VISIT CANCELS INVITATION TO PRESIDENT

Sen. Johnson Denounces As Pure Blackmail, Red-Inspired Rioting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson today denounced as "pure blackmail in its most outrageous sense" the Communist-fomented rioting that led to cancellation of President Eisenhower's visit to Japan.

Johnson's denunciation of Communist tactics amounted to a distillation of Congress' reaction on that point, and there was general agreement that the United States and the Free World had suffered an embarrassing diplomatic setback.

One Billion Picnickers Head For The Open Air

TAKE IT EASY . . . Picnics may be gay and labor-saving, with disposable dishes and non-woven maslinn cloth napkins.

Almost one and half billion meals will be eaten in the great outdoors this summer, in backyard and picnic grounds all over America. This means that some 89 per cent of the population will be eating al fresco on balmy days.

Some of these casual meals will be pretty high-style productions. One Fifth Avenue specialty shop goes so far as to feature a table setting for a box lunch party in a tree, complete with Spode china and sterling silver. However, there's an easier way to do it, and have just as much fun.

America's labor-saving housewives have things figured out to a pretty fine point now, where they can get Pop to do all the cooking and eliminate dishwashing chores by using paper plates. For those who insist on elegance along with ease, there are non-woven maslinn cloth napkins, which have the texture of fine linen, but can be thrown away after the meal.

If you want to do things up with a flair, you can get a picnic table cloth and matching bench cover in brilliantly striped red and white cotton, teamed with the throw-away napkins in giddy watermelon and lemon design.

The shops are full of handsome and efficient hampers and

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN
Whoever said, "leaflets three, let be", was speaking from experience or from observation of the effects poison-ivy has on the human skin.
The results of contact with this "Pizin Vine" in our gardens or woodland ramblings or camping out is usually an irritating memory.

POISON IVY LEAFLET

It has a habit of sneaking in among the decent citizenry of the gardens. Whether this is because of loneliness or contrariness is not known.
Outwardly, it is innocent enough and not without some attractive characteristics. It has shiny green leaves, white waxy fruit and a color in the fall that is in keeping with that time of year.
How then, can you be sure of not confusing this plant with some that are harmless? Poison Ivy always has three leaflets making up the leaf and this holds true on every leaf of plant. (Boston Ivy has three leaflets but as a rule not all the leaves on the plant will be divided into three leaflets.)
The waxy white fruit of poison ivy looks something like a peeled orange. This is helpful in identifying the plant in fall, winter, and spring before leaves come. The flowers are in clusters and always found in such fashion, on side of a stem immediately above a leaf.

The best way to keep out of trouble with this plant is not to meddle with anything having three leaflets unless you are sure of what type plant you are fooling with.

You get poison ivy poisoning from contact with the plant. You can get it from gloves that have been used to pull stuff up. Cats and dogs that have traveled through it can brush up against your legs and the itchy results are the same. Or you can pet them and end up with blistering itchy hands. You get it from tools, clothes and even from touching an auto door handle that has been touched by someone who has come in contact with it.

What can you do to keep out of the clutches of this vine? The first and most sensible thing is to be immunized against it by your doctor. There are pills on the market for such purposes, but it is best to see your doctor before swallowing something that may be worse for you than the poison ivy.
If you have the poison working on your skin, Calamine lotion can be used with fair results. Washing the hands, arms, legs (right after coming in contact with it) with yellow soap may head it off. If you have a severe case, see your doctor.

Poison ivy can be destroyed by mechanical and chemical means. This of course depends on where it is growing. Around a choice shrub, tree or in a flower bed, mechanical control is the best method. Hand pulling (with protection) and digging up roots is the best and safest way.

If you use any of the chemicals that are recommended be sure you follow all directions. You can spray with Amisol, Weedazol, Poison Ivy-Killer, and Amino Triazolol. All of these are trade names of Amitrol, an efficient poison ivy eradicator.

In larger areas where it has become a project, have your nurseryman or others with proper equipment and knowledge do the job.

Learning the habits and how the plant looks may save you much trouble this summer. So keep in mind the old proverb, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure"—keep on your side of the fence.

Clubs Promote Vitamin A Foods

Forty-nine families set out 10,400 copperskin Goldrush sweet potato plants recently in Alexander County. According to past surveys, diets in the county are often deficient in green and yellow vegetables.

Mrs. Agnes Watts, home economics agent, says Home Demonstration leaders in each local club took orders for the plants and the orders were pooled. Since that variety is high in vitamin A, the club women hope to raise the vitamin A quota in daily diets.

Stretching Dollars

RALEIGH—Weekend shoppers will find a large array of meat cuts for summertime eating pleasure. Topping the most economical beef buys are chuck, round beef, some steaks, and featured specials at favorite stores.

Mrs. Ruby P. Uzzle, consumer marketing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says pork prices have shown advances for the past few weeks. Special promotion on weiners, frankfurters, and various cold cuts will offer economy to the food shopper.

Fresh vegetable supplies continue to increase as production from neighboring states moves to market. Included in this week's most economical buys are Irish potatoes, sweet corn, squash, snap beans, cabbage, cucumbers, leafy greens, lettuce, green onions, lima beans and celery. Potatoes from Eastern Carolina are expected to move in volume this week. Heavy supplies of iceberg lettuce are appearing on the market. Lower prices are being seen on tomatoes as supplies increase.

Mrs. Uzzle says economical fruit buys include bananas, lemons, limes, blueberries, pineapples, and oranges. North Carolina grown dewberries are now appearing on the market. Peak of the dewberry season was expected around June 15. Both peaches and watermelons are appearing in most stores as Georgia production begins to move.

Economy can still be added to menus by including poultry products in family meals. Large eggs rank high among the most economical protein foods. Although broiler prices have shown slight advances, the supply is adequate and prices are still reasonable for favorite outdoor cooking. Heavy hens, which make such delicious chicken salad sandwiches, are wearing attractive price tags.

Long-Range Planning Will Help Us

The decision of the Greenville Utilities Commission to extend proposed land use studies to a radius of three and one-half miles beyond the existing city limits is a step in long range planning that should save local taxpayers many more dollars in future years than the survey will cost them now.

Prior to the action of the Utilities Commission this week, the city already had contracted with the firm to make a land use study of a one-mile radius beyond the city limits. By its action at its meeting Tuesday, the Utilities Commission extended the radius of the study an additional two and one-half miles.

Greenville's growth in the past decade has pointed up vividly the need for more long-range study and planning for problems that are certain to confront the city in the years ahead. The problems will affect not only policies and outlays by the city government, but also the expansion outlays which must be made by the Utilities Commission in providing electric, water and sewer service to new areas as the city grows.

It will be many years, of course, before the corporate limits of Greenville includes all the area which now lies within a three and one-half mile radius around the city. If practices of the past are followed, however, this territory will be taken in bit-by-bit each year until it is all included . . . and eventually perhaps even a larger area.

If the city and its Utilities Commission are to successfully cope with the problems which will be created by the growth of Greenville, advance studies of what will be needed in the way of facilities and services to these areas must be made. Otherwise the city will be faced with problems similar to those it has faced in the past; problems created by lack of long-range planning which necessitated costly changes in existing facilities in addition to the normal high cost of providing new facilities in the areas annexed.

The proposed land use study over the extended area around the city will not provide a solution to all the future problems. It will, however, provide valuable information to be used in long-range planning for the growth of Greenville. It should enable city officials and utilities officials to undertake programs with greater assurance that they are making adequate provisions to take care of the future needs of the city. It should also enable officials to follow sounder fiscal policies concerning capital outlays, and therefore afford long-range savings to local taxpayers.

Blame The Mirror, Or Subject Matter?

If reporting the conduct of Congressmen plays "directly into the Communist hands" as Rep. Francis E. Walter asserts, then it would seem more fitting for lawmakers to make themselves above reproach than to criticize their mirror.

The Pennsylvania Democrat, chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee, yesterday took an uncompromising view of a series of stories about expense accounts (seemingly altered), and practices of Walter's committee.

He called them scurrilous and a "concoction of half truths, untruths, smear and innuendo adorned with adjectives used in lieu of facts."

This is strong language . . . but it doesn't necessarily disprove what the inquiring reporters reported. The chairman's opinions would carry more weight had they not been made more than two weeks after the expense-account stories and description of committee practices were published. The time to have made a formal and detailed denial, backed by accompanying witnesses, evidence and affidavits, was when the reports were first told to the public.

Instead, the immediate reaction was a panicky closing of public records to newsmen.

There were scattered disclaimers of wrong-doing, but no down-to-earth effort to clear up any false impressions or to determine exactly what was going on.

It is possible the reporters got the wrong slant on the subject, but we doubt it. A reporter's job is to mirror what he sees and hears. Distortions, of the extent Rep. Walters says prevailed, simply could not hold up under the subsequent glare of publicity and inquiring attention.

Both Criticized As 'Too Soft'

By JAMES MARLOW WASHINGTON (AP) — Ironically both President Eisenhower and Premier Nikita Khrushchev, the great opponents in the East-West power struggle, get lambasted for not being tough enough.

In the past few days these things happened: 1. Pravda, the Russian Communist party newspaper, defended Khrushchev against leftist critics who found fault with his policy of co-existence and his talk of easing tensions.

2. Sen. John F. Kennedy, Democrat, and New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, Republican, both criticized Eisenhower for not having this country in a much stronger military position in facing the Russians.

Pravda represented Khrushchev's leftist critics among the Communists as dedicated to the theory of keeping the international pot boiling.

Actually, Khrushchev has kept it boiling. He talked mildly for some months—between his visit here last September and the May summit meeting—but all the time he held the possibility of a Berlin blockade over the West's head.

And Khrushchev's rage which wrecked the summit started with the Soviets' capture of an American spy plane whose repeated excursions over Russia the past four years showed a big dent in Russian defense. Baffled Westerners, at a loss to explain the violence of Khrushchev's summit performance, leaped to the conclusion that he must be having trouble at home or be under tremendous Kremlin pressure to stop being half-way pleasant.

The Pravda defense of him would indicate this is not so and that he is in full command in Russia. The Pravda piece can be interpreted as aimed straight at the Red Chinese who have been impatient with Khrushchev's dealings with the West.

Rockefeller, who'd like to get the Republican presidential nomination, did not actually say Eisenhower wasn't tough enough in dealing with Russia. He implied it by saying this country is far from being strong enough militarily for dealing with Russia.

He wants a much bigger defense buildup. Kennedy, right now the front-runner for the Democratic nomination, said the summit meeting was doomed to failure because this country was neither strong enough nor well enough prepared to make real negotiations possible.

By EARL L. DOUGLASS WATCH THE ROAD SIGNS An authority on mental diseases has, within the past few weeks, made the statement that thirty million people in this country need some form of mental hygiene treatment. Add to this the alarming reality that of the 1,200,000 hospital beds in this country half are occupied by mental cases, and we can readily see that unless the tide turns for the better, there may some day be so many people in the asylums of the country that there will not be enough normal folk outside to take care of them.

What is the matter with the mind of America? Why does our population seem to be headed for a nervous breakdown on a national scale? There are rules for the highway of life, and we need to observe them.

A Big Week Behind Them

This has been quite a week for Greenville's civic organizations.

Local Citizens were sponsors of the Griffin club which received its charter Monday night. Greenville Lions were informed their club had won four awards at the state convention in Asheville.

Greenville Moose won a special award for community service activity in competition with more than 1,900 lodges in the U.S. and Canada.

And, to make the Moose convention in Chicago a special occasion for Ed and Evelyn Baldees, they each won the highest honors bestowed on lodge and chapter members.

Personally, I find it intriguing that the Baldees earned their respective honors together. (And here, the word "earned" is used deliberately.)

Limbs were made for columnists, crystal ball gazers and tea-leaf readers to crawl out on. Actually, I feel just a little bit giddy about this prediction because to me it is so very obvious. But here we go:

Floyd Patterson is going to whup Ingemar Johansson. When it comes to a limb like that, one can't very well lose. The scoffers will scoff no matter how it turns out; and if you're right, the fence-sitters look on you with admiration and envy.

Can't help but wonder how Ingo's television career fares after Monday night.

Once a year, usually around graduation-time, the writer joins ranks with armed service recruiters on a selling job.

I'm impartial. Air Force, Navy, Army, Marines, Coast Guard. . . the essential thing is to pass the word about a lot of good jobs waiting for those young men who can wear a uniform.

A high school grad who has not decided on his field of study in higher education. . . or is uncertain about what career he should choose. . . shouldn't overlook the armed forces.

For one thing, if he's sound of mind and limb he is going to have to serve in one way or another. Enlisting helps meet that obligation at probably the most convenient time for the young man.

A career in uniform isn't for everybody; but a lot of people have done worse; and the word "career" doesn't necessarily mean a lifetime. I'm thinking now of my brother.

He is retiring this summer after a twenty-year tour in the Navy. His pension is not peanuts; he is under forty years old.

Now you tell me of a job with annual 30-day vacations with pay, free medical care (in his case it was worth over $5,000) and a neat little pension system after twenty years.

Aside from living on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, he has done some traveling. . . to North Africa and England, and as far as Japan in the other direction.

On his discharge, he and his family plan to live on Guam in the Marianas where there is a job waiting.

See your recruiter; he can fill you in on the extra details about educational benefits involved as well as career-training and opportunities.

Other Editors Saying Tamer Than Expected

(Kinston Free Press)

The thirty minute debate between gubernatorial Candidates Terry Sanford and Beverly Lake over a State-wide TV hook-up Monday night was considerably tamer than we had anticipated. Congratulations to both candidates!

As we had predicted, we learned nothing new from the discussion. Both re-stated and re-repeated their campaign talks.

In Mr. Sanford's talk he re-emphasized his feeling that improved educational facilities in the State should be the first aim and objective of the people.

While Dr. Lake charges that Mr. Sanford wants to increase taxes and spend money recklessly, there is little to confirm or support that position. Even if the candidate desired to do so, he would not have the authority.

The State Legislature has the last word in reference to taxes. Quite naturally the General Assemblies, as a rule, pay attention to the recommendations of the Chief Executive but that is not an inviolate rule by any means. Mr. Sanford or any other occupant of the Governor's chair could go no further than he could convince the rank and file of the people of the State that such progress was necessary and get support therefor.

By the same token, Dr. Lake can't do any more about the segregation problem than Mr. Sanford or anybody else who occupies the Governor's chair.

Another cause of widespread nervousness is the feverish persistence of our activities that it takes most people a couple of days and nights to recover from the weekend.

There are rules for the highway of life, and we need to observe them.

By ELMER ROESSNER The estate of the late John D. Rockefeller, guessed at around $150,000,000, is "virtually free of estate tax," according to Pringle-Hall's "Information."

It's really very simple, it says. Mr. Rockefeller left half his estate to charity. That's tax-free.

The other half went to his wife in trust, a "marital deduction trust." Such trusts are deductible up to half the value of the estate. But since, she gets only half the value, there is no tax.

Furthermore, there is little New York State estate tax since that state, like the Federal government, grants both charitable and marital deductions. The late Mr. Rockefeller's son Nelson is currently Governor of New York, but these principles were imbedded in New York law many years ago.

JOHN D. SR. LEFT LESS The newsletter recalls that the estate of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., the man who glued the family fortune together with oil, was not nearly as large as his son's. One reason was that he had given away so much in his lifetime.

(I had an economics teacher years ago who told his class that his father, a merchant, watched newspapers carefully for news of gifts by John D. Rockefeller, Sr. As soon as he heard of a new grant, the merchant quickly ordered a tank car of coal oil. The price always moved up a bit in the next few days, he said.)

When John, Sr., was alive, there were little or no levies on gifts, and death duties were small. Much of his wealth was given to charities or members of his family without taxes.

Speaking of John D., Jr.'s estate, the newsletter points out that "property passing at the time of death takes a new basis: date-of-death value. Inflationary values are written, free of income tax, into the basis of the property. . . "All the property in the trust for his widow now has a step-up basis for income tax. At this moment, existing investments of the trust can be sold, new ones acquired, at no appreciable tax cost.

"Further, the widow can now make gifts of the trust property, and the recipients will receive them with the stepped-up basis it has just acquired. If she chooses to make gifts during life, these transfers will be taxed at gift tax rates, which are lower than the estate tax rates.

"Moreover, these gifts are, in effect, skimmed off the top of the potential estate subject to gift tax rates from the bottom up."

These tax escapements are, of course, available to all other taxpayers.

To get the benefits the Rockefeller are enjoying, just get out and make $150,000,000.

No One Begged To Run

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1950, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The curiosity of our political system is that men must modestly project themselves for public office. No one is ever asked to run. No one is begged to run. No one is drafted. A candidate organizes to be nominated. It is all his own design. Those who like to feel that the public is on its knees to some majestic personality are kidding no one but themselves.

There is such an exception as Warren G. Harding who was brought forth by the notorious Ohio Gang, perhaps even against his wishes, but that is unusual. Generally if there is a gang, it is arranged by the candidate. When Nelson Rockefeller says that he prefers to be drafted, he is not telling the truth. He has been an active candidate for two years, working steadily at it and not making such progress perhaps because he would not come out into the open and fight for the nomination, American style. His sudden emergence last week was also not quite true to form, for what it amounted to was an attack on the Eisenhower Administration at a time when Khrushchev was still defying and humiliating the President of the United States and when Japanese Socialists and Communists were demonstrating against Eisenhower only because he is President of the United States. The timing was very awkward; the speeches must have been written by a shoemaker.

Richard Nixon met Rockefeller's attacks with gracious dignity. Rockefeller wanted to know Nixon's position on current questions and Nixon asked him to step up to the television microphone, ask the questions and Nixon would reply. In a debate, Nixon, the trained debater, would have cloberbed Rockefeller. I once witnessed just such a scene, when Rockefeller spoke at the Al Smith Memorial Dinner in New York. He was followed by Senator John Kennedy, the Democrat, who brilliantly laid the Republican Governor low. When it comes to the give and take of debating, Nixon is as quick, if not quicker than Kennedy. Advisedly, Rockefeller backed away from that.

But we have been watching Richard Nixon for 14 years, as Congressman, Senator and Vice President. He has done deeds, made speeches and given press interviews.

Any competent political reporter ought to be able, from his files, to formulate the Nixon creed, which basically is that he is anti-Communist, favors sound money, favors the general domestic program of the Eisenhower Administration except that he usually differs from Ezra Taft Benson on the farm problems and that he pursues the Eisenhower foreign policy which is that war is a dangerous and unpleasant commitment.

But saying this is not very important. During the next four years, the President, the Congress and the American people will face many vexing problems, some of them new but growing out of old ones. The pressures from outside the United States will be enormous, not only because of Russia and its satellites, but also because of the growth of competition with our economy by the development of the European Common Market and the European Free Trade Association. The next President will also have to deal with the consequences of Soviet Russia moving on to a gold standard, whenever it does that. I believe it will be in 1961.

It will not matter so much whether the next President is a Republican or a Democrat, as much as that he should have had a large experience in government and that he should have sound judgment and a mature concept of America's role in the world.

On the Republican side, Richard Nixon has had the unusual opportunity of both legislative and executive experience, in both areas displaying unexpected competence. Nelson Rockefeller has never held national elective office and his participation in Federal executive positions has been minor. He is too self-centered and domineering to get along amicably with Congress, (Continued on page 5)

The Big Debate Proved A Dud

By LYNN NISBET MOUSE — Folks around capitol square manifested a sort of "let down" feeling after the much ballyhooed television debate between Terry Sanford and Beverly Lake.

Opinion was general that the incident was a good illustration of a mountain being in travail and bringing forth a mouse.

There had been a great deal of advance publicity about the great debate, accompanied by charges and counter charges of bad faith on part of the participants during preliminary arrangements. Summit type conferences were held by respective managers, Bert Bennett for Sanford and Robert Morgan for Lake. There was much ado about selecting a station to originate the telecast which was carried statewide, and about who would act as moderator. Station WBTW at Charlotte was chosen, and Jim Reid, a veteran radio announcer now capitol representative of WIVD of Durham and mayor pro tem of Raleigh, was named moderator. The public was led to believe it would be something new and different in political campaigning.

Hope was held out that the lively debate might put some spark in the rather drab run-off campaign, and set the pace for greater activity between now and June 25. The production did not live up to advance notices. Moderator Reid announced that each candidate would have seven minutes for their first talks, six minutes on rebuttal, with Sanford speaking first. Implication was that each candidate during his first period would deliver a previously prepared address, leaving any semblance of "debate" to the rebuttal time. The original statements embodied repetition, in essentially the same words, of earlier campaign pronouncements.

DUDS — The rebuttals also closely followed previous statements, including denials and counter charges. Since there was nothing new in the originals, there could be little new in the rebuttals.

Never at any time was more than one person shown on the screen. As a debate, and as a TV show, the affair was a dud. Expectations that the candidates might face each other, ask and answer questions and really debate issues, did not materialize. Those who had looked for something like "Meet the Press" or "Face the Nation" exhibitions— or maybe even a prize fight type of show—were disappointed. What they saw and heard was Sanford making two short speeches all by himself, followed by Lake doing the same thing all alone, with Jim Reid bobbing into the picture between times, not as a moderator but as an announcer.

Comment around capitol square was that both candidates made very poor showing, not even up to average of their earlier independent appearances. Lake supporters were more disappointed, because he had done so well on television before. His appearances at Rocky Mount before the first primary and at New Bern just after had been credited with making thousands of votes. Because of that record, some Sanford supporters greeted their candidate had accepted a challenge for joint (?) debate. Lake folks believed their man would just "wrap up" his opponent and throw him in the trash can.

Nothing like that happened. In fact consensus hereabout is that both candidates seemed cowed and less vigorous (or "vagarous") than in other TV appearances. As a Great Debate, the Monday night performance was a great big flop.

EFFECTIVENESS — The disappointing flop of the TV great debate, and the fact that news stand sale of newspapers next morning was heavier than usual, because people wanted to refresh their memories about what was said, raises question of the effectiveness of television in political campaigns. TV is expensive and that medium has been charged, or credited—depending upon the viewpoint, with the current high cost of campaigning.

The joint debate was handled by the several television stations without cost to the individual candidates as a public service—like the news stories appearing in newspapers. Opinion was general after the show that if the candidates had been required to pay for the time they wouldn't have gotten their money's worth. In fact, supporters of both candidates have said they would have been better off if the TV debate had been left off.

What happens from here out in the second primary campaign cannot be predicted at this time. One thing seems certain: Whatever happens will not be affected much by what happened on the widely ballyhooed television debate Monday night.

Opinions In Brief

"However history may view the debacle at Paris, the immediate impression must be that Premier Khrushchev has committed a monumental blunder." —Newark (N.J.) Evening News.

"In the short span of three decades government's tax take has jumped from a proportion of about one dollar out of ten to about one dollar out of three of the national income. If the big spenders have their way, the proportion will soon become one in two, or still more. And you, along with the other 180 million or so people in this country, will do the paying. No one else can." —Industrial News Review.

So You've Got Some Problems?

What's your problem? If you are between 13 and 20 years, tall or short, thick or thin, smart or dumb, we'll bet you have a big problem. Usual or unusual, your problem is not unique — which may be a disconcerting factor. The chances are that all your friends have the same little pest attacking them. But don't despair. There is consolation in the fact that others have faced similar problems, and have worked them out to their satisfaction.

The parent problem . . . Young people fume because Mom waits up to the wee hours for her darling daughter, may even reprimand her for staying out too late before her date is out of earshot. Or because dad insists he must pick up his girl at the dance, not trusting her to the hotrods of the younger set. Once a young modern realizes that this concern of parents is really a blessing, hard as it seems to cope with at the time, the easier life will be.

Your first plan should be to instill in your parents their security and trust in you.

Other ways to make life easier:

Getting home at the time specified by your parents or calling them at the time you are supposed to be home (chances are they will not be asleep anyway) to let them know how much idea they will be.

Going along with dad's idea that he pick you up after that dance. Chances are he'll give that up once he acquaints himself with your crowd, but why fight the idea in the meantime?

Make it a point to introduce your family to your date, and have him arrive at your house early enough to get acquainted with the family. If you aren't that proud of him, he may not be worth dating, a fact you must face. If you act cagey about him, you can't blame your parents for becoming suspicious.

You hate yourself . . . You wouldn't be a teen-ager if you didn't dislike yourself at times. There are times when young people can't cope with their overweight, underweight, unpopularity, lack of funds, lack of know-how, and what have you.

One way to solve the loneliness of these distresses is to seek out people who have the same problems. It is the easiest way out, and misery does love company, you'll find. You and your friends may learn how to make the best of your lot or to improve your situation so that living is easier during these years. Once you've gained maturity, you won't be bothered by such distresses.

You and your friends can have fun on a diet, comparing notes to lose or gain weight. You might band together to corral friendships and start the popularity ball rolling in your direction. You may find a friend who will have ideas about raising money in after-school jobs.

The important idea in youth is to have a friend. It is really the great balance wheel of these difficult times.

Night Eaters

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press Science Writer
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Night eaters and binge eaters may be driven to obesity not by their stomachs — but by their brains and emotions, a researcher reported today.

The night eater is the fellow who rarely eats a meal before noon — begins in earnest at the evening meal and continues eating into the night.

He rarely speaks of being hungry — he just finds himself nibbling and he can't stop. Dr. Albert J. Stumkard of the University of Pennsylvania told a meeting of the American Medical Assn.

The night eater's trouble is that he can't satisfy himself — not that he has such a tremendous hunger drive.

On the other side of the fence is the binge eater—a fellow with a great compulsion to eat and overeat. He consumes great amounts of food in relatively short periods of time.

His eating habits exhibit great hunger drives but he does seem to become satisfied or oversatisfied.

The difference between the two may lie deep in the control center of the brain—the hypothalamus.

Perhaps one area of the hypothalamus controls satiety—or satisfaction — tells you when you've had enough. Another area may determine the real urge of hunger.

This doesn't mean that the night eater's satisfaction control in his brain is irreversibly damaged. It's just that during periods of light stress, his satisfaction control is disturbed, and doesn't work properly, Stumkard said.

Things are different for the binge eater. It is his hunger control section that may be upset. Usually his eating binges are followed by remorse and self condemnation. The eating binges also come during periods of light stress.

VAN WYCK MASON'S newest thriller Secret Mission to Bangkok

CHAPTER 24

There was only one reason Georges Marchet had been killed; the dead man had answered that question with his last breath. It is the actor's murderer! he had cried. Marchet had somehow found out who killed John Wallen; he had ordered his own liquidation by his discovery.

Colonel Hugh North went through the dead man's pockets, oblivious to the faces that crowded the broken window. In the dingy shirt's breast pocket he found a scrap of hotel stationery upon which was written in a shaky hand: "Suite 7-D." That was the number of John Wallen's rooms and Georges Marchet apparently had not trusted to his fuzzy memory to direct him to the scene of his own death. There was also a faded and crumpled newspaper photograph of Dr. Hans Bracht and his wife.

Hugh studied the clipping. Even though the print was smudged by long handling, despite the woman's stiff attitude, Tao Muong was indisputably a beautiful young woman.

It was in search of that beautiful, vain, shallow face that looked blankly back at Hugh from the worn and soiled clipping that Dr. Hans Bracht had dropped one of the most important space projects the United States had ever planned, had deserted his laboratory to place his life in jeopardy. This empty, movie-struck girl had by her kidnapping endangered the future of the free world.

Movie-struck girl. In those words must lie the connection between Tao Muong and John Wallen, the link that had cost Wallen his life.

Yet Bracht had said Tao Muong had never met John Wallen. Still, Tao Muong's voice had sounded over the telephone here in Bangkok.

Captain Pokh returned to Room 14 with the announcement that Anton Carrs, Lita Naline, Lex Ross, and Boris Salenkov had not left their rooms since the police interrogation.

"Proves murder was done by other person," Pokh observed sagely. "Mary Hollberg."

"Perhaps," North sighed. He knew it would accomplish nothing to point out that the Imperial Hotel had half a dozen entrances that the killer could have used when he or she doubled back, several on halls that did not lead to the lobby.

"I've got to get back to my room," the colonel told the underdressed Thai. "I've been away too long, as it is."

"Colonel North, you never tell me what your mission is," the Thai captain said wistfully. "Why you not tell me? Perhaps I work better with you if I know what you're doing."

Hugh considered briefly. The little man might not be G-2 headquarters' idea of the perfect confidant but he deserved something for his co-operation.

"Briefly, it's this," the colonel told Pokh. "The man in the next room to mine is a person my country wants to keep out of the hands of the Communists. His wife's been kidnapped and I'm pretty sure the Reds used her as a lure to get my man out here so they could grab him."

"So-o-o," Pokh breathed, nodding. "And you think murder of Misser Wallen and Monsieur Marchet mixed up in this somehow, mebbe-so?"

"I don't know," North said truthfully, "but just before Wallen was killed he phoned me and mentioned the name of my man's missing wife."

"Can give me name, pliss?" Pokh asked.

Hugh hesitated. "Her name's Tao Muong," he told Pokh. "She's a countrywoman of yours. Ever hear of her?"

The captain shook his head. North put his next question after due deliberation. "You know, Captain, it's Chu Hoong who always gets Aloysius Robinson out of trouble don't you?"

Pokh grinned uneasily. "Had big suspicion but never no proof," he said. "Chu Hoong never come right out and say this man must not be arrested; only pay fines, put up bail, things like that. Some say Aloysius Robinson is really Chu Hoong's son by Macanese woman but don't know for sure."

He peered at North. "You think because Robinson tried to rob your Misser Barrows that Chu Hoong mixed up in kidnapping, mebbe-so? You think Robinson not trying to kidnap him too?"

"Or kill him," North said bluntly.

"Ohhh nooo," Pokh protested. "Even if whole world crazy, Chu Hoong not send Aloysius Robinson to get Misser Barrows. That ponk not worth a tical at anything."

And that, North told himself, was rating Robinson about as low as a Siamese could rate anybody. A tical was the lowest coin in Thai currency.

Hans Bracht was awake and raving restlessly about Room 437 when North returned. The G-2 colonel told Bracht all about the two murders.

"I'm sure," North concluded, "that Marchet was killed because he saw who killed Wallen and had to be shut up."

The missile scientist looked stunned. "But — but why was Wallen killed? You said you heard that Wallen knew something about Tao Muong. Did his murder have anything to do with that?"

"I suspect it did," Hugh said. "I am not positive, though."

The G-2 colonel moved to the chair in the corner and sat down. "Doctor," he said matter-of-factly, "let's talk. We may not get another chance, the way things are beginning to move."

"Talk? Talk about what?"

"About everything! It's time to stop playing games with me, Doctor, and give me the whole story. Two men have been killed. They're getting restless, Bracht; they may jump any minute and when they do I want to be ready for them — I want to know what direction they're coming from."

"I've told you I can't talk, North. I've explained how they warned me —"

"Let's get this straight," the colonel grated. "They didn't kidnap your wife for ransom money, Dr. Bracht. They want you. They're Communists and the only deal they'll offer is to swap Tao Muong for you — and they won't live up to their word then. At best, they'll let her live with you in a Soviet prison laboratory while you work for them against the free world. Will you go for a deal like that?"

Bracht's face was gray, lined. Cling as he might to the hope that he could get Tao Muong back by paying x number of dollars, North knew that the master of space travel must have had the terrible suspicion nudge into his thoughts that this was more than a snatch, that this was a Red plan to make a slave scientist out of him. Still, the missile genius fought to preserve his illusion.

"They promised me! Tao Muong told me over the telephone that they would let her go when I paid the ransom. I've got to believe her, Colonel."

"But you have no way of knowing it was Tao Muong," North pointed out. "An accented voice is the easiest in the world to imitate."

"But I talked to Tao Muong. I tell you!" Bracht cried. "Even if I hadn't recognized her voice I'd have known that by what she said to me. Those were things only she could possibly have known. She mentioned some things that I'd almost forgotten — things like what she wore the night we met in Chaiyat, my first words to her, what we ate at our first meal together. Nobody would have known that except Tao Muong."

"This was in Hong Kong?" North asked.

"There and in San Francisco," Hans Bracht nodded. "Whatever else I may be wrong about, I'm right when I say I talked to Tao Muong, no imitator, Colonel."

The kidnappers of Hans Bracht's wife are going to make a desperate move. Continue Van Wyck Mason's new thriller tomorrow.

Two TV Producers Try Winter Quality Shows

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For some strange reason, television programs which are the summer replacements for winter-season shows have, in the industry's eyes, a rather low status in a status-conscious industry.

This certainly is not true of their status as far as the viewer, beset by re-runs and re-broadcasts is concerned. But this summer happily, at least two producers are attempting to provide winter-grade entertainment for the hot-weather audience.

One is Henry Jaffe, producer of NBC's hour-long mystery series on Sunday night. The other is Bob Banner, whose "Diagnosis Homicide" series will start July 5 on CBS. Both shows take the place of vacationing variety shows — Dinah Shore's and Garry Moore's respectively.

Banner, particularly, has deliberately chosen to showcase his new series, concerned with activities of laboratory detectives, during the vacation period as part of a theory and a plan.

"In the first place, I don't believe that people stop watching television during the summer," he says. "They may not start their viewing while it's still daylight, but I'm sure they look at TV after dark. And even if a quarter of the public is on vacation, it finds TV sets where it goes."

Second thoughts on a first run: It is doubtful how much good Tuesday night's "How Tall is a Giant?" did for the Little League baseball movement. The NBC film documentary emphasized strongly the fierce competition and pressures laid on boys aged 9 to 12 and stressed the importance of winning, more than the pleasure of playing the game.

Recommended tonight: "Long Distance," NBC, 8:30-9 — repeat of a tense drama starring Jessica Tandy playing a wife trying to halt her husband's execution; "Spring Festival," CBS, 10-11 — a program of folk music by young American artists.

Didn't Really Intend To Shoot

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Television's Captain Midnight admits his guilt: he did, indeed, disturb the peace.

Also the police. Officers said husky actor Richard Webb barricaded himself in his suburban home Sunday night and challenged officers to a Western-style gun duel.

Officers grabbed Webb, 45, bareheaded. He entered the plea on the misdemeanor charge Tuesday and will be sentenced July 12.

The police confiscated a large collection of guns and ammunition from the home. Webb's mother, Gail, 71, assured them he didn't really intend to shoot anyone. He had just been drinking, she said.

Possibly Huge Welcome For Ike

WASHINGTON (AP)—Evangelist Billy Graham said Tuesday he believes there is a possibility that President Eisenhower will receive in Japan "the greatest welcome of his life."

Graham gave his views in a talk before a joint civic clubs luncheon, saying he based his belief upon knowledge of the Japanese people gained during several visits to Japan.

Thunderstorms Reach Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A line of thunderstorms powered by strong winds moved into parts of the Midwest today. Northwest Missouri and eastern Kansas were particularly in the line of bad weather, the Chicago Weather Bureau reported. The bureau forecast winds of up to 65 miles an hour for the area. The storms evidently peeled off a seige of foul weather that raked parts of the Midwest Wednesday night. Tornadoes, real and unconfirmed, hit Nebraska and Michigan; winds up to 80 m.p.h. hit some communities along with heavy rain and hail. One man was killed and three others injured east of Holdrege, Neb., when a tornado toppled a granary. Utility lines collapsed, windows crashed as heavy rain and hail hit a score of towns in central and south central Nebraska. A small tornado hit Lincoln, causing some damage to buildings on the State Hospital grounds. Ten persons were injured when a tornado hit several trailer homes near Elkhorn, Neb. Powerful winds toppled outbuildings, trees and utility lines in south central Michigan. Hail, wind and rain also struck Iowa communities. The Weather Bureau reported 3.50 inches of rain in 1 1/2 hours at Kennebec, Iowa. Des Moines had winds of up to 55 m.p.h.

Early temperatures today ranged from the 40s in the Colorado Rockies to the 50s and 60s in the East, Midwest and Pacific Coast, the 80s in the south and 90s in the desert southwest. It was 98 at midnight at Needles, Calif.

Top Candidates At Girls State
GREENSBORO (AP) — Linda Orr of Charlotte and Nannie Hussey of Rocky Mount are candidates for governor of Tar Heel Girls State in balloting underway today at the annual citizenship training program at Womans College here. Miss Orr, 17, is the Nationalist party candidate while Miss Hussey, 16, is the Federalist nominee. Also to be chosen by the girls for their mythical state government are a lieutenant governor, secretary of state, chief justice and attorney general. The governor will be inaugurated Friday at the state capitol in Raleigh during a day of sight-seeing between Greensboro and the capital city. The week-long Girls State closes Saturday.

GREYBULL, Wyo. (AP) — An eight-foot plank was hurled over a sawmill and through the chest of a man standing on the other side of the building Wednesday. S.H. Finest Tribute To Mother: 4 Children

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Letter received by Michigan State University: "Dear sir—We see names in the paper of people doing this and that. "We think our mother, Mrs. James Zeitz, ought to be mentioned for she is going to school, has four children between the ages of 7 and 13, and helps run a 190-acre farm. "She is a senior this year and has put a lot of strain on herself. We feel she needs a reward of some kind, other than our love. "Thank you — Audrey, Nancy, Hank and Peggy Zeitz." The reply: "Dear Audrey, Nancy, Hank and Peggy—Here is some recognition for your fine mother. "She says she wouldn't be getting her B. A. (in education), June 12 if it weren't for your help and support. "Audrey, she says you're the morning mainstay of the family. Only 13, you've been getting yourself and the younger children off to school after your parents leave for Lansing — your mother for MSU and your father for his work as a roofer. "Nancy, your mother tells us that though you're only 11, you've been the family dinner cook, having things ready when your parents get home. "Hank, you're 8 and the outside man — you've been pulling your oar by taking care of the pigs. "Peggy, your mother says that though you're only 7, you've done your share, too, by helping with the dishes. "Sincerely, Michigan State University."

Census Championships Of 1960 Already Shaping Up

By SAM HARTZ
WASHINGTON (AP) — With the counting 98 per cent complete, it's not too early to be thinking about the census champs of 1960. Possible nominations: Best Opening Remark to a Census Taker: President Eisenhower's, "I wonder if they've started a pool all over the nation on the number of people in the census?" Most Reluctant Man to be Counted: George Kido of Detroit, who said: "The government has never done anything for me. Why should I do anything for the government? I'm not living in Russia. I don't have to answer these questions." The enumerator returned with a policeman and Kido answered the necessary questions. Best-Known Census Test Flunker: Teddy Nadler, television quiz winner of $264,000, failed the exam because—said a census man—he had no aptitude for maps. "The print was so small and I didn't know which way was north or south," moaned Nadler. The ex-cricketer, whose quiz specialties were classical music, history, mythology and baseball, said: "It makes me look like a nitwit. I think I'll hide for two years." Most Awkward Census Test Flips: In Washington, D.C., flunkers among the party faithful brought red faces to local Republican bigwigs. "We suggested a lot of names," said the chairman, "but many never passed the examination. It became quite embarrassing." Most Cooperative Hotel: The Sheraton in Philadelphia blew a fuse in its efforts to help the transient count. When it placed forms in all the mailboxes, lights were supposed to go on in all the rooms. But the load was too much and a fuse blew. Fastest Thinking Enumerator: When a Topeka, Kan., resident balked because he said there was nothing in the Bible about giving census data, the census taker pointed out Jesus was born in Bethlehem because Mary and Joseph were there to be counted. Most Work to Collect a Name: In Idaho wilderness country, census taker Mrs. Gene Vincent headed for the Salmon River home of Bill Wooley. The only transportation across the river was a hand-pulled cable car—and it was on the wrong side. Mrs. Vincent walked along the river bank until she came to the home of another settler, who fired a rifle shot to get Wooley's attention. Wooley

Believe Balloon Is Hawaii-Bound

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—The Navy's missing research balloon is believed drifting toward Hawaii. The balloon's out of radar range but the Navy thinks it is still high in the air and more than 1,400 miles southwest of here. The helium-filled balloon, launched in Georgia, was supposed to drop a load of cosmic radiation measuring instruments as it floated over Texas. Something went wrong and the balloon with its instruments went on. Navy fighters from here tried to shoot it down but failed.

Saturn Booster Passing Tests

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP)—Saturn's superbooster has passed its first series of tests with flying colors, says Dr. Werner von Braun, Saturn project director. The last in the series of nine static or tied-down tests was held Wednesday at the Marshall space flight center. The next series is scheduled to begin in August and will be continued up to the time of the actual launching at Cape Canaveral, Fla., in 1961, von Braun said. Saturn-T, the booster now being tested, will not be flown. This honor will go to Saturn-I, now being assembled at the space center. A third booster also is being assembled. The booster is the first stage of the planned multistage Saturn space vehicle — this nation's brightest hope to put heavy payloads into space. During the Civil War gunpowder was manufactured at Meramec Cavers in Stanton, Mo.

Believer In More Production Through Conservation

CONNOR EAGLES . . . Work Unit Conservationist.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A man dedicated to better production in Pitt County through conservation of the land and water resources is Connor Eagles, Work Unit Conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture.

Eagles, who heads the SCS in Pitt, is a native of Edgecombe County. He also claims Pitt as part of his home due to the fact that the farm on which he grew up was divided by the Pitt-Edgecombe County line.

After graduating from Tarboro High School, Eagles attended N. C. State College where he majored in Animal Husbandry.

He recalls he became interested in conservation work in college when studying tile drainage and jokingly remembers he won a gold medal in a national tile drainage contest and "had never seen one piece of tile put in the ground" at the time.

After graduation, Eagles taught agriculture for 14 years. During his last five years in teaching, he was principal of the Smyrna High School where he also taught vocational agriculture and coached the school's athletic teams.

While at Smyrna, the girls basketball team never lost a game while the boys team were champs for three years. The track team at the school was also good and took the title all five years straight.

Eagles left Smyrna to go with the Conservation Service in Statesville where he lived for six months, then was transferred to Hendersonville, then to Franklinton where he lived for five years.

After spending two years at Carthage in Moore County, he came to Pitt in 1942, when the SCS office opened here, and he has remained here ever since.

The chief duties of the office are to help farmers work out soil and water conservation plans on their farms and then help them get the plans installed and working.

The program of the SCS includes soil and water conservation through crop rotations, cover crops, improved pastures, farm forestry, terracing and contour tillage of hillsides, open ditch and tile drainage, irrigation, farm ponds and others.

Eagles pointed out that the SCS surveys for the conservation projects and does the planning, then the farmer has the actual work done.

Eagles added that the SCS has planned and supervised the laying of over two and one-half million feet of tile in the county and over 600 miles of drainage ditching.

In addition to the department's regular job of soil and water conservation, they supervise the planting of wildlife food patches for wild birds.

What does he like best about his job? "Working with farmers and helping them to do what should be done to conserve the soil and water and bring it up," Eagles said.

Eagles, who is paid with federal funds, has two full-time aides and three part time workers. In addition to these, an engineer and two farm planners have been allotted to the office to work with the Grindle Creek watershed project, for which bids were opened last week.

In addition to these federal employees, Pitt County hires an office clerk to keep records for the SCS.

To sum up the work of the SCS, it helps farmers to use the land within its capabilities and to take care of its needs and improvements. The SCS, in addition to the work in the field, gives programs to schools and civic groups and puts on television and radio programs from time-to-time, stressing conservation.

In this conservation work, the SCS enjoys the full co-operation of the other farm agencies in the county, Eagles noted.

Greenville And ECC Personnel Play Intriguing Role In New Bern Drama

By JOHNNY HUDSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The historic story of near-by New Bern and its struggle to become a part of the new world is being justly portrayed in the drama, "The Third Frontier," by Kermit Hunter. Greenville and East Carolina College personnel are playing an intriguing part in helping revive the early endurances of the Eastern North Carolina city.

Dr. J.A. Withey, noted figure in the drama field and Playhouse director at East Carolina College, is directing the drama by Hunter, author of other outstanding outdoor dramas such as "Unto These Hills" and "Horn in the West".

Withey received his doctorate in drama and theater from Cornell University and has served as director of theater at Kansas State Teachers College and Syracuse University; and was a staff member of the Cornell University theater and Summer theater. He has received training in drama from France, England and many other parts of the United States.

With Withey as director of the outdoor drama, no less than 20 people from Greenville or holding ties with East Carolina College help make up the cast for the play. Six of the leading characters are from the college.

Ralph Hardee Rives of Enfield, former East Carolina College student who will join the college English staff this fall, plays the part of William Tryon, Royal Governor of North Carolina from 1765 until 1771.

Claude Garren, a member of the English staff at ECC, is cast in the role of Baron deGraffen-ried, an early Swiss settler in New Bern.

His wife, Louis, plays the part of Elsa Muller, a Swiss housewife. She is also serving as choreographer for "The Third Frontier."

Doug Mitchell as George Miller, son of Jacob Muller, is a 1958 graduate of East Carolina College where he participated actively in the EC Playhouse.

James Vinci, chief of the Tuscarora, holds Bachelor and Masters of Science degrees from East Carolina. He is currently serving as principal of the Brinson Memorial School of Craven county.

Doris Robbins plays the part of Polly Gay, a servant in the Tryon household. She is a Roanoke Rapids native and was a drama student at East Carolina this year.

Others from Greenville or East Carolina College taking part in the drama which highlights New Bern's 250th anniversary are Ray Tolley, Leigh Dobson, Karen Best, Larry Prescott, William Bowen, Paul Minnis, Marion Karam Marshall Braddy, Rose Gordo, Diane McCulley, Robert Gooden, Robert Schmit and Al Dunkle.

Ruth Lambie, member of the ECC Home Economics Department is serving on the staff as costumer.

The play, which opened on June 11, will run for 15 consecutive nights, with matinees on June 18 and 25. There will be a total of 18 performances.

Withey stated Wednesday that he is well pleased with the development of the play as well as with the response it has received.

A packed house turned up for the first showing of Hunter's 14th outdoor drama and after a drop off the following night, attendance has been building with each performance.

The production of the play takes place in the air-conditioned New Bern High auditorium, located on the outskirts of the old Eastern North Carolina city. The show is a "outdoor drama" with indoor comforts.

Dr. Withey related a unique instance that took place prior to the writing of the play.

"Before the play was written," says the ECC director, "Mr. Hunter and I went out to look over the New Bern auditorium to see if we could use it. Due to the many scenes planned for the play, we altered the stage so that we had extra stages leading out over the orchestra pit. Actually, we had set up the stage for the drama before it was even written."

The extra stages which lead out into the audience are in line with recent stage practice according to Dr. Withey. Also added to the stage make-up is a ramp which has delivered impressive entrances in many of the scenes.

A scrim curtain, something new for East Carolina College playhouse performers, is also being used in the New Bern drama. It is a transparent curtain which is used to show far-away or scenes in the past.

Scenes that have proved popular with the early viewers of the play, according to Dr. Withey, seem to be the ballroom, Indian, and burning of the palace scenes.

The play, which was filmed by a motion picture company for use in the future, has received favorable comments from those attending and critics. The main gripe coming from New Bern natives is the disappointment in attendance. They feel the play is so good a full house should be a nightly occurrence.

Hunter's play deals with the three cultures that have comprised New Bern — Swiss, English and American—and derives its name from the concept that the future is the third frontier. The past is considered the first, the present the second, and a glance is tossed ahead to the third frontier which is built on the foundation of the first two.

The story is described as the "North Carolina Story." It shows the immigrants embarking upon a new country in the wilderness, and the drama of adaptation, development and survival.

Included among the early guests for the drama have been Governor and Mrs. Luther Hodges, Dr. and Mrs. Edward P. Freimuller of Berne, Switzerland and Dr. and Mrs. Kermit Hunter.

Girl-Peeking Is 'Quite Correct'

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Men, it's all right to peek at that pretty girl on the sidewalk as you drive past, but don't stare.

"It's all a part of correct eye movement," says William Burnett, Iowa state safety education director.

"A good driver keeps his eyes moving, glancing quickly right and left as well as looking ahead. If your glance happens to catch a pretty girl walking along the street, how can you help it?"

But, added Burnett, married and the father of five sons, staring at an object while you drive—even if it's an approaching truck—can be dangerous.

Prices Can Still Go Up Despite FRB's Belief

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—Prices can still go up despite the belief of the Federal Reserve Board that the threat of further monetary inflation is licked for the time being.

The men who figure out the consumer price index in Washington say there should be little rise in the over-all cost of living for awhile, with seasonal changes in the price of food affecting the index most.

But here and there prices continue to creep higher. And if business activity turns up in the fall as now predicted the trend will have strong support from that.

Higher prices are expected in some areas, notwithstanding the easing in interest rates, the greater and often surplus capacity to produce, the keener sales competition.

Men's clothing is expected to be a bit dearer in the fall. Makers say the prices will reflect wage increases.

The average cost of cars is lower on the official cost of living index. But that is mainly because of the advent of the compact cars and some sluggishness in the used car markets.

Eastern railroads are talking about a hike in freight rates. Railroad wage rates are going up, too.

Costlier freight would hit manufacturers and merchants first, and trickle down later to consumers.

Airlines are expected to be allowed to hike their fares too, to help them pay for the expensive jets that the traveling public prefers.

Users of steel haven't forgotten that wage increases are set for the end of the year. Many expect to see the price of things made of steel to rise along with it.

Wage scales are expected to rise in several important industries this year, and some increases will be automatic under old contracts.

The most that is now expected for food prices is that they will change with the seasons. But there are bolstering factors here, too. In the case of basic crops, there is government support of prices. And in that big factor in the final price of food—the cost of processing, reducing home labor, and distributing—the trend is still upward.

The American Red Cross was founded in 1881.

Billy Wilder Driven By Creative Genius

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Billy Wilder is different from most Hollywood producers. He is smart enough to make up his own wisecracks.

Commenting on the reported rift between him and Marilyn Monroe, he remarked: "She doesn't need acting lessons. She's a fine actress already. What she needs is to go to a college where they give courses in advanced punctuality."

"I hate people who aren't on time. I come from a long line of railroad engineers," he said.

But Wilder, who helped bring Miss Monroe's career to a peak in "Some Like It Hot," is sure the two will work together again when they find the right script.

Billy is rapidly becoming a film legend as a writer, director and producer. He has been nominated for 13 Academy awards, actually won three Oscars.

"I was robbed 15 times," he smiled.

Wilder, an ex-Austrian newspaperman, has had a hand in scores of pictures.

Billy, who looks like a near-sighted bantam rooster with a convex hair cut, is driven by a fury of creative genius that is rescued from obsession by a saving sense of wry humor. He is one of the most popular figures in the industry—and one of the most respected.

He paces like a hungry leopard while he works, smokes four packs of cigarettes a day.

"It's not good for me perhaps," he sighed, then added: "But I have a theory about it. I feel that if I gave up smoking and five or six years later was hit by a car, and lay dying in a gutter, I'd hate myself for having lost so much joy in my last years."

Billy, ebullient by nature, is optimistic about Hollywood's future.

"We're merely separating the men from the boys, and the men will survive to make fewer but better pictures," he said. "What the industry really needs is more serious film fans. It's up to them. If they support good pictures, then the industry will invest the money to make them."

"One cruel thing about turning out a bad movie," he observed, "is that it goes on forever. A bad play folds and is forgotten, but in pictures we don't bury our

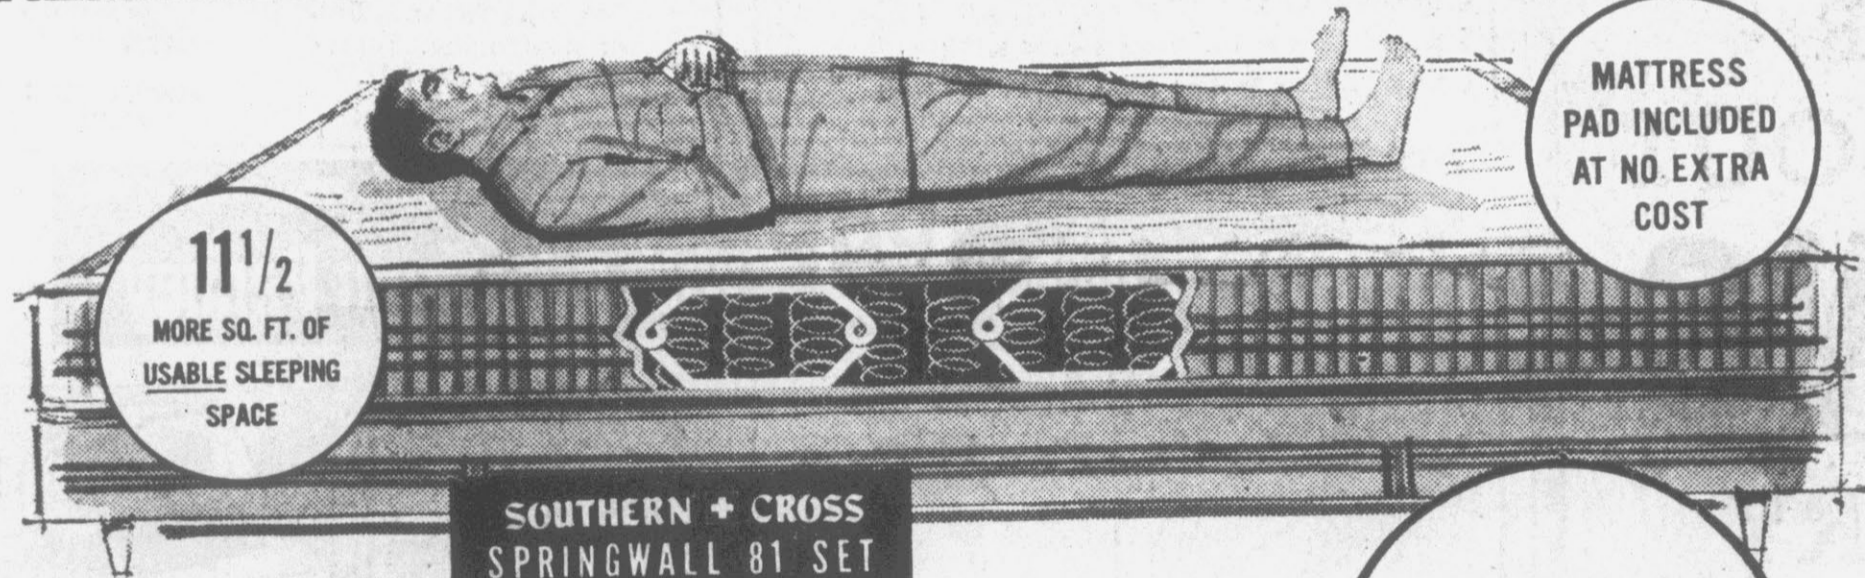

"A bad picture goes on being shown in country after country, stinking up the world world. It's cruel."

"Finally, when you think it is out of your system, your daughter sees it on television, and says, 'My father is an idiot. How could he have done such a thing?'"

The Jaycees dealt the American Legion its first loss 6-5 and the Lions breezed past wireless Rotary 6-1 in Ayden Little League action this week.

In the first game, the Lions pushed across two runs on only two hits in the third inning to take a comfortable lead over the Rotary. Two more walks, a hit batter, and a walk enabled the winners to score three more runs.

The losers picked up their lone run in the first frame on two hits.

In the second game, it took three pitchers but the Jaycees finally knocked the American Legion from the unbeaten list with a 6-5 victory.

Danny Cleaton, the Jaycee starter who failed to last the first inning due to wildness, teamed up with Tom Booth to supply the offensive winning tactics. Cleaton had a run scoring double while Booth stole home with the winning run after a walk and reaching third by another base on balls and a fielder's choice.

Yankees Move Into Tie For Top Spot

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Because what should have been a sacrifice fly was converted into a doubleplay, the New York Yankees have only a share of the American League lead instead of being all alone on top.

The boo-boo came in the third-inning of Wednesday night's game at Kansas City. Hector Lopez left third base too soon on a fly ball and was doubled up by the A's—who then twice overcame three-run deficits and held the Yankees to a 7-7, 12-inning tie.

When rain finally called a halt, the Yankees were all square with Cleveland. And the Baltimore Orioles, who split a two-night pair with the Indians, were just one percentage point back.

The third-place Orioles, beating the Indians 13-5 after a 10-2 first game loss, have a 33-24 record. New York and Cleveland each are 29-21. That figures out to a half-game edge for Baltimore, but percentages form the basis of the standings.

The Chicago White Sox regained fourth place with a 6-4 decision over Washington. Boston spilled Detroit to fifth place by beating the Tigers 4-3 in 10 innings.

In the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates gained a three-game lead—largest of the season in either league—by walloping second-place San Francisco 14-6. Third-place Milwaukee slipped five games behind by splitting a two-night doubleheader with Chicago. The Cubs won the second game 6-5 after losing 5-4. St. Louis defeated Cincinnati 6-0. Los Angeles clobbered Philadelphia 14-2.

That third-inning run that never got home kept the Yankees from runs by Yogi Berra and Cletis Boyer. The first of Johnny Romano's pair of two-run homers settled it. Jim Perry (7-2) put away his sixth in a row.

Roy Sievers drove in four runs for the White Sox with two homers against his old mates. The second cracked a 4-4 tie in the seventh and beat Pete Ramos (3-8). Gerry Staley (7-2) was the winner.

Consecutive singles by Pete Runnels, Ted Williams and Frank Malzone did it for the Red Sox. Tom Morgan (3-1) was the loser and Mike Fornieles (4-1) the winner, both in relief.

Cardinals Pick Up Pace In National League Race

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The St. Louis Cardinals are seven games behind and the Chicago Cubs trail by 9½. But they are the two top clubs in any pennant plans Pittsburgh has at the moment in the National League race.

The Pirates have a three-game lead—biggest bulge of the season in the majors—after socking second-place San Francisco 14-6 Wednesday. They pulled five games away from third-place Milwaukee after the Braves managed no more than a split with the Cubs in a two-night doubleheader.

But while the Cubs, winning 8-5 after a 5-4 loss, kept the Braves from closing in, the Cardinals continued to look like possible challengers with a 6-0 victory over Cincinnati. It was the fifth success in six games for the fourth-place Cards, who look three of four from the Pirates last weekend.

They did it behind the three-hit pitching of rookie Ray Sadecki. Los Angeles walloped last-place Philadelphia 14-2 in the other NL game.

In the American League, the New York Yankees were held to a 7-7, 12-inning tie by Kansas City and rain, but gained a share of first place with Cleveland. The Baltimore Orioles made it a virtual three-way deadlock—just one percentage point behind—by dividing a two-night pair with the Indians. The Chicago White Sox regained fourth place with a 6-4 victory over Washington. Boston spilled Detroit to fifth by beating the Tigers 4-3 in 10 innings.

The seventh-place Cubs, who almost made it a sweep by junking Warren Spahn's four-hit shutout with four ninth-inning runs in the opener, came from behind with six runs in the nightcap eighth. An error by Red Schoendienst, which made four of the runs unearned, and five singles did it as the Cubs tagged starter Carl Willey, losing reliever Ron Piche (0-2) and Lew Burdette in the big frame.

Moe Drabowsky (2-0) won it in relief after the Braves scored all their runs on homers by Ed Mathews, who socked two, and Wes Covington.

Ed Bouchee's three-run homer off reliever Don McMahon capped the Cubs' ninth-inning rally in the first game. McMahon (2-5), winless since opening day, finally won it when the Braves beat Seth Morehead (0-4) with a two-run ninth capped by Al Spangler's single.

The Pirates battered Billy O'Dell (2-6) and five relievers for 19 hits while running up the highest score of the season against the Giants. Don Hoak drove in four runs with three hits. Dick Groat and winner Harvey Haddix (4-3) each had four hits.

Sadecki, a 19-year-old lefty walked eight but struck out nine for his first major league victory in three decisions. It also was his first complete game and first shutout by the Card staff.

Duke Snider and Don Demeter hit two-run homers for the Dodgers while Sandy Kouss (2-8) allowed the Phils only five hits. Jim Owens (3-7) was the loser.

An eight-run eighth inning did it for the Orioles in the second game after home runs by Al Pizarro and Gus Triandos had overhauled a 5-0 Cleveland lead. Jim Busby, just back from the minors, doubled twice and drove in two runs in the rally. Jim Grant (4-2) was the loser. Hoyt Wilhelm (3-4) won

Greensboro Back In Game Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Greensboro went back to the head of the Carolina League class Wednesday night, with a 10-inning, 8-7 decision over Burlington.

Raleigh split a doubleheader with Winston-Salem, winning a first game, 4-2, and losing the second, 2-1.

Wilson drummed out 17 hits to beat Durham, 11-1.

Greensboro staged a couple of final hour rallies for their close decision over Burlington. The Yanks gained a 5-5 tie in the top of the ninth inning. Burlington plated two runs in their half of the 10th, but Greensboro used a two-run homer by Jim Johnston, and a follow-up homer by Ed Gary to edge out the Indians.

Two men were out in the ninth inning when Bud Bloomfield's single climaxed the two-run rally that gave Winston-Salem its victory over Raleigh.

In the initial game, Raleigh pitcher Dan Wooden hit a two-run single in the sixth which accounted for the winning runs.

COLLEGE VIEW WINS

College View scored two runs in each of the last four innings last night to crush Home Builders 8-2 in Teener League activity.

The Home Builders scored two runs in the first inning on a walk and homer by Johnson. The losers got only two hits. Walden got a single in the bottom half of the seventh inning.

Hardee went the route for College View and received credit for the victory. He also had a two-run homer in the seventh inning. Gidley had two hits for the winners and Sumerlin figured in the scoring with two-run homer in the sixth inning.

'IF NECESSARY'

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP)—The Kentucky division of United Spanish War Veterans adopted resolution Tuesday urging strong U.S. action against Fidel Castro's government in Cuba. Such action, said the resolution, should include sending troops to Cuba if necessary.

Carolina Loses Out In College World Series

OMAHA (AP)—The NCAA College Baseball World Series ran the range Wednesday with a no-hitter, the second longest game in its history, a four run outburst in the eighth that rescued tourney favorite Minnesota and its fourth rainout.

The day's play opened with sophomore Jim Wixson, pitching no-hit ball as defending champion Oklahoma State escaped oblivion in the double elimination tourney by beating North Carolina 7-0.

Wixson, a six-foot-one right-handed fast ball pitcher, probably wouldn't have gotten to pitch that game if the State ace, Dick Soergel hadn't been left at home because of illness. Oddy, Wixson's only other win this season was a one-hitter.

Wixson said, "This was the wildest I've been all season (he walked seven) but I guess I was just wild enough to keep them loose up here. I relied on my fast ball because my curve wasn't breaking until the last two innings."

It was the second no-hitter in series history, the first having been pitched by Jim Ehrler of Texas in 1950 when he beat Tufts by the same 7-0 score.

The second game of the day brought the second longest game in series history when St. John's College of New York City edged Colorado State 3-2 in 13 innings, one short of the record game in length.

It appeared that a three-run homer by Ken Hunt of Arizona, the first in the current series, was going to send Minnesota down in defeat, but the Gophers broke loose for four runs on three hits in the bottom of the eighth for the win.

Then came the Southern California-Boston College game and the fourth rainout of the series. The rain came in the bottom of the first after Southern Cal had completely rained out last Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Pastor Hits Lake Candidacy

A Baptist minister of Raleigh spoke out strongly from the pulpit Sunday against the gubernatorial candidacy of I. Beverly Lake.

If Lake is elected, the Rev. W. W. Finlator said, his supporters "would interpret his victory as a mandate to defiance. And these will be the people he must appoint to positions of power and influence across the State . . ."

The Rev. Mr. Finlator, pastor of Pullen Memorial Baptist Church here, said he was not attacking Dr. Lake personally but that the voters are being called upon to make a decision which "will deeply affect today, tomorrow and in future years not only our State but the Southland . . ."

Lake has called for a June 25 run-off primary with Terry Sanford, who led a field of four by more than 87,000 votes in the May 28 primary.

Friend of Lake
Finlator said he had been a friend of Lake's for years and that Lake taught a Sunday school class he attended at Wake Forest College, where Lake was a law professor for some years.

"It is a fearsome thing to discover in those you deeply respect a fatal flaw . . ." the Rev. Mr. Finlator said. "Whether consciously or unconsciously, it is to (a) vote of prejudice that Dr. Lake's campaign is pitched. It is just that simple. The issue is race and the appeal is prejudice."

He continued, "This may not be entirely to Dr. Lake's liking and if that is so we can thank God for it, but the capacity to disassociate himself from it no longer lies in his power. He has set in motion forces he can no longer control . . ."

Image He Built
"Dr. Lake cannot, if he would, divest himself of an image he has so carefully and painstakingly built for himself for a long while."

If Lake is elected, Finlator said, "the Fabuses and the Talmadges and the Eastlands will rejoice that at long last they have one of their own kind at the helm of North Carolina."

A Lake victory would "aid and comfort these elements of leadership in the South who have been annoyed and embarrassed by the wisdom and maturity and restraint of North Carolina," the minister said.

Asserting that "we are accountable for our earthly citizenship," the Rev. Mr. Finlator told his congregation: ". . . If you are trying by God's grace to live in two worlds at the same time . . . you will address yourself to this gubernatorial election with the hope and the prayer that more and more may the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of God and his Christ."

He added, "You will know that there is no hiding place in pious escapism or in sudden selfish involvement."

Two Sergeants On Last Miles Of A Record Walk

CLINTON, N.J. (AP) — Refreshed with their first bath in a week, Britain's walking sergeants tramp, tramp on the last miles of their transcontinental trek today.

Declares Adlai Wants The Job

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt says Adlai Stevenson, whom she boosts for the Democratic presidential nomination, wants to be president.

Stevenson has said he is not a candidate for the nomination, but has indicated he would accept a draft.

Mrs. Roosevelt made her remarks to newsmen during a visit here to address women's groups at Wesleyan University.

As for Sen. John Kennedy (D-Mass.), Mrs. Roosevelt said she did not think his primary election victories mean that he is the candidate most Democrats want.

She said her son, Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., played a major role in Kennedy's victory last month in the West Virginia primary.

"My son reminded the voters there of my husband and created a whole new image for Kennedy," she said.

York, and a new cross-country walking mark. The sergeants, Patrick Maloney, 34, and Mervyn Evans, 33, plan to stop tonight in the New Jersey metropolitan area and then cross the Hudson River Friday via the Lincoln Tunnel into New York.

They'll end the long walk at the British Exposition at the New York Coliseum. Behind them lie 2,970 miles of American hills, rills, plains and mountains — and eight pairs of shoes they have worn out in transit.

The sergeants left San Francisco April 12. If they make New York on schedule Friday, they will have been on the road 67 days, cutting 10 days from the old transcontinental record.

They bedded down Wednesday night at a motel in Lebanon, a few miles east of here on Rt. 22. "We sure love this road (Rt. 22)," said Maloney, a Royal Air Force paratrooper instructor. Evans is a British army paratrooper.

They are accompanied by a third sergeant, Roy Rogers, who drives ahead in an auto and a trailer.

They reached Lebanon in a misty rain after walking through the rolling New Jersey countryside from Pennsylvania.

The sergeants said that the hills of western Pennsylvania were more of a grind than the Rockies.

Several truck drivers offered the swift-striding sergeants a lift. They declined without breaking stride.

Dr. Barbara Moore, 56, British dietician who started from San Francisco a day after the sergeants, was far behind, troubled by a stiff ankle.

1929 by Abraham L. Montaverde of Mays Landing, N.J. But a claim by the late photographer Edward Weston that he walked from Los Angeles to New York in 77 days in 1910 is accepted as the record by several authorities.

The sergeants said that was the mark they are trying to better. In Seattle, Wallace King, 36, a World War II veteran, said he would start out Monday to return the record to the United States.

King quit his job as a civilian ground maintenance man at Ft. Lawton to set out on his Seattle-New York trek.

Several days ago dog catcher George Helms radioed that he heard voices under the hood of his truck, from the dog pen in the rear and from the sidewalks about town.

Police Chief Ralph Smith said prisoners continually heard voices calling to them from outside the cells.

The mysterious voices disappeared when Martin Dwyer, 42, of Sayre, Okla., was released after working out a fine for drunkenness by helping the dog catcher.

Police learned Wednesday Dwyer was a ventriloquist.

LIBERAL Kan. (AP) — The dogs in the dog catcher's truck have stopped talking and no more are strange voices heard in the county jail.

Several days ago dog catcher George Helms radioed that he heard voices under the hood of his truck, from the dog pen in the rear and from the sidewalks about town.

Vote To Repeal Affidavit Proviso

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has voted to repeal a requirement for nonsubversive affidavits from college students receiving loans or grants under the 1958 Defense Education Act.

Instead, it substituted criminal penalties ranging up to five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine for anyone who applies for or receives any payment under the act while he is a member of a subversive organization. Past membership within five years also must be disclosed.

Left unchanged was the law's requirement that any student seeking to qualify must take an oath of allegiance to this country.

The law provides scholarship and fellowship aid to college students

Action on the long-disputed repeal measure came suddenly Wednesday night as the Senate accepted a compromise amendment by Sen. Winston L. Prouty (R-Vt.). The original bill by Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and others would merely have repealed the affidavit provision.

amendment came so hastily that many senators were out of the chamber and missed the voice vote passing the measure.

Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D-Fla.), one of these, said he wanted to study the revised version overnight and entered a motion to reconsider. This blocked the bill from going to the House.

Kennedy said he would have preferred the straight repealer, but would go along with the compromise, particularly because he believed it might have a better chance of winning House passage.

Newspaper editor Herbert Bayard Swope said that a sure way to failure was to "try to please everybody."

Tobacco Tips

By S.J. WEEKS, Pitt County Tobacco Agent

Black shank is one of the most destructive tobacco diseases. It spreads rapidly and a large portion of a crop can be destroyed in a short time when susceptible varieties are grown. Serious losses often occur when resistant varieties are grown, especially when tobacco is not grown in rotation with crops that are resistant to the black shank fungus.

Black shank was first identified in North Carolina in 1930. In 1936, it was found on the Sam Worthington farm near Winterville. Since that time it has spread to all sections of Pitt County and eastern North Carolina.

The use of resistant varieties has reduced the losses caused by this dreadful disease; but, it still costs growers millions of dollars each year.

The several black shank resistant varieties that are being grown vary in the level of resistance to the disease. The available black shank resistant varieties are rated according to their level of resistance as carrying a high, moderate, or low, level of resistance.

It is very important for the tobacco grower to know as much as possible about the level of black shank infestation of his farm. One way to obtain this information is to observe closely the amount of tobacco that is lost from black shank with varieties carrying different levels of resistance. The type of rotation being followed and the prevailing weather conditions are also factors to consider when making an appraisal of your black shank infestation.

For example, if you are growing Vesta 5 variety this year in a two-year rotation, and black shank losses are heavy, you should consider growing a variety with a higher level of resistance when tobacco is planted in this field again.

If you are not sure which disease is killing your tobacco, I will be glad to visit your field and help determine which disease is present.

Sanford And Lake Wooing Mountain Voters Today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Mountain voters are being wooed today by Terry Sanford and I. Beverly Lake, candidates in a runoff primary for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Says Rockefeller 'Without Party'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) said today Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has become "A man without a party" because of criticism from his fellow Republicans.

In an address prepared for a luncheon of the Women's National Democratic Club, Symington—a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination—said: "Those of us who have been trying to show the people the true course of events under the current Republican leadership, were joined last week by a new and powerful voice."

"Like a well-placed scalpel, Gov. Rockefeller's statement opened up this administration and laid bare its policies of weakness, of drift, or economic stagnation, of neglect for the aged and the poor, of indifference toward human dignity and civil rights."

"The newspapers said his remarks would stimulate discussion within the Republican party. They were too optimistic. "The cannons of the Old Guard fired a volley of contempt. When the smoke had cleared, the governor was left standing in the middle of the field, discouraged, disillusioned, a man with a party."

The New York governor, in recent statements, criticized part of the Eisenhower administration's program and asked Vice President Richard M. Nixon to spell out his views on key issues. Nixon, in turn, defended the Eisenhower program and stated he had defined his views more clearly than Rockefeller or any of the Democratic presidential hopefuls.

ELY, Nev. (AP)—Contractor Angelo Reck has finished planting 2,000 steel posts along the Pony Express trail in Nevada under a legislative appropriation. The eight-foot posts are coated with bright fluorescent paint.

ic party politics was injected into the race by Robert Morgan state campaign manager for Lake.

In a statement from his Raleigh headquarters Wednesday night, Morgan questioned whether Sanford had met last week with Robert Kennedy, brother of Sen. John Kennedy (D-Mass.), a front contender for the presidential nomination.

"We know that Senator Kennedy needs just a few more committed delegates to win the presidential nomination next month. WAS not Senator Kennedy's brother here seeking these votes from the North Carolina delegation?" Morgan asked.

A prominent Baptist leader joined the ranks of Sanford supporters Wednesday. Dr. M. A. Huggins, who served for 27 years as general secretary of the Baptist State Convention, praised Sanford for "his spirit, his anity, his courage and his outlook."

Dr. Huggins said he was unable to support Lake, a Baptist who taught at Wake Forest College, "for he has sought, wittingly or unwittingly, to intensify those powerful emotions of hate and fear. And I believe such actions are immoral and reactionary."

A television show from Charlotte boosted Sanford's candidacy with Thomas Pearsall of Rocky Mount urging Sanford's election.

Pearsall headed the committee which drafted the Pearsall Plan, followed by North Carolina to solve problems arising from the U.S. Supreme Court decision against racial segregation in public schools.

Pearsall charged that Lake "is willing to gamble the public schools of our state and the education of its one million school children for his own selfish political gain."

Noo even the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, Pearsall asserted, could devise "a quicker means to destroy North Carolina's whole approach to this problem and to force all of the schools of this state into immediate and complete integration than through Dr. Lake's massive resistance program."

Only the legislature can raise taxes or spend tax money, Sanford reminded his audience. Legislators, he added, "have not made a substantial change in tax structure or tax rates for 20 years, and with no such rates our state revenue has increased seven times."

College Planning For Music Camp

East Carolina College's Seventh Annual Summer Music Camp is now in the final stages of planning before its opening July 17 for two weeks of concentrated study and rehearsal by junior and senior high school students from North Carolina and other states.

Earl E. Beach, director of the college department of music and of the Summer Music Camp, has announced that enrollment will be limited this year to 400 students.

The camp program will include instruction in music, majorette and drum major techniques, art, and creative dancing. Mr. Beach has announced. Three bands, an orchestra, and two choruses in which campers will participate will be special features of the event. A dance band will also be organized. Instruction in music will include, in addition, theory, piano, conducting, and orchestral and band instruments. Painting sculpture, and crafts will be offered in the art program of the camp.

as majorettes and drum majors will receive instruction from experts in these areas including Karen Kaiser, National Twirling Champion, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Louise Winstead of Elm City, dean of girls, and Charles Stevens of Washington, N.C., dean of boys, will head the camp counseling staff.

A workshop for music teachers attending the camp will be offered as part of the two-week program. Those registering for the workshop and completing requirements will receive three quarter-hours of college credit.

Later, He Took A Walk Himself

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Robert F. Boyle, 19, a trusty at the county jail, took an officer's dog for a walk Wednesday night. Later he took a walk for himself.

Officers said they thought Boyle may have wanted to see his first child, born shortly after he began a year sentence for burglary Feb. 10.

U. S. Suffers Humiliating, Costly Defeat In Tokyo

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER session.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States suffered a humiliating and costly defeat today in the collapse of President Eisenhower's scheduled visit to Tokyo.

The Soviet-Chinese Communist bloc won a victory of menacing proportions.

It was the second time in exactly a month that a great international event has gone against the wishes of Eisenhower and along lines charted by the international Communist leadership. At Paris May 16, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev killed the Big Four summit conference in its first meeting, leaving Eisenhower and his British and French allies to survey the wreckage of their hopes for some improvement in East-West relations.

Today's debacle in Tokyo is potentially more damaging to the United States and its allies, and in the long run poses a greater threat to the balance of U. S.-Soviet relations and therefore to world peace, than did the breakdown in Paris.

The immediate problem before Eisenhower and Japanese Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi, in fact, is how to handle the situation to minimize the injury to U. S.-Japanese relations and to the free world political position and defense structure throughout the Far East.

The great difference between the May 16 breakdown at Paris and the June 16 disaster in Tokyo is this:

The explosion of the summit conference coupled with Khrushchev's violent personal attacks on Eisenhower forced the Western Allies closer together and strengthened their resolve to resist Soviet threat and bluster. Cancellation of Eisenhower's trip to Tokyo threatens to undermine a vital anchor point of the system of anti-Communist alliances in the Far East.

Kishi's government, being compelled to confess its inability to maintain order, appears now to have no choice except to resign, which is what the riotous left-wing students have been demanding.

Kishi himself, it was noted here, said he would not quit or dissolve the Parliament until a pending new U. S.-Japanese security pact is ratified this weekend. The ratification process will be completed automatically so long as Parliament remains in session.

The security pact rather than Eisenhower's visit, has been the prime target of left-wing and Communist opposition. By holding Parliament in session, Kishi has the power to win the form of a victory on the issue of its ratification but it may prove to be an empty victory unless new political forces come into play in Tokyo now that the visit has been canceled.

In the present circumstances, opponents of the new security pact appear to have gone a long way toward undermining the U. S.-Japanese alliance and discrediting the whole military-political arrangement between Washington and Tokyo. It is not only the form of a treaty but also the broad political accord which it represents that is vitally important.

U. S. officials are convinced that the Soviet Union and Red China were behind a ruthless and well-financed campaign to exploit antiwar sentiment in Japan, to turn the student and left-wing labor demonstrations into violent rioting where possible and to overthrow the pro-American Kishi government by any possible means.

If the treaty is now defeated the Communist powers will have strong basis for hope of a new arrangement between Washington and Tokyo. It is not only the form of a treaty but also the broad political accord which it represents that is vitally important.

U. S. officials are convinced that the Soviet Union and Red China were behind a ruthless and well-financed campaign to exploit antiwar sentiment in Japan, to turn the student and left-wing labor demonstrations into violent rioting where possible and to overthrow the pro-American Kishi government by any possible means.

It is because the stakes are so high that Eisenhower has been extremely reluctant, even at the risk of personal danger, to call off his visit to Tokyo. Fears for his personal safety in a city scarred by mob action and for the lesser danger of possible personal embarrassment at the hands of demonstrators have had to be balanced against the potential cost of a decision not to go.

Precisely how much effort Moscow and Peking have put into the violent campaign in Tokyo against the new security pact, the President's trip and the Kishi government is not known to officials here. But available evidence, some open and some secret, which is officially regarded as accurate, convinces them that for the Communists it is a major operation. Such evidence is reported to include the following:

1. About two months ago Chinese Communist leader Mao Tse-tung promised the Japan-China Friendship Assn. that the 600 million people of Red China would be behind a move to overthrow the Kishi government and would provide support.

2. Last fall during celebration of the 10th anniversary of the Chinese Communist regime, a top official of the association reportedly received $100,000 from the Chinese Communists.

3. In recent months there has been a notable increase in the number of diplomatic couriers from the Soviet Union and some other Soviet bloc countries going into Japan, ostensibly on diplomatic business. Officials say there is reason to believe at least some of these couriers carried funds for the Japanese Communist party.

On the record, Red China has conducted the massive propaganda campaign against the U. S.-Japanese security pact and Eisenhower's Far Eastern tour. Peiping radio has called for demonstration against the President and for the burial of the security pact in connection with his tour. It described the Tokyo demonstration as a revolution against American imperialism and confidently predicted the revolution would be successful.

State Department experts say many of the broadcasts can be read as virtual orders to Red agents in Japan to keep Tokyo in turmoil until the treaty is defeated or thoroughly discredited.

Soviet propaganda, though reflecting Khrushchev's post-summit attacks on Eisenhower, has been less preoccupied with the Japanese situation than the Peiping broadcasts. But Wednesday night the Moscow government took a direct hand in the fight by sending a diplomatic note to the Japanese government.

The Kremlin told Japan it risked terrible tragedies if it continued to make bases available to the United States. It assailed the bases as assisting American "aggressive aims against the Soviet Union and the other countries neighboring Japan."

Nixon To Campaign In All Fifty States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon, as the expected GOP presidential nominee, intends if possible to campaign in every state and several times in some of them.

That word came today from Leonard W. Hall, Nixon's presidential campaign chairman and director of the headquarters offices opened here last week.

Hall said Nixon will campaign mostly by airplane, but will use trains occasionally for visits to regional areas.

Asked about Nixon's statement to GOP state chairmen last week that he will use some new techniques in the campaign, Hall said his staff is just beginning to take a look at the extent to which radio and television will be used. He said there will be a lot of radio-TV spot programs as well as some half-hour coverage of speeches.

Hall was GOP national chairman from April 1953 to February, 1957, after serving 14 years in Congress and a brief term as judge of wills and estates in his home county of Nassau, L.I.

Others on the campaign staff include: James Bassett, California newspaperman, who is in charge of the scheduling of campaign trips. He directed Nixon's 1952 vice presidential campaign and was publicity director of the GOP National Committee during the 1954 congressional campaign.

J. Clifford Folger, Washington investment banker and former ambassador to Belgium. Folger is the money raiser. He had plenty of experience as national finance chairman of the party in the 1956 campaign.

James Shepley, on leave from Time-Life magazines, in charge of research assisted by John Hamlin.

Space is available also for Nixon's Capitol staff, including Robert H. Finch, the vice president's administrative assistant, and Herbert Klein, press secretary.

Others on the campaign staff include:

Named To New TB Committee

Miss Lelia Higgs of Greenville has been appointed to serve on a new committee formed this year by the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association.

The appointment was announced to Miss Higgs by NCTA Pres. Stuart Willis.

According to Willis, the new committee—the Program Activities Committee—is an experiment that will replace three other committees: Case Finding, Health Education and Rehabilitation.

With the new committee, Willis said, the association hopes "to be able to avoid duplication and to concentrate on top program priorities."

Miss Higgs is a member of the NCTA's executive committee and has served on the association's board of directors for several years.

She is also a member of the local chapter of the American Lung Association and has been active in the community for many years.

Miss Higgs is a graduate of the University of North Carolina and has a degree in education. She has been employed in various capacities in the business and educational fields.

Formosa Still Is Best Description Of Island

By SPENCER MOOSA

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Some call it Taiwan today. But the name the Portuguese gave it 300 years ago — Formosa, meaning beautiful—is still the best description for the island President Eisenhower will visit this weekend. On the map it looks like a tempting tobacco leaf 100 miles or less from the smoking fires of Communist China.

It is a varied island of mountains and greenery, inhabited by sophisticated Chinese and aborigines, where modern Western philosophies live side by side with primitive superstitions.

It is the seat of government of Chiang Kai-shek, driven from the mainland 10 years ago.

The United States has poured in billions of dollars in aid to shore up Formosa's economy, equip its armed forces and strengthen its people against any communist onslaught.

Formosa has had a bloody history. Late in the 15th century it was controlled by pirates, Chinese in the south, Japanese in the north. Formosa was ruled by the Dutch for 39 years (1623-1662) and by the Japanese for half a century (1895-1945).

It is separated from southeast China by the Formosa Strait. At the closest point it is only 85 miles from the mainland.

The island, 240 miles long, is almost twice the size of New Jersey. It is spined largely on the eastern or Pacific side by tall, evergreen mountains, with several peaks more than 12,000 feet high.

Only about one-third of the island is cultivated.

Formosa and the Pescadores—63 islets in the Formosa Strait with a total area of 50 square miles — are protected by the United States under a mutual defense treaty.

The offshore Nationalist islands, with a total area of 67 square miles, are outside the treaty zone but an attack on them, if considered by the U.S. President to be part of an on-to-Formosa drive, could provoke American intervention. The largest of the offshore islands is Quemoy, scene of crisis in 1958 when Red Chinese artillery snelled it for months.

Formosa, the Pescadores and the offshore islands comprise what is commonly known as Nationalist China, formally titled the Republic of China.

Formosa's population is 10 1/2 million not including the armed forces, commonly estimated at 600,000. Four-fifths of the population are native-born Formosans. The rest are mainlanders, who came from continental China after World War II. The capital, Taipei, has a population of 850,000.

Nationalist China likely would not exist today but for American aid.

From 1946 (when the Nationalists were the ruling party on the mainland) through 1959, the United States gave a total of $3,637,900,000 to the republic. Almost two billions was military aid.

The biggest American-aided economic project is the giant Shihmen (Stone Gate) Dam being built 18 miles southwest of Taipei at a cost of 66 1/2 million dollars.

The Nationalists, with American support, seek to prepare for the day when American aid is slashed or cut altogether; and to cope with a 3 1/2 per cent a year increase in population.

Main exports of Formosa are sugar and rice. Formosa also exports a number of items which it used to import—textiles, glass, cement and plastics.

More than 10,000 Americans live on Formosa, the majority of them servicemen and their dependents.

The island is liable to earthquakes, typhoons and violent thunderstorms. But it could be a popular tourist center if there were the accommodation and pleasures which the traveler usually seeks. There is no gambling. A lot of people hesitate to come here because of constant Nationalist talk about the danger of invasion.

Taiwan, incidentally, means "terraced bay." Not quite so expressive as the name Portuguese navigators gave this "The Formosa" (Beautiful Island) in the 16th century.

Britons Portray Doughty Scots

HAWICK, England (AP)—Scottish prosperity has forced a movie company filming Macbeth to hire Englishmen to play the doughty Scots who fought the English invaders in Shakespeare's classic.

"I'll probably shock England," said American producer-director George Schaeffer, "but there's nothing else we could do."

Scottish employment agencies were able to furnish 50 idle natives, but that left the company short about 150 extras.

"We were forced to go south of the border and recruit Englishmen from around Carlisle on the English side of the frontier," Schaeffer said.

AT CRAFT WORKSHOP . . . which closed today, Miss Mary Em Lee from the Agricultural Extension Service, Raleigh, instructs some of the home demonstration women of the North-eastern District.

Nixon And Kennedy Going Into Dakotas

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Sen. John F. Kennedy invade the Dakota prairie shoulder-to-shoulder this weekend amid a merry hoopla that will include falling paratroopers and a gigantic birthday party.

Their appearances here and in North Dakota promise to make the two farm states an early battleground in the pre-convention duel between the frontrunners for the presidential nominations.

Nixon originally was to make a couple of stops in North Dakota, primarily to shore up the candidacy of Republican Gov. John Davis in the June 28 Senate election there.

Kennedy then got an invitation to appear at a huge birthday party in Fargo, N. D. Sunday for Rep. Quentin Burdick (D-ND), Davis' opponent. That is the day Nixon will be in Fargo beating the drums for Davis.

A third contender, Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), got into the act by accepting an invitation to be at the Burdick party.

Both Nixon and Kennedy will appear at Sioux Falls Sunday, a few hours apart, to address the state's American Legion convention.

The 82nd Airborne Division gets the big weekend off to a suitably rousing start with a practice air-droop of several hundred men with equipment Saturday as part of the Legion festivities.

Speeches at rallies, news conferences and television appearances in advance of his talk before the North Dakota American Legion at Williston Monday will give Nixon assorted forums in his campaigning for Davis. The Legion talks by Kennedy and Nixon are billed as non-political.

Write-In Votes Seated A Lady Mayor For Her Second Term

By MILDRED C. HOLLINGSWORTH
SUPERIOR, Neb. (AP)—Mrs. Aarabele P. Hanna is starting on her second term as Nebraska's only woman mayor, confident that she was the "grass roots" choice of the people.

After running the city for two years, Mrs. Hanna says she "Didn't care too much" when her party, the Conservatives, declined to re-nominate her at the biennial caucus.

But her friends did care. They suggested a write-in campaign, bought space in the newspaper for advertisements and got out handbills urging voters to write in her name.

Mrs. Hanna received 509 write-in votes to defeat two male candidates. "I never dreamed it would be anything like that," she says. "I was shocked." Her vote total was more than that of the combined opposition.

Being mayor of this southern Nebraska town of 3,500 at a salary of $200 annually can be "tough," Mrs. Hanna says. "There are so many gripes the mayor must handle. I wish I had a complaint bureau."

In more than two years as head of an all-male, six-member city council Mrs. Hanna has never had to vote to break a tie—"yet I get blamed for the decisions."

Mrs. Hanna has been instrumental in revising the city ordinances for the first time in 25 years. Plans have been completed for a new sewage treatment plant.

MRS. AARABELE HANNA

Thirty blocks of city streets have been blacktopped and the kitchen in the city auditorium has been enlarged and equipped with electrical appliances.

She is most proud, though, of changes in airport administration. A savings of $1,200 in salaries has been made, ramshackle hangars have been modernized and the airport is making money for the first time.

Her next two years may be even busier. The sewage treatment plant must be completed. Street improvements are next, followed by completion of mercury lights of the approaches to the city.

"And," says Mrs. Hanna, "we'll meet every emergency as it comes up."

Push Search For Girl's Assailant

YORK, S.C. (AP) — A York girl struggled for life in a Charlotte hospital today while grim police pressed an intensive search here for the person who clubbed her Tuesday night in her dark front yard.

She was the "second vicious-attack victim in this area within a month."

The girl, whose name was not released, remained unconscious and in critical condition following brain surgery.

The State Law Enforcement Division (SLED) and York police launched a "maximum effort" search for the assailant.

The York City Council has offered a $500 reward in the case.

The girl was clubbed on the head by a 2-by-2 inch stick as she returned from a movie Tuesday night.

Her body was found by a York physician whose car lights flashed into the yard. Some steps away, unaware of the beating, the girl's mother was waiting anxiously for her return from the movie.

The girl was given preliminary treatment at York and then rushed to Charlotte's Presbyterian Hospital.

Hardly a month ago, an old woman was beaten by an unidentified Negro teen-ager within two blocks of the second attack.

Look What You Get For A Five-Dollar Palm-Reading

By MIKE ROUSE
Goldboro News-Argus
Staff Writer

Written for The Associated Press
GOLDSBORO, N. C. (AP) — You get just about what you pay for— even when you're dealing with the supernatural.

So keep that in mind, you folks who might be shopping around to have your fortune told.

And if you decide to get it done by more than one palmist, don't dare get the economy priced reading from one and the deluxe from the other. You'll end up mighty confused.

Besides, the things that are predicted in the $3 readings shouldn't happen to a dog.

But look what a bargain I got in my five-buck job:

Promise of 87 years of life.
A long trip to she-couldn't-tell-where.
Assurance of a big inheritance, though I'll have to fight it out in court first.

Promise that I'll father five children.
And guarantee that one day I'd be in business for myself, with a good partner.

In addition, I was given two wishes which will come true, provided I reveal but one of them for the next nine days.

The other I had to reveal to her, the palmist. I wished, I said, for a raise to help take care of the five children.

On the other hand (pardon the pun), the $3 fortune teller could find in my palm no change in business and financial status.

Besides, I'm not to trust my in-laws.
"Do you have a brother-in-law?" she asked ominously.
"Yes'm."

"He's plotting against you, behind your back. Don't trust him." Just goes to show: You can't trust anybody. And he seemed like such a nice guy.

The $3 reading takes about five minutes. Pay in advance. Of course, the fortune teller isn't quite so crude in collecting. She merely suggests that I must place the money on the table, then rest my hands, palms up, on the bills.

Sharp fingernails run up and down the lines of your palm. Must be some sort of Braille system. It tickles a little, but as the $3 reading progresses, you don't feel much like laughing. You break out in a cold sweat.

The $3 reading takes about half an hour.

You can ask questions of the palmist no matter whether it is a $3 job or the deluxe treatment. And each reading is preceded by a round of flattery which makes you feel, even before the reading starts, that you've gotten your money's worth.

The setting isn't at all like in the movies. There are no crystal balls. Not even any black cats. And the reading is done in a well-lighted room.

You don't lose touch with the "everyday." The rock and roll music blaring in the next room doesn't let you.

The palmist doesn't go off in a trance either. She just touches your fingers lightly and talks knowingly of things mysterious.

There are moments, though, when you might get a little confused. Like at the conclusion of my $5 reading. As I was preparing to leave, the fortune teller looked at me with eyes that seemed to penetrate beyond the present.

"Drive carefully," she warned. "You may be killed in an accident on these wet roads."

Small chance, I thought confidently. She had already assured me I'd live to be 87.

Filmland Is Losing A Promising Star

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — As if things didn't look gloomy enough, here's Tab Hunter with the observation:

"I'm afraid Hollywood is losing its position as movie capital of the world. Everything seems to be shifting toward Europe. The strikes didn't help—both the actors' and the writers'—and production is getting lower and lower.

"But even without the strikes, it looks as though Hollywood is losing out. Movies are making more money in foreign countries than they do in the United States. So why not shoot the pictures abroad?"

"Americans are too lazy to go to the movies as a habit anymore.

"They'll go out for 'Ben Hur'—that kind of attraction. But otherwise, they'd rather stay home and watch TV.

If Hunter sounds like a convert to TV—he is. And so the movies lose another promising star.

His detractors might argue that Tab never won any awards with his acting. Maybe not, but he is an attractive personality of the kind that Hollywood used to build into household names. He has appeared creditably in top films and has a wide following among the younger set.

Now TV will reap what the movies have sown.

"I like the picture business," he declared. "But an actor just can't rely on it any more. Sure, I could work all the time in cheap pictures or else go to Europe for films. But I don't want to.

"TV is the coming thing—in fact, it's here. So I decided to join it."

He'll be bursting forth on the home channels this fall in a show called the Tab Hunter show. The gimmick has him playing a cartoonist who lives in a Malibu Beach house. It just happens that all kinds of beautiful babes keep trailing or swimming to his door.

Registered 309 At Playgrounds On Opening Day

A total of 309 children registered with playground leaders as the Greenville Playgrounds opened for the summer season.

According to Playground Supervisor "Bud" Phillips, the largest number of children was registered at Riverside Park, where 85 were counted.

Other parks and their totals include: Third Street, 35; Hillside, 35; Elm Street Park, 37; Woodlawn, 30; Meadowbrook, 12; South Greenville, 40; and Fleming Street, 35.

Phillips noted that the number this year "is about the same" as the number of children registered on opening day last year.

Recreation Director Gordon Goodman said the number registered at the parks yesterday was probably affected by the number of children who are attending local Bible schools.

Goodman urged local children to take advantage of the supervised parks, "where there is a planned program and good equipment available for their use."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market hustled and bustled without getting anywhere in particular early this afternoon.

Selected specialty issues in the spotlight recently continued to gain ground for the most part, but slight declines among most of the more conservative stocks left the market irregularly lower on average. Trading was active.

Not even the postponement of President Eisenhower's planned trip to Japan seemed to have much effect.

Business news capable of spurring or depressing the market was absent. News that industrial production rose last month for the first time since January apparently had been discounted in advance.

Some specialty issues slipped below their best levels of the day, but were ahead 2 and 3 points. The overall list showed fractional changes in both directions, however.

Standard Oil, most active stock for two straight days, again changed irregularly frequently with the price up about 2 points.

Electronics had Litton Industries up more than 3, Beckman nearly 2 and General Instrument more than 1.

DuPont, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide and American Cyanamid were down better than one.

Steels were quiet and motors generally lower, although American Motors held a narrow upside edge. American Telephone advanced among the mixed utility group.

Rails eased fractionally and scattered strength appeared among oils, metals, rubbers, and aircrafts.

The Associated Press 60-stock average at noon was off 0.50 at 222.8 with industrials down 1.10, rails down 0.30 and utilities unchanged.

Government bonds advanced in moderately active trading. Corporates were slightly higher in quiet transactions.

Big Defense Bill Awaiting Action

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate stepped up its push toward adjournment today with a 40-billion-dollar defense money bill only one of several matters to be considered.

With the normal noon opening hour advanced to mid-morning, Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, the assistant Senate Democratic leader, said members might be asked to stay late tonight "with numerous roll call votes."

In addition to the huge defense appropriation bill, Senate leaders scheduled action to ratify a new security treaty with Japan and a start on a $1,400,000,000 omnibus housing bill.

As it went before the Senate, the military bill for the fiscal year starting July 1 totaled $40,384,897,000. The military appropriations bill passed by the House totals $39,337,867,000, about 121 million more than President Eisenhower asked.

The Senate measure included an 84-million-dollar increase in funds to push development of the spy-in-the-sky Samos reconnaissance satellite. The Senate Appropriations Committee recommended the increase last week.

The House had voted a $33,800,000 increase for the Samos. The Senate group added an extra 50 million for good measure. The basic amount to which the nearly 84 million was added was kept secret for security reasons.

The House had approved 200 million dollars for preparing an around-the-clock airborne alert of nuclear bombers. The Senate bill cut the total to the 85 million asked by Eisenhower.

The Senate bill provides about 9 1/2 billion dollars for the Army or 153 million more than voted by the House; more than 12 billion for the Navy, about 303 million more than the House; nearly 17 1/2 billion for the Air Force, nearly 606 million more than the House; and nearly 2 billion for the office of the secretary of defense, or $1,300,000 more than the House approved.

Foreign Aid Money Bill In House Tug-Of-War Today

WASHINGTON (AP)—A $3,384,500,000 foreign aid money bill faced a tug-of-war in the House today between groups wanting to cut it more and to increase it.

The bill's total already has been cut 790 1/2 million dollars below President Eisenhower's requests.

Advance indications were that the measure would go to the Senate late today or Friday in substantially the form recommended by the House Appropriations Committee.

The committee imposed the cuts last Monday, despite a last-minute protest by the President that the action would "jeopardize our own security and the defense of the free world."

The bill finances for the fiscal year starting July 1 the mutual assistance program designed to bolster friendly nations and to contain the spread of communism.

Republicans supporting the President's position lined up behind amendments to put back half the 400 million dollars cut from the President's request for two billion dollars for direct military assistance, and to restore 50 million of the 75 million cut from defense support funds.

They weren't counting on much help from the Democrats but were confident the Senate would put back into the bill all or some of the money denied by the House committee.

On the other side of the picture, some members contended that the funds recommended by the committee were excessive. In this group were some Republicans considering resort to a technicality that could automatically knock out another estimated 50 million dollars.

That amount represents a carryover of unobligated money from previous appropriations which the President requested and the committee approved. A single objection could eliminate the carryover money, which includes about 35 million in direct military assistance funds.

Eisenhower's dislike of the cuts was expressed in telegrams to congressional leaders just before he left for his visit to the Far East.

Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates Jr. and Undersecretary of State Douglas Dillon renewed the protests in statements Wednesday and urged restoration of substantial portions of the cuts.

Originally, the President requested $4,175,000,000 in new funds for the aid program, but Congress limited this to $4,086,300,000 in a separate measure authorizing continuation of the program but not financing it.
