Demo Leadership Tries To Revive School Aid Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic leaders today sought to breathe new life into a school construction bill apparently doomed to death by the House Rules Committee.

The committee took both Republican and Democratic leaders by surprise Wednesday by refusing to allow the House to seek a compromise with the Senate on school legislation.

With Congress rushing toward adjournment, the committee's action spells doom for the bill this year unless it can be prevailed upon to reconsider the matter, or the Senate agrees to pass the House bill in much its present form.

Election year politics loom large in efforts to revive the bill, which would provide federal grants to help states build school-rooms.

Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson, who would like to be the Democratic candidate for president, badly wants a school bill to bolster his bid for the nomination.

Nixon conferred last week with House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana in an effort to get favorable committee action on the measure.

But in the 7-5 vote, all four committee Republicans joined three Southern Democrats to defeat the conference move supported by five other Democrats.

Only two courses remain open to backers of the legislation. Either they must prevail upon the committee to reconsider, or they must induce the Senate to abandon its own bill and act on the House measure.

Under the latter plan, the Senate would be expected to strike out a House-approved amendment denying federal funds to segregated schools, with the understanding that the House probably would agree to go along with that change.

In a series of hasty conferences late Wednesday, Democratic leaders in the House decided to concentrate their efforts on the Rules Committee.

They hoped to win reconsideration of the vote, and, ironically, pinned their hopes on a Republican, Rep. B. Carroll Reece of Tennessee.

Reece, although opposed to the bill, voted with the six Democrats to bring the original measure to the floor.

He was counted on to follow the same course Wednesday but changed his position for reasons he declined to disclose.

Tied to his vote is that of Rep. James W. Trimble (D-Ark.), one of the three Southerners who voted against the bill Wednesday.

He had agreed to bring the bill out if his vote was decisive, but when Reece opposed it he did too.

Vote Rigging And Payola A 'Crime'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted today on a sweeping bill to make payola and quiz show rigging a federal crime, and outlaw other abuses in the TV-radio industry.

Little or no opposition was indicated to the bill's chief provisions although efforts to change some of the terms were considered likely.

However, a possibly bitter fight appeared in prospect over promised attempts to write in an amendment to put television and radio networks under federal regulation.

"I most certainly intend to offer a network regulation amendment," Rep. John B. Bennett (R-Mich) told a reporter. The House Commerce Committee rebuffed his efforts to add such a provision when it approved the bill earlier this month.

Bennett later blamed lobbying pressure by the broadcasting industry for defeat of his proposal. He said the action left the bill "woefully deficient."

To help assure Senate consideration despite the adjournment drive, the House committee attached its bill to a minor Senate-passed measure dealing with applications for broadcast licenses.

Assuming the House passes it, this would eliminate the need for separate action by a Senate committee.

The bill stems from the series of headline-making inquiries by the House Legislative Oversight Subcommittee into quiz show fixing and undercover payoffs to disc jockeys to plug records.

The bill would make both payola and quiz show rigging criminal offenses punishable by up to one year in prison and $10,000 fine. It would require that all broadcast matter for which any kind of payment, direct or indirect, is made must be identified on the air as being paid.

Broadcast station licensees also would be required to "exercise reasonable diligence" to determine whether payola is occurring.

The quiz show provision would prohibit fixing of any "purportedly bona fide contest of intellectual knowledge, intellectual skill or chance."

The bill also contains several other provisions recommended by the subcommittee to correct abuses exposed in recent investigations.

Among these are proposals to: 1. Authorize the Federal Communications Commission to suspend for up to 10 days the license of a TV or radio station that violates the law. Violators also could be fined $1,000 a day for each day the violation occurred.

The aim is to give the FCC greater flexibility in policing the industry. At present the FCC is limited to revoking or refusing to renew a license—penalties considered so drastic they are seldom invoked.

2. Authorize the FCC to issue conditional broadcast licenses for less than the present three-year period.

3. Prohibit license application payoffs—the term given to payoffs to a license applicant to withdraw in favor of a rival.

Grifton Firm Is Moving Friday Into New Home

GRIFTON — Final preparations were being completed today for the Grifton Clothing Co. to move into its new, quarter-million-dollar home here tomorrow afternoon.

Machinery and production materials will be transported from the downtown pilot plant into the modern, spacious 50,000 square-foot plant on E. Queen St. when the production day ends tomorrow.

Final checks were being made this morning of the air-conditioning and sprinkler systems. Except for minor details, the new plant's office space is complete.

The downtown operation currently employs around 70 workers and began its training program again two weeks ago.

Additional employees will be added via the training operation each week, according to plant manager Dan McLaughlin.

It is reported in Grifton that the firm's management is "well-pleased" with production progress in the pilot plant and are anticipating increased efficiency in the more comfortable atmosphere of the new plant.

When the new plant reaches its employ capacity of around 400, the firm plans to double the size of the structure to encompass some 650 workers.

The target date for the addition is around mid-1961, according to county industrial development officials.

Election Party

Returns from the second primary will be tabulated in the Daily Reflector office Saturday night.

County-wide precinct-by-precinct votes will be posted in the scoreboard in front of the newspaper office.

Poll holders are asked to call the Reflector office PL 2-6166 as soon as precinct results are known.

The run-off will determine whether Dr. I. Beverly Lake or Terry Sanford will serve as the state's governor for the next four years.

In Pitt County there is also a run-off for a constable of Grimesland Township between Levi Wilson and S. Elijah Heath.

Sanford Machine Trying To Dominate State; Lake

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer

Gubernatorial candidate Dr. I. Beverly Lake last night again claimed the disputed authorship of North Carolina's pupil assignment law and charged his opponent, Terry Sanford, with trying to dominate the state with "one of the most powerful political machines ever assembled."

Speaking to a crowd of around 1,400 in East Carolina College's Wright Auditorium, Lake asserted his opponent's "machine" is backed by Gov. Hodges, the AFL-CIO, and "the wealthy businessmen who know they will not succeed in dominating the state if I am your governor."

Lake declared again Sanford had the support of the NAACP, which he termed "an interracial organization," in the first primary. He said the "NAACP bloc vote" in several major North Carolina cities went to the Fayetteville attorney.

Lake promised to "drive that organization from the state and save the public schools." "I shall lead you in a climate of opinion in which the NAACP knows it cannot live," he said.

He called the organization "a malignant growth in North Carolina that needs to be removed."

Major objective of my administration will be the preservation of your public school system," he told his audience. He pointed to his 18 years as a school teacher as "sufficient evidence of my interest in education."

"The candidate vow to improve the schools 'under a business-like fiscal policy' for the state. He said the schools cannot operate without "a business-like approach."

He declared schools "are not measured by how much they cost," but by their quality. "Our schools are basically good schools," he said, "and our children are not growing up in ignorance."

Lake again assailed Sanford's proposed $50 million boost in annual school spending. He declared the annual increase would hike state taxes by 20 per cent.

No New Taxes "I do not believe the people of North Carolina can pay the 20 per cent increase) without seriously jeopardizing the state's economy," Lake told his cheering audience. "I shall not recommend any increased taxes except that which is absolutely necessary after every possible economy," the candidate promised.

He called on Sanford to "tell, now, before the election" whether he intends to abandon "his many promises to the people" or to place "taxes on the people the like of which you've never seen."

Lake said Sanford's promises sprang from either a misunderstanding of the state's financial capabilities or an effort to "mislead the people of North Carolina."

Prior to Lake's address, John Burney of Wilmington, a district solicitor aiding the candidate's campaign, continued the attack on the Raleigh News and Observer. "They are still printing half truths," Burney declared.

Burney said Thomas Pearsall is supporting Sanford because he (Pearsall) and Gov. Hodges are business partners.

Pearsall, a leader five years ago in the designing of North Carolina's answer to the U. S. Supreme Court's desegregation ruling, has disputed Lake's claim to authorship of the pupil assignment law.

Also attacking the Raleigh newspaper was Don Beamon of New Bern. He said it had called Malcolm Seawell Gov. Hodges' "Crown Prince" and questioned, "When are they going to start calling Tom Pearsall 'Little Sir Echo'?"

Beamon, Craven County campaign manager for John Larkin in the first primary, contradicted the News and Observer by assuring Lake supporters Craven is "still strongly for Lake." He said the Raleigh paper had referred to the county as a "one-time Lake stronghold."

Harry McMullan Jr., son of a former attorney general, appeared at a Lake rally for the second time to support Lake's claim to the assignment law. He charged both the News and Observer and the Associated Press "with misquoting him on the matter."

Disturbance While Burney was speaking, several students in the balcony began shouting and waving Sanford banners. The demonstration broke out as Burney was telling the balloon-filled auditorium he had received information that such an outburst had been planned.

Local law enforcement officials quickly ejected four students from the auditorium and the rally continued.

Previously, as Lake supporters were arriving, a pair of students, who said they were "just clowning," had paraded in front of the auditorium brandishing signs advocating "Alfred E. Neuman for Governor." Neuman is a fictitious character who has become sort of a trademark for a popular satirical magazine.

Police broke up the picketing and took the signs from the students.

Lake's local campaign headquarters this morning issued a statement of appreciation "to each member of the police, fire, and sheriff's departments" for "taking care of an unpleasant situation immediately with skill and dispatch."

The statement said, "Authoritative word had been received yesterday afternoon that a well-organized demonstration had been planned in an attempt to break up the rally and ruin the televised portion of the rally."

President Feels Successor Can't Avoid Summit Trip

HONOLULU (AP) — President Eisenhower believes his successor in the White House will find summit diplomacy and good will travels inevitable despite the hazards.

Eisenhower's views were reported today as the President went golfing for the fourth time in four days, relaxing from the rigors of his controversial Far Eastern trip.

He took off in the bright Hawaiian sunshine on a closely-guarded course, nestled on the edge of the Pacific, on the other side of the mountain from famed Waikiki Beach.

Eisenhower shunned all outside appointments while resting. In the afternoon, he arranged to work a bit more on the report he has promised the nation of his flying visits to Korea, Formosa, the Philippines and Okinawa.

This major television-radio speech will bear down heavily on the successes Eisenhower believes he achieved in his widely-acclaimed stopovers in these four areas.

But he also will deal at some length with the now much-publicized blowup of his planned stopover in Tokyo in the face of leftist-led riots.

In Eisenhower's view, the gain registered in the capitals he was able to visit came because presidential tours provide an unequalled

U.S. And Japan Put New Treaty Into Force Today

TOKYO (AP) — The United States and Japan put their new mutual security treaty into force today at a secretly arranged ceremony, foiling plans of Japanese left-wingers to delay final action on the controversial pact.

Premier Nobusuke Kishi, for weeks the target of fanatical demonstrations by radical students, Socialists, Communists and labor forces, said he would resign now that the treaty had become law.

Kishi set no date for the resignation, but a spokesman said the cabinet would quit en masse as soon as Kishi's Liberal Democratic party decides on his successor.

Since the party has a majority in both houses of Parliament, approval of its choice is a certainty.

U.S. Ambassador Douglas MacArthur II and Foreign Minister Aichiro Fujiyama met at Fujiyama's heavily guarded residence and exchanged documents covering their governments' ratification of the treaty.

The exchange immediately made the pact effective, continuing the U.S.-Japanese military alliance, giving the United States military bases in Japan at least for the next 10 years and pledging the United States to defend Japan against attack.

Japan's left wing had been staging huge and sometimes violent demonstrations for a month against the treaty, contending it might involve Japan in a war between the United States and the Soviet Union or Communist China.

Some members of Kishi's party also felt their country should not be aligned with either side in the cold war.

Although the leftist demonstrations forced Kishi to call off President Eisenhower's visit to Japan, the Premier stubbornly refused to dissolve Parliament and make the treaty the issue in a general election.

Arrangements were quickly made for the ambassador and the foreign minister to meet at Fujiyama's home, and not at the foreign ministry as the left-wingers expected. Newsmen were told of the plans less than an hour before the ceremony.

Three police patrol cars and 13 truckloads of police guarded the residence. But there was no sign of leftist demonstrators.

Later 300 weary, dispirited leftist students squatted in front of the foreign ministry. Another 1,500 held memorial rites in downtown Hibiya Park for Michiko Kamba, 22, a girl student who was killed in a student riot at Parliament June 15.

The students were expected to demonstrate later at Parliament, but one, questioned about the day's developments, said: "We are so shocked we don't know what to say."

The exchange took only three minutes, beginning at 10:10 a.m. Three documents were signed by MacArthur and Fujiyama: A note covering the new administrative agreement on jurisdiction over American forces in Japan, the security treaty itself and a protocol confirming the exchange.

World public opinion, skillfully exploited by the Soviets, would inevitably drive Western leaders toward a summit date with Khrushchev, in his view.

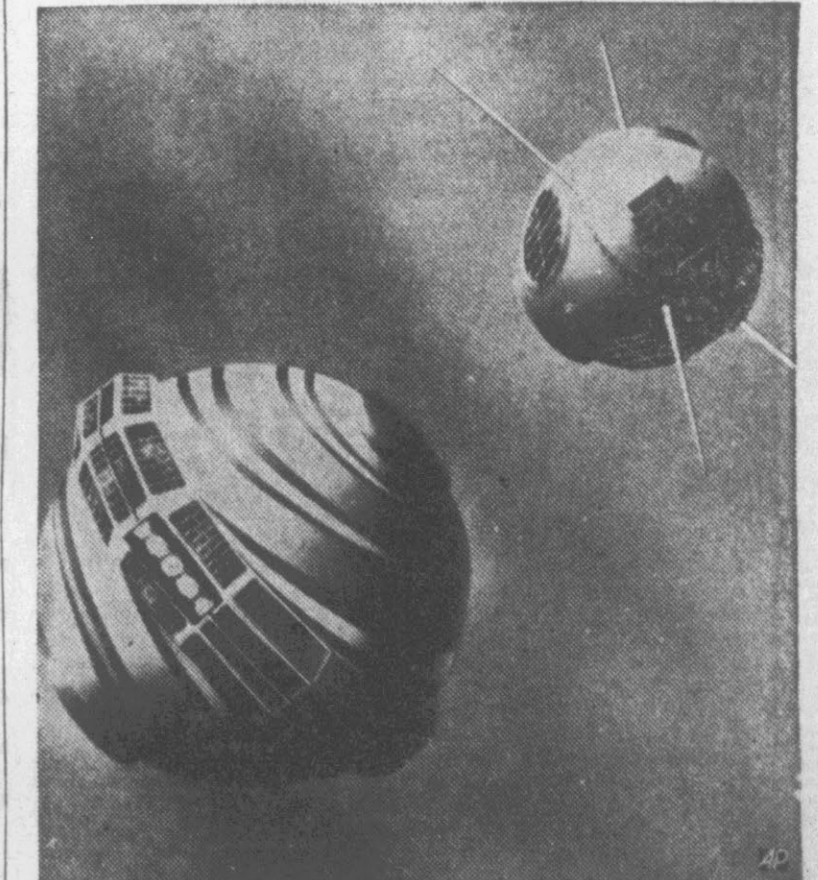

Officially, Eisenhower has refused to rule out prospects of another flying trip abroad during the remaining six months he has left in office.

The odds against it appear very long. But Wednesday the presidential press secretary, James C. Hagerty, refused again to shut the door on such a possibility.

"I know of no plans, at this time," Hagerty told a news conference in commenting on reports Eisenhower will stay home from now on. Hagerty, however, emphasized the words, "at this time."

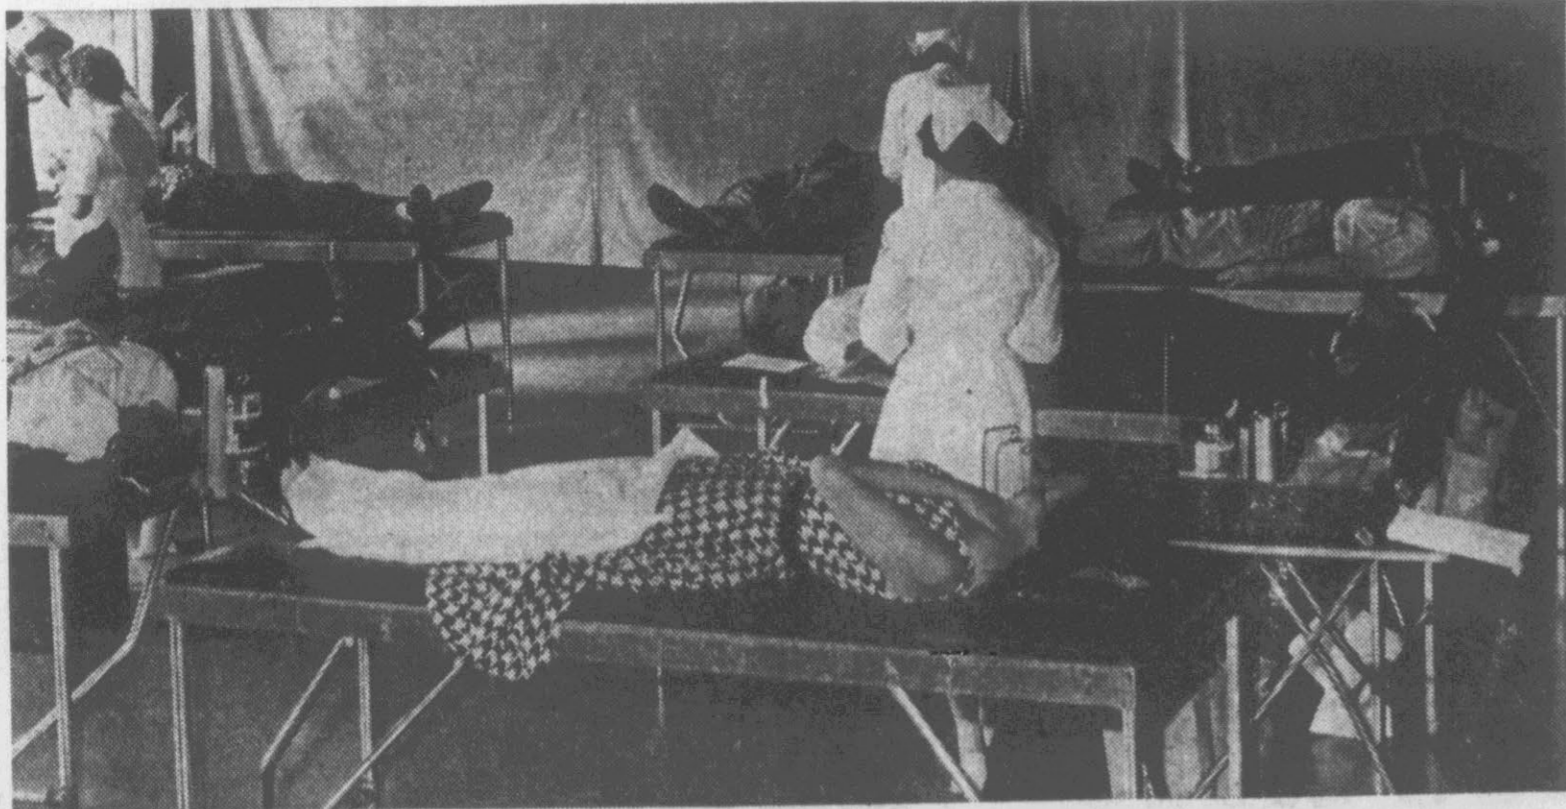

Eisenhower has been urged to fly to Africa and attend personally ceremonies proclaiming Nigeria an independent nation soon. He was known to be considering this trip before he took off on his Far Eastern venture, particularly because diplomats expect Nigeria swiftly will become the most important African nation south of the Sahara.

According to Red Cross spokesmen, the unit fell 14 pints short of meeting the 240-pint quota for the Bloodmobile's two-day visit here at the Moose Temple Tuesday and Wednesday. One hundred and thirteen pints of blood were donated yesterday while 19 donors were rejected for various reasons.

Second Largest Spring Pig Crop

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Crop Reporting Service said today this year's spring pig crop, though sharply reduced from that of last year, was the second largest on record.

Pigs saved during the spring farrowing period, Dec. 1, 1959, to May 31, 1960, amounted to 1,139,000 head.

The output was exceeded only by the record 1,605,000 spring pig crop of 1959.

Farmville Firm Robbed In Night

FARMVILLE — An unknown amount of money was taken from Varina Wholesale Builders Supply Co. near here last night.

Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said the thieves gained entrance to the building through a back door. The money was taken from an office.

The sheriff said officials of the firm had been unable to estimate the amount of money taken. However, he stated that officials are checking today in an attempt to determine the amount.

Varina Wholesale is located on U.S. 264 west of Marlboro.

The theft was discovered this morning and employees called Farmville police, who in turn called the Sheriff's Department. Farmville police are assisting the Sheriff's Department in the investigation.

The money box on a pay phone located at Marlboro was also reported to have been broken open today. The theft was discovered by a Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. employee when he stopped at the phone to collect the money.

The sheriff said there is a strong possibility the pay phone was rifled Tuesday night when two other phones were robbed near Greenville.

Recipe Suggestions

RALEIGH—June, the traditional month of brides, has another claim to fame—it's also long been known as Dairy Month.

Many specials are being found on such items as ice cream, cottage cheese or sour cream this month.

If you want to be voted the most popular neighbor on the block, have an impromptu party for your friends—right in the middle of these busy summer days. Here are a few recipe suggestions which will make you the popular hostess.

CHEESE DIPS
Whip cottage cheese until it is smooth in an electric mixer or blender. Add to it one of the following combinations:

Anchovy Cheese Dip—1 cup cottage cheese, 1 tablespoon anchovy paste, 1-3 cup French dressing, 2 tablespoons catsup, 2 teaspoons grated onion.

Celery Cheese Dip—1 cup cottage cheese, 1 teaspoon celery seed, 2 tablespoons cream, 2 teaspoons grated onion, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

Cucumber Cheese Dip—1 cup cottage cheese, 3 tablespoons finely minced cucumber, ½ teaspoon plain or onion salt.

STRAWBERRY PUNCH
2 cups frozen strawberries (sweetened)
½ pint strawberry ice cream
2 cups milk

Thaw strawberries enough to mix with ice cream. Blend well, then add milk. Punch is best not made too far in advance so that strawberries are still slightly icy. Punch should be of rather thick consistency.

The McLeans' summer home was decorated with massive bouquets of hydrangeas and cape jasmains. Their gift to the couple was an electric frying pan.

Among the party and dinner guests were Mr. and Mrs. R.F. Allen, parents of the bride-to-be, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Allen, and Miss Nancy Allen all of Greenville, and Kenneth Harris of Ayden.

S-t-r-e-t-c-h-i-n-g Dollars

RALEIGH—Dewberries, blueberries, cantaloupes and watermelons are filling the markets rapidly at attractive prices. Luscious dewberries and blueberries are in peak production in N. C.

Mrs. Ruby P. Uzzle, consumer marketing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says California, Florida, Georgia and Arizona watermelons, grapes and cantaloupes are increasing in shipments and quality each week.

Red Cardinals and White Seedless are best grape choices now. Bananas continue steady in price. Pineapples and lemons remain on the economy list along with canned and frozen orange juice.

Home-grown vegetables are becoming more plentiful, especially such crops as cabbage and lettuce. Look for specials in green peppers, celery and cucumbers. Budget buys include snap beans, cabbage, potatoes, lettuce, green onions, squash and sweet corn. Better prices are found on tomatoes and cucumbers.

Mrs. Uzzle reports that consumers can expect to find slightly lower prices on ground beef, chuck steak and roasts, round and sirloin steaks and various specials. Attractive prices will continue in many local stores on "picnic" beef cuts. Among these are weiners, frankfurters and various cold cuts. The most economical pork cuts are bacon, ham, sausage, and picnics.

Eggs remain on the good buy list this week. Broiler-fryer prices have held about steady with adequate supplies.

Warm weather is fly weather—a time for special cleanliness precautions. Since flies both breed in and feed on filth, they are dangerous carriers of disease.

To protect health, always wash your hands with plenty of soap and water after touching a fly. Even fly swatters should often be scrubbed with soap or detergent suds so they won't have an opportunity to expose the family to germs.

He Weighs U.S.—We'll Weigh Him

Political self-interest often serves to color one's public statements.

That's about the kindest thing we have to say about Sen. Stuart Symington's Wednesday morning opinion that "We have lost a great deal of strength. We lost it economically, relatively speaking. We have lost it psychologically. We have lost it and admit it, technologically in the space field. And I believe now that militarily the Russians are stronger than the United States."

If the Senator is at all familiar with the American space and rockets program he should have known better than to decry progress this country has displayed in the past two years.

For the record: the U.S. has orbited 21 satellites in the past 29 months—eleven of these are still in orbit. The Soviet Union has orbited five satellites, two of which are still up. The U.S. also has two solar satellites in space; the Soviets have one.

Who would you say is leading the way into space? Historically, this country has never tried to match other governments with men under arms except in times of actual conflict. Still, today we have the most modern and powerful navy in the world; we have the most powerful air arm in the world; our rockets have proven themselves reliable and on at least one test showed they can fly further than their Russian counterpart.

This country is still so strong the Kremlin knows flagrant aggression would also spell the end of Russia.

Primary Isn't So Democratic

(Excerpts from talk made by Lynn Nisbet to the Raleigh Jaycees, Tuesday, June 21.)

DIAGNOSIS—A favorite pastime of the politically interested is to diagnosis conditions just before an election, forecast probable results; and to hold post mortem inquests after the votes are counted. The primary held on May 28 with a run-off between the two high men scheduled for Saturday of this week, is a vital part of the election process in North Carolina.

In fact, to all practical ends it is the election because Democratic nominees for State offices are certain of victory in November. Because the primaries are basically one nominating event, post mortem analysis of the first round and pre-voting diagnosis of the second, necessarily involve much of the same material.

Study of the facts adduced by these examinations indicate clearly that major surgery is needed to make the process of selecting officers to run the State government more democratic. When the primary was substituted for the convention method of nominating party candidates, it was argued and sincere with 90 percent and higher participation, the new method would afford universal participation, whereas the convention was limited to a few delegates.

Nobody would go back to the old system, but honesty compels the state that the primary is not much more democratic. Convention delegates were chosen in precincts, then in the county and finally they convened at state level. The field of choices for candidates were restricted only to the voting citizenship of the state. Under the primary system choice is limited to the candidates who pay a filing fee, and the record shows far less than majority participation by citizens in primary election.

MINORITY—The 653,000 votes cast on May 28 represented barely one third of the eligible Democratic voters in the state, and their choice for Governor was limited to four men who had volunteered—not drafted—to make the race. This ratio of one-third participants compares with 90 percent and higher participation in other democratic countries. Despite the sorry turnout, some lessons can be learned from that primary.

One fact seems to be that the people want few names on the ballot. Of four candidates for Governor and four for Senator, the voters concentrated on two. The apparent desire for a short ticket is paradoxical in view of the claim that the primary is more democratic.

Another lesson would seem to be that although North Carolina resents resent bossism or efforts of an organization to control, long range planning and advance work pay off. Terry Sanford had been actively campaigning for years. There had been long time build-up of support for Beverly Lake. Larkins and Seawell had been often mentioned, but they appeared to be in and out so often their supporters were confused.

The theory that advance planning pays off, while supported results of the Governor's race, runs into trouble with the Lieutenant Governors. Dave McConnell had been an avowed candidate for at least four years. C.V. Henkel had been considered a sure entry since the 1959 General Assembly. Cloyd Phillips moved in just a few weeks before close of filing time—and copied the nomination.

The ratio of money to votes stands out in the record like a red flag. Records filed in the Secretary of State's office show very close relationship.

SPENDING—Terry Sanford reported spending $86,894, and he received 269,463 votes. Beverly Lake reported $51,462, and got 181,692 votes. Malcolm Seawell spent $31,231 for 101,149 votes, and John Larkins reported $22,337 for 100,757.

Translated into terms of vote costs Sanford's votes cost $3.10 each, Lake's $3.94, Seawell's $3.26 and Larkins' $2.23 on basis of reported expenditures by the candidates—an average of $3.13. Of course, these reported expenditures lack a lot of representing actual spending. Personal expenses of the candidates are not included, and a tremendous lot of money spent by others outside the campaign organizations was not reported. Preliminary reports on spending for the second primary, filed last week show that Lake had spent, up to June 15, the sum of $32,407 and Sanford $17,037. With ten days go from date of preliminary reports, indications are the spending rate and the number of votes likely to be received will be closer together for the second run than in the first.

REASON—Why have a second primary? Why not let the high man take the nomination? The reason goes back to the convention method of repeated ballots. There have been instances of more than 100 ballots required to nominate candidates for President in convention. The primary affords at best only two balloting tries. In the first primary 269,463 people said they wanted Sanford for Governor, a lot more than wanted any other person. But 383,597 people said they preferred somebody else. They are entitled to a second choice.

So consider: is Russia, as the Senator says, militarily stronger than the United States?

As for losing economic strength (relatively speaking, as he puts it) to Russia; we might add that the U.S. has lost more ground (relatively speaking) in terms of an economic race with Liberia than it has with the Soviet Union. Liberia has been booming, industrially, for the past fifteen years. Yet it is still near the bottom of the economic ladder.

Russia, too, is still a relatively poor country. It will be a long time before their standard of living and standards of industry can match ours. Any kind of growth they achieve represents a tremendous accomplishment.

And we are "losing psychologically" to the Russians... Senator Symington says.

We have to admit, on reading his other statements, the politician from Missouri has done his bit in contributing to a psychological slump in our morale.

Only The Voters Will Contribute To Future

Voters who go to the polls throughout North Carolina Saturday will determine whether Terry Sanford or Dr. I. Beverly Lake will be the next governor of the state.

Regardless of their professed interest in the state and its future, those citizens who do not cast their ballots Saturday will not have a voice in this important election which is certain to influence the course of the state during the next half-decade.

Pitt County, with its more than 24,000 registered voters, should cast a heavy vote in this important election. In the Democratic Primary on May 28, however, Pitt County cast only 12,500 votes, considerably less than its previous high, while the state as a whole was voting in record numbers that exceeded 600,000.

Is Pitt County less interested in the future of North Carolina than other counties and areas of the state? Do the people of Pitt have less at stake in the outcome of Saturday's gubernatorial election than the people in other parts of the state?

The answer to both these questions is No! Each registered voter has an obligation to his government and to his fellow citizens to exercise his right to cast a ballot Saturday for the candidate of his choice. Those who discharge this obligation by going to the polls and voting will be helping to build a better North Carolina by taking an active part in shaping the course of its government. Those who remain away from the polls will be contributing to the apathy which has always been the greatest threat to good government in a democracy.

We urge the voters of Pitt County to turn out in large numbers Saturday to participate in the election of North Carolina's next governor. It is not only the right of the individual to vote in the election, it is likewise the responsibility of each citizen to consider carefully the issues, the candidates, and register his choice at the ballot box.

Didn't Expect Lid To Blow Off

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—The picture of the State Department which emerges from senatorial quizzing on the U2 spy plane and the Tokyo riots is more than just the poor judgment now admitted.

Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and his department showed a lack of attention to detail and a failure to understand both human reactions and Communist tactics. When the Central Intelligence Agency sent the U2 on its mission over Russia—just two weeks before the summit conference—it was taking a chance, since the plane might be downed and American spying exposed.

The result could have been guessed in human terms. Premier Nikita Khrushchev who had been preaching good will toward President Eisenhower and the United States, would be outraged. And no wonder.

Such an incident would make him look like a sap before the whole Communist world. While he had been pumping up hope for the summit meeting, the United States was violating Soviet territory.

This goes far to explain his violent reaction when the plane was downed and the pilot captured. He wrecked the summit, called off Eisenhower's trip to Russia, and began a campaign of ridicule against him.

It might have been expected of the State Department—the summit meeting, so tense that it would have been on top of every detail involving Russian relations.

But Herter told the Senate Foreign Relations committee that neither he nor Eisenhower knew specifically of the disastrous spy flight although they had approved the spy program in general.

Eisenhower was to have gone on to Japan after his tour of Russia. There was good reason to believe that, even if he had a Russian triumph, he might have met with violence and riots in Tokyo.

Communists, laborites, neutralists and even some conservatives were opposed to the new American-Japanese detente. They had been mounting demonstrations against it for more than a year.

This alone—since Eisenhower's safety might be endangered and American prestige damaged—would have been reason enough to call off his Tokyo trip once Khrushchev had canceled his Russia visit. It would have been based on the idea of taking no unnecessary chances.

When Vice President Richard M. Nixon made his Latin American trip in the early part of 1959—and ran into anti-American riots—Khrushchev had just become premier. He had not yet entered his love—America phase. The Communists were blamed in big part for the anti-American riots against Nixon. That's understandable. The Communist world then was trying to embarrass the United States every way it could.

By the time Eisenhower made his Latin American tour this year, Khrushchev had visited him here, the summit meeting was just a few weeks away, and Khrushchev was soft-pedaling anti-Americanism.

It is probably more than accidental that Eisenhower, unlike Nixon, ran into almost no anti-Americanism from Latin American Communists. Moscow, because of the mood prevailing at the time, probably told them to go easy on Eisenhower.

So, if the summit were not a bust and Eisenhower made a triumphal tour of Russia, it could have been expected Moscow would tell Communists everywhere to pipe down when Eisenhower arrived, including Tokyo.

That was about the only reason the State Department should have had for thinking Eisenhower might not run into trouble in Japan. But that reason went out the window once Khrushchev turned on Eisenhower.

Instead, the State Department could have realized the year-long history of Tokyo riots was a signal to expect more of the same when Eisenhower arrived, particularly since now Moscow could be expected to stir up the Japanese Communists against him.

All these obvious things apparently failed to penetrate the State Department thinking.

Opinions In Brief

"I would remind the House that it never was the intention of the sponsors of REA that it should replace established private power services or duplicate such services."—Rep. Harold Cooley (N.C.).

"Just what, in the long run, have we solved by our enormous and expensive farm subsidy program? You can still go broke, or get rich, in the farming business—just as in every other type of independent business—depending upon how hard you work. How shrewdly you operate, how hard you buy and sell, and how happily you can deal with you."—Myrtle Creek (Ore.) Mail.

More Glamor In Oscars

Since the Academy Awards always draws some sort of comment, it is only fitting that the Emmy Awards should draw some comment, too.

We wouldn't have missed the Academy Award program over TV for anything. There has always been a glitter about the Academy Awards, an advertisement about those who might win, and you have an opportunity to see the movies—which usually play several days.

Television, on the other hand, is hit and miss. There are so many programs in one night, in one week, that it doesn't always matter that a good program is on. Company comes, a telephone call interrupts, you become tired of TV—and then, you most certainly are out when some of these programs come on the air.

With the end result that, come Emmy Award night and you haven't seen one third of the selections up for honors. And if you had seen every one, it almost would make no difference. Well, three old movie pros won anyway. Probably you've seen them win before. Maybe we didn't miss anything after all.

Ayden is about 10 miles away. And you have to call long distance to talk to the people over there.

But the Ayden directory is included in the Greenville directory and its call letters are PL, the same as the abbreviation for the Greenville call letters.

We have known some who have dialed this PL in Ayden for hours before calling the operator to complain about a busy signal or a number possibly out of order.

When we called the operator, she didn't answer in time and suddenly the awful truth dawned.

And, finally, the inevitable has happened to Patsy. It's something we never asked for. You see, though we hate to talk about "ourselves", this is a somewhat interesting observation which has continued over the years of our life.

Patsy; or a sitting duck is called a Patsy. Then it got to be Patsy.

It popped up in high school, but died in college, fortunately. Then, over a year ago, when we worked for "another" paper, somebody got the name mixed up on a byline, and it came out Patsy. The printers evidently enjoyed this so much that Patsy popped up more often in print, much to our dismay, but when we got here we kept quiet and hoped Patsy would die.

But she is reborn. We got a note from one of our editors addressed to Patsy.

Trouble, is, it is undignified, and what will we be when we bet old?

And, finally, the inevitable has happened to Patsy. It's something we never asked for. You see, though we hate to talk about "ourselves", this is a somewhat interesting observation which has continued over the years of our life.

No Alibi For 3 Errors

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Recently our country has encountered three major international set-backs:

1. Cuba;
2. The Paris Summit Conference;
3. President Eisenhower's visit to Japan.

The State Department is the agency of our government responsible for formulating foreign policy, for evaluating data which come to it from many sources; for knowing in advance what events are likely to transpire. The most important men in this mechanism are the deskmen, usually junior officials who are specialists in particular areas or matters and whose reports and memoranda eventually reach those who finalize policy. The State Department is therefore the responsible body that must answer to Congress and to the American people for whatever errors, misinterpretations, incompetence led to the disasters associated with the events. If the men at the top are badly informed, it is the deskmen who passed on incorrect data. The alibi usually is that a man used his best judgment. If his judgment is no good, he should not hold that job.

First, the Cuban disaster. Our Ambassador to Cuba at the time that Fidel Castro seized power by revolutionary means was Earl E. Smith. When he was appointed to this office, he was briefed as to State Department policy by officials of the Department and Herbert L. Matthews of "The New York Times" who has had the reputation of favoring revolutionary groups in Spain and in Latin America. Smith, who is a knowledgeable person, reported back to the State Department the Communist characteristics of the Castro movement. His reports were ignored. Smith was retired because he was opposed to the extensive support given to Castro by the State Department which was principally responsible for putting Castro in power. The personnel of the State Department responsible for the American policy in Cuba were Roy R. Rubottom, Jr., Assistant Secretary for Inter-American Affairs, and William A. Wieland, Director, Office of Caribbean and Mexican Affairs.

Second, prior to the holding of the Paris Summit Conference, I and others wrote that it would come to nothing. Therefore, it is not hindsight to say that there was ample information available to indicate that Khrushchev would have to find a way out of that meeting. In fact various broadcasts from Moscow foretold failure. Nobody could have foretold that Khrushchev would have attacked Eisenhower with such brutality of language and manner but there was ample evidence in Russian, Chinese and other satellite literature to indicate the course of Russian action. In charge of the desks in the State Department dealing with the Summit Conference and the President's trip to Russia were Hugh S. Cumming, Jr., Director of Intelligence and Research, T. Achilles Polyzoides, Director of Current Intelligence for the Americas, Charles E. Bohlen was Adviser on Russian Affairs, Edwin M.J. Kretzmann, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Domestic Affairs.

Third, the Eisenhower visit to Japan. I do not know enough about the current handling of the data from Red China and Japan in the State Department. Years ago, the Far Eastern Division in the State Department was one of the most competently organized and staffed. The men for the Far East were trained, able and with a wide Far Eastern experience. When I knew this Division best, it was headed by Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, an unusually able public official.

It is impossible to believe that so great a storm could have been brewed in the Far East without some advance knowledge on the part of the State Department. What was done about it? What counter-measures were taken?

These questions need to be answered because faith in the efficiency and knowledge of the State Department is again disappearing in this country. When (Continued on page six)

Strength For Today

BUT IT TAKES EFFORT

People can almost always make a marriage work if they work hard enough at it. For some reason or other some folks have the idea that marriage will solve all their problems. It can be said with confidence that marriage certainly creates as many problems as it solves. It simply adds to the number we already have. This should not discourage anyone, for the older we grow the more should we be willing to solve problems, the better should we be able to do so, and the more willing should we be to have this added responsibility placed upon us. We are made after a certain fashion, and among other things people when they arrive at a certain age will develop better in every way, have more poise, and be happier if they enter the married state.

But they should face the fact that, although marriage is one of life's most rewarding experiences, it by no means makes life easy or automatically solves any problems. Yet for most people, a life which does not involve the challenges and rewards of marriage appears with the passing years to lack very decidedly something quite necessary and basic.

Certainly one reason why some marriages do not work is because so many people do not realize that it will take considerable sacrifice, self-effacement, and usefulness to establish marriage as a vital factor in their lives. Like all the important situations of life, marriage involves sacrifice and requires the accommodation of persons to their associates. This requires character.

Invite Inflation Or Deflation?

By ELMER ROESSNER

Congress acts to cut phone and travel taxes. States plan to levy more income taxes. Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller, a standing but not running candidate for President, offers to rebate 10 per cent of taxes paid by New Yorkers.

These tax changes lead to the question: Are taxes inflationary or deflationary? The answer is clear: It depends.

Inflation is generally considered to be a rising supply of money in relation to available goods. If there is more money than goods, prices go up. If goods are more plentiful than money, prices go down.

The first is inflationary; the second, deflationary. In the past 15 years, money supplies, largely increased by credit, have been rising faster than the supply of goods. Prices have consistently gone up. To solve the problem of what-er taxes are inflationary or deflationary, let's take these examples:

Suppose the United States feels it must spend more money for zip-bombs and other weapons and thereupon increases many levies: on incomes, on sales, on services and other things.

People paying higher taxes would pass them on, as much as possible, to those who buy goods. Workers would try to pass them on to employers, and through them to consumers.

That would be directly deflationary. The money supply would be reduced without any decrease in things to spend it for.

More specifically, buying power would be taken away from income groups. The money would be turned over to bond holders in payment of the national indebtedness. But bondholders would try to reinvest these funds—not rush to stores to spend them.

Therefore, consumer spending would be less and no other group would increase spending. The money supply would decrease in relation to goods available, and that's deflation in anybody's book.

mand without increases in consumer goods, would further inflate the economy.

On the other hand, suppose the United States decides to reduce its indebtedness, now $289 billion, and increase taxes to pay off a few billion every year.

Invest these funds—not rush to stores to spend them.

Therefore, consumer spending would be less and no other group would increase spending. The money supply would decrease in relation to goods available, and that's deflation in anybody's book.

Therefore, consumer spending would be less and no other group would increase spending. The money supply would decrease in relation to goods available, and that's deflation in anybody's book.

The conclusion seems to be that taxes are neither inflationary nor deflationary. The economic effects depend on what is done with the tax take. If used for spending, it's inflationary; if used for saving or paying bonds, deflationary.

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

A tree growing in its natural state is mostly a happy, healthy plant. It feeds itself on the harvest of leaves that annually fall to the forest floor around its feet. Although it is host to many insects and diseases, somehow it survives. It even recovers (sometimes) from the ravages of fires that sweep through the woods. But when man seeks its shade and protection becomes part of its neighborhood, many hazards become part of their relationship. Man hacks off the limbs with complete indifference to the welfare of the tree.

He grubbs out the roots in order to have a lawn or flower beds. He fills in over the roots, drags the soil off, exposing feeder and anchor roots, and then wonders why his tent of green loses color, takes on an anemic look and eventually dies.

If you are lucky enough to have good shade trees around your house, take care of them. You are a young upstart when compared to them in age. For many years they have been there.

Try to let them continue in the same state of growth as they were when they first caught your eye. Leave their growing areas as much like their initial one as you possibly can. Try not to let your desire for rich dirt (dirt you want for shrub or flower bed) get the best of you. Leave it around the tree—buy some good soil for special purposes or condition that which you have to meet this purpose.

Feed your trees and keep them healthy. As most trees around the home are usually found in the lawn area, a yearly feeding is essential to their well being. The tree with a large network of roots will rob the grass. So feeding the tree will make for a better lawn. If you have only a few trees, feed them yourself. If you have quite a few, let your nurseryman or tree surgeon feed them for you. To feed the tree, first determine the amount of fertilizer to use. Measure the diameter of the tree (about 4 1/2 feet from ground).

Multiply the diameter of tree by 3. If the diameter is 15 inches, you will need 45 pounds for that particular tree. Using a punch bar, punch holes in the ground of root area, starting at drip of tree (outer fringe of branches).

The holes should be about 18 inches deep. In order to figure them out, number of holes to punch around tree, allow one pound of fertilizer for each hole. See sketch as to method of staggering holes if more than one circle is required.

It is better to place holes far enough apart (24 to 30 inches) so that you can get in a circle of two. This gives you a better distribution of fertilizer.

You can use 4-8-8 or 10-8-6 or any good commercial fertilizer. This type of fertilizer is best for shade trees such as maple, oaks, elm, etc.

If your shade tree is a pecan, cut the nitrogen down a couple of points (6-8-6 or 6-8-8). If a fruit tree such as apple or pear is used, cut down to 4-10-10 or 4-8-4. The use of too much nitrogen makes trees more liable to attacks of fire blight.

Keep the shade trees you have by feeding and pruning dead wood out of them. They can't be replaced—so take care of them. A few dollars spent for fertilizer each year may be the difference between a sun-baked home grounds and one that is cool and inviting.

Experts Advise: Suds Leather Upholstery

Who knows better how to take care of leather furniture than a group called the "Upholstery Leather Group?" To answer many inquiries, their recommended method is suds and water. They advise wiping leather furniture with a damp, sudsy cloth; wiping the film off with a dry cloth; then buffing the surface. This reveals all the natural beauty of genuine leather.

What To Do With Persistent Smokers

Are there persistent smokers in your home? If so, you can't escape deposits of brown tobacco film on your windows and curtains—and a dusty odor, too.

If "no smoking" signs don't work, you can cope with the situation by washing your windows often with warm soap or detergent suds. Launder your curtains often, too. It will be easy—if you choose fabrics that can be machine washed and dried.

Schools Are Year 'Round Job For Rose

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

J.H. Rose, superintendent of the Greenville City Schools, is a native of Warrenton.

He came to Greenville in 1919 as principal of Greenville High School after serving as a First Lieutenant in the Field Artillery in World War I. Before entering the Army he had graduated from Trinity College, now Duke University, and Columbia University, and taught for two years in Kinston and Bethel.

In 1920 Rose was made Superintendent of the Greenville school system, a job he has held since.

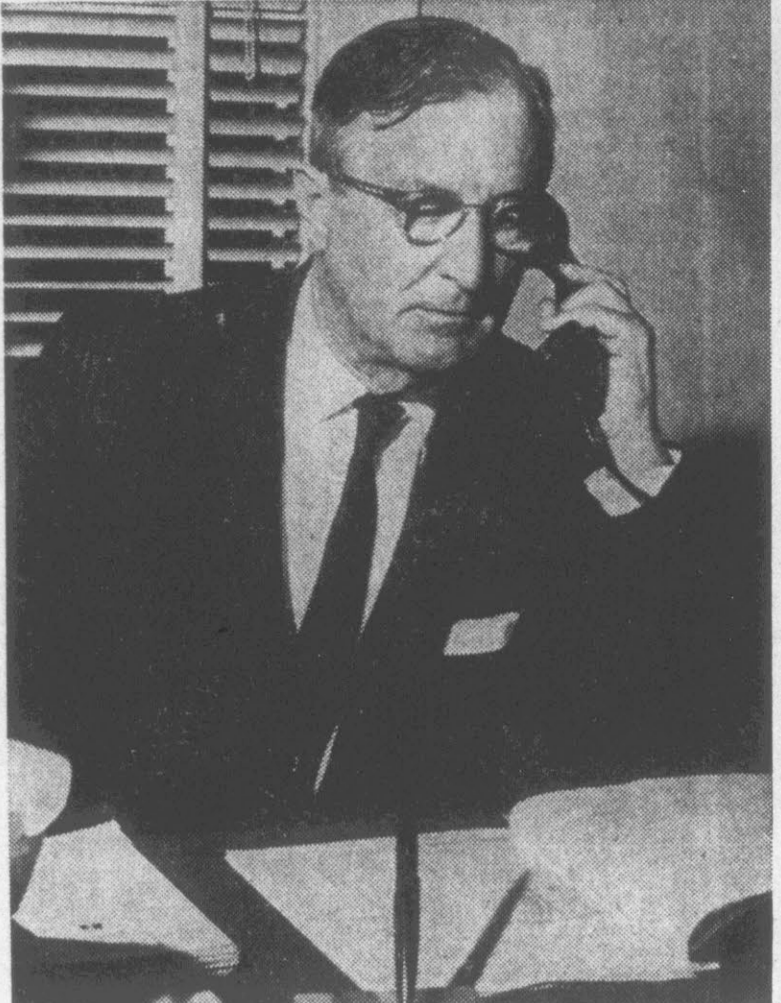

According to the veteran educator, one of his main duties is "to stay about a year ahead of everything . . . looking ahead and showing the school board what the future will demand."

His other, more tangible duties include the general supervision of the entire school system, including such things as maintenance of the buildings and grounds; recommending teachers for employment in the city school system; seeing that the morale among the students and teachers is kept high; and, what is one of the most important, seeing that the money allotted for the schools is spent wisely and economically.

Rose notes that per capita, the Greenville Schools are among the most inexpensive and, he emphasizes, one of the best public school systems in North Carolina.

The summer months are no vacation time for the school superintendent. During the so-called summer school vacation the superintendent of schools has to see that repairs are made to the buildings and that they are painted. Reports, both dealing with statistics about children attending the schools here and financial reports have to be prepared. Supplies have to be ordered and then, when they arrive, have to be distributed. The school budget has to be prepared and submitted to the Board of County Commissioners for study.

School is actually not out during the summer for the summer schools are in operation and, although not as many children attend then as do the regular school seasons, they have to be supervised and run just as the "winter" schools have to be.

According to Rose, work is being carried out which will give Elmhurst School an additional first grade room. A portion of the South Porch of the building is being glassed-in to provide the additional room space which is much needed.

Rose added that a large room at Third Street School is being divided into two rooms will be made from it, a step that is necessary to provide room for an additional class at the school.

Rose noted that one of the most important, and one of the most difficult things he is confronted with in the performance of his duties is seeing that as much use and good is gotten out of each dollar spent as is possible. And the thing he doesn't like about the job is that, "We do not have enough money to do the job we would like to do. We need guidance counselors, music teachers, more regular teachers, more equipment and library books and more building space, but we just do not have the money."

Rose pointed out that at the present, "We need a new elementary school in East Greenville and an addition to the South Greenville School. A new Junior High School building is needed and a new Negro Senior High School is needed so the C.M. Eppes school may be used for a junior high school."

According to the Superintendent, each year the school system has a net increase of from 300 to 400 children, "enough for a new school."

Last year over 5,200 children attended school in the city system and were taught by the 184 teachers and principals in the system.

Rose, who "likes people very much" says he likes "living and working with boys and girls" the most. He added that when he gets fed up with the way adults in the world act he likes to attend a school assembly and just sit and look at the children in the audience . . . and think how much better the children today are than their parents were.

The veteran school official, who said "there is something new every day", includes work, going to the beach to walk and swim, fishing in inland waters and "reading a lot of good books" as his hobbies. He added that now playing with his grandchildren, of which he has three, is also a hobby.

Rose said he wished to pay tribute to all the people he has worked with, especially the county commissioners and the boards of education who "always wanted good schools and made their decisions in light of what was best for the children. . . with no political or group pressures." entering into their decisions. This pleasant and rewarding job in North Carolina.

In addition to his local duties, Rose is Chairman of the North Carolina Governor's Commission on the Physically Handicapped and as such, works with the Presidents Committee in Washington, D.C.

The superintendent is also a member of the American Society of School Administrators, the North Carolina Education Association, and is Civil Defense Director for Pitt County, and was Assistant State Director of Civilian Defense for Eastern North Carolina during World War II.

A member of the Board of Trustees of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, and the Shepard Memorial Library. Rose is a past State Commander of the American Legion.

Rose married the former Lenna Elizabeth Arant while in school at Columbia University and they have four children.

Warehouse Ass'n Meeting Today

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)—The annual convention of the Bright Belt Warehouse Assn. open today with an address by Rep. Watkins M. Abbott (D-Va) scheduled tonight.

The congressman from Virginia's 4th District is chairman of the House Agriculture Committee tobacco subcommittee.

F. S. Royster, managing director of the association, said the opening dates of the various tobacco belt markets will not be announced during the convention. He said the dates will be announced later by the various belts.

Gastonian Dies In Fall Off Truck

MACON, Ga. (AP) — A 34-year-old Gastonia, N.C., man was fatally injured early Wednesday when he apparently fell from a truck loaded with cotton here.

The victim, Willie Calvin Starnes, was pulling a tarpaulin over the cotton to protect it from rain when he apparently slipped and fell, officers said. He died in a hospital.

Officers said Starnes worked for H. L. Bowers Co., a North Carolina concern.

Losing Industry To Charlotte

HOLLY, Mich. (AP)—This town of 3,000 near Detroit is about to lose its largest industry to Charlotte, N.C., where American Spring of Holly, Inc., says "out costs will once more be in line with our competition."

American Spring employs about 200 and has been located in Holly more than 40 years. It makes wire springs and wire forms, mostly for the automotive industry.

American Spring, purchased earlier this year by Republic Industries Corp., got a new president in Ian F. Stevens only Tuesday. Howard Smith, the former president, retired.

A statement issued Wednesday by Stevens to the company's employees said the firm is losing money because it had lost many of its customers to competitors.

Stevens said the shift to Charlotte was contemplated within 3 to six months. He did not say what wage scale the company expected to pay in North Carolina.

Frank Hubble, president of the United Auto Workers Local 524 which represents 150 American Spring production workers, said wages at Holly ranged from $1.79 to $2.68 an hour.

COMPILING REPORTS . . . with secretary

John Foster Dulles was Secretary of State, he restored the good name of that Department of government. With the passing of Dulles, personnel and policy of the Department seem to have become very weak and both will be a campaign issue.

Secretary of State Christian Herter has no war to hide behind. If his organization needs new personnel, he should find it. If it cannot formulate policy, he should resign.

When there is a failure, the responsibility for the failure must be fixed. As long as men in office can make mistakes without censure, errors will continue. Therefore Senator Fulbright, who heads the Senate Relations Committee, ought to have a public look at all this. The final responsibility is his.

The United States and the United Kingdom are the last major holdouts against the metric system of weights and measures.

WHAT OTHERS Say:

LAKE AND THE PRESS

The Southern Pines Pilot is pleased to have been named this week by Terry Sanford, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, as one of the North Carolina daily and weekly newspapers "from Asheville to Zebulon" that are opposing Dr. I. Beverly Lake, Mr. Sanford's opponent, and his "campaign of hate."

Sanford pointed out that Lake has failed to hold regular press conferences and "has been whining and shedding crocodile tears about the newspapers of North Carolina that have exposed his campaign of fear and smear." Sanford said that Lake should be afraid of the newspapers of this state, "for as long as they remain free, the tactics of hate mongers always will be exposed to the bright light of truth."

One of the most disturbing of the many odd notions in Lake's campaign grab-bag has been his attack on the press. This is standard procedure with reactionaries and, as noted in the adjoining editorial on this page, implies "more than a hunt of the dictator."

Yet the many North Carolina newspapers named by Sanford—and more than were not named—are not opposing Lake because he has attacked them. They are opposing the sum total of his approach to all the great problems that face the state—an approach which is essentially negative.

Most of the newspapers of North Carolina—and we think The Pilot can be put on this list—have for many years helped to shape, nourish and define the special character of the state—a character that has won for North Carolina nation-wide recognition as the most progressive state in the South.

These newspapers, The Pilot included, do not now propose to let that character be compromised and altered beyond recognition by a man who daily shows more and more that he is out of tune with the forces that have made North Carolina great.

HOLDING THE LINE

The Stately News & Press

When can a county or a state afford to "rest upon its laurels" and do what some politicians call "hold the line?"

In the light of current events in North Carolina it might be well for the people of the state to ask themselves that question.

Certainly, North Carolina is not in that position today. With a rating in the bottom ten states so far as education is concerned, with a standard of living somewhat below that of the nation, and with an average per capita income which should make us blush, it is no time to speak of holding the line.

There is only one direction in which we can go very far—and that is upward. It isn't far to the bottom, in spite of our boastful statements about the greatness of the "Old North State."

North Carolina has problems, but it also has potential. That potential cannot be realized in any way other than through determined effort.

Where would North Carolina be today with regard to education if Charles Brantley Aycock had said, in effect, "I would like for the state to have good public schools, but we must hold the line?"

What sort of highway system would we have had if Governor O. Max Gardner had commented, "I know we are in grave need of better roads, but we must hold the line?"

Would the farmers have ever gotten "out of the mud" if the late W. Kerr Scott had said, "We need farm to market roads, but we must hold the line?"

So long as we, as a people, are not satisfied with what we have we cannot afford to hold the line.

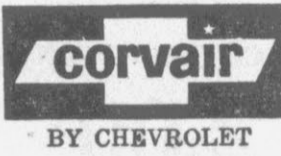

We must strive to go forward educationally, industrially, agriculturally and culturally.

CHAPTER 30

"When I boarded the plane in Hong Kong," Mary Hollberg told Hugh North, "I was given word by one of the people in our organization that I must look out for you. You were seen with the Hong Kong police, examining the plane's baggage. Then bad luck put you in the next seat to mine. You were involved in that incident with the Frenchman and later I heard Herr Barrows speak the word 'policeman.' I knew then that you were after me, or so I thought.

"Then that evening I heard of you being in an accident and it appeared you were not what I had thought you but some kind of guard over Herr Barrows."

"Get to the cocktail party," Hugh said.

"Ah yes, the cocktail party, Herr Boyden," she said, calling North by his assumed name. "I got there before anyone else because Wallen told me the hour was three o'clock, not four. And when I arrived he told me that he recognized me. Ach, my bad luck! Once I was arrested in San Francisco and forced to stand in what you Americans call a line-up. At that very time John Wallen was making a motion picture in which he was a police officer of some kind and he attended that line-up to get—ah—what do you say?—the atmosphere of his role."

"And he recognized you?"

"Ja. He—should not speak so of a dead man, Herr Boyden, but he was a beast. He said he would inform the authorities unless I gave him money, much money."

"So Wallen did go in for cash blackmail after all, eh?" Hugh murmured.

"I told him I had no such money as he demanded," the German girl went on. "Then other guests arrived and he told me to see him later and he would make a proposition. After the rest had gone I offered him my ring as payment. He took it and when he had it he laughed at me. He said he still wanted money."

"I struck him in the mouth and ran out and went to my room. Then I knew he would not keep silent anyway, so I got up my courage and went back to get my ring. I told myself I would accuse him of stealing it if he did not give it to me. But when I got there I found—found..."

Her voice trickled off into silence as she relived the grisly scene of her discovery, the dead man on the bed, the knife jutting from his chest.

"Then I fled again," she went on with an effort. "I did not know what to do. I had been seen to stay behind when the others left and—"

"Who were the last to leave Wallen's place?" North broke in.

The girl thought, shook her head. "I do not remember," she admitted. "Lita Naline, I think, and—"

"But Lita passed out," North said. "I was there when Carss carried her off."

"Oh, but they both came back," the German girl said. "She said she had mislaid a bracelet and she must look for it. They searched awhile, but Lita was too drunk to see anything and Herr Carss was only humoring her. They did not stay long, but, yes, they must have been the last ones to leave."

"Go on."

"So I ran out of the hotel. I was half crazy with fear. Then I knew I had no hiding place in Bangkok; I would be noticed anywhere I went, a European blonde. I doubled back to the Imperial and now I wanted to find you instead of avoid you. I thought you would—protect me, Herr Boyden."

"I came here to the fourth floor by the back stairs and I saw a man watching your room. I hid myself in a little closet where they keep brooms and wash buckets and so on. There I stayed, expecting someone to come at any time, until—until I was awakened by shots and the sounds of men running past the door. I looked out after a while and the man watching was either asleep or dead. The door to your room was not being watched. So here I am."

She stopped and there was a silence. Hugh North said, "Did Wallen make a phone call while you were with him, after the others had gone?"

"He made two calls. One was to you, but I do not know who the first was. He talked in a very low voice in the bedroom when he called the first time, but louder when he spoke to you."

"You heard nothing of that first call?"

"Only once when he got angry and shouted something about if somebody would not—ah—play ball with him he was going to—what did he say?—lower the boom about the Chinese girl. Right after that he hung up the telephone and I could hear him muttering curses. Then he called you."

"Did he mention this Chinese girl's name?"

"No, he said only what I have told you."

So Wallen had thought that Tao Muong was Chinese because of her oriental features. If Tao Muong was not in Bangkok, that must be the girl that Wallen had seen Tao Muong in the States.

Captain Planung Pokh of the Bangkok Imperial Troop rapped sharply on North's door.

"Who is that?" Mary Hollberg gasped.

"Keep quiet," North said in a hushed voice. "Stay here."

He moved into the next room, snapped on a light, and answered the door. Captain Pokh, tone-weary, entered and promptly collapsed in the nearest chair. The Thai officer cast one glance at the snoring Bracht and looked back at Hugh inquiringly.

"I thought it would be best to keep him in here," the G-2 agent said briefly. "Did Robinson crack?"

"He break in little pieces," the captain replied. "Is case any better now Chu is revealed as bad man?"

North said, "Chu didn't kill Wallen, remember."

"Ah yes," Pokh shook his head again. "Mary Hollberg, most elusive person. I catch hell from General Genung if she not found quick."

"What would you say if I told you I'm pretty sure Mary Hollberg didn't murder Wallen?" Hugh asked quietly.

Pakh looked at the G-2 agent in aggrieved disappointment. "Don't you have pity on poor, overworked Thai cop?" he asked. "We have number-one suspect who flees and hides right after murder. Catch her and I go to General Genung and say case closed."

"I'm afraid it's not going to be that easy," North said. "First, if

Mary killed Wallen and ran, why come back to kill Marchet? No, the murderer had to kill the Frenchman to keep Georges from exposing him—he or she is still sitting pretty, knowing the only witness is dead.

Pokh studied the carpet at his feet. "So no rest for this humble servant of the King. What do I do now?"

"As soon as it's light," North suggested, "I'd have your men go through the rooms of everybody who was on that plane from Hong Kong. Look for a tape recorder. It's a long chance but we may hit pay dirt. Tell them to say they're looking for a gun in the Chu Hoong case but to keep their eyes open for a tape recorder. Don't take it, if they find one; just let me know who owns it."

"Is simpler than that," Pokh said. He put in a phone call to Don Muang customs and gave North the information he got. Arivals on the Hong Kong plane declaring tape recorders were John Wallen—and Lex Ross.

Pokh said, "So we know those two had machines, anyway. But maybe so half a dozen more wneaked in past lazy, blind customs people. I have my men hunt."

"Do you know of any reason why Lex Ross should disguise himself as Mr. Barrows in the middle of the night and wander through the hotel?" is a riddle put to Hugh North. Continue the story Monday.

Killed In First Auto Accident

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Mrs. C. J. Lightholder, 61-year-old grandmother who had been cited for safe driving, died Wednesday in her first car accident.

Mrs. Lightholder's car collided with a Santa Fe passenger train seven miles north of here. She was thrown from the car and struck a utility pole.

In 195, the Lubbock Citizens Traffic Commission presented an award to Mrs. Lightholder for having driven a car since 1918 without having an accident or receiving a traffic ticket.

OLD LINE with a NEW TWIST

Train pauses in Elk Park to let passengers stretch their legs. In background is Garfield Peak.

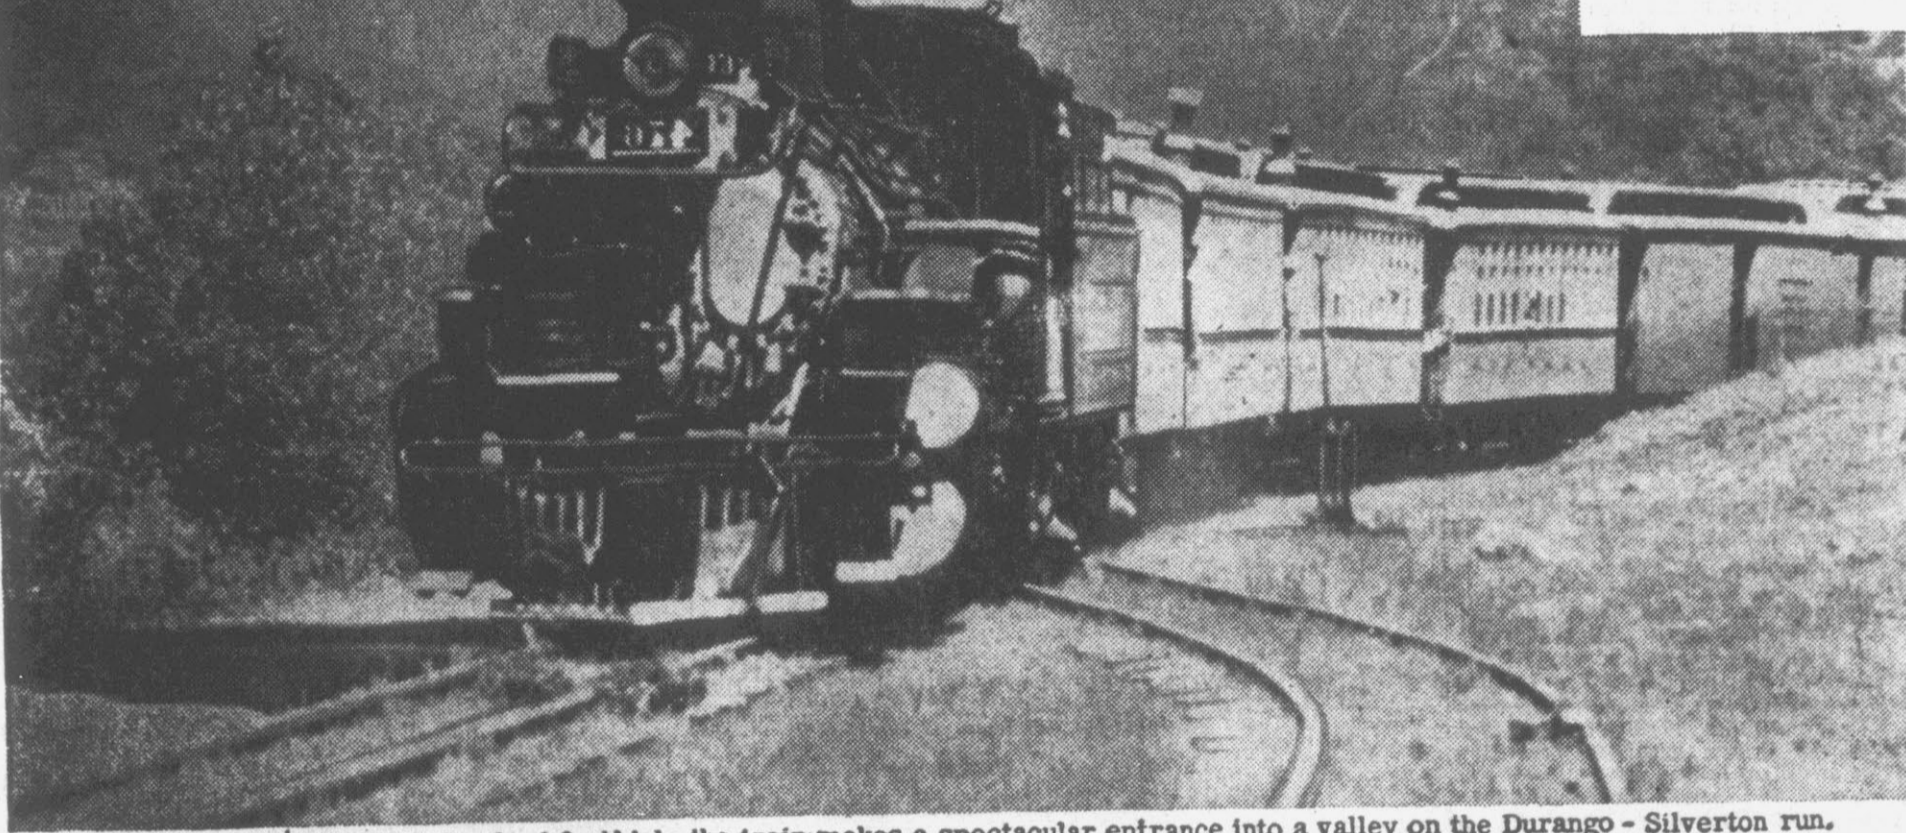

Tucked away in the southwestern corner of Colorado, is an unusual piece of Americana, one of the last narrow-gauge passenger trains left in the country. Originally built by the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad to transport men and materials between Durango and Silverton, the 3-foot-wide tracks stretch 45.2 miles between the two towns.

Today, as in the 1890's when Silverton was a silver mining boom town, tiny black steam engines puff and chug, pulling colorful yellow coaches along the historic Animas River. Open platform wooden coaches add to the flavor as the coal smoke mingles with the fresh pine of the mountains. The line now carries only passenger traffic.

The ride averages a slow 13 miles per hour. The train climbs during the three and a half hours from an altitude of 6,520 feet at Durango to 9,300 feet at Silverton, the end of the run. There are only a few scheduled stops, but the train will stop virtually anywhere to accommodate fishermen. It also services several guest ranches along the right of way.

In Silverton, buildings have been preserved to portray the town as it was in its boom years. Townspeople dress in the gay garb of the '90s for "atmosphere." The Silvertonians like to impress the tourists.

Black smoke shooting a hundred feet high, the train makes a spectacular entrance into a valley on the Durango - Silverton run.

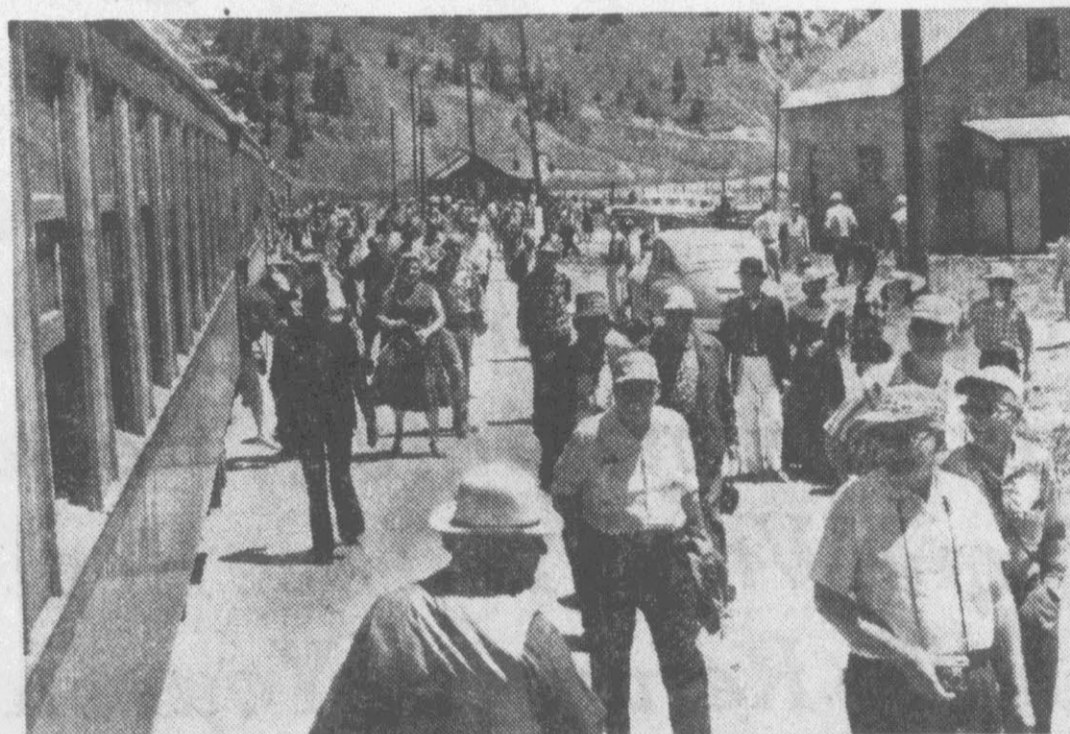

Open-platform coaches provide a good spot for taking pictures.

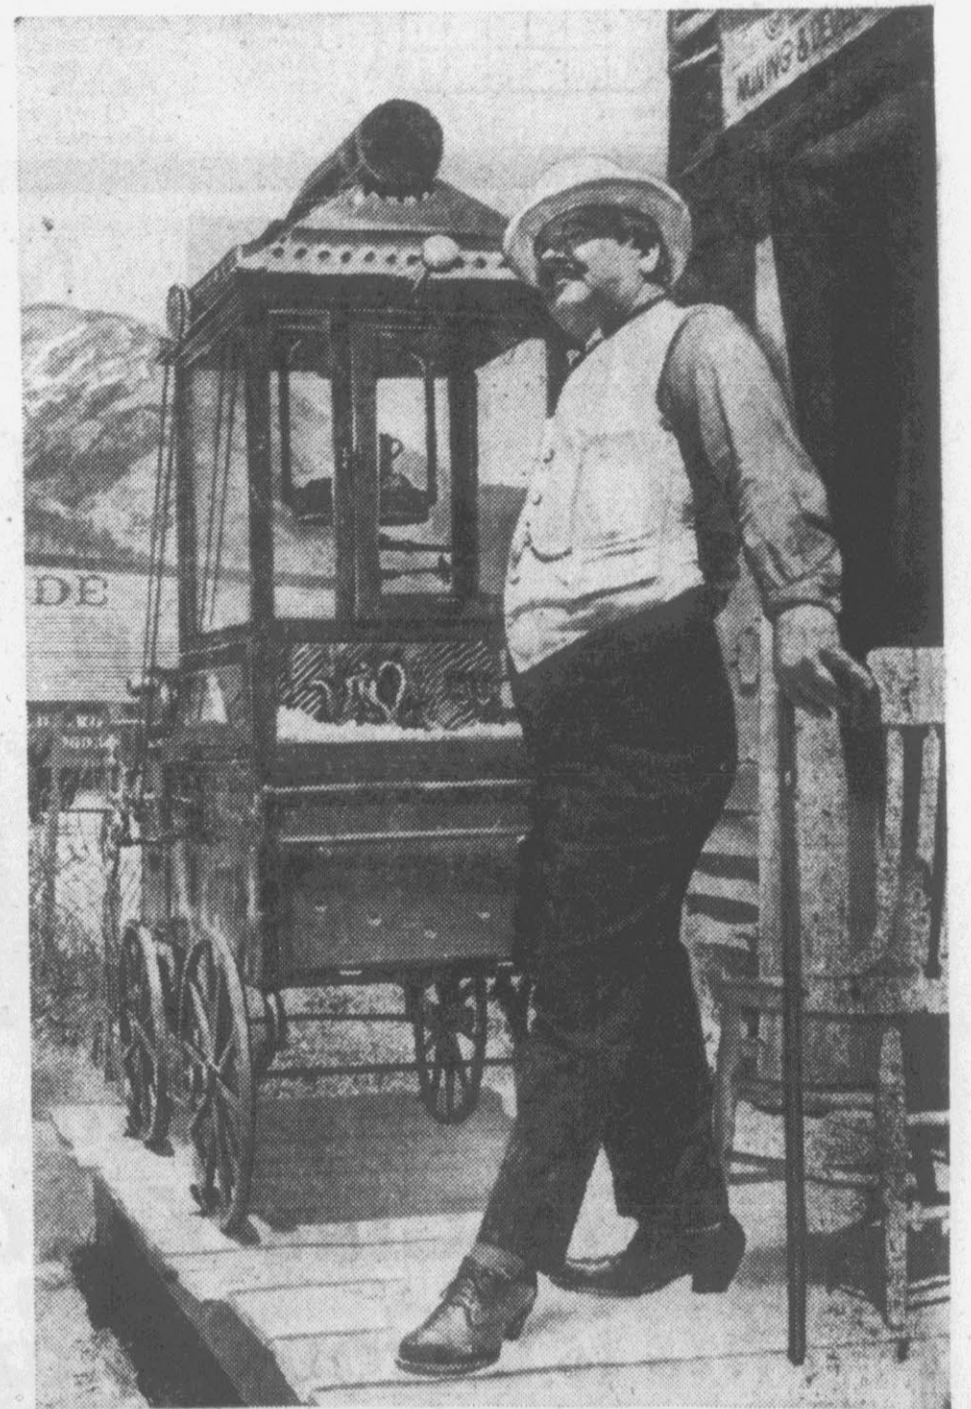

Clinging to a narrow shelf in the southwestern Colorado mountains, the train stubbornly inches forward toward Silverton.

Helene Crawford, wearing a plumed hat of the 90's, poses for two cameramen.

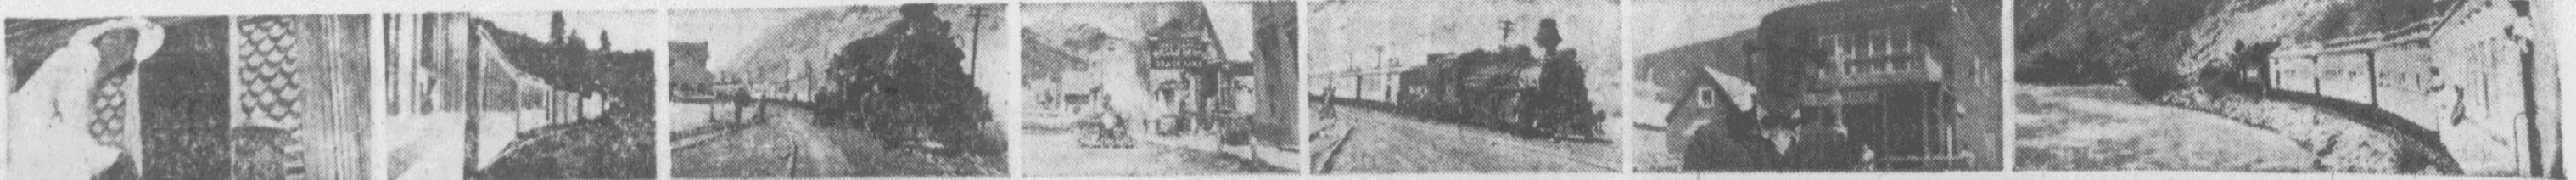

After backing into Silverton the train screeches to a stop, and the 350 passengers descend on the town, ready to buy anything from lunch to souvenirs.

Acting as a piece of "atmosphere" for Silverton, R. O. Baird poses as Giuseppe Biardi, an immigrant Italian popcorn vender.

PEARSALL IS WRONG

During the past week the Sanford-Hodges Machine has trotted out Mr. Thomas Pearsall, former legislator and business associate of Governor Hodges, in effort to discredit the legal experience and record of Dr. Beverly Lake. Mr. Pearsall has not actively practiced law for 20 years. Dr. Lake was a professor of law at Wake Forest College for 18 years and is responsible for drafting the North Carolina Pupil Assignment Act.

PEARSALL ERROR NO. 1:

What Pearsall Said: On a television program on May 15, "Pearsall said the committee which recommended the legislation had to redraft it. after Lake, then an assistant attorney general, had originally drafted the bill."

What Actually Happened: After Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954, which threatened chaos in public schools, Beverly Lake, then Ass't Attorney General, conceived a plan over the next several weeks designed to avoid such "an intolerable situation." This fact is brought out and supported in a statement to the press on June 21 by Mr. Sam Rehends, also an assistant attorney general. Mr. Rehends, now of Albemarle, occupied an office in 1954 next to Dr. Lake's. In August, 1954, the Pearsall Committee was appointed by Governor Umstead to work on the problem. Dr. Lake was designated by Att'y Gen. Harry McMullan to draft a plan for the committee.

The committee convened in December, 1954, and worked with Dr. Lake on the draft of the plan he had first conceived after the Supreme Court decision.

On the first day of the 1955 session, at a conference in the Attorney General's department, Beverly Lake presented the Pupil Assignment Plan. Present at that meeting were Attorney General McMullan, Ass't Attorney General Love, Dr. Paul Jones of Farmville representing the Senate, Mr. W. W. Taylor of Warrenton, representing the House, and others. The conferees accepted the bill after some changes of language, punctuation, and some additional ideas, but in the main the Pupil Assignment Act remains substantially as written and presented by Lake to that conference.

The next day, in the House, Mr. Taylor and other members introduced the bill; and in the Senate it was introduced by Dr. Jones and other members. It was subsequently passed

Mr. Taylor refutes Mr. Pearsall's contention. He was present and describes what happened. Mr. Taylor was there.

However, Mr. Taylor's testimony is not needed. The record shows that the conference was held one day, the plan put in its final form, and the legislation introduced in both chambers the second day. Mr. Pearsall said the legislation had to be redrafted.

IT WOULD HAVE BEEN IMPOSSIBLE TO REDRAFT IT BETWEEN THE AFTERNOON OF ONE DAY AND THE NEXT DAY.

PEARSALL ERROR NO. 2:

In the morning newspapers of Sunday, June 19, Mr. Pearsall is headlined as saying that Mr. Taylor was "not around" when the Pupil Assignment Act was drafted. The final draft of this law was made, as pointed out above, on the first day of the 1955 legislature. Mr. Taylor was present at this conference. WHERE WAS MR. PEARSALL? Pearsall's misrepresentation cannot be blamed on confusing the Pupil Assignment Act with the Pearsall Plan, an entirely different law. The Pearsall Plan was enacted 18 months later at a special session of the legislature (1956). But the Pupil Assignment Act was enacted in 1955 and Mr. Taylor was present at the conference at which the final draft was made.

PEARSALL ERROR NO 1 WAS TO QUESTION THE MAJOR ROLE OF DR. LAKE IN DRAFTING THE PUPIL ASSIGNMENT ACT.

PEARSALL ERROR NO. 2 WAS ATTEMPTING TO DISCREDIT MR. TAYLOR AS RELIABLE WITNESS.

MR. PEARSALL IS PROVED WRONG ON BOTH COUNTS.

The Pupil Assignment Act, drafted by Dr. Lake, has been our main defense in school cases. "Our laws have been tested by the highest courts and held constitutional," Mr. Pearsall says. He is quite correct if he is speaking of the Pupil Assignment Act, written by Dr. Lake, for the 1955 General Assembly. On the other hand, the Pearsall Plan, devised by his committee in the special session of 1956, has NEVER been tested in court.

"CLOSING" THE SCHOOLS

The Pupil Assignment Act, constructed in the main by Dr. Lake, contains NO PROVISION FOR CLOSING THE SCHOOLS.

The Pearsall Plan devised by Mr. Pearsall's Committee DOES CONTAIN A PROVISION FOR CLOSING THE SCHOOLS, provided it is voted by the local school district. Now, Mr. Pearsall says Dr. Lake will close the schools. A GOVERNOR CANNOT CLOSE THE SCHOOLS UNDER EITHER LAW. YET THE SLANDER CONTINUES THAT "LAKE WILL CLOSE THE SCHOOLS."

A third proviso against closing the schools is the State Constitution which requires that the state operate a free and uniform system of public schools. NO GOVERNOR CAN EVADE THAT REQUIREMENT. Yet, the slander continues.

SOMETHING IS WRONG WHEN PEARSALL, WHO HAS NOT ACTIVELY PRACTICED LAW IN 20 YEARS, PASSES FAULTY JUDGMENT ON LAKE, WHOSE KNOWLEDGE OF SCHOOL LAW IS SURPASSED BY NONE. SOMETHING IS WRONG WHEN PEARSALL, WHO SENT HIS SONS TO A PRIVATE SCHOOL (ASHEVILLE SCHOOL FOR BOYS), IS PASSED OFF AS A "CHAMPION" OF PUBLIC EDUCATION. SUCH ARE THE WORKINGS OF THE SANFORD-HODGES MACHINE IN ALLIANCE WITH THE PRO-INTEGRATION NEWS & OBSERVER, WHICH REPORTED THE PEARSALL TESTIMONY.

VOTE FOR THE MAN WHO IS BEST QUALIFIED IN SCHOOL LAW AND EDUCATION AND WHO HAS NOT COMPROMISED HIS INTEGRITY DURING THIS CAMPAIGN.

Theoretical 'Antimatter' Seen Ideal Fuel Of Space Explorers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — All is not going to be beer and skittles for the first space traveler who reaches the nearest star and returns to a ticker tape reception.

Dr. Edward Teller, noted physicist and father of the hydrogen bomb, said the space pioneer might find himself 50 years older, "and instead of being a hero he might end up in a zoo."

"In concordance with the laws of physics, someone in this lifetime could go to Andromeda, but I recommend against it," Dr. Teller told a University of California extension series Wednesday night.

"If there is life out there, then where is everybody? Is it possible that it's a form of life that we may not recognize as such, and isn't it even more possible that we in our galaxy may just be suburbs living in a god-forsaken outpost? There is a possibility that we may soon be able to tune in via radio on noises 20,000 light years away in the center of the galaxy, and if we hear what I think we will hear, then I will become an isolationist with regard to space exploration."

The scientist's mention of a zoo was a light reference to Einstein's theory of relativity and the possibility of a spaceman's becoming a modern Rip Van Winkle on his return.

Dr. Teller said that getting to the next star will be difficult if the rocket is powered with hydrogen fusion. So powered, 1-20th the speed of light would be its maximum, and that would require 80 years to get to Proxima Centauri.

An alternate fuel more powerful than hydrogen, Dr. Teller said, is antimatter (a purely theoretical substance, the opposite of matter,) which, when put in contact with matter, could produce energy enough for rockets to approach the speed of light. He said a spaceship on its way to Andromeda could be annihilated by antimatter either in space or on arrival.

"The problem is using antimatter for fuel is that antimatter and matter destroy each other and produce violent radiation."

"I know I'm crazy, but if we could control the use of antimatter with magnetic fields, we might get far out enough and fast enough

Plan To Observe St. John's Day

Friday June 24 is St. John the Baptist Day in the church year. St. Paul's Episcopal Church will hold two services of Holy Communion commemorating the day.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7 o'clock by the Rev. Richard Oitaway and 10 o'clock by the Rev. John W. Drake, Jr.

The Episcopal Church honors the Biblical characters of the New Testament Church throughout the Christian year. Events of Our Lord's life are also commemorated, such as birth, ascension, resurrection. Other than these spiritual saints the Episcopal Church does not set apart or canonize persons.

The Pittsburgh Civic Arena, which will cost 20 million dollars, will have the world's largest retractable dome. The movable roof will be 415 feet in diameter.

Tobacco Tips

By S.J. WEEKS
Pitt County Tobacco Agent

By the time tobacco reaches maturity it represents a large investment in time, labor and money. Tobacco harvested at the wrong time will reduce the returns from this hard work. Usually the grower who makes this mistake does so by harvesting too early—before the leaves are fully ripe. But, harvesting too late can also result in a less valuable product.

Tobacco harvested before full maturity is likely to be slick and lacking in grain. Also, it sometimes cures to a greenish color and is deficient in both flavor and aroma. The fact that the preference of the buying companies is a tobacco rich in color that comes from curing fully mature tobacco, makes it very important that growers be very careful to harvest only mature tobacco.

The condition of the base of the leaf is usually a good indication of the stage of maturity. The base rather than the tip of the leaf should be used as a guide for priming because excessive water, lack of nitrogen, or hot dry weather can often cause the tip of the leaf to appear ripe when the base is still green.

Some varieties grow with a yellowish cast. You should make sure that what appears to be ripeness is not just the natural color of the variety. Leaves that appear to be ripe in the shade as well as in the sun are more likely to be truly ripe. It helps to hold a leaf between the eyes and the sun to see if the leaf and fibers have the appearance of ripeness throughout.

Tobacco plants do not grow uniformly. Therefore, the number of ripe, bottom leaves will vary at the first pulling. Ordinarily, by pulling an average of 2 or 3 leaves from each plant, you will get leaves of uniform ripeness. Such leaves make it easier to prepare for market. When tobacco is harvested in only four or five primings the grower usually ends up with mixed tobacco and some unripe tobacco.

Proper harvesting methods do not ordinarily involve much more effort than the wrong kind, and Pitching — Early Wynn, White Sox; bounced back from five straight defeats with 13th two-hitter in his career for 3-1 victory over second-place Orioles.

By ED WILKS

Associated Press Sports Writer

Whoever started that talk about Early Wynn calling it quits should have started it sooner. That's all it took for the angry righthander to show there's life in the old guy yet, after losing five in a row.

Wynn, last season's pitcher of the year as a 22-game winner for Chicago's American League champion White Sox, bounced back with the 13th two-hitter of his 20-year career for a 3-1 victory over Baltimore Wednesday night. It was the 40-year-old veteran's 27th victory, tops among active pitchers.

While the White Sox were making it two in a row over the second place Orioles, the first place New York Yankees skipped into a 1 1/2 game lead by whipping Detroit 7-3 for their sixth straight victory.

Cleveland beat Washington 1-0 as Ted Bowsfield gained his first major league shutout with a five-hitter. Kansas City got past Boston 2-1.

In the National League, righthander Bob Friend took the major league shutout lead with his fourth shutout, an eight-hit job, as first place Pittsburgh defeated St. Louis 5-0. Second place Milwaukee hammered San Francisco 7-4. Philadelphia defeated Chicago's Cubs 6-3 after putting away a 7-6 decision in the completion of Tuesday's suspended game. Los Angeles and Cincinnati were rained out.

Wynn (3-6) gave up only a first-inning single by leadoff man Marv Breeding and an eighth-inning single by pinch-hitter Clint Courtney. The White Sox got their three in the third off loser Jack Fisher (5-5).

The Yankees, winning 13 of their last 14 decisions, stayed hot in their old manner—with the help of a guy off the bench. Kent Hadley, subbing for the injured d Bill Skowron at first base, blasted his second and third home runs off New York's first three runs off Paul Foytaek (1-5), who lost his fifth in a row. Roger Maris, regaining a tie with the Cubs' Ernie Banks for the major league home run held, then made his 20th good for two runs off Hank Aguirre in a four-run eighth.

A Right-hander Art Ditmar (6-3) won his fourth in a row, but needed Ryne Duren's relief for the last two outs. Ditmar gave up homers by Rocky Colavito and Al Kaline.

The Indians, also held to five hits, beat Bill Fischer (2-3). Bowsfield (3-2), a lefty recently acquired from Boston, gained his first complete game in 10 starts since Sept. 1, 1958.

Ray Herbert (3-6) blanked the Red Sox on four hits for eight innings and ended his losing string at five. A triple by Danny Kravitz and a wild pitch gave the A's a third-inning run off loser Frank Sullivan (3-7). They got the clincher in the sixth.

Hedrick Heads Golf Tourney

GREENSBORO (AP) — Don Hedrick of Lexington, the North Carolina schoolboy champion, and long-hitting Randy Glover of Chaw, S.C., led eight young golfers into the quarterfinals of the Carolinas Junior Golf tournament here today.

Two 18-hole rounds today will produce the finalists for Friday's championship match.

Hedrick moved to the fore Wednesday with a 1-up victory over the sub-par medalist Ray Floyd of Fayetteville. Hedrick won his morning match 2 and 1 from Jerry Williams of High Point.

Glover, an 18-year-old, eliminated the 1959 consolation champion, Johnny Leach of Troy, 4 and 3 in the morning round. Leach played even par golf for 15 holes, but couldn't match Glover's three-under-par shooting. In the afternoon round Glover needed only 13 holes to bounce Robert Baker of Charleston, S.C., 6 and 5.

Errors Spell Third Defeat For Pitt Nine

By JOHNNY HUDSON
Reflector Sports Editor

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team acted out the part of Santa Claus in the Twilight Zone last night, generously presenting Goldsboro's fast-climbing club a 14-7 decision.

An infield that once showed brilliance had a short fuse last night, blowing up in the first inning and never regaining any type of winning form. All in all, the Pitt infield was charged with a total of nine errors during the unpleasant performance.

The lone shining star in the defeat—third in succession—was the continued hitting power provided by the Pitt stickmen. The home club tapped two Goldsboro pitchers, including ace Doyle Whitfield, for 10 hits and seven runs. Yet, eight runners were left stranded on the base paths.

A five-run fourth inning became the bone-crusher for the Pitt Countians. With two outs, Whitfield walked and Romney Brock dropped the third strike on David Williams, allowing him to reach first.

A double by Dennis Sutton sandwiched by errors on the part of Billy James and Ernie Andresen provided four quick runs. A single by Jimmy Sasser brought in the fifth unearned run to offset an early 5-2 Pitt lead and give Goldsboro a 7-5 padding.

The visitors picked up four hits off tiring Malcolm Griffith in the seventh to account for two more runs.

In the ninth, a series of errors by the Pitt infield sent Griffith into right field and James Braxton to the mound. Braxton put water to the fire, getting two quick outs, but three walks, a single, and three errors had already produced five more runs.

Goldsboro picked up a single run in the first, thanks to a couple of infield blunders, and added an earned run in the third on a walk and double by Sasser.

Goldsboro was the victim of a couple of errors in the first inning, allowing two runs. Paul Castelloe opened with a walk and Billy James' sacrifice was carelessly thrown back and forth across the infield, both runners scoring. Two errors were charged on the play.

Pitt went ahead in the second with three runs. Two walks and singles by Griffith and James produced most of the fireworks.

Back-to-back doubles by J. Y. Bank, Romney Brock, and Griffith in the seventh frame gave the local nine its final two runs.

With poor infield backing, Griffith was charged with the defeat—his first as a starter. Brock, Castelloe, and Griffith had two hits each for the losers.

Sasser had three to spotlight the Goldsboro offensive machine.

Site Still Unsettled For Third Title Bout

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—While Floyd Patterson basks in his new-found glory and Ingemar Johansson vacations in Florida, the battle continues over the site of their third fight.

Los Angeles weighed in Wednesday with a wire to Bill Fugazy, a director of Feature Sports, Inc., offering the huge Memorial Coliseum and full cooperation. Fugazy, who wants to run the fight in late September or early October, replied to the Los Angeles proposition and sent similar wires to Chicago and Dallas. He said he was interested in further discussions if assured of adequate police protection for the fight.

Smith Leads Carolina Open

NEW BERN, N. C. (AP)—Ten players matched or bettered par Wednesday as the abbreviated 54-hole Carolina Open golf tournament began over the par 70 New Bern Golf and Country Club course.

Best of the par shattering group was veteran pro Al Smith of Danville, Va., who took the first round lead with a 63. He had a brilliant 30 on the back nine to take a three-stroke margin into today's second round.

Jim Ferree, the Winston-Salem Bobby Thomas and Harold Thomas, both of Greenville, shot a 74 in the first round of the Carolina Open yesterday afternoon.

They were nine strokes back of the pace set by Al Smith of Danville, Virginia.

The field will be cut to the low 50 after Thursday's 18 holes of play.

Flowers Still In Court Over Squabble With NY Giants

By JOHNNY NUDDSON
Reflector Sports Editor
Charlie Flowers, former Mississippi fullback, is in court this week fighting a suit filed by the New York Giants. The Giants seek to prevent Flowers from playing for the Los Angeles Chargers of the new American Football League.

Ernie Bank is given a good chance of topping the National League home run mark of 56 set by Hack Wilson. The Chicago Cubs shortstop cracked numbers 19 and 20 Tuesday night.

Only one other major sports event in the United States attracted as many fans for its initial venture as last Sunday's "World 600." The attendance of 78,000 ranks second only to the first College All-Star football game in Chicago in 1934 which drew some 90,000.

I was also an all-time record sports crowd for North Carolina, the previous high being 55,000 at the transplanted Rose Bowl at Durham, N. C. (Duke vs. Oregon State) on Jan. 1, 1941.

The revived New York Yankees, enjoying a successful road trip, open a four-game series with Cleveland this weekend. The Sunday game will be the "Game of the Week" on the CBS Television Network, starting at 1:25.

On Saturday, June 25, San Francisco's Giants, sporting a new manager in Tom Sheehan, meet Cincinnati at Crosley Field. Starting time is 2:25.

Gary Bell of the Indians will have the honors on Sunday.

Coach Walter Rabb is reported to be at the beach on vacation. He is reported recuperating nicely from his arm and leg injuries sustained during an indoor practice at the College World Series at Omaha, Nebraska.

An ardent angler, he is able to do some fishing. In case you haven't noticed, ex-Duke sports luminary Dick Groat is waging a hot battle for top batting honors in the National League. The Pittsburgh shortstop is hitting .242 to stand second in latest figures released.

Only four American Legion Junior baseball teams in the state are undefeated. They are Raleigh, Lincolnton-Cherryville, Charlotte, and Greensboro.

Pirates Continue To Rock In Senior Loop

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer
Who's getting the job done for the Pittsburgh Pirates in that National League race? Forget it. The question is "who ain't?"

They have the majors' top winner, Vern Law (11-2); Handyman Elroy Face and comeback guy Bob Friend on the pitching staff. And they have four of the top 10 hitters in the league plus the No. 2 man in RBI, Roberto Clemente, with 49.

Friend scattered eight hits and took the major league lead in shutouts with his fourth in a 5-0 victory over St. Louis Wednesday night. The Bucs had 11 hits—with Dick Groat (4-for-5) gaining the NL lead at .351; Clemente (.328) doubling home two runs, and Bob Skinner (.323) bringing the clincher across with a first-inning single.

It was Pittsburgh's seventh victory in eight games protecting a 3½-game bulge over second place Milwaukee. The come-alive Braves made it five in a row with a 7-4 victory over third place San Francisco's fast skidding Giants.

Philadelphia defeated the Chicago Cubs 6-3, after filling away a 7-6 decision in the completion of Tuesday's suspended game. Los Angeles and Cincinnati were rained out.

In the American League, the New York Yankees rolled into a 1½-game lead with their sixth straight success, 7-3 at Detroit. The Chicago White Sox defeated second place Baltimore 3-1. Cleveland beat Washington 1-0 and Kansas City got past Boston 2-1.

Friend gave up only one extra-base hit—Dary Spencer's second-inning double—and didn't walk a man while winning his third in a row for a 9-3 record.

The Cards' Larry Jackson (9-7) lost his second in a row—both 5-0 decisions—after winning eight straight.

Milwaukee made it eight out of nine as Billy Bruton, who tagged an inside-the-park homer, Joe Adcock and Johnny Logan each drove in two runs. The Braves had 13 hits off three pitchers while sending Johnny Antonelli (3-5) to his fifth loss in a row.

Lew Burdette (8-2) needed Don McMahon's help when the Giants scored three in the eighth with two out, but won his fifth straight.

The Phils won the regularly scheduled game in a four-run fifth capped by rookie Tony Curry's one-on-homer. Rookie Tony Gonzalez also homered.

Johnny Buzhardt (3-4) and the Phils had Tuesday's game won before the curfew sounded after eight frames. The Cubs added a ninth-inning run against Robin Roberts' Wednesday night. Joe Schaffernoth (0-2) lost it.

G-Yanks Turn Back Durham

Two home runs won for Greensboro Wednesday night, as the Yanks turned back Durham, 6-4, and padded their Carolina League lead to 3½ games.

Winston-Salem hobbled second-place Raleigh, 7-3. Wilson routed Burlington, 14-7.

Only a strong stretch drive by Raleigh can prevent Greensboro from finishing the first half of the season on top. The half-way mark falls Monday. The Caps have seven more scheduled games, while Greensboro has five.

Rich Barry had a three-run homer in the third inning, to start Greensboro on the way to victory over Durham. Ronnie Paul added a two-run blow in the sixth to nail down the win.

Winston-Salem beat Raleigh for the seventh time in eleven meetings. They got off early, with two runs in the first inning. Eight hits, plus two Raleigh errors and three bases on balls produced the Winston-Salem scores. Homers by Ed Olivares and Dennis Walte helped out the Red Birds' cause.

Wilson got 12 hits and 13 walks to make up their 14 runs against hapless Burlington. Gene Davis was the big gun for the Tobs. He got a three-run homer in the first, and a brand slam home run in the second.

The games tonight: Winston-Salem at Raleigh, Wilson at Burlington, and Durham at Greensboro.

Irish Hope For Weather Change

By JOHN FARROW
Associated Press Sports Writer
PORTMARNOCK Ireland (AP)—The host Irish were secretly hoping for a severe change in the weather as the Canada Cup golf tournament got under way.

They hate the idea that the world's top golf pros may leave Ireland believing Portmarnock is a course for kids. And that could happen if the weather stays calm and sunny for four days of the tournament.

"We thought the record of 66 set by our own Christy O'Connor last year was unbeatable," Portmarnock Captain Willie Gill said.

"But now we're wondering after the practice scores turned in by Arnold Palmer and Sam Snead, the two Americans."

Snead turned the 7,092-yard, par 72 links beside the sea into almost a drive and pitch course. He shot a final practice round of 65, seven under par. Palmer was only one behind, Bernard Hunt of England and Dai Rees of Wales had 68.

But it will be a different story if the wind whips in from the Irish Sea. Then the golfers will find that Portmarnock isn't so easy after all.

Joe Carr, British Amateur champion who was raised on the Portmarnock links, reckons a strong wind would make the course play seven strokes harder.

The two-man Canada Cup event and the individual international trophy will be decided over 72 holes of stroke play in four days.

Australia, with Peter Thomson and Kel Nagle, is defending the team title. Stan Leonard of Canada is the defending individual champion.

Palmer Has Six Tournament Wins

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP)—Arnold Palmer pushed his 1960 golf tournament winnings to $66,600 this week by adding the National Open to his laurels.

The pro from Ligonier, Pa., has won six of the 19 tournaments he entered this year and finished in the first five on 12 occasions.

Runnerup in the money race according to figures released by the Professional Golfers Assn. is Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla. His total is $34,100.

Next come Ken Venturi of Palo Alto, Calif., at 730,200; Jerry Barber of Los Angeles at 729,200; and Julius Boros of Southern Pines, N. C., at $27,700.

New Winner On Putt-Putt Tour

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Ron Slocumb, a Putt-Putt Professional Golfers Association pro from Columbus, Ga., takes first place and wins $500 in the fourth PPGA Tournament of the year. Slocumb blasted a 200, 16 under par to receive first place honors.

Frank Reid of Atlanta, Ga., placed second in the field of 56 pros to walk off with $250. Frank Holt of Savannah, Ga., now top money winner bagging $1,450 placed third and received $100. Holt scored the lowest round during the 108-hole play-off, shooting a 28, 8 under par for the day.

The touring pros now advance to Tampa, Fla., for a $2,000 PPGA Tournament on June 25. Ron Slocumb 200 $500

Frank Reid 201 $250
Frank Holt 203 $100
John Curlee 204 $75
W. H. Strickland 206 $25
Jim Bryan 207 $15

Braves Start Pennant Talk

MILWAUKEE (AP)—The Milwaukee Braves are thinking only in terms of a pennant and they're playing in the style of their championship clubs of 1957 and '58.

The Braves took their fifth straight victory and eighth in the last nine games Wednesday night, defending the sagging San Francisco Giants 7-4 before a gleeful crowd of 24,541.

Total home attendance moved to 511,030 for 26 dates.

"We're playing the way a good club should," said Manager Charlie Dressen. "We've been getting the pitching and the hitters are taking turns coming through. Every day it's someone different getting the big hit. None of that 3-for-3 by just a couple if players."

We're getting the hits all the way through the lineup.

The Braves remained 3½ games behind Pittsburgh as the Pirates blanked St. Louis 5-0. But the Braves aren't worried about the league leaders. Said Dressen: "We'll worry about them only when we play them. The rest of the time we just have to go out and beat the other clubs."

Richie Regan, who formerly captained the Cincinnati Royals, will coach the Seton Hall basketball team at South Orange, N. J., next season.

New Radio Communication System For Health Dept.

READY WITH RADIO . . . Mrs. Green begins relaying messages to Crawford and Bell, major part of Pitt and Greenville dog program modernization.

Pitt County's new radio communications system, modernizing the county dog program, is set to go on the air today.

The $1,800 outfit has been in the process of installation during the past week. The transmitter is located in the county Health Department building. Receiving units have been installed in each of the dog wardens' two trucks.

In conjunction with the new radio outfit, other steps are underway to improve the efficiency of the dog program.

Leash Law

City Manager L.P. Bloxam, Police Chief S.G. Gibbs of Greenville have agreed to begin more rigid enforcement of the city's ordinance prohibiting dogs' roaming at large within the city.

The ordinance stipulates, "It shall be unlawful for the owner or keeper of any dog . . . to permit such dog to run at large within the city." The city code defines the words "at large" to mean "Off the premises of the owner, and not under control either by leash, cord, chain, or otherwise."

Dog wardens, Willie Bell and George Crawford, have reported a monthly average of some 30 dog bites within the city alone.

An indication of the need of more efficient operation, according to both men.

With stricter enforcement of the leash law and instantaneous radio contact with the Health Dept., where citizens' calls come in, Bell and Crawford feel the dog program will be improved substantially.

The law's enforcement is slated to begin July 1.

Old Gallows Are Finally Removed

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—The gallows of old El Paso jail, built in 1890 and used but once, has been cut down to make way for a parking lot.

In its only execution, the condemned were Antonio Flores, killer of his Smeltertown sweetheart, and notorious border bandit Gerónimo Parra, slayer of Texas Ranger Charles Fusselman.

On the day of their hangings in 1900 the two men charged from their cells, cell-made daggers in hand. Flores knifed deputy Ed Bryant.

Parra killed two men. But the knifings were over quickly and the two men were hanged.

A new type of rifle is also slated to join the modernization of Pitt and Greenville canine control. Plans are to purchase a "tranquilizer gun"—harmless to the dogs—that injects a liquid tranquilizer to momentarily fell wayward canines until they can be taken into custody.

According to Bell, the syringe-shooting compressed air rifle is effective up to 50 yards. By the time the sedative wears off, the dogs can be safely deposited in the dog pound.

Dosages of the tranquilizer administered by the bullet-syringe varies according to the size of the dog in question.

Bloxam is investigating the possibility of Greenville's providing a tranquilizer rifle for use within the city. The cost of the complete unit borders $300.

The initial operation of the communications system caps a two-year effort to obtain the radio units. Civil Defense has agreed to pay half the cost, reducing the county's share to $900. County funds have been ready and waiting for approval from CD that finally materialized.

Mrs. W.L. Green Jr., a clerk at the health department, will assume the task of radio operator for the new system. While Mrs. Green is the regular operator, other staff members at the health department will receive permits to operate the radio to insure an operator at all times.

The signal will be transmitted from a 70-foot tower beside the health department building. Via radio, Bell and Crawford can be contacted immediately at any point in the county and relayed information concerning dogs roaming "at large."

Bell and Crawford, upon picking up loose dogs, will keep them in custody for five days to allow the owners time to claim them.

The wardens will begin publishing a descriptive list of dogs in custody in the county's newspapers twice weekly.

Ex-British Diplomat Is Now On Job For Movies

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Hollywood press agency today got a look at its newest—and certainly most distinguished—addition to the ranks.

The Rt. Hon. Anthony Nutting, former minister of state for foreign affairs in the Anthony Eden cabinet and onetime vice-president of the United Nations General Assembly, is working now as a public relations aide for producer Sam Spiegel. Spiegel is making "Lawrence of Arabia" with Marlon Brando portraying the legendary World War I hero.

It's Nutting's first visit to Hollywood to help plug a picture. Previously, he came here as a university lecturer on the Middle East—a subject on which he is an expert.

"I suspect," said Nutting, "that my main job with Sam will be smoothing out things in the Arab world. As a public relations expert, I think my main asset—or perhaps it will be a liability—is that I have never done it before."

Nutting will tour the United States for the movie and then will go on location with it when it starts shooting next fall in the Arab world.

Asked whether his job had anything to do with gaining entre for a Jewish producer among the Arabs. Nutting replied: "Arabs, contrary to popular opinion, are not anti-Jewish. They are anti-Israel because they resent what they consider to be a Western state in an Eastern world."

"Elizabeth Taylor's movies are banned in the Arab countries not because she became a convert to Judaism but because she and Eddie Fisher contributed money to Israel."

Nutting has been an author and journalist since his dramatic resignation in 1956 from Eden's cabinet in protest of the British attack on Egypt.

Does he think his connection with Hollywood will hurt him politically in Britain?

"I think it will help," the 40-year-old diplomat answered. "After all I am trying to publicize one of England's great heroes to the world."

Youngsters Welcome Opening Of Playgrounds

When 99-plus degree weather descends each summer, activity tends to come to a comparative lull—except that of the youngsters.

Hot, moist weather is traditionally the green light for intensified energy and activity for the younger set. Summer time to children is synonymous with vacation—a period of carefree romping and playing, splashing in pools and under hoses, and avoiding the classroom for three months.

Greenville's youngsters are no exception to the rule. They benefit from an organized system of eight municipal playgrounds that provide variety in recreation.

Local playgrounds, scattered throughout the city, have opened for the first of seven weeks. Their opening was greeted by some 500 youngsters who flocked to the recreation areas to join the program of games, arts and crafts, creative and informal dramatics, dancing, music, sports, and other special events.

Each week of this summer's seven-week program has been earmarked for a special theme. The first seventh was named "Get Acquainted Week."

Most supervisors feel the youngsters are already pretty well acquainted with each other and the playground itself. They're ready for a new week and another topic. Six more are available.

In addition to getting acquainted, youngsters this week went through the organization process. Playground leaders enrolled the children and had them make individual name tags. Safety patrols and clean-up squads were organized and swings, see-saws, and other playground apparatus was checked.

The eight playgrounds, supervised by the recreation department, include Elm St. Park, Third St. Park, Hillsdale Park, Woodlawn Park, Meadowbrook Park, S. Greenville Park, Riverside Park, and Fleming St. Park.

Playground leaders are on hand to supervise activities at each park from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. The only exception is Meadowbrook Park which is open only in the afternoon (3-6 p.m.).

Recreation Director Gordon Goodman urges all children to take advantage of Greenville's recreation facilities and attend the parks.

Trying To Lure Tibet's Refugees

DARJEELING, India (AP) — The Chinese Reds are trying to lure home some 19,000 Tibetan refugees in India by broadcasting promises they will be treated with justice and mercy.

Observers along the Indian border say Chinese authorities are worried about recent publicity given to refugees' stories about conditions in Red-occupied Tibet. Tibetans fleeing across the border have told of atrocities against groups resisting communism, methodical elimination of the Buddhist religion and a severe food shortage among the Tibetan people.

In recent weeks there have been reports of an upsurge of fighting against the Reds by Tibetans made desperate by oppression.

Radio Lhasa broadcasts continue to describe the Dalai Lama—spiritual and temporal leader of Tibet now in exile in India—as chairman of the Chinese Preparatory Committee for Tibet, top-ranking Tibetan official appointed by Chinese. The broadcasts insist the fugitive god king is being held in India against his will.

The number of refugees in Darjeeling and the Kalimpong area at the end of the old trade route into Tibet continues to increase. Authorities are trying to settle the refugees in less sensitive parts of north India, but by the time two months of paper work is completed to move one refugee, he has disappeared and two others are in his place.

Burglar Made 2 Fatal Mistakes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police said the burglar who ransacked the Shannon Luminous Materials Co. made two mistakes.

First, he dropped a business card at the scene.

Detectives found it and went to see Richard Sample, 23, whose name was on the card. He denied having anything to do with the burglary.

Officers produced a black light—the kind that makes luminous materials shine in the dark—and the black light, in a dark room, quickly disclosed Sample's second error.

He had walked through luminous materials at the scene of the burglary and his shoes shone brightly in the dark.

"I give up," said Sample.

He was booked on suspicion of burglary.

Had To Stretch, Wins The Title

ATLANTA (AP)—A statuesque 5-foot-10 brunette, who had to stretch to get into the contest, is 1960 Miss Tall America.

The judges selected Connie Adams of Atlanta over 15 other stately beauties Wednesday night.

Miss Adams, a senior at Georgia State College, just met the minimum height rules. Elizabeth Schaeffer of Los Angeles placed second and Patricia Anderson of Dallas, Tex., third.

Sees Mistake By Light Of Day

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Joe Jarkesy had almost dropped off to sleep when mosquitoes began buzzing in his car.

He groped drowsily, found a spray can and squirted all around. Then he slept. The light of day Wednesday revealed that the can he thought held insecticide actually was filled with red lacquer.

"OF COURSE I'M READY" . . . says junior Miss mounted on see-saw waiting for action.

BEVERLY LAKE'S TAX VIEWS

Beverly Lake is opposed to new spending and new taxes for non-essential expenditures. He believes that the taxpayer is entitled to full value for each tax dollar spent. At the same time, Beverly Lake does not stand on a "hold the line" policy for essential state services. He knows that we must expand and improve the quality of these services within the framework of a balanced budget and sound finance.

The spending program of Mr. Lake's opponent on one item alone would cost $50 million dollars. This cannot be done without

- 1—DOUBLING THE STATE INCOME TAX OR
- 2—INCREASING THE SALES TAX TO 5 PER CENT OR
- 3—REMOVING THE EXEMPTIONS ON FOOD, DRUGS, FARM-MACHINERY, SEEDS AND FERTILIZERS, OR
- 4—PUTTING A TAX ON CIGARETTES, SOFT DRINKS, AND INCREASING OUR ALREADY HIGH GASOLINE TAX.
- 5—OTHER SPENDING PROMISES OF MR. LAKE'S OPPONENT WOULD CREATE EVEN GREATER TAX PROBLEMS.

Sanford maintains his spending program can be carried out without new taxes. He is either wrong about new taxes not being necessary, or else he does not intend carrying out his promises. Which is worse?

The rosy revenue predictions Sanford is making do not hold water:

1. The state is taking two years income tax in one year this year. This cannot be done next year and income tax revenues will drop.
2. State revenues though rising with the natural growth of our economy have NEVER risen percentage-wise enough to produce the increased revenue which would be necessary for Sanford's proposed spending (20 to 30% in this case). Just saying there will be enough money will not make it so. Past experience indicates it will not be so.
3. Quoting present figures is also misleading because revenues are higher at this time of year because of annual income tax collections. We normally should have a surplus now.
4. Business and farm income have not gone up 20 to 30 per cent.

The State of Michigan has already tried a program of high spending and high taxation. The result is known to all experts on government finance and to businessmen. Michigan has had payless paydays for its employees, including teachers. Its colleges and other institutions have been threatened with closure and essential state service curtailed (See U. S. News & World Report)

Beverly Lake is unalterably opposed to our state making such a departure from its traditional sound attitude toward finances and taxes.

Indenturing Domestic Servants Not Extinct; Probe Finds Cases Today

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A young Irish newspaper man got his dander up over what he considered an unjust practice.

Result: a state investigation, still continuing, of charges that domestics are lured here from Europe and the British Isles with promises of little work and high living—but often work an 80 hour week and wind up broke.

The State Labor Commission says it's ready to file charges against one or more employment agencies.

The probe was sparked by three articles last April in the suburban San Gabriel Valley Daily Tribune by reporter Tom McCuaig.

The 31-year-old bachelor from the island of Rathlin, off the coast of Ireland's County Antrim, was a newspaperman in Dublin, New Zealand, Australia and the Fiji Islands before joining the Daily Tribune two years ago.

Through a police captain he met an Irish girl who was working for a West Covina, Calif., family. When she left the job after completing her contract, her employer refused to pay her last month's wages.

McCuaig took the case to federal and state authorities and got payment for her. Through her he met two other Irish girls here on similar arrangements. He investigated further and developed the series.

"The American public conscience wouldn't like to admit it," McCuaig wrote, "but there is today a thriving vestige of the colonial and civil war eras—the practice of indenturing domestic servants.

"They are brought here with the full knowledge of the federal and state governments which are powerless, under present laws, to control the employment of these girls or their recruitment in Ireland, Britain and Europe.

"And, once here, the girls are bound helpless by iron-tight contracts which they signed before leaving Europe—usually for two years and sometimes for three years.

"The boom in the foreign domestics market is at its peak in the greater Los Angeles area, say state labor officers, and is providing big profits for agency operators who charge high fees for their services.

"The work is so remunerative, in fact, that several agencies have started up recently which specialize in foreign domestics only. One agency operator revealed to the Daily Tribune that he had brought 'about 1,500 girls' into this country in the last two years."

McCuaig's investigation of more than two dozen foreign domestic servants showed salaries range from $90 to $125 a month.

"Admittedly, food and a room are thrown in free, but against that the girls must pay back to their employers the cost of their fares right from Europe to their destination," he reported.

"Small wonder, therefore, that when their contracts are completed most of them are penniless—and left looking for a job and a place to live in a strange country."

Kenneth Cameron, a State Labor Commission official, says at least one and possibly more agencies face prosecution on charges of misrepresentation and overcharging for placement services.

Massaged Heart Into Action 3 Times, But Dies

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—A San Antonio truck driver died after doctors massaged his heart back into action three times Tuesday.

He was Darío Quintero, 53, who collapsed while waiting to see a doctor about pains in his chest. Quintero collapsed in the emergency room of Robert B. Green hospital. Two interns opened his chest and massaged his heart until it began beating. A few minutes later the heart stopped again and the interns repeated the massaging action until the heart resumed beating.

It stopped a third time while Quintero was in a recovery room. Two resident doctors massaged the heart and started it beating another time. At 3:15 p.m., more than four hours after Quintero collapsed, he was pronounced dead.

Jobs For The Growing Population Still Short

Editor's Note—Will the second half of 1960 provide enough jobs for the growing labor force? In this, the second in a series of articles on the economic outlook, Sam Dawson, AP business news analyst, discusses the prospects for a pickup in industrial output, business spending for inventories and capital goods, and consumer spending for goods and services that could mean more jobs.

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Jobs for a growing population will be a prime problem the rest of this year. It's the human side to the economic query: Will industry and trade turn smartly upward again after Labor Day?

Moderate gains are expected. It seems unlikely they'll be enough to solve the jobless problem.

Total employment has been rising. But the number out of work sticks stubbornly around 5 per cent of the labor force. Right now the number looking for jobs is rising because of the influx of graduates and students into the market.

But the longer-term problem is two-pronged: The number of Americans of working age is on the rise, while the number required to turn out a given supply of goods keeps dropping because of mechanization and automation and increased skills.

Wage scales continue to rise this year, but the rate of increase is lower than in the recent past. Also, many workers find paychecks smaller because of shorter work weeks in some industries.

What help for more jobs is in sight from a business pickup? Industrial output was at a record high in January. Then it dipped, but made a slight recovery in May.

The immediate outlook is for little change—the usual summer lull, an average fall quickening.

Steel production seems sure to go lower before its hoped-for late summer recovery. Some appliance makers are cutting back to bring stocks in line with sales. Auto production will soon be dropping as the model changeover time nears.

The Gross National Product, which takes in all production of goods and services, has topped 500 billion dollars at an annual rate for the first time. But the rate of its growth has slowed. Two of its greatest bulwarks also have been losing some of their forward zing—consumer spending and business outlay for plant and equipment. A number of industries are still catching up with capacity already built higher than current demand.

Business has been getting some forward push in this year's growth in the dollar volume of exports, while the increase in imports has slowed.

And through all the surmises about business trends run the threads of election year turmoil and the still uncertain effects of cold war flareups on our defense spending and on our private planning.

The best guess: Times will be good this fall, but not booming, and jobs enough for all will still be a problem.

Friday: Whither prices? Will the consumer go on shelling out his dough or call a halt?

Will Duplicate Lunar Conditions

WASHINGTON (AP)—The job of building big enough boosters to get man to the moon is progressing well, the House Space Committee reported today, but little is being done to see how he can stay there.

The indications are it will be something less than a pleasure trip for the first spacemen to arrive.

The temperature on the moon ranges each day from a low of 270 degrees below zero to 212 degrees above. There is practically no atmosphere and little gravity.

Meteorites are constantly bombarding the surface, cosmic radiation is intense, and an accidental look at the sun would lead to instantaneous, permanent blindness.

These hazards of lunar living were cited by the committee in a report backing a plan by the Army Corps of Engineers to build a research facility to simulate conditions on the moon.

The facility would cost six million dollars and take three years to build, the committee said.

The committee said big booster projects to provide the thrust for moon trips have top priority ratings. But neither the Defense Department or the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has a single program to simulate conditions a moon explorer will face, it added.

The space program for the next 10 years, as outlined by NASA, calls for manned orbital flights around the moon by the end of the decade. No manned landings on the moon are contemplated before the early 1970s.

Linda Christian Settles For Less

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Actress Linda Christian settled her suit against the $800,000 estate of the late actor Tyrone Power and will receive something less than the $200,000 she had asked.

Under the settlement in Superior Court Tuesday, Miss Christian, a former wife of Power, will pay $34,850 and receive full ownership of the $103,700 Bel Air home where they lived.

Their children, Romina, 8, and Taryn, 6, will have a $25,000 lien on the house if it is sold. Otherwise they will inherit it. The children also have a joint estate of $86,885.

Power, who died in 1958, divided the bulk of his estate into five trust funds including one each for the two children. His widow Deborah Power Loew, will receive another as will his son, Tyrone William, 17 months. The fifth fund is for Power's sister, Anne Harndenbergh.

Wants A Divorce After 33 Years

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Charging cruelty, the wife of cowboy actor Wild Bill Elliott is seeking to end their 33-year marriage.

Helen Elliott, 54, filed her suit Tuesday against the 56-year-old actor. They were married Feb. 6, 1927, and separated Dec. 1, 1958, the suit said. There are no children.

Smiles, Tears Over $65,700

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Bette Davis alternately smiled and wept as a jury granted her a $65,700 settlement Wednesday for injuries she sustained three years ago in a fall in a rented home.

The actress testified that she opened what she thought was a closet door—and found herself "precipitated" into space. She said the defendants, owners of the home and the agency that rented it to her, hadn't informed her that the door led into a cellar.

Miss Davis suffered a broken back in the fall. She had sued for $85,000 damages, claiming the injuries cost her a stage role in the Broadway production of "Look Homeward Angel."

The bearskin caps worn by the guards at Buckingham Palace are 20 inches tall and weigh 1½ pounds each.

Tar Heels Looking At Maine Potatoes Too

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP)—A flying trip from here to Maine and potato country, then a swing back to New York City awaited 125 North Carolina farm and business leaders today.

The group is ending a week-long jaunt that included a visit to Detroit and a two-day trip through Ontario, Canada. After spending Friday in New York City they are to fly home on Saturday.

Highlight of Wednesday's program was a visit to the tobacco-producing area of Ontario. The group visited farms around the little town of Delhi, where a North Carolina native, William Gregory of Surry County, introduced tobacco as a farm crop.

It was Gregory who first brought tobacco growing to Ontario in 1900. He came to Delhi area in the mid-1920s and made tobacco the principal money crop of the area.

Canadian growers told the Tar Heels they felt a tobacco crop of under 20 acres was uneconomical. In North Carolina the average under government-regulated growing is 3-5 acres per farmer.

A privately-controlled growers' board helps regulate Canadian production of the leaf free of government control. Carl T. Hicks, Greene County, N.C., leaf grower, said the system appeared more flexible with growers willing to cut acreage to assure consistent production.

He also praised the hosts for their "alertness to their competitive positions... and the determination to produce a high percentage of quality leaf."

Agreeing that the Canadian regulating and marketing plan was more flexible, John Winfield, North Carolina's Department of Agriculture director of the division of markets, added that "north Carolina tobacco farmers still have an advantage because of the importance of high aroma tobacco which North Carolina can grow best."

North Carolina State College, Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. and the North Carolina Department of Agriculture are jointly sponsoring the trip, an annual affair for farm and business leaders of the state.

Another 5-Year Plan For Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Wladyslaw Gomulka's revised 1961-65 five-year plan, emphasizing investment in industry and agriculture at the expense of improvement in living standards, has won the expected approval of the Polish Communist party central committee.

The Polish press agency said the new schedule was adopted unanimously at the close of a two-day meeting presided over by Gomulka, first secretary of the Polish United Workers (Communist) party.

The revised plan represents a victory for several prominent figures from the pre-Gomulka Stalinist period who had been beating the drum since last year for a speedup in industrial and agricultural development.

I. Beverly Lake has tossed a charge of political machine building at his opponent, Terry Sanford, in the waning days of the runoff primary for governor.

Lake made the accusation Wednesday on a swing through Eastern counties he said Sanford is welded into a machine "supported from the NAACP, state AFL-CIO President Millard Barbee, Gov. Hodges and a small group of wealthy men."

The Raleigh lawyer and former college professor, seeking to reverse the lead Sanford held in the May 28 first primary, campaigned in Hoke County this morning.

Lake will be in Rockingham this evening for a Richmond County rally.

Meanwhile, Sanford will spend the morning in Gaston County and speak to the Gastonia Rotary Club at noon. He will fly to Wilmington later in the day for a live television program this evening.

Sanford cautioned against over-confidence Wednesday night at a speech to a Hickory rally attended by some 1,000 persons. He said he is certain his "positive program" will receive the support of a vast majority of North Carolinians in Saturday's balloting.

However, he said evidence of growing support should make campaign workers stick to their tasks, rather than relax from over-confidence.

Labor union funds in the 1954 U.S. Senate campaign of the late W. Kerr Scott were mentioned again Wednesday night by Robert Morgan, campaign manager for Lake. Morgan has asserted that Sanford, as Scott's manager, failed to properly report the contributions. Sanford and the Scott family called the charge a smear of Scott's memory.

"It now appears that Mr. Sanford would try to inuendo to shift his responsibility for failure to report certain contributions," Morgan's statement said. "The fact remains that the checks are listed as having been paid to Terry Sanford and not to Kerr Scott."

In an answering statement, Sanford called it "an act of desperation" to bring up the six-year-old report. "Our campaign has not received directly or indirectly any money from unions, and if anybody can prove to the contrary I will get out of the race," he added.

Lake has concentrated his fire on the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. Speaking to a Greenville rally Wednesday night, he read voting reports from predominantly Negro precincts in the May 28 voting as he claimed Sanford received NAACP support.

He charged that Sanford is "drawing his support from the NAACP, state AFL-CIO President Millard Barbee, Gov. Hodges and a small group of wealthy men which has held control over the administration."

Harry McMullan Jr. of Washington, N.C., and John Burney Jr. of Wilmington have supported the claim of I. Beverly Lake to authorship of the state's pupil assignment act.

The two men spoke out Tuesday night at a Lake-for-governor rally in Lumberton.

McMullan is the son of the late attorney general, under whom Lake served as an assistant attorney general. Burney, district superior court solicitor and son of a superior court judge, has played a top role in Lake's bid for the governorship.

McMullan and Burney told the Lumberton rally they had assurances from their fathers that Lake wrote the pupil assignment law.

Through a mechanical error in the transmission of the story to Wednesday afternoon papers by The Associated Press, which caused the word "not" to be inserted, it was made to appear that McMullan and Burney had said their fathers had assured them that Lake did not write the statute. Actually, both men said their fathers assured them that Lake did write the statute.

The erroneous statement appeared in a campaign roundup. The original Associated Press report on the Lumberton rally correctly quoted McMullan and Burney as supporting Lake's contention that he wrote the pupil assignment law.

Oldest Elector Is Again Chosen

HELENA, Mont. (AP)—Rancher George C. Sinton, who says he has served longer than any other man in history as a presidential elector, has been picked again as an elector by the Montana Republican party.

Sinton cast his first electoral vote for Herbert Hoover, the successful GOP candidate in 1928.

Since then Sinton has been an electoral nominee in Montana each year.

The Montana state GOP convention Wednesday elected 14 delegates, who, along with their 14 alternates, voted to support Vice President Richard M. Nixon for their party's nomination.

TWO ON A PARKING METER—Photographer Jim Nickless, with no parking space in sight, used this novel way for quick storage of his small foreign car in El Paso, Tex. Permission from a trucker at a roadside lunch stand got Nickless' vehicle off the street so he could finish an assignment. Police said they hadn't found an ordinance against this sort of two-on-a-meter, at least not yet. Nickless had no comment when asked what he might have done if the truck had left in a hurry. Slain Child's Mother Refuses Press Charges

By GENE HANDSAKER
LOS ANGELES (AP)—Perhaps a one in a million chance caused Douglas Beane's bullet that killed a gopher to ricochet on and kill a little neighbor girl, too.

The victim's mother who caused dismissal of a manslaughter charge against him is "probably one person in a million," says Beane.

Feb. 25. The gopher died. The bullet zinged on, through a rusty, corrugated tin fence and through the tarpapered, 3-16-inch plywood wall of a house at the rear.

It struck 4-year-old Donna Sword in the back as she watched television at the neighbor's house while her mother was at work. Several weeks later, after an operation and sufficient apparent recovery she could play with Beane's two young sons, she died. A coroner's jury disagreed on whether Beane was criminally responsible for Donna's death. Superior Court Judge Evelle J. Younger dismissed the manslaughter charge Tuesday after reading a letter from her mother, Mrs. Frank Sword. It said in part: "I do not believe any good purpose could be served by insisting that this case be tried. Douglas will punish himself 1,000 times more than any law could do."

"For the good of everyone and for our own peace of mind, we feel that the case should be dismissed." Judge Younger told a reporter he had dismissed the charge in the interest of justice because Beane is "a good husband, a good father and a good citizen."

ily. I'm relieved, of course, and nappy I'll be able to go on raising my family. I'm the sole breadwinner."

His sons are Keith Gouglas, 3 and Kirk, 18 months. His wife Lois, 24, expects another child.

ing such a venture. If Clarke tries to enter as a write-in he would face Republican nominee Heinz Rollman of Waynesville and the Democratic nominee, Roy A. Taylor of Black Mountain.

The 45-year-old Clarke said he would spend a few days sounding out support in the 10-county district before deciding.

Civic Center In Graham Is Monument To Civic Clubs

By GLENN KEEVER

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP)—A 6-year-old building here called the Civic Center has shown Graham, as well as several other North Carolina cities, what can be done when a meeting place is needed and there are no tax funds provided for construction.

The local building is something of a monument to civic clubs in Graham. They needed a place to meet and joined together to solve their problem.

Construction of the Civic Center was started in 1954, with the clubs moving in early the following year.

Legion Of Merit Goes To Marine

WASHINGTON (AP)—The navy Wednesday night awarded Master Sgt. Charles T. Perkins the Legion of Merit, first enlisted Marine ever to win the decoration for peacetime service.

The 36-year-old Marine was honored for development of a system which makes it possible for the Navy to keep track of the rapidly changing aircraft shapes and other changes for swift ground recognition and other purposes.

Perkins developed the system while serving as maintenance chief of the Third Marine Aircraft Wing at El Toro, Calif., where he still serves.

In the past, the Legion of Merit has been awarded to enlisted Marines only for outstanding service in combat. The award was made by Secretary of the Navy William B. Franke in a ceremony also attended by Gen. David M. Shoup, Marine Corps commandant.

Perkins enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1942. He served overseas in the Pacific during World War II. Discharged in 1946, he attended the University of Illinois for a year, then re-enlisted in 1948 and has served on active duty since.

The son of Ethel Mary Perkins of 74 Selwyn St., Rosindale, Mass., Perkins is married and has three children. The family lives at 1523 South Birch St., Santa Anne, Calif.

Rollman, a wealthy show manufacturer, is the Republican nominee. However, he was successful last week in getting the courts to let him take his name off the short term ballot.

He will be on the ticket to oppose Taylor in the November general election.

At the hearing before Judge Hobgood, Paul C. West, lawyer for Rollman, contended it would be impossible to have a free election Saturday because of the Democratic primary. "A Republican in this election would be like the devil attending one of Billy Graham's revivals. He would be out of place," West declared.

Rollman Promises Carry Case To Federal Court

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal court fight is promised by Heinz Rollman, Waynesville Republican, to block filling of the 12th District congressional seat by a special election.

He announced the new tactic Wednesday after he lost an effort in state courts to block the election to fill the unexpired term of the late Rep. David M. Hall.

Judge Hamilton Hobgood ruled in Wake County against Rollman's request for an order to restrain the State Board of Elections from holding the election on Saturday.

One of Rollman's objections was that the runoff Democratic primary for governor will be held at the same time.

He said he will go before a federal judge in the western part of the state next week to present affidavits from persons who said they wanted to register to vote in the special election, but were unable to do so because the election was called on only 18 days notice.

Predict Censure Of Israel In Eichmann Case Hearing

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Diplomats generally predicted today that the U.N. Security Council would approve an Argentine resolution censuring Israel for the secret removal of Adolf Eichmann from Argentina.

A vote on the resolution was expected this afternoon or Friday. Some sources anticipated unanimous approval; others thought several nations might abstain.

The resolution charges Israel with violating Argentine sovereignty and calls on the Israelis to make "adequate reparation." But Premier David Ben-Gurion already has said emphatically the Nazi war criminal accused of major responsibility for the extermination of six million Jews would not be returned to Buenos Aires, as Argentina demanded earlier.

Israeli Foreign Minister Golda Meir, speaking in the council debate Wednesday, admitted Eichmann had been removed from Argentina illegally and expressed her government's regret. She said that constituted "adequate reparation" to Argentina.

A diplomat familiar with Argentina's position said the Buenos Aires government would regard approval of the resolution as affirmation of its "moral right" and would soften its position accordingly. This seemed to indicate the Argentines would let their demand for Eichmann's return lapse.

Mrs. Meir repeated Israel's contention that Jewish volunteers, acting independently and not as agents of her government, found Eichmann in Buenos Aires, captured him and brought him to Israel last month for trial.

The Argentine delegate, Mario Amadeo, told the council the Israeli government, in accepting Eichmann, had automatically approved his capture and "has therefore become responsible for it."

He contended that if a country could supplant another's jurisdiction at will, "international law would rapidly become the law of the jungle." His resolution said that such acts, "which affect the sovereignty of a member state and therefore cause international friction, may, if repeated, endanger international peace."

Mrs. Meir, pleading the "exceptional nature and uniqueness" of Eichmann's case, asked whether the greater threat to peace lay in "Eichmann brought to trial" by Jews he had planned to kill, or in "Eichmann at large, Eichmann unpunished."

Soviet Delegate Arkady A. Sobolev, U.S. Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge and Sir Pierson Dixon of Britain all backed Argentina's contention that her sovereignty had been violated.

Lodge also introduced an amendment amplifying a preliminary paragraph in the Argentine resolution stating the council did not condone the "odious crimes of which Eichmann is accused." The U.S. addition cited "the universal condemnation of the persecution of the Jews under the Nazis" and "the concern of people in all countries that Eichmann should be brought to appropriate justice."

Another U.S. amendment expressed hope that Argentina and Israel would restore their "traditionally friendly relations."

Besides smoke signals, Indians once waved blankets or rode ponies in certain designs to carry messages to friendly tribes watching from afar.

Breakdown Hits Search Of Space

WASHINGTON (AP) — Instrument trouble has interfered with the government's first systematic search for possible radio signals from any intelligent beings on other planets.

As a result, what had originally been planned as a one-month project has been continued since April 11, and may go on for another couple of weeks, a National Science Foundation spokesman said today.

Designated "Project Ozma," the signal search is one of a number of scientific projects undertaken with a new 85-foot radio telescope at Green Bank, W. Va.

When the project was started, officials discounted the chance any intelligible outer-space signals would be received. None has been, the foundation spokesman said.

"We did have one scare, though," he added. "One day, the boys picked up an unidentified 'noise' just before the telescope broke down. Thus, they couldn't check on it right away, and it was pretty frustrating. Then, when they got the instrument going again, the noise turned out to be just some kind of earth-made interference."

The spokesman said the Green Bank astronomers have lots of other projects, aside from Ozma, which demand the attention of their instrument.

And they are currently trying to decide, he said, whether they should run another series of trials with the present instrument, or shelve Ozma until they get a more powerful radio telescope.

Test-Launch For Polaris Missile

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A Polaris submarine missile darted from an underground tube early today to climax a busy 24 hours for U.S. missilemen at this test center.

Compressed air ejected the Polaris from the shore-based subterranean pit, just as it did from a similar tube on a ship at sea less than four hours earlier. Both Polaris were aimed at targets more than 1,000 miles down range.

Earlier Wednesday, a Thor-Ablestar rocket propelled two satellites into orbit and an Atlas rumbled 5,000 miles with a new nose cone.

A major objective of the second Polaris was to gather further data on the effect of an air-ejected on the missile's inertial guidance system.

Project officials announced all four shots in the period were successful.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — An improved tone in key industrials coupled with advances by an assortment of specially-situated issues gave the stock market a continued rise early this afternoon. Trading was active.

Gains of fractions to a point or better among pivotal issues bolstered the average despite an assortment of losers in various groups.

A miscellany of stocks affected by special news or recommendations were trading favorites, moving 3 or 4 points either way.

Otis Elevator was a star, adding more than 4 points to its rise of 4 1/2 yesterday on word it would manufacture automatic pinsetting equipment for bowling.

Oils and steels improved as the session wore on. Ralls continued up on balance because of merger news. Chemicals, electrical equipments, and drugs moved generally higher.

International Business Machines hopped half a dozen points following published reports of its development of a new electronics technique.

Vending machine issues did well. Universal Match and Automatic Canteen gained about a point each while Vendo picked up more than 2.

New York Central advanced a fraction. Baltimore & Ohio was about unchanged and Chesapeake & Ohio eased as maneuvering continued in the proposed merger linking two, or all three, of these roads.

Texaco showed continued strength, gaining more than a point and Jersey Standard was about a point higher.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .70 to 223.40 with the industrials up 1.20, the rails up .40 and the utilities up .30.

Corporate bonds advanced slightly. Trading was moderate. Government bonds eased in quiet dealings over the counter.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — Hog markets steady. Tops of 17.25 to 18.25 at Wilson; 17.50 to 18.00 at Rocky Mount; 17.25 to 17.75 at Kinston, New Bern, Benson, Mount Olive, Newton Grove and Nahant; 17.75 at Clinton, Fayetteville and Elizabethtown; 17.50 at Tarboro, Enfield, Scotland Neck, Winterville and Rich Square; 17.25 at Goldsboro, Greensboro, Lillington and Siler City. Other markets unreported.

Wilson cash cattle prices steady. Steers and heifers, choice 25.00 to 27.00, good 22.00 to 25.00, standards 19.00 to 22.00; cows, beef type 14.50 to 16.50, heavy cutters 13.50 to 15.00; bulls, light weights 14.00 to 17.00, heavy weights 18.00 to 20.00.

Houston Will Be World's Biggest

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The Houston City Council voted Wednesday night to make Houston the largest city in the world in area even though Mayor Lewis Cutler called the idea "preposterous."

The council voted to annex about 1,100 square miles, which is everything not annexed by some other Harris County city. The annexation would give Houston an area of 1,560 square miles.

A second and final reading of the annexation ordinance will be held within about 30 days.

On the basis of preliminary census figures Houston is the sixth largest city in the nation in population with 932,680 residents, an increase of 56.4 per cent since 1950. The population of the Houston metropolitan area is estimated at 1,232,179.

Cutler said that Houston "with over 450 square miles and within four square miles of being as large as Los Angeles, has plenty of room in which to grow."

Los Angeles, with an area of 455 square miles, is the largest city in area in the nation. It has 2,451,862 residents and its metropolitan area, Los Angeles County, has 5,987,246 residents.

Governor Only Urges Tar Heels 'Vote Saturday'

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Hodges today shied away from any comment on Saturday's runoff gubernatorial primary except to urge citizens to vote.

He issued a prepared statement at his news conference in which he reiterated that the runoff primary is "one of the most important ever held in North Carolina" for governor and other offices.

He added, "I want to urge, yes implore, every eligible voter, to vote Saturday. This is important. If you are on vacation, come home to vote. If you plan to go away, vote before you go. This is your duty."

Hodges noted that in the first primary May 28 more than 650,000 persons voted. He said, "There should be even more this time. Each of you who voted before, do it again Saturday and persuade another citizen to exercise his great privilege of voting."

"Someone has said, 'The punishment of wise men who refuse to take part in the affairs of government is to live under the government of unwise men.'"

A newsman asked the governor if he has met with either of the candidates for governor since the first primary. He quickly replied, "I am not making any further comment."

Hodges was asked about a report that he has purchased a home in Chapel Hill. His only comment was "I have made no final plans whatsoever."

Turning to national politics, Hodges said he believes the chances of Democratic victory in the November election are brighter than ever.

He said President Eisenhower has committed "incredible fumbles."

A newsman wanted to know if the governor was referring to the State Department. He replied, "Not just in the State Department but all the way down."

Laborites Seek Set U.S. Policy

LONDON (AP) — In a major switch in its defense policy, the British labor party is urging that nuclear rocket bases in Britain—but not bomber bases—be denied to the United States.

A policy statement from the minority party's executive committee Wednesday night also proposed:

1. That Britain make no more nuclear weapons, relying instead on American nuclear power as a deterrent to aggression.
2. That the United States pledge never to use the hydrogen bomb without prior approval by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.
3. That Western patrol planes "in present (world) circumstances" not carry H-bombs. Britain's Conservative government and the U.S. administration are reported studying plans for the U.S. Strategic Air Command and the Royal Air Force to join in a worldwide, round-the-clock patrol of hydrogen bombers.

Explaining opposition to the bases for U.S. intermediate range missiles now being built in Britain, a party spokesman said they would be "sitting ducks" targets for the Soviet Union and that they have no deterrent value, serving only to put Britain on the firing line.

First Success In New 'Transplant'

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital today proclaimed the first successful kidney transplant operation involving non-identical twins.

The operation was performed Jan. 24, 1959. A healthy kidney was taken from Andrew Riteris of Milwaukee and given to his brother, John.

Doctors said that in the 17 months which elapsed they were able to determine that the kidney will continue to function properly. The 24-year-old brothers today enjoy what was described as normal, healthy lives.

Receiving Bids Here On Friday

Bids will be received for the city's sewage disposal plant tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the City Council room.

Utilities Superintendent Leonard Bloxam said he and representatives of Freeman Engineers, which prepared the plans, Utilities commissioners and other officials will be present to receive the bids.

Bloxam said it is now expected that 13 firms will offer bids for construction of the plant and 12 firms are expected to bid for the outfall sewer line construction to serve the plant. Seven electrical companies have indicated they will bid for the wiring job and six or seven firms are expected to bid for the heating, plumbing and air conditioning.

However some of the firms could fail to submit bids when they are actually received tomorrow.

The superintendent also said that approval of final plans by the federal government was received today. This makes the $250,000 in federal grant money available to the Utilities Commission for expenditure on the project.

The State Stream Sanitation Commission had approved the plans earlier.

The disposal plant will be constructed on a site behind Greenwood Cemetery and near Green Mill Run.

attorney, is general counsel for the Tobacco Association of the U. S. and for the Leaf Tobacco Exporters Association.

The letter said the manufacturer had just received a report from Tobacco Associates that contained "most disheartening reading in regard to the use of maleic hydrazide."

"Surely the opinion of the manufacturers who buy your tobaccos and who use it in their blends is sufficient evidence that the use of this chemical is detrimental to the quality of the U.S. leaf," the letter continued.

It pointed out that "This delay in facing up to a decision is going to result in another year going by where manufacturers may be faced with a further reduction in the quality of U.S. Flue-Cured tobaccos."

The letter added, "I have heard the very apt comment that in giving the farmer a free hand to use this chemical can be likened to 'Nero fiddling while Rome burned.'"

Television Cheapening Hard-Won Title 'Star'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The television branch of the entertainment industry, probably influenced by Madison Avenue's undisciplined use of the superlative, is cheapening that hard-won title, "star."

In the theatre a star means a Helen Hayes, Mary Martin or Rex Harrison. Star billing specifically means that the name of the performer appears above the title of the vehicle (i. e., Ethel Barrymore in "The Corn Is Green.")

But in television, the word star is applied to just about anybody with more than two lines in the script. In fact, there are so many stars in TV casts these days, that they have had to invent some new ways to set apart really big name performers from actors with walk-ons.

A TV variety show star of course doesn't get billing above the title. He is the title — The Steve Allen Show, the Perry Como Show, the Dinah Shore Show.

In dramatic series (the word dramatic here is used loosely to include westerns, private-eye episodes and situation comedies) the word star is used to identify the one or two people in the leading roles. These stars are created and receive such billing before the public even sees them.

Even more of a kicking around is taken by the word "co-star." TV often uses the word as a synonym for "featured player." But just the other night I noted that while Diana Lynn was billed as "star" of a mystery called "Dark Possession," the credits listed every other member of the cast, including the woman who played the maid, as co-stars.

Told Crabgrass Can Be Beaten

Dr. Robert W. Schery of the Lawn Institute, Marysville, Ohio, told the convention Wednesday the fearsome pest can be eradicated by crowding it with a tight cover grass, use of chemicals to kill the weed before it has a chance or by post-emergence control with chemicals to whip it after it has gotten a start.

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The annual convention of the Men's Garden Clubs of America continues here today after hearing the good news that crabgrass can be eliminated by different methods.
