Man-Sized Sandwiches Please

THE MAKING OF A Hero Sandwich: a variety of cold meat and cheese plus tomatoes, pickles, green pepper and sliced onion. Hearty and refreshing with iced tea!

Heroes are made at home. All you need are crusty loaves of bread, a variety of meats and cheeses and some savory go-alongs and you can have the biggest easy-to-prepare snacks of the season.

Modern ways have helped along these sandwiches. Originally they were concocted from loaves of bread is found in many large markets, and it is also widely available in brown-and-serve form.

Take your choice of meat for the Hero sandwich. Ham is present in the best of them—either plain boiled or leftover baked ham. The Italian-style ham called prosciutto is a great addition. Of delicate flavor, it's extremely lean and aged in spices. Usually it is cut lengthwise, but it's perfectly okay to cut it across the grain. Just one "must" about prosciutto—it must be sliced paper-thin.

Do you know your dry sausages? They make good eating in a Hero sandwich. These are sometimes called Summer Sausage because when they were first made, long ago, there was no refrigeration and their formulas were worked out with summertime storage in mind.

Among the dry sausages are all sorts of salami and cervelat. Italian salami, made of coarsely chopped pork and finely chopped leaf beef, is particularly suitable for Hero sandwiches. Cervelat comes in coarse medium or fine texture.

Another good choice, among dry sausages, is Capicola. It's on the large fat side and resembles Canadian bacon. Made of pork butt, it has a mild flavor. Similar to Capicola but hotter in flavor is Coppa.

For Hero sandwiches choose Italian, Swiss or cheddar-type cheese. Classic go-alongs include peppers, pickles, tomatoes, onion (red preferably) and olive oil. For an especially distinctive accompaniment, serve homemade mustard.

An easy way to have a picnic is to take along the makings of Hero sandwiches and then let guests put together their own snacks. If you want to serve iced tea, tote it in a picnic jug. An easy way to make 2 quarts of the tea is to bring 3 cups of water to a boil in a saucepan. Add 1-3 cup loose tea (off heat) and allow to brew for 3 to 5 minutes, then stir it up and strain it, adding 5 cups of cold water.

Couple Marries At Noon

ALBEMARLE, N.C.—Today at noon Miss Patricia Ann Starnes and Christopher Lewis Bramlett of Greenville were married in the bride's home here.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Eugene Starnes of 315 S. Third St. and the bridegroom, residing at 1613 Beaumont Rd., Greenville, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vaughn Bramlett of Scott-Dale Rd., Canton.

The Rev. Cecil L. Heckard officiated during the double-ring ceremony. Miss Peggie Lisk, soloist, sang "Because" and "Song of Ruth."

Miss Nancy Finan, pianist, rendered these musical selections: "Clair de Lune," "Liebestraum," "Intermezzo," "Traumerei," and the traditional wedding march by Wagner for processional.

The wedding vows were spoken in the Oriental room before a background of emerald palms, white wrought-iron candelabra and a white prie dieu in the center. Trees of white chrysanthemums were placed on either side. The stairway was entwined with southern smilax, ending in arrangement of pink rubrum lilies, and white embossed wedding bells at the base.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length Chantilly lace and bridal satin gown. It featured a fitted bodice with dropped waistline outlined with a contour of satin, tiny shirred sleeves and self-covered buttons down the back.

The skirt of Chantilly lace over bridal satin was fashioned with swirls of pleated tulle attached to panels with lace insertions re-embroidered with seed pearls and paillettes. The full skirt has a back interest of extra panels that formed a sweeping skirt outlined with scalloped insertion.

Her fingertip veil of imported illusion was worn with a mantilla of matching Chantilly lace embroidered in seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis, white orchids and valley lilies.

Maid of honor, Brenda Ruth Peeler, cousin of the bride, wore a pink chiffon over taffeta dress featuring a full skirt, fitted bodice with tiny shoestring straps and daisies scattered on the bodice front. A colonial bouquet of miniature pink roses, baby's breath and pink streamers and matching hair arrangement completed her outfit.

Best man was Mr. Bramlett, father of the groom, Francis Eugene Starnes, Jr., brother of the bride, was usher.

The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a blue brocade sheath dress and white gardenia corsage. Mrs. Bramlett wore a mauve pink lace dress and also a white gardenia corsage.

A wedding breakfast was held immediately following the ceremony.

Decorations throughout the home consisted of pink floral arrangements of roses, delphiniums, snapdragons, and lilies.

The dining room table overlaid with a linen hand-embroidered and lace banquet cloth was centered with the traditional cake. The four-tiered Lady Windemere wedding cake was an all white silver pound, decorated with hand modelled orchids, stephanotis and imported dragees from France. The base was surrounded with white Chantilly lace and tulle over bridal satin, extended from the cake were nosegays of stephanotis at each corner of the table.

The top tier of the cake was separated with a mirror and champagne glasses in the bride's crystal and topped with three white orchids.

A silver coffee service was placed on the buffet flanked by epergnettes holding white stephanotis and satin ribbons, white tapers. Mrs. F. M. Stonestreet served. The silver punch bowl and cups were placed on a small table featuring a five-branched candelabra with white flowers. Mrs. W. N. McKenzie served the punch.

Sport Of Pigeon-Racing Fares Well In Eastern N. C.

COMPARING WINGS . . . of two racers are "Red" Styers (left) and Warren Gurganus at the club secretary-treasurer's back yard loft.

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE—A "very popular" sport in the European countries is doing well for itself in Eastern North Carolina.

The popular sport is pigeon racing and Eastern Tar Heels interested in the racing fowls have located their headquarters in Farmville.

There, at "Red" Styers' loft, the keeping place for the birds, the Eastern Carolina Racing Pigeon Club meets monthly to discuss racing pigeons in general and plan races for members' fleet-winged birds.

Three of the 13 active members in the Eastern Carolina club are Farmville residents. One, Styers, is host to the club's monthly meetings. Another, Warren Gurganus, is the bird racers' secretary-treasurer. The third is J. W. Shirley.

The local men are "fascinated" by their hobbies. Between them they can produce nearly a hundred racing pigeons. And some of them are race winners.

The club is a relative newcomer to Farmville. It began in Kinston some years ago before moving to Snow Hill, where it was hosted by Jim Potter, a racing pigeon fan.

Members joined the group from Tarboro, Rocky Mount, and Wilsonton, and the club moved its headquarters to Farmville to afford a more centralized location for meetings.

"You'd be surprised how much satisfaction you can get out of these pigeons," Styers says. "It's a real thrill to see one of them come home."

And home they come. Members organize races that begin at points north of Farmville—as far north as Washington, D. C.; Richmond, Emporia, and Charlottesville, Va.; and even Buffalo, N. Y.

Through their natural instincts, the birds swiftly wing their way home to their lofts. Champion racing pigeons can fly as far as 500 miles at average speeds that border on 60 m.p.h.

The Eastern Carolina Club, though, has yet to fly a race farther than from Washington. As the group adds more members, it plans to lengthen and increase the number of its races. Currently, Styers says, the club is trying to schedule two races monthly.

The Races
Each club member is equipped with a timing clock. Before the races begin, all clocks are synchronized and members return to their lofts before the birds are released.

Each member enters a minimum of four racing pigeons and pays a small fee for having them delivered to the starting point. From each of the seven official starting points that can be utilized by the club, mileage has been measured to each member's loft—correct to the nearest one-thousandth of a mile—and recorded.

An agent of the club releases the winged races—all at exactly the same time—and telephones the starting time to the club.

Instantly, when the pigeons arrive, the members tear pre-affixed tags from the birds' legs and insert them into the time clock. The clock's mechanism stamps the exact time of arrival.

From the recorded time of arrival, each bird's speed—in yards per minute—is calculated. The fastest speed rate wins the race and the bird's owner reaps the prize—usually a small cash amount.

The local club has scheduled its next race for the weekend of Sept. 3-4. The pigeons will match speeds this time over the 70 to 100 mile course (depending upon the location of the loft) from the Emporia "starting gate."

Members are now training their prize racers for that contest.

In addition to the three Farmville members, two other Pitt Countyans are active club members.

Involved in the pigeon-racing business are Herbert Dall of Fountaine and Charles Mussellwhite of Winterville.

Rounding out the club's roll are Potter in Snow Hill; Robert and Mary Hunt and Robert Goff of Goldsboro; Hadie Walston of Wilsonton; Bob Langley of Bath; and J. B. and J. G. Mooring of Rocky Mount.

Catfish Farm Profits Talked

RALEIGH (AP) — They may raise catfish on the Tar Heel farm of the future.

Catfish price supports and acreage controls are a long way off, but the idea that the product could be a profit-maker was discussed at length here Thursday.

Gov. Hodges and his Agriculture Advisory Committee heard from Tommy Upchurch of Raeford. When Upchurch, a committee member, brought up the subject, the group chuckled.

"I laughed, too," said Upchurch, "when I first heard about it."

But, he went on, a farmer, using proper soy bean feeding methods, could grow 3,000 pounds of catfish on an acre at a cost of 11 cents a pound. This is much less than the cost of feeding poultry.

He said an operator in Florida had a standing order to furnish 18 tons of catfish a week at 55 cents a pound to a Chicago firm.

"The thing does have tremendous possibilities," he said.

On the subject of more immediate importance, Gov. Hodges discussed the tobacco situation and said, "We should have the courage to say that we are in trouble with tobacco. Some day this thing is going to explode in our faces."

Dr. Roy H. Lovvern told the group the new process of bulk curing tobacco is ready to move from the research phase to the farm. He said it could result in a 60 per cent saving in the labor required to cure tobacco.

Nothing this, Hodges said new jobs must be found for persons forced off the farms by this and other modernizations.

Real Honor If Kennedy Stops Here

It would be indeed an honor for Greenville and an important campaign boost for the Democratic party of Eastern North Carolina if Sen. John Kennedy decides to make Pitt County one of his campaign stops in North Carolina.

Since the Democratic national convention in Los Angeles in July Democratic leaders of this county have been feeling out the prospects of a Kennedy visit here in connection with the campaign. With the indication from Washington this week that the Democratic Presidential nominee is considering Greenville as a stop in his visit to North Carolina, every effort should be made by local leaders to encourage the visit.

In past presidential elections the major candidates have not seen fit to come east of Raleigh in their campaign visits to North Carolina. This has been the practice in spite of the fact that the eastern part of the state always has voted heavily for the Democratic candidates and on a number of occasions has been the deciding factor in North Carolina staying in the Democratic column.

Maybe it has been the thinking that the candidates could accomplish more by visiting the larger cities of the Piedmont and that a visit to Raleigh would suffice for the large area of Eastern Carolina. Maybe there has been a question about the size audience a candidate could attract if he visited one of the cities of the East, considerably smaller than Raleigh or some in the Piedmont. There would be little question about Sen. Kennedy drawing a huge crowd—perhaps his largest in the state—if he came to Greenville for an Eastern Carolina appearance. Neither can there be any question about the boost such a visit would give efforts to get out a large Democratic vote in this section of the state in November. And this could be vital in the final outcome of the election in this state which Sen. Kennedy has termed "critical".

No presidential candidate has ever made a campaign visit east of Raleigh in North Carolina. We hope that Sen. Kennedy will see fit to come to Eastern Carolina on his swing through the state next month, and we also hope that he will see fit to choose Greenville as the site for his Eastern Carolina appearance.

More To The Point--- Remember Good Things

It's not difficult for one to find fault with the community in which he lives, for every community, regardless of how fine it may be, has its shortcomings. Some of these may be of a minor nature, others may be major. Some may be problems that recently have been recognized, others may be the same ones the community has worked on for years without ever completely solving.

In every community with a conscientious citizenry, however, the good things about the community, the advantages it offers its people far outweigh the shortcomings.

This situation exists in spite of the fact that a substantial portion of people often are more prone to criticize the community in which they live than they are to praise the good things the community has. To a great extent it may be because the good things of the community are taken for granted, and there is complaining because they aren't better. It may be because the citizens are eager for their community to show greater progress and tend to grow disgusted when the progress is not as rapid as they want.

In many instances, however, citizens tend to degrade their own communities when there is no justification for doing so. When telling others about the community they point out the shortcomings without also pointing out the many fine things the community also has to offer.

There is no community in Pitt County which is completely satisfactory to the people who live there. Each has shortcomings and its citizens are aware of these and are anxious to see them overcome. At the same time there are relatively few people who would trade the communities in which they live for others around them. They recognize privately the many fine things about the community. They likewise are aware of the progress which has been made and are confident continued progress will be made in the future.

On a comparative basis, they usually come to the conclusion that their community has as much to offer others . . . in spite of its shortcomings.

The next time you are prone to recite to someone the shortcomings of your home community, also give them an evaluation of the good things the community has to offer. Chances are they will receive a more realistic picture of what the community is really like, and you also may recognize some good points of the community you have tended to overlook.

Anti-Catholic Drive Growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bit by bit the country is seeing the Roman Catholicism of Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic presidential candidate, being made a campaign issue by mail and from pulpits.

This anti-Catholic drive has been spreading rapidly in the South — particularly in Texas and the Carolinas. And one top Democrat told reporters Kennedy's religion may be a greater issue in the Middle West than the farm problem.

Nonpartisan observers also report that the campaign is growing.

Bruce L. Felkner, executive director of the Fair Practices Committee said Wednesday: "The circulation of rabidly anti-Catholic material already is many times greater than we have ever seen it. We think at this point there is a substantial danger the campaign in 1960 will be dirtier on the religious issue than it was in 1928."

In that year Roman Catholic Alfred E. Smith was defeated for the presidency by Herbert Hoover after a campaign in which the religious issue was a big one. Kennedy's advisers are acutely aware of what is happening and are concerned.

His press secretary Pierre Salinger told reporters Wednesday the Democratic organization will

Public Forum

Officers of the city are zealous in providing new facilities for our citizens. In their ardent concern for these few facilities it is natural for them to overlook other values such as the beauty of a tree. A proposal has been made that a committee of advisory function and powers be appointed by the mayor, or otherwise selected, and that the committee's opinion be learned before any tree on public property be removed or have a major part of its top removed. It would seem appropriate that the chairman of this committee be the president of one of the garden clubs. In addition there might be two men and two women selected from well known organizations of the city. It is believed that such a committee would be in keeping with our American heritage of democracy and checks and balances.

Yours truly, R.M. Helms

On Pigeon Racing Front

Racing pigeons? Yep, they're just about as abundant around here as any other racing bird, dog, auto, or anything else that was for that matter.

Racing pigeon clubs? Yep, they're also part of the environs. And not so hard to find if you'll pause a moment to investigate.

As a matter of fact, Farmville is the headquarters for the Eastern Carolina Racing Pigeon Club — a member of the International Federation of Pigeons.

Yesterday we spend some enjoyable hours talking to the racing club's two members who live in the western Pitt town. Before we left, we decided the activity must be worth while, because both members were enthusiastic, to say the least, about their pigeons.

While we were searching out the pigeon racers, though, we stumbled on several interesting comments.

Knowing exactly nothing about pigeon racing clubs, or racing pigeons, or pigeon races, or pigeons in general, we set out to locate the club reportedly located in Farmville.

We'd heard several details about the club's activities and felt sure "most anybody around Farmville" could direct us to the loft (that's where the racing fowls are kept, we are told).

First of all, we contacted the townclerk. Now ole Harold Allred usually knows most things that go on in and around Farmville.

"Racing Pigeon Club?" he exclaimed. "I don't know what you're talking about."

Well, we explained carefully how the birds are raised at home and then carried to points afar and then points farther and released. "They simply fly back home and the first one back wins the race," we said.

We added an afterthought: "It just might be that the pigeons get home before the club members can get back."

"The only thing I ever carried off from home that got back before I did," Harold remembered, "was a load of cats."

We tried again. This time it was Mr. W.A. McAdams (Mr. Mac) who told us he'd heard of such things as homing pigeons but couldn't remember just who was handling them.

Our comments, though, recalled to his mind how "homing dogs" operate.

He related several instances when dogs' owners would lose, sell, or abandon them.

In most cases, he said the dogs returned home. One dog, he remembered, traveled regularly back and forth between points separated by some 20 miles.

We were talking to Mr. Mac in Farmville grocery store. Suddenly, he remembered another name. Those two names were Farmville's two members of the club (the Racing Pigeon Club) and we were in business.

After we found "Red" Styers and Warren Gurganus (the two members), we learned what some avid pigeon racers will do. One of the most astonishing things.

The Racing Pigeon News carried an advertisement inserted by a Norfolk pigeon racer.

In it he offered a reward for the return of "Big Red" — his prize racing bird.

The amount? $500. That's pigeons today.

Lining Up For Big Race

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Another week has passed during which both candidates are mending fences. The campaign, which was to have started now (emphasized and underlined), has not started at all. The course is running the same as usual. Both candidates are organizing for victory, both are catering to their natural opponents. Both are waiting for Labor Day to pass.

John Kennedy has made his peace with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and with Harry Truman. The peace with Mrs. Roosevelt is important because it could affect what once was 400,000 votes of the Liberal (Socialist) Party in New York which follows Mrs. Roosevelt politically. In 1958, it polled 283,926 votes. This party, which consists of the so-called Jewish labor unions, has already endorsed John Kennedy. When the unions are referred to as Jewish, what is meant is that the leaders, David Dubinsky, Alex Rose and Jacob Potofsky, are Jews, but the members today are mostly Italians, Negroes and Puerto Ricans. The leaders walk a tight-rope and Mrs. Roosevelt, who is not only a canny politician but ruthless, knows her power.

The peace with Harry Truman is of a different nature. What might be called the respectable elements in the Democratic Party admire Harry Truman. They prefer his leadership to that of Adlai Stevenson. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt or for that matter, John Kennedy. They dislike the A.D.A. Most such Democrats wanted Lyndon Johnson or Stuart Symington to be nominated. They resent the methods by which John Kennedy sought and received the nomination. They were outraged by the rudeness of Mrs. Roosevelt and Adlai Stevenson at the convention. It is an element that could vote Republican or not vote at all. Therefore peace with Truman was important. Harry Truman is a party man. He could no more vote Republican than he could join the Moslem faith. It does not take much for him to be regular. On the other hand, can he deliver the Democrats who do not want Kennedy?

Mrs. Roosevelt's influence in New York City is very important. Her following is large and fanatical. Her awareness caused many New York so-called Liberals to say that they would vote for Norman Thomas this year. As Norman Thomas is not a candidate, this means that it is their intention not to vote at all. Eleanor Roosevelt's attitude may change their viewpoint.

A whispering campaign is being paid for in large cities with Jewish populations that Richard Nixon is an anti-Semite. Those who spread this story are liars. No Quaker is an anti-Semite. Furthermore, Nixon's entire career is evidence of his breadth of view on questions of race and religion.

This story goes back to the days when Nixon was a member of Congress, fighting the Communists. When he discovered the "pumpkin papers" and had Alger Hiss and Whittaker Chambers confront each other, the Communists attempted to smear the young Representative from California. They could find no record because, except that he went to college and had been in the Navy, Nixon had made no record up to then that was particularly notable.

When he ran against Helen Gahagan Douglas for United States Senator, he trounced her, he brought down on his head the maledictions of the Liberals. Helen Gahagan Douglas was one of their queens and she was believed to be a sure-in when Nixon destroyed her political career. She has disappeared politically.

Thus, he had against him the combined strength of the Communists and the Liberals who have never forgiven him. When he ran for Vice President, they joined to smear him. He faced their charges forthrightly and won the respect of most Americans. It was the Communist-Liberal attack on Nixon in the 1952 campaign that made him an unusual figure in American politics.

Other Editors Saying A Greater Injustice

(Washington Daily News)

The State of North Carolina is sending a 15-year-old mentally retarded girl to prison for a term of six to eight years on a murder charge because "there is no room in any correctional institution for her."

This 15-year-old girl, according to testimony at her trial, has the mind of a six-year-old child and an intelligence quotient of 41. She entered a plea of guilty to the charge against her as her lawyer told of the life of the girl, her mental condition, and her part in the crime.

There are several thoughts which must run through the minds of many people over North Carolina as they read this story. Can a girl with a mental condition which classifies her as a "six-year-old" possibly be guilty of murder? That one question bothers us a great deal.

Looking over both questions, we are frankly puzzled by many angles of such a case. Certainly two injustices, like two wrongs, do not make one justice or one right. The find of a six-year-old child is not sufficiently capable of knowing the difference between right and wrong.

Why in court did not the lawyers for this child enter a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity? If the truth was presented in court, then surely the people of North Carolina do not expect punishment of the prison type for any person, be that person a child or an adult, who does not have the sufficient mentality to distinguish between right and wrong.

This girl was tried in Robeson county. But that county is not guilty any more than Beaufort county or Mecklenburg county. The people living in 100 counties of North Carolina are now becoming part of a prison sentence which in effect makes all of us guilty of a grave injustice. And this injustice we are now in the act of committing is almost brutal and inhuman.

Perhaps our greatest injustice to this child comes in our failure to provide adequately for the mentally ill people of our state. Had we enough institutions to take care of mentally ill patients, then this child would not now be going to prison. And surely even the most hardened will admit that prison is a poor substitute for a mental hospital.

The people of North Carolina in this moment ought to search their own consciences and find a better answer than prison. In our state tonight perhaps many thousands of our citizens will get on their knees to pray. How many will ask forgiveness for this injustice we, as a people, are inflicting upon this child?

Prison is not the answer. This 15-year-old girl with the six-year-old mind needs help — not punishment. She needs a mental hospital — not a prison. She needs a doctor — not a guard.

This girl stood before the legal bar of North Carolina and she was given her sentence. In this hour the people of North Carolina stand convicted at the bar of public opinion—a conviction which smears a stain upon the conscience of every normal man, woman, and child in our state.

Informed Women Stockholders

Women are more ignorant than men about who heads the corporation in which they own shares. And they are considerably more uninformed about advertising policies of corporations.

WOMEN MORE HONEST
WOMEN MORE HONEST
More women than men (51 per cent vs. 16 per cent of males) admit that they usually invest on the basis of "casual recommendations from friends." Fewer women than men invest on the basis of their own hunches.

Also, more women than men admit that they do not consider themselves sufficiently trained to understand company earnings statements and that they seek counsel for clarification.

Mr. Javits commented: "Women are more honest than members of male sex in admitting that they seek information and take advice from others."

"Women stockholders used to be timid, but that is no longer true. They are becoming more active, and ask more intelligent questions all the time. Women are interested in learning, whereas men are ashamed to say that they don't know."

Mr. Javits, attorney and economist, founded the nonprofit organization to educate individual investors on management, legislation and other areas affecting earnings. His theory is that the private investors, like labor and management, must unite with others to promote their common self-interest.

Officers of the organization are at 630 Fifth Ave., New York and 1501 K St., N.W., Washington, D.C.

Overlooked In The Big Picture

By LYNN NISBET

NEWS — Some of the best "news" developed at meetings like that of the Board of Conservation and Development at Nags Head this week does not get into the newspapers. There is so much detail involved in reports of division chiefs and committee chairmen that the news stories must condense and publish only the final decisions.

The news stories played up the sharp lecture given by Governor Hodges to the Morehead City group which was seeking intervention of the C&D and the Governor to get further consideration of a bridge location. These stories did not note that the request was based on the claim that since local interests agreed to the location, the Governor had intervened in a somewhat similar conflict of interest between the art museum and the highway commission.

A significant statement in Victor Meekins' delightfully humorous welcome address was that most movements to create new boards were motivated by desire to divert attention from the main issue—failure of established boards to do as good job as possible under existing laws. He said if present regulations are enforced there will be no need for the proposed separate commercial fisheries commission.

Governor Hodges further developed that thought in his banquet speech opposing the idea of separating the division of commerce and industry from the C&D department.

COOPERATION — not only are all C&D divisions cooperating among themselves, but there is every year fuller cooperation between them and local government and private enterprise. This was particularly noted in reports of community planning and forestry divisions.

An area planning office is being established at Salisbury and steps are being taken to establish another at Kinston. Most of the operating expense of these branches, which will serve several neighboring communities, will be borne by local people. Meantime cooperative effort is in progress for area development around the Gaston dam site on the Roanoke and the Wilkesboro dam site on the Yadkin. Almost every month additional municipalities come up with offers of their 50 percent of cost for local planning.

Ninety-two of the 100 counties, largest number ever, have joined the State in fire control and reforestation programs and at least one other county is considering it. The big pulp and paper companies pool their resources with those of the State in control of fire and disease and seedling production. Ten Southeastern States have entered a compact, sanctioned by their legislatures and the Congress, for cooperation in these areas. A study is underway, financed by a grant of $30,000 from the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation, designed to bring small individual landowners into a coordinated forestry program.

State Forester Fred Claridge injected into his oral report high commendation for work done by prisoners in fire control efforts. "Even though two prisoners did steal one of our automobiles," he said, "the general morale was so high, I believe if the others could have caught these two miscreants they would have handled them satisfactorily."

While this spirit of cooperation is general, there are some areas of conflict of interest and rivalry in nearly every phase of the ramified activities of the C&D department and related agencies—public and private—and among sections of the state.

CONFLICT—The long controversy between commercial and sport fishermen is unabated. Another continuing argument is extent to which parks and forests should be "developed" for recreational use or maintained in pristine wilderness condition. That conflict is sharply pointed up by proposed uses of the Cape Hatteras Seashore and Great Smoky Mountains National Parks, by the "development" of Ocracoke Island, and conflict between two State agencies over a proposed road along the northern shore of Fontana.

Some States have commercialized their park areas to the point where they pay their own way in revenue from hotels, overnight lodging and other facilities in competition with private business. North Carolina has adopted the policy of operating State parks primarily for her own people for nature study and recreation at low cost.

Tom Morse, director of the State Parks division in C&D, reiterated his belief—with apparent approval of the board—that the parks should continue on that basis. Small fees are charged for use of facilities, but these facilities should be reserved primarily for North Carolinians who use the parks, rather than for the convenience of transient travelers who want night lodging. To support that idea Morse reported that while attendance at State parks showed an increase for the first six months of this year over 1959 of 8.2 percent and swimming 20 percent over last year. Percentage figures were not given, but he reported greatly increased interest in nature studies by school groups.

In that year Roman Catholic Alfred E. Smith was defeated for the presidency by Herbert Hoover after a campaign in which the religious issue was a big one. Kennedy's advisers are acutely aware of what is happening and are concerned.

Local Man Serving New Jersey Schools

A Greenville native and East Carolina College graduate is serving as assistant commissioner of education in charge of the Division of Curriculum and Instruction for the State of New Jersey. Dr. Robert S. Fleming, son of Mr. Fleming of 204 W. Third St., was appointed successor to Dr. Ablett H. Flury, who has retired. The appointment was made by Commissioner of Education Frederick M. Raubinger. Dr. Fleming is, at present chairman of the Department of Early Childhood and Elementary Education at New York University. He has an A.B. degree from East Carolina College; an M.A. degree from George Peabody College; has done graduate work at the University of Chicago and the University of Minnesota; and received his doctorate at New York University. He began his career as a high school teacher of science and mathematics and has also taught at various levels of the elementary school. He was a member of the staff of the Southern Study, a curriculum research study sponsored by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. For eight years, he helped to develop the curriculum for the public schools in Tennessee while working on the faculty of the University of Tennessee. Dr. Fleming was in military service from 1942-1946. He has served also as head of the Department of Education of the Mississippi State College for Women. Before coming to New York University he was a professor at the University of Tennessee. He has been a visiting professor at the Universities of Florida, and University of North Carolina, and University of Southern California. Last year he conducted a survey of education in Puerto Rico. He was coordinator of curriculum research for a division of the National Education Association; he is chairman of the Research Committee of the Association for Childhood Education International. During the past several years, he has worked also as a curriculum consultant for the National Society for Crippled Children, National Association for Professors of Dentistry, the American Home Economics Association, and the National Nutrition Conference. He and Mrs. Fleming will live in Princeton, New Jersey.

Will Preach At Two Churches

The Reverend Matthew McGowan, a native of Pitt County, will be preaching at the Hollywood and Chicod Presbyterian Churches, Sunday, August 28. He will conduct the morning worship service and administer the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at 11 o'clock at the Hollywood Presbyterian Church and the evening service at Chicod Presbyterian Church. Mr. McGowan is the former pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Rocky Mount and is moving to Richmond, Va. to become pastor of the Overbrook Presbyterian Church.

(Continued from page four) When Kennedy last spring battled Sen. Hubert Humphrey in the West Virginia presidential primary, it was thought anti-Catholicism might ruin him. The Catholic population of that state is less than 5 per cent. But when Kennedy won overwhelmingly, many observers felt that if he went on to get the Democratic presidential nomination, as he did, his religion might not be much of an issue in the campaign. This is beginning to look like one of the grand illusions of 1960. Felkner's Fair Campaign Practices Committee, which is nonpartisan and privately supported, seeks to prevent unfair campaign tactics. Backed by both major parties, it screens questionable material received throughout the country. Felkner said: "It is becoming much more virulent and overt. What's so disturbing is that much of this garbage is showing up so much earlier than it habitually does in an election." He emphasizes there has been no indication that any of the material in question came from responsible Republican quarters.

It is like similar charges against John Kennedy because his father was a friend of the charming Lady Astor. Those who spread tales that Richard Nixon or, for that matter, John Kennedy, is an anti-Semite are not friends of Jews. They are liars. Some are bigots. Some

Anti-Peiping Manifesto Said Being Distributed By Kremlin

NEW YORK (AP)—The Soviet Union was reported today to be distributing to Communist parties throughout the world an anti-Peiping "manifesto" designed to enlist mass support against Red China's challenge to Soviet leadership of the Communist world.

A dispatch from Washington to the New York Herald Tribune said existence of the document has been established "through information from behind the Iron Curtain and elsewhere and a summary of the manifesto's general line is available in high government circles."

The story speaks of a struggle for dominance within the Soviet bloc of nations and adds: "If Peiping is not soon brought to acquiescence with Moscow—or at least to silence about its disagreements—Washington would not be surprised if Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev attempted some form of Communist-bloc 'ideological quarantine' of Red China . . .

Disclose 1,270 Agents Defected

BONN, Germany (AP)—A total of 1,270 Communist secret agents surrendered voluntarily to West German authorities in the first six months of this year, the government reported today.

A spokesman said West German courts sentenced 1,799 spies for East bloc nations between Aug. 30, 1951, and the end of 1959. An additional 17,182 agents were caught but were not punished for compassionate reasons or because they readily confessed their guilt, he said.

East German security officials who defected said the Communist bloc currently is using 16,000 agents in West Germany and West Berlin, and that this number is being maintained despite the yearly loss of 2,400 to 2,800 agents, the spokesman reported.

that the Communist camp tried to present in the final communiqué at Bucharest which purported to bridge over the differences between Peiping and Moscow.

"The anti-Peiping 'manifesto' (as it has been dubbed by Western diplomats) condemns those 'dogmatists' who mechanically interpret what Lenin said 40 years ago to mean that nuclear war is inevitable and that war is the only means by which the revolution can be made to triumph.

"This of course, refers to the Chinese argument that nuclear war is not to be feared because it would mean the triumph of communism over capitalism . . .

"The paper goes into detail as to why, in the nuclear age, the

Have 12 Negroes In White Schools

DURHAM (AP) — When Durham city schools open next Tuesday a total of 12 Negroes will be attending classes in predominantly white public schools.

The City School Board, meeting in closed session Wednesday night, approved applications for seven more Negroes to the formerly all-white schools. Earlier, five had been admitted.

A total of 205 applications were studied by the board before the seven Negroes were assigned to Durham High, Brogden Junior High and Carr Junior High.

Computers Used As Law Library

WASHINGTON (AP)—Development of a new use for high-speed computer machines—as a kind of electronic library and law clerk—was claimed today by the International Business Machines Corp.

IBM said some of its computers have been set up to locate legal information in record time and present it in written form. Legal information is stored on magnetic tape within the machine. By feeding key words into the machine, desired statutes containing the descriptive words are cited automatically.

Overseas Chinese Return Home Despite Conditions

By RELMAN MORIN

HONG KONG (AP)—The ship docks in a mainland China port and Mr. Wong looks for the first time on the land of his ancestors.

Mr. Wong is an overseas Chinese. That is, he was born outside metropolitan China, in one of the non-Communist nations of Southeast Asia. He has lived there most of his life, and his children were born overseas.

Now, as he walks down the gangplank, Mr. Wong is leaving the world he has known, to re-settle in Communist China.

This is another move in the vast struggle for Southeast Asia. Communist China has launched a campaign to induce overseas Chinese to return to the mainland. Within the past year or so, Peiping says, nearly 50,000 have done so.

To the communists, each new shipload of passengers brings several benefits.

1. Great propaganda value. They can report, with a degree of truth, that these Chinese have chosen to live in a Communist society in preference to the one they have known elsewhere.

2. Technical skills. Mr. Wong and the millions like him represent a reservoir of techniques acquired from Western-trained engineers and technicians.

3. Money from abroad. The Chinese family is a close-knit unit. For years, the overseas Chinese has been remitting between 10 and 50 million dollars a year to his relatives on the mainland. Having will no longer be sending money, but his relatives will send it. As the number increases, so, in all probability will the total annual figure.

What induces Mr. Wong to leave a free society and come back?

There are many answers—most of them bordering on the tragic.

Rivers of words have been written and spoken about conditions in China, about the communes, the regimentation, the 16-and 18-hour working day, about life in a slave state. Yet this seems to have made slight penetration. The meaning of communism and the implications of cold war are little understood.

Another is emotional.

Grandpa Wong still dreams of his village and the graves of his ancestors; he cannot picture it as very different from the way it looked when he left many years ago. A young Chinese in Malaya feels frustrated. "You go to a Chinese school here and you're a member of the Chinese community. But where do you get a job after you graduate? The Malays have privileges and preferences we don't have."

A third is political.

As the new nations of Southeast Asia become more nationalistic, the Chinese population in each tends to become a target.

A fourth is shrewd Communist public relations.

The overseas Chinese is permitted to visit his father's homeland. Welcoming committees take him in tow. What he sees and to whom he talks is carefully supervised. Radio Peiping describes special communities for the overseas Chinese, equipped with dormitories, apartments, schools and hospitals. The radio lists overseas Chinese who have risen to influential positions in government.

These are the main reasons Mr. Wong is returning to China. No other country makes the effort to help him when he is uprooted.

Partly by design, partly by default, Red China is winning in this sector of the battle for Southeast Asia.

Radio Station To Begin Full-Time Broadcasting

Radio Station WGTC is resuming full-time broadcasting effective tonight, General Manager J. T. Snowden Jr. announced today.

The station will operate from 5:30 a.m. to 12:05 midnight every day, the manager stated.

The change in policy from limited daytime broadcasting follows a decision rendered by the Federal Communications Commission allowing WGTC to resume nighttime broadcasting.

In connection with the additional broadcasting time, Snowden said that WGTC has arranged to broadcast the Carolina football schedule, the ECC football schedule, Atlantic Coast Conference basketball including the Dixie Classic and the NCAA play-offs, high school football including Greenville and county schools, the Redskins professional games and other sports events of local interest.

WGTC's farm service, educational and cultural programming will be expanded, Snowden said. A Sunday evening religious service broadcast from a local church is also planned. A new mobile unit has been acquired by the station to expand local news coverage.

WGTC is a regional station, operating with 5,000 watts power at 1590 kilocycles, Snowden said. It was established here in 1940.

Three Tied For Lead In Milwaukee Open

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The two fierce competitors squared off in a personal duel. One scrambled while the other performed with the skill of a surgeon. It wound up in a standoff. Doug Ford and Ken Venturi matched contrasting styles Thursday and then had to settle for a share of the lead with young Johnny Pot. In the opening round of the $30,000 Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament, Ford battled the course all the way. Venturi, amazed but not joyed by his playing partner's recoveries, had a comparatively easy time. Ford and Venturi each handed in cards of five under par 31-34-65. Then they broke by 1-3-24. A Louisiana State grad, blazed home with an 18th hole birdie for a 33-32-65 and a share of the lead. "I recovered phenomenally," Ford, 38, a veteran from Yonkers, N.Y., said. "I made some bad shots, then came right back with good ones." He collected five birdies with puts up to 35 feet. "He was amazing," said Venturi, who talked more about Ford's performance than his own. "It was fantastic." Bob Goalby, former University of Illinois football player, finished just one stroke off the pace with a 66. Right on his heels was Mason Rudolph, who was all alone with a 67. Deadlocked with 68s were Cary Middlecoff, the two-time National Open and Milwaukee winner, Ted Kroil, Jerry Barber, Bill Collins, Bobby Brue of Milwaukee and Jim Kling. Arnold Palmer, the Masters and U.S. Open champion, was in an eight-way tie at 69.

Practice Briefs

Rose High

Being plagued by rain this week, Rose High gridders continued to get in only light work yesterday morning and were limited to indoors work in the afternoon. Conditioning and fundamentals were stressed in the morning practice along with the running of ground plays and pass defense. The gridders stayed inside for a lengthy skull practice during the afternoon, studying rules, plays, and defensive maneuvers. "We need a little co-operation from the weatherman," stated Coach Bud Phillips, referring to the continual rains. "Other than that, we ought to be all right."

Farmville

The passing of quarterback Dean Oglesby and running of halfback Danny Dilda drew the lauds of Coach Elbert Moyer today following his first two days of real scrimmaging. Like most other football camps, rain has slowed the Farmville team but things are beginning to shape up, according to Moyer. "The team is looking as well as we can expect. We are strong in eight positions but weak in three." Mitchel Cannon and Jimmy Pollard have been defensive standouts in the opening scrimmages. Kick offs and punt returns were stressed in morning workouts yesterday. A scrimmage under game conditions was on the agenda for 5:00 this afternoon.

U.S. Swimming Prestige Upheld With Successful Qualifying

By TED SMITS
Associated Press Sports Editor
ROME (AP) — Two California teen-age girls and a pair of powerful college men upheld U.S. swimming prestige with successful qualifying performances as the first full day of Olympic competition opened in the Eternal City.

Patty Kempner, 17, and Anne Warner, 15, gained the finals of the women's 200-meter breaststroke, and Lance Larson of the University of Southern California and Bruce Hunter of Harvard reached the men's 100-meter freestyle semifinals.

Ada Den Haan, Miss Warner's time was 2:56.3 against the winning clocking of 2:54.

Over-all, Miss Kempner's time was sixth best and Miss Warner's eighth and last in the field that will go in Saturday night's final. Larson, a 20-year-old from El Monte, Calif., led the men's 100-meter qualifiers in 55.7 seconds.

He won the seventh and final heat. Hunter, 21, from Cambridge, Mass., won the sixth heat in :56.6 and ranked sixth among the 24 qualifiers who race tonight in the semifinals.

The Australian twosome of defending Olympic champion Jon Henricks and world record holder John Devitt also qualified with heat victories. Devitt did 56 flat, and Henricks :56.9.

The U.S. basketball team may be below par physically for its opening game tonight against Italy.

Coach Pete Newell said Allen Kelley may miss a few games because of a leg injury and it was uncertain whether the recently injured Jerry Lucas will start. Hungary beat Japan 93-66 in a morning game.

Ayden Skipper Sees Progress In Grid Camp

Coach Stuart Tripp of Ayden was still speaking in terms of "an improved team" yesterday afternoon following a week of rain-interrupted practice sessions.

Tripp was taking an optimistic view yesterday. "Things have been looking fairly good. We are looking stronger than last season but it is still hard to tell just how strong we are," stated the Ayden skipper.

Carol McLawhorn, a tackle, has been one of the prospects giving Tripp reason to look for better things. A non-letterman, the 170-pound McLawhorn has impressed his coach with his early season play.

Freshman Jackie Collins has been another line standout thus far. A freshman, Collins tips the scales at 190 and may be an immovable obstacle for Ayden foes.

Keeping Track Of Potential Draftees Is Real Work

By PATRICIA MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer
Contrary to popular opinion, inducting and pre-inducting young men is one of the small jobs of the Selective Service office here.

The big job is keeping track of the nearly 12,000 young men of Pitt County who may one day be drafted or who will volunteer their services through this office.

And of course, this job calls for a lot of paper work. Mrs. Selma Rogers, clerk of the office, defines the main function of the Selective Service as keeping the armed forces built up to the number required. The local office fills the order when they are notified how many men to send for induction and pre-induction.

The idea of selecting men to serve in a country's armies goes back to Biblical days, Mrs. Rogers said, so this is nothing new in our world today. The local office, in fact, has intact records dating back to World War I.

The physical and mental standards have increased over the years for young men called into military service, so that now they are very high, and those who are accepted are "only the best."

Mrs. Josie C. Evans is assistant clerk in the Pitt branch of the Selective Service. She and Mrs. Rogers handle all the office and clerical work, while the Selective Service Board, which is composed of five people, does the classifying.

Steps Involved
As required in the Selective Service system a boy first registers on his eighteenth birthday or five days after that. This is law and all residents are supposed to know to comply.

Those who do not register within the legal time must submit their excuses with the Pitt County Selective Service Board.

For those who have registered, Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Evans must know how to contact each man at all times, which results in the mass of paper work. Each time a man's address is changed, he is supposed to notify the Selective Service.

Technically for the registrant, the second step in Selective Service comes at the present time when he is 21 and is sent a questionnaire. When he finishes and returns it, Mrs. Rogers puts it on file and then before the local board. Then the Selective Service Board classifies the registrant according to the information on file.

The age when the registrant receives the questionnaire or is called is changed, as are many Selective Service regulations, according to the needs of the armed forces and the supply of men available. At the present time, men are not classified until they reach 21, due to the backlog of registrants available, Mrs. Rogers says.

The third step has to do with the draft call. National headquarters issues the selective service call to each state. When the state receives the number it is to call, it calls on each county for the number required from that county, Mrs. Rogers said. The number required is based on population and the number of enlistments as well as the age of the number of men available. An effort is made to induct men throughout the state on the same age level Mrs. Rogers said.

Local Level
"When we receive our call each month, we order for examination or induction the number of men called for, beginning with the oldest man first, who is available," Mrs. Rogers says. This call puts him at the induction station.

After years of keeping up with the man, the local Selective Service office bears no responsibility for him during his career in the service.

However, upon his discharge from military service, the office again begins the process of keeping up with him and his status. The armed forces notifies the local office upon discharge through a copy of the separation papers. "Of course, the man is supposed to report, too," Mrs. Rogers says.

Here is a rather confusing practice of the Selective Service: the man who gets out of the service may report to any office, not necessarily the one he registered in originally.

An important point to remember, Mrs. Rogers says is that all affairs can be transferred from one local board to another, but the registration always remains the same.

Records must be kept by the Selective Service Office on the standby reserve. A man has a four-year military obligation to meet at this point and completes it by remaining in a ready reserve for two years if there is a vacancy in a ready reserve in his area for him. Then he is transferred to the standby reserve for his last two years.

Availability of a man is determined by the number of his dependents and his occupation for standby reserve. These records must be kept also. Also files are kept according to age, Mrs. Rogers said.

Interesting Feature
One feature interesting to note in the Selective Service system is that only the name of the inductee is released in order to protect him, as in lists released to newspapers. The reasoning behind this is that if, for some reason the man is rejected, he would not be embarrassed as there probably are more men by that name.

A registrant's file is strictly confidential, Mrs. Rogers said, and not even his parents nor his wife may have access to it. This is a protection to the man as well as the U.S. government.

The following Pitt County residents are uncompensated members of the Selective Service Board: Charles P. Gaskins, chairman, of Greenville; Marvin V. Jones, secretary, of Farmville; Gordon W. Roebuck of Stokes; Robert Louis Lane of Rt. 2, Ayden; and Elbert Davidson of Ayden.

Mrs. Rogers has worked with the Selective Service office here for about 14 years. She is married to Willie J. Rogers and they have two children.

Mrs. Evans has been with the local office for 10 years. She and her husband, Leslie E. Evans, have three children.

Balks At Paying $108.64 For Replacing Tiny Tree Damaged By Trash Truck

By PATRICK MCNULTY

LOS ANGELES (AP)—I thought that I would never see that many guys just for one tree.

A treelet planted to replace one they claim I did deface. A tree worth but a buck or two to plant needs not a 10-man crew.

So if they want a C from me they'll have to plant a bigger tree.

That, poetically paraphrasing rubbish collector Tony Augustyn, is the way he feels today about a $108.64 bill he got from the county for replacement of a tree damaged by one of his trash trucks.

He's not going to let a sapling make a sap of him, says Tony. And county tree trimmers aren't going to trim him.

In short, he's not paying. The county replaced the damaged 18-foot eucalyptus with a sapling pepper tree. Tony got the bill.

To cover cost of removal and replacement of parkway tree knocked down at 5445 W. 118th St.," it read.

"I schinus Teretifolia, $2.59; 1 redwood stake, 55 cents; 1 tree trimmer foreman, 1 hour, $5.34; 1 tree trimmer subforeman, 3 hours, $14.39; 3 tree trimmers, 7 hours, $30.20; 3 tree laborers, 8 hours, $29.47; 1 truck driver, 1 hour, $4.08; 1 truck driver, 3 hours, $13.63; 1 truck M-1777, 14 miles, $2.62; 1 relief truck, M-1877, 6 miles, 64 cents; 1 car, 5 miles, 70 cents; dump fee, $4.43.

"Total, owner of the T and R Disposal Co., said one of his trucks hit the branch while driving near the curb.

"But that's no reason for the county to send out an army to haul one tree away and plant another little one," he said. "It's too much money."

The County Parks and Recreation Department says it'll take the hassle to small claims court.

A spokesman said the bill is reasonable.

"It represents the gross cost to the county," he said, "taking into account all factors—employees' retirement, maintenance to cars and trucks and so forth.

"That man will just have to pay, that's all."

Tony says they can go climb a tree.

Extradition Of Trio Required

WASHINGTON (AP)—Extradition proceedings apparently will be needed to return three men to North Carolina to face charges of kidnaping and murdering a Camp Lejeune Marine gunnery sergeant.

At a hearing in Municipal Court Thursday, the suspects — Harold A. Smith and Jesse E. Perry, 20, of Memphis, Tenn., and Eugene W. Jacobs, 22, of Durham, N.C. — refused to return voluntarily.

Municipal Court Judge Edward A. Beard continued an extradition hearing until Sept. 28. The three men are held in Washington under $25,000 bond each pending trial of charges they held up a restaurant July 23.

Police said the same gun was used in the $344 holdup and in slaying T.Sgt. Robert E. Schroeder of New Lebanon, Ohio. The Marine's body was found stuffed in the trunk of his car near Camp Lejeune July 24.

Smith was quoted as telling officers they flagged down Schroeder's car on the highway after their rented car ran out of gas. Smith, who had drawn his pistol, went with Schroeder to get gasoline. When the sergeant recognized Smith for a former Marine, Smith made him get in the trunk of the car and later shot him.

The three were arrested in Washington and linked to Schroeder through their possession of a high school ring an Akron, Ohio girl had given him.

Lewin's topic will be "Advertising As a Career for Your Sons and Daughters."

The Kiwanis Club meets at 6:30 p.m. in the Rotary building. Charles P. Gaskins, Kiwanis president, will preside.

Democratic Governor-Nominate Terry Sanford of Fayetteville has accepted an invitation to speak at the faculty dinner on Friday evening, September 2, at 6:30, the Fall term dinner to be held in the newly renovated North Cafeteria. President Jenkins has announced.

For the Fall quarter new students will run about 45 per cent ahead of last year, figures from the office of Dr. John H. Horne, registrar, would indicate. The freshmen and transfer students will number between 1900 to 2,000, Horne's office has reported.

President Jenkins has announced the appointment of 48 persons to the faculty, dormitory counselors' staff, and the college infirmary for the 1960-61 year.

Vice President and Business Manager F. D. Duncan has noted the rush to completion of the North Cafeteria before the opening of the new college year with final inspection of this facility set for Wednesday, August 31. The Slay and Umstead Dormitories will be occupied by women students while the construction of lobbies and parlors in the conversion to women's residence halls continues, Mr. Duncan adds.

Left Behind A Stick-Up Note

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP)—The note read: "This is a stick-up—hand over all the money and don't make a sound."

Bank teller Mary Miller read it and looked up. But there was nobody in front of her.

Police, who took the note into custody, concluded the author slipped it before Miss Miller and then lost his nerve.

The Lean Rider

CHAPTER 13
Hester Barbee called Lisa to breakfast. Hester looked drawn and worn. "Abel will be in soon," she said. "He stayed all night with the cattle."
Present three tired riders came in and turned their horses into the feed corral. One was Abel. The others headed for the cookhouse. He was saddle-stiff and marked by lack of sleep as he came into the room.
He wasted no words. "Matt and the others told me all they know about what happened last night. I—"
"I can wait, son," Hester interrupted. "You better get some sleep, Elizabeth can talk to you later."
"I've lost sleep before," he said. "An' will ag'in." He looked at Lisa. "Tell me anything you might have recollected since it happened. Tell me everything."
Lisa repeated the meager details.
He said, "Show me."
He led the way to her room. "Where was you standin'?"
"Lisa walked to the dressing table. Here."
He left the room and strode to the east side of the house. He peered in the small window pointing his finger in simulation of aiming a pistol. Presently he returned.
"He had to shoot mainly by guess," he said. "All he could see was your reflection in the mirror. Maybe that's why he missed at such close range. But maybe he was only tryin' to skeer you."
"Scare me? For what purpose?"
"Your guess is as good as mine."
"It was more than trying to scare me," Lisa said. "He meant to kill me. The bullet barely missed me. What can I do?"
Abel shrugged. "You could light a shuck out'n this country an' go back no'th."
Lisa stiffened. "Perhaps that's what this person wants. Or persons."
Abel gazed at her. "Persons wearin' checked shirts, you mean?"
She did not have to answer that, for he turned and walked out of the room and down the gallery to the family eating room. Hester hurried after him to provide his breakfast.
Afterward Lisa heard him enter his own quarters in the adjoining section of the house. The door closed. She listened to the thud of a boot being hurled against a wall.
Through a window she saw

Hester standing in the door of the main room. Hester had heard that sound also. Seeing Lisa gazing, Hester withdrew, but not before Lisa clearly saw the anguish in her face—anguish for a son whose burden she wanted to lighten, but could not.
More and more, Lisa understood the sorrow that was in Hester at the necessity of leaving this place. And more and more also, she was aware of the restless factor that was forcing this move upon the Barbess. The cattle! The living, breathing cattle. These, after all, were the bone and sinew of the Bar B, its lifeblood, its reason for existence.
Nothing must stand in the way of survival of the herd. The herd was Bar B, not this house where the sons had been born, or even the land. Parting with these memories would be hard, but part they would if it were for the sake of the cattle.
Abel made all the vital decisions. Perhaps he could even decide life or death for a man who stood in their way—or a woman.
Lisa made up her mind to leave Monte Vista. It had been a mistake to accept Barbee's hospitality, suspecting Abel of murder, as she did. An almost fatal mistake, apparently.
She found Hester back at the task of sorting and packing belongings for the journey. "I'm thankful for your kindness, Mrs. Barbee," she said, "but I believe it best to move to Triangle O, at least for the time I am own-er."
Hester nodded. "I expected you'd look at it that way. I'll have Michah drive you over. He's still around."
As Michah was loading her luggage into the wagon, a top buggy from San Ysidro arrived. It brought Sam Miller and Kemp Travis.
Travis alighted. "Good afternoon, Elizabeth," he said, beaming. He looked around. "I see that you're moving out to Triangle O, no doubt. Michah, there's no need for you to go to that trouble. I'll drive Miss Randolph over. Sam has some legal issues to discuss with her and a few papers to sign. I've a matter or two I want to take up with her."
Travis had a hand on her arm and was turning her toward the wagon.
Abel appeared on the gallery. Evidently he had just awakened, for he was still stuffing in the tail of his shirt. He came toward them with his long stride. "One of these things you-all want to take up with Miss Randolph wouldn't be an offer to buy up what beef cattle Frank owned, now would it, Kemp?" he asked.

"That," Travis said, "is none of your concern, Abel."
"About five and half a head is what you're aimin' to throw out as bait, I reckon," Abel said easily.
"That's more than they're worth hereabouts right now," Travis shrugged.
Abel spoke to Lisa. "Don't be hasty."
"All this is entirely out of place, and mercenary," Lisa said angrily. "Frank O'Hara has been in his grave less than a day. Why, I'm not even the legal owner. There must be formalities."
Abel nodded. "I reckon they've been look care of that's why Kemp's brought Sam here so early in the mornin'."
Sam Miller spoke nervously. "After all, it's only a routine affair. Court is in session at San Ysidro. The will is clear and sound. Mr. O'Hara named you administratrix. I've arranged for court approval of a bond so that you are fully empowered to manage the estate and conduct business until you come into formal legal title, which will be very shortly, I'm sure."
"As a matter of fact," Travis said, "I do intend to make an offer to buy Triangle O beef from you, Elizabeth."
"At five and half, jest like I said?" Abel jeered.
"A fair price," Travis snapped.
"You heard me say the other day that cattle might sell at double that price up no'th," Abel said to Lisa. "Maybe more."
"I'm offering cash, not fool's hopped," Travis said.
"I will talk over your offer some other time, Mr. Travis," Lisa said.
"Both offers?" he demanded quickly.
She knew that he referred to his offer of marriage. She met his gaze squarely. "No," she said. "Only the one in regard to buying cattle."
"You'll reconsider," Travis said confidently.
There's no need for you and Mr. Miller going all the way to O'Hara House," she said. "I can sign any papers here."
Abel spoke to Lisa. "You ain't as adde-brained as I took you to be," he said grudgingly. "Don't let him soft-talk you into changin' your mind—about sellin' steers at his price, I mean."
He walked back to his room to resume his interrupted rest.
There was raw anger in Travis's eyes. He had been blocked by Abel, for the time at least, and was forced to accept that fact. (To Be Continued Tomorrow)

Western Bad Men To Give Their Side

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
There are some new un-derstandings out.
"Outlaws," a new Western series on NBC, will tell its bad men tales from the viewpoint of the criminals.
Furthermore, it will be fate, not the marshal, holding the winning hand. And there won't be a fight or shoot-out to climax each episode.
All this is pretty revolutionary stuff, but rest assured, crime won't pay. The TV code doesn't permit it.
"From the scripts we've already done," explained actor Barton MacLane, who plays the marshal, "it seems that we're taking some character who has committed a crime and showing what made him do it."
"Most of them started out as $30-a-month cowboys who felt they were wronged—a real or fancied wrong—and then we tell what they did. Neither the marshal nor his two deputies are tough guys, and usually we're conducting searches, not chases. By the time we catch up with them fate has resolved the whole thing. Like a Greek tragedy."
MacLane illustrated with samplings from plots of completed shows.
"In one episode, the robbers got away with the money, but a storm blew up and they couldn't escape across a river. They started quarreling among themselves, and by the time we got to them it turned into a rescue operation."
"In another, the outlaw is dead when we reach him, but we take

Top East German Engineer Admits Telling Secrets

BERLIN (AP)—One of the top brains of the East German aircraft industry, Manfred Gerlach, 55, has confessed to betraying secrets of Communist jet aircraft production to West Germany, East German authorities announced today.
The Communist party newspaper Neues Deutschland reported that the engineer's trial for espionage opened in Dresden Wednesday. The East German regime also announced Wednesday the arrest of 147 alleged agents for the American espionage service.
Western officials speculated that the Communist regime might be making Gerlach the scapegoat for the delay in producing the long-promised East German jet airplane.
The first prototype was supposed to have been ceremonially handed over to Communist party head Walter Ulbricht on May 1, 1959. But it crashed on a test flight the previous March and was destroyed. There were un-official reports of arrests after the crash but no word of any trial.

him in anyway. There's a $10,000 reward for him, dead or alive, and my deputy wants to collect the money to give to the outlaw's pregnant wife."
"There's irony, too. We show how some crooks spent four months planning a bank robbery, and when they do the job they get away with $120 in silver—less than they'd have made if they'd have worked as $30-a-month cowboys."
The series is supposed to be based on real events during the 1890s in the Oklahoma Territory. MacLane says his marshal's role is pegged to a character who during his star-bearing career jailed 40,000 men.
"I forget his name," said MacLane, "but they aren't using real names anyway because some of these people might have descendants."

Shadow Cast By Slow Steel Industry Recovery

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—The delay in the expected upturn in steel output is casting a shadow over the fall outlook for the general economy. Business is used by now to the ups and downs in the steel industry. But when one of the ups doesn't come along on schedule, business gets nervous.

That's because steel has the name of being the basic industry. It lags when other industries lose their zip. And if it lags too long, pessimism tends to spread to other lines.

The steel mills were first expected to be firing up idle furnaces by now for the fall business revival. Then September was set as the time for the upswing. Now steel spokesmen talk of October. And one close observer of the industry says only a mild seasonal upturn can be expected this fall, with the big turnaround delayed until next spring.

Why isn't steel pulling out of its summer slump?

There are both current and long term answers.

The one most applied to the current scene is that steel customers either have more steel still in stock than the industry had counted on, or their own products are moving too slowly for them to expand output now.

Added to this is their knowledge that steel is in good supply, idle capacity means that any rush of orders could be filled without undue delays and therefore a handdowngrade since late winter. Total production capacity continues to rise. It is well above present needs, and many think it may be above the needs that the next big business upswing will generate—but not above the level that would be needed in a national emergency.

And a growing problem is competition from other materials. Cars are using more plastics, aluminum and glass. Buildings are using more concrete, glass, aluminum and plastics. Tin coated steel cans vie with glass, paper, foil, plastic bottles, squeeze tubes in sharing the food industry business.

Worse, from the steel point of view, is that the big swing to compact cars has meant less buying of steel. The smaller cars take less, and as the percentage of these cars to total auto output grows, steel orders shrink.

Some of steel's problems are long term, as apart from the present cycle which has been

Rain Feels Good After 7 Days

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP)—"Oh boy, does this rain feel good!"

Those were the first words of Douglas Brown as he emerged Thursday with his wife and eight children from an underground bomb shelter in which they'd lived for seven days.

Brown said, "We've learned something," but added he was glad it was all over with. He didn't say that had been learned. The family appeared to be none the worse from its experience, designed to test the psychological effect of confining a large family to a small shelter.

Kosher-Eating Pooch Is Found

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Koby's Kerry blue terrier has been caught and from the looks of him he'll be again lapping up the kosher cooking he has been so long accustomed to.

The 3-year-old purebred pooch with the Kerry blue terrier's goatee Monday night wandered out of the home of his owner, druggist Ken Koby.

Koby issued a plea to anyone finding him not to feed him pork but only the kosher food he was used to.

The druggist was flooded with phone calls and Thursday the dog, named Graymar Spunick, was found.

Where? About 1 1/2 miles from the Koby home, reportedly in front of a kosher delicatessen.

THE PROVED COMPACT CAR IS HERE

AND IT'S READY FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

TODAY THE AIR IS FILLED with rumors about late-comers to the compact-car field. But smart buyers may prefer these facts: Comet is a proved success—a sell-out from its first day. Production had to be increased again and again. Now read the reasons for this tremendous acceptance. Comet gives you many "extras" most compacts charge for. Things like dual headlights . . . door-operated courtesy light . . . arm-rests front and rear. There's a longer wheelbase for a better ride . . . compact-car economy . . . 28 cubic feet of trunk space. Proof that Comet is the best of the compacts—the best buy for you!

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Trading dried up as the stock market eased early this afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off .20 to 224.10 with the industrials down .50, the rails off .20 and the utilities unchanged.

The market sustained a shock with the drop of more than 4 points by Montgomery Ward in reaction to the cut in dividend to 25 cents from 50 cents. The big mail order-retail house is not represented in the popular averages, however, so this move was not reflected there.

The list was mixed at the start, then gradually showed a slightly lower trend. Autos, nonferrous metals, chemicals, tobaccos, air-crafts and rails gradually drifted off. Airlines were steady to moderately higher on news they are planning to apply for a boost in jet coach fares.

Another rise was posted in the consumer price index but it was the smallest for July since 1954. New car sales were down in mid-August. The stock market had no particular news to spur it upward.

Market losses of key stocks were from fractions to about a point, although DuPont dropped more than 3.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 1.77 at 655.39. Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds made small gains.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—Hog prices steady to mostly 25 lower. Tons of 15.75 to 17.25 at Wilson; 16.00 to 17.00 at Kinston, Benson, New Bern, Mount Olive and Newton Grove; 16.25 to 16.75 at Bethel, Murfreesboro, Sunbury and Edenton; 16.25 at Clinton, Fayetteville, Elizabethtown and Albemarle; 16.00 at Tarboro, Enfield, Scotland Neck, Winterville, Lillington, Rich Square and Castle Hayne; 15.75 at Siler City.

Ayden Class Of 1940 Holds Reunion

FORMER STUDENTS and some of their faculty members present for event.

Highway Commission Is Installing Traffic Light

A traffic-actuated stop light is being installed at the East Carolina College administration building entrance on Fifth St. by the State Highway Commission.

Highway Engineer C. W. Snell said the Highway Commission is paying the cost of purchasing and installing the traffic light and the City of Greenville will furnish the current and maintain the light.

The city cut the trees in the area to make way for the light. Snell pointed out, however, that it was "absolutely necessary for the trees to come down for the light to function like it should."

The matter was discussed with town and college officials, he said. Snell said the traffic light will be "on call" from the college entrance. Thus Fifth St. will have a green light until a vehicle passes over a red light on the college drive, changing the Fifth St. light to red and the college drive light to green.

Tredies are now being installed in the college drive. Rotary Ave., which runs into Fifth St. near the college entrance, will not be tied into the traffic light, Snell said. The Rotary entrance will remain a stop street as it now is.

Invocation was given by Stuart Tripp and Walter Stroud welcomed the group prior to a chicken supper which was served the group.

During the evening, memories of the high school days of the late 1930's were brought to mind by the reading of several newspaper articles. Each classmate and faculty member told briefly their experiences for the past 20 years.

The graduating class officers were Wilson Nobles, president; Stuart Tripp, vice-president; Evelyn Lyon Haney, secretary; and Linda Vann Quinerly, treasurer. Tripp and Linda Quinerly were the only class officers present.

Two Pressing Road Issues Said Near Final Solution

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (AP) — Two of the state's most pressing road problems neared final solutions Thursday as a result of action by the Highway Commission.

The agency held a hearing on where to locate a northern North Carolina link of Interstate 77.

It scheduled a hearing for Oct. 7 in Wilmington to give interests there a chance to argue on whether they want a high or low level bridge spanning the Cape Fear River.

The commission took no action on the Interstate 77 location. It said it wanted to give further study to testimony at Thursday's hearing.

Consulting engineers had proposed two routes between Elkin and the Virginia line. One runs through the vicinity of Low Gap and the other several miles to the east near Mount Airy and Pipers Gap.

Delegations from Mount Airy, Winston-Salem and Greensboro argued for the eastern route contending it would be shorter, cheaper and serve more people.

For the first time since his consulting firm was called in to help route the highway, Wilbur Smith, recommended publicly that the eastern route be adopted. He said, however, it was up to the commission.

Among those plugging the Eastern route was Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor H. Cloyd Philpott of Lexington. He made his pitch in a letter to the Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce.

Alleghany and Wilkes counties stated their cases for the western route. They were joined by U.S. Rep. Hugh Q. Alexander of Kannapolis, the state's Ninth District congressman, and former House Speaker Kemp Doughton of Alleghany County.

Alexander said he felt the western route would help with the development of Alleghany, Ashe and Watauga counties.

The Charlotte to Elkin link of the superhighway already has been decided. It will parallel U.S. 21. The road eventually will link Charlotte with the Middle West covering 500 miles through North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio, and terminating near Cleveland, Ohio.

The commission, which set its next meeting for Oct. 5 at Raleigh, Wednesday received construction estimates for both high and low level bridges at Wilmington.

Advocates of both proposals will receive their day before the commission at the Oct. 7 hearing.
