth place the other.

Named to succeed Lou Boudreau, Higgins' teams had a 360-330 record in Boston from 1955 until mid-1959. In four full campaigns Boston was fourth twice and third twice. When he was replaced, the Sox had a 31-43 mark while Jurges finished out the season 44-36.

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP)—Thirty-eight anglers in 19 cruisers go to again today in the International Blue Marlin Fishing Tournament off the Outer Banks.

Only one blue marlin was officially entered as the competition began Sunday. Rough waters curtailed activity.

The marlin was landed by William H. Ahtes of Ocean City, Md. Weighing 183 pounds, it measured 8 feet, 8 inches in length and 4 1/2 inches in girth.

Little had a two-stroke lead over Wall going into the final round. Both got on the last green in good shape and Wall left himself two feet from the hole after his first putt. He ran it down and then a t e h e d Little smooth a right breaker that dropped perfectly after taking a 6-inch turn.

Arnold Palmer, the defending champion and favorite here, finished third at 276 after a final round 67 and a third-round 75 which killed his chances.

CHAPTER 21
The cocktail party was in full swing that afternoon when Colonel Hugh North pressed the ivory doorbell button of Suite Seven-D.

An American whom Hugh recognized dimly as a movie producer underling opened the door in response to North's ring and the colonel was greeted by a billowing wave of tobacco smoke, perfume, and the warmth of crowded humanity. He wedged himself down a short entrance foyer and managed to get into the suite's living room, where the jam was only a little less rib-crushing.

He looked about for his host and failed to find him. He did see Lita Naline, more beautiful than ever and even at this distance noticeably drunk. Lex Ross, Anton Carss, Boris Salenikov (and who would have thought that Comrade Boris would have been included on the guest list or would have accepted?), and Mary Holberg.

Mary apparently had gotten over her breakfast-table mad. When she met Hugh's eyes she waved delightedly and detached herself from Lex Ross, bore down on North as fast as the crowd would permit.

"Ah, it is so nice you came, Herr Boyden," she enthused, using North's assumed name. "They told me you'd been asked, but Jack—Herr Wallen—wasn't sure you would come."

"Wallen seems to have gotten quite a crowd together on short notice," North said. He looked around the room again. "And where's our host?"

Mary gestured with her hand toward a closed door. "He's there," she said. "He is a little under the weather and he said he thought it advisable to lie down for a moment. Meanwhile the party goes on." She looked at Hugh's empty hands. "But you have no drink—come, we will fix that."

North and Mary fought their way up to the soaked and spotted cloth-covered table and the G-2 colonel mixed a mild scotch for himself, gave the German girl the double martini she requested.

"You have forgiven me?" the girl asked.

"Forgive you? Oh, consider it forgotten—and I'm not a damned cop, you know."

"I know," Mary looked down at her glass and sighed. "It was that I am so—so little tempered in the mornings, Charles. Ah, so we're not Charles, are we? 'I should never see anyone before now.'"

"Well, for gosh sake, look who's here!" caroled a soprano voice in North's ear. "Did you bring that cute little old man with you, the one I rescued last night?"

The G-2 colonel turned to greet Lita Naline. Lita Naline who obviously had had a head start on everybody else here.

"Where is he?" Lita demanded, looking blindly around the room. "Where's that cute little old man I rescued?"

"You mean Mr. Barrows?" North asked, using Hans Bracht's pseudonym. "Doesn't look like he could make it."

"What's his room number?" Lita asked. "Give 'm a call; invite 'm personally."

Anton Carss, short, bulgy, his dark face creased by a soft tolerant smile, was suddenly at Lita's elbow. "He'll probably be here later, darling," he said quietly.

"Give 'm a call," Lita said, and lurched away. Carss took North a tilted-eyebrow look, shrugged his dumpy shoulders in a silent plea for understanding, and trailed after the star of Tiger Time!

Hugh turned back to Mary Holberg. The German "pianist" was looking after Naline and Carss and for the first time the colonel saw a hardness in those blue eyes, a cold calculation that vanished as the girl felt Hugh's glance upon her and looked up to meet it.

"Those jewels; did you notice them?" she asked North.

Hugh nodded. "Speaking of jewels, I've admired your ring so much, Miss Holberg."

The girl held up the emerald on her knuckle, wriggled her finger to make it give off green fire. "Is it not an excellent imitation?" she asked with a laugh.

"Our German scientists are unexcelled at ersatz—they had to learn to be during the war, you know."

"Oh? I never would have guessed it wasn't real." And it is, sister, it is!

"Nein, I bought it in West Berlin for a few marks, but it is worth far less than the smallest diamond in Miss Naline's cheap bracelet." She heaved a sigh and walked away.

It was about time he was getting out of here, the colonel told himself. His only interest in making this party had been the possibility that John Wallen might volunteer something about his possible connection with Tao Mu-ong.

He went back to the bar, tipped a light scotch into his glass, and added ice and soda. He was turning away when Lex Ross sidled up to him. "Say," he murmured, "I understand Wallen called you up and asked you what I said to you."

Hugh nodded. "Did you tell him?"

"No," North said. "I didn't want to get mixed up in any personal feud between you two. Anyway, I'm not interested in scandal about somebody's wife."

Ross looked at him, lowered his voice another notch. "You're interested in Tao Mu-ong, all right," he muttered grimly. "You're interested in everything about Dr. Bracht."

"Ah, yes," Hugh smiled. "That's right, you did say something about this—Kayo Mung—isn't it?—being the wife of this guy Bracht."

Ross's face darkened. "Damn it," he growled, "when are you going to admit that's Hans Bracht you're with? I tell you I want to help you."

North fired one round into the darkness. "Look, you ask so many questions perhaps you'll answer one for me. Who was Walter Wells?"

Jack Wallen's suggestion that the colonel put this question to Ross produced results.

"So that's it," the actor said in barely a whisper. "I should have guessed. But that was a long time ago. I—I thought I'd made up for that. I was told you fellows wouldn't hold that against me."

North waited. Ross looked about him and then burst into a smothered, impassioned protest. "I made a mistake, sure, but do I have to have it hung around my neck all my life? I didn't know they were—well, yes, I guess I did toward the end, but as soon as I found out I quit, didn't I? I told you fellows everything I knew, didn't I? You've got to remember that this was when being a pinko was the fashionable thing to do. Hell, most of us went into the damned thing just to go along with the crowd."

"And Walter Wells was your Communist party name, uh?" Colonel North asked.

Lex stared at him. "Of course—you knew that, didn't you?"

Hugh shook his head, his smile in place. "To be honest, no. Somebody just told me to ask you that question, that's all."

The graying actor turned a black glare toward the closed bedroom door.

"That bum Wallen, wasn't it?" he grated. "Someday I'm going to kill that guy, I swear."

"Whoa," Hughes counseled. "Don't talk like that."

"Well, I will! Who does he think he is, smearing anybody? Look up his record, Boyden. Oh, you'll find plenty there. He's a bigger Red than I ever thought of being and he spreads stuff about me, does he? He's not going to get away with it this time!"

"His sightless eyes stared at the ceiling, his arms were outflung, fingers curled as though he had made a final grasp at life and had missed. . . the story continues tomorrow."

Season Of Peril For Middle-Aged

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—It takes a lot of ingenuity to survive summer—in middle age.

When you're a barefoot boy with cheeks of tan, summer is a golden time in a golden prime, ripe with promise and full of childhood ecstasies.

School is out, woodlands beckon and there's the fresh thrill of suffing newly-freed toes in the dust, of dropping a squirming worm into a pebbly brook and catching something—even though it isn't much larger than a sardine.

But in middle age summer is a season that has its perils as well as its performances.

If one could lie at ease on a cot in a shady yard and let the mellow warmth thaw his rheumatism, all would be well. Summer would be a perfect blessing. This is hardly possible, however, because of the "summer athlete." The summer athlete is an oversized middle-aged kid who never quite grew up—a perennial boy scout.

Summer isn't for him a time of rest and relaxation while drowsily listening to the murmuring bees. With him it's a time to be up and doing, a time to get red-faced and sweaty.

This nature's boy is a mixture of Tarzan of the apes, Marco Polo, Daniel Boone and an Olympic decathlon performer. No community is complete without at least one of these summer athletes—and no community is happy with one.

"Let's go on a hike!" he bleats. And if you are foolish enough to join him, the next thing you know he has tossed a rock at a wasp nest and you are all running for your lives.

Summer isn't summer to him unless he can wear out himself, and everyone else within sound of his voice, by playing games or doing things many sensible middle-aged people wisely gave up in kindergarten.

Even if you withdraw into the air-conditioned comfort of your own home, turn over the welcome mat, and pull down the venetian blinds, you can't always escape the summer athlete.

For what happens? Exhausted by his hysterical outbursts of boyish energy, the summer athlete often keels over and expires in his own perspiration. It always happens during the sultriest heat spell of the year, and no matter how much you grumble, your wife insists you have to go out into the hot sun to attend his funeral.

Finis the summer athlete. But you don't do much celebrating. Come next June another summer athlete will rise to take his place—and ruin a perfect season.

Rockefeller Insists Nixon Give New Stands On Defense, Foreign Policy

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller says that unless Vice President Richard M. Nixon discloses new positions on defense and foreign policy, "I think it's going to make it very much more difficult for him to be elected."

Without such discussion, Rockefeller says, Nixon would have a harder time carrying New York state.

As he prodded Nixon again to speak out on major issues, Rockefeller still insisted he is not a presidential candidate himself. He said Sunday night he will support Nixon if Nixon wins the Republican nomination.

The New York governor spoke out during two television interview show appearances totaling nearly three hours.

On both programs, he said he thinks Nixon will get the nomination.

Later, asked by newsmen what he thinks of Nixon's chances of election in present circumstances, he said: "You can't tell, because you don't know where he stands."

On the first program, NBC's "Meet the Press," he said he stood by his statement of Dec. 26 that he would not be a candidate for the nomination.

"You will not under any circumstances between now and the convention declare yourself as a candidate for the Republican nomination," said a questioner. "Is that correct?"

"That is correct," Rockefeller answered.

On the second show, WNTA's "Open End," he indicated he had no intention of embarking on an independent political course.

Asked if he could "live with" the Republican party if his opinions did not prevail, the governor replied: "If you're asking if I am loyal to the party, yes, I am."

"The two party system is a very important structure," he observed. "I'm not going off into any splinter operation of any kind."

It was on "Open End" that Nixon made an appearance last month that lasted nearly four hours.

Rockefeller strongly defended his calling on the vice president to discuss major issues before the GOP convention next month.

"I think that I'm doing the greatest service to the Republican party that could be done in raising these questions so the party can have the vitality of discussion," he said.

For himself, he added, he had concluded that he could not speak out on certain issues before the abortive summit conference in Paris last month lest he jeopardize any possible accomplishments there.

"That's over," he said. "I can't do it after the convention because then we've got to present a united front as a party. So this is the time, in my opinion, for all good Republicans to debate and discuss these questions and to hammer out our position."

The governor said the administration has done "a wonderful job," and that President Eisenhower is one of the great leaders.

However, "we've got new problems that have come up," he said. "This whole question of the summit situation, what is happening in Japan today, what is happening in Cuba, what has happened in South Korea and in Turkey... I think what our party wants to know is what are Dick's plans to meet these problems as they emerge."

Rockefeller said he had urged Nixon to express his views last December and thought he would. "I don't think he has, to tell the truth," the governor said.

Nixon insists he has spoken out clearly on major issues.

Yellowstone Tourist Will See Quake Scars

By ROBERT MOORE

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. (AP)—The thousands of vacationists who tour Yellowstone National Park this summer will view a new attraction—the scars left by last August's death-dealing earthquake.

Many of the scars are plainly visible a mile after mile of patched, highway water-covered roads, closed thoroughfares, huge cracks in the earth, mountains split open, gigantic rock slides.

There also are invisible scars, stamped in the hearts of those who lost relatives and friends in the disaster that killed nine persons. Another died later of injuries, and 19 still are missing.

Actually, no one was killed or injured inside the park. The earthquake, comparable in force to that which wrecked San Francisco in 1906, dealt its greatest damage in the park's western shadows.

Yellowstone officials and towns like West Yellowstone that depend on summer tourist trade for survival, have wondered whether the earthquake would cause vacationists to bypass the park.

Advance reservations indicate the answer is no. Already, more sightseers than at this time last year are pouring through this small resort community.

In fact, tourists through Yellowstone this summer may exceed the record 1 1/2 million-plus who visited in 1957. R. L. Latimore, manager of reservations and tours for the Yellowstone Park Co., says prepaid reservations are 16 per cent ahead of last year.

All traffic leading into the park has been restored. Yellowstone appears much as it was before the morning tremor of last Aug. 18.

Most of the geysers scattered throughout the park are normal once more. Old Faithful, still erupts on an average of once every 65 to 67 minutes.

Only one highway—U.S. 287—from West Yellowstone to Ennis, Mont., still is closed, covered by water for five miles.

Some 18,000 persons were in the park when the quake hit and hurred millions of tons of rock into the Madison River canyon, trapping between 100 and 150 below a dam.

Places like West Yellowstone became ghost towns for a few days. Rescue units removed the dead and the injured by helicopter. The bodies of those still missing are believed to be in the huge landslide five miles downstream from the dam. Engineers say the slide will be a permanent place of burial, since further digging has been abandoned.

Nikita's Policy Has A Defender

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet public today avidly discussed a strong defense in Pravda of Premier Nikita Khrushchev's policy and its denunciation of his "leftist" critics.

The article by N. Matkovsky in Sunday's issue was called "The Ideological Weapon of Communism." It said that some persons mistakenly considered such things as meetings between Communist and non-Communist chiefs of state — Khrushchev's much discussed policy of summit diplomacy — a departure from Marxism and Leninism.

"Comrade Khrushchev has said on questions of ideology we have firmly stood and will stand like a rock on the foundations of Marxism and Leninism," Matkovsky said.

Publication of the article and the discussion of it took public note that in the world Communist movement there has been some difference of opinion on policy.

The article said: "The course of socialist development is objective. Assertions of temporary leftists in the international Communist movement that, having taken power in their hands they can proceed immediately to communism, sidestepping definite historical stages of development, are mistaken and incorrect. Such assertions contradict Leninism."

(Although the article identified Khrushchev's opponents only as left-wing Communists, it apparently was aimed at Mao Tse-tung and other Chinese Communist leaders who reportedly have been the chief opponents in the Communist camp of Khrushchev's efforts to ease tensions between the Western and Communist worlds.)

Abdel Is A Spy For All Sides

TUNIS (AP)—Abdel is a spy for all sides. A French agent in Tunisia, then became an Algerian rebel agent in Libya and finally an Egyptian agent in Tunisia.

Meanyville, the prosecutor says, Abdel plotted with dissident elements in Tunisia to kidnap President Habib Bourguiba—and sold the government details of the plot.

At that point Abdel was arrested.

Abdel explained, "In order to make money and enjoy life, I worked for everybody at the same time."

AMA Convenes In Florida Today

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The world's largest gathering of medical men opens today with national health insurance for the aged certain to be a leading topic.

It's the 109th annual convention of the American Medical Assn., with some 14,000 physicians attending the five-day meeting.

The 209-member House of Delegates, AMA policy-making body, will meet throughout the week. It will select the recipient of the distinguished service award today, naming a physician who has made an outstanding contribution to medicine.

Dr. E. Vincent Askey, of Los Angeles will be installed as president Tuesday.

Three speakers expressed divergent views on health insurance for the aged at the conference of presidents and officers of state medical associations Sunday.

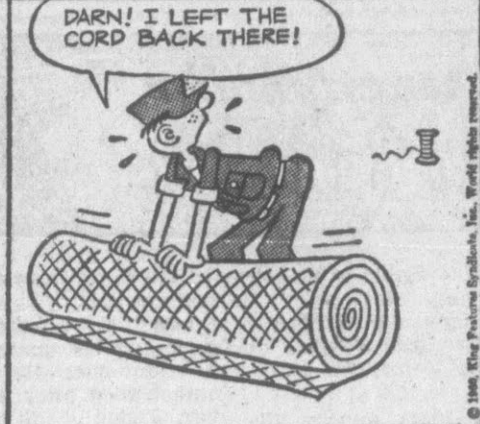

Paul Butler, Democratic party chairman, told doctors they are dragging their feet on health reform and said they had a "curious" attitude toward his party's health proposals.

"If socialized medicine should come to our country, it may well be that the medical profession itself have brought it about," Butler declared.

Butler predicted that his party would endorse the Forand bill at its convention in Los Angeles next month. The bill, now before Congress, tied old age health insurance to the Social Security system.

Thurston B. Morton, Republican national chairman, said his party probably will propose a "voluntary program to be worked out in conjunction with the states."

Gov. Ross Barnett of Mississippi told the doctors every state should take care of its own.

Airline Passengers Accept Liquor Curbs

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—A new rule to limit drinking on airliners is keeping passengers from getting too high in the sky.

Most travelers are accepting the curb on boozing while cruising, a survey at major air terminals showed. But stewardesses say they still have their hands full playing bartender.

The Federal Aviation Agency has begun its first action under the new law against five New Jersey men and two New Yorkers. They are due to go on trial Tuesday in Canada under other charges there for their actions on a flight to Montreal.

The FAA, announcing its action last week, said the travelers brought liquor aboard and put on an in-flight pillow fight. The agency charged them with ignoring safety instructions.

The federal rule, which went into effect March 10, requires a stewardess to refuse another drink to anyone who appears intoxicated. Passengers who bring their own bottle must check it for service by the stewardess. Violators can be fined up to $1,000.

The rule has stirred some controversy in the aviation industry. Airline companies and their crews differ among themselves on whether it goes too far or not far enough.

Talks with passengers and flight crews at two airports serving the New York metropolitan area — Newark and Idlewild — reveal that the only one who isn't putting up a squawk is the air customer.

Most travelers who had heard of the plan just shrugged and accepted the idea.

In the first two months of the new rule, one stewardess said, she found it necessary to enforce the regulation about four or five times. All but one passenger accepted the ruling gracefully, and the exception quieted down when she called the captain.

The stewardess, Anne Marie Castonguay, of Woodside, N.Y., also said she had spotted about 8 or 10 flasks on board and asked the passengers to surrender them.

"I told them, 'I'm sorry, gov-

S. C. Democrats See Light Vote

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Democratic leaders anticipate a light turnout in Tuesday's primary.

The only statewide contest pits Columbia attorney R. Beverley Hiebert against incumbent Strom Thurmond for the U.S. Senate nomination.

The state's six congressmen are unopposed in this Democratic state, where nomination in the primary means election to office.

Some 580,000 persons are eligible to vote. Party leaders expect about half to turn out.

Concrete Posts Used To Deter Big Woodpeckers

CHOKOLOOSKEE ISLAND, Fla. (AP)—Whether or not the oversized species of pileated woodpeckers of these parts really are hunting for "humbugs," the electric company is having to replace many of its wooden poles with concrete columns.

The big-beaked birds, about the size of a bantam chicken, pick holes right through the tough, creosoted poles at the 6-inch thick level.

"They drill holes plumb through some poles," said G. Hill, manager of the REA Everglades power plant, "while in others they hollow out the inside until the shaft is little more than a shell at that point."

The Rev. Tom Wells, an island preacher, came up with the "humbug" theory. Wells said the birds "hear the humming of the wires, think its bugs in the poles and go

Federation Will Consider Payola And Programs

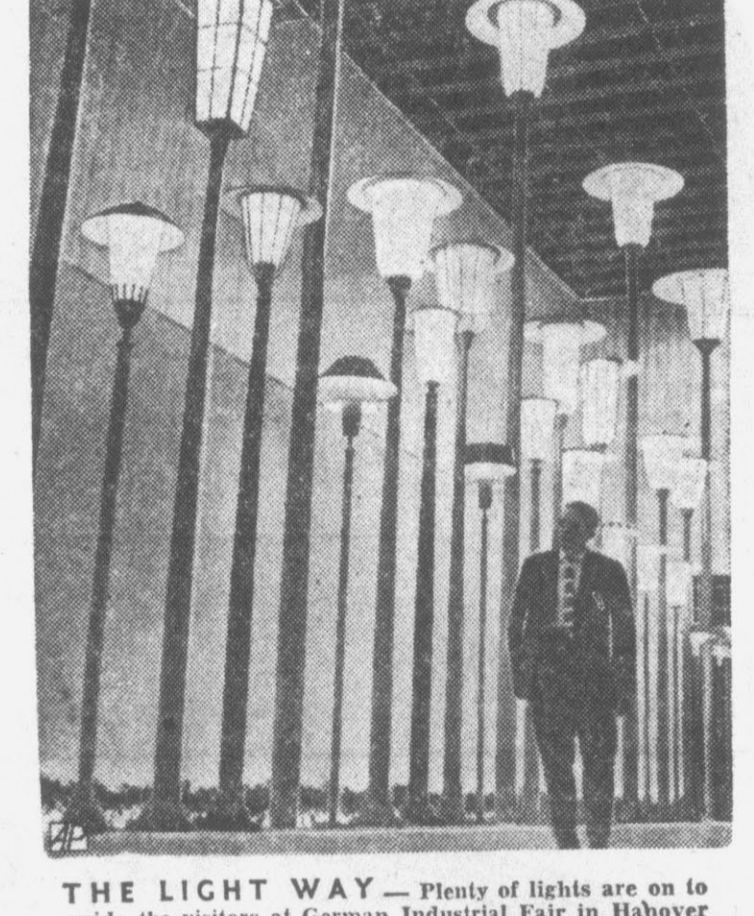

WASHINGTON (AP) — Payola and children's programs on television and radio will come in for discussion at the week-long 69th annual convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs opening tonight.

These problems are among 11 resolutions prepared for their sessions.

Mrs. E. Lee Ozbirn of Oklahoma City is unopposed for a two-year term as president of the 850,000-member organization. She moves up from first vice president to replace Chloe Gifford of Lexington, Ky.

A five-day program of special activities is scheduled for the convention, including tonight's "Salute to Women." Among those honored will be Eleanor Roosevelt, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R-Maine), columnist Sylvia Porter, Clare Boothe Luce, former ambassador to Italy, and Dr. Anne Pannell, president of Sweet Briar College.

Evangelist Billy Graham is the windup speaker on a program Friday night at which new officers will be installed.

THE LIGHT WAY — Plenty of lights are on to guide the visitors at German Industrial Fair in Hannover at exhibit of West German firms manufacturing lanterns.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was generally higher in moderate trading early this afternoon, apparently taking a big breath after last week's big advance.

The small margin of gainers over losers increased slightly as trading continued, but changes were small for the most part.

Big jumps by a few of the space age issues brought this group back into the limelight. The trend in most groups was irregular.

Prominent among the space age group were Transiron, up more than 3; Texas Instruments, ahead around 6 and Varian, which extended an early advance of more than 2.

Ford held a gain of about a point in the motor section.

Allied Chemical was up about 2, holding its early edge, while Du Pont added to its first advance to go ahead more than 3. Eastman Kodak was fractionally lower.

Fractional gains predominated among rail stocks. Announcement of the expected plan to merge the Nickel Plate and Norfolk & Western Railroad brought a small advance at first for the Nickel Plate, but it later slipped fractionally. Norfolk & Western was quiet. Other key rails added fractions off the most part.

Utility gains were in the same range, as were those in metals.

Texaco added a fraction, but Standard Oil (New Jersey) eased and Royal Dutch lost a bit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at noon was up 1.76 at 656.64.

The Associated Press 60-stock average at noon was up 0.50 at 225.00 with industrials up 0.90, rails up 0.50 and utilities up 0.20.

U. S. government bonds edged higher while corporate bonds declined a shade.

Convicts Join Music Audience

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)—A convict sat in the sun Sunday holding hands with his girl friend. Another inmate was nearby, his arms wrapped around his four children.

Twenty-five selected prisoners mingled with their visitors in the parking lot across the lawn from the gas chamber during San Quentin's sixth annual music festival. They sat among an audience of about 150.

This is an experiment," said the associate warden, Walter Achuff. "We hope it works out all right."

It did. A young inmate in a starched blue denim shirt stepped to the microphone and announced apologetically: "Our regular master of ceremonies is missing."

A titter swept the audience. A guard raised his eyebrows. The regular Emcee, it developed, had misplaced his identity card and his son hadn't been allowed outside his main cell block.

The highlight of the festival was the 18-piece inmate band's performance of two compositions by their leader, trumpeter Charlie Caudle. The band played Caudle's "Blues of Infinitum" and "Laughing and Scratching."

Caudle will be eligible for parole soon. He was convicted of burglary and narcotics violation. At the end of the program, the master of ceremonies returned to the microphone and quietly said: "We want to thank an enlightened administration for encouraging this kind of activity."

Violent Winds Hit Southwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Powerful winds and heavy rains raked parts of the Southwest today while showers and thunderstorms extended from the Ohio Valley into the Mississippi Valley and the Western Plains.

Wind gusts of 45 to 60 miles an hour hit parts of Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle. Accompanying rain accumulated to a depth of 2 inches or more in Oklahoma City in a couple of hours while 1½ inches was recorded in a six-hour period at Texarkana, Ark., and Longview, Tex.

The Weather Bureau reported more than 2 inches of rain had fallen in Shreveport, La., in a two-hour period and local flooding was expected in low-lying areas.

High Altitude Blast Scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP)—Five hundred pounds of dynamite carried aloft by a huge balloon will be exploded next spring high above southern New Mexico.

The Defense Department will torch off the blast by radio to study the effects of chemical explosions at high altitudes.

The Pentagon said the test — part of Project Banshee — also may contribute knowledge to cope with military problems of the space and missile age.

A balloon as tall as a 20-story building will carry the dynamite cargo to 24 miles above the White Sands missile range.

Nuclear explosions high above the earth have been studied in earlier tests.

In Burbank, Calif., the machinists union announced members had rejected, by a 95.4 per cent vote, Lockheed's latest offer to machinists employed at its four California missile and space plants. Lockheed builds the Navy's Polaris missile.

The union went ahead with plans to strike at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday. Negotiations were scheduled to be resumed today at San Francisco.

Lockheed missile machinists seek a 7 per cent pay increase for workers averaging $2.65 an hour. A union spokesman said the company's latest offer cut fringe benefits so that employees would suffer a loss of 10 cents to $1.25 an hour in take-home pay.

In Convair, a division of General Dynamics Corp., the machinists ask a 14-cent hourly increase and fringe benefits. The pay scale is now $1.79 to $3.40 an hour.

The machinists' negotiations are in behalf of 27,000 Convair employees. Most are at the San Diego plant and one in Pomona, Calif. Some 1,700 are at Atlas missile bases in California, Wyoming, Nebraska and Florida.

Funeral Tuesday For Mrs. Tom Edwards

Mrs. Minnie Fornes Edwards, 65, widow of Tom Edwards, died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Pearl Evans, near Vanceboro Sunday night at 12:30 after a year of failing health.

Funeral services will be held at the Wilkerson Chapel Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 by the Rev. Sam Wetherington, pastor of the Free Will Holiness Church at Vanceboro. Burial will be in the John Henry Barr Family Cemetery near Chocowinity.

Mrs. Edwards, daughter of the late Frank and Eliza Fornes, was born and reared near Chapman's Crossroads and was married to Mr. Edwards of near Chocowinity in 1924. Mr. Edwards died in 1958. Since January, 1960, she had made her home with Mrs. Evans. She was a member of Gorham Swamp Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church.

Surviving are the sister, and four brothers, Allen Fornes of near Vanceboro, and Tom, Charlie H., and John P. Fornes, all of near Chocowinity.

Adlai Stevenson Says He Is Not A Candidate

CHICAGO (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson hurriedly retrieved his hat from the presidential race Sunday with this statement: "I am not a candidate."

The Stevenson political hat had been lobbed into the scramble for the Democratic presidential nomination by Eleanor Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in her syndicated column "My Day," last week called for a Stevenson-Kennedy ticket. She said Stevenson combined with Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts would be the strongest team the Democrats could field against Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

The wife of the late president Franklin D. Roosevelt then asked Stevenson to clarify his position.

Stevenson, twice defeated as Democratic presidential nominee, said he would not accept the nomination. "I think I have it clear in my public life . . . that I will serve my country and my party whenever called upon."

After receipt of the Stevenson wire, Mrs. Roosevelt commented: "From this statement, I think you will find it clear that Mr. Stevenson is a candidate, since there is a sizable number of people who are asking him to accept the responsibility of being the candidate for the Democratic party in the next convention."

At this point, Stevenson grabbed his hat back. He said at his Libertyville, Ill., home: "My message to Mrs. Roosevelt speaks for itself. I reiterated the position I have taken for several years—that I will not seek the nomination for president by the Democratic convention. "Therefore, I am not a candidate."

Father Of Spy Plane Pilot Is Issued A Passport

WASHINGTON (AP)—Oliver W. Powers, father of the downed U-2 spy plane pilot, today got speedy State Department issuance of a passport so he can go to the Soviet Union to see his son.

Powers indicated he might go to Moscow in August.

Powers' friend and companion for the proposed trip, Sol Cury, said Powers would not until "a propitious time."

"We can get the Soviet visa anytime we want to," Cury said.

Powers, 55, a Pound, Va., shoemaker, wants to see what he can do to help his son, Francis G. Powers. The Soviets say they will give the younger Powers as a spy for his May 1 reconnaissance flight deep inside Soviet territory.

The elder Powers got a passport at the office of Edward J. Hickey, deputy director of the State Department's passport office.

Then he paid a call on Raymond Hare, deputy undersecretary for political affairs. He spent an hour with Hare but declined to say what they talked about.

Aerial Picketing In Plant Strike

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—Another strike—this one a one-day-a-week walkout—hit the aircraft and missile industry today, and with a new wrinkle: aerial picketing.

The Engineers and Architects Assn. will call its 6,000 members off the job at Convair every Monday from now on until its contract demands are settled.

To discourage reported plans of some engineers to avoid crossing picket lines by arriving at work by helicopter, the association said it would have an airplane towing a strike banner above Convair's two plants.

The association seeks a 6 per cent wage boost, improvements in layoff and arbitration procedures and other benefits.

Meanwhile, federal mediator E. Marvin Sconyers reported steady progress in negotiations between Convair and the International Assn. of Machinists. This dispute has brought strikes at the nation's Atlas missile bases. Sconyers reported "a lot of work remains before agreement is achieved."

In Burbank, Calif., the machinists union announced members had rejected, by a 95.4 per cent vote, Lockheed's latest offer to machinists employed at its four California missile and space plants. Lockheed builds the Navy's Polaris missile.

The union went ahead with plans to strike at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday. Negotiations were scheduled to be resumed today at San Francisco.

Salute Courage Of Eisenhower

LONDON (AP)—Newspapers of Western Europe today lauded President Eisenhower's courage in carrying on with his visit to Japan. But many expressed doubt that the trip will prove worth while.

Non-Communist newspapers of France in general described the visit as necessary though dangerous. Those of West Germany took a similar view, though Frankfurt's independent Neue Presse said "nobody expects this trip to strengthen American-Japanese relations."

The London tabloid Daily Mirror, often critical of U.S. foreign policy, said, "You've got to hand it to President Ike. This man has guts."

Corriere d'Informazione of Milan, Monday edition of the independent Corriere Della Sera, said the outbreak in Tokyo may serve a useful purpose by removing illusions about the complex reality of the Asian spirit."

The Stockholm Aftonbladet recalled that Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria in 1914 rejected warnings against his visit to Serbia and was assassinated, thereby setting off World War I. Eisenhower should accept the appeal from Japanese security police authorities to postpone his visit to a more appropriate date," it said.

Norway's largest afternoon newspaper, the Oslo Dagbladet, said Eisenhower could hardly avoid the trip and wished him well.

Blame Wreck On Bottle Of Ink

RALEIGH (AP)—A bottle of ink was listed today as the cause of an auto accident Sunday night which caused an estimated $1,150 in damages.

Mrs. Melba Byrd, 32, of Rt. 6, Raleigh, told police that when a bottle of ink started to fall from the dash of her car, she lost control and crashed into a parked vehicle. She suffered minor injuries, too, and was treated at Rex Hospital.

Mrs. Byrd, who was charged with careless and reckless driving, said that when the ink started falling she abandoned the wheel to grab it—to keep it from falling on new frock.

Gubernatorial Candidates To Briefly Debate In TV Studio

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After two weeks of angrily attacking each other, gubernatorial candidates Terry Sanford and I. Beverly Lake will appear in the same studio tonight in a face-to-face debate over a statewide television hookup.

Raleigh's Mayor Pro Tem Jim Reid, a television executive, will moderate. The two candidates will make brief opening statements and then launch their head-on argument.

The program will originate at Charlotte's WBTV and be carried across the state between 9:30 and 10 p.m.

The two lawyers, competing for the Democratic nomination in the runoff primary June 25, continued their blasts at each other over the weekend.

Sanford, in a statement to Eastern North Carolina supporters, said Lake's "foot-stomping appeal to blind prejudice" was playing in to the hands of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

He said Lake, "The advocate of massive resistance and private schools," once tried to defeat the Pearsall Plan, "the only hope North Carolina, and especially Eastern North Carolina, has to avoid the program of the NAACP."

Sanford continued, "North Carolina is not going to be fooled by fear even if it is dressed up by a combination of Bilbo and Daddy Grace."

Lake told a rally in Smithfield Sanford's spending programs would call for at least 50 million dollars in new taxes each year.

Claiming that Sanford just recently called the spending programs "long range," Lake said, "He didn't say that before I started telling people how much it would cost."

Lake renewed his attack on what he called the NAACP's policy of complete integration.

In a statement, Lake's campaign manager, Robert Morgan, said Lake has been willing and still is willing to submit to questions by the public or by newsmen at his political rallies.

It was an apparent reply to Sanford's charge Friday that Lake feared open news conferences.
