

North Carolina Finances In Surprising Good Shape For Starting Fiscal Year

RALEIGH (AP) — The state of North Carolina entered a new fiscal year today with its finances in excellent shape—far better than the General Assembly expected when it prepared the budget for this biennium.

contingent bonus was proposed that state revenues would be sufficient to pay it. But generally prosperous business conditions sent general fund revenues zooming upward. They totaled better than 305 million for the year—compared with 283 million the Legislature had estimated in drawing up the budget—an estimate that many folks thought was exceedingly optimistic.

But State Treasurer Edwin Gill already has estimated that if present economic trends continue for the remainder of the year, the general fund will have a credit balance of better than 35 million next June 30.

Five-Man Redevelopment Commission Begins Work

Greenville's Redevelopment Commission last night began efforts to retain a consultant firm and hire a full-time executive director to begin planning on an Urban Renewal project.

"We are trying to screen those and find a suitable man," he declared. He said it is desirable that the person chosen for the job have some previous Urban Renewal experience or actual project work.

Various plans will be considered for the area included perhaps a riverside park with boat launching facilities. Although the federal government would provide two-thirds of the project cost, there would be no public housing involved. All the property would be privately or, in the case of a park, municipally owned.

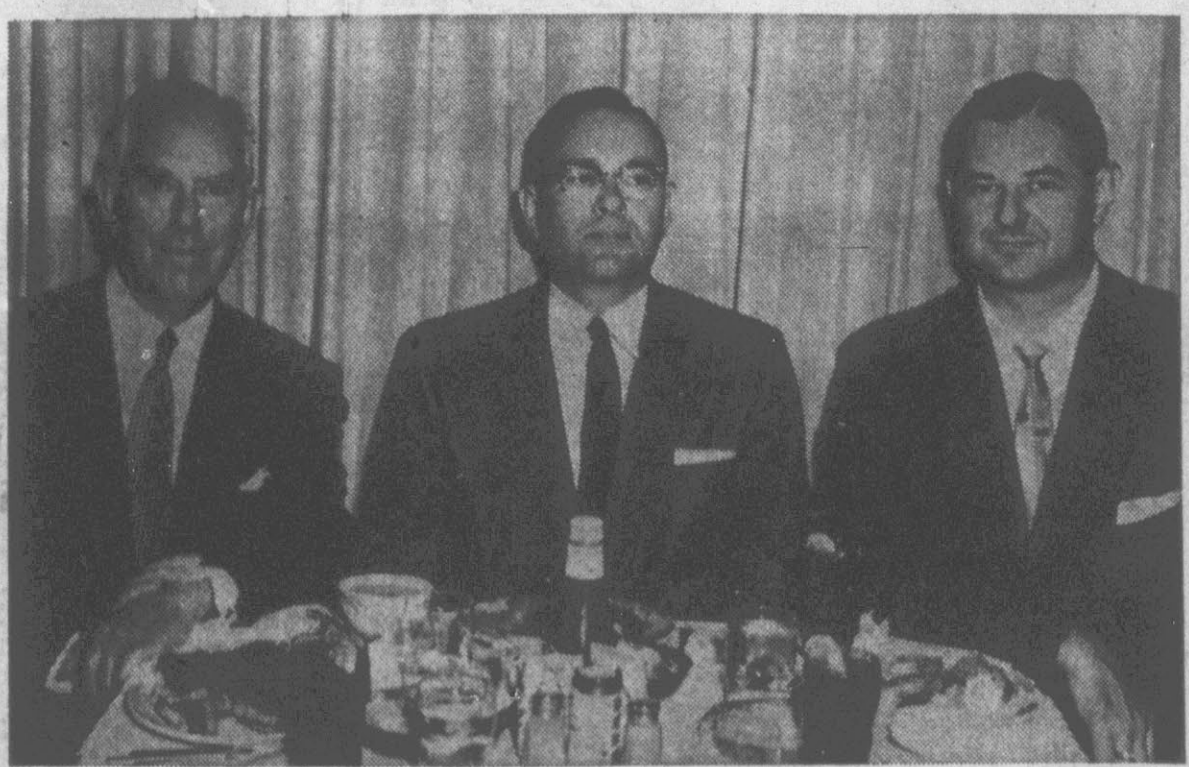

Lyndon Johnson Favored By N.C. Demo Delegates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas is the front runner among North Carolina delegates who will help nominate a Democratic presidential candidate.

Twenty-six delegates with half a vote each are still undecided on choice. A poll of delegates this week by The Associated Press gives Johnson 18 votes; Adlai Stevenson 2, Stuart Symington of Missouri 2, Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts 1, and former President Harry Truman one-half vote.

Scorching Jap Reply To Russia

Japanese Gov't Strongly Endorses U. S. Alliance, Charge Interference

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese government strongly endorsed its new military alliance with the United States today in a scorching diplomatic reply to Soviet objections. It accused the Soviet Union of undue interference in Japan's affairs and rejected neutrality in the cold war.

Re-affirming its faith in the U.S.-Japan security treaty despite a month of riotous leftwing protests, Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi's government told the Soviets:

"In view of the grim realities in the Far East the stationing of U.S. forces (in Japan) is necessary for securing the safety of the nation and contributing to world peace."

Foreign Minister Aichiro Fujiyama called in Soviet Ambassador Nicolai T. Fedorenko to present Japan's one-package reply to Soviet protests of April 22, May 20 and June 15 against the treaty.

Fujiyama reportedly told the cabinet earlier it would be Japan's last word to the Soviets on the matter and that any further protests would be ignored.

Using unusually strong language, the Japanese note charged the Soviets were guilty of "willful misinterpretation" of the treaty, "one-sided and dogmatic views," slander, attempting to weaken Japan's defenses and "distortion of facts."

The note denied Communist charges that the American bases in Japan threaten the Soviet Union and Red China with nuclear attack and can be used to launch spy plane flights over the Communist nations. It said Japan's foreign policy is one of peace, that Japan will never permit nuclear weapons to be based on its territory and that the government is confident the United States will never take any military action from its Japanese bases contrary to Japan's wishes.

The note also indirectly accused the Soviet Union of helping instigate the recent riots, declaring "The attitude of the Soviet government, in attempting to exercise unjust influence upon the direction of public opinion in Japan, on the revision of the treaty . . . by repeated accusations based on her versions and prejudices, is nothing but undue interference in the domestic affairs of Japan."

Grimesland Has Chief Of Police

GRIMESLAND — Officials of the town of Grimesland announced today the appointment of a 27-year-old service station operator as their new police chief and caretaker of the water system.

Jessie Mack Bunting of near Greenville was selected Thursday morning at a meeting of the Town Board, Mayor Leslie Elks said. He began his duties at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Bunting has been in the service station business and television-radio repair service for the past several years. His repair shop adjoined his service station near Greenville on the Washington Highway.

He is married to the former Florence E. Waters and they have one son who is three years old. Bunting plans to move his family and mother-in-law to Grimesland in the near future.

The town of Grimesland has been without a law enforcement officer since Tuesday, June 21, when Police Chief Bill Ennis resigned.

Castro Orders Seizure Of Esso And Shell Refineries

HAVANA (AP) — Prime Minister Fidel Castro today ordered seizure of Esso Standard and Shell Oil installations and refineries in Cuba, unless they refine token shipments of state-owned (Russian) crude oil.

Castro acted through identical resolutions which accused both Esso and Shell of violating a 1938 Cuban law requiring refineries here to process state-owned oil. All companies have held that the law means oil produced in Cuba and not oil imported in competition with their own suppliers.

refinery had followed company officials' refusal to take delivery on 25,000 barrels of Soviet oil for processing. Shell has a 42 million dollar investment in Cuba; Esso's is estimated at 60 million and Texaco's at 50 million. The Cuban government owes the three foreign companies an estimated 60 million dollars in exchange for Venezuelan oil they have imported, refined and resold in Cuba.

Some American experts predicted a shortage of gasoline would result from Cuban seizure of the three refineries, claiming the Soviet Union does not have the tankers to send enough crude oil for Cuba's needs. But Revolution, the semi-official newspaper, said that many firms, including at least one unnamed American company, were negotiating to sell oil to Cuba. The island needs about 60,000 barrels a day.

ACL Asks Consolidate Its Bethel, Parmele Agencies

The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad yesterday filed application at a hearing here to consolidate its freight agencies at Bethel and Parmele.

At a hearing before State Utilities Commissioner Sam C. Worthington, ACL representatives proposed the Bethel agent serve both communities. Testimony revealed the Martin County agency at Parmele, three miles north of Bethel, is bringing "very small revenues."

ACL offered Sharpe's service on Saturday upon request of Bethel consignees. The railroad firm also stipulated it would provide for prompt and accurate delivery of consignees' cars in Bethel. Its representatives said each train's conductor would be advised before arrival in Bethel where each car should be delivered. Consignees would notify the Rocky Mount office of this information in advance.

The Rev. Mr. Howard McKinnor, McLamb yesterday was announced as the new pastor for Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church. He succeeds the Rev. W. M. Howard, Jr. who will move to Trinity Methodist Church in Durham. The Rev. McLamb comes to Greenville from Goldsboro where he has been superintendent of the Goldsboro district of the Methodist Church. Same Rates In Farmville's New Budget Planning

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Board of Town Commissioners has adopted a tentative budget that will allow the local tax rate and utilities charges to remain constant.

Worthington took the matter under advisement to be presented to a meeting of the commission's entire membership for disposition. The only party filing opposition to the proposed consolidation was J. R. Matthews, general chairman of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. The town of Bethel was represented by Mayor and Town Attorney C. W. Everett and F. L. Blount Sr.

ACL further agreed, upon questions from Everett, to instruct Sharpe to remain at the Bethel office to insure proper placement of the cars, if the need should arise.

Satellite Stops Sending Photos

WASHINGTON (AP)—Tires I, the TV-ee weather satellite, has stopped sending back pictures of the earth's cloud cover. Scientists believe that one of the two electrically operated cameras—the one with the wide-angle lens—has burned out.

Washington could not be reached for comment this morning, but railroad officials expected the petition's approval and enactment in the near future. The Parmele agent, A. G. Whitehead, would lose his position at the Martin County agency, but would probably be placed in a similar job elsewhere. The Parmele agency would place a total of four offices under Sharpe's supervision. He directs agencies at Conetoe and Mildred.

House Overrides Pay Boost Veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House today voted to override President Eisenhower's veto of a 7 1/2 per cent pay increase for 1 1/2 million federal employees.

condemn the measure so strongly. The President called it indefensible. The vote was taken before galleries packed with postal employees and other federal workers. An entire section was filled with blue-uniformed mailmen who took their places a half-hour before Congress convened.

Summer school students at Rose High School will also have the July 4 holiday. The driver license office at the Highway Patrol Building in Greenville will be closed Monday and will reopen Tuesday at 8 a.m. Sheppard Memorial Library will be closed, as will the Greenville Art Center. No arts and craft classes are scheduled for Monday at the art center.

Jolly - Thompson Marry

GASTONIA—On Saturday afternoon at six o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church here, Miss Nancy Hannah Thompson became the bride of William Oscar Jolly, III of Ayden. The bride's pastor, Dr. Harry McClellan Moffett, officiated at the ceremony.

Miss Thompson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Henry Thompson of Gastonia. Mr. Jolly is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W.O. Jolly, Jr. of Ayden.

The vows were heard amidst a setting of bridal greenery, interspersed with lighted tapers in seven branched candelabra. The wedding music was rendered by Miss Norma Jean Yarbrough, organist, and Miss Rebecca Marly, soloist. Miss Marly sang "Entreat Me Not To Leave Thee."

The bride given in marriage by her father was attired in a gown of imported Alencon lace and silk organza over silk faille. The tulle bodice featured a scalloped sabrina neckline, laced with crystals and seed pearls, and caught down the back with tiny self covered buttons.

Wrist length white kid gloves were worn by the bride to feature the short sleeve design. The bouffant skirt of the gown was styled with a princess panel appliqued with lace sprays. The gathered fullness started at the hipline and extended to a bow bustle at the back which extended into a chapel length train.

Her veil was a mantilla of matching Alencon lace. She carried a bouquet of feathered carnations and stephanotis.

Miss Mary Bradley Thompson was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a cocktail length dress of crystal pink silk organza over taffeta. Her hat was of crystal pink horse hair braid caught at the back with dusters of satin bows. Matching pink satin slippers and a cascade of pink carnations and rosebuds completed her outfit.

Mrs. Fred M. Moss, Jr. of Chapel Hill, and Misses Vivian Freeman, Mary Jane Long, and Catherine Hinson of Gastonia were bridesmaids. They were gowned identically to the honor attendant. They also carried similar bouquets.

Honorary bridesmaids were Misses Avis Rhyme, Joyce Cutler and Judy Wright, all of Gastonia. They wore summer pastel cocktail dresses.

Mrs. Thompson, mother of the bride, wore a light blue lace sheath dress with matching accessories. The groom's mother wore a mauve lace costume suit with matching accessories.

Mrs. W.O. Jolly, Sr. of Ayden, paternal grandmother of the groom, wore a Dior blue lace with matching accessories.

The groom chose as his best man, his father, W.O. Jolly, Jr. Ushers were Horton G. Jolly and Kenneth Jolly, brothers of the groom, both of Ayden; and Joseph H. Thompson of Gastonia and Jerry A. Thompson of Charlotte, brothers of the bride.

The bride is a 1960 graduate of Woman's College, U.N.C. She made her debut in 1956 at the Sub-Debutante Ball in Shelby and in 1957 at the Debutante Ball in Gastonia.

The groom graduated at the University of North Carolina in 1959. At present he is a student in the U.N.C. Medical School and is a member of Phi Chi, medical fraternity.

After a wedding trip to the mountains of Virginia and North Carolina, the couple will make their home at 121 Goldston Ave., Carboro.

KINSTON — Miss Mary Will Long of Greenville and her wedding attendants were entertained today at a luncheon at the Kinston Country Club by Mrs. W. Edw. Dunn, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Joseph C. Miller, the bride's cousin.

Prior to the luncheon the guests assembled at the home of Mrs. Dunn for a brief social hour.

Upon arrival at the Country Club, the guests were invited into the dining room by the hostesses and were seated at the appointed table.

A blue and white motif was carried out in the table decorations and place cards. Of focal interest was a large silver epergne containing hydrangeas, gardenias, and baby's breath, flanked by two smaller epergnes similarly arranged. Blue net rice bags at each place were tied with blue satin ribbon. Streamers from each place were attached to the Cupids on the center epergne. A three course luncheon was served.

Gardening Today

A QUIET, RESTFUL PLACE . . . is this swing surrounded by variegated flowers and trees in the backyard of Dr. and Mrs. Fred Haar's.

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

Gardening should have two important phases—a time for work and a time to enjoy the results of this work. After all, the chief end for each gardener should be the pleasure his garden gives him. It is a place to relax—a place to meditate—a place to think things out. That is why we should use plants that have beauty and fragrance.

Water in some form, either placid or in motion brings a lot to the garden and also to the gardener. You can enjoy its cool effect and the music of its sound. The garden at all times should be a place for you to enjoy. To catch it in its many moods, you have to see it when the day is young, and watch the sun steal the dew the night has left; or at the noon hour when colors run riot, swimming in the heat of the day. But morning and day are times of hurry, except on week ends and special days. There is too much of a head of you to really let the garden weave its spell around you. It is at the end of the day that you should visit your garden—in the cool of the evening when life's pace has slowed, and the whisper of night comes to the ears. You can sit beneath the trees and rest. It is at such times the wind that has walked through the tops of the trees comes down and stirs camp sweet smells among the flowers.

It is at this time the western sky tells the ancient story of days going and the shadows begin to weave a curtain for night. The mind becomes detached from the frenzy of the things that made up the day and you relax.

And the wind brings to you a touch of gardenia and magnolia, or a whiff of nicotiana. You hear the nesting sounds of birds and the night calls of the insects. The picture widens and deepens as the merging shadows become night.

What has loomed so big in the morning is forgotten and the garpoe becomes what it was meant to be—a quiet place. You find for yourself that evening is the best time to visit your garden. For it was in the cool of the evening that God visited Adam in the Garden of Eden.

Court Rules Can Not Force Move Of Prison Camp

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Prison Department cannot be forced to remove its Camp Polk prison near Raleigh, but it already is trying to arrange a move.

This was the word Thursday after the State Supreme Court ruled against a group of citizens who sought court action to force the Prison Department to move the camp.

Prisons director George Randall said the Prison Commission is interested in moving Camp Polk "and we are trying to arrange something."

He added the prison would be moved, provided the Prison Department can sell the camp site and buildings far enough to be elsewhere, and provided another satisfactory site can be obtained. The Camp Polk site and buildings are valued at 1 1/2 million dollars.

The court's opinion was regarded by members of the attorney general's staff as an important weapon in the event citizens should seek to force the state to move any of its other prison camps or some other institution.

A group of citizens living near Camp Polk became aroused and sought its removal following two slayings in the vicinity of the prison.

Associate Justice William H. Bobbitt, who wrote the Supreme Court decision, said it is a matter for the prison commission to decide whether a prison is to be operated at the Camp Polk site. It is also up to the commission, he added, to determine whether the camp is to be operated as a minimum security camp.

"A prison is not a nuisance per se," Bobbitt stated. "Hence the construction of a prison on a site selected by public officials pursuant to statutory authority will not be enjoined."

NEA Returns To Integration Issue

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The National Education Assn. comes to grips again today with a problem that has haunted its annual conventions for the past three years.

Delegates begin debate this afternoon on the official NEA resolution on integration in public schools. In Cleveland in 1958 and in St. Louis last year the issue produced violent arguments, threats, and one walkout by Southern delegates.

This may be the year of compromise. That, at least, is the guess available from informed officials.

New York, Ohio, and California perennial leaders in the fight for a statement condemning segregation and demanding court decision, are reported willing to accept quite a bit less.

The platform plank presented by the NEA resolutions committee is the same that adopted in 1958 and 1959 and virtually unchanged from the one first adopted in 1954.

It calls for a "spirit of fair play, good will and respect for law," and "intelligence, saneness and reasonableness" in working out the problem, at the state and local level.

The Southern states — NEA membership is high in the South — want the organization to stand pat. Any stronger resolution, they argue, will only make matters worse.

Earlier this week, at an open hearing on the resolutions, speaker after speaker from the North and West demanded that NEA "stop straddling the fence and take a stand."

Since that time there have been efforts to reach a compromise.

A California delegate quoted a delegation official as saying there should be no effort made to disrupt the conference over the segregation issue "because this will hurt California's chances to get a national officer elected next year."

Several delegates protested violently, and one asked, according to the delegate, "Are we here to discuss politics, or children?"

Guests for the evening were Sherrill Bryant of Greenville, Hal Orringer of the New Bern Civitan Club and Lt. Gov. Stallings.

Methodists Favor End Death Penalty

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP)—The North Carolina Methodist Conference has voted to urge the governor and the State Legislature to abolish the death penalty.

A resolution outlining this was adopted Thursday at the closing session of the four-day conference here. The resolution also called upon North Carolina's congressmen to support pending legislation in Congress to abolish federal capital punishment.

The conference also went on record as favoring the passage of legislation pending in Congress to prohibit the service of alcoholic beverages aboard aircraft.

The delegates approved a resolution asking the Southeastern Jurisdictional Conference to re-

Copter Rescues Couple In Desert

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A honeymooning Berkeley, Calif. couple escaped possible death Thursday because an Air Force helicopter pilot changed his mind.

Donald, 23, and Evelyn Palmer, 21, married Sunday, were rescued from a remote section north of Reno by Capt. Philip E. Maggart, a Stead, Nev. Air Force Base instructor.

The newlyweds had been hopelessly lost for 24 hours and were suffering from exhaustion and thirst in 100-plus degree heat. Mrs. Palmer had collapsed when her husband waved his shirt frantically at Maggart's copter.

"A lot of people wave at helicopters and we flew on," Maggart said. "But as we went along I began thinking—not many people wave clothing at you."

"So we flew back to have a second look. They were mighty glad to see us, but they were in such bad shape they didn't have much to say."

After treatment at the Stead hospital, the Palmers were released.

Donald said he and his wife started out in his sports car for isolated Pyramid Lake Wednesday, but the car got stuck on a narrow dirt road he wrongly thought was a shortcut.

Palmer said he waved the shirt frantically at one helicopter that passed over. But the pilot waved back and flew on.

All That Land Almost For Free

EVERGLADES, Fla. (AP) — County commissioners here have found they already own 230 acres of land they'd been dickering for two years to buy from the federal government.

It seems that when the government deeded the county some land years ago the legal description took in 1,330 acres but the deed listed only 1,100 acres.

In the campaign to buy the additional land for county purposes, the commissioners had gotten officials to agree to sell the 230 acres for $28,000 and had even made a $600 down payment — which will be returned by the government.

Rule Negligence In Mine Disaster

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A magistrate ruled today the Jan. 21 Coalbrook mine disaster which took 437 lives was "due to negligence."

P. J. Van Heerden found the cave-in was due to "negligence and wrongful acts and omissions of the present consulting engineers, the general managers and managers and assistant managers employed at this colliery."

This negligence was attributed to these executives "personally and through their servants and agents."

DR. ROBERT L. HOLT, Dean of Instruction at East Carolina College, will be guest minister for the Eighth Street Christian Church this Sunday and during the month of July. He has been a minister of Baptist churches in various localities in this state. At present, Dr. Holt is a deacon and teacher of the R. B. Lee Young Men's Bible Class of the Memorial Baptist Church. This Sunday, at Eighth Street Christian Church, D. S. Spain, chairman of the Official Board of the church, will preside at the morning worship hour. Mrs. Cleveland Bradner Jr. will sing "O Divine Redeemer" by Gounod.

Spokesmen said this morning the efforts of the Farmville Chamber of Commerce, Merchants Association, and Economic Council resulted in the re-opening of the theater, owned by the Stewart-Everett theater chain. Local merchants agreed to advertise on the movie house's screen according to terms offered by C. B. Trexler, one of the Stewart-Everett officials.

Officials of the chain have expressed a desire to obtain a Farmville resident to operate the theater. The program will begin tonight under the temporary management of Stewart-Everett personnel.

During its last year of operation, the local theater was reported to have lost some $6,000.

Little Use In Continuing Subsidy

The United States can no longer ignore the attacks of Cuba's Fidel Castro without taking economic reprisals to match those which Castro has now taken against American-owned properties in Cuba.

It is commendable indeed that the United States has been patient with Castro in spite of his blistering verbal attacks upon this nation. It was wise for the United States to stave off any economic sanctions against the revolutionary Cuban government when Castro began his diatribes against this country.

Now, however, it is apparent that Castro's government is bent upon becoming a full-blown satellite of the Soviet Union. It is evident that Castro intends to take over all American properties in Cuba which he feels will be of use to his government's position. At the moment this applies to American-owned industries. It is not unreasonable to believe that in a short span of time similar seizure demands will be made upon the major naval installation at Guantanamo Bay. Castro will demand this facility whether or not the United States continues its multi-million dollar annual subsidy to Cuba through the existing sugar-purchase agreement.

Why should the United States continue to finance a large portion of the cost of Cuba's anti-American government, providing it with vital dollars with which to carry out a communist-directed program?

It is one thing to attempt to gain friendships in international affairs through economic aid and trade agreements favorable to other nations. It is quite another for the United States to pump millions of dollars unnecessarily into the economy of a country which obviously is a willing Western Hemisphere beachhead for the Soviet Union.

In the words of Castro speaking this week of the United States, "We'll take and take until not even the nails of their soles are left." He has made a big start on this program with the seizure of one major American oil refinery and the expected seizure of others at any moment. He has threatened to take over a sugar mill in Cuba owned by American interests for every pound of sugar the United States cut from the Cuban quota.

There is no reason, in the light of his taking over oil refineries, to believe he will not take over the sugar mills when it suits his purposes whether or not the American-Cuban sugar agreement is still in operation.

For the federal government to cut off Cuban sugar suddenly would for a month or two at least have serious repercussions upon a number of American businesses dependent upon that source of sugar. With adequate planning, however, the refusal of the United States to buy Cuban sugar above the world market price as is now the case, need not have serious economic repercussions in this country.

Certainly federal authorities should begin work toward that end in an effort to discontinue U. S. economic support to Cuba now costing Americans millions of dollars a year.

Since there appears no hope of our having Castro's friendship, there is little use in our continuing to afford him a major source of his funds for carrying out his orders that come with increasing frequency from the Kremlin.

Conviction Grows That Butler Should Resign

Although rumors that former Harry Truman will not attend the Democratic national convention vary in details as to the reasons, it is clear that basically they stem from differences between the former President and Democratic Chairman Paul Butler.

One report a few days ago said the former President would not attend the convention because Butler is acting as a campaign manager for Sen. John Kennedy rather than fulfilling his role as a neutral national chairman.

Yesterday the New York Post attributed the reason to the fact that Butler would not permit either Truman or Adlai Stevenson, two-time nominee of the party, to be speakers at the national convention. Between now and July 11, there will probably be other rumors, and unless we miss our guess, Harry Truman will speak forth squarely on the matter as he has been prone to do on other occasions.

Behind it all is the continually obvious fact that Chairman Butler is ruffling the feathers of many Democrats because of his handling of national party affairs. Rather than creating greater unity in the party—an essential in a national election year—he is continuing to create controversy.

Some months ago The Reflector voiced the opinion that Butler should resign as national Democratic chairman. Since that time, his actions have made us more firmly convinced than before that for the sake of the party he should relinquish the post.

Twice In A Row Grabs Spotlight

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Truman has fulfilled the dream of every prima donna who ever lived: To grab the spotlight even before the curtain goes up.

He's done it twice in a row: in 1956 and now again in 1960. But in both those years at least one famous Democrat, Eleanor Roosevelt, was looking over his shoulder suspiciously.

In 1956, as Democrats gathered for their Chicago convention, Adlai E. Stevenson was the frontrunner for their presidential nomination. Until then Truman had kept silent on his choice.

Then, two days before the convention opened, he temporarily stole the show by announcing for New York's Gov. W. Averell Harriman. On the opening day he bombshelled the party again.

That time he said he didn't think Stevenson could win if he got the nomination. That was hardly a sunny beginning for Stevenson who did get the nomination and didn't win.

If all this proved anything it was that Truman's influence in the party didn't decline a long way since 1952 when he was the retiring president.

Incidentally, in 1952 he was a Stevenson fan himself.

But this year it seemed Truman would be fresh out of bombshells by the time the Democratic convention opened in Los Angeles July 11, and for this reason:

Weeks ago he announced his choice for this year's nomination was Sen. Stuart Symington, Truman's fellow Missourian. After that there didn't seem much left that Truman could do to get attention.

He was going to be one of the Missouri delegates but, with his waning influence in the party, there was a good chance he'd get lost in the shuffle.

But he found a way. Wednesday, just 13 days before the Democratic convention starts, Truman shocked his party by suddenly announcing he would not attend even though he had accepted the post of delegate.

And, to build up interest in himself, instead of saying Wednesday why he wouldn't go, he said he would wait until a Saturday news conference to reveal his reason. He said health was not his reason.

But both times—in 1956 and again in 1960—Mrs. Roosevelt wouldn't buy what he was trying to sell.

In 1956, the day after Truman came out for Harriman, Mrs. Roosevelt expressed belief his real objective was to bring about a Harriman-Stevenson stalemate in order to get the nomination for Symington. Symington at that time said (Continued on page ten)

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
TRUE REST FOR THE SOUL
A certain Ralph Barton who lived some years ago was acknowledged to be the most brilliant caricaturist of his day. He received immense recognition and reward for his work. In his private life, however, he was a cynical, pleasure-seeking debauchee, and at the height of his fame he committed suicide.

He left a note, part of which read as follows: "I have had few real difficulties. I have had, on the contrary, an especially glamorous life, as life goes. I have had my share of affection and appreciation. I have run from wife to wife, from house to house, and from country to country, in a ridiculous effort to escape myself. In doing so, I am afraid that I have brought a great deal of unhappiness to those who have loved me. . . No one thing is responsible for this violent act I am taking, and no one person except myself. I am doing this because I am fed up with inventing devices for getting through twenty-four hours a day."

This was the testimony of a man whom the world admired and called successful. But he acknowledged no external code and could not impress upon himself any satisfactory inner code in place of the external. He flitted through life and, being neither a bird nor a butterfly, life passed upon him. Man is more than an animal. He is a creature to whom God has appointed a destiny. And there can be no happiness unless he achieves that destiny. "Thou has fashioned us for thyself, O God, and our souls are restless till they find their rest in thee."

That Big Commy Dispute

By ALVIN TAYLOR

Luckier Than He Knows

My brother, Bill and I were leaving the Reflector office last Saturday night at the conclusion of the newspaper election party.

Sanford had been declared winner, the crowd had gone home leaving the streets rather quiet.

As we walked along Third St. just around the corner from Cotanche we heard a terrific screeching of tires from the direction of Cotanche St.

Apparently some hot-rodder was truly "scratching off."

Then above the squeal of rubber on pavement we heard the tell-tale wail of a police siren. There was another screeching of tires as the cars rounded a corner, then another another. All the time the siren wailed steadily on.

And with each screech the noise became louder and we realized the cars were coming our way.

The final turn was made at the corner of Third and Reade St. and the lights of the pursued car loomed into view. Behind it could be seen the blinking red light of a highway patrol auto.

As the cars neared Third and Cotanche St. the front vehicle gave up. Its driver pulled it to the curb.

The highway patrolman, J.B. Surles, pulled alongside and a youth, perhaps 18, got out of the front car.

Another youth sat inside and Surles asked him if he could drive it. Evidently he got a negative answer for he turned to me and asked if I would drive the vehicle to the police station.

I agreed and slipped under the wheel.

"I told him to stop," the youth at my side, who was shaken by his recent ride, said.

"Do you reckon they'll do anything to me?" he asked.

I told him I doubted it since he was only riding.

At the police station we rejoined the patrolman and the driver.

"Why didn't you stop when you heard my siren?" Surles asked the driver.

"I don't know," he replied with a shrug but without arrogance.

There were charges, of course. Careless and reckless driving, running a stop sign, running a red light.

Later Surles told me he fell in behind the car at Fourth and Cotanche when it ran a red light. The chase led to Fifth then to Reade then to Third and finally came to a halt at Cotanche.

On one corner he thought the car ahead would surely overtake, the patrolman said.

But it didn't. This chase turned out better for the young driver than for some. There was no wrecked vehicle. No screams of injured from within a crumpled mass of metal. Only a few traffic charges awaited at its end.

Nikita Revises Marx

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Nikita Khrushchev believes that it is possible for Soviet Russia and its European satellites to prevail in a world of competitive peaceful co-existence among capitalist and Communist countries. This has been his thesis since the 20th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party when he downgraded Stalin, his predecessor.

In effect this is anti-Marxist, in the sense that it denies the permanent revolution; it is anti-Leninist in the sense that it denies that Soviet Russia cannot succeed in Communism without the entire world becoming Communist. It is Stalinist in the sense that it tries Socialism (Communism) in one country. It is original in that Khrushchev would attempt to do it by peaceful means, by beating the capitalist countries in production, while trading with them, utilizing capitalist methods of business.

Khrushchev's ideas are not altogether welcomed in Soviet Russia and not at all in Red China. The remnants of the Stalinists are violently opposed to his concepts which, if carried to their logical conclusion, would put an end to the revolution and would reduce the conspiratorial activities of the Communist Movement. It would have all relations between Soviet Russia and the rest of the world on a diplomatic and commercial basis and would dilute the revolution by free intercourse among the various nations, expecting Soviet Russia to prevail by economic superiority rather than by the techniques of revolution.

To Red China, in particular, this could be disastrous. It is in the first stage of revolution and requires all the apparatus of revolution—infiltration, penetration, subversion, even war—to accomplish its purpose. Red China is attempting to move further than Soviet Russia; it is seeking to reach Communism without going through the intermediate step of Socialism. To the Russians, this seems fantastically impossible because whereas Socialism, in various forms, does actually work in some countries, Communism in its Marxist-Leninist form works nowhere. The Chinese "leap forward" is tantamount to total slavery.

Khrushchev is being attacked and his future is not certain. In the method developed by Stalin in the Soviet Universal State, the top man, whatever his title, maintains a balance of power among differing factions. Stalin was able to maintain it by killing off the deviators until no one who failed to support his position could have a voice in policy. He was ever superior to him remained.

Khrushchev has not been able to do that. His major difficulty is that Mao Tze-tung holds a greater moral authority in the Soviet Universal State than Khrushchev does. Mao is a more educated man, a philosopher and poet; Khrushchev is a practical man with a tendency to be capitalistic in his processes. Mao, for instance, would not concern himself with putting China on the gold standard; Khrushchev is apparently doing precisely that. Mao is a strict theoretician, an orthodox Marxist-Leninist; Khrushchev tries to operate a practical economy, one that will provide ample military supplies to battle against the United States or any country and at the same time ample consumers' goods to keep his people happy.

This conflict has been constant in the Soviet Universal State since 1917. It was the cause for the split between the Bolsheviks and the Mensheviks in 1903. It was one of the reasons why Tito spun off from Kremlin control. It is the reason why Trotsky, Kamenev, Zinoviev and many other Bolshevik leaders were murdered. The history of the Bolshevik Party has been one of Leftist and Rightist deviation from a fixed party line. This will undoubtedly continue as long as the Communist Party exists because all men cannot see the same problem in the same way, no matter how close they are in a disciplined political party. Other Editors Saying Hard, Tough Questions

(Wall Street Journal)

When Senator Kennedy says that Vice President Nixon's farm proposals are "only question marks" and that he has not come to grips with the "hard, tough problems of American agriculture," he says no more than what is so.

The farm problem is one of the few that Mr. Nixon has skirted gingerly. For the most part he has mainly asked questions about it, and the definite suggestions he has made—such as his proposal for a United Nations stockpile—are only analgesics to ease the symptoms of this cancerous sore on our domestic economy.

But when Senator Kennedy uses his criticism of Mr. Nixon to imply that somehow he himself has come to grips with the hard, tough problems and has come up with the answers—well, then, that is something else again.

When you look at what Senator Kennedy proposes in the way of agricultural policy it comes down to nothing more than a continuation of the very programs that have created the "farm problem" and made it so hard and tough for anyone to solve. Senator Kennedy simply says that we should keep the high price supports and rigid controls over production; if anything, he implies that the Government's controls over the nation's farmers should be more rigid.

For it is no secret—either from politicians, economists or the farmers themselves—why we have this farm problem. Government established prices for commodities well above the prices that would be set by the market place have encouraged a vast outpouring beyond need or economic justification. And for this the citizens pay heavily, both in higher prices and in higher taxes to give benefits to farmers.

Nor is the real solution of this farm problem any real secret. Almost everyone, including a great many farmers, recognizes that restoring a free market in agriculture would solve it. It is the political difficulties that are so immense. Whatever logic may dictate, the fear is probably justified that proposing the right solution would cost any candidate farm votes. It is before this difficulty that all of the candidates quaver.

Yet there is still, we think, a difference in their timidity. To be sure, Mr. Nixon has quavered at the thought of proposing that the Government shut off this trough at which the farmers have been feeding at the expense of the rest of us. But he has at least been bold enough to ask questions about this present farm program, even if he has as yet drawn back from trying to give those questions the inevitable answers.

Mr. Kennedy, so far as we can see, has not troubled to ask the right questions about the farm problem—or even to acknowledge that they exist. More price supports, more Government controls on the farmer, more of the hair of the dog that bit us, that is the sum total of Mr. Kennedy's farm program.

It is a sad business all around. It is no credit to any man who aspires to be President of the United States that he should shy away from tackling one of the nation's major economic and political problems. Still, it is better to fall short with the answers than not even to come to grips with the

Publication Of Strange Facts

By ELMER ROESSNER

One of the most fascinating publications for foreign traders and collectors of strange facts is "Foreign Crops and Markets," a 28-page offset bulletin by the Foreign Agricultural Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

It contains facts from American agricultural services around the world. Data from Iron Curtain countries, where the Russian secrecy phobia rules, is skimpy, but Russian influence on outside markets is often noted.

Some of the tidbits in the latest issue: India's sesame crop is down one-fourth. Argentina's coming flaxseed crop looks better than estimated earlier. American coarse grain exports are rising. Greece is selling off its raisin stocks.

Significant? Yes, to a trader here and there. Interesting? Let's look at some more items. MORE MONOGERM SEED IN RUSSIA

There's a bit gleaned from the Soviet press: Russia is planting more monogerm beet seed. This year it is sowing 2,500,000 acres, about a third of the beet acreage. Monogerm seed requires less thinning than stands from multiple seeds.

From an observer in Ceylon: The nation is competing two sugar mills this year, one at Kantalal, near Tricomalee, the other in the Gal Oya Valley. A third mill is planned on the Gal Oya Valley. A third mill is planned on the Ceylon Sugar Plantation, where sugar cane will be rotated with paddy rice. "Only jaggery was produced in this area prior to January, 1959," the report says. There's an idea for a popular song: "Jaggery by jiggery, you're as sweet as jaggery!" The dictionary says jaggery is a coarse, brown East Indian sugar made from palm sap. That's my girl! Sweet as sugar and a sap!

PROGRESS IN PAKISTAN
West Pakistan has had a

"grow more mustard" campaign and it's successful. This year's crop of mustard and rapeseed is 16 per cent above a year ago. Mustard is used in curries; rapeseed produces an oil.

Australia has resumed exports of beef to the U.S. after the annual hiatus when shipping space is short. Now 23,569,290 pounds are on the water heading toward American ports. The hamburger you have for lunch next week may be from an Australian cow.

Gitanes (gypsy) cigarettes, which contains American fire-cured tobacco, is becoming an increasing favorite in France, out-selling other brands 5 to 1—a lead to make any American cigarette manufacturer jealous. The minor brands are Royale, Balto, Rallye, Week End and, the least of the lot, High Life.

Britain is our best lard customer; we are Britain's best lard supplier. In the January-April period, Britain bought five-sixths of its import lard from the U.S.; that was more than half of our lard exports.

The U.S. is importing less meat; imports were 20 per cent less in the January-April period than in the corresponding 1959 months. Our import of sheep and goat sausage casings were 23 per cent, but even then the total was only about 1 per cent of total meat imports.

For searchers of trends and compilers of the curious, Foreign Crops and Markets is a moderate rate joy.

One dull day I flipped off some surprising facts about foreign agricultural trade. I got a phone call from an economist for a big financial house. "I've been working for two weeks on that figure," he said. "I gathered facts from all over the world. My answer came out exactly as yours did. How did you arrive at it?"

"Quoted Foreign Crops and Markets," I said. He had never heard of it. Now that he has, I suppose, he takes an extra week off every month.

Scripture—II Kings 14:23-29; Amos 7:1-17.

In the fifteenth year of Amaziah, the son of Joash, king of Israel, began to reign in Samaria, a rule which was to last 41 years. His name was Jeroboam.—II Kings 14:23. Amos, a herdsman, had a vision of God standing upon a wall made by a plumbline. God said, "I will set a plumbline in the midst of My people."—Amos 14:7-8. Then Amaziah, a priest, went to King Jeroboam and told him that Amos had conspired against him, and he told Amos to flee to Judah and prophesy there.—Amos 7:9-12. Amos defended himself, saying, "I am no prophet, but a herdsman," and that God had told him to prophesy.—Amos 7:14-15. MEMORY VERSE—Hebrews 1:1-2.

IN THE lesson we study today we are beginning a series of three successive ones "taken from one short Old Testament book . . . for more accurate understanding of the ministry of the bold prophet, Amos." I quote from the Rev. Dr. Wilbur M. Smith's Peloubet's Select Notes. Amos was probably not an educated man. He was a herdsman and a gatherer of sycamore fruits. Yet God chose him to prophesy to his people of their sins and the fate that he saw in store for them, although at the time Israel was prospering under two reigns, those of Jeroboam and Zedekiah. Amos had a vision of the Lord God, who "stood upon a

Old Glory Adds A Star Monday

By TOM HENSHAW
Associated Press Writer
Old Glory gets a new star—for Hawaii—next Monday with all the pomp and circumstance reserved for a beloved grand dame on a very special birthday. It's a lot different from the first one. The fact is that no one can say for sure just how the flag of the United States came to be the Stars and Stripes in the first place. Did the design spring full-blown from the brain of some creative genius among the founding fathers? If it did no one ever stepped forward to take a bow for it. Or did it evolve from some existing standard? There is enough evidence, real and fancied, to support several schools of thought on the subject. For instance, the tea party school. When that defiant band of patriots climbed aboard the good ship Dartmouth in Boston harbor the story was that more than a cargo of tea went overboard with them. They carried back to Boston the ship's flag, the standard of the British East India Company with its 13 alternate red and white stripes and the British Union Jack in the corner. The same flag, or an identical copy, now known as the Cambridge or Grand Union flag, was raised over George Washington's headquarters outside Boston in 1776 as the national banner. Naturally, after the Declaration

Virtually Broke

NEW YORK (AP)—An official of the National Foundation says the organization is virtually broke. Originally set up to combat infantile paralysis, the foundation for several years has been active in other areas of medical research. Charles Massey, national director of chapters, said expenditures on patient care have remained high while funds raised have dropped drastically. Massey made the statement in commenting on a copyright article in the Boston (Mass.) Globe which said the foundation owes the nation's hospitals two million dollars for care of polio patients during the past three years. The foundation set a 65-million-dollar goal for its March of Dimes campaign last January, but raised only about 30 million, Massey said. "If we paid everything we owe, we'd be broke," declared Massey.

Murderer Claims Term Too Short

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—A convicted murderer has asked to be freed from the State Penitentiary because his sentence is too short. A court-appointed lawyer for George Brown told federal court his client is serving 20 years for first degree murder. The minimum sentence in Tennessee, he said is some period over 20 years. Judge William Miller said he couldn't see why Brown was complaining. "It's a question of law," said attorney John Kelley. Miller withheld an immediate decision.

Sandburg Plans Fling in Movies

FL ROCK, N. C. (AP)—Poet biographer, historian editor, lecturer, folk singer—that's Carl Sandburg, and more. Now he's ready to have a fling at motion picture production. Listen to his comments: "Why ain't I got a right to write for the movies? That's headed, that's a high dive I haven't made. Why ain't I got a right to take a dive in the 20th Century-Fox lot?" "It's no dive, says 20th-Century-Fox producer-director George Stevens. He and Sandburg announced here Thursday that they will collaborate in filming Fulton Ousler's best-seller, "The Greatest Story Ever Told." Stevens was emphatic that Sandburg will not merely be lending his name to the endeavor: "He will make a complete contribution," Stevens said of Sandburg, "in all creative areas of the production and will devote his full time to working with us from the start to the finish of this dramatic undertaking." Contract, salary? No word on that. "A handshake is all that's needed," Stevens said as the announcement was made at the 82-year-old poet and Lincoln biographer's home. Sandburg is due in Hollywood July 18 to start work on the movie, The Life of Christ. Estimates of the cost of the picture have exceeded 15 million dollars.

Takes Over As Interim Head of Duke University

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—Dr. Deryl Hart, professor and chairman of the surgery department in Duke University's medical center, takes over today as temporary president of the university. He succeeds 59-year-old Dr. Hollis Edens, whose resignation is effective today. Dr. Hart will be president pro tem until a permanent appointment is made. During Dr. Edens' 11-year tenure, the university had a 12 million dollar development program, increases in faculty salaries and benefits, a refurbished plant, and increased endowment. Total assets were 59 million dollars in 1949 and are 125 million this year. Dr. Edens announced his resignation Feb. 19, declaring Duke's new long-range development program will demand "vigorous promotion and management on the part of an administrative leader who can be expected to remain at the helm over the entire period of development." In another administrative change today, Dr. Barnes Woodhall replaces Dr. W. C. Davidson as medical school dean.

Orioles Back In Second With Win

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Skinny Brown and Jim Gentile brushed the salt off the Orioles' tall feathers, but it's going to take a hot July for Baltimore to stay close to New York in that American League race after the way the Yankees busted loose in June.

The Orioles, still within 1 1/2 games of the Yanks, grabbed second place back from Cleveland with a 9-1 victory Thursday night. Brown chopped down the Injuns with a six-hitter and Gentile walked two homers for five runs as the Birds ended their losing string at three.

But the Yankees, crashing five home runs, clobbered Kansas City 10-2. Those five homers, two by Bill Skowron, gave the leaders 46 for the month and a season total of 90. Roger Maris crashed his 25th and Mickey Mantle hit his 18th.

Chicago's fourth place White Sox, 4 1/2 games behind, ended Washington's winning streak at five with a 4-2 decision in 10 innings. Boston belted Detroit 11-7.

In the National League, Dick Stuart slugged three home runs as first place Pittsburgh salvaged a split in a two-night pair with San Francisco with an 11-6 victory. The Giants took the first game 11-0 behind Jack Sanford's three-hitter. Second place Milwaukee lost 11-5 at Chicago and fell three games behind the Pirates. The world champion Los Angeles Dodgers crept back into the first division for the first time since May 7, tying idle St. Louis for fourth place by beating Philadelphia 10-6.

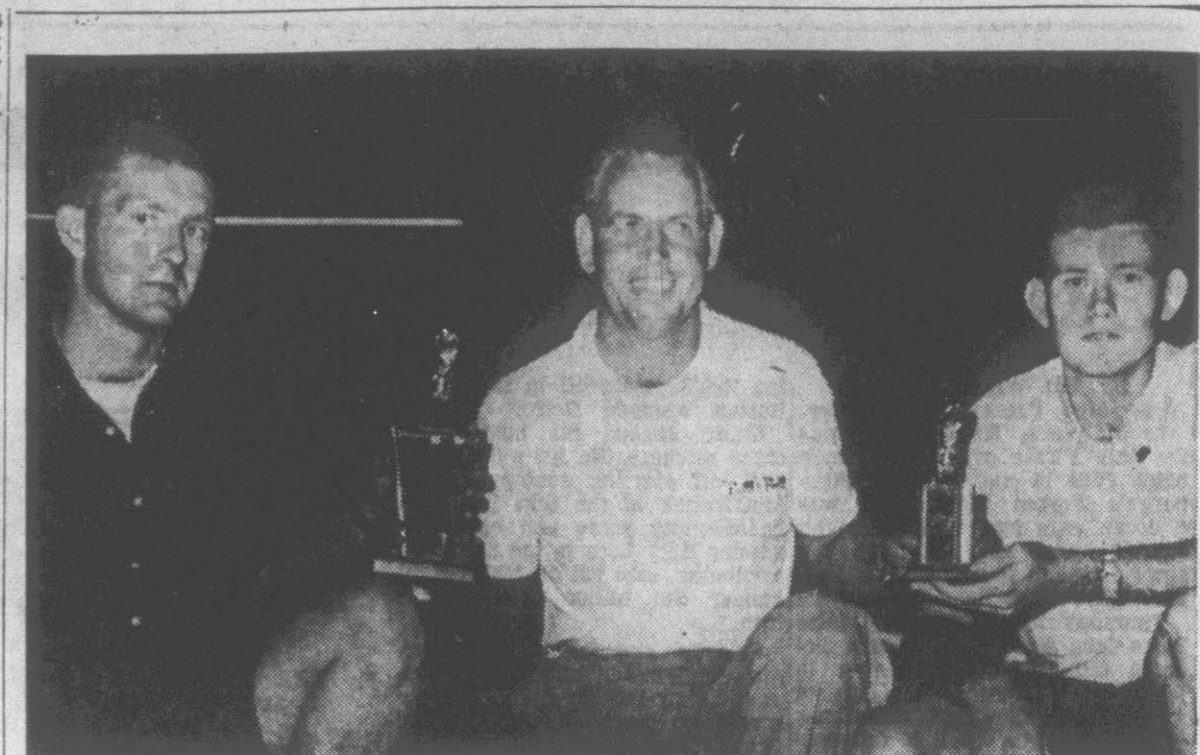

While the Yankees were clubbing the A's to a seventh stranded defeat, right-hander Ralph Terry (4-3) hung up his first complete game in seven tries since May 18. He allowed seven hits, two of them homers by Andy Carey and Jerry Lumpe, but blanked the A's on two singles over the last six innings. The Yankees, with Tony Kubek hitting the other homer, collected a dozen hits. Bob Trowbridge (1-3) was the loser in relief.

The Orioles, who had lost five in a row at home, got all they needed when Walt Dropo singled home two first-inning runs off losing southpaw Ted Bowsfield (3-4).

Al Smith, who hit a two-run homer in the second inning, doubled and scored the winning run on Joe Ginsberg's double for the White Sox against reliever Tex Clevenger (1-5). Russ Kemmerer (4-4) won it in relief.

Don Buddin eluded catcher Red Wilson in a run-down for the deciding run as Boston scored six in the eighth and defeated Tiger reliever Paul Foytack (1-7). Detroit blew 5-0 and 7-5 leads, getting all the runs on homers—two by Rocky Colavito, who drove in five runs, and the other by Eddie Yost. Ted Williams hit his 50th home run for the Red Sox, his 13th this year. Tom Sturdivant (1-2) was the winner in relief.

PUTT-PUTT WINNER—Roy Martin (left) had consecutive rounds of 32 last night to win the second Greenville Putt-Putt Tournament. Jay Alphin (right) came in second with a score of 103, five strokes behind Martin. Robert Barnes, local owner of the Putt-Putt, directed the tournament.

CONDUCT FOOTBALL CLINIC—East Carolina coaches Jack Boone, Frank Madigan, and Bill McDonald will conduct a football clinic at the college on Tuesday and Wednesday nights of next week. It is to be held at Library Auditorium and will be free.

Floyd Patterson Is Solid Citizen

By FRANK ECK
AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

Boxing is a last resort sport for most of those in it. The sport is filled with schemers, gamblers, confidence men and ex-convicts.

But to Floyd Patterson, a 25-year-old Negro reared in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant section, boxing has been a life saver.

Patterson, one of 11 children, was a truant and a delinquent as a kid. His mother had him committed to the Willyeek School for disturbed children in Esopus, N. Y. At 16 he returned to New York's dirty sidewalks and became a good pupil in an elementary school for problem children. A few blocks away Cus D'Amato had a gymnasium.

Old Cus knew about Patterson's flying fists, knew how he could lick any kid in the neighborhood. So D'Amato put Floyd on the right road.

D'Amato guided Patterson through an amateur boxing career, and at 21 Floyd became the youngest ever to win the heavy-weight title as a professional. And now at 25 he has succeeded in regaining that crown, something at which eight other ex-champions had failed.

D'Amato has been defrocked as a boxing manager in New York and says he is broke. Old Cus will never be broke. Patterson will see to that. Chances are D'Amato is putting on the poor mouth to keep away the chiselers and the 50 per centers. Inflation, you know. They used to be 10 per centers but in the fight racket it's 50-50 or your boy doesn't get a fight.

As to the fight itself, Patterson actually stole a base from Johnson's scran book. When Ingo knocked Floyd kicking in three rounds in 1959 the dimpled Swede set Patterson up for the kill by employing a good left jab.

This time, it was Patterson's left jab that set the stage. And once Patterson had his men down he failed to retreat to the farthest corner. Ingo did this when he won. Between knockdowns, Floyd grabbed Ingo by the waist and spun him around before hitting him. Turn about is fair play in boxing. Patterson had remembered how Ingo manhandled him a year ago.

The day after the fight I saw Tele Promm Tar's motion pictures. I counted 83 Patterson left jabs. Want the breakdown? Ten in round one; 16 in round two; 10 in round three; 33 in round four; five in round five.

When Johnson arose, Patterson drove two rights to the back of Ingo's neck, a spot that Ingo found vulnerable a year ago. Then he grabbed Johnson by the waist with his left glove, spun him around and clobbered him with a semi-crouch and while Ingo expected a left to the body, Patterson changed course in midstream and sent the left hook knockout blow to Ingo's jaw.

It stretched Johnson on the canvas for at least three minutes. Some estimates ran as high as 10 minutes. The referee actually could have counted 500. Ingo was so unconscious that the Madison Avenue boys will make this their knock-out ad of the future. Patterson, the bad boy turned good, fought a smart fight. He swept the Swede off his feet with dazzling speed. He fought like a professional. It really should not be said that Johnson looked bad. Patterson looked so good.

This was the Patterson who almost four years ago gave Archie Moore a shellacking. This was not the Patterson who fought four interim setups because he wasn't in with the fight mob. This was the Patterson whom a dozen Johnsons will never lick again. This was the fellow who fought to stay out of jail.

This is the father of two children he hopes to bring up in the country. This is the solid citizen of Rockville Center, N. Y. — and many other places.

Hank Scores KO In Fourth Round

By DAVE DILES
Associated Press Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP)—Henry Hank is a unique man among prize fighters. He wants a chance at the championship as badly as the next fellow, but he is willing to wait until he deserves a chance.

Hank made no cries of "I want the champ" after a convincing knockout victory Thursday night over Victor Zalazar of Buenos Aires. Hank kayoed the Argentine fighter at 2:11 of the fourth round in a scheduled 10-rounder. It was Hank's fight all the way.

The Detroit fighter, one of the world's top-ranking middleweights, wants to settle a score with Hank Casey before anything else. The unranked Casey won a split decision over Hank last month.

"When I beat him, then I'll start thinking of the bigger fights," said Hank.

A solid win over Casey would throw Hank in line for a bout against either NBA Champion Gene Fullmer or Paul Pender, who is recognized as champion in New York and Massachusetts.

Trip To Rome Up For Grabs

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)—A trip to Rome and the 1960 Olympics are up for grabs today as 221 athletes representing the best in the United States opened competition for berths on the track and field team that will represent America in the games.

Only the top three in each of the 17 events on the two-day program at Stanford win places on the squad with two exceptions. The fourth man in the 100 and 400-meter races qualifies as a member of relay teams.

A decision may come quickly on which three of America's big four in the shot put will survive. Two-time Olympic champion Parry O'Brien, Bill Nieder, Dallas Long and Dave Davis all have consistently thrown further than 60 feet. Nieder has the best toss at 65 feet 7 inches.

Teener League

League-leading Home Builders scored at will last night in passing Wachovia Bank, 13-1.

Benny Hardee pitched a one-hitter and cracked a three-run homer in the first to feature the Home Builders' win. Dale Gidley had the only other hit for Home Builders—a single in the second.

Joe McCoy had the only hit for Wachovia—a single in the seventh, spilling a no-hitter.

Bobby Powell, the first of two Wachovia hurlers, was the losing pitcher.

All East Carolina College students and other players invited by the tournament committee are eligible to enter. Any Pitt County residents desiring to enter should contact Bowie Martin at Forbes Court (PL 8-2374) and make arrangements to secure an entry blank.

Entry forms may also be secured from the College Union. Entry fees for the Men's Singles are $2.00 and Junior Singles $1.00. Junior entries must be under 19 years of age on January 1, 1960.

Players representing eight states and the District of Columbia have been invited. The draw will be conducted so that ECC players and former college participants will face out-of-town players in the first round.

Awards will be given the finalists in all events and semi-finalists in the Men's Singles.

Birds Have Good Chance For Flag

BALTIMORE (AP)—President-General Manager Lee MacPhail of the Baltimore Orioles tossed a semantic slider when discussing the pennant chances of the surprising 1960 Birds.

"You ask me if they will win, I must honestly say no," MacPhail said Thursday.

"But if you ask me if they can win, the answer is definitely yes."

"If our young players continue to hold their own, if we get more help from our older players and if the pitching continues to improve, I'd say we have a chance for the pennant."

"In addition, we'd have to get through the season without major injuries because our bench isn't strong enough to overcome them."

MacPhail said Baltimore's phenomenal success in one-run games thus far (19-6) has had much to do with the Orioles being on or near the top of the American League standings.

Martin Wins Putt-Putt Tourney By Five Strokes

Roy Martin, Greenville native and East Carolina College student, fired two consecutive rounds of 22's last night to win the second Greenville Putt-Putt tournament by five strokes.

The final two rounds of 32 combined with a first round of 34 gave Martin, the new champion, an over-all score of 98—ten under par—in the 52-hole tournament.

After posting a first round score of 37, Jay Alphin of Fayetteville soared back with a second round of 30—low for the night—and a final 18 holes of even par to capture second place.

An ace on hole number three gave Johnny Hudson third place in a "sudden death" playoff with Charlie Russell. The latter picked up the fourth place prize.

In winning the second tournament sponsored by Robert Barnes and the Greenville Putt-Putt, Martin received a Transistor Radio and a first place trophy. Alphin received a trophy and free passes. Third and fourth place finishers also received a large number of free passes.

Henry Howard, third place winner in the first tournament, faltered with a second round score of 38 to finish at 106, two strokes under par.

Martin, James Henderson and Charlie Russell held the lead after the first 18 holes of play with 34's.

A 32 on the second round sent Martin into the final 18 holes with a stroke lead over Alphin and two over Hudson.

Playing in the same threesome, with Alphin, Hudson was two under par after nine holes but talled off and finished with a par 36 for the round. Alphin was one under after nine and finished with a par 36.

Shooting at record-setting pace, Martin made ace after ace on the final round and was six under par going into the 17th hole. He went into the water on the first shot and took a double bogey to finish just four under par on the final round.

Russell shot a 32 in the final round to gain a tie for third place. J. G. Proctor also had a final round of 32 to finish in fifth place.

A field of close to 40 entered the second tournament held at the Putt-Putt. Barnes announced that the third one would be held sometime in July.

Bobby Jackson had two singles and a triple for the losers.

Left-hander Benny Hooks allowed only five hits in gaining the win.

WILLIAM PEARSON'S rousing bestseller on politics A FEVER in the BLOOD

From the novel published by St. Martin's Press, Inc. Copyright © 1959, by William Pearson. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

CHAPTER I
Leif Vinquist, deceased, but a tough old goat if ever there was one, had made his first million in the Wilson era by building up a scrap-iron business, living peevishly, and reinvesting wisely. Late in life he married a show-girl who gave him a son and then ran off.

Leif Vinquist never recovered either from the betrayal or the humiliation, and he put more than the usual hopes into his son, Bob, now a graduate of Princeton, the Sorbonne, and Yale Law School. Two years ago, when Bob Vinquist returned home with his law degree, a number of his father's old friends in Rowton were anxious to help him, but he seemed to have a stubborn, defensive determination to make his own way.

Indeed, he somewhat alienated these same old friends, all Republicans, by showing considerable interest in the fortunes of the Democratic party. It was an election year, and his financial contributions did not go unnoticed.

A few weeks after the election, Dan Callahan, the new, crusading District Attorney, offered him a job as an assistant prosecutor. Bob Vinquist took his new duties seriously and he quickly became a familiar figure in the courthouse scene. At thirty, he tried hard to view himself exactly; he knew, for example, that the thick glasses he wore because of myopia gave his elongated fair-complexioned face an exaggerated air of earnestness he often tried to overcome by affecting (and disliked himself for the effort; an equally exaggerated jocularity. He knew that his thinning brown hair, rather large nose, and several surrounding wens destroyed any claims his vanity might have wanted to make on handsomeness. Most of all, he knew that though he was a personable enough extra man at cocktail parties, he lacked those hard-to-define ingredients of personality that mark the successful candidate for elected public office.

Walking down the hall toward Judge Hoffman's courtroom this February morning, he took one final draw on his cigarette before flicking it expertly into the pot-bellied cuspidor on sentry duty beside the courtroom entrance.

Then, knocking on the door of chambers, opening it, Bob said, "May I come in, Judge?" Judge Sam Hoffman, tall and Lincolnian, had wavy gray hair, an aquiline nose, and eyes which were bright and fierce and proud, but there was a weakness about the mouth and another in his desk drawer, for it was common gossip that the Judge kept a flask.

The Judge smiled briefly. "You missed Polly by a couple of minutes, Bob. I think she was going to stop by your office, though. What can I do for you?" "Dan was wondering, Judge, when your attitude would be about photo coverage by the press and TV people in the Hart case." "Dan wants them admitted, I take it?" "He didn't say, Judge."

"Understanding what a politician doesn't say is half the battle, Bob. Not, of course, that I would question Dan's motives. We are all honorable men. Tell me, is he going to make the race for Governor?" "Judge, not to duck the question, but he just got through asking me if I knew any more about your plans. Sometimes I wonder about my messenger-boy role. All this comic diplomacy in which the two of you keep feeling each other out through Honest Bob Vinquist, who cannot tell a lie, and all the time the phone's an arm-length away."

"Yes, the etiquette's rather formidable. On the other hand, you can consider yourself lucky you aren't in either of the prospective candidates' shoes." Judge Hoffman grimaced. "An elective job's a special kind of torture. You get into office and you think you can relax. But when the election starts creeping up... like old age, only faster. I come up again in two years. So I could coast, except for the fact that I seem to be hearing distant trumpets, and their flourish is distinctly gubernatorial. But a judge can't try for something else unless he resigns the judgeship first. The Constitution says so in big black print. Commendable, indeed. But our other distinguished public servants can try for a promotion on Company time. It makes a difference."

Judge Hoffman absently examined a paperweight on his desk. "Not that I wouldn't love to try it. But a man of fifty-six doesn't go out after twenty-two years on the Bench and start a law practice from scratch, and that's where I'd be if I lost in a primary. So I've still not made my decision, Bob. As for the Hart case, letting or not letting cameras into the courtroom will depend on only one thing: whether it would prejudice the defendant. I've got to find out what Hart's lawyers think."

"I'll relay the message. Judge."

"One more quick thought, Dan has his support, I have mind. If we should pool our strength—you must pardon my modesty—with a Hoffman-Callahan ticket, nobody could stop us. Furthermore, and I say this with some temerity because I don't want you thinking I'm as cold-blooded as it sounds, Alex Simon has heart trouble. Ah, you didn't know? Well, if Alex were unable to finish out his term and I was the Governor, I'd be pleased to give Dan the interim appointment as U.S. Senator. Now how's that for putting it on the line? Heaven help us if this place is bugged!"

"A politician who's trying to make up his mind whether to run for office," he continued, "has my deepest sympathy, especially when the man's myself. So you tell Big Dan Callahan to polish up his crystal ball and see what he can see." Judge Hoffman's smile was dour. "In the meantime, I'll have my ear to the ground listening for the voice of the people myself. It's the sweetest music this side of heaven when it's blowing your way."

Leaving chambers, Bob Vinquist walked to the sepulchral stairwell leading to the third-floor office of Dan Callahan. Looking up those worn stone stairs, Bob saw Polly Hoffman descending.

"Oh, Bob." She stopped waiting for him. "I left a note on your desk. I have to cover some sort of silly meeting for the Herald tonight. Do you want to go?" "Sure. I'll take you to dinner."

"I'll take you. I got a promotion today. They're going to let me have a by-lined column twice a week. I have to be witty and gay but never offensive. So say the instructions from the powers that be."

Standing on the step below her now, he took her hands. "Polly, that's wonderful. I know it's what you've wanted."

"It's still on a trial basis. If it catches on, Mr. Keenan says it will run daily. If it doesn't catch on... Oh, well."

"It will." They stepped aside to make way for passers-by. "I just saw your dad, Polly. Still no decision."

"I know. I think that if he was sure the state convention wouldn't put him into a primary fight," she gave him an appraising glance—"with you crusading against Dan Callahan, for example."

"Maybe the convention will choose a dark horse," Bob paused, vaguely ill at ease. Was it possible that Polly might be wondering why her company so often, never seemed to get around to fundamentals? It was, Bob thought, ridiculous that a man of thirty lacked the self-confidence to propose.

"Why so solemn?" Polly asked. "I was just thinking," he evaded. "If Dan and your dad both go for the nomination, it's going to be difficult. For me, I owe so much to Dan. I like them both so well. Four lawyers, each armed with the essential briefcase symbol of his calling, appeared at the bottom of the stairs, and Bob said, "I guess this isn't the best place to solve the world's problems. I'll pick you up at six at your apartment."

Politicos Now Face Barbs Of Mort Sahl

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—As if the Democrats and Republicans don't have enough trouble fighting among themselves, now they'll have Mort Sahl aiming his barbed wit at them.

Satirical Sahl has been doing this in night clubs and on rare TV appearances—not rare enough for some thin-skinned citizens. Now he'll do it on a regular, national scale. He is negotiating to deliver commentaries on the national conventions over TV.

All the candidates are considered fair game by Sahl, as evidenced by his current comments: Richard Nixon — "His chances look good—but what about ours?" Nelson Rockefeller—"The man who could run the country as a hobby."

Stuart Symington — "He never talks about people—just people in relation to missiles." Lyndon Johnson—"Can we offer the proper incentive to get him to step down and run for the presidency?"

Adlai Stevenson — "Half the Democrats say, 'he can win'; the other half say, 'yes, but he can't be nominated.'"

John Kennedy—"He wants us to stop talking about matters of faith. He isn't concerned about the hereafter; but what will happen in November is driving him out of his mind."

Such commentaries are earning Sahl a pleasant fortune, but he admitted that it is sometimes an uphill fight. He faces the double jeopardy of anger and silence. The anger often comes from persons who object to his deflation of their heroes, as with his General MacArthur crack at the oscarcast a year ago. He mentioned that in the triumphant return to the Philippines, it wasn't certain whether the general would walk through or on the water.

The silence is even more disconcerting. "The problem is that only a few names get immediate recognition," the comedian complained. "If I tell a joke about Nixon or Kennedy, I get laughs right away. But I don't have much luck with Johnson or Stevenson."

Sahl has another problem that increases with his fame. That is a growing acquaintance with some of the figures he satirizes. He admits to being good friends with Stevenson; he has often met Kennedy and shares the same manager with Kennedy's brother-in-law Peter Lawford.

"It's hard to be satirical about people you know," Sahl remarked. "I may go to Chicago and meet Nixon. He probably won't know me, so he'd have no reason to be hostile. I'd probably come home and tell people, 'You know, he's a pretty nice guy.'"

Even Youngsters Are Thinking Big
DE VALLS BLUFF, Ark. (AP)— Even the youngsters think big in this central Arkansas River town.

A newsman in town to cover a county political rally stopped his car and shouted to a youth working at a nearby service station. "Where's the political rally?" he asked.

Without hesitation, Donnie Dalmaso, 14, yelled back. "Los Angeles." The newsman, thinking it might be the name of a street, asked the question again. "Los Angeles, California," came back the reassuring reply.

Tierra de Fuego, an island group at the Southern tip of South America, has an area of 18,530 square miles.

Proclaims Self Double Winner

FARGO, N. D. (AP)—A happy Republican N. Burdick (D-ND) today proclaimed himself a winner in two campaigns.

He said results from all but three precincts in Tuesday's special U. S. Senate election in North Dakota, giving him a 953 vote lead, are conclusive. "I'm elected," he said.

And he happily announced in Washington that he plans to carry Jocelyn Birch Peterson in Fargo Thursday.

The 52-year-old Democrat drew standing cheers from his House colleagues when he stepped into the House chamber Thursday. He had flown back to Washington without positive assurance he had won the election over Republican Gov. John E. Davis.

Only precincts left were three in McKenzie County in which Burdick was well ahead. Associated Press tabulations had Burdick carrying 24 counties plus McKenzie while Davis carried 28.

The State Canvassing Board meets in mid-July for an official audit of the returns.

Burdick's wife and Mrs. Peterson's husband, Kenneth, each died in 1956. Burdick has three daughters and a son; Mrs. Peterson has a daughter Leslie, 9, and a son Birch, 5. Mrs. Peterson said they will make their home here.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who campaigned for Davis, said the tightness of the race pointed up his contention that the presidential campaign will be a tough one.

Davis said if official results bear out his defeat he will retire from politics. He was a banker and rancher at McLaughlin, N. D., and a state senator before being elected to his first term in 1956.

Variations In Enforcing Speed Laws

By PHIL CORNER

RALEIGH (AP)—You're a motorist, knocking along at a merry clip on a highway. A siren sounds. You look in the mirror. And there's John.

Instinctively you pull over onto the shoulder. So does John. He gets out and walks to your side. He asks to see your driver's license.

John is a highway patrolman. If he makes out a ticket for you, what can you expect?

Well, the loss of time and probably money.

If you value either, you will be less inclined to angle again with the law of the highway.

What can a driver expect when he's caught violating safety laws?

If you are from North Carolina, in most cases you will receive a citation from the patrolman to appear at the next session of the court involved.

If you're an out-of-state resident, you can expect to be ordered to post bond, in most cases an amount higher than the fine and court costs for the offense.

The patrol itself does not handle money. Patrolmen can issue citations or take the motorist to the nearest bonding officer who sets the bond.

The patrol attempts to enforce the speed and safety laws in a disinterested, efficient manner. It succeeds in most cases, but is thwarted on occasion by legal inconsistencies from one county to another.

This is the opinion of Patrol Capt. Richard H. Chadwick, commander of newly created Troop C which covers the northeastern Piedmont area.

"Variations in the amount of fines from one area to another is one of the fallacies in the system," says Chadwick. "There is nothing uniform about it."

He said a speeder in one county may be ordered to pay $50 and costs. The same offense in another area may entail only payment of court costs.

By the same token, a speeding offense in a sparsely settled county where there is no recorder's court may have to be put off for months until the next session of Superior Court. In other counties, justices of the peace may accept guilty pleas and the motorist may go on his way.

The patrol was a staunch backer of a court and judicial reform program which was defeated by the 1959 Legislature. The patrol especially wanted a system of traffic courts established.

Generally, if a motorist does not wish to contest charges of law violations, he can:

1. Sign a justice of the peace waiver, pay the established fine and court costs and continue his journey. The waiver, in effect, enables a third party to plead guilty for him at the subsequent recorder's court trial. The fine and cost is set by the recorder's court judge. This system is not universal. It is established only in certain counties.

2. Go before a bonding officer, post bond, and be ordered to appear at a subsequent term of court or forfeit his payment. If he decides to forfeit, the driver still is liable for prosecution on the same offense.

3. If he is a North Carolina resident and is nabbed in an area where there is no waiver system, he can accept a citation to appear at the next term of recorder's or Superior Court.

If the driver wishes to contest the action, he can post bond and appear in court on the day his trial is set.

Justices of the peace cannot sit in judgment on traffic cases involving offenses for which the maximum penalty is $50 or more in fines. They can accept bond for such cases and can accept signed waivers when given authority by the recorder's court judge.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C. (AP)—

The mystery-reading public was agog in the fall of 1933 over a gruesome mystery thriller about a deranged doctor who experimented in inducing monstrous births.

The book, "The Cadaver of Gideon Wyck," reached the best seller list and sales climbed to 200,000.

One of the questions asked by the startled reviewers and readers of the macabre whodunit was, "Who wrote it?"

The title page coyly announced that the book had been written "by a medical student" and edited by Alexander Laing of Norwich, Vt.

For 27 years, the identity of the "medical student" has remained a mystery. Laing, a successful author and currently Educational Services Director at Dartmouth University, was uncommunicative about his collaborator.

Recently, however, at his home in Norwich, Laing named Fayetteville Doctor George Young McClure as his co-author.

Laing announced that he collaborated on the book with the 55-year-old McClure while the two lived in the same house at Dartmouth in the summer of 1933.

McClure, a pathologist, is chief of the Laboratory Division at the U.S. Veterans Hospital in Fayetteville. He lives here with his wife and daughter.

Laing was a poet-author Dartmouth graduate of 1925 who was working as a writer in residence at the school at the time the book came out. McClure was an instructor in biology while attending medical school.

Both men were married and shared a house in the college town. They became close friends. McClure was a member of a reading group on the campus. He enjoyed mysteries and he and Laing spent many hours discussing books.

Then, while attending a lecture by a German geneticist, he got the idea which led to the writing of "The Cadaver of Gideon Wyck." The geneticist used slides to emphasize his lecture and McClure said he noticed a fingerprint greatly enlarged by the projector.

"I thought it would be a wonderful way to catch a criminal," Dr. McClure said. Laing and I talked it over and baited the idea back and forth until we came up with a rough outline."

The publishers liked the idea of the book. But they wanted it in a hurry. McClure finished his final medical exam on June 22, 1933, and the two began work on "Gideon Wyck." They finished the first draft 12 days later.

The book was an immediate success and McClure used his share of the profits to help pay his way at McGill University in Montreal, Canada, where he had moved to continue his medical studies in 1934.

Laing and McClure collaborated on another book two years later—"The Motives of Nicholas Holtz." This was the story of a biochemist in which the creation of life out of inert matter was discussed.

"Nicholas Holtz" did not reach the same success enjoyed by the first book. But today scientists are busily trying to make the ideas presented by McClure and Laing a reality.

This month, a New York publisher, MacMillan, is bringing out a new edition of "The Cadaver of Gideon Wyck." McClure declined there was no longer any reason to keep secret his part in the book.

Laing said the idea of the book had originally come from McClure with the "weird stuff like demonology and monstrous births" his own addition.

The book is set in the medical school of a small college. The plot thickens when Dr. Wyck disappears without a trace, to be found later dead in the school's vault among the bodies used for dissection.

McClure, a native of Shamokin, Pa., moved to Fayetteville in 1956 from Decatur, Ill., where he had been in private practice.

Most of his medical career has been associated with research, particularly with polio, rabies and leukemia.

"We had an idea for a third book years ago," McClure said in an interview, "but we never got past the outline stage."

The doctor, who shies away from publicity and civic clubs, still has ideas for more books—particularly mysteries.

"I'm not a writer," the tall, ruddy-faced doctor states, positively. "Somebody else will have to do the writing."

Nixon Makes His Bid For The Baseball Vote In Philly

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—

Vice President Richard M. Nixon, touching all the bases, made a bid for the baseball vote Thursday night.

He and his wife, Pat, saw the Los Angeles Dodgers win 10-6 over the Philadelphia Phillies at Connie Mack Stadium. Nixon, who is a strong favorite to win the Republican presidential nomination, is from Whittier, Calif., not far from Los Angeles.

He and his wife attended the game after a news conference and a round of meetings with Pennsylvania GOP leaders, most of whom are backing him.

The Nixons were roundly cheered by the crowd of 20,859 attending the game. As they entered their box, next to the Phils dugout, a ballplayer named Mike Keegan presented Mrs. Nixon with a spray of roses. Mrs. Nixon put her arm around him and leaned forward to kiss his cheek, but 9-year-old Mike, a Little League shortstop, backed bashfully away.

Nixon was asked which team he thought would win. Diplomatic ally, he said that since the Phils had lost two to the Dodgers Wednesday, he thought they'd probably win. Then the Nixons, accompanied by Lt. Gen. Milton G. Baker, chairman of the Pennsylvania Nixon-for-President Committee; U.S. Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) and Mrs. Scott, and the state GOP chairman, George I. Bloom, settled down for the game.

The affair was in part a fund-raising event for Nixon's campaign. The Nixon-for-President Committee bought 10,000 tickets and resold them for $10, $50 and $100 a seat.

Earlier, Nixon met with the Pennsylvania delegation to the national convention and was warmly applauded. He is expected to capture virtually all the state's 70 votes. Among the delegates was Harold Stassen, former presidential disarmament adviser who led an ill-fated move to "dump Nixon" from the GOP ticket at the 1956 convention. Stassen and Nixon greeted each other cordially.

At his news conference Nixon warned the Democratic congressional leadership that if Congress is brought back into session after the national political conventions are over, any attempt to gain political advantage will "boomerang and backfire" upon them.

The Senate has agreed to recess Saturday and return Aug. 8, and House approval is expected when the matter comes to a vote Saturday, despite strong opposition by Republican members.

Nixon said the apparent Republican loss in the North Dakota senatorial election is a warning to the party to concentrate on getting out the vote at the precinct level in November. Democratic Rep. Quentin Burdick apparently won a narrow victory over Republican Gov. John E. Davis in a state regarded for years as a GOP stronghold.

He again defended New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's right to dissent with administration programs, but added he thought Rockefeller's criticisms were directed at methods rather than objectives. He said convention delegates should respect Rockefeller's expressed wish not to be considered for the vice presidential nomination.

On the controversial plans for medical care for the aged, Nixon said the matter should be given high priority in the next administration.

Asked if he would like Sen. Scott as his running mate, Nixon praised Scott's record highly but said it was not appropriate for him to comment now on that matter.

he wasn't a candidate but would accept the nomination. Now here it is 1960 and Truman has come out for Symington—who this time is an announced candidate. But now Mrs. Roosevelt has expressed the belief that Truman endorsed Symington merely as a "feeler" and really favors Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas.

At least Mrs. Roosevelt has been more consistent than Truman. She was for Stevenson in 1952 and in 1956 and she is for him now. Truman was a Stevenson fan only in 1952.

It's hard to imagine how a fighter like Truman—since he says health is not a factor—would or could stay away from the convention.

But maybe his Saturday explanation will raise more hell in the Democratic party than anything he could do or say at the convention. If it does, it's sure to please him plenty.

Urge Strike By Movie Extras

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Hollywood's extras should vote to strike, their directors say.

The 2,000-plus membership of the Screen Extras Guild votes on the issue July 8. H. O'Neill Shanks, executive secretary of the Guild, urged Thursday night that they vote to strike.

The producers offered a 7 1/2 cent hourly increase to extras, who make $2.05 a day—or $29.04 for those who wear costume. Shanks said the offer "is so far below that given other performers and other employees in the industry it would seem the employers are trying to foment trouble."

Rhodes, however, also became interested in the accident. He circled the block and drove to the wreck scene, where Jackson promptly arrested him. Rhodes was fined $100 and costs for drunken driving.

Theme Of Soviet Equality Going Sour In Some Places

Editor's Note—To hear the Communists tell it, the Soviet Union is a happy land where every man is your brother. But William L. Ryan, on a return visit to Moscow, found the theme of equality going sour in some places. This is the fourth of five articles.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst
Moscow University today is training the young people who will guide Soviet destinies a generation hence. And it is producing what, to many Westerners, appear to be a generation of snobs.

This applies to the students of Great Russian nationality, from the huge central Soviet state whose Russians dominate the many other nationalities making up the 15-republic Soviet Union.

Often, say foreign graduate students studying in Moscow under exchange arrangements, there is more than a little racial arrogance in the Russian student's makeup. Frequently a foreign visitor notes his Russian colleague ridiculing a Mongol or some other dark-complexioned student from Soviet Central Asia. Gossip about one incident involving a student from Africa has assumed proportions of a scandal.

The incident occurred some months ago at a university dance. Foreign students tell it this way: The Negro wanted to dance with a white Russian girl. She refused him. Later he tried to cut in while she danced with a Russian student. The Russian challenged the Negro to meet him outside. There the Negro was waylaid by a group of Russian students. The beating landed him in a hospital.

The incident may have been more of a student brawl than actual racial antagonism. But it had an effect upon other foreign students. Indeed, it affected their attitude toward the new "People's Friendship University" announced by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

This school, scheduled to open in the fall, is to be for African, Asian and Latin American students up to the age of 35. It will offer free tuition and dormitories, living allowances and free travel to and from Moscow. Plans are to open with an enrollment of 500, to be expanded to 5,000 in three years.

This school will be entirely separate from Moscow University's student body, with separate faculties and separate facilities. And it is arousing some resentment among foreign students who say they feel it will be a means of isolating them from the Russian students. Already some are calling it "Apartheid University."

About 1,500 foreign students are studying in Moscow. The great majority are from Asia and the Middle East, about 120 from black Africa. The Soviet student body numbers 14,000, including 5,000 at the university's downtown branch, Ryan in Russia No. 4—GAL 2 Alv for Pms Thurs, June 30

The Russian students seem to consider themselves a privileged class. They must be financially privileged to afford this state-run university. The living allowance for a Russian student in the first year is only 250 rubles monthly ($25 at the tourist rate). A student cannot live on that. Since the institution of working one's way through school is virtually unknown, he must get money from home.

The system appears to have produced a social group dedicated to the status quo—keeping things as they are. There seems to be little political restlessness among university students. Lives and activities are fairly well controlled by units of the Komsomols (Young Communist League).

The attitudes of Russian students have produced adverse reactions from many a student from countries in the underdeveloped world, where communism is most anxious to make an impression. One graduate American student observed that Moscow University will be sending back to that area many a confirmed young anti-Communist.

An Egyptian reports his dismay at the straitjacketed minds of the Russians. He looks on the students as young people wearing blinders, unwilling to look at outside ideas and satisfied to surrender individuality to the state.

Students from Asia, coming from families accustomed to high living standards, express shock at the low level they have noted in the U.S.S.R. Some resent Russian attempts to use them for political purposes, such as endorsements for this or that slogan or propaganda circus. Others resent what they see as the obvious aim of the "People's Friendship University"—indoctrination of young people from underdeveloped areas.

Nikita 'Mobbed' At Auto Plant

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev got the kind of welcome he likes from workers at the Fiat automobile plant today in Vienna's Communist district.

Some 3,000 workers mobbed him as he stepped from his car into the courtyard just beyond the gates of the factory. Many tried to shake his hand.

Their enthusiasm worried Soviet security chief I. S. Saharov, who warned police to control the crowd. Reinforcements were rushed to the area.

The Soviet Premier got a chill welcome on his arrival in Vienna, shook hands with several workers and asked about plant conditions. He made a speech similar to his two earlier addresses, in which he avoided name-calling.

Because of the friendliness of the audience he was a bit more forceful and the crowd responded with cheers, applause and laughter.

"Unfortunately there are countries—where aggressive forces are at work and prevent a relaxation of tension," he said. "Therefore, it is no wonder that an espionage flight was undertaken before the summit conference, preventing it."

Earlier today, Khrushchev caused a traffic jam and a confused crush in a pedestrian subway when he departed from his schedule to go handshaking.

There are some indications that educated young Russians resent the more obvious crudities of Premier Khrushchev on the world stage. Like many an average Russian, the students, too, pin their hopes for a prosperous future to better relations with the United States. Khrushchev's blasts at President Eisenhower have had little discernible effect upon the friendly attitude of the students toward Americans.

The students display a lively interest in one phase of life abroad: the West's living standards. They express eagerness for the day when they will be able to travel independently and see it for themselves. And it seems highly likely they harbor some resentments on that sort of travel restrictions on that sort of travel.

Funeral Sunday For Mrs. J. D. Ebron
Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Ebron, widow of J. D. Ebron, died at her home, 114 East Twelfth St., Friday morning after having been critically ill for the past seven weeks. She was 85 years of age.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon by the pastor, the Rev. Edward M. McLamb, assisted by the Rev. Robert B. Crawford, pastor of the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church, and burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Ebron, daughter of the late Andrew Jackson and Susan Hamilton Lupton, was born and reared in Hyde County in the Sladesville Community. She was married to Rufus Hodges Sawyer, who died in 1902. She was later married to Lewis S. Dillon, who died in 1915. Then in 1921 she was married to Mr. Ebron. She had lived in Belhaven and Bath prior to moving to Greenville in 1921. She was a member of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church and the Women's Society of Christian Service.

Surviving is one daughter, Mrs. Henry W. Martin of the home.

July 4 Weekend Rush Under Way

CHICAGO (AP)—American loaded their cars with resort gear and gear, hitched on their boat trailers and headed onto the highways today for the long July 4 weekend.

This was the second of three Saturday-Sunday-Monday holidays of the tourist season. Memorial Day weekend was the first. Labor Day will be the last.

Danger lurked for travelers in the 73 million cars that are expected to be on the road sometime during the holiday.

The National Safety Council said accidents during the Independence Day weekend could take a toll of 370 traffic deaths, or 60 more than would be counted on a non-holiday weekend of the same length.

The estimate covered the period of 78 hours from 6 p. m. today to midnight Monday, July 4. For comparative purposes The Associated Press surveyed the 78-hour period from 6 p. m. Friday, June 17, to midnight Monday, June 29, and counted 348 non-holiday traffic deaths.

Years ago fireworks were the big killer and maimer of the July 4 holiday but this hazard has dwindled to insignificance as state after state outlawed them. None was reported last year or in 1958. The largest recent fireworks toll was six in 1946.

Christian Burial Is Refused, If—

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP)—Bishop Maurice Schexnayder of Lafayette today issued an edict refusing Christian burial to Roman Catholics declared criminally negligent in fatal automobile accidents.

The bishop's ruling came as the long Fourth of July holiday weekend opened.

Catholic dogma holds that while a Christian burial is not vital to salvation, denial of such rites refuses a person of the benefit of community prayers and liturgical services.

Bishop Schexnayder's order said "the increasing number of tragic traffic accidents so prevalent in our time should be a constant reminder to all of us of the grave moral responsibilities which rest upon the shoulders of every driver."

No Grass, But He's A Winner

LAS ANIMAS, Colo. (AP)—Gilbert Martenson submitted the first entry in the Las Animas Garden Club's beautiful lawn contest.

Martenson claimed his application met every rule—freedom from weeds, freedom from disease, good condition and appearance.

His yard is all concrete and was refurbished recently with green paint.

The club's rules said nothing at all about grass.
