Latin Americans Warned They Are Most Menaced

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP)—Secretary of State Christian A. Herter will warn the Latin American nations today that they are not the United States—are most menaced by communism's attempt to infiltrate the Western Hemisphere via Cuba.

Herter, laying down a hard U.S. line toward the regime of Fidel Castro's regime, was expected to urge the foreign ministers' conference of the Organization of American States to condemn Red Chinese-Soviet threats to the hemisphere. It was not known whether he would back Argentina's plan for a special conference to chart plans for a democratic counter-offensive.

Herter's speech late this afternoon follows a new U.S. memorandum to the conference accusing Cuba of training spies and guerrillas to spread Communist revolution throughout the hemisphere.

The tough U.S. stand chilled hopes of some Latin American delegates that they could arrange some procedure to mediate differences between the United States and Fidel Castro's regime.

Stockholders OK Merger Fountain, Edgecombe Banks

FOUNTAIN—Bank of Fountain and Edgecombe Bank and Trust Co. stockholders yesterday approved a merger of the two firms.

J. M. Horton, president of the Bank of Fountain said this morning that there was no opposition among stockholders of his bank to the merger. He said 2,370 out of a possible 2,500 shares were represented at the meeting, most of them by proxy.

At the same time Edgecombe Bank and Trust Co. stockholders were approving the merger in a meeting at Tarboro.

Horton said the merger should become effective this fall. He said it will probably come up for consideration at the State Banking Commission's October meeting.

The merger united the Pitt and Edgecombe County banks to give an institution with resources totaling $7,789,000. The Edgecombe Bank and Trust Co. had resources as of June 15 of $6,659,000 while the Bank of Fountain's resources total $1,130,000.

Greenville's tobacco market opened today with full sales and prices generally running slightly higher than opening day last year.

While no tabulations were complete at noon, most observers predicted the first day's average would fall around $57 per 100 pounds — the average predicted for the Eastern Belt.

The five sets of buyers moved through the 11,000 baskets on the 10 warehouse floors. The practical top paid was $71 per hundred.

Paid out for the offerings of mostly lugs and bottom primings were prices ranging from around $25 to $71 per 100 pounds.

Yesterday's prediction by Sales Supervisor W. L. Whedbee of around one and three-quarters million pounds appeared accurate.

Growers generally appeared satisfied with the opening day sales, but several noted the absence of buyers from Export Tobacco Co.

Camera Proved Traffic Hazard

OTTAWA, Ill. (AP)—The LaSalle County community of Sheridan gave photographer James Rieser an assignment—get a picture of the intersection of State Route 71 and a backlot road which would back the community's contention it was a traffic hazard.

Rieser set up his camera Monday. A short while later two cars collided at the intersection, injuring six persons, none seriously.

Several said competition would "pick up some when they get here."

When asked if his company's buyers were on the market today, Lucian D. Bryan, manager of Export Tobacco Co. here, replied, "No."

Bryan declined to comment on when his firm's buyers would appear.

A quick spot survey showed 35 baskets of various grades sold for an average of slightly less than $60 per 100 pounds.

Included in the 35 were three baskets that brought $70 or $71. Eleven more were in the high $60's.

Scattered through the larger volume of lugs and bottom primings were baskets of second and third primings and some cigarette tobacco.

All smoking tobacco was selling at relatively higher prices. Bidding competition was keen.

A limited survey failed to discover any "turned" tickets — an indication that growers were generally satisfied with prices being offered.

Under the price support program, the Stabilization Corp. was getting only a small share of the large volume.

Prices generally were running $6 to $20 per 100 pounds above support prices.

Many observers were satisfied the local market would reach a higher average figure than was recorded last opening day.

In 1959, opening day sales paid an average of $56.16 per 100 pounds to growers.

Some growers seemed to feel common grades today were selling below 1959 opening levels.

The first sale ending today was slated for 12:13. The remaining nine were scheduled for completion at intervals throughout the afternoon.

Whedbee yesterday anticipated the usual lighter sales Wednesday and Thursday.

He felt the slackening would provide "plenty of room" for growers.

Final Farewell To Pilot Powers

MOSCOW (AP)—Barbara Powers put on a bright yellow dress today and had a farewell talk with her imprisoned husband, U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers.

They met at the Soviet Supreme Court building.

A little earlier, his parents, Oliver W. and Ida Ford Powers, spent a last sad hour with their son who has been sentenced to 10 years' detention for espionage.

Neither parents nor wife were able to speak with newsmen when they emerged. They were all obviously overcome with emotion.

When Barbara came out she shielded her face with her hand. Her mother, Mrs. Monteen Brown of Milledgeville, Ga., ran interference for her as she dashed to a limousine for the drive back to the hotel.

This was the first time since her arrival in Moscow that Barbara had worn a bright color. She did so today because her husband likes her in yellow.

Farmville Mart's Opening Average Near $57

FARMVILLE — Four full sales here today opened the 1960 tobacco market season and prices seemed headed for an average of around $57 per 100 pounds—the predicted average for the Eastern Belt.

Sales Supervisor L. A. Williams predicted the estimated 700,000-pound volume would produce an average for opening day that "will hit pretty close to 57 cents per pound."

Williams said offerings today included mostly lugs, which were "selling very good," and a considerable number of baskets of higher primings.

The sales supervisor reported a practical top of $73 per 100 pounds.

Devises Filter To 'Desalt' Water

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Two university engineers have developed a new desalting filter which they say can produce drinkable water 100 times faster than previous methods.

Sidney Loeb and Dr. Srinivasa Sourirajan of the University of California at Los Angeles said Monday that their synthetic film yields consumable water at the rate of eight gallons a day for each square foot of membrane area.

Membranes have been used before to desalt water, but the engineers say that so far such filters are too slow for commercial purposes.

Their membrane is produced by mixing cellulose acetate with a water solution of magnesium perchlorate and acetone. This sticky mixture is spread on a glass plate and, when dry, is stripped away.

It is cheap, durable and can be used 24 hours a day without maintenance or power, the engineers said. They say they have made potable water from brine containing 5.25 per cent salt concentration, which is much saltier than ordinary ocean water.

Young Camper Killed In Prank

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP)—A teen-age camper was killed when a flag pole snapped and fell on him during a prank.

Officials at Camp Owassa-Bauer said Charles J. Deval Jr., 13, of Miami was killed Monday when the pole toppled as he and three other boys were trying to recover a pair of shorts that had been hoisted to the top of the pole as a joke.

New Sub-Killer In Navy Arsenal

WASHINGTON (AP)—A new airborne sub-killer has been added to the Navy's supply of antisubmarine weapons.

It's a nuclear depth charge called "Lulu," light enough to be carried by some helicopters as well as by all planes assigned to antisubmarine warfare.

Few Overwhelmed By Leaf Prices, But Most Satisfied

By JOHNNY HUDSON
Reflector Staff Writer

A majority of farmers interviewed this morning by The Daily Reflector speculated that most of the growers on hand for the opening day of the Eastern Belt tobacco market in Greenville indicated some satisfaction with prices received.

Few of the early morning farmers visiting Greenville were overwhelmed with prices received but many ventured to predict higher prices today than the 1959 opening day when growers were paid off a total of $975,910 for 1,731,750 pounds, an average of $56.16 per 100 pounds.

Lugs and bottom primings were the chief sellers for the tobacco growers this morning in the 10 Greenville warehouses.

Gordon, Lee, farmer from Scufletton, was one of the producers expressing satisfaction with the market prices.

"It's much better than I got last year," stated Lee, "but our crop was better because there wasn't as much water."

Lee, who sold 2,300 pounds this morning at the average $56 predicted, reported he expected to harvest about 2,500 pounds per acre this summer, far above the average predicted. Lee made 2,000 per acre last season despite the rough weather conditions.

Mrs. Allan Stokes of Route 2 in Ayden was another opening day seller pleased with the price range. Her market today included lugs and tips.

A couple of Kentucky observers visiting the Stokes reported they had seen "higher prices on top grades last year than today."

Herbert Branch, local farmer from Route 2 Greenville, felt there was "a little difference" in the prices received this year and those of last summer after selling 2,200 pounds at an average of $57 per 100 pounds.

Branch, who farms about four miles east of Greenville, was convinced that crops were better and he was looking for sales to pick up later this week.

Lyman Beaman, Greene County farmer from Snow Hill, was one of the few expressing dissatisfaction over the opening day sales.

"It was a lot cheaper this year than last and our crop has been right tolerable," remarked Beaman.

Paul Dupree sold 844 pounds this morning and was satisfied with several piles but felt the price on common grade was "much cheaper" than last year.

Dupree, who farms outside of Tarboro, said he had lugs, tips, and bottom primings on the floor for today's sales.

Quality, Prices Across Belt Fail Measure Up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With indications that quality and the general price average were not up to last year's first day sales, markets of the big eastern North Carolina tobacco belt held their first auctions of the season today.

The Federal-State Market News Service estimated that the first hour of sales on several markets brought price ranges of from $51 to $55 per 100 pounds.

If this was representative of the entire belt's sales for the remainder of the day, it would produce an average well below last year's first day, when nearly 10½ million pounds brought a $56.79 average.

The news service said that during the first hour on the markets it sampled, the bulk of sales was in a range between $38 and $69 with the extreme range being from $10 for sub-standard non-descript to $71 for better lugs and primings.

The news service said it noted a few farmers rejecting the prices bid.

It reported demand was strong for fair to better quality primings and low and fair lugs but "was a little slow for other grades."

Volume was heavy and the markets sampled were reported as blocked, meaning that they would have full sales today with tobacco left over for Wednesday's sales. The principal offerings were reported as primings and non-descript.

About 5 per cent of sales were reported going to the Stabilization Corporation under the government price support program. This compared with 3 per cent last year.

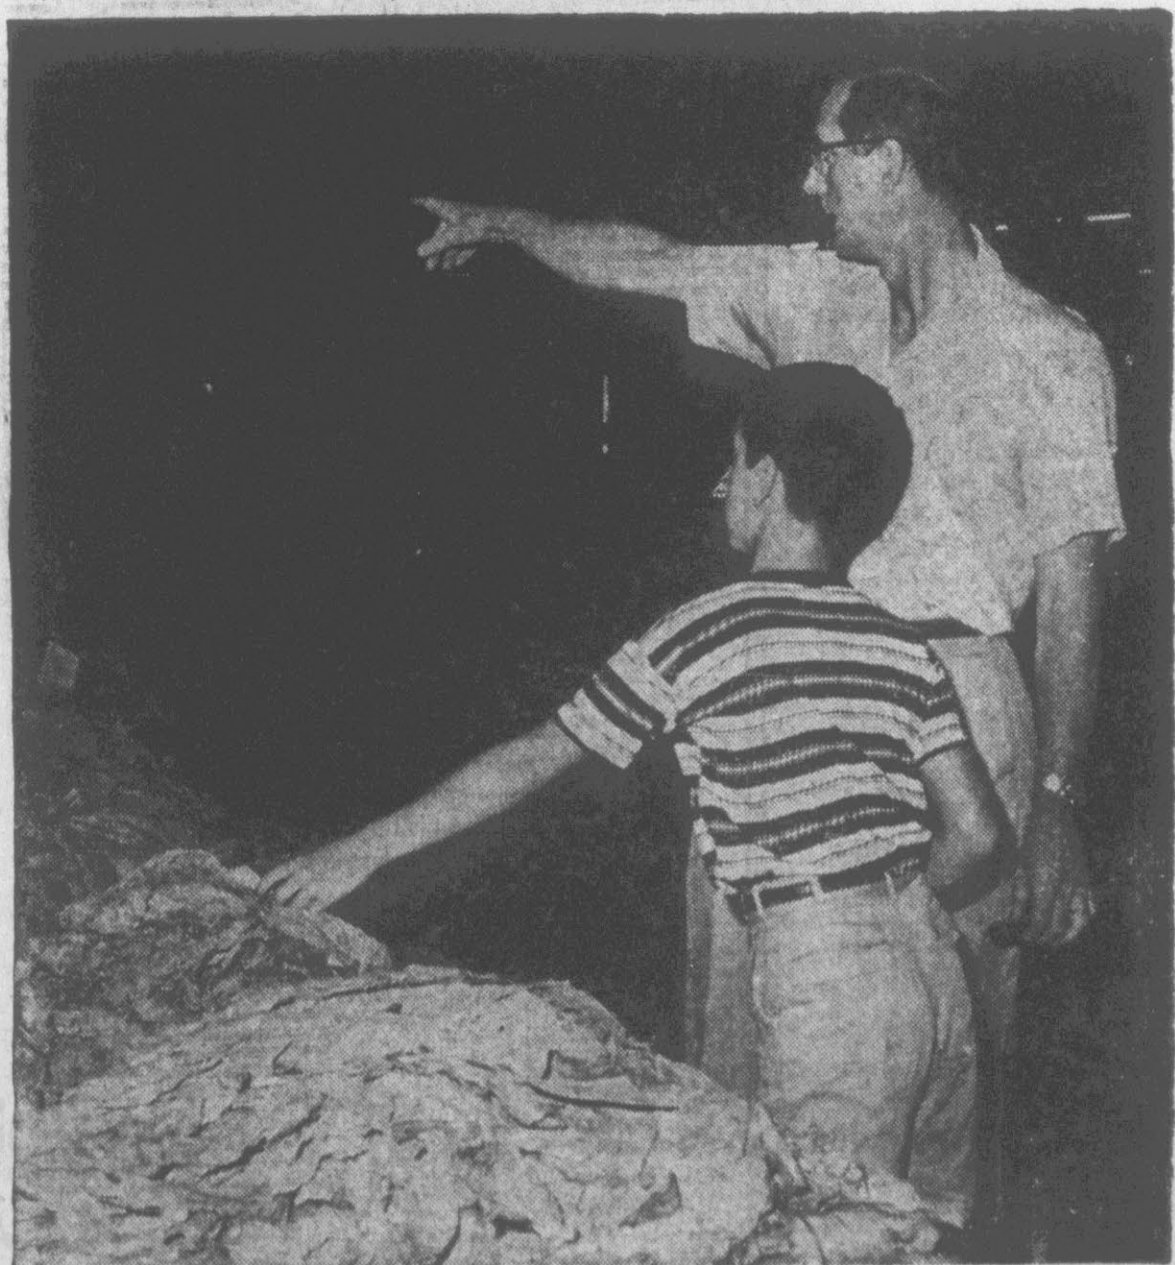

Approximate price ranges on predominating grades were reported as follows:

Leaf—low orange 60 to 67. Smoking leaf—poor variegated 55 to 60.

Primings—good lemon 64 to 70, fair lemon 60 to 66, low lemon 55 to 60, good orange 66 to 70, fair orange 56 to 67, low orange 34 to 58.

Non-descript—best thin body 20 39, substandard 10 to 13.

The Washington market reported an average for its first hour of $58.61 while a report from the big Wilson market estimated the average for the first hour was between $57.50 and $58.

Debutantes Are In A Whirlwind Of Parties

Pitt County's debs are facing up to a whirlwind of parties prior to their September 9 presentation in Raleigh.

Debutante Carol Ann Tadlock was guest of honor last night when Mrs. Stuart Shinn entertained at a dessert-bridge at her home on Elm St.

Upon arrival the honoree was presented a white cymbidium orchid.

Color scheme for the occasion was pink and white. Floating pink chrysanthemums in crystal containers were used as centerpieces for the tables. White Fuji mums were used as decorations elsewhere in the home.

The guests' places were marked with bridge talles, replicas of the debs in their ball gowns. A dessert course of strawberry parfait with fruit chews and nuts were served.

During the progressions pink lemonade in crystal brandy snifters was served with nuts and mints.

High score was won by Miss Ann Moore and Miss Grayson Waldrop, winning low.

Debs were remembered with personalized match books. A gold book charm was presented Miss Tadlock by the hostess.

Suzie Pope, Bob Thompson Are Honored

Miss Suzie Pope and Robert Thompson Jr. were honored at dinner Friday night by Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Henderson. Upon arrival the bride-elect was presented a corsage of white pom poms.

Arrangements of seasonal flowers were used in the living room and den.

The honored couple was presented silver in their chosen pattern by the hosts.

Breakfast

One of the most original parties given during this deb season was a Japanese breakfast Saturday morning honoring Miss Carol Ann Tadlock. Hostess was her sister-in-law, Mrs. C. B. Tugwell.

Guests arrived in Oriental attire. They were greeted by the honoree, her mother, Mrs. A. C. Tadlock, and the hostess.

Breakfast was served buffet style from the dining room table which had as its central motif a Japanese doll with a fan background. A miniature mum arrangement was placed on the side.

Guests found their places at low tables centered with miniature flower arrangements backed with umbrellas. They received as favors small fans and umbrellas.

Carrying out the Japanese theme, the mantel arrangement was of spider mums in a Japanese vase.

After the breakfast, Miss Tadlock was remembered with a gift from the hostess.

Mrs. Gurganus Gives Program

BETHEL—The Woman's Temperance Union met with Mrs. J. P. Harris Monday of last week.

Mrs. J. L. Gurganus, vice president, opened the meeting with prayer. The group sang "This Is My Father's World," which was followed with prayer by Mrs. M. T. Whitehurst.

Mrs. Gurganus was in charge of the devotionals and program. For her scripture she chose Psalms 104, 10-13 and Isaiah 40:28-32. The scriptures' essence was God's handwork and His nearness to us at all times.

The last two chapters of the study book "Really Living" was used for the program and dealt with sleeping pills and their danger to a patient. "Barbiturates addiction causes the addict to be a menace to society," she said.

It was stated that present day living has tension and anxieties for many, but that everyday use of drugs as a relief from these pressures seems unwise.

Mrs. Gurganus called for the reading of the minutes which were approved. The roll check found eight members present.

After a report on the flower and relief mission, adjournment was in order, and dismissal was made with the Atonic Benediction.

During the social hour, peach shortcake and salted pecans were served by the hostess.

Stuffed Picnic Rolls
1 lb. ground beef
1-4 cup chopped onion
1-4 cup tomato catsup
1-4 lb. cheese, shredded

Parents' Concern For Their First Grader Is 'Natural'

If you have a first grader starting off to school this year, you are probably asking yourself: "Will he — or she — sit still and listen to what the teacher is saying? ... What if something happens on the way to school? ... How can I be sure he will get along with the other children?"

Studies have shown that these are common causes of apprehension. Also, parents seem to be particularly anxious about whether or not their child is properly prepared for reading, having heard so much lately about Reading Readiness.

child has a new idol, his teacher. The youngster may either talk too much about his teacher or refuse to say anything at all. In either case, his mother can't help feeling a little left out, perhaps a bit resentful, too.

There are conflicting feelings to cope with: we want our children to conform where class room discipline is concerned, but we also want them to retain their individuality. One day we may decide that one particular approach to a problem is the right one ... the next day, we wonder!

When our youngster was home with us all day, these uncertainties and possible errors of judgment had a way of working themselves out. They were our own affair.

But now — there's the school to consider. What does the teacher think? And the principal? And the parents of the other children? Even the most self-assured parent may feel uneasy, at times about these new relationships.

Fortunately, some communities are taking steps to help parents through this period. For instance, suburban Wellesley, Massachusetts, for some time has been conducting a pre-school mental health clinic called the Human Relations Service. Here, children are given free check-ups and their parents are interviewed by staff members.

Parents who are fortunate enough to be able to discuss their children's problems with an understanding person find that their own tensions are thereby reduced and they are better able to help their youngsters.

Some might ask, why worry about children's readiness for school? Children have a way of Social Security Talk For Club

Greenville Optimists last night heard W. K. Whichard discuss Pitt County's Social Security Program.

Whichard, consultant for the county-sponsored program, described how the local office has operated during the past four years in aiding the county's eligible citizens in obtaining SS benefits.

He pointed out the county's annual Social Security payroll has risen from around $700,000 when the program began in 1955 to around $3 million this year.

Following his talk, he answered several questions from the club's membership. Prior to Whichard's discussion, Sec.-Treas. Pete Carraway, coach of the Optimist pennant-winning Little League entry, presented the championship trophy to the club. In the absence of Pres. Tom Money accepted the trophy for the club.

Lions Told Of Home Program

Miss Irene Beaudin, Home Industries Supervisor for North Carolina, spoke to the Greenville Lions Club last night concerning the work which her organization conducts in North Carolina.

According to Miss Beaudin, the primary work of the Home Industries Program is to help visually handicapped persons who are home-bound and not able to work at regular jobs.

These persons are given instructions and help in learning some type of handicraft which may be carried on in the home. "Our program is two-fold, Miss Beaudin said, "first we wish to occupy the time of the handicapped person and second, we are able to give that person a feeling of accomplishment. Our main aim, of course, is to help as many people as possible in North Carolina."

The speaker was accompanied by Miss Bibiane April, one of three Home Industries Counselors now employed in North Carolina. Miss April will work out of the Greenville and Wilmington offices and serve 33 counties in the eastern section of the state.

George Wilkerson presented members of the Lions with perfect attendance pins. Among those who received the awards were: Withers Harvey 21 years; O. E. Dowd, 20 years; H. B. Williams, 17 years and Vic Forrest and Bill Speight 11 years.

Winds Slow Widespread Nevada Forest Fires

RENO, Nev. (AP)—Electricity returned to western Nevada Monday night after shifting winds slowed forest fires that weary men were unable to hold. The winds also cooled debris enough to allow repairs to restore disabled power lines, re-lighting Reno and the Lake Tahoe resort area.

Reno and 14 other Nevada cities had been without power since Sunday afternoon when spectacular blazes that cracked over 70,000 acres melted power lines. Despite the restoration of power, rangers warned today that the same shifting winds could push the fires to new heights.

At Reno and Lake front gambling houses featured roulette and blackjack by light from auxiliary generators. During the 28 powerless hours, more than 90,000 persons were without electricity. A Sierra Pacific Power Co. crew worked its way through miles of ankle-deep ashes Monday to patch collapsed lines.

By 8:15 p.m. power was humming over the 120,000-volt line to the 15,000 square miles that were blacked out.

The biggest of the three major Sierra blazes, the one that knocked out Nevada electricity, was 21 miles long and 3 miles across. It was north and west of Lake Tahoe, near the California town of Truckee.

It covered some 34,000 acres of timber on private and federal lands. About 2,000 men, including 450 Navy and Marine volunteers flown in from Alameda on the San Francisco Bay, fought the blaze. The second major fire blackened 30,000 acres about 30 miles west of Lake Tahoe. It threatened Sunday the town of Foresthill in Placer County, Calif. but was staved off. A total of 32 structures were lost from other hamlets in the area.

Grimy, red-eyed crews bedded down in the Foresthill Memorial Hall before facing another day under the 9,000-foot column of smoke marking a fire front that had been racing to U.S. Highway 40 so fast fire fighters weren't even sure where it was.

Wind-wafted embers touched off minor blazes near Emigrant Gap and Blue Canyon on the highway. On a third front, 5,800 acres were blackened around the tiny town of North San Juan in Nevada County.

Right At Home In The Night Skies

It's a thought-provoking experience to stand in the darkness, looking up at a star-filled sky with your eyes pinned to a man-made satellite sailing its predetermined course through the heavens.

There are probably literally millions of people in recent evenings who have looked up at the heavens and watched Echo I gliding among the other stars. Certainly more people have seen this one satellite than any other launched by either the United States or the Soviet Union. We know the others are up there, but for the most part it has been left to the scientists to glimpse them through high-powered instruments.

With Echo I, all you have to do is step out at the right time and look in the right direction. There it is, big, bright, wending its way past the familiar constellations. What's more the scientists have provided us with a time-table, complete with directions on where to look skyward and when.

Somewhat Echo I looks right at home in the night sky, only a little larger than the other stars, brighter perhaps and moving at a perceptible rate. The startling thing is the realization that man has put it there—and we stand watching it sail its course.

It was slightly less than three years ago that man first bowed into the space age as the Soviets set their Sputnik I into orbit. Since then many satellites have been set in orbit around the earth, each accorded due attention here and abroad. Man has made in these three years strides of space progress that astounds even many of the more optimistic of a few years ago.

Looking up at Echo I, there dawns the realization that it will not be decades, but rather a year or so, maybe only a few months before man will be following the path through the star-filled night now being blazed by instruments, monkeys, mice and cats.

There also comes the question of what man will do with his conquest of space. Will he use his new-found power and dimension for building or destroying? Will the achievement of new heights prove a stepping stone for greater humanitarian efforts, or will it be the pinnacle from which man hurls himself to destruction?

Problems Before Other Colleges

By LYNN NISBET

PROBLEM CHILDREN — There was a time a few years ago when Pembroke State College and the State Teacher Training colleges for Negroes at Elizabeth City, Fayetteville and Winston-Salem, posed perplexing problems as to continued operations. They still involve problems, but of entirely different nature. The statutory restrictions were removed to permit admission of whites at Pembroke, and the curricula of the teacher training institutions were broadened to include degrees in other courses. Result has been phenomenal growth in enrollment and service, and prospects of enhanced future service. New blood and imaginative leadership on part of administrators undoubtedly had a lot to do with the progress made.

PEMBROKE — Started as a school for Indians with Federal aid, Pembroke College was advanced to status of a four-year institution—still limited to Indians, and then was opened to white students. Enrollment of about 150 six or eight years ago has increased to 457. Summer school attendance has jumped from 31 in 1955 to 300 in 1959. The 17 or 18 buildings situated on a 35 acre campus are valued at $1,250,000 on budget books. The big need is for dormitory room to accommodate students for whom classroom, laboratory and library facilities are already available. The campus admittedly was "overbuilt" in PWA days and except for dormitories and some technical equipment, can accommodate 1500. Most of the students now commute from surrounding areas—some as far as 40 miles.

ELIZABETH CITY — Elizabeth City State Teachers College, like its sister institutions at Fayetteville and Winston-Salem, retains the "Teacher" designation in its corporate name, although the curriculum retains its corporate name, although the curriculum has been broadened to include degrees in other courses. Never a big school enrollment began to decline about a decade ago under impact of the Supreme Court integration decisions and the increase in out of state tuition.

Student population is up from a low of around 300 to 563, with further increase booked for the coming term. Only about 10 per cent are from out of state, compared with 30 per cent a few years ago. The 16 or 17 major buildings are located on a tract of 35 acres in the city limits and valued at $3,470,000 by budget folks in 1958. The college owns 70 acres of farm land a mile or so away—which is a problem as to operation. Dr. Walter N. Ridley, who took over the presidency a few weeks ago, says he would like to get out of the farming, laundry and other business and devote energies to education.

Main items in the $1,520,000 asked for capital improvements are a dormitory for 150 men, a student union center and a vocational-technical classroom building. These facilities are essential if the college is to meet its obligation to the area. Dr. Ridley noted that his college is most accessible to a majority of the Negro population in the state, and that more than two-thirds of the student body comes from east of the Roanoke river. Statistics further show that a larger percentage of Negro high school graduates from that area go on to college than from any other part of the state. Further broadening of the curriculum is indicated for maximum service.

FAYETTEVILLE — Established in 1877, Fayetteville State Teachers College is oldest of the Negro colleges, and antedates all State institutions of higher education except the University at Chapel Hill. It is located on a 92-acre tract in the city of Fayetteville, with buildings and contents carried on budget books at $3,000,000. Enrollment has fluctuated less than at some other colleges, and in recent years has steadily increased. The 1959-60 roster was 643, highest on record, with more than 700 expected next term.

In moving out from the specific function of teacher training, this college went into the field of terminal courses in technological subjects.

The college is asking for $889,000 for new classrooms, laboratory equipment, improvements to dining hall and campus grounds. Dr. Rudolf Jones, in his second year as president, reminded budget folks he was not asking for dormitories. "I want to fill the dormitories we've got with students who can read and write before asking for more," he said. He emphasized, too, the priority importance of classroom and laboratory facilities over student unions and playgrounds.

Whether or not the budget folks will approve the request, some of which have been rejected before, they obviously liked Dr. Jones' attitude on relative importance of needs.

WINSTON-SALEM — Winston-Salem Teachers College is the only State-supported institution with no indication in its corporate name of such connection. Situated on a 55-acre tract in the city of Winston-Salem the buildings have a budget value of $4,380,000. Current requests of $530,500 are for renovations and modernization of existing facilities. The budget folks did not respond kindly to report that the college had taken steps to implement an appropriation of 1959 for a self-liquidating dormitory. Apparently the college hoped the State would pick up the whole check, and therefore had not applied for a Federal loan. The budgeteers made it clear that responsibility for delay and possible failure in getting the loan rested squarely on the college administration.

Emphasis here is divided between training elementary school teachers and the nursing school. The college offers a degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing after a full four-year course. Relations with local hospitals for bedside training is excellent, and larger facilities will be available next term with opening up of the old city hospital to such purpose.

Should Soon Increase Diploma Requirements

Pitt County's Board of Education should as soon as possible initiate steps to bring the number of units required for graduation from schools in the county system up to the 18 recommended by the State Board of Education.

Even before the State Board of Education made its recommendation that high schools of the state require 18 units for graduation, a number of school systems, including Greenville City Schools had indicated their intention to increase the number of units required for graduation.

While the state requirement for graduation is 16 units of high school study, Pitt County schools presently require one additional unit, or 17 for graduation.

It is in the interest of the county's school system and the youngsters of Pitt that the school requirements are above rather than below those recommended by the state. In the past Pitt County has gained the reputation for an outstanding school system. The County Board of Education should see that the reputation is not jeopardized now by reluctance to increase the number of units required for graduation.

Naturally it will take some time for the Board of Education and school officials to work out details of requiring an additional unit for graduation, and to put the new system into effect, however, this should be done with all deliberate speed.

When the County Board of Education convenes for its regular monthly meeting in September, we trust the green light will be given to carry out the necessary changes in the school program to increase the graduation requirements to 18 units.

Nixon Walking In Egg Factory

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon compared with Sen. John F. Kennedy, his Democratic rival for the presidency—is like a man walking in an egg factory.

Kennedy is free to complain about President Eisenhower's leadership—or lack of it—and blame the Republican administration for mistakes at home and abroad. Not Nixon, even if he wanted to.

As the Republican candidate Nixon can't afford to repudiate either the President or his administration or to antagonize Republicans.

Yet his campaign strategy is to try to sell himself rather than the Republican brand of government or even the Eisenhower brand.

How then can he project an image of himself different from Eisenhower and the acts and attitudes of the Eisenhower administration without appearing to criticize?

He is doing it bit by bit, nevertheless, on civil rights, defense spending, foreign policy, a farm program.

Eisenhower has been criticized for not asserting more leadership in the field of civil rights, Nixon, without criticizing the President, says that as president he would take the initiative and urge his cabinet to do so to find solutions.

Democrats and others have criticized the record of the Eisenhower administration. Nixon, again avoiding criticism, says the record of the administration is not something to stand on but to build on.

Eisenhower has insisted defense spending was sufficiently high. The Democrats have contended the administration has not been doing enough to keep ahead of the Russians.

Nixon moved beyond Eisenhower's position by accepting New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's view that the defense program should be stepped up.

For seven years Eisenhower has backed up Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, with whom a lot of farmers are unhappy. Nixon has avoided any direct criticism of the administration's farm program.

Yet he has made it clear he doesn't go along with Eisenhower and Benson on the farm problem. He says he considers it essential to get away from the "rigid positions of the last seven and make a break through the stalemate."

For years Democrats have pounded on Eisenhower for not assuming a far more active personal role in the conduct of foreign affairs, particularly during the lifetime of the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

Probably more than any president in history Eisenhower relied on his secretary of state—Dulles, that is—for handling foreign policy.

Nixon, very much aware of the criticism against Eisenhower in this field, meets it by saying that if elected he will exercise more direct control than does Eisenhower.

He said his views do not involve criticism of the Eisenhower administration but that "the situation has changed."

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

GETTING TERMS MIXED-UP People often scoff at Puritanism. This has become a hatred word in recent years. People who insist that self-discipline is a necessary factor in life are often called puritanical. In many circles, common decency is considered a puritanical notion. Only recently I heard a man say, "Oh, this idea about certain things being right and other things being wrong is just a puritanical idea."

One of the greatest mistakes people make is hurling the term "puritanical" at people who take a strong stand against drinking. Total abstinence, as such people are called, are usually referred to as being puritanical in their stand.

The truth of the matter is that the original Puritans were anything but total abstainers. They drank about as much liquor as everybody else in that day did. They abhorred drunkenness, but they did not advise complete abstinence from any kind of alcoholic liquor. The truth of the matter is that they were the great rum makers of their day and many a Puritan became rich as the result of the rum trade.

What is being said is not an attempt to justify drinking. But it needs to be pointed out that we should refrain from slinging the word puritanical around, especially if we have not the faintest idea what it means.

Puritanism was one of the greatest religious movements in world history. It had weaknesses, but its good points and its good influence surpassed everything in the system that was wrong.

Oh, There He Is—

By ALVIN TAYLOR

Has Watched Port Grow

WILMINGTON—In 31 years as a member of the Board of Navigation for the Cape Fear River Louis A. Hanson has seen the number of ships coming into the river docks rise from 22 to more than 700 annually.

Hanson, president and owner of Spiritline Chemical Co. here, heads the commission who provides the pilots to take huge ocean going vessels into the Ports of Wilmington and Southport and occasionally further up the river to Fayetteville.

The Board of Navigation, of which Hanson is now chairman, was formed in 1921 by special act of the State Legislature and Hanson was appointed a member in 1929. The Wilmington native has been chairman for the past 22 years.

Seven full-time pilots work under the direction of the Board of Navigation. It is their job to see that the big cargo ships make their way safely up the river.

When the pilot takes over the ship he is "boss," according to Hanson.

"When he takes a boat up the river he is responsible for it," the chairman says of the pilot, "although the skipper is on the bridge with him."

Pilots are commissioned by the Board of Navigation but they also have to be licensed by the federal government and the state before they qualify for the job. The pilots grew up on the river and know its every crook and turn, according to the chairman.

Other Editors Saying . . . The Better Way

(Richmond News-Leader)

This brief protest summarizes what many Americans have been thinking recently about their free political processes:

"Both (party) conventions have demonstrated clearly that the nation must find some other way to nominate its candidates for the presidency. Both spectacles were ridiculous." — Letter to the editor of NEWS-WEEK, August 15.

A public brought up to rever the processes of free government may be excused for asking, if there is not "some other way," why not a better way? A carnival, after all, is hardly the place to select a presidential candidate.

The question of a better way is not new. The ridiculous spectacle of the national convention has been periodically deplored, even before television when the chaotic sham and the cynical maneuvering of the conventions were more sensed than observed. But a hard truth about the convention system is that it is itself a "better way." By the time it had come into being the electoral college system had been proved inadequate to accommodate all of the political pressures that enter into the making of party platforms and the selection of candidates. The caucus system had been too narrow to allow room for all of the party maneuvering necessary to bring opposing planks and candidates into harmony for the election.

The presidential primary that followed in the wake of the great political reforms of the first Wilson administration has been an unsatisfactory substitute. Under it the raw politics of bloc manipulation have become rarer, if anything. The people have had no more direct hand in choosing the candidate than they had before, and nothing has been added in the way of order or dignity to the selections.

Where else, just to cite an example or two from the conventions just held, could a Kennedy-Johnson accommodation be made? Where else could the popularity of a Stevenson find such tremendous expression? Where else could a Barry Goldwater and a Nelson Rockefeller stand smiling beside a Nixon? Where a Hoover or an Eisenhower be free to exert his weight so directly? And to recall an insignificant incident from a disgruntled delegate cast his vote for Joe Smith, and so register this political protest?

The convention system, however it may have been perverted recently, is the most satisfactory kind of heat found yet to produce the amalgam of political substance. And at times it fails to produce a strong metal, or if it seems to produce even a base product, that is not the system's fault. It is the strength or weakness within the party that comes through after the accommodations have been made and all the ingredients have been welded together into a form that is the truest image of the party possible to get.

"We've got a wonderful bunch of fellows," he says of his men. "We never have any trouble."

The state board holds monthly meetings to take up various matters pertaining to navigation of the river. Records of incoming ships are read to the commission at this time.

Last year the pilots handled over 700 ships and this year they are averaging over 60 ships a month. This is a far cry from the 22 ships which came up the Cape Fear during Hanson's first year on the board.

The pilots handle a great number of oil tankers. Many oil companies have terminals in the vicinity of Wilmington and oil products are brought in by ship.

The big tankers run 520 to 600 feet in length and draw 32 feet of water. The largest yet handled on the Cape Fear was a 620 foot tanker with an 89 foot beam and drawing 33 feet of water. Since the channel is 34 feet this is about as large as could be accommodated.

However, even larger tankers are now being built and Hanson says a move is underway to have the Army Corps of Engineers deepen the channel to 36 feet.

Hanson, though born in Wilmington, can claim 17 years army service dating back to World War I days and eight years in the Coast Guard. He was in charge of the reserve during World War II. He was on active duty with the Coast Guard for three years and held the rank of lieutenant commander.

Hanson is in business with his son, Richard B. Hanson, who now runs the Spiritline Chemical Co.

Rights We All Enjoy

By GEORGE E. SOROKIN
Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

I have a letter from a correspondent who writes:

"The phrase secondary, second rate, persons or citizens is a Communist phrase and only used by those who consider it useful in attempts to gain privileges as a group. Please explain to me why we need Civil Rights to protect individual rights that we already have?"

The phrase, secondary or second rate persons or citizens is not a Communist phrase. It is not an anti-Communist phrase. It is descriptive of a condition, namely, that a person is a citizen by constitutional prerogative but is deprived of some rights or advantages of citizenship by environmental conditions.

The term is not used as my correspondent from Maryland says it is in the quoted sentence. It is used descriptively where no other adjectives apply precisely. As to the conflict between the terms Civil Rights and Individual Rights, my correspondent must know that whereas the Constitution protects the individual in his natural rights as defined by the Amendments to the Constitution, those provisions are implemented by legislation generally referred to as Civil Rights. Often the legislation is of a local character; nevertheless it is essential. Without such implementation, the provisions in the Constitution would be like the Ten Commandments, broad and noble in their expression but not applicable without legislative provisions say against murder, burglary and adultery.

My correspondent says further:

"It may seem unfair for an employer to refuse employment to a person because of race, color, or creed, but if we are going to abide by our Constitution, you are denying this individual the very right you propose for some one else. If the Negro (sic) and Jew are made happy in the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness, are you not denying this employer the same pursuit and protection under law?"

Quite true. Every time a law is passed extending and enlarging human rights, it restricts the privileges of those who enjoyed special advantages. This was so, for instance, when monarchies were abolished and republics were established. The monarchs and the nobility lost their advantages and privileges and a larger and different group of people got them. The National Labor Relations Act which benefited the labor unions, developed a new power in American affairs and lessened the power of great capitalists and industrialists.

Of course, the individual must enjoy the right to employ anyone he chooses and to reject anyone he chooses. He may not like to employ Negroes or Jews or red-headed typists. But suppose the Negroes and the Jews and all red-headed persons band together and boycott the employer who exercises his prerogatives. This is a question then as to who suffers most—the unemployed or the boycotted?

Each is within his rights. The employer who hires red-headed employees ought not to be forced to employ them, but if the red-headed do not care to buy his products, they cannot be forced to buy them. That is why so many chain stores capitulate to the sit-ins. I fear my correspondent has not thought this problem out. Perhaps 20,000,000 human beings are included in her excludable groups; it is a very large number of consumers.

My correspondent apparently suffers from an inferiority complex. She says:

"Discrimination is as natural in this world as night following day or vice versa. I have two Jewish friends who to me are as close and valuable in my affections as my family. We have common interest, mutual affection, and faith in each other. I take me into their social lives among their other friends and I definitely would become a misfit and I am sure

Japan Gains In Electronics Field

By ELMER ROESSNER

The Japanese, in their battle for a large share of the United States electronics market, have succeeded in dividing their adversaries.

The Japanese, as everyone knows, have been making electronic components cheaper than American manufacturers and, some say, making them better.

Last year the Japanese sent in more than 4,000,000 transistor radios with three or more transistors, plus 500,000 tubes. They undersold American-made components because their wage rates are from 12 to 16 cents an hour while American rates are $2 and more an hour—and constantly ascending. Some users say that Japanese transistors are better made than the American kind.

Four giant American manufacturers of electronic equipment—apparently working on the old political theory that if you can't lick 'em join 'em—are buying Japanese transistors and other components for their own radios and other electronic equipment.

FIGHTING CHEAPER IMPORTS

However, other manufacturers are resisting Japanese imports. They are led by Ross D. Siragusa, Admiral president, and are refusing to use any but American components. His cartoons carry the legend, "Made by American craftsmen with guaranteed quality American components." RCA and Zenith are using similar slogans. However, General Electric, Motorola, Emerson, Bulova and others are using Japanese components and therefore cannot boast of complete American workmanship.

Statistics show how the Japanese occupy the market. In the first quarter of this year, imports of electronic devices were almost double in the same period a year ago, and in some categories the rise was even higher. Shipments of receiving tubes were up 383 per cent above the same period in 1959 and shipments of transistor were 1,084 per cent above the first three months of 1959.

LOW BIDS ALLEGED

Mr. Siragusa has charged, in addition, that Japanese manufacturers have slyly obscured the source of their goods. One company has announced the "Americana" brand of radios; another has adopted the slogan, "Acceptance Built on Integrity," on a large photo of the Mt. Rushmore monument showing the chiseled heads of Washington, Jefferson, Teddy Roosevelt and Lincoln.

He added that Japan has captured 32.5 per cent of the American electronic market, and that this has resulted in considerable unemployment in American industrial centers. He demands that the United States limit Japanese imports.

There are complications. Some American electronic manufacturers want to see a volume of Japanese imports, as a warning to union employees not to demand too much. They like to be in the position of resisting a strike with low-cost substitute components.

There is an even broader factor.

Japan is one of America's best customers. It consistently buys much more here than it sells.

Restricting Japanese imports simply restricts the money the Japanese can earn here. Without sales of transistors—or soy sauce or any other Japanese exports you can think of—Japanese income is cut and purchases here must be reduced. Barring Japanese transistors might make thousands of new jobs in U.S. plants. At the same time, it would end many more jobs in industries now selling to Japan freely.

DEPARTMENT STORE SALES UP; GAINS AND LOSSES ARE SMALL

Department store sales through the first half of the year were 3 per cent above the first half of 1959, according to Federal Reserve figures.

Few departments showed much more than average gains, although silverware and jewelry were up 7 per cent, and canned music supplies were up 34 per cent. Losses were few with linens sales down 5 per cent which may only show that shoppers want the soft feel of wool under their feet as they listen to hi-fi.

Admires Courage, Doubts Wisdom Of Nixon Decision To Invade South

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) said today he admires the courage but doubts the political wisdom of Vice President Richard M. Nixon's decision to speak in the Deep South.

Nixon announced Monday he will talk in Birmingham, Ala., and Atlanta, Ga., Friday after a speech Wednesday at the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in Detroit, Mich.

Jackson, the Democratic national chairman, said he suspects Nixon may have some hopes of causing elector trouble for Sen.

John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, the Democratic presidential nominee.

"I am confident we will carry Georgia and Alabama," Jackson said. "If we can't carry those two states we're out of business. I don't think Mr. Nixon is going to get any electoral votes there, but maybe he's thinking he will cause some trouble for us."

Georgia voters will decide at a primary Sept. 14 whether they want their 12 electors pledged to the Democratic ticket or free to withhold their support. If not pledged, the electors could vote

Movement Is Growing In Church To Abandon Latin

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP RELIGION WRITER

NEW YORK (AP) — A movement is gathering strength in the Roman Catholic Church today for it to hold worship services in the language of the people instead of ancient Latin.

Such a change, in part, already has been authorized in some countries, and support for it is developing among American Catholic leaders.

It would be "the greatest contribution to the advance of the kingdom of God on earth" in centuries, says the Rev. John A. O'Brien, of the University of Notre Dame.

The subject is likely to come up for discussion at the annual

North American Liturgical Week Conference opening today in Pittsburgh.

In advance of the meeting, Father O'Brien and the Rev. John LaFarge, New York Jesuit scholar, writing in the Catholic Weekly, America, trace the growing sentiment for a return to use of the native tongue.

"I see no immediate prospect for reversing the anti-Latin trend," Father LaFarge says.

Father O'Brien says that greater use of vernacular languages in the Mass, the administration of the sacraments and all the liturgy is "the most urgent need of the Church in all countries of the world today."

The "basic cause of the apathy" in Sunday congregations, he says, "is undoubtedly the exclusive use of Latin, even in those parts of the Mass which call for the active participation of the faithful."

"With the exception of the few who try with a missal (English rendering of the Mass) to keep pace with the celebrant, the congregation sits in bored silence with little sense of union with what is being done by the celebrant."

In early Christianity, worship was in the indigenous language, Jesus and his apostles themselves used the regional Aramaic.

Orthodox churches and Eastern rite Catholics, as well as Protestants, have always used the speech of their countries. Latin came into use in the Roman rite when Latin was a living language.

Although it is long dead in popular usage, the Roman Church kept it for expressing its doctrines and liturgy as a safeguard against evolving meanings of popular language.

However, in Germany, Africa, Austria, Holland, the Middle East and elsewhere, various concessions have been authorized for use of local speech. Some experimental services of this sort have been held in this country.

Broad modifications here would likely necessitate a request from American bishops.

Pope John XXIII, following tentative steps by other popes, has promised efforts to "make more widespread the use of the language of the people in public religious ceremonies."

Father LaFarge said he saw "great merit in keeping certain parts of the Mass, such as the canon, in tact from change," but saw little reason for keeping all of it that way.

Harriman Meets With Menshikov

WASHINGTON (AP)—W. Averell Harriman talked for two hours with Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov, but said later "there was no political significance to anything that was said."

Harriman, former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, said Menshikov invited him in Monday night to see the embassy and to chat, with no attempt at discussing any serious problems.

Harriman said he told Menshikov he should inform Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev that Kennedy would be the next president of the United States, and to make his plans accordingly.

Harriman came to Washington for a State Department briefing. He leaves tonight on a three-week fact finding tour of western Africa on behalf of Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic presidential nominee.

Judge Blasts Jury's Sentence

CHICAGO (AP) — A jury reduced a grand larceny charge against an ex-convict to petty larceny Monday and sentenced him to 60 days in jail.

The light sentence drew a burst of laughter from the defendant and a blast from Judge Jacob M. Braude who told the jury the sentence was "distasteful."

"Go home and stay home," he said, "you are not fit to be a jury."

Then he turned to the defendant, Donald Spearman, 24, and sentenced him to an additional 60 days for contempt of court. Spearman was charged with stealing dresses from a store in suburban Evanston.

Lightning Bolt Kills 3 Mules

Three mules were killed when lightning struck a tree on a farm near the intersection of N.C. 11 and the new bypass yesterday afternoon.

The animals were owned by J. O. Whichard. He said the mules were killed when lightning hit a pecan tree in a pasture behind his house.

Whichard said he was in his home during the storm. "Two real sharp lightning flashes came together," he stated. Whichard said he thought no more about it for a time but about 6 o'clock someone came to his house and told him the three mules had been struck by lightning.

The farm operator said he found no signs of life in the three animals when he examined them. The lightning left a scar on the pecan tree where it tore the bark off.

Whichard said there were two more mules in the pasture. They were uninjured.

Tiny Baby Girl Found By Road, Dies In Hospital

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A tiny baby girl, found by a road gang convict cutting weeds off busy Wilkinson Boulevard near here, gasped out her life Monday night in a hospital incubator.

Police had no clue as to the parents of the day-old child.

A member of the six-man road gang saw the baby squirming in the sunlight and shouted, "Here's a baby, and it's moving."

An ambulance rushed her to the hospital. Doctors said she was premature, weighed about a pound and a half, and "even under the best of conditions her chances wouldn't have been good."

Death came 8½ hours after the baby was found. It had lain in the grass apparently since Sunday night.

A couple who live near the site said they saw a car stop there Sunday night and a man and two women get out.

Hopes To Join Castro's Forces

HAVANA (AP)—A dishonorably discharged U.S. Air Force sergeant who once tried to defect to the Soviet Union said today the Cuban air force is considering his application for a job in Fidel Castro's intelligence service.

Paul D. Wilson, 31, of Indianapolis, Ind., said Castro's secretary, Juan D. Ortiz, wired him the air force would get in touch with him.

Wilson told newsmen Monday he hoped to join Castro as a "loyal Cuban patriot."

Wilson said he was in the U.S. Air Force 12 years and tried to defect to the Soviet Union while serving in Germany but was caught by U.S. military police. He subsequently was sentenced to three years in prison and a dishonorable discharge for desertion, larceny and forgery. He was freed after serving part of his term in a federal prison in the United States.

His former wife, Loyce Sims, and two children, Ralph 8, and Paula, 4, live in Indianapolis. His mother lives in North Miami Beach, Fla.

Another new defector from the United States, Polish-born U.S. Army Specialist 5th class Vladimir Sloboda, "had lost a lot of money gambling" and had been very depressed, according to the British wife he left in Frankfurt, Germany, with their three children.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia announced Sloboda had crossed into East Germany and asked for asylum in the Soviet Union. He had been a U.S. citizen for only two years.

A U.S. Army spokesman said Sloboda, 33, although attached to a military intelligence unit at Frankfurt, served as a linguist and clerk and had "only very limited access to any security information."

BOMBS EXPLODE

I have never experienced this. I have friends who are of all nationalities, including Chinese and Japanese, and with some I am on terms of intimacy. I have friends who are Roman Catholics, all varieties of Protestants, several kinds of Jews, Buddhists, and even atheists, but I do not find that nationality or religion prevents human beings from being close friends. In fact, these days, they even intermarry and live happy lives ever after. It is a pity if anyone permits small things to make big differences.

There are those who like to live that way, but they do not know what they are missing by living narrow, ghetto lives.

Track And Cage Teams On Scene

ROME (AP)—Two of America's potential world-beating teams — track and basketball — arrive today on an Olympic Games scene churning with concern and expectancy.

Uncle Sam's tracksters and basketballers came belatedly from impressive exhibitions in Switzerland to join a powerful United States squad which hopes to spill the Soviet Union in the run for Olympic gold medals.

On two fronts, United States track was sent booming.

On a third front, Nationalist China continued to object against its terminology as Taiwan in the games starting Thursday.

Enhancing the chances of the high-voltage American swimming squad was a report that a dozen Australian swimmers, including the famed John and Rose Konrads, were hit by inflammation of the eyes in practice.

In a meeting of the International Olympic Committee, it was predicted Chicago's Avery Brundage would be re-elected president of the IOC, despite reported pressure favoring England's Lord Burghley for the top spot in international amateur sports.

The Aussies suffering a painful eye complaint—diagnosed as conjunctivitis—were ordered to take a two-day rest. That complicated their polishing off for the start of the swimming competition on Friday. This bolstered chances of the American splashes.

The IOC Monday decided to elect its president for a four-year term instead of the usual eight-year term, eliminating any restriction on the number of terms a man may serve. This paved the way for reelection of Brundage.

Otto Mayer, Swiss chancellor of the IOC said the American's selection was "a certainty."

The IOC decided—after a day-long debate—that Nationalist China may enter an Olympic entry under the name of the "Olympic Committee of the Republic of China," but must compete as "Taiwan," its geographical location.

In other action, the IOC: Added judo to its program of recognized sports.

Set a minimum of 18 sports on an Olympic program.

Tabled a motion by the Soviet Union that seven new women's sports be added to the Olympic program, specifically volleyball, archery, basketball, cycling, handball, rowing and shooting.

Accepted a proposal by the Soviet Union that no slogan or political matter of any kind may be permitted on Olympic uniforms or banners.

Martin May File Counter-Suit Against Brewer

CHICAGO (AP)—Brawling Billy Martin, the scrappy Cincinnati second-baseman who Monday was sued for $1,040,000 by the Chicago Cubs and rookie pitcher Jim Brewer, could be contemplating a counter-suit.

Martin indicated there was the possibility of a counter-suit after he was served with a notice shortly before Monday's game between the Redlegs and the Cubs at Wrigley Field.

The action stems from a brawl Aug. 4 in which Martin slugged Brewer, charging that the Cub pitcher was throwing at his head.

The Cubs and Brewer, who has been hospitalized since being punched, are asking $250,000 each in actual damages and an additional $250,000 each in punitive damages.

Brewer, a 22-year-old from Broken Arrow, Okla., has had two operations involving the orbital bone of his right eye. Physicians say he is out for this year and that he is to stay away from all athletic activity during the winter which also means he cannot referee basketball this year.

Martin's first remark after being served with the notice was: "I wonder if they want this in cash or by check."

Later he indicated the possibility of a counter-suit, claiming that Brewer and the Cubs had endangered his career "because Brewer was throwing at my head. I have no doubt of that."

The complaint, filed in circuit court of Cook County, said Brewer suffered a loss in the opportunity to engage in professional baseball and therefore lost great earning power, has suffered bodily harm requiring hospitalization and other extensive medical expense.

The club charges it has lost the valuable services of the pitcher for an indeterminate length of time and has suffered loss in its training, development and future services.

Following the battle in which other players were involved, Martin was suspended five days and fined $500 by National League President Warren Giles.

Play opens at 6:30 p.m. at Freedom Park with Fayetteville meeting Grover and at 6:45 p.m. with Kannapolis playing Valdese. Both games are in the losers bracket of the double-elimination event.

The defending champion, Southern Motors of High Point, plays Raleigh at 7:45 p.m. Rounding out the schedule Burlington meets Charlotte's City Savings, Winston-Salem plays Canton and the Flamingo Drive Inn of Charlotte meets Reliable Manufacturing of High Point.

In games Monday night, Southern Motors of High Point won 5-2 over Valdese. Burlington nipped Hickory 2-1, Winston-Salem whipped Kannapolis 4-2, Raleigh beat Grover 6-2 and Charlotte City Savings shutout Wilmington 2-0. The Flamingo Drive Inn of Charlotte won by forfeit from Greenville.

If Chisox Are To Capture Flag, Now Is Time To Go

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer
If the Chicago White Sox are going to nail their second straight American League pennant, the time is now, starting with tonight's opener of a two-game series in New York against the first place Yankees.

The White Sox are tied with Baltimore for second place, 1½ games behind the Yankees—who have nothing but a week of worries ahead.

With the western clubs making their last swing through the east, forgotten rain outs now come back to haunt the Yanks. The pitching-weak leaders play eight games in six days, with three consecutive doubleheaders looming ahead.

After a run-in with southpaw Billy Pierce and right-hander Early Wynn, two old pros running hot for the White Sox, the Yankees have a day off Thursday, then play a two-night pair with Cleveland Friday, an afternoon doubleheader with the Indians on Saturday and a Sunday twinnbill with Detroit.

While the Yankees are seeing double, the White Sox have a chance to go-go. After their two swipes at New York, the Sox go to Boston for two, then play two at Baltimore. The Orioles have three games with Detroit and two with Kansas City before the White Sox play at Baltimore Sunday and Monday.

The AL had a day off Monday. In the National League Los Angeles defeated San Francisco 8-5, and the Chicago Cubs rapped Cincinnati 6-3 in the only games scheduled.

Manager Al Lopez of the White Sox hasn't decided between Pierce (12-7) and Wynn (9-8) for tonight's opener against the Yankees, who have a 10-8 season edge over the champs. Both Pierce and Wynn have won two in a row.

Each has won five of his last six decisions.

Manager Casey Stengel, looking for pitching help for his Yankees, but only able to pick up a pinch-hitter in Dale Long, has tabbed right-hander Eli Grba (3-1) to face the White Sox tonight.

Right-hander Art Diltmar (12-7), the Yanks' top winner, goes in Wednesday's afternoon game.

Long, the one-time Pittsburgh thumper who set a record by hitting a home run in eight consecutive games in 1956, came to the Yankees from San Francisco of the NL for $30,000. The Yanks hope the move will match the August 1949, deal with the Giants that brought them Johnny Mize and a pennant. Long, purchased to perk up the Yankees' pinch-hitting — currently below .200 — batted .167 with the Giants.

As a would-be starting pitcher, Larry Sherry is a loser everytime he wins.

The young right-hander simply has proved too valuable in relief for the Los Angeles Dodgers to get a real shot as a starter. At the moment, he is their top winner, collecting his 13th victory, with 7 1-3 innings of three-hit relief Monday night as the Dodgers came from behind to beat San Francisco 8-5.

It was Sherry's fifth straight success, all in relief. With two saves, he has accounted for seven of the Dodgers' last 11 victories in their bid to get rolling in the National League race.

With the top three clubs idle, the fourth-place Dodgers picked up a half-game, but still trail first-place Pittsburgh by 8½. They are .003 percentage points behind third-place St. Louis.

In the only other game Monday the Chicago Cubs whipped Cincinnati 6-3. The Cubs also handed Billy Martin, the Reds' second baseman, a $1,040,000 damage suit in the August 4 fracas that sidelined pitcher Jim Brewer with a broken cheek.

The Dodgers, trailing 4-2 after the Giants got rid of starter Don Drysdale in the second inning, took over with three runs in the third against loser Stu Miller, then counted the winning run in the fourth as Norm Larker singled for his third RBI. Larker, 3-for-4 in the Dodgers' 10-hit attack, padded his league leading average to .349.

Gil Hodges homered for the final Dodger run in the seventh. It was his seventh of the season, the 352nd of his career. That broke a tie with Ralph Kiner as the NL's all-time champ among right-handed hitters.

Felipe Alou drove in three runs with a pair of singles for San Francisco, but Sherry, who has lost eight, shut off the Giants on one run the rest of the way. Willie Mays, second to Larker at .330 brought it in with a sixth-inning home run, his 26th.

Sherry is 12-6 in relief after a brief early season shot as a starter.

The Cubs beat the Reds and Cal McLish (4-9) with four runs in the first inning. Three were earned. Don Zimmer, who drove in three runs with a triple and double, and rookie Ron Santo, who had two doubles and a single, combined for five RBI. Bob Anderson (7-7) was the winning pitcher, but needed relief help.

Found: One TV Actor Uncertain Over Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—This is the time of the year when television's top performers drumming up audiences for shows which will come along in a month or two, are all singing the same tunes.
This weary reporter who has been hearing the theme constantly for almost three weeks, knows the words by heart. "I'm really terribly excited about the show. We have awfully talented writers, and we're really getting great production values and it's—well, different."
Therefore, it was almost an overwhelming experience to meet a worried middle-aged man in theatrical makeup, who while hurriedly bolting scrambled eggs and bacon during a noon work break, confessed:
"We've finished two shows of the series, and I've seen them. I don't know whether they're good or not. And I probably won't know until the first audience ratings come in after the show starts—or until the secretary of somebody important stops speaking to me."

The forthright actor is Tom Ewell, a professional who after 24 years in the business finally saw his name go up on the marquee of the Broadway Theatre seven years ago in "Seven Year Itch."
It took a long time to make his theatrical fortune, but since then Ewell apparently has been able to do no wrong. He has been starred in a string of motion pictures and recently left the cast of another smash Broadway hit, "A Thurbur Carnival" to come to Hollywood for his new series.
It is called "The Tom Ewell Show," and is due to start on CBS late in September.
"It's a situation comedy," he continued dubiously. "And there are about 18 others around. Television comedy is completely different from stage comedy and from motion picture comedy. It's the pressure of time. There's no room for second guessing."
Ewell says he is primarily interested in doing a TV series, not for the financial rewards, but "because an actor to survive must be diversified."
"You've got to keep on the move, you must reach a larger audience," he amplified. "Besides, it's harder to hit a moving target. Anyway, I'm hoping."

Judge Causes Wedding Delay

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—Police Court Judge Clarence Denning has caused a postponement of wedding plans for Mildred Story, 43.
Mrs. Story, brought into court Monday on a charge of drunkenness, pleaded: "Just give me one more chance, judge. I'm going to get married. He's a good guy."
The judge took a grim view of the matter when he was advised Mrs. Story has a record of more than two dozen arrests on drunkenness and morals charges.
"I'm going to do that man a favor," he said. "I'm going to sentence you to 30 days in jail and fine you $50."

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP)—City Recorder John I. Rice fined two men $25.50 each for stealing tires—spare tires from used cars they took to try out.
College fraternities are almost as old as the United States. The first, Phi Beta Kappa, was founded Dec. 5, 1776 at William and Mary College in Virginia.

Montana Given Look At Winter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Freezing weather, with strong winds, snow and rain, gave Montana a preview of winter today.
The cold front spread throughout the state, dropping temperatures below freezing in the Helena area. Snow and rain pelted Butte.
Temperatures generally were in the 40s in most of Montana, with rain in many sections. The mercury dropped to 50 at Billings after Monday's high of 90 degrees. Thunderstorms swept the southeast part of the state, with wind gusts of 52 m.p.h. at Miles City and 48 m.p.h. in northern Wyoming.
The thunderstorms and strong winds extended into the Dakotas and Nebraska. The mercury soared above 100 in the Dakotas Monday with 105 at Dickinson, N.D., and 104 at Philip, S.D.
Generally mild weather was the rule elsewhere.

Ingrid Discloses Roberto Bitter

NEW YORK (AP)—Ingrid Bergman says intense bitterness has developed with her former husband, Roberto Rossellini, over custody of their three children.
In an interview in Redbook magazine, the thrice-married actress said: "Only after I married again did this thing become a matter of real hatred and vengeance—a man so open and warm and generous suddenly becomes full of vengeance and tries to hit you. This has been going on for 18 months and has been very unpleasant."
Although Miss Bergman was allowed to keep the three children when she and Italian movie-maker Rossellini broke up in 1957, he began contesting the plan just before her marriage to Lars Schmidt in 1958. The issue has been in Italian and French courts since.
The children are Robertino, 10, and the twins, Isabella and Ingrid, 8.
Miss Bergman's first husband, Dr. Peter Lindstrom, kept custody of their daughter, Pia. That marriage broke up after Miss Bergman became involved in her sensational affair with Rossellini in 1949.
In 1957 Rossellini went to India and became involved with Sonali Das Gupta, the wife of an Indian movie maker.
Of her marriage to Schmidt, she said: "With Lars I've gone back to my old self, but in a different way. I just want to be with him. I like to be with him. I have no yearning to see people or be entertained or get away. Suddenly you want someone like Lars in your life and that is all you want."

Went 'Blind' Before Wreck

BROWNWOOD, Tex. (AP)—Seconds before the car she was driving plunged down a steep embankment, Mrs. J. B. Aldridge, 42, told her daughters: "I've gone stone blind."
She and a daughter, Barbara Alice, 16, died when the car fell into Blanket Creek, 11 miles east of here Monday night.
Another daughter, Shirley, 15, told of her mother's statement.

Commies And Leftists Pouring Into Congo

By LYNN HEINZLERING
LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Communists and "anti-imperialists" of uncertain doctrinal background are pouring into Leopoldville.
Hardly a day passes without one of the Soviet planes unloading disheveled visitors of vaguely Slavic appearance.
Soviet Ambassador M. D. Yakovlev has rented an embassy on a street named after the hated Belgian colonialist Leopold II and he will have no trouble staffing it.
It is only a short distance from the Czech Embassy, which has been in business here as a consulate for months.
If Premier Patrice Lumumba, as he threatens, turns to one of the Communist states for "disinterested assistance" he won't have to turn very far.
Lumumba's office has begun to look like a Communist reading room. His written statements, correspondence, and radio orations, have acquired a polished French flavor unusual in a nation with 16 college graduates, only one of whom is in Lumumba's Cabinet.

Most revealing of all, correspondents for Soviet and other Communist journals have turned up in surprising numbers. There is even a correspondent from the Soviet literary publication, Literary Gazette.
One of the new journalistic arrivals has been showing around in a booklet entitled "Hands Off the Congo." It presumably is being distributed among the Congolese population, about 20 per cent of whom can read. It contains most of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's speeches concerning the Congo, up to and including one on Aug. 8.

Sunday, 25 Czechs arrived. They were described as embassy staff. The Czechs were reported preparing to supply the Congo the hundreds of French-speaking teachers it requires to open the schools next month.
The U.S. Air Force brought a good number of Communist-infiltrated persons when it flew in Guinea's soldiers a few weeks ago. Each company had its political commissar.

Gen. Lansamas Diane, who became a general only the night before he left for the Congo, took off his uniform soon after arrival and now is a civilian adviser to Lumumba and the government. It is believed that a good many other Guinea U.N. soldiers have become civilian advisers.
Another prominent figure in Lumumba's entourage is Mrs. Andre Blouin, who was expelled from the Congo by Belgian authorities, before independence, for her left-wing activities. She is chief of protocol and takes a hand in writing scripts with a distinct anti-Western bias for the Congolese radio.

Juke Box Is Harmonizing International Relations

ROME (AP)—The blare of a juke box is harmonizing international relations in the Olympic Village.
The social heart of the sprawling, modernistic athletic encampment is the recreation hall.
The "club" is filled with comfortable chairs and sofas, and ringed with soft drink and candy booths, but the joint doesn't start to jump until somebody slips a coin into the juke box.
Then such choices of world music lovers as "Daddy Cool," "Crazy Baby," "Gunfight at the OK Corral," and "disintegrator" (coming apart) ring out and the boys and girls from all nations begin tapping their feet.

Flash Flood In Central N.C. Force Families Flee Homes

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP)—Rains continued to fall early today on a soaked Randolph County as this central North Carolina area is tried to pull itself from under a flash flood that sent a number of families from their homes late Monday.
The Asheboro Police Department said North Carolina highway 49 was closed between here and Charlotte to the south. The department said that the southern half of the county was feeling the most severe effects of the flash flood that swept through the area.
Authorities also said U.S. 220—the main road between Asheboro and Greensboro—was still closed to traffic early today.
A few cars were washed into creeks and the rain-swollen Uwharrie River late Monday. Although they were still trying to recover the cars, officers said they knew of no one trapped in any of the vehicles.

Two hard rain storms—shortly after 4 p.m. and about 6:45 p.m.—struck Randolph County. About a dozen families in the Cedar Falls community of Deep River east of Asheboro fled their homes for higher grounds. They reported that water reached depths of 6-8 inches on the floors of some of the dwellings before it started to recede.
The homes which were evacuated were located along the Deep River. Residents of the area said a similar flood struck the small town in the early 1940s.
Much of the overflow barreled out of Haskins Creek, a normally quiet little stream about four miles north of Asheboro. At one time it covered U.S. 220 for a stretch of five miles.

A dam, which backed up water in a lake sprawling over 20 to 30 acres, cracked from the additional water. When the dam gave way, tons of water rushed up a rural road, covered a truck 30 feet deep. Three passengers in the truck quickly fled to safety, the last swimming from the vehicle after rescuers got two safely out.
The Guilford Rescue Squad—consisting of Randolph and neighboring Guilford County rescuers—spent most of its time checking to see if residents got to safety. An official of the squad reported little in the way of actual rescues were needed as most residents quickly got to safety.
Several bridges in the county were reported washed away.

Jobholders Are Safe, Say GOP

RALEIGH (AP)—A couple of top Tar Heel Republicans have emphasized that state employees performing satisfactorily need not fear for their jobs if a GOP governor is elected this fall.
Their statement was in answer to a leaflet distributed Monday to about 30,000 state workers proclaiming in effect, that their jobs could depend on a Democratic victory.
Republican gubernatorial nominee Robert Gavin said workers doing their jobs well "will remain... they can feel secure."
He said the leaflets "indicate fear and desperation on the part of my opponents who are doing everything possible to frighten and coerce state employees into voting for the Democratic ticket."

New Step To Delay Integrating

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—The Houston board of education has taken another step in its attempt to delay integration of Houston's public schools.
School attorney Joe Reynolds asked the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans Monday for a stay of U.S. Dist. Judge Ben Connally's order to integrate the first grade next month. The city has the largest segregated school system in the nation.
The board has appealed Connally's order to the court and Reynolds asked for a stay in case the court does not rule on the appeal before school starts Sept. 7.

At 103, She Is Hoping To Fly

SOMERSET, Pa. (AP)—Martha Gorsuch celebrated her 103rd birthday today with the hope that she still might get her first chance to fly in an airplane.
"Lately, all I do is watch TV and go for rides in automobiles," she said at her home in this central Pennsylvania town. "I've never flown in a plane, but I'd like to."
Mrs. Gorsuch, born in 1857 at nearby Hexabarger, is one of the few who still draw a Civil War widow's pension.

A Stirring Western Suspense Novel

The Lean Rider by CLIFF FARRELL

CHAPTER 10

Abel Barbee came walking down the room toward Lisa Randolph. He was glaring fiercely at her as though he wanted to pluck the truth right out of her. "Why didn't you tell us before that you saw a rider leaving O'Hara House?" he demanded.

He was either a good actor and had been prepared for this, or Hester Barbee had withheld from him the knowledge of sighting that retreating rider. His surprise seemed genuine.

"Hold on, Abel!" Clem Temple protested. "I'm doing the questioning. Now, young lady, are you plumb positive you saw this person?"

There was skepticism in the man's voice. Lisa, shocked, realized she felt that she was lying. She looked at the staring faces. Suddenly she knew! They were of the opinion that she had murdered Frank O'Hara herself. That caused her to partly rise, gazing around in angry challenge.

"Anything wrong, lady?" Clem Temple asked.

Neither Temple, nor any of the other four men on the panel would meet her eyes. "Any reason we shouldn't?" Temple asked.

Lisa again inspected the onlookers. "I don't care what you think," she said grimly.

They excused her. She started to leave the room, but heard them call Abel Barbee. She halted and found a seat in the back-ground.

Abel didn't wait to be questioned. Nor did he bother to take the witness chair. He remained on his feet. "Here's what I know," he said. "I was with the herd when I saw O'Hara House on fire. I came across Miss Randolph running up the trail. She told me something had happened to Frank. She keeled over."

"Got any idea who did it, Abel?" Temple asked hesitantly. "If I did I wouldn't be wasting time here," Abel said.

There was wariness in Temple's tone. "You and Frank had a fight the day before yesterday."

Abel's voice was casual. "Yeah. An' yesterday, I was wearing a shirt o' the kind Miss Randolph jest described. Blue an' white check."

From the rear of the room Matthew Barbee spoke clearly. "So was I."

Matthew added casually, "Miss Randolph can verify that."

Nobody said anything for a time. Or even moved. Clem Temple sighed, breaking the silence. "I reckon there's no harm in wearin' a checked shirt. That'll be all, Abel."

Abel walked down the room through that silence. He gave Lisa a brief look and she saw in him a deep and lingering question. It was as though she held for him the solution to a problem so elusive that it angered him.

Nobody else was gazing directly at him. They're afraid of him, Lisa thought. Some believe I killed Frank O'Hara, others are sure it was he, but they haven't the courage to accuse him. They will accuse me.

The verdict was returned swiftly and informally after a whispered conference among Temple and his panel. "Looks like Frank was shot by a person or persons unknown," Clem Temple announced. "Leastwise that's the way it stands right now, 'til more evidence turns up."

Lisa glanced around. Matthew stood near the door. He had a shoulder canted against the wall. He had removed his coat. The breath drove sharply back into Lisa. Matthew wore a brace of holstered six-shooters. So did Paul Drexel.

Hester also sat in the room among the crowd. She wore black taffeta and a black-veiled bonnet in respect to the dead. She was rigid of body, her lips tight. Lisa noted the pallor in her face -- and the determination.

As surely as though she could see the weapon, she knew that Hester also was armed. The Barbees had come here prepared to overawe or resist any attempt to arrest Abel or Matthew for Frank O'Hara's murder.

The gathering broke up. A rush began to escape from the confinement of the room. Micah Jones came to her side as she walked into the ranch yard.

Another man moved up. He was Kemp Travis, of the roan-colored sideburns. "Good afternoon, Miss Randolph," he said, removing his hat. "You remember me, I trust?"

"Of course, Mr. Travis. It was only yesterday that we met, wasn't it? That seems a long time ago."

Travis smiled. "Things have happened, or maybe were pushed into happening."

He gave Micah a look, and Micah found matters elsewhere that drew him out of earshot.

"A lot of people think Abel killed Frank," said Travis.

"And some believe I did it," Lisa remarked.

He eyed her quizzically. "I hardly expected you to say that. However, I like people who are frank."

"Which do you believe is the guilty one?" Lisa asked. "Abel Barbee or myself?"

Travis laughed softly. "The more I come to know you, the more you interest me." He drew a cigar from a case, asked her permission with an inquiring glance, clipped its end and lighted it. "What are your plans for the future, Elizabeth?"

"I'm taking the eastbound stage out of San Ysidro tomorrow. I will go back to Illinois, I imagine."

"And then...?"

"Why, I'll...?" Lisa's voice drifted off.

Travis's knowing smile appeared again. "Exactly. What then? You came here to escape from something. There's no returning. You know that."

Lisa stood silent. He was right. Hester Barbee had voiced the same thought. She could not go back.

"There's no need for it, anyway," Travis said. "I'm a bachelor. I own cattle and range--considerably more than any other man in the San Ysidro. Like the rest, I've not done too well financially lately. That's changing. I'll be back on my feet before another winter. In a few years I'll be rich. I need a wife. A lady. A lady with breeding to run my household. A wife like you."

"You can't be serious!" Lisa exclaimed.

"Deeply serious. I'm asking you to marry me."

Lisa frowned, touched by a sudden resentment. He saw this and laid a hand on her arm. "What's wrong with that? You came here to marry O'Hara, almost sight unseen. You thought you were marrying well. Now you have a real chance."

"Thank you," Lisa said.

He eyed her frowningly. "For what?"

"For letting me see myself as others see me. I'm not a lady, after all."

He laughed. "Marrying for money is hardly a sin."

"There's a little more to it than that," Lisa said.

She turned and walked away. He overtook her long enough to say, "You'll look at it my way after you think it over. You're a sensible person."

Lyricist Oscar Hammerstein II Dies Of Illness

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP)—Oscar Hammerstein II, whose magic lyrics have brought laughter and tears to Americans for 40 years, died of stomach cancer today at the age of 65.

His death at his beloved country home of Highland Farms, far from the glitter of Broadway, ended one of the brightest careers in theatrical history.

The big gentle man who penned the words of such songs as "O! Man River," "Who?" "The Last Time I Saw Paris," "When I Grow Too Old to Dream," "Only Make Believe," "Some Enchanted Evening," and "June Is Bustin' Out All Over," died shortly after midnight.

His lyrical gift helped fashion a brilliant string of musical shows that have become popular classics, from "Rose Marie," "The Desert Song," and "Show Boat," down through "Oklahoma," "South Pacific," "The King and I," and currently the Broadway smash "The Sound of Music."

Since his collaboration with composer Richard Rodgers in 1922, the names of the two men have become a theatrical tradition.

Asked once what he deemed the most profound change in modern musical theater, song writer Cole Porter, a musical giant in his own right, replied: "Rodgers and Hammerstein."

There first effort was "Oklahoma!" When the curtain rose on that show in March 1943, it took Broadway by storm.

Critics and drama historians alike hailed it as a turning point in theater, a fresh integrated production that kicked traditional musicals into the discard.

"Oklahoma!" ran on Broadway for five years and nine weeks—an all-time record for a musical. It became something of a folklore itself and inspired a new school and musical shows.

While "Oklahoma!" ran its successful course, Rodgers and Hammerstein turned their hand to other shows.

By 1960 eight more musicals had been created, nearly all of them major triumphs, including "Carousel," "Allegro," "Me and Juliet," "Pipe Dream," and "Flower Drum Song."

Hammerstein continued to work all though plagued by the growing pains of cancer. Early this month those close to him knew he could not last much longer.

At his bedside when he died at 12:20 a.m. were a nurse and two doctors. In a room nearby were his wife, Dorothy, his daughter, Mrs. Philip Mathias, and his sons, William and James. He had been in a coma since Monday evening.

A few months ago Rodgers recalled his first meeting with Hammerstein.

"I looked up at him in awe," said Rodgers, "and I have to tell you that I still do."

Long before the two men set their talents together, Hammerstein had written for more than 40 musical shows and films.

He started by doing a play in 1920. Soon after he developed into a lyricist, writing words for the music of virtually every major composer -- Rudolph Friml, Sigmund Romberg, Jerome Kern, Vincent Youmans and George Gershwin.

The poetry that poured from him for more than a thousand songs touched the core of Americans. Hammerstein was an unabashed sentimentalist and made no bones about it.

"I know the world is filled with trouble and many injustices," he once said. "But reality is as beautiful as it is ugly. I think it is just as important to sing about beautiful mornings as it is to talk about slums. I just couldn't write anything without hope in it."

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market spurted today in the wake of a lowering in the basic interest rate charged by leading commercial banks. Trading was moderate early this afternoon.

Four Arrested After Accident

Four Negroes were arrested for being drunk yesterday following a wreck at Ballard's Cross Roads which caused heavy damage to two vehicles.

Patrolman D. L. Minshew who investigated the collision charged Willie Columbus Edwards of Route 3, Snow Hill with driving drunk, operating a vehicle with no operators license, and failure to yield the right of way as a result of his investigation.

According to the officer, the Edwards vehicle collided with a log truck driven by Leslie Lee Brigham, 37-year-old Negro of 808 Campbell St., Kinston.

Minshew said Edwards, 25, was headed south on the Bell Arthur Road at Ballard's and pulled into the path of the oncoming truck, which was traveling East on U.S. 264.

Minshew noted that Patrolman J. B. Surles who assisted him in the investigation, charged Edwards' two brothers, James, 44, of Route 3, Snow Hill and Richard, 27, of Route 2, Snow Hill, with public drunkenness.

Minshew noted that Willie Edwards' wife, Viola Edwards, 20, was also charged with public drunkenness, and both she and Lena Mae Edwards, 25, wife of one of the other Edwards, were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital to be checked. They were not admitted.

Damage to the truck was estimated to be about $200 while officers said the 1950 model car was a total loss.

Nearly An Inch Of Rainfall Here

Rainfall for the 24 hour period ending at midnight totalled nine-tenths of an inch, Greenville Utilities weather observers reported.

The precipitation was due to a severe rainstorm which struck this area around 5:30 yesterday afternoon. The storm brought a drop in temperatures as overcast skies remained today.

The Utilities commission reported yesterday's high was 92 degrees while the low for the day was 74 degrees. At noon today the thermometer had risen to only 82 degrees.

Wind was out of the southwest at three to five miles per hour and the barometer stood at 29.65. The Tar River level was 3.8 feet.

Seeks Advisory Group On Congo

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld pressed ahead today with plans for a committee of nations to advise on operation of the 15,000-man force serving under the U. N. banner in the Congo.

Hammarskjöld's task in the Congo was eased—for the time being at least—by Premier Patrice Lumumba's withdrawal of demands for U. N. aid to whip secessionist Katanga into line.

Hammarskjöld had decided his position would be less vulnerable if he formed the advisory group, a procedure he found successful in directing the U. N. Emergency Force in Palestine. The advisers will be from the nations whose soldiers are in the U. N. Congo Command.

Lumumba backed down after all but the two Communist members of the Security Council on Sunday endorsed the secretary-general's refusal to let the U. N. force become involved in the Congo's internal political troubles.

It was a pointed rejection of Lumumba's demand that U. N. forces be used to put the central Congo government in control of rich Katanga province, whose Premier Moise Tshombe is leading a move to make the Congo a loosely organized federation of semiautonomous provinces.

Lumumba changed his tune after a three-hour conference with the Soviet ambassador to the Congo, Mikhail D. Yakovlev.

The government "sees no reason to press its demands," said a spokesman for Lumumba, adding a seemingly face-saving comment that "the government is satisfied that Belgian soldiers will be withdrawn" and "considers the atmosphere good."

Boy Struck By Car Here Monday

A nine-year-old Negro boy received cuts and bruises on his right shoulder and side yesterday when he was struck by a car at the intersection of Pitt and 12th Sts. about 10:08 a.m.

Investigating police, who identified the youth as Ronnie Lee Harris, said the driver of the car was William R. Smith, 40-year-old Negro of 508 Bonner's Lane. No address was given for young Harris. Police said the youth ran from the side of the street into the path of the car. He was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released. No charges were placed.

Jaycees Launch City's Promotional Campaign

Jaycees today began the job of contacting merchants and professional men for contributions to the "You'll Get More In Greenville" campaign.

Members of the club received cards for contacting of individual merchants at a kick-off breakfast this morning.

Goal for the drive is $7,500 and the funds will be used for newspaper, radio and television advertising during the year long campaign.

"You'll Get More In Greenville" campaign is being sponsored by the Greenville Merchants' Association. The present campaign is to begin this fall and will continue until next fall. It is a campaign to advertise and promote Greenville as a shopping, banking, educational, medical and insurance center.

The Jaycees this morning heard from William Deavors, chairman of the Merchants Association Trade Promotion Committee. They also received instructions from

Max Ray Joyner and Douglas Allen, co-chairman of the project

Jaycee President George Coffman said today that the project was approved by the club's board of directors and its general membership. "The Jaycees call on the merchants many times for assistance," the club president said. "This time the merchants are calling on us to help them with something which we are delighted to do."

Coffman said all the merchants have been contacted previously by letter and in a general meeting concerning the drive for funds. Now it is up to the Jaycees to contact the merchants and pick up the contributions.

Candidate Kennedy Meets With N.C. Newsmen

SEN. KENNEDY AND EASTERN TAR HEELS—Among the Eastern North Carolinians at Sen. Kennedy's conference in Washington, D. C. yesterday was this group (left to right): Bill Futrell, Ashley B. Futrell, Washington; Paul Dickerman, Wilson; Tom Lassiter, Smithfield; Sen. Kennedy; Charles Horne, Greenville; Mayor Tom Stewart, Washington; Robert MacKenzie Jr., Washington; and Dave Whitchard, Greenville. (Photo by Seth Muse)

Kennedy Answers Long Barrage Of Tar Heels Queries

WASHINGTON—Smiling Sen. John F. Kennedy faced several scores of Tar Heel newsmen for almost two hours yesterday without faltering as he answered a barrage of questions ranging from foreign policy to religion, from the agricultural program to integration.

The unique Washington press conference was attended by newspaper, television and radio newsmen from all sections of the state as well as members of the North Carolina delegation in Congress and a smattering of political leaders and other guests.

Kennedy, who announced he would visit North Carolina in a campaign swing September 17, told his audience the itinerary for the Tar Heel visit has not been completed. A member of the liaison team working with the state and national campaign committees said later, however, that Greenville is being considered for one of the stops for Kennedy in this state. The youthful Democratic presidential nominee held the unique news conference and luncheon in the old Supreme Court chamber in the capital. It was the first news conference held by Sen. Kennedy for newsmen from one state, and at the outset he made it clear he wanted questions from the Tar Heel group. Veteran capitol hill reporters who were also present at the conference listened to Kennedy and the Tar Heel questions.

N. C. "Critical State"

Sen. Kennedy termed North Carolina "critical state" in the November election and asserted, "I believe we will carry North Carolina once the people of your state realize their huge investment in the Democratic party." He said the Democratic party will help the people who work in the tobacco and textile industries in North Carolina and he pledged his support to improving the textile industry and the agricultural program.

He said he favors an agricultural program for other farm commodities modeled on the tobacco program to bring supply and demand for farm commodities into balance. He added he likewise favors rigid price supports if supply and demand are in line. Elaborating on the question concerning the agricultural program, Sen. Kennedy said he had discussed with Chairman Harold Cooley the possibility of introducing legislation to bring price supports back to their 1956 level, but decided such legislation would be useless as long as the Republicans controlled the administration.

Standing Ovation

Sen. Kennedy brought a standing ovation from newsmen as he handled a question on the bearing his religion will have on the votes he gets.

"I am confident the people of North Carolina are fair and I hope no one will make his decision to vote for or against me on a matter so irrelevant as that. I can't believe that in 1960 the people of the United States will say I can't be President because I go to the church I go to. When I was elected to the House I took an oath to uphold the constitution of the United States. I took a similar oath as a naval officer, during World War II and when I became a member of the Senate. I don't believe the people will say 'you can't be President because we don't trust you.'"

Reminded that North Carolina had a right-to-work law and that the Democratic platform pledged to work for repeal of such state laws, Sen. Kennedy said he stands on the whole Democratic platform. He reminded reporters that a similar pledge has been in each Democratic platform since 1948, but so far there has been no federal legislation to repeal state right-to-work laws.

State's Integration Approach
Asked about North Carolina's limited approach to integration, Sen. Kennedy asserted, "The progress North Carolina has made in this field has been most helpful. It has helped build the reputation of North Carolina and I think North Carolina will continue a program of granting equal rights to all Americans."

On federal spending, the presidential nominee insisted the Democratic platform did not call for deficit spending or increasing taxes. He said a balanced budget is essential and that by increasing the level of the nation's economy present tax levies would provide sufficient revenues to carry out the programs called for in the platform without increasing taxes.

While the press conference was in progress, the Senate was debating the matter of medical aid for the aged and Sen. Kennedy had to interrupt the conference to answer the signal for a roll call vote in the Senate. He returned a few minutes later and continued to mingle with the newsmen answering questions and commenting on issues put before him.

Vice Presidential nominee Sen. Lyndon Johnson spoke briefly to the reporters at the outset of the conference and expressed his appreciation for the Tar Heel support he received at the national convention. He cited the need for improving the agricultural economy of the nation and said a Democratic administration to work with the Democratic Congress would permit such a program to be carried out.

Sen. Kennedy was introduced by Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., who asserted Kennedy is "a man of complete intellectual honesty" and a man of "great physical, moral and political courage."

Kennedy Aide Says Visit To Greenville Considered

By DAVID J. WHITCHARD
Reflector Editor

Will the Democratic presidential nominee visit Greenville when he makes a trip to North Carolina in September?

A member of the liaison committee working between the state and national campaign organizations approached a Greenville newsmen during the conference in Washington yesterday with the question, "How would the folks down there like to have Sen. Kennedy visit them for a half hour or so?"

Assured that Greenville would be delighted to be selected as one of the places Sen. Kennedy will visit during the Tar Heel swing, the liaison man followed with questions about the seating capacity at the East Carolina College stadium and other facilities.

"We're considering having Kennedy down there," he commented as he moved away through the jammed conference room.

According to veteran political observers, Sen. Kennedy would be the first presidential candidate to schedule a campaign whistle stop east of Raleigh if he decides to come to Greenville to deliver an address. Most agreed the heavy Democratic vote in the eastern part of the state will be vital to the party's success in the national election this year, and that a visit to the East by Kennedy would create considerable added enthusiasm for getting out a big Democratic vote in the east in November.

Plans for Kennedy's swing through North Carolina apparently have not been finalized and the matter of selecting points for his stops is still to be decided. Charlotte and Asheville, however, are understood to be at least two of his stops.

The affable, young and smiling Democratic nominee obviously made a hit with Tar Heel newsmen yesterday as he moved among them during the lengthy conference. He asked no quarter from the newsmen who seemed intent on toying him difficult questions.

School Schedule

The schedule for the opening of Greenville City Schools has been announced as follows:

1. All children except first graders report Tuesday morning, Aug. 30, at 9 o'clock for the purpose of being assigned rooms and securing textbooks. Tuesday's session will last until around 10:30 a.m.

All first grade pupils report at 2 p.m. to their respective buildings the same date.

2. Wednesday, Aug. 31, will be a full school day beginning at 8:30 a.m. Lunchrooms will be open.

3. Pupils were assigned to their respective buildings on June 1.

4. New pupils may register through Monday. New students cannot be registered Tuesday morning.

5. At all schools the pupils will assemble in the auditoriums first. There they will be assigned to their particular rooms.

At one point in the conference he asked with a smile, "How about an easy one now?" The candidate, dressed in a blue suit with a faint stripe, conducted a portion of his news conference from the bench where the U.S. Supreme Court sat for 75 years prior to 1935. He wore a subdued red and blue tie and his familiar shock of hair assumed a slightly reddish tint under the TV camera lights.

After returning to the conference from answering a roll call vote in the Senate, Sen. Kennedy moved around the crowded room answering questions for groups of newsmen that knotted around him.

During the conference Sen. Kennedy showed little strain from the crowded campaign schedule he has followed since the Democratic convention in Los Angeles. He appeared calm, and yet answered questions forcefully.

He told the newsmen he had called the conference for North Carolina newspaper, television and radio representatives because North Carolina is a critical state in the forthcoming election. It was the first and only meeting of its kind with representatives from a single state he said. Obviously pleased with the response, Kennedy intimated others of a similar nature may follow if the campaign schedule permitted.

TOLL OF THE SEA

MANILA (AP)—The Philippine Constabulary today reported 11 persons were killed in two separate sea accidents south of Manila during the last 24 hours.

But Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.), a former Republican national chairman, said tartly "this was a vote of no confidence in Kennedy's leadership. Sen. Kennedy has failed to unite and lead his party."

They said the increase in the public assistance grants was so attractive they did not want to jeopardize enactment of the bill. They said the administration previously had opposed such increases but now was supporting them in order to beat down the Social Security medical care plan.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.), Democratic national chairman, promptly announced the Democrats would seek to make a major issue of the plan in the campaign.

Not a single Democrat voted for it. Five Republicans and 62 Democrats said no.

Several Democrats who deserted Kennedy on this issue agreed with his analysis that the threat of an Eisenhower veto was responsible for rejection of the Social

Greenville Tobacco Mart Opens Season With $55.49 Average; $1 Million Day

Greenville's tobacco market yesterday began its 73rd season by chalking up its first million-dollar opening day and posting a sales average of $55.49 per 100 pounds.

The 10 local sales paid farmers a total of $1,040,425.38 for 1,874,876 pounds of the golden weed.

The $55.49 average fell $1.50 below the $56.99 per 100 pounds reported today by the Federal-State

Marketing News Service in Wilson. Sales Supervisor W. L. Whedbee indicated this morning growers were generally satisfied with prices being offered.

"We had a damned good average for what we had on the floor," he said.

Whedbee pointed out yesterday's sales saw "a high percentage of sunbaked lugs, damaged tobacco and low-graded primings" offered to buyers.

The sales supervisor said sales "advanced sharply yesterday afternoon and are continuing high this morning." He said sales today were light.

He forecast an increased volume tomorrow and a greater increase for Friday's sales.

Quality of tobacco on the floor today and for the remainder of the week, he said, will probably "change very little."

Yesterday's opening average was 67 cents per 100 pounds below the first day's sales figure of $56.16 a year ago. Poundage, however, and total growers' receipts jumped from 1959's 1,731,750 and $975,910, respectively.

While the sales average recorded here was near the bottom of the list of the Eastern Belt's 17 markets, Greenville marked up more pounds sold and more total receipts than any market on the belt.

Wilson's market, with $1,013,426 paid to growers, had the only other million-dollar day. That market sold 1,801,506 pounds for a $56.25 average.

Greenville's average ran ahead of only three belt markets: Kingston ($55.48), Robertsonville ($55.18), and Farmville ($53.33).

Whedbee said the Stabilization Corp., the government price support program, marked up a "very small" receipts figure.

E. O. Parkinson Jr. of Ficklen Tobacco Co. reported today a total of six per cent of yesterday's volume went to Stabilization.

He pointed out million-dollar days "are rare unusual things. We don't do that often. Sometimes you have a few million-dollar days; sometimes you go through a whole season and don't do it."

Listed below are opening day figures for the Eastern Belt furnished by the Federal-State Marketing News Service.

Vote Bar Aid To Helpers Of Castro

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate voted today to shut off all foreign aid money to any country which provides military arms or economic assistance to the Fidel Castro regime in Cuba.

It adopted the proposal, by Sen. Styles H. Bridges (R-NH), as an amendment to a pending $3,989,054,000 foreign aid money bill.

Under the amendment, funds would be withheld from any country which in the president's judgment, "directly or indirectly is selling arms, munitions or implements of war, to the Castro regime in Cuba, or directly or indirectly is giving or loaning military or economic aid to that regime."

The foreign aid measure, carrying most of the funds requested by President Eisenhower, is the last of the major appropriations bills not yet acted on by the Senate. The speed action on it, agreement was reached Tuesday night to limit debate.

Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont), the assistant majority leader, was asked by a newsmen about spreading reports that Congress may adjourn by Saturday night.

"I wouldn't rule that out as a possibility," Mansfield said.

Indications were that adjournment then, a week ahead of the original target date of Democratic leaders, hinges largely on whether it appears possible for the Senate and House to compromise on minimum wage and other controversial measures.

The House Rules Committee was expected to clear the way today for a Senate-House conference committee to attempt to adjust differences between minimum wage bills passed by each branch of Congress.

The Senate bill, passed last week, would increase the minimum wage from $1 to $1.25 an hour. The bill previously passed by the House would boost the rate only to $1.15 and extend coverage to about 2½ million fewer employees.

Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic presidential candidate, said it may be possible to find out in the projected Senate-House conference on the measure whether there is any hope of the kind of minimum wage bill he wants.

Polaris Missile Range To Grow

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP)—An extension of several hundred miles in the range of the Polaris nuclear submarine missile is under development, Lockheed announced Tuesday.

Range of the existing Polaris is about 1,200 nautical miles, 1,350 land miles. The development program at Lockheed's Aircraft, Missiles and Space division here would enable the strategic missile to reach 1,700 nautical miles.

The Navy is contemplating eventual extension of Polaris' range to 2,400 nautical miles—2,700 statute miles.

JOINT STAMP ISSUE

MEXICO CITY (AP)—U.S. Ambassador Robert C. Hill gave the post office a sample proof of a stamp the United States and Mexico will issue jointly next month in recognition of the 150th anniversary of Mexican independence. It will sell for 4 cents in the United States and 30 centavos in Mexico.

Kennedy Says Medical Care Of Aged Will Be Issue

WASHINGTON (AP)—The issue of medical care for the aged was marked today by Sen. John F. Kennedy for extensive treatment in the fall campaign after his defeat in the Senate on the issue.

A 51-44 vote defeated the proposal backed by Kennedy to write broad medical care benefits into the Social Security system and to raise payroll taxes to pay for them.

The defeat of the Democratic measure came only a few hours after the Senate had voted down a Republican-backed plan for a federal-state subsidy to help the aged with their medical bills.

A less liberal medical help program of federal grants to the states was approved after the plans backed by both the presidential candidates had been defeated.

The Democratic presidential nominee blamed his setback on the threat of a veto by President Eisenhower of including any health benefit plan in the Social Security system.

Kennedy said he regarded the vote on this question as a good test of whether it would be possible to pass any progressive legislation in this politically charged congressional session.

Once it was taken, he said, the remaining course was to "take the matter to the people of this country in the election in October and November."

After rejecting the Social Secu-urity approach to medical care for the aged, the Senate Tuesday night passed 91-2 and sent to conference with the House a limited bill dealing with this problem. The only opposing votes came from Sens. Strom Thurmond (D-SC) and Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.).

The provisions of the bill on this point would beef up federal grants to the states to pay medical bills of needy persons on old age assistance or with incomes which just keep them off the relief rolls but are inadequate to meet health costs.

The Senate version of the legislation follows the lines of the House bill on medical payments, but contains more liberal grant formulas. Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D-Okla.), author of the Senate language, said he believed the House would accept it.

Only one Republican, Sen. Clifford P. Case (N.J.), plus 43 Democrats supported the Kennedy-backed Social Security plan. Thirty-two Republicans and 19 Democrats were opposed.

Also beaten 67-28 was a broad Republican health insurance protection plan for the elderly. This was backed by the Republican presidential nominee, Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Not a single Democrat voted for it. Five Republicans and 62 Democrats said no.

Several Democrats who deserted Kennedy on this issue agreed with his analysis that the threat of an Eisenhower veto was responsible for rejection of the Social Security approach.

They said the increase in the public assistance grants was so attractive they did not want to jeopardize enactment of the bill. They said the administration previously had opposed such increases but now was supporting them in order to beat down the Social Security medical care plan.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.), Democratic national chairman, promptly announced the Democrats would seek to make a major issue of the plan in the campaign.

Thirty-Day Stay Of Execution For Kinston Man

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—A 30-day stay of execution was granted convicted killer Eddie Oxendine Tuesday, only 30 hours before he was to die in the electric chair at the Oklahoma State Penitentiary in McAlester.

The stay was granted by Gov. J. Howard Edmondson, who said he wants time to study a Pardon and Parole Board recommendation the death sentence be commuted to life in prison.

Edmondson ordered the stay following a Capitol conference with Reggie Zimmerman, husband of a 19-year-old Lawton woman, Oxendine and a companion were convicted of killing Zimmerman opposed the board recommendation.

Oxendine, whose home is Pembroke, N.C., claims it was his brother-in-law, James Spence, of Kinston, N.C., who shot Mrs. Ruth Zimmerman to death and would have her husband during a surplus store robbery at Lawton March 31, 1958. Spence also is in death row at the prison.

Dail - May Marry

Mrs. Ronnie Lee Dail

bara Gould May and Ronnie Lee Dail were married Sunday in the Ormondville Free Will Baptist Church.

The Rev. Billy Jackson of Greenville officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy May of Ayden, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Junior Lee Dail of Greenville.

Prior to and during the ceremony, Ralph Bowen, organist, presented a prelude of nuptial music. The soloist, Mrs. Billy Jackson, sang "O Promise Me," "Whither Thou Goest," and "The Wedding Prayer" was used as the benediction.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of Duchess bridal satin and lace designed and made by her mother.

The lace bodice featured a scoop neckline trimmed with sequins and tridescents and long sleeves tapering in points over the hands. Her full length satin skirt was fashioned with front and back panels of lace connected on both sides by hip plelups.

Her two tiered veil of illusion was appllied in flowers and attached to a Victorian pearl crown. She carried a pure white orchid on a white satin prayer book.

The vows were pledged before a background of palms, seven-branched candelabra and baskets of gladioli and chrysanthemums. The couple knelt for the benediction on a prayer bench decorated with flowers.

Matron of honor was Mrs. William A. Jones, aunt of the bride. She wore a street-length dress of cotton blue silk organza over taffeta. The bodice featured a scoop neckline with puffed sleeves and bow accents on the shoulders. Her bow headband was attached by a short tiered veil. She carried a bouquet of pink tinted glamelias tied with pink and blue ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Miss Nina May, sister of the bride; Miss Carolyn Dail of Greenville, sister of the groom; Miss Mary Alice Speight of Ayden, and Miss Ann Gay of Farmville, cousins of the bride. Their dresses were of rose silk organza designed identical to that of the honor attendants. Their bouquets and headbands were similar to those of the honor attendants.

Flower girl was Miss Kay Satterwhite of Fountain, cousin of the bride, who wore a pale pink dress with matching headband. She carried a basket of petals.

Mr. Dail was his son's best man. Ushers were Jimmy Dail, brother of the groom; Lloyd Johnston and Charles Mercer of Greenville, and William A. Jones, uncle of the bride, from Fountain.

The mother of the bride chose a dusty rose dress with black accessories. Her corsage was of blue carnations.

The groom's mother chose a dress of pale pink lace with navy accessories. Her corsage was also of blue carnations.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden High School and the groom graduated from J. H. Rose High School in Greenville. He will enter the ministry at the Free Will Baptist Bible College in Nashville, Tenn. in September.

For traveling, the bride chose a sheath of green and beige cotton with matching accessories. She wore the orchid lifted from her prayer book.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg and Portsmouth, Va., the couple will reside at 3716 Richmond Ave., Nashville, Tenn.

After-Rehearsal Party

On Saturday night preceding the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Jones, aunt and uncle of the bride, and Mrs. O. T. Gay, grandmother of the bride, entertained the wedding party at a cake cutting in the Ormondville Community Building.

A yellow and white color scheme was used throughout the building. Yellow seasonal flowers were used on the table covered with a lace tablecloth and lighted by yellow tapers.

The traditional three-tiered wedding cake was served by the bride's mother after the first slice was cut by the bride and groom. The groom's mother served punch. Nuts and mints were also served.

Along With Words, Proof Needed

We're in hearty agreement with Secretary of State Herter's warning to Latin American nations that it is they who face the greater danger from Communist infiltration.

This is a fact that they, and sometimes we, are inclined to overlook when contemplating the Caribbean picture.

Uncle Sam is naturally concerned about the inconveniences widespread Communist influence in South and Central America would mean.

But to the people and governments of our Latin neighbors, Communist power would bring more than inconveniences . . . it would be giant strides backward into the morass of police-state rule, waves of hate propaganda, the popularization of poverty and the loss of privileges and rights to a cruel discipline.

Our own concern over the possibilities of submarine bases or air strips in Cuba is relatively insignificant when compared with the potential menace confronting our good neighbors.

The Organization of American States is neither a court nor a debating society; but it does appear to be a fitting forum for the presentation of proof to augment the words spoken before that body.

As an example of this we might point to Sec. Herter's warning of Tuesday that Cuba is training spies and guerrillas to spread Communist revolution throughout the hemisphere.

That accusation is a serious one. And while the great majority of people in this country believe Herter's words to be based on more than guessing, his audience in Costa Rica presumably had many who were skeptical.

Complaints In Every Election

By LYNN NISBET

CONTRIBUTIONS — Every election year there are complaints heard from the ranks of State employees about their being "assessed" certain amounts for the Democratic party campaign. Actually, no assessment has ever been made. The party organization suggests quotas to departments and agencies, and heads of the agencies then suggest individual contributions. Although there is no demand and no binding force connected with the suggestion, some employees have contended that failure to ante up would be held against them. Most of them come across, although sometimes with less than the suggested amount.

The practice is justified on the theory that the Democratic party is in control of State government, and therefore is a type of job insurance. Except for relatively few scientists are Democrats and got the jobs for that reason.

DIFFERENT — As the current campaign gets underway there is apparently a different attitude among the employees. The two organizations—North Carolina State Employees Association and North Carolina Highway and Prison Employees Association — now include practically all of the full time workers except members of North Carolina Education Association representing public school personnel.

At recent area meetings of these groups resolutions were adopted approving and endorsing the Democratic party and its nominees, a master resolution is expected to come out of the convention of State Employees at Durham next month. The resolution takes cognizance of some disaffection hanging over from the recent primary and appeals for a united front in November.

COMMENDATION — The preamble to the resolution points out that Terry Sanford gave frank and explicit answers to questions propounded by the employee association before the primary, and that "the members of the General Assembly affiliated with Mr. Sanford's political party, have been regarded of requests of State employees, have granted increases in salary, established a Personnel Department, and have given to State employees a stable and solvent retirement system which probably has first rank in the Southern States."

WARNING — In notices sent out to all their members Clifford Beckwith, executive secretary of NCSEA, and Otis Banks, executive secretary of

To accomplish his goal of hardening Latin American attitudes against the regime of Fidel Castro, Mr. Herter should have used more than mere words. He should have come prepared with the evidence to prove his points.

As it is, chances of a united front in dealing with Castro's mischief seem remote. Some of the foreign ministers who heard Herter will take the warning to heart; others will evidence faint interest; and some will pass it off as a mere item of propaganda.

This isn't good enough.

One doesn't go hunting elephants with a sling-shot.

There Are Benefits In Competition, Too

Imagine, if you can, the speed-up it would mean for Man's conquest of space, should American and Russian talents be combined for a joint effort.

They, with their boosters capable of pushing 4½ ton carriers into orbit; and our own capabilities in instrumentation and research.

Such a meeting of minds seems a long way from being realized; and perhaps there would be less real benefits than appears at first glance if such a cooperation were achieved.

On our side (and increasingly on theirs) the importance of a competitive atmosphere is well known. Where there is rivalry, there is a greater incentive. In such a field as space exploration there is an obvious need for competition, because to the average layman the tangible benefits of such work seem awfully remote.

Working in harness, regardless of whatever immediate attainments might be achieved, long range accomplishments in that field conceivably would be further delayed and popular interest fade.

So perhaps this space race bit is all for the best. Now—if only this rivalry can be kept on a peaceful level . . .

May Have Solved A Dream Of The Ages

Those California engineers, who have announced a new desalting filter, just might be the ones who will make the deserts bloom.

There are great areas in the world adjacent to the sea where fresh water is too precious to use for irrigation. There are other areas where the need of fresh water is outstripping the supply; and peoples are eyeing the wealth of water in the oceans, hoping for eventual discovery of a means by which briny ocean water can be made useable.

If the process devised by the two engineers on the West Coast lives up to its early promise, they will have solved one of the great dreams of the ages:

Fresh water from the oceans, produced quickly and cheaply enough to be commercially feasible.

The importance of such a discovery can hardly be over-emphasized.

Expects Soviet To Give Trouble

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of America's super-spy outfit doesn't expect the Soviets to make war on the United States any time soon. But he does expect them to give this country trouble in other ways for a long time.

Allen W. Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, made a plea Monday night for more comses in American schools on Communist theory and practice.

Talking to the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Detroit, Dulles refused to believe any soft talk from Russia's Premier Nikita Khrushchev whose intentions, he said, are the same as those of Lenin and Stalin: world communism.

The only difference between Khrushchev and his predecessors, Dulles said, is a difference in technique in trying to reach the same goal.

"During the years immediately ahead it seems more likely that the immediate danger we will be facing, and on a worldwide basis, will be Communist political, economic and subversive action and penetration; not a hot or nuclear war," Dulles said.

He listed seven points he said are basic elements of Khrushchev's policy:

1. Build up Soviet military might based on ballistic missiles which would give him an effective weapon for direct attack on the United States.
2. Build up Soviet industry at the same time—to satisfy some of the needs of the Russian people—but still devote a greater share of it to military aims
3. Support all elements of extreme, rabid nationalism, in Asia, Africa and Latin America. Dulles said: "He is working for chaos in countries from Cuba to the Congo, and chaos breeds communism."
4. Aim economic and technical aid at certain critical countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America where "the Communists believe they can make the most headway."
5. Keep in high gear Russia's worldwide subversive apparatus in countries from "Cuba to Central Africa and Southeast Asia and indeed throughout the world."
6. Build Russia's formidable military weapons in secrecy and even exploit spy scares to preserve that secrecy while refusing any meaningful inspection system which would make disarmament workable.
7. Propaganda. Dulles said Khrushchev is directing "the greatest propaganda machine the world has ever known."

Thus the immediate future, as Dulles sees it, will bring not war but tremendous Soviet efforts at Communist subversion all over the world for years to come.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

NEITHER POSSIBLE NOR DESIRABLE

"My husband and I make pals of our children."

I am sorry to tell you, lady, that you are probably mistaken. If your children really accept you as pals, there is something abnormal either about them or about you. There is only one thing more abnormal than an adult who believes that he or she has the adolescent viewpoint, and that is the adult who actually has it. Such a person is in need of psychiatric attention.

The normal attitude of children toward older people is to regard them as somewhat tiresome. If your children believe you to be old fogies and are constantly

S'pose The Inlaws Can Ever Hit It Off?

At The End Of A Big Day

You really feel the restrained excitement of a tobacco market's opening day sale in the evening, when the men go back to the pack house after supper to wind up the day's work and prepare for the following day.

There, in the pack house, are the orderly piles of gleaming gold leaf; fragrant and still after the weeks of growth, harvesting, curing, sorting and tying.

The imperfect light from the bare bulbs gives the tobacco an extra luster that make it look two grades better than you know it will be in the light of day. Still, the beholder finds it most pleasant to look upon and the piles while firm are soft and smooth to the touch.

Somebody, engaged in swiftly (yet carefully) moving laden sticks of tobacco will softly grunt and exclaim that "this is a heavy one"; and another will call out "how many pounds do you think we've got ready now?"

The air is filled with music from a nearby small radio, and there are insects of the night drawn to the lights. A lot of dust, a lot of silent computation about the next day's sale, and a heap of tobacco.

Back in the kitchen there was a proud time for showing of sales records and modest appraisals of a "good sale."

But in the pack house it's strictly business; the business of preparing for the next day and the other days to come when a big truck would be backed up, loaded and move off to a warehouse.

When the last of the evening's tidying up is done, the floor cleared and swept, the last one out turns off the blaring radio and one of the overhead lights. He reaches for the switch of the last light, and before turning it he pauses to look appreciatively at the orderly piles of waiting tobacco.

The switch clicks, and the straggler emerges to carefully close the door and walk back to the house.

It's probably the most satisfying moment of his whole, busy day.

A lot of Reflector readers will remember Jimmy Ellis, the lady he called "my fair Gwen," and their brood consisting of the "Wee Urchin" and the twins.

Some time ago Jimmy departed from the newspaper world and found a new niche in the public relations field. I've always mourned the occasion as "another good newsmen gone to waste," but that sort of thing often happens.

Anyway, Jimmy and his family passed through Greenville this week and stopped by to say "howdy."

Our erstwhile staffer has lost his lean and hungry look, and appears relaxed and at ease with the world at large. Having succumbed to the soft living and eating-of-the-lotus in PR circles, I fear he is lost to the newspaper world for all time.

But the twins and the urchin . . . a husky young trio . . . made for the typewriters immediately on being shown into the newsroom.

In them I see a future.

Eighteen or twenty years from now maybe I can show them to the desks their pa once held down and recall for them that he wrote sports, straight news and columns.

Then put them to work.

Other Editors Saying Not More Centralization

(The Raleigh Times)

A news story reported that the temperatures of some Council of State members rose when Paul Johnston, director of the all-powerful Department of Administration, suggested that some Council members should be appointed by the Governor and not elected by the people.

There was no reason why the Council members should have suffered from rising temperatures. In fact, there was no reason why they should have been at all surprised at the suggestion.

Director Johnston isn't the first man to suggest that the Governor of North Carolina should have more power. Neither is this the first time he has suggested it. And, it probably won't be the last time.

His suggestion is simply in line with what has been a feeling during this administration, that more and more power should be centralized in Raleigh, and in the hands of the chief executive. The creating of this Department of Administration was in line with that theory. Director Johnston has said that this Department of Administration vested no more power in the Governor's office, since it simply brought into one office several departments already subservient to the Governor, such as the Budget Bureau, and the Department of Purchase and Contract.

But, the creation of that department and the naming of one man to head it did put in that man's hands more power than any other Tar Heel office holder had ever had. Paul Johnston has handled that job efficiently. It is natural that he would, since he believes in such centralization of power.

The efficient way Johnston has handled this job is one of the reasons he has been subjected to much criticism, for he has used the power in this job.

Actually, there are many very good reasons why the members of the Council of State should be elected by the people. For one thing, they provide a system of checks and balances within the executive department itself. Those Council of State members are responsible only to the people, and are free to speak up against something the Governor does, or might want to do, that they don't like. The fact that so many of the present Council members have mostly muttered instead of speaking out still doesn't alter the basic fact that they should be responsible to all the voters and not just to the Governor.

Director Johnston has resigned his post effective late this month and will go into private industry. Apparently there will be an interim appointment, until the new Governor takes office and decides on a permanent one.

Terry Sanford, the Democratic nominee for Governor, should take a long, long look at the Department of Administration and its vast powers. He should decide whether there should be such a concentration of power. And, if he decides against it, he could ask the next legislature to abolish it.

There is a need in the Governor's office for a high-paid man capable of doing special work for the Governor. Such a man could do much that is now done by the Department of Administration in helping the Governor formulate policy. And, that would be much better than having the all-powerful Department of Administration.

The last legislature clipped sharply the wings of the State Board of Higher Education, limiting its authority over the various educational institutions. In that action, it halted the trend toward centralization of power here.

That trend should be continued now by doing away with the Department of Administration.

Word Raises Queries

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

I see that the Republicans and Democrats are going in for celebrities. On one side is the distinguished former pugilist from the Jersey side of the Hudson River, Frank Sinatra; on the other side, the distinguished hooper, speaker and public relations counsel, George Murphy. Among the celebrities are such persons as Dore Schary, Helen Hayes and Ward Bond, but I have not seen Zsa Zsa Gabor on any of these lists nor Marilyn Monroe. They may be neutral or perhaps they belong to splinter parties.

I have often wondered what a celebrity is. There are in this world great men like Winston Churchill or Herbert Hoover; there are good men like Dr. Albert Schweitzer or Dr. Thomas Dooley; there are learned men such as Lord Russell or Dr. James Bryant Conant; but what is a celebrity?

The word would give the impression that it has something to do with being celebrated. But that is ambiguous. It could mean distinguished, renowned, famous or eminent. It might be used for President Eisenhower or for Queen Elizabeth II or Pope John XXIII. It can never mean notorious. It could not refer, for instance, to a person who is the repository of four divorces and a fifth one pending. The proper term for that would be notorious. Nor could it refer to an alcoholic or a lady of the night. The term for the latter is unquestionable. It could not refer to the obscure, the illicit, the trivial.

And yet the word, celebrity, has, in our flexible language, come to have a special meaning. In common parlance, it is someone who belongs to the theater or the motion picture or television industries whose names appear in newspapers often. It is a coined term, like the word, socialite, which refers to a person who is often gossiped about in the gossip columns. Often such persons are noted as eating in restaurants, which is quite natural since they are rarely invited to homes even among their own kind. A socialite may be a gentleman or a bum; he may have money or be a sponger. His sole requirement is to be available to a woman; he must have the accoutrements that go with both a black and a white tie.

The nature of the socialite is quite definable, but not that of the celebrity. The socialite is established by head waiters. The deciding factor is what kind of a table such a person is shown to at the Stork Club, the Colony Restaurant, Le Pavillon and 21. The celebrity, usually gets a good table when he or she is in the news. However, the celebrity of yesterday is just a poor fish who once had clippings to paste into a scrapbook. Some few of them survive by going into other trades. Jimmy Walker, for instance, wrote one song and became a celebrity, but he did not last at it; he went in for politics and became Mayor of New York.

Very few so-called celebrities are politicians or could pass a simple examination in civics. Dore Schary is a Democratic politician of the liberal persuasion who tried to make Adlai Stevenson the Democratic candidate for President. At any rate, besides being a celebrity, he is also a politician and even makes speeches. My pal, Ward Bond, is strictly political in his outlook on life. He had led the charge against Communism in Hollywood with great courage and perspicacity. Adolphe Menjou, the linguist, is a student of political institutions. Apart from being a celebrity, he is a man who adheres to political principles and fights for them. On the Leftist side there are quite a few politically-conscious persons among the celebrities. Some have even had problems with the FBI.

But these aggregations of celebrities led on one side by Frank Sinatra and on the other by George Murphy are, on the whole, folks who live in the world of make believe, who are accustomed to having their thinking done for them by producers, directors, agents and managers.

How many votes the celebrities will bring to each candidate, it is difficult to know. I have often wondered how many votes Lauren Bacall made for Harry Truman when she sat on top of an upright piano, dangling her legs, while Harry, still a Vice President, played the piano for the photographers. It could be a gimmick.

Dr. Malene Irons Is Named ECC Infirmary Assistant

Dr. Malene Grant Irons, Greenville physician, has been appointed assistant to the college physician at East Carolina College and will begin her duties September 1, date of the opening of the 1960-61 college term, said an announcement from President Leo W. Jenkins issued today.

Dr. Malene Irons was graduated from East Carolina with an A.B. degree in 1935 and following her graduation from the Medical College of Virginia and a rotating internship and pediatric residency, moved to Greenville where she has conducted a private practice. Her husband, Dr. G. Fred Irons, is college physician.

In comment on the recent appointment of Dr. Irons, Dr. Jenkins said: "I am happy that a distinguished alumna of East Carolina College is joining our staff. From her experience in medicine she will be in a position to offer guidance to our girl students. She possesses excellent qualifications for her work."

As assistant to the college physician, Dr. Malene Irons will establish hours for her official calls at the college infirmary and will continue her practice in her offices on the edge of the Greenville business district.

Native of Gates County, N.C., Dr. Irons is a twin daughter of the late Dr. Thomas M. Grant, a widely known Methodist minister who served leading pulpits in the North Carolina Conference, and the late Malene Harrell Grant. Her twin sister is Dr. Isa Grant, director of the Wake County, N.C. Department of Public Health, Raleigh. Her stepmother, Mrs. T.M. Grant, and a half-sister, Mrs. Ruby Grant Bennett, now reside in Rocky Mount.

Following the graduation from East Carolina, the Grant sisters pursued their medical courses together with an additional year of science and German at Duke University before entering the Medical College of Virginia, from which Dr. Malene Irons received her Doctor of Medicine in 1941. She had a year of rotating internship and then four years in pediatrics, also at the Medical College of Virginia.

Castro Defiantly Vows Friendship With Reds

HAVANA (AP)—Fidel Castro today hurled a defiant vow of friendship for the Soviet Union and Red China into the teeth of the Organization of American States, which has urged his regime to halt its leftward march.

"We will be friends of the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China," the bearded Prime Minister shouted to a cheering throng of women's organizations jammed into the Workers' Palace.

Depicting his regime as "the most firm government of all America," Castro mocked the OAS and lashed out at the United States during a two-hour post-midnight speech.

The Soviet Union and Red China, he asserted, "have shown they are our friends," while the United States "attacks us and wants to destroy us."

"They (the Reds) do not come to talk to us in the insolent language of (the American) proconsuls accustomed to give orders. We are friends of those who are our friends."

The women squealed, cheered and chanted their approval as Castro shouted and waved with his old vigor.

The fiery leader concentrated his assault on the OAS, whose other members urged Tuesday at its foreign ministers meeting in Costa Rica that Cuba patch up differences with the United States and rejoin the hemisphere's anti-Communist ranks.

"With the OAS or without the OAS, we will win the fight," Castro roared. "With the OAS or without the OAS, we will triumph. With the OAS or without the OAS, the revolution is a fact they will not be able to erase."

Biggest Talk Is Of Ditch Diggers

SLEEPY EYE, Minn. (AP) — Some of the biggest talk in this little southern Minnesota town is about ditch diggers.

Monday ditch diggers accidentally cut a telephone cable and 210 town and 90 rural residents were without service most of the day.

By Tuesday morning things were practically intact after 460 wires were spliced and 12 terminals checked. Then the workers accidentally cut the cable at another spot and put all the phones out again.

Planning Course In Distributive Education

Junius H. Rose High School will offer courses in distributive education this school year, it was announced today by Greenville Schools Supt. J. H. Rose.

The Greenville Merchants Association is co-operating in the program, being offered again after a lapse of three years.

Distributive education involves instruction in merchandising, and includes mathematics, retailing, salesmanship, and general business principles.

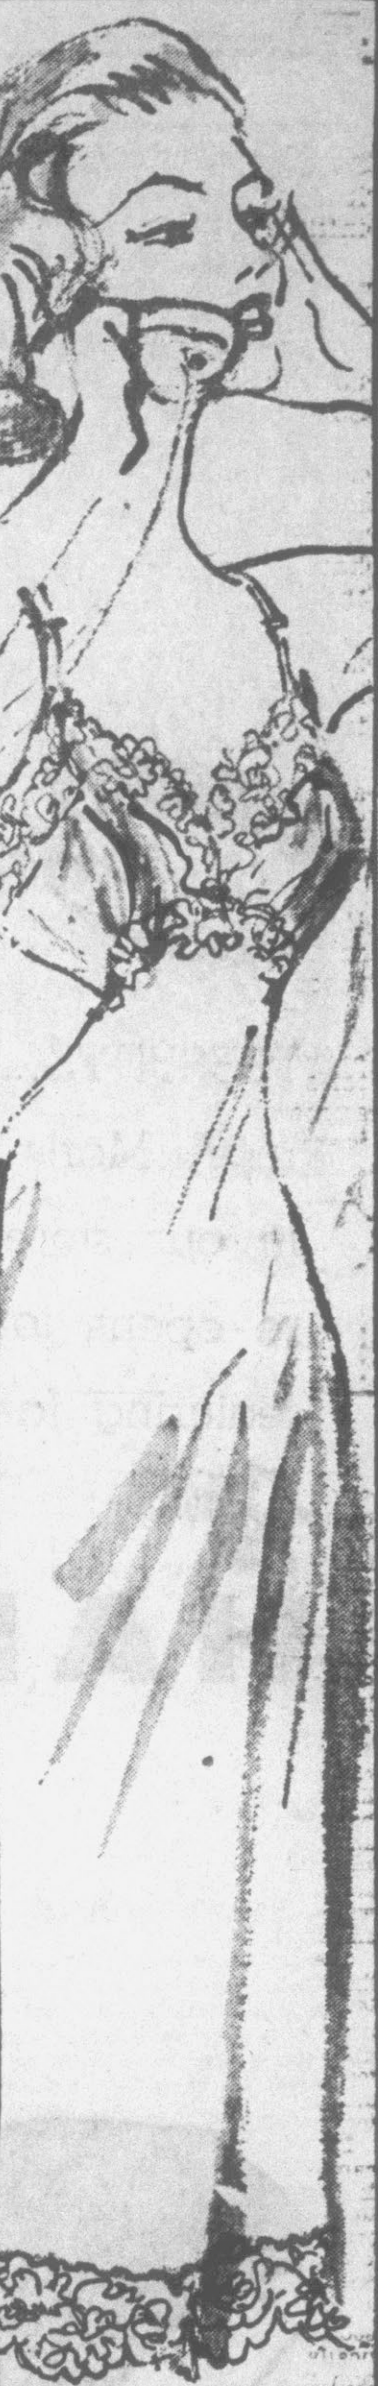

Under the program, students at Rose High remain in classrooms for two-thirds of the day and spend the remainder acquiring work experience in various businesses of the town.

Instructor for the program is Neil T. Howell of Waynesville. He attended Brevard College and East Carolina College. He has taught one year and has had experience with Lever Brothers in New York.

The course is open to juniors and seniors.

ECC Starts Training Thursday Week

College Grid Year Near Opening Day

By JOHNNY HUDSON
Reflector Sports Editor

It's closer than you think . . . the opening of the college football season that is. A week from tomorrow the North State coaches will blow the starting whistle on pre-season drills.

Heavy-set guards, centers and tackles, long-limbed ends and swivel-hipped backs will don the grid attire for several weeks of practice under a bright late summer sun.

Actually, the first intercollegiate game in the state will be between a couple of North State Conference foes, Catawba and Western Carolina clash on Sept. 10 at Asheville in a game not entered in the conference standings.

East Carolina, usually one of the early starters in the state, will be the last North State club to open its season, waiting until Sept. 24 before hosting Guilford in a home opener.

Coach Jack Boone is glad, for a change, to watch his conference competition open prior to ECC. The Pirates are expected to lean heavily toward the development of freshmen in preparing to match the strength with the rest of the conference.

Glenn Bass is the number one man in ECC's returning fold but the Pirates are minus his running mate James Spight and some husky linemen of 1959 stardom.

Guilford, which amassed one of its strongest offensive teams last fall despite a weak defense, will get the jump on East Carolina with its 10-lifter set for Sept. 17 against Elon.

The Quakes, with 18 lettermen returning, will be attempting to make amends for a 27-0 thrashing by EC last fall.

Aside from the ECC-Guilford clambake, Appalachian and Western Carolina will draw the spotlight in a Sept. 17 North State Conference opener.

Western Carolina closed out the 1959 season with three straight victories and posted an over-all mark of 7-2-1, one of its best records in history. With 20 lettermen returning, the Cats may prowl again and are tabbed the top challenge to end Lenoir Rhyne's dominance.

Appalachian, under a new coach, may not find the pasture as green as in past seasons but have 19 lettermen returning to bolster Coach Jim Duncan's first year bid for a title.

Linemen Carl Messer, Frank Smith and Bob Morrison are familiar names expected to feature the Appalachian squad.

Lenoir Rhyne, kingpin for the last five years, will also have much returning. The Bears left a solid impression on North State fans last season in running roughshod over 10 opponents and ranking number one in the NAIA football poll. The Bears lost to Texas A&I 20-7 in the Holiday Bowl.

Coach Clarence Stasovich has veterans at all positions in the backfield with big, moolie, experienced men at the forward wall slots. In all, a total of 19 lettermen are back to lay claim for a Bear title again.

Lenoir Rhyne opens its slate against Wofford on Sept. 17 and will meet Presbyterian and Newberry on following Saturdays before engaging in conference warfare.

Coach George Tucker, beginning his first year at Elon, will be hard pressed in getting his young Christians ready for its opener against Guilford Sept. 17. The Quakes stunned Elon on opening date last season 27-0, starting the Elon slide toward the salt mines of one win and nine defeats.

Elon is expected to be improved considerably this year.

The seventh North State member, Catawba, leaps into the water with its games against Western Carolina and then Davidson on Sept. 17.

The Indians, who suffered a heavy graduation toll, have shifted offensive tactics to the single-wing for the '60 season. Coach Preston Mull, in his second year at Catawba, is hoping the change of offense will ignite some hot-rushing blood in his tribe.

Wynn Hurls Sox Within Half Game Of NY; Pirates Keep NL Pace

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Now that Early Wynn has cut the New York Yankees down to size, the next step is to knock 'em flat.

The 40-year-old right-hander, a tough guy with a brush-back pitch, promised to do just that after he pitched the second-place Chicago White Sox to a 5-1 victory over New York and trimmed the Yankees' American League lead to a half-game Tuesday night.

What got Wynn riled was a ninth-inning pitch by Yankee reliever Jim Coates that just missed his head. Wynn made for the mound, but in hand, before teammates and the ump checked his charge.

"Sure it was a beanball," Wynn said afterward, "and someday I'm going to get all nine of 'em (the Yankees)."

"And if I get Coates outside the park, I'll put a knot on his head."

With Wynn, a first-inning replacement for Billy Pierce in a switch that led the Yanks to protest the game, putting away the 28th victory of his career, the Sox took over sole possession of second place. The hot-running Detroit Tigers knocked Baltimore to third, 1½ games behind, by beating the Orioles 5-3 in 11 innings. Washington defeated Kansas City 3-1 and Cleveland edged Boston 3-2 in 10 innings.

In the National League, Lew Burdette followed up a no-hitter with his third consecutive shutout, a seven-hit job that gave Milwaukee a 7-0 victory at Los Angeles. The second-place Braves remained 6½ games behind the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates, who rapped Chicago's Cubs 8-3. St. Louis defeated Philadelphia 4-2, and San Francisco beat Cincinnati 6-1.

Wynn, now 10-8 with his third straight victory, allowed only four hits and faced the minimum 14 men over the last 4 2-3 innings after giving up a fifth-inning home run by losing pitcher Eli Grba (3-2). It was Grba's first in the majors, and ended Wynn's shut-out string at 16 innings.

Wynn struck out six, pushing past Hall of Famer Eddie Plank for ninth place on the all-time list with 2,114.

The Sox beat Grba with three runs in the first, one unearned, and then added two unearned runs in the seventh. A triple by Nellie Fox, a walk, one of the Yankees' three errors, and singles by Gene Freese and Al Smith wrapped it up in the first inning.

Manager Al Lopez then brought in Wynn to replace Pierce, who made a couple of warm up tosses, but didn't pitch to a batter. The Sox lefty had pulled a muscle in a pre-game warm up. The Yankees protested, saying the rules state a pitcher must face one man unless injured.

The Tigers made it seven in a row, their longest winning streak since 1956, when Charlie Maxwell tagged losing reliever Wes Stock

(2-2) for a two-run homer in the 11th. Detroit had tied it with two runs in the ninth on singles by Maxwell and Rocky Colavito and a double by Al Kaline. Bill Fischer (6-6) was the winner.

Washington retained fourth place on a two-run homer by Harmon Killebrew and an inside-the-park home run by Reno Bertoia that backed southpaw Jack Kralick, who won his fifth.

Doubles by winning reliever Mudcat Grant (3-5) and rookie Mike de la Hoz broke the tie for the Indians and beat reliever Frank Sullivan (4-10).

It looks like Milwaukee Manager Chuck Dressen really started something when he started using Lew Burdette strictly as a starter.

The fidgety right-hander, who last worked in relief on July 30, when he beat Los Angeles with a home run, has pitched five consecutive complete games since, and has won four of them—one a no-hitter.

He extended his shutout string to 29 innings with his third straight shutout, a seven-hit, 7-0 breeze at Los Angeles Tuesday night as the second place Braves belted Dodger pitching for five home runs.

It was the Braves' sixth success in seven games, but left them ½ game behind Pittsburgh. The Pirates rapped Chicago's Cubs 8-3. Third-place St. Louis, eight games back, beat Philadelphia 4-2. San Francisco smacked Cincinnati 6-1. Burdette, matching roommate Warren Spahn's 15-7 record, struck out four and didn't walk a man while winning his sixth in a row at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Mel Roach (No. 3), Al Dark (No. 4), Hank Aaron (No. 33), and Matt Williams (No. 20) and Johnny Looney (No. 5) walked the homers for the Braves, all with the bases empty.

Stan Williams (12-6) gave up two of the home runs and four of the Braves' 11 hits. It was his fourth defeat in the last five decisions.

The Pirates were shut out on six innings by Dick Ellsworth (6-10), then came from behind against the Cub lefty with four runs in the seventh. A bases-loaded walk, Dick Groat's two-run single, and an infield out brought the runs home. Harvey Haddix (9-7) was the winner, with saving relief by Elroy Face. Haddix had given up just two hits, but trailed 10 when lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

The Cardinals backed rookie Ray Sadecki (7-7) with a two-run single by Hal Smith in the second inning, and a clinching, two-run homer by Walt Morry in the sixth. Stan Musial, who had walked, came in on Morry's shot for his 1,800th run scored. That's second only to Mel Ott's 1,859 in the NL. Gene Conley lost his fifth in a row for a 7-11 record.

Jack Sanford, 0-3 in his last five starts, beat the Reds with a five-hitter for a 10-11 record. The big right-hander also walked and scored as the Giants came from behind with a pair of unearned runs in the sixth against loser Bob Purkey (13-8).

Norris Denies Hiding Charge

WASHINGTON (AP)—Promoter James D. Norris has denied a charge that he is hiding out in Europe to avoid testifying in the Senate boxing hearings. He says he will be on hand for the hearing tentatively set for Oct. 18.

The evasion accusation came Tuesday from Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.), chairman of the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly subcommittee. He said Norris had failed to acknowledge receipt of two messages asking him to return to this country to testify.

Norris, reached by the Associated Press in Paris, said he had planned his European vacation for many weeks.

"Certainly, I have no intention of avoiding the Senate hearing and will return long before that," Norris said.

Norris is a former president of the International Boxing Club. The Kefauver subcommittee is looking into the club's activities in its hunt for evidence that mobsters have exerted monopolistic control over professional boxing.

Bikinis Ruled Out In Olympics

ROME (AP)—The International Swimming Federation wiggled out of a ticklish situation today—it ruled out bikinis in the Olympics.

The brazen Czechs had brought up the subject. They proposed elimination of the rule which sets certain standards for the cut of a girl's swim suit.

If adopted, the move would have opened the door for two-piece bikinis or similar scant attire.

The federation voted a prim "no."

"Our rule on swim suits isn't extreme," said Max Ritter of Jenkintown, Pa., longtime member of the federation executive board. "We say they should go so high under the armpits, so low in the back and should be in one piece."

"Mainly we set forth just two demands—the suit must be modest and it must not be transparent."

Practice Briefs

Rain continued to put a damper on Rose High football drills yesterday with afternoon drills forcing the griders indoors.

The Phantoms worked out light in morning practice with work being confined to fundamentals. The backs worked on running drills and tackling while the linemen spent their time with line play techniques.

The locals are scheduled to continue twice-a-day drills until school starts next Tuesday.

Farmville

Rain kept 26 Farmville football aspirants from getting the "true feeling" of heavy gear yesterday as the afternoon drill was rained out.

The Red Devils wore full gear for the first time Friday and limited contact work has been completed in the football camp.

On the good side of the picture, quarterback Rex Hodges reported in heavy equipment for Monday's practice session. Hodges was injured last week and it was feared he might be out for a couple of weeks.

More work on fundamentals was planned for this week with a scrimmage under game conditions to climax the work Friday.

Ty Cobb Still Likes Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Ty Cobb still likes the San Francisco Giants. But he sure wishes they'd forget about that Candlestick wind.

Cobb, 73, left a hospital bed Tuesday night to watch the fifth place Giants play sixth place Cincinnati. The Giants won 6-1 and the Georgia Peach was happy.

"I liked the Giants in spring training, and I still like them," he said in a press box interview. "But they should realize the hit and run is just as important as the long ball."

The wind was whistling through Candlestick Park, leading Cobb to declare:

"Sure it's bad, but you have to live with it. The hitters shouldn't try to pull the ball down the lines. They should go up the middle."

You can hit yourself into a slump trying to be a pull hitter."

Cobb knows his hitting. He led the American League from 1907 through 1919 with the exception of 1916 when Tris Speaker won the hitting crown. He holds most of the major league records worth owning.

Cobb, first man in the Hall of Fame, said he was taking treatment and medication for the same ailment that hospitalized him earlier in the year. He declined to divulge just what the trouble was, saying only, "It's a source of poison."

He returned to Palo Alto-Stanford Hospital after the game.

U.S. Top Seeded In Cage Sport

ROME (AP)—The United States, Russia, Uruguay and France today were top seeded in the Olympic Basketball Tournament.

The heavily favored United States team began practice today with two performers hobbled by injury.

Jerry Lucas, brilliant sophomore from Ohio State, was nursing a bruised foot which kept him out of a practice game with Spain Monday night. Allen Kelley, a member of the National AAU champion Peoria, Ill., team was benched by a high injury.

Coach Pete Newell said he expected both to be available for the Olympic cage competition beginning Friday night.

Rome Awaiting Start Of Olympics Tomorrow

By JERRY LISKA

ROME (AP)—Amid tranquility which even sent 10 Communist athletes to a special audience by Pope John, this ancient, storied city was poised today for the start of the 17th Olympiad Thursday.

The papal audience for all Olympic athletes and officials in St. Peter's Square just precedes the arrival of the Olympic torch from Greece.

At City Hall, the torch will be set in a tripod, remaining lit until it is carried to the Olympic Stadium for the official opening of the games.

A pro-Communist newspaper, Paese Sera, disclosed Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev sent an Olympic message to Rome, to be delivered by the Soviet ambassador to the Italian games organizers shortly before today's papal audience.

The newspaper said as a result of Khrushchev's message, confirming a "spirit of brotherhood," that 10 of the Soviet Union's 400-member athletic delegation would attend the audience by the head of the Catholic Church.

After the opening ceremonies before an expected 100,000 in the Olympic Stadium, the games proper will start with eliminations in boxing and water polo Thursday night.

On Friday, seven more sports will move into action. But the climax of the games, track and field, does not start until next Wednesday and the last of the 18 sports to be contested, equestrian, gymnastics, weightlifting and shooting do not begin until the week of Sept. 4.

Favorable weather was predicted for the opening ceremony which will see 4,000 of the total 8,000 athletes from 85 nations parading under the late afternoon sun. The parading group was restricted because of space limitations in the white new Olympic Stadium.

The International Olympic Committee Tuesday cleared its decks for the start of the games by unanimously re-electing Chicago's Avery Brundage, 72, for another four-year term as president.

The wealthy hotel man, already president for eight years, thus defeated a reported move to unseat him. The re-election meant a vote of confidence for the austere amateurism preached by Brundage, if not practiced to his wishes, throughout the world.

The man who was touted to succeed Brundage as president, Lord Burghley of England, nominated Brundage for re-election and delegates from 57 nations backed him.

"I can only promise to throw more energy into the job," said Brundage who has the powerful handshake of a wrestler despite his years.

The United States reached full force in the pulsating Olympic Village with the arrival of Uncle Sam's 72-member track and field contingent and the 15-member basketball party.

Track coach Larry Snyder reported his talented squad was in top shape and he scoffed at printed charges his band might be overtrained from too many pre-Olympic meets.

Thomas Has 75 In Raleigh Play

RALEIGH—Greenville's Bobby Thomas fired a 75 yesterday to fall five strokes behind leaders Bobby Edgerston and Jimmy Thompson of Raleigh in the sixth annual North State Junior Invitational tournament.

Chappy Bradner, also of Greenville, was also hunched among the leaders with a respectable 76.

Wally Howard had an 83, Charles Vincent posted a 91 and Tom Duncan had a 92.

Bob Fisher of Farmville fired an 89 in the opening round.

Garvin Leading Golf Tourney

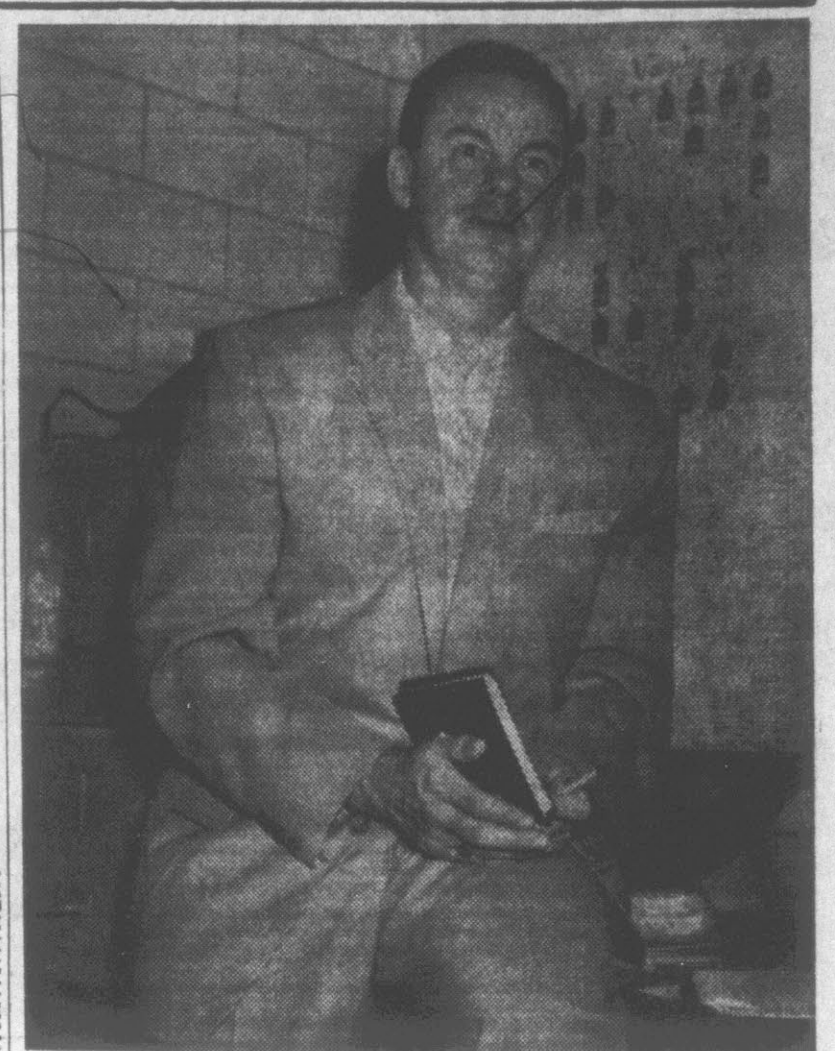

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Buzz Garvin, 19-year-old sharpshooter from Denver, Colo., the youngest golfer on the PGA circuit, led a qualifying field of 81 players Tuesday in the preliminary test of the $30,000 Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament when he shot a 2-under-par 68.

Garvin and 70 other players qualified with 80 exempt golfers for competition in the 72-hole medal play meet that begins at the North Hills Country Club Thursday.

Ed Meyerson of Los Angeles, Ray Montgomery of Indianapolis and Tom Roney of Little Rock, Ark., each came in with a 69.

Bill Krause of Los Altos, Calif., Huston La Clair of Birmingham, Ala., and Paul Farmer of Sacramento, Calif., turned in par 70s.

The low amateur was Emil Esposito of Chicago with 72.

BACK AT WORK—Coach Jack Boone, East Carolina football coach, will be ready to open practice for his football prospects next Thursday. Boone and his coaching staff are making final preparations for the new season this week.

Dispute Is Hurting Elliott's Training

By JOHN GALE

ROME (AP)—Herb Elliott, Australia's miracle miler, is caught on the fringes of a dispute which is hurting his pre-Olympic training.

With only seven days before track and field competition starts, Herb and his coach Percy Cerutti are still not working together.

Cerutti wants to live in the Olympic Village, right next door to Herb.

Australian team officials have refused him permission a dozen times and evicted him once. They say Cerutti cannot be given privileges denied 26 other coaches who work on individual members of the Olympic squad.

"I've seen Herb just twice in the past two days," Cerutti complained today. "But only to say hello."

"I'm so tied down by red tape I can't even get to him properly."

Australia has no official team coach and there is no village accommodation for any of the part-time and professional corps of coaches now in for the games.

Waving an indignant fist at the Australian team quarters, Cerutti—a little man in his 60s with a wiry goatee—asserted: "This is where a coach ought to be—right with his boys."

Just then, Herb came out of his quarters and said hello to his coach.

Cerutti said "hello" to Herb for the third time in two days.

"Coming for lunch?" inquired the wonder runner who set the world mile mark of 3:54.5 two years ago.

"I wouldn't eat in this doggone place if it were the last thing I ever did," exploded Cerutti.

Junior High

Coach John Jones of Greenville Junior High has called a meeting for all football prospects Friday morning at 8:00.

The meeting of junior high footballers will be at the junior high school.

CHAPTER 11

Frank O'Hara lay in state until mid-afternoon. The coffin was placed on a black-draped ranch wagon, drawn by four plumed horses. The assembly to the family burial plot. There a minister preached and prayed for an hour.

Lisa looked up and found Abel Barbee's gaze upon her. She was aware how intensely he was studying her, asking himself a question. Was he trying to determine the extent of her knowledge of that person in the checked shirt? Or was there accusation in his mind?

She turned away the moment the final "amen" was uttered. Lisa Jones had remained close at her side. She took his arm and guided him to the rented spring wagon. "I want to start back to San Ysidro at once," she said wearily.

Before they were ready to leave, a man in a black frock coat came hurrying from the bunkhouse, followed by a string of "ranch-people."

"Miss Randolph!" the man exclaimed. "Wait! I'm about to read the will. We've been waiting for you."

"The will?" Lisa repeated.

"Frank O'Hara's will. I'm Samuel Miller, attorney at law. I drew up Frank's testament some two weeks ago, at his request."

Lisa was suddenly afraid. She started to ascend into the wagon, but Sam Miller halted her. "Wait, please! I'm sure this will interest you. I know the contents, of course."

He produced a document and read it, rattling off the legal terms dramatically. He looked up triumphantly. His face fell when he realized that Lisa had not been listening. "Don't you understand?" he exclaimed. "You're the sole heir to this place and all range rights and all Triangle O cattle. Frank O'Hara left you everything."

Lisa took the paper from his hand. But it was not the legal document that interested her. To that instrument was pinned a smaller, hand-written letter on a woman's personal stationery.

Then Lisa wept for the murdered Frank O'Hara. The letter was hers. It was the last message she had written to him before setting out on her long journey to San Ysidro. I contained her decision to consider marriage.

Sam Miller was nodding. "It was your letter that decided him on making out the will in your favor. He told me all about you."

Lisa became aware of other faces around her, and of their hostility. A ranch woman in the background spoke raucously, "Well, she got what she came for, after all. She been given the O'Hara ranch — fer what it's worth."

"I don't want it," Lisa exclaimed, her voice rising.

"You can refuse, of course,"

Sam Miller said dubiously. "There are no other heirs. The courts will take over."

"Then I do refuse, and—" Lisa began.

A man stepped to her side, halting her. "Don't do any deciding yet," he was Abel Barbee. He drew her out of hearing range of the others.

"But I don't want it," Lisa said. "I can't possibly accept."

"Maybe you've got the wrong idea about the O'Hara ranch," Abel said. "The house is gone, but the land don't stop cows from droppin' calves, or the brand from increasin'."

"What difference would that make? It's that—"

"I'm tryin' to tell you thet Triangle O cattle are worth some money. Not a lot, of course. But somethin', if you get 'em to northern market. Even a little better'n nothin', ain't it, after the long ways you come to get it?"

Lisa slapped him then, hard. As hard as she could. She turned and raced to the spring wagon. Michah Jones was waiting alongside the vehicle, but he made no move to help her mount to the seat. He stood looking at her, a moody speculation in his bony face.

"There might be other reasons why you ought to go slow about refusin', Miss Randolph," he said.

"Reasons? I'm sure there could be none that would make me change my mind."

"Somebody," Michah said slowly, "must have had some purpose in mind in killin' Frank O'Hara."

"What do you mean?"

"What's one big reason why people murder others? For profit of some kind. Money, usually."

Lisa quieted, gazing at him, waiting. He nodded, and went on. There might be someone who wants to get his hands on Frank's cattle and range. Maybe they're worth more than people think."

"Who could this someone be?" Lisa asked. "Abel Barbee, perhaps?"

Michah frowned. "Abel has an interest," he conceded. "Frank had promised to throw in with the Barbees. Between them, they figured they could market enough beef steers, no matter what the price, to give them a start at buying range and breeding stock up north. As it stands, with just the Bar B going it alone, Abel would be operating on a mighty thin string."

"You're building up a very strong case against Abel Barbee," Lisa said. "You know that, don't you?"

"Maybe. But I could point at others."

"Who, for instance?" Lisa asked.

But Michah shook his head, refusing to answer.

"Why didn't Mr. O'Hara go through with his promise to the Barbees?" Lisa asked.

"I have a hunch you're the Five Fined In Bus Seat Cases

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Five Negro leaders have been fined $51 each for sitting in seats normally used by white passengers on city buses. They were convicted of disorderly conduct.

A conductor on a train, a steamship captain or a bus driver has a grave responsibility of holding the peace, and the peace was violated," said City Court Judge Beverly Boushe in passing sentence Tuesday.

The city's first sustained series of sit-ins continued with demonstrations at bus stations and restaurants in downtown department stores.

Police said 14 Negroes were arrested at various sites, charged with loitering and disorderly conduct, and released after making bond of $102 each.

Hours Later, In An Iron Lung

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Hours after a young Tampa mother gave birth to her second child—a healthy girl—she was placed in an iron lung.

Goldie Young, 24, completely paralyzed, is the city's ninth polio victim. Hospital authorities said the birth occurred Thursday. Shortly afterward it was discovered Mrs. Young had paralytic polio.

Opposes Children In Picket Lines

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Duval County authorities are trying to locate persons responsible for placing Negro children in downtown store picket lines.

"I am not going to permit anyone to place children on the streets as pickets," said Juvenile Court Judge Marion W. Gooding. "It is an occupation which is hazardous to the welfare of children, regardless of whether they are white or colored."

The picket lines were set up at several stores after a number of sporadic sit-ins by Negroes at lunch counters.

JUMPED SHIP

CANAKKALE, Turkey (AP)—Two crewmen of a Soviet tanker jumped ship and asked Turkish authorities Tuesday night for political asylum. The two seamen were taken into custody. The tanker Uguleorsk resumed its trip to the Black Sea after Turkish police refused to surrender the defectors.

MARTIN SEEKS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Singer Tony Martin hungers for one taste of show business success he's never had: Broadway.

"The one thing I want to do is experience the thrill of an opening night on the New York stage," says the veteran of Hollywood and night clubs. "That will be it."

And Tony thinks a little more hard work will get him there. "Eddie Cantor once said to me 'It isn't how well you entertain, it's whether you have stamina and drive,'" Martin says.

Want Probe Into Leak Of Data On Potsdam

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) called today for an investigation of whether the Potsdam papers were leaked for publication for political purposes.

Mansfield, the assistant Senate Democratic leader, said he will ask the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to inquire into whether there were "any political overtones" in the way the documents became available to certain reporters.

Reports published by the Minneapolis Tribune and the Des Moines Register & Tribune say that former President Harry S. Truman agreed with the late Soviet dictator, Joseph Stalin, to stall a Japanese peace feeler three weeks before the first atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima.

The articles also said the papers show that Stalin once praised Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as an "honest man" who turned over to the Soviets 135,000 Germans trying to surrender to the Americans.

Both the State Department and the newspapers denied that any intentional leak was involved in making the papers available to Fletcher Knebel and Charles W. Bailey, who wrote the newspaper series.

"There was no leak. This was newspaper enterprise," said Richard L. Wilson, chief of the Washington bureau of the Cowles Newspapers.

He said in a statement the two reporters were given access to the documents in writing a book, "No High Ground," which was published June 8. It referred to the documents and drew on their content.

This month, he added, the reporters returned to the State Department's historical section, and for four days openly copied excerpts of the papers.

The State Department told substantially the same story, but said its regulations are being changed so the incident cannot be repeated. From time to time in the past, it said, it has permitted scholars to have access to documents in advance of their formal publication, on the theory that the documents will be made public by the time the scholars' books are published.

The department said in a statement it "has decided to suspend the granting of access to such material before official publication," as a result of the newspaper series.

The statement said publication of the Potsdam papers had been delayed because of "the discovery of relevant additional documentation." Privately, officials said that Secretary of State Christian A. Herter had directed some time ago that the papers be withheld until after the November elections.

Wilson disagreed with the delay, saying "the public should have access immediately to important state department documents when this is in the public interest, as is the case with the Potsdam papers."

What political use, if any, may be made of the published reports in the political campaign remains a question.

But Mansfield said the Foreign Relations Committee should be furnished "the true facts" as to how the papers found their way into publication.

"The timing and release of this secret information indicates the strong possibility of a leak from somewhere within the executive branch of the Eisenhower administration," Mansfield said.

Speaking to the Kinston Civitan Club after interrupting a vacation at Wrightsville Beach, Republican Robert Gavin said, "I am a free man, under obligation to no one. If you don't want a free man, vote for my opponent."

Gavin also attended a coffee and doughnut hour in Wilmington and spent most of the time chatting and shaking hands. Gavin's public relations director, Norman Evers of Greensboro, predicted Gavin would be elected "if the election were held today."

From Boone, where he is vacationing and politicking, Democrat Terry Sanford answered Republican criticism of a leaflet circulated among state employees Monday urging them to vote Democratic.

Sanford conceded that when administrations change, state jobs change. He said it happened in Washington in 1952 when the Republicans took over.

"But, in North Carolina the entire matter is a moot question," he said. "There is no point in getting excited because the Republicans are not going to win in North Carolina."

Wife Divorces Actor Talman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor William Talman's wife won an uncontested divorce after testifying he showed her no affection during the last two years of their eight-year marriage.

"He would say it was none of my business when I asked him why he stayed out so late," Barbara R. Talman told a judge Tuesday.

She won custody of the couple's two children and $700 monthly support.

Talman was dismissed from his role as district attorney on the Perry Mason television show after being picked up in a police raid on a Hollywood party. Charges against him later were dropped.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market advanced early this morning but was having increasing difficulty as the rally pushed into the fourth straight session. Trading was active.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .70 to 224.80 with the industrials up 1.30, the rails off .20 and the utilities up .40.

Autos were active and held a slight upside edge. Aircrafts succumbed to profit taking on their recent rise.

A number of large blocks was traded early in the session as more funds were committed to the market following Tuesday's rally which was sparked by a cut in the prime lending rate of big commercial banks.

As the initial momentum wore off, more minus signs appeared. Rails, oils, rubbers, and drugs were mostly lower. The balance was kept to the upside by gains among utilities, steels, coppers, chemicals, and electrical equipments.

Most of the gains were narrow. The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.87 at 649.16. Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds drifted lower.

President Cites Demo Majority If Votes United

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower said today Sen. John F. Kennedy can get what he wants from Congress if he can get the Democrats together.

With this mild gibe at the split among the Democrats, Eisenhower brushed aside at his news conference complaints by Kennedy, the Democratic presidential nominee, that the threat of an Eisenhower veto and lack of Republican support caused the Senate to reject his Social Security plan for medical care for the aged.

In making that complaint, Kennedy said that to get effective legislation "we're going to have to have an administration that will provide leadership and a Congress that will act."

Asked for comment, Eisenhower replied vigorously that the Democratic nominee has a 2-to-1 majority of his party in the membership of Congress.

He said he doesn't see how much more Kennedy could want. Even with more than enough, he added, the Democrats are not getting anywhere in Congress.

Eisenhower said that as for leadership, he had provided it by sending to Congress a program first outlined in January and then repeated in May and August.

The President said the Democrats have such a great majority that they can do what they want to in Congress if they can get together among themselves.

The news conference was devoted largely to politics, but the Cuban situation also came under discussion.

The President said he does not regard the Cuban situation as hopeless. He said that he will attend the fall meeting of the United Nations only if he finds later that some questions have come up that he thinks he should speak on personally.

In the political field, the President touched on these topics:

EQUAL TIME—He announced he had signed a bill under which Kennedy and Vice President Richard M. Nixon, the Republican presidential nominee, can debate on television without the networks having to give time to minor candidates.

Eisenhower called the networks' offer to give free time a fine thing and a public service.

CAMPAIGN ISSUES—Eisenhower said politics ought to end at the water's edge. He said, however, that while foreign policy itself should not be an issue, the conduct of international affairs obviously is going to be injected in the campaign.

On the domestic front, he said he supposes the farm problem will be a basic issue.

He said the Republicans will make sound money and fiscal responsibility one of their major talking points.

BENSON—Told that Democrats contend Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson has brought agriculture to a disaster point, the President reacted with a vigorous defense of his Cabinet member.

Eisenhower said Benson has struggled for years for real reform in the farm laws, some of which go back to 1930. He said Benson had traveled the world trying to increase the markets for American commodities. To say that Benson and the administration are responsible for the farm problem is all wrong, the President said.

Eisenhower went on to say he has never known a man more honest, dedicated and informed about his specialty than Benson.

NIXON—Eisenhower was questioned several times about the role Nixon has played in the administration. He was asked what policy decisions Nixon had participated in.

No one participates in his decisions, Eisenhower replied forcefully, and no one can make actual decisions except himself.

He said he has all sorts of advisers and Nixon has been at the top in this group.

Even if he didn't admire and respect Nixon as he does, the President said he would still keep the vice president completely aware of what is going on in the government. He said he thought he owed that to the country.

Eisenhower said Nixon had participated in all of the consultative meetings of the administration for nearly eight years. He added that he was glad that the vice president had never hesitated to express his opinions.

Carolina Power & Light To Build Transmission Line

A major transmission line to be built by Carolina Power and Light Co. will pass between Grifton and the DuPont plant and within seven miles of the Sheldahl Voice of America transmitter site.

The line will be constructed from CP&L's Goldsboro steam-electric generating plant eastward 72 miles to New Bern.

A. J. Skaale, manager of CP&L's operating and engineering department, said the line "will add considerable strength to the company's Eastern North Carolina power grid."

The facility will carry 110,000 volts of power over three conductors measuring over an inch in diameter, supported by heavy H-frame pole structures—530 in all—and 30 steel towers.

The line will originate at the company's Goldsboro generating plant where work is now underway on a 320,000 horsepower expansion program to more than double the plant's capacity.

At New Bern the line will connect with existing CP&L facilities to form another link in its Eastern North Carolina power supply. The new power artery will make possible the service of the area from either the Goldsboro plant or the Louis V. Sutton plant at Wilmington. The region centered by New Bern, Cherry Point, Morehead City, Jacksonville and Kinston is served by these generating plants, and others on CP&L's system, through interconnections.

The new line will take a year to complete. Crews will begin clearing right-of-way for the line in mid-October, Skaale said. Construction will begin in December. Target date for its completion is Sept. 1, 1951.

CP&L serves the towns of Grifton, Vanceboro and Grimesland in this area. It sells power to Farmville for its Water and Light Department.

CP&L also will serve the giant Sheldahl Voice of America transmitter when it is completed.

Want Junk For Artificial Reef

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP)—A Southport group bent on bringing more fish and fishermen to their area, are on the lookout for junked autos, discarded refrigerators and other sizeable pieces of refuse.

They gained Conservation and Development Board approval Tuesday to pile their collection and form an artificial reef near Baldhead Island in the mouth of the Cape Fear River.

Barnacles and other ocean forage would collect on the reef and attract hungry fish. Subsequently, larger, game fish would move in to feed on the smaller fish.

Finally, sportsmen would arrive on the scene, move to the reef area, which would be marked by buoys and try their luck.

The board, in approving the Southport group's request, said it would like to have similar reefs constructed in other coastal sections. They have been tried and found to work in other states.

The board also okayed a lease agreement for Roderick A. Stamey, a Texan, who says he has found traces of oil in southeastern North Carolina.

The lease covers state-owned lands in an area from New Bern to Beaufort and into the ocean until the three-mile limit, south to the South Carolina line, back inland to Tabor City and northward to Faison and New Bern.

Stamey has said he found oil traces while drilling in the area 13 years ago. He said he quit when he ran out of money.

Three Persons Arrested After Wreck On Highway

Two Negroes were arrested for public drunkenness and a third for reckless driving following a wreck, which caused an estimated $225 damage yesterday about one-half mile west of Greenville on U. S. 264 A.

Investigating Patrolman J. B. Surles of Greenville said Joe Wilks, 42, of Route 2, Greenville, was charged with reckless driving after his car went out of control, struck a utility pole, then crashed into a small car about 5:30 p.m. According to the officers, who quoted Wilks, the vehicle went out of control after the accelerator on the vehicle hung and Wilks bent down to free it.

Two passengers in the car, Bennie White 16, of 1117 West Fifth St., and Laverta White of Shepard St., were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital by the Greenville Rescue Squad to be checked, the later, arrested on charges of public drunkenness.

In a second highway mishap yesterday, a car driven by Lila Ippock of 411 East Second St. was damaged when the vehicle, headed east on U. S. 264 about one and one-half miles east of Greenville, ran into some water, skidded, then ran down a 15-foot embankment near Hardee's Creek.

Patrolman Surles, who investigated the accident, said Mrs. Ippock was admitted to the hospital but later released. Her injuries were not serious, he added.

Damage to the car was estimated to be about $600. The accident occurred about 3:45 p.m.

Congo Soldiers Flown To Kasai

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Premier Patrice Lumumba poured Congolese troops by air today into Kasai province, torn by tribal strife and threatened with secessionist movement.

The government requisitioned virtually all aircraft of the new Air Congo—formerly Belgium's Sabena line—to form an airlift between Leopoldville and Luluabourg, center of continuing tribal warfare.

Congolese soldiers, commanded by hastily promoted officers, began boarding planes at Leopoldville's airport Tuesday afternoon.

Col. Joseph Mobutu, chief of staff of the fledgling Congolese army, confirmed that more than 600 men have been dispatched to Luluabourg.

The provincial government of Leopoldville province appealed to U. N. soldiers to help it fight "Belgian paratroopers." The provincial government claimed that "many Belgian planes" dropped men and equipment Monday night and that the paratroopers were entrenched in the Lower Congo area near the frontier of Portuguese Angola.

There was no confirmation of the provincial government's claim. To some observers it sounded like an extension of the spy charges Lumumba whipped up against the Belgians last week to rally public sentiment behind him and take the steam out of growing anti-Lumumba sentiment in the Lower Congo.

It was certain, however, that Kasai province, east of Leopoldville, was torn by serious trouble.

For years the violently hostile Lulua and Baluba tribes have been fighting pitched battles with spears and poisoned arrows, since political chaos and disorder swept the newly independent Congo, the struggle between the two primitive tribes has flared with new intensity.

A number of U. N. soldiers have been reported killed or wounded while trying to control the turbulent area. No official total figures have been announced, but U. N. officials have spoken of at least five Tunisian soldiers killed.

For some time, the Congolese government has been asking the United Nations to supply planes. The U. N. refused, saying it had no right to serve as an instrument in the Congo's internal political situation. A number of observers believed that the Congolese airlift into Kasai might presage a similar operation against secessionist Katanga province, whose Premier Moïse Tshombe has been defying the central Congolese government for nearly two months.

In northern Katanga, Belgian paratroopers reportedly restored order in Albertville after a demonstration by Lumumba supporters set off fighting.

Three Collisions In City Tuesday

Damage estimated at over $300 was reported by local investigators in three collisions in Greenville yesterday.

Officers said an estimated $120 damage resulted to a car being driven by George Thomas Whitehurst, 32, of 1007 Overlook Drive, when it collided with a vehicle operated by Jessie E. Briley, 46, of 2103 South Village Drive, at the intersection of Cotanche and 14th Sts. yesterday about 4:07 p.m. Damage to the Briley auto was placed at $40.

No charges were placed by police, and no injuries were reported.

In a second wreck, an estimated $60 damage was done to a car driven by Bennie Franklin Bate-man of Chowan County when it was struck in the rear by a car driven by Winifred Marie Carter, Negro, Roanoke, Va.

Police, who set damage to the Carter auto, placed no charges following their investigation.

Molly Rains Harris of 2507 East Fourth St. was charged with failing to yield the right of way following investigation of a collision on Cotanche St. between Third and Fourth about 5:30 p.m. According to police, the Harris car allegedly pulled from a space into the path of a car driven by Ruth Carrigan of 270 East Fourth St.

Damage to the Harris car was set at $50, while no damage was reported to the Carrigan car.
