Area's Corn And Cotton Loss Runs Near $1 Million

Crop damage wrought by savage Hurricane Donna in Pitt County last night will probably "run upwards of a million dollars," according to Ben White of the Farmers Home Administration today.

White told the Daily Reflector today that at least one-third of the county's "best corn crop in history" will be lost "even under ideal conditions."

Winds reported at 50 to 102 miles per hour ripped across Pitt's farm acreage heavily damaging most crops. "I've never seen corn fodder shredded like it is," White said.

Child, Woman Lose Their Lives To Falling Trees

Two Pitt County deaths last night were attributed to Hurricane Donna. Larry Outlaw, three-year-old Negro, was crushed in his home when an oak tree fell across the house.

Hattie Carr Galloway, 60-year-old Negro of Rt. 2, Farmville, died of head and chest injuries when an oak tree fell on her house, Coroner Harvey said.

Miss Susie Pope Becomes Bride

Mrs. Robert Floyd Thompson, Jr.

In a ceremony of beauty and dignity, Miss Katharine Susan Pope became the bride of Robert Floyd Thompson Jr. on Sunday afternoon, September 11, at four-thirty o'clock in the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church. Rev. Howard M. McLamb, pastor of the couple, performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. Benjamin Ashby Pope Jr. of Norfolk, Va. and the late Katherine Gross Pope. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Floyd Thompson of Greenville.

The church was decorated with simplicity. Arrangements of white gladioli and chrysanthemums in brass vases were used on the altar; and on either side were areca palms, seven branched candelabra and single candleholders decorated with dark green huckleberry and cathedral candles.

At the altar where the bride and groom knelt for the wedding prayer, was a white satin pillow and bridal satin bows. The pews were marked with white satin bows and plumose fern.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Paul A. Toll, organist, and Mrs. J. A. Williams, vocalist. Mrs. Williams sang "Through the Years" by Heyman and Youmans, "So Is My Beloved" by Olmstead, and "Wedding Prayer" by Dunlap as the benediction.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of bouquet taffeta and Alencon lace. It had a deep square neckline featuring a yoke of lace, elbow length sleeves edged with the lace, and a modified basque bodice. The full overskirt was draped at the sides and appliqued with lace from the neckline down the sides. The back overskirt extended onto a court train.

The bride's chapel veil of pure silk illusion was attached to a coronet of seed pearls and sequins. A waist length veil of illusion covered the bride's face.

She carried a nosegay of Phalaenopsis centered around a pure white orchid tied with bridal satin. Miss Elizabeth Anne Karsnak of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a street length sheath dress of orchid chiffon which was sleeveless and had a scoop neckline. The bodice of the dress was softly gathered above a satin midriff, which was finished in the back with satin roses and hemlength floating panels.

Miss Karsnak's headdress was a matching half hat of chiffon petals with pearl tips to which a circular illusion veil was attached. Her crescent bouquet of natural cymbidium orchids with burgandy throats was tied with burgandy satin.

Bridesmaids were Miss Jenny Lynn Thompson of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Elizabeth Neill LeConte, also from Greenville. They wore costumes identical to that of the maid of honor's and carried identical bouquets.

Miss Mary Lois Pope of Norfolk, Va., half-sister of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. She wore a street length full skirted dress of orchid chiffon and satin, styled similar to those of the other attendants; and her headdress was a band of orchid satin rosettes. She carried a nosegay of a natural cymbidium orchid tied with burgandy satin.

Honorary bridesmaids were Miss Sylvia Meade Bonner, Mrs. David A. Evans Jr., both of Greenville; Mrs. David E. Lane of Reidsville; Mrs. John D. Rohrbough of Hampton, Va., and Mrs. John D. Savage of Emporia, Va. They wore wrist corsages of orchid mums tied with orchid bows.

The bridegroom chose his father to serve as his best man. Ushers were John Earl Thompson and Worth Lane Thompson Jr., cousins of the bridegroom, of Myrtle Beach, S. C.; Steven L. Wilkerson Jr. of Greensboro; James W. McGee of Chapel Hill, and David A. Evans Jr. of Greenville.

The bride's stepmother wore a sheath dress of moss green lace over beige taffeta with beige accessories. Mrs. Lillian O. Gross, grandmother of the bride, chose a Peacock blue chiffon dress with dusty pink accessories. The mother of the bridegroom wore a dress of brocade turquoise silk with matching accessories. They all wore hybrid orchid corsages.

'Mrs. Donald' Was Busy Last Night Too

While Hurricane Donna was busy raging through Greenville last night, "Mrs. Donald" was also busy.

Mrs. Mack Donald Hardee of Ayden gave birth to a son, Robert Edward, at Pitt Memorial Hospital here.

Robert arrived at 12:10 p.m. when Donna was beginning to howl with 40 to 50 mile wind gusts.

Mrs. Hardee, the former Jean Ann Lucey of Massachusetts, entered Pitt at 10:45 p.m.

Arriving just before Donna was baby boy, Charles Thomas Mills, at 7:27 last night. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles "Donald" Mills of 912 Main St., Tarboro. Mrs. Mills is the former Louise Smaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Smaw of Greenville.

With the daily bath such a well-established American custom, can the custom of a daily shampoo be far behind?

France's chic and charming first lady, Mrs. Charles de Gaulle, once confessed that her ideal wardrobe is "two black dresses—one on my back and one in the wash." Some meticulous women prefer to launder and press new clothing before wearing it. This removes that tell-tale "just-out-of-the-fitting-room" look.

More To Gain On Port Cargo Front

It would be most helpful to North Carolina's port development if the state could entice passenger liners to frequent our ports on something like a regular schedule.

From a practical standpoint, however, could North Carolina better serve the development of its ports and the economic development of the state as a whole by continuing to concentrate on the cargo business rather than the passenger business?

A considerable outlay of capital funds is required for the state to provide adequate facilities for handling passenger liners at the ports of Wilmington and Morehead City. Even if these facilities were provided, there would be the problem of enticing passenger liners to use the facilities and enticing those using ocean liner passenger service to choose Morehead City and Wilmington for their arrival and departure points.

The liners would use the facilities—if we had them—only if the traffic in terms of passengers were sufficient to make our ports practical from their standpoint. Undoubtedly it would take considerable time and effort on the part of the State Ports Authority to build any reasonable degree of passenger traffic through these ports.

Would not a similar amount of additional time, effort and money spent on developing additional cargo for our ports be more beneficial to North Carolina as a whole?

In view of the need for additional facilities at the two ports to handle more cargo ships and more cargo, would it not be wise for the time being for North Carolina to continue its effort to build the two ports as cargo rather than passenger ports?

North Carolina has an important economic potential in developing its two deepwater ports to their fullest extent. They can become major points for goods and products moving into and out of North Carolina and a number of other states. In order to achieve this goal, however, North Carolina's ports have to compete with other larger and longer-established ports both to the north and to the south of us.

For the time being, at least, North Carolina appears to have more to gain by developing its port facilities at Wilmington and Morehead City into port notch freight points, rather than dividing its attention between developing both cargo and passenger service for these ports.

The Big Spending Pleas Coming Up

By LYNN NISBET

BUDGETING—The Advisory Budget Commission is about half way through the public hearings on requirements for capital improvements and expanded services of the State's ramified agencies, departments and institutions. Half way through as to time, that is, but not as to money. This week the public schools and all the educational institutions will present their claims for some 65-70 percent of all tax moneys collected by the State of North Carolina in its citizens.

Other big spending agencies—highways, hospitals and welfare—made their pitches last week. The needs outlined for the next biennium ran substantially above expenditures for the current period for operations. A reporter asked Governor Hodges at his weekly news conference if he thought these figures were unreasonable. He said he did not think so, but he has no idea that all of the requested funds will be recommended or appropriated. The Governor let slip a little comment which he might not have made if he had time to think about it. "In a growing State and a growing bureaucracy," he said, "costs are bound to go up." The inquiring reporter did not develop the relative effect of State growth and bureaucratic growth on spending.

OFFICE SPACE—More specific plans than had been publicized before for a new highway building outside the congested Capitol Square area were unveiled at the budget hearing. The Highway Commission would like to "sell" its two and a half million dollar office building just east of the Capitol to the General Services Division and build a more adequate highway headquarters between Meredith College and the State Fairgrounds—on the US-1 beltline around Raleigh now under construction. George Cherry, head of the General Services Division, said this deal would "take care of" needs for his agency for several years.

PLANNING—In presenting the highway budget Commission Chairman Mel Broughton detailed the 15-year plan published last month. He thought it would save the State a lot of money by having a long-range masterplan for highways. He was followed by W. P. Babcock, director of highways, who made a pitch for the new headquarters office building—because the present building is inadequate. Oldtimers recall that when the two and a half million dollar highway building was built about ten years ago the event was hailed as achievement of facilities thoroughly planned to serve for the next quarter century. It is already out-dated, within a lot less than a half the quarter century period.

The main reason for its present inadequacy is that the planning section of the highway commission is using about 80 per cent of the available space, the current administration activities about 20 per cent. And the planners need more room.

WOMEN—When Governor was just back from the regional Democratic pow-wow in Atlanta and he was bursting with pride at the role North Carolina women played there. On numerous occasions he has blamed the women for electing Eisenhower two times as President. Among the top attractions at the Atlanta convocation were Mrs. Gladys Tillett and Mrs. Doris Cromartie of North Carolina. Mrs. Tillett's presentation of the philosophy of the Democratic concept and Mrs. Cromartie's outline of how women voters can be organized and mobilized to get Democratic votes on the record on November 8 were highlights of the meeting.

The Governor by implication rather than direct quote, suggested that if the women in the other States will do as well as our Tarheel girls the Democratic national ticket will be safe. TRAINING—Attention now being given to industrial and technical training of boys and girls, in addition to the regular public school program, often causes confusion. Many high schools have vocational courses in agriculture and home economics, and some have additional industrial arts. Then there are a dozen of more "industrial education centers" operated by the State Department of Public Instruction in cooperation with local school units. There is the textile vocational school at Belmont, and industrial institute at Gastonia and an agricultural institute at Raleigh conducted by State College.

There is the apprenticeship program supervised by the Department of Labor and for some time—it may be out now—a separate program for veterans. Members of the Advisory Budget Commission understandably had some difficulty in segregating the functions of these various programs when the several departments presented their particular phases of them. The distinction between on-the-job training, organized by the Department of Labor's apprenticeship council, but paid for by the employer of the indentured apprentice; and the required auxiliary classroom work provided in the high schools or industrial education centers, in which tuition is free; and the technical or agricultural institutes in which there are tuition charges somewhat comparable to college rates—this distinction is difficult for the average man to comprehend. The educational technicians seem to understand it, and show a bit of impatience when budgeteers and the public can't follow the distinctive features of each operation.

The conclusion seems inescapable that through these various agencies the State of North Carolina offers opportunity for any worthwhile boy or girl to get an education.

On A Fee Basis, SBI Service Might Be Cut

It may help the state budget minutely to charge counties of the state for services of the State Bureau of Investigation, but the money saved by the state in such a manner would be expensive indeed in terms of deteriorating coordination in law enforcement on a state-wide basis.

The suggestion that the state charge counties for SBI services was made at a hearing of the Advisory Budget Commission last week. Whether it will receive serious attention by the Commission or the legislature remains to be seen. In the interest of continuing to improve the law enforcement and crime prevention programs on a statewide basis, however, the suggestion should be rejected.

It is true that the State Bureau of Investigation assists the individual counties in the investigation of crimes of a purely local nature on many occasions. It is also true that often what appears to be a purely local case in one county is linked with crimes in other counties. By working closely with local law enforcement agencies throughout the state, the SBI brings about a degree of coordination in overall law enforcement efforts that otherwise would be impossible.

If the counties were charged for the services of the SBI on a flat fee, a per day or per case basis, it is probable that the state agency would not be called in nearly as often by local law enforcement agencies. The state would suffer because a deterioration of the present degree of coordination in law enforcement efforts would result. The individual counties and cities would suffer because they would not have ready access to the specialized men the SBI has in various fields of law enforcement work.

The State Bureau of Investigation, in cooperation with local law enforcement agencies throughout the state, has been a major factor in preventing the spread of racketeering and organized crime in North Carolina. Because of the close relationship between the state and local departments information from all over the state is gathered and interchanged, affording an effective organization both for preventing and solving crimes.

For the state to charge its counties for services of the SBI would, in our opinion, serve to disrupt the effectiveness of overall law enforcement work in the state. It would not be in the best interest of the state or the State Bureau of Investigation, and it would not be in the best interest of the local governments or their citizens.

Minimum Wage Bill And Jack

By RALPH ROBEY

Everyone knows that the basic reason for the session of Congress after the national conventions was political. None the less, there was some legislation that was regarded as imperative. One bill put in this category was minimum wages. But the session had adjourned without being able to get agreement on this subject.

The House had passed its bill before the recess. This provided for increasing minimum wages from $1.00 to $1.15 and extending coverage by about 1,499,000. There was disagreement with both the increase and the extended coverage, but the Administration was willing to accept this bill. This acceptance was based upon various studies which had been made by the Department of Labor showing that an increase to $1.15 would not cause too much disturbance, and that is the test which controls the advice given to President Eisenhower.

The Senate bill was much more extreme in all particulars. It proposed the minimum should be $1.25, that coverage be increased by four million (originally it was five million), and that the test of whether a company should come under the act would be determined by the dollar volume of its sales, not whether it was engaged in interstate commerce.

The leader of the opposition to this Kennedy bill was Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona. On the day he made his major presentation he held the floor for over four hours, and all of his discussion was relevant. He maintained that such an increase would throw half a million persons out of work, that in order for labor to keep current wage differentials as between jobs there would have to be an increase all up the line, and he expressed grave doubts as to whether the bill was constitutional as a result of using volume of sales as the test of coverage.

In spite of the arguments of Senator Goldwater the bill passed the Senate by a substantial majority and was sent to a joint conference with representatives of the House. Here Senator Kennedy offered to make still more concessions but he would not give up his proposal for determining the basis of coverage to change the concept of Interstate Commerce, and in consequence no agreement could be reached. Senator Kennedy insisted that without this change there was no point in having a minimum wage bill this year—that anything else would fall to be progress and that he would prefer to wait until the next Congress.

Since bills do not carry over from one Congress to another it will be necessary to start from scratch to bring up minimum wage legislation again. And since the next Congress may be either more or less liberal than the present one it is impossible to forecast what may happen. But one fact is clear: Senator Kennedy has suffered a major defeat, and it is not likely that he can make political capital out of it. This is because the basic issue is one of changing the constitutional concept of interstate commerce, and most persons can not be convinced that such a change is desirable or in the public interest.

The whole idea of the convention recess of the Congress was an error. It was supposed to be "smart" politics because it was believed that important campaign issues could be developed—either by passing "desirable" legislation and going to the country with it as a record or, in case there was a veto, use that to show that the Republicans are not concerned about the welfare of the public. That it has not worked out that way is so obvious that the only discussion now is on how much damage the special session has done to Senators Kennedy and Johnson.

Dirty Campaign For '60

Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Labor Day, having come and gone, the Presidential campaign of 1960 is on in earnest. Such added attractions as Henry Cabot Lodge and Governor Nelson Rockefeller eating bagels and lox at Grossinger's will give way to the main business at hand which is the great debate between Richard Nixon and John Kennedy. Lodge and Rockefeller are reputed to have also eaten kosher egg-rolls, a concoction which would break the heart of a Peking chef.

As has become usual in recent elections, the managers of both candidates have signed pledges to conduct a clean campaign. The aforesaid managers have been duly photographed with Charles P. Taft, brother of the late and lamented Robert A. Taft. That ritual being over with, the campaign will proceed as expected. It is likely to be one of the dirtiest in political history.

It is bound to be a dirty campaign unless some debatable issues appear. Up to now, no such issues have appeared. Neither Nixon nor Kennedy has projected a great thought. If, therefore, there is nothing to say or the candidates do not wish to say anything worth while, the campaign is whittled down to an ad hominem discussion. The Democrats say, "Tricky Dick" and refer to how Nixon defeated Jerry Voorhis and Helen Gahagan Douglas—methods which invoke praise in others who like a candidate to fight for his job. And the Republicans do not quarrel with the Pope but question the reliability of Pop. By Pop, they mean Joe Kennedy, a very shrewd businessman who has accumulated several hundred million dollars and many public honors without any unusual scandal.

The Liberals say that Nixon is anti-Semitic because he called Melvyn Douglas, Hesselberg, which was his name at birth; the Republicans spread the tale that Kennedy is anti-Semitic because his father, Pop, as he will be referred to in this campaign, once said something favorable about Hitler. The Anti-Defamation League gets into the row by giving both of the candidates a clean bill of health, a "hekscher" which means that they are both kosher, which may or may not influence the voters.

Meanwhile, both candidates are very much concerned about Texas. That state is likely to go Republican in the 1960 election. One reason that Lyndon Johnson was nominated for the Vice Presidency was that the Southern states were definitely in a state of revolt at the Democratic Convention. It seemed wise and even necessary to nominate someone who could

Other Editors Saying Party Oath Is Good Thing

(The Raleigh Times)

The Charlotte News has raised its hands in holy horror because there is a North Carolina law which requires that a person who switches his registration from one political party to another must swear that he will support the nominees of his new party.

The oath law has been on the books for many years, but apparently The News has just heard about it. The hearing brought these editorial shrieks: "Whatever its genesis or purpose (the oath may or may not be a conscious abuse of the Democratic monopoly in North Carolina) the oath is an unconscionable violation of the secret ballot. It is also an impertinence against the judgment of adult citizens, among whom only the most violent partisans are dead certain at the opening of a campaign how they mean to vote."

"When a voter must, in order to change his party, betray to Election Board officials even by presumption that he will be voting for Republicans or Democrats, his ballot is a wide-open secret.

"The sound of the disciplinary whip cracking is all too loud in this rule. After all, democratic political parties, unlike cells, are designed to lend a semblance of order to the political process. They are not intended to enlist mere robots and bind them to kneejerk responses fit only for Dr. Pavlov's famous dogs."

The News heard about this oath when Mecklenburg Republicans got all upset because they wanted to talk people who are now registered Democratic into switching to Republican. The people wouldn't switch when they found they had to swear that they would support Republican nominees.

The registered Democrats question, no doubt, are those who want to vote Republican on the national ticket, but Democratic for the state and local tickets. For that reason, they didn't want to take that oath.

The oath is a good thing. If a man wants deliberately to switch his party affiliation, he should be more than willing to swear that he will support the nominees of his new party. If he doesn't want to support those nominees, he should not switch his party affiliation.

Why should a man be permitted to jump back and forth between political parties every time he is nettled by a political gnat? The business of being a member of a political party should be a serious one to the voter, and it should be treated seriously. Promiscuous switching of party affiliation surely isn't giving it that serious consideration.

There is one other very practical and compelling reason The News either overlooked or didn't know about. We have some very, very hot Democratic primaries in this state, both state-wide and in local races. Only registered Democrats can participate in a Democratic primary. If party switching could make considerable primary hay by having registered Republicans switch over just for primary day.

The basic reason is that to have good government in our country, there must be strong political parties.

To have strong parties, there must be strong party discipline. This oath makes for such discipline.

Taxes Here, There

By ROGER BABSON

ON THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.—As I travel about the world I am concluding that we, the people of the United States, pay the highest taxes of any nation with a responsible government. We know the direct tax bill which we get from our cities and towns, based on real estate assessments, and the direct tax bills which we get from our counties, states and Federal Government; but we fail to recognize the indirect taxes we are paying. No other country which I annually visit has such indirect taxes.

WHAT ARE THE INDIRECT TAXES?

When I have a meal costing a $1.00 or more in many states there is a tax added to the bill. All of our states have gasoline taxes ranging from 2 cents to 8 cents a gallon, in addition to the federal tax. When we travel on a turnpike, or over certain bridges, the toll is another form of taxation. Some cities and states also have sales taxes which are added to the cost of our daily purchases. You may think that the government pays you your Social Security, but really you have been taxed for this for many years. There are taxes on the liquor and cigarette taxes, and the taxes you pay when you send a telegram, make certain phone calls, and buy transportation tickets. There are many others, too, which I could mention.

The greatest unseen tax which every consumer in the United States pays is the corporation profits tax. This applies to all corporations. It means that up to 52 per cent of the profits of all corporations must be paid to the federal government in taxes. Those of you who receive semi-annual reports from corporations in which you hold stock know what they pay in income taxes. These taxes, however, are added to the price of the goods which the corporations sell. Hence, when you buy anything from your local stores (except food, drugs, and a few other necessities) you rebate to the producers 52 per cent. This includes refrigerators, cooking stoves, television sets, radios, as well as almost all the furniture for your house. You pay this through the increased price tag which absorbs the 52 per cent.

TAXATION GIVES EMPLOYMENT

Strange to say, these taxes we pay give employment to people. With less taxation there could be more unemployment. Hence, this taxation-employment is a sort of "ring around the rosie," or is like a monkey trying to climb a wheel in his cage. It is almost like a man trying to cure himself of drinking by taking more drinks! With some nations of Europe the taxation system has ultimately resulted in socialism, revolution, or communism.

With each of the presidential candidates trying to outdo the other in promises, I don't know what the end will be. I continue to be glad that I am an American citizen. There is no other part of the world where I would rather live than in the United States. We pay for both our misfortunes and our comforts by higher taxes, and yet these taxes are a "shot in the arm" to prolong our present prosperity.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS ALMOST

As the Apostle Paul stood before King Agrippa and reasoned about the things of God and the ministry of Christ, Agrippa, who was a moral compromiser and a man of worldly tastes, shook his head and declared unto Paul, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." And Paul said, "I would to God that not only thou but also all that hear me this day were both almost, and altogether such as I am, accept these bonds."

We can imagine that Paul the prisoner raised his manacled hands above his head as he uttered these words: We are quite sure Agrippa never became a Christian. But he must often have thought of this wonderful man Paul who had been brought to trial before him. Almost he persuaded me, we can hear Agrippa saying. Almost! Almost! Almost is the most tragic word in the Christian vocabulary. To be almost a Christian and yet not a Christian is something to be so regretted as to constitute tragedy. Children raised in pious homes often boast in their mature years about the piety of their parents, yet they do not have this piety. They speak with enthusiasm of those parents who could overcome so many difficulties because of their religious faith, yet these worldly children do not have this faith.

Almost a Christian! It was tragic for Agrippa, but it is a thousand times more so for us after two thousand years of Christian experience.

Competition For Credit Dollars

By ELMER ROESSNER

Your credit dollar is taking on new significance in the business world these days. Almost any consumer-goods producer you can name wants a larger share of it.

Competing are suppliers of such varied goods and services as automobiles, pleasure boats, small aircraft, mobile homes, health-club memberships, hotel accommodations, restaurant meals, Florida vacations, European tours. Also vitally interested in the use you make of your credit are the nation's colleges whose students in growing numbers are financing the acquisition of learning on the installment plan.

Sharpening competition for the consumer's credit dollar will be one of the dominant facts of business life in the 1960's, says a new study by the economics department of C.I.T. Financial Corporation.

when the postwar economy, as measured in terms of gross national product rose from $258 billion in 1949 to $482 billion in 1959. (It's now well past $500 billion.)

MORE INCOME, MORE DEBTS—In that decade, the study points out, disposable personal income of American consumers (what they had left after taxes), climbed from $190 billion annually to $337-billion. Volume of consumer installment credit outstanding rose from $11.6 billion to $39.5 billion. (It's over $40 billion now.)

The rise in production, employment, incomes and consumer credit during the 1950's brought into being a mass market for many goods formerly regarded as luxuries, according to the study. (I.e.: The number of backyard swimming pools increased from 2,900 in 1950 to 171,000 at the end of '59.)

Millions of landlubbers became amateur yachtsmen as spending on recreational boating exploded from $660,000,000 in 1949 to $2.5 billion last year. In the suburbs the two-car garage became almost as commonplace as the picture window, as the multi-car families rose from 2,000,000 to 6,950,000. Total passenger-car registrations increased from 36,000,000 to 59,500,000.

"The hard core of this new mass market is the young middle-income family to whom installment buying comes naturally," the study states. "The phenomenal rise in living standards in the past ten years was possible only because families in this middle-income group were willing and able to buy 'on time.'"

THE SHAPE OF THE SIXTIES

How will this market shape up in the 1960's? Here's how it looks to C.I.T.'s economics department:

In sheer numbers it will be bigger, since the marriage rate will soon resume its upward climb.

—Individually and collectively, it will be richer. Authoritative projections indicate that by 1970 average family income, now pegged at $6,500 will rise to $9,700 and the number of American families with income over $7,500 will double, reaching a total of 25,000,000.

—It will be a discriminating market—possibly a fickle one. It will be confronted with a glittering array of gadgets, comforts, and new products barely out of the research stage today.

—It will be a credit-minded market. The families composing it will expand their use of credit to match the increase in their incomes and their desire for the better things of life.

OLD PROMOTER WISHES HE WERE ONE OF THOSE YOUNG FAMILIES

The Old Promoter peered over our shoulders as we studied the C.I.T. STUDY.

"Wish I were one of those young middle-income families willing to enjoy all those new comforts on the installment plan," he said. "When the bill collector comes, they can just tell him to jump in the new backyard swimming pool. Or tell him to take it back. I think I'll just settle for a cigar. On credit, of course."

Wall St. Could Be Over Cautious In Evaluations

hold the Solid South in line. It appeared logical to the Democrats, at the time, to entrust such a task to the popular Lyndon Johnson with the assistance of Sam Rayburn. Also, Lyndon Johnson was advertised as a conservative and it was hoped that his conservatism would take the curse off the excessive liberalism of John Kennedy. It seems to be working out differently and the place where the error is showing up most sharply is Texas where anti-Kennedyism is not merely a matter of politics but has become a profound religious issue. Despite all that is said about separation of church and state and keeping religion out of politics, no one has proposed keeping politics out of religion. The violence of the attack has astonished all political observers who generally held that this was not 1928 and that the country was too broad-minded to invoke a religious issue. Nevertheless, this has happened and to ignore it is to disregard a major sociological phenomenon of our times. Many Roman Catholics regret that the issue should be joined over the personality of John Kennedy, who, in his public pronouncements, has not always or even generally accepted the official position of his church. Whatever is to be said about this particular fact, Catholics are growing increasingly resentful over the type of argument adduced to reject a Catholic for the Presidency and the Republicans are sincerely worried about a boomerang. In Texas, however, the anti-Catholic attitude is strong. My own mail astonishes me both by its volume and its language, particularly when the letters come from many parts of Texas, Kentucky and Tennessee. Here, apparently, are anti-Papist centers, virile, well-financed, positive and uncompromising. Such excitement can only increase in virulence between now and Election Day and it will take great statesmanship on both sides not to permit this divisive force to lead to violence in places.

Area Recreation Survey Is Begun

Information on the recreational activities of Americans will be collected by the U.S. Census Bureau in a series of four sample surveys to be conducted here and in 329 other areas of the country during the next ten months, it was announced today by Director Joseph R. Norwood of the Bureau's regional field office at Charlotte, N. C.
Members of a number of local families, selected by means of the Census Bureau's scientific sampling program, will be interviewed in the first survey which begins on September 6. The remaining three surveys in the series will be carried out in December of this year, and in March and June of 1961.
The four surveys are being conducted by the Census Bureau for the Outdoor Recreation Resources Commission, a special government body established by the Congress to investigate future needs for public and private outdoor recreation facilities.
Topics to be covered in the survey include vacation trips away from home, other trips for outdoor recreation, other recreational activities, and family ownership of recreational equipment. Information will be collected on the length of vacations, time of year vacations are taken, distances traveled, mode of travel, expenditures, and related items.
Local interviews in the recreation survey will be conducted by Mildred A. McArthur.

Experience Rough Co-Existence With Reds

By RELMAN MORIN

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP)—In a strange little world in central Korea today, American soldiers are learning first-hand about co-existence with the Communists. You could scarcely call it peaceful co-existence. A North Korean sergeant spits in the face of an American. In another brush, a GI unhooks his pistol belt, doubles up his fists, and invites a Communist soldier to do the same. Bitter arguments crackle across a table covered with green baize. The North Koreans commander calls his American opposite number a "burglar, born in a den of thieves." American soldiers observe the Communist technique of the big lie, the bland denial of some witnessed event. They hear the Communist radio describe them as murderers and rapists. This weird world where GIs rub shoulders with the Reds is the joint security area, established near this village. Here in 1953 an armistice was signed, ending the shooting phase of the Korean War. The opposing armies pulled back, leaving a no man's land, some two miles wide. It runs from coast to coast across the waist of Korea.

HOME WORK — Coloratura soprano Roberta Peters tends plants in her Scarsdale, N. Y., home during a summer respite from busy concert schedule and the season at the Met.

The joint security area was established to handle charges from either side about violations of the armistice terms. It is a circular spot in the sandy hills, about a half-mile in diameter. Here, each side stations 5 officers and 30 enlisted men. In effect, they have to live and work together. The buildings are mostly quonset-type huts, dull grey for the Communists, bright green for the Americans. The line marking the middle of no man's land runs through the center. During meetings, the Communist side of the table is in North Korea, the American side in South Korea. On the grounds outside, soldiers pass each other in stony silence. The atmosphere is heavy with hatred. "It's interesting," says Pfc. Joseph Melchor of Shell Rock, Iowa. "An outfit gets pretty sharp up here. There's nowhere else in the world where you can be as close

IS THE U. S. A WELFARE STATE? No it is not, compared with many other countries in Europe. The most marked example is Sweden, which I visited last year. There the mother is helped while the baby is being born, and is cared for during the first five years. Citizens can get free hospital service as well as free education. The railroads, telephones, and buses are owned by the people. The government builds and operates co-operative stores and many places of amusement. However, I found these were not appreciated by the people; instead, they were complaining about the high taxes. This is also evident in Denmark, and even in England. Human nature seems to be about the same all over the world, although I found a better spirit in West Germany than anywhere else. There the people seem to realize that in the end they get what they produce, and hence are willing to labor hard and do excellent work. The threatened revolutions throughout the world today, whether in Cuba or Central Africa or Southeast Asia, are based on a determination to get more and do less. However, the situation in China, which I hoped to visit this year, but have been forbidden to by our government, is based upon people awaking from a sleep of many centuries. Here are 650,000,000 people, with 1,000,000 being added every month!

Medals Won By N.C. Teachers

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. — Six North Carolina classroom teachers were named today to receive national recognition from Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge for their exceptional service in furthering the cause of responsible citizenship, patriotism and a greater understanding and appreciation of the American Way of Life. They are among 569 teachers from every state who were selected by the Foundation's independent National and School Awards Jury.

The North Carolinians, are: Miss Kathrine A. Counts of Greensboro, Mrs. Bernice H. Davenport of Oak Grove Elementary School in Elkin, Oliver Y. Davis, of Charlotte, Miss Mary Alice Elliott, of A. L. Brown High School in Kannapolis, Miss Bertha Mae Stroud of Grainger High School in Kinston, and James William Wall of Davie County High School in Mocksville.

In announcing recipients of the 1960 Valley Forge Classroom Teachers Medal Dr. Kenneth D. Wells, President of Freedoms Foundation said, "It is appropriate that we recognize the outstanding efforts of America's classroom teachers who are doing so much to advance among the nation's youth the cause of freedom and a deeper and understanding of our rich heritage.

"Without the dedicated efforts of America's teachers," stated Dr. Wells, "our children would be ill-prepared and ill-equipped to face the responsibilities of freedom and leadership in tomorrow's world."

an-hour winds which first struck the Florida Keys late Friday, dug out from under the storm's debris and attempted to ascertain just how bad things were. The death toll of four and the personal injury reports were surprisingly low since the vicious winds blew directly through the heart of the state.

Civil Defense and Red Cross officials attributed the low Florida toll to well-laid advance plans and cooperation from the residents. The national Red Cross in Washington called the storm a major disaster. Property damage was widespread. Electric power in South Florida was a rarity.

Sister Of Local Woman Died Today

Mrs. Bernice Patten died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Howard McGinnis, Monday morning after a prolonged illness. Chapel services and burial will be conducted in Atlantic City, N. J., her former home. It has been requested that no flowers be sent.

The keys were left without fresh water. Pines and palm trees were snapped like matchsticks. Unprotected windows shattered at the height of the storm. Roofs flew off, but the main structure of most houses and buildings stood up to the storm and won.

Preliminary reports indicated the keys suffered most. Officials at Marathon, 35-miles northeast of Key West, said 80 per cent of the buildings suffered major damage. Not one escaped unscathed. Lt. Cmdr. Jim Kissick, a Navy helicopter pilot who flew over the keys, declared "This is the most terrible thing I've seen since the Marines took Okinawa."

Radio relays were being used for emergency communications from the keys. Navy crews and Red Cross teams were providing hurried relief needs.

Lightning Killed 10 Of His Cows

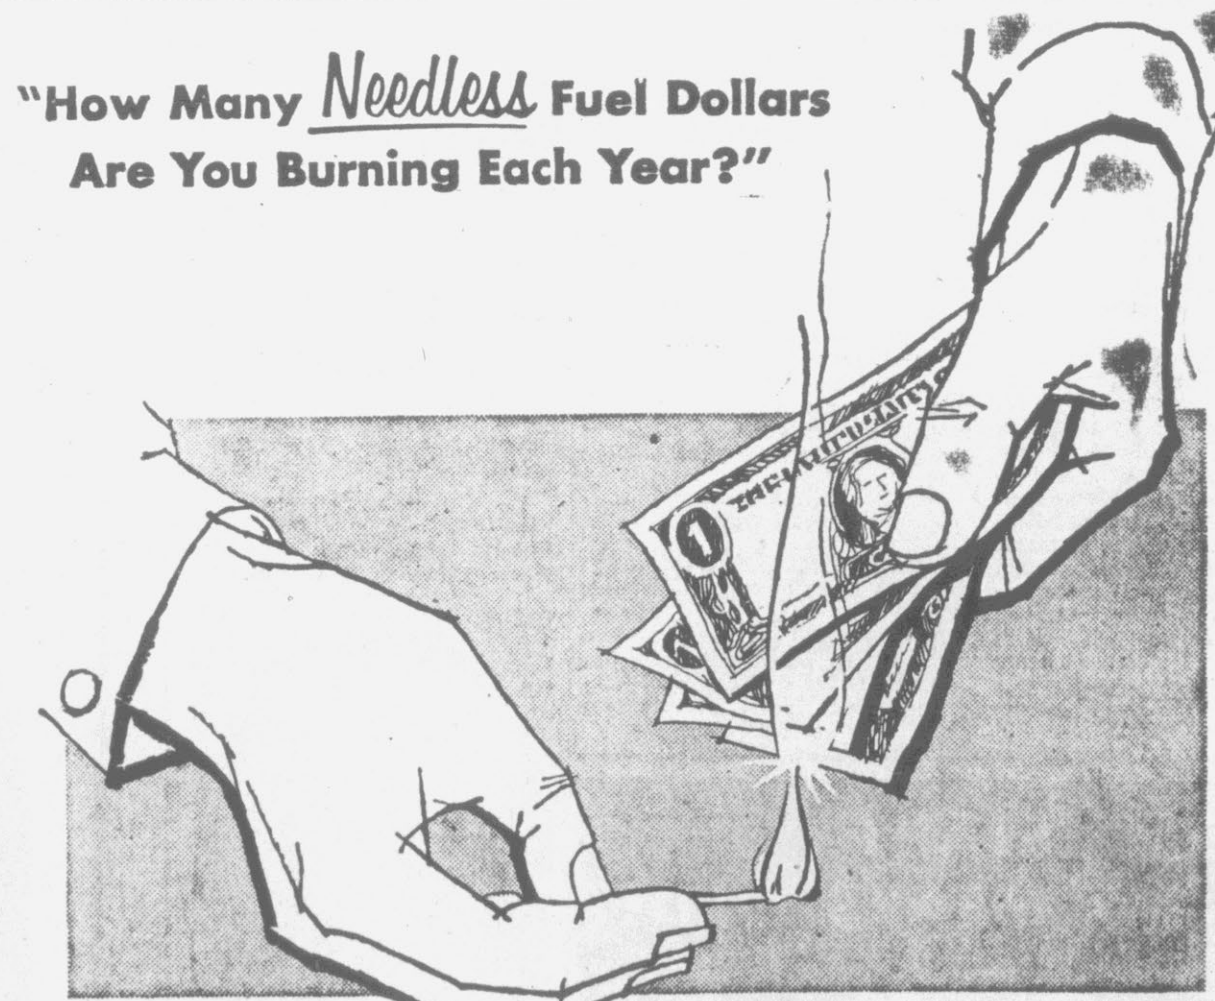

CHARLESTON, S. C. (AP) — Ryan Smoak, a Tonges Island cattle raiser, has had 10 cows killed by lightning within a two-year period, all within 150 feet of each other. The first four prize Black Angus cows were killed by a lightning bolt during a thunderstorm. A year later he found three more of his Black Angus and a red cow dead of a lightning bolt. After a recent storm, he wasn't surprised when he found two more dead cows, also struck down by lightning. Smoak estimates the 10 cows were worth $2,500.

trada retired pinch hitter Marv Throneberry on an infield bouncer to put it away.

Berber's victory was his 10th against five losses. Veteran Early Wynn helped the triumph of the year over the A's.

Berteran Early Wynn helped the White Sox hang on to their slim pennant hopes by shutting out Boston 1-0 in the nightcap after Chicago won the opener, 5-3.

Fine relief pitching by Mike Garcia and Frank Baumann helped the White Sox preserve the opening victory after having jumped off to a 4-0 lead in the first two innings.

Boston knocked Billy Pierce out in the sixth inning when the Red Sox scored two runs and had the bases loaded with none out. Garcia took over and got Frank Malone to foul out and pinch hitter Russ Nixon to bounce into a doubleplay.

In the national league, a scheduled doubleheader between Pittsburgh and Chicago was rained off but St. Louis picked up a half game when Curt Simmons, dropped by the Philadelphia Phillies in June, continued to haunt his former teammates by beating them for the fourth straight time-7-3.

The second-place Cards moved to within 6 1/2 games of the front-running Pirates.

Julian Javier stroked four singles and Stan Musial hit a home run and a single as the Redbirds saddled John Buzhardt (4-15), the Phillies' luckless right-hander, with his 10th consecutive defeat.

Willie McCovey's 13th homer headed San Francisco's 11-hit assault in a 3-2 victory over Cincinnati Sunday in a doubleheader nightcap after the Reds grabbed a 2-1 triumph in the opener on Gus Bell's home run.

Don Drysdale pitched two-hit ball for his fifth shutout of the season as the Los Angeles Dodgers threw a further damper on the Milwaukee Braves' faint pennant hopes with a 2-0 victory.

Singles by Wes Covington in the fifth and Eddie Mathews in the seventh were the only hits off Drysdale as he won his 14th against 13 defeats. He struck out seven Braves, running his season total to 222 in 243 innings, and walked two. Only two runners reached second base.

Redskin Games To Be Telecast

For the fifth straight year, the 12 games of the Washington Redskins will be telecast on a special regional network of the CBS Television Network, starting with the "Skins" opener at Baltimore on Sunday, Sept. 25.

None of the Washington home games will be televised on station WTOP-TV, Washington.

In addition to the 12 Redskin games, four others will be telecast. They are Chicago at Baltimore on Oct. 2, Green Bay at Detroit on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 24, Green Bay at San Francisco on Dec. 10 and the Packers finale at Los Angeles on Dec. 17.

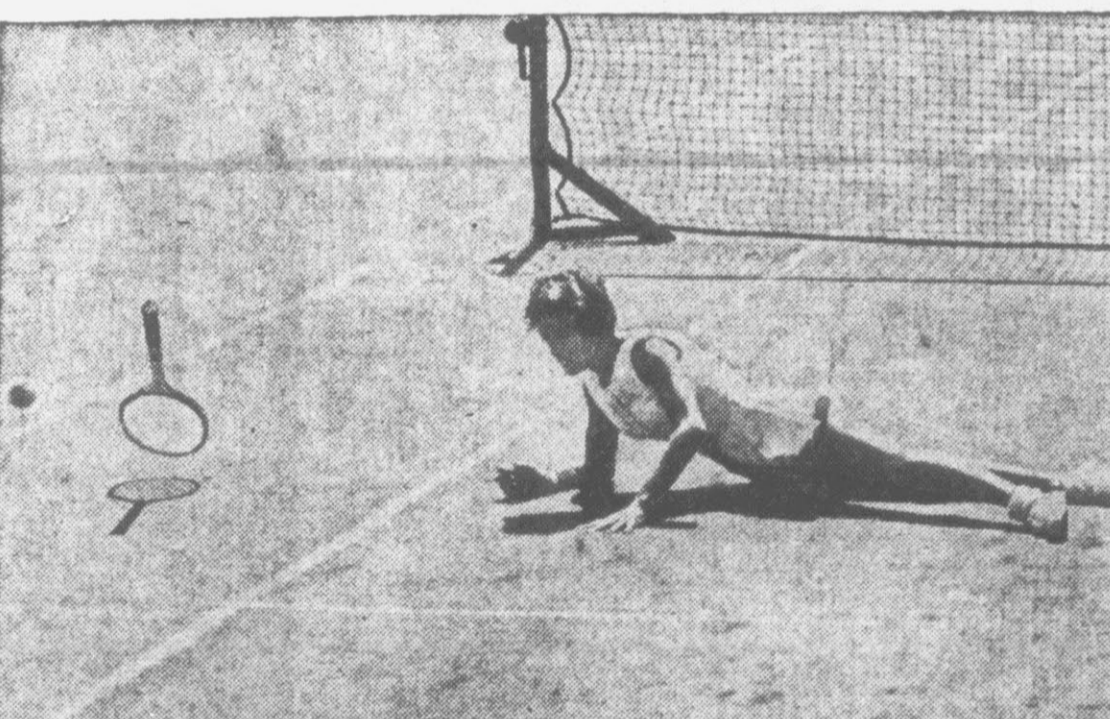

Washington will host the Dallas Cowboys, the NFL's newest club on Sunday, Oct. 9. All other games will be home-an-home affairs with their Eastern Conference rivals.

Mike Nixon is entering his second season as head coach of the "Skins. His debut in 1959 was marred by injuries to several of his key players, such as Don Booseler, one of the league's outstanding runners. Washington supporters feel that if the club can stay away from injuries, they will contend for the Eastern Conference title this year.

Eddie LeBaron, longtime quarterback with the Redskins, will return to Griffith Stadium with the Cowboys. He was traded to Dallas earlier this year.

Jim Gibbons and Ed Gallaher are returning as play-by-play telecaster and color announcer respectively.

Built-In Measure Against Thievery

YORK, S.C. (AP)—Boat salesman Bob Slagle arrived at work one morning to find a 35-horsepower motor had been taken from a runabout during the night. But there the motor lay, hardly a dozen feet from the boat—and Slagle knew why.

"That rig had been sitting out by the shed for months," he grinned. "Wasps had built a right big nest on that motor."

Want Fish With A Hearing Aid

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Larry Totach, police dispatcher in suburban Overland, draws raised eyebrows when he tells it but he claims this fish story is true:

Larry was vacationing this summer with his brother, Chester, who lives in Foley, Ala. While deep-sea fishing, a woman on the boat hooked a 35-pound mackerel. It struggled so fiercely that she moved to hand the line to one of the men and it wrapped around Chester's head. His hearing aid was knocked into the sea and, as it hit the water, another mackerel snapped it up. The Mobile Hearing Aid Center has posted a $25 reward for anyone catching a mackerel with a hearing aid inside it.

Wrong Way To 'Burglar-Proof'

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—A fire inspector took a dim view of the way an apartment house owner made his ladder-type fire escape "burglar proof."

He covered the lower reaches with grease. He said some youngsters had climbed it and kicked in doors.

Inspector Ervin McCurdy, told him to clean off the grease and take up the door-kicking problem with police.

By REINHOLD ENSZ TRIBERG, Germany (AP) — The famed cuckoo clock makers of the Black Forest have switched to assembly line production. Some have even stopped producing electric razors — they are turning out electric razors. The clock makers hate to admit that the rush and bustle of modern life has penetrated the valleys of the Black Forest, but as one of them put it: "Assembly line production is the only way to keep up with the competition. The individual hand work of the old days is gone forever. My workers have even got the five-day week." In the old days, clock making was a family affair, especially during the long winter days when the weather made other work impossible. Everything was made of wood, including the mechanism of the clock. And it was done by hand.

Competition Great Today, the howl of electric jig saws and the bang of metal stamping machines fill the work shops of this town of 7,000, which remains Germany's chief producer of cuckoo clocks. The fronts of the cuckoo clocks are still carved by hand, but a carver must turn out at least 10 of the smaller size front every day if his factory is to make a profit.

The spur of competition comes not only from other clock makers in the Black Forest. Factories in Japan and North America are turning out cuckoo clocks similar to local ones, says Mayor Willi Fester.

Faster sales most of the North America competition comes from Canada. "About 20 to 30 of our clock makers emigrated there after World War II," he says.

One result is that Triberg's production has dropped during the past several years. The mayor estimates that during the years of peak demand, from 1954 through 1956, Triberg turned out more than 100,000 clocks a year, most of them bought by American soldiers and importers in the United States.

Try Other Specialties But then demand slackened, and Triberg's annual production is now about 70,000. Clock makers feel that one reason for the drop, aside from outside competition, is that some fly-by-night Black Forest operators turned out trashy, unreliable clocks during the peak years and thus soured the buying public.

The mayor says the slack-off has prompted some cuckoo clock makers to switch to other kinds of clocks, especially the 400-day clocks, and electric razors.

A Stirring Western Suspense Novel
The Lean Rider by CLIFF FARRELL

CHAPTER 27
The trail drive had advanced deep into the territory of New Mexico and their course was now always directly west. Each night when they camped Abel Barbee placed markers that pointed to the North Star. On arising, this was the compass by which he set their course for the day, rain or shine.

"Maybe," was all he said. She realized that he not share her hopes. The dread that had faded out of her mind edged back again.
If there was any such shadow on the thoughts of the riders it was submerged in a new anticipation. They were nearing the next river of importance, the Rio Grande, and beyond the crossing lay a town named Los Molinos, the first settlement they had encountered in weeks.

She saw that all the levity was abruptly gone from Matthew. He was looking at something back of her. She turned.
Three men had stepped from the wagon tunnel of a livery barn some distance away and on the opposite side of the street. They were just in from the trail, for their rough saddle garb was worn and weather-faded and gray from the dust of miles. Their jaws bore a heavy bristle of beard and their hair was long and curling over the collars of their saddle coats.

MEMPHIS (AP) — A busy lawyer strode into the waiting room at his office, trailed by his young son. Around the crowded room, heads lifted hopefully.
The counselor stopped at his secretary's desk and said, in ringing tones: "Afraid I'll have to be out in the county all afternoon, taking depositions."
The patient waiters wilted. The lawyer marched sternly toward the door. At this point his son spoke up plaintively.
"Daddy," he asked, "does that mean we aren't going fishing after all?"

UNION, S.C. (AP) — Guy H. Wilburn, a Union merchant, paid for his marriage license with a bunch of old wooden, drygoods boxes.
Years ago, he gave the boxes to the late Probate Judge W. W. Johnson.
In return, Judge Johnson sent Wilburn a note which read: "I won't charge you a fee when you get ready to apply for your wedding license."
Wilburn kept the note and later held the judge to his bargain.

For Grim 'Paladin' Change In Character

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The faithful Saturday night audience probably is not aware of it, but over the past three years that grim and steely avenger of the Old West, Paladin, has been turning into a terribly nice guy.
At least, that's what Richard Boone says and as star of CBS' "Have Gun, Will Travel," he ought to know.
"The character has developed a good deal," reflected Boone. "He had acquired a sense of humor, for one thing. He's not as arrogant as he used to be. His constant emphasis on money has disappeared. And we've been putting some lemon in what started out to be a pretty saccharine view of the Old West."

Hotel Guest Can Count On A Bible In His Room

By JOSEPH E. MOHBAT
CHICAGO (AP) — One of the few things the traveler may count on when checking into a strange hotel is that, among the stationery, laundry slips and dust of the dresser drawer, he will find a black-bound Bible, King James Version.
It may appear used and worn, or new and untouched. It may contain letters, notes or, on occasion, a $10 bill. For some it may have been a source of inspiration, for others a paperweight.
It's one of 44 million Bibles distributed by the Gideon Association since the first one was left in Iron Mountain, Mont., in November 1908. The name of Iron Mountain since has been changed to Superior.
That was about 10 years after the inspiration for the association came to three traveling men in Wisconsin—John H. Nicholson of Janesville, Samuel E. Hill of Beloit and William J. Knights of Wild Rose. The Gideons—officially the Christian Commercial Men's Association of America—was founded July 1, 1899, in Janesville.
Today the Gideons, whose mission is to spread Christianity on a man-to-man basis wherever traveling men meet, spend nearly one million dollars a year on their Bible distribution program. Although the association engages in other, less expansive evangelical activities, Bible handouts have become, in effect, the trademark of the Scriptures go not only to hostels, but to school children, nurses, prisoners and servicemen throughout the United States and 53 foreign nations. Light blue Bibles with the owner's name stamped in gold are presented Cabinet members, Congressmen, Supreme Court justices and governors.
To be a Gideon—and there are 12,200 of them in 800 camps around the nation—requires membership in a Protestant church. It also requires holding a small advisory or administrative position in business.
Gideon activities are financed by donations and church offerings, as well as the $15 annual membership fee. Operations are coordinated by international headquarters in Chicago and by an unpaid, four-man international cabinet elected by the membership at annual conventions.
Few Bibles are stolen, says R. V. Heringlake, office manager of the Chicago headquarters. When it does happen, the incident often is followed by conscience-stricken letters and an occasional donation. Cooperation by hotel and motel managers, Heringlake reports, is nearly 100 per cent.
How is the success of the boudoir Bibles measured?
It's difficult, says Heringlake. About the only yardstick is a gratifying flow of letters every week from persons who say their lives were changed and their letters were dispersed via the Scriptural meditation offered by the Gideon Bibles.
Who was Gideon?
He was a Biblical figure—an Israelite hero who, with a small band of followers, defeated the Midianites and ruled Israel for 40 years.
"He was a man," says R. V. Heringlake, office manager of the Chicago headquarters, "willing to do exactly what God wanted him to do."

Shirly Favors The Old Moral Values

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—What this country needs, says Shirley Temple, is a return to old-fashioned moral values.

Shirley, now a housewife in Atherton, Calif., says she is appalled by some of the things she sees in movies and TV.

"The last two pictures I have seen were 'Suddenly, Last Summer' and 'Anatomy of a Murder,'" she remarked. "I don't think 'Suddenly Last Summer' should have been seen by anyone under 21, and I am dubious about its value to an adult. I suppose 'Anatomy of a Murder' is all right for those who like murder stories, but I found the dialogue offensive.

"Too many of the other Hollywood films follow the same line. I agree with Samuel Goldwyn, who said that producers have gone overboard on sex in films. As he said, there is a lesson to be learned from the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. When people got contented and complacent, the moral standards started to fall, and they didn't have the strength to lift themselves up."

There is too much phony psychiatry being foisted on the public, Shirley observed, with a resolute chipping away at moral values.

Being the mother of three and part-time receptionist at a child's psychiatry clinic in Palo Alto, Shirley has a more than average concern in such matters. She has a chance to do something about it, both as a noted figure and as star of her own TV series. The weekly hours will start on NBC next Sunday, and she'll appear in every third one.

"I hope it will be one hour of entertainment which the whole family can see every week," she said. "For that reason, I have control over the scripts and can make suggestions about things that I think would be offensive."

Shirley is a youthful 32. "But I will have been in the entertainment business for 30 years next year," she smiled. "If someone doesn't give me a testimonial dinner then, it'll be too late. All of the people who worked with me are dying off."

Fifteen Farmers Are Chairmen In Bureau Drive

Fifteen Pitt County farmers have been named to serve as community chairmen in the coming Pitt County Farm Bureau membership enrollment drive.

Each chairman will be responsible for a township or community and assigning areas of coverage for a small army of solicitors, according to County Membership Chairman Charles Quinley of Farmville.

Community membership chairmen named by Quinley include: Glenn Strickland, Arthur S. F. Peterson, Ayden; Eugene James, Belvoir; Tom Andrews, Bethel; J. B. Congleton, Carolina; Carl Vanders, Chicod; D. M. Fleming, Falkland; Cedric Davis, Farmville; R. M. Dilda, Fountain; Mrs. Van Fleming Jr., Greenville; W. I. Bissette, Grifton; R. H. Stocks, Grimesland; Berny Baker, Pactolus; Milton Maye, Winterville, Swift Creek chairman will be named later.

Quinley said the chairmen will be equipped to assist membership solicitors in telling the Farm Bureau story of protecting the farmers interests in state and national legislative matters.

Just recently Farm Bureau has saved Tar Heels millions of dollars in fighting to prevent taxes being levied on tobacco and other farm products in the 1959 General Assembly, according to the membership chairman.

Quinley pointed out that Farm Bureau is farmer owned and operated and that it has no connection with governments.

"Primarily it is designed to help farm agricultural policy in such a way as to help farmers increase their incomes along lines consistent with the principles of freedom and democracy," he declared.

Campus Radio's Staff Organized

Organization of a staff of student personnel for East Carolina College's campus radio station WWWS-AM and FM has been completed. Plans for the fall quarter of the 1960-1961 term include a broadcast of the speech to be made here by Sen. John Kennedy, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, in the college stadium Sept. 17.

Activities of the college station are conducted under the direction of Rosalind Roulston, director of radio and television at the college, and Librarian Wendell W. Smiley, technical consultant. Ambitious programs of AM and FM broadcasts originating in the college studios are head each quarter both on the campus and over a wide area in Eastern North Carolina.

New officers of the campus radio staff of forty-one students, elected Thursday to serve during the fall quarter, are Jerry M. Winberry of Jacksonville, station manager; James F. Shuman of Charlotte, assistant station manager; Jerry W. Moore of Raleigh, AM program director; Betty F. Milton of Lillington, FM program director; Robert H. Swooning Due To No Breakfasts

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — The fainting problem in high and junior high schools here is being eaten away. Mrs. Elizabeth Morris, supervisor of cafeterias, says there was an epidemic of swooning at gym classes, especially in those for girls. Investigation disclosed that students were getting up late and rushing away to school without breakfast. Now breakfast is served before classes at the schools.

Jeweler's Price Hurt Conscience

LONDON (AP)—Doreen Campbell, 24, was short of money, in arrears with her rent, and the pearl necklace was lying unnoticed on the floor of a London shop. She picked it up and sold it to a jeweler for 30 pounds ($84). A few days later she saw the necklace in the jeweler's window priced at 175 pounds ($490). Conscience-stricken, Doreen went to the police and told the story. Detectives recovered the necklace—and found it was really worth 1,200 pounds ($3,360).

Washington Area Target Of Blow In Early Morn

WASHINGTON — The real severity of Hurricane Donna was beginning to be told this morning in sparse reports from this area, which caught the brunt of the hurricane early this morning.

The eye of Donna was centered over Washington about 3 a.m. This morning, communications were down between Greenville and Washington and all roads leading from Washington except the Pactolus road were closed because of high water, it was reported.

Water covered lower floors in homes in the Washington Park area and in other homes came within two or three inches of the floors.

Without Water
The Stumpy Point area was existing on a limited water supply, as trucks were carrying in fresh water supplies, ham radio operator Charlie Wells said.

Red Cross representative Harold Anderson was on his way to Washington this morning to make a ground and area survey of actual damage. The full story on the storm and its damage is not yet known here.

However, most concede that it surpassed Hazel as far as damage is concerned.

It seemed early this morning, according to a report from a representative of the Washington Daily News, that most of the damage was the result of winds. Sides of some of the older wood frame warehouses were blown in. The roof was blown off the Tally Implement Co., a one story building.

The Washington ball park sustained damage on at least one wall, with 20 to 50 feet gone. It was reported that trees blown on houses did damage on Second Street here.

As for the boats, damage hasn't been estimated yet. It was reported that a shrimp boat was resting its stern in trees and the bow in water early this morning on Castle Island here. Trees and power lines were down, and damage to crops in the general area from available reports seems serious.

Man Hurt
It was also reported that at least one injury resulted here from the hurricane when a chimney collapsed and pinned an unidentified man down from 3 a.m. until 6 a.m., when the rescue squad found him.

Window panes were blown out in downtown Washington and damage to signs was notable. In other coastal sections, national guard units were being dispatched to the Morehead City area. Heavy wind damage was reported at Behaven, though no contact had been established with Swan Quarter, Bath, or Carolina Beach.

It seems that the hurricane moved inland west of Morehead, advancing toward New Bern, Vanceboro and then Washington with the eye of the storm there between 2:30 and 3 a.m., according to several reports. Winds began to diminish between 4:30 and 5 a.m.

The vicious storm reportedly went out to sea about 40 miles northeast of Norfolk and may go inland again about Long Island, according to its present course. However, it is an erratic storm and its actual path was not known.

area. Patrolmen and Morehead police ventured into their cars and began making a check of the streets in town and the causeway leading to Beaufort. I climbed into a Patrol car with two Pitt County officers, Cpl. J. T. Jenkins and Ptl. Luther Long, who had been ordered to the area, along with a local patrolman and we set out to cross the Beaufort Causeway.

On our way from the police station we saw heaps of tin and a few scattered brick which had blown from the roof of a store. Several windows had been broken by the wind and flying debris, we noticed. Trees along the street had been uprooted and broken and had fallen into the street.

After crossing the "first bridge" to Beaufort, we were stopped by a red car stopped diagonally across the road. There was an electric wire lying across the trunk lid of the car. The Morehead Patrolman called to the five occupants and after a discussion the five left their stranded vehicle and crowded into the two-door patrol car for the trip back to the Morehead Police Station.

Just after pulling away from the "drowned-out" car, the whole sky lighted up . . . behind us and in front of us across the bridge.

Later we found out that a Carolina Power and Light Company employee in Jacksonville had turned power on to the ruptured electrical circuit leading to the area and electricity was arcing at the broken points . . . one of which was at the car we had just left.

After "safely" depositing our passengers at the police station, I bowed out of the picture for an hour and "sacked out" on a load of hose at the Fire Department.

The wind, which was now gaining in intensity would not let me sleep but the relaxation felt good. About 3:30 a.m. after an hours rest, Cpl. Jenkins, Ptl. W. E. Williams, of Greenville, Roy Hardee, WNCN newsmen and I decided to survey the damage at Atlantic Beach.

We were passed through the blockade at the foot of the Bogue Sound Bridge by Chief Moore with no difficulty. As we crossed the bridge and causeway, an almost unbelievable site greeted us.

The draw-bridge safety arms, which stop traffic while the bridge is open, were twisted and broken like toothpicks. Other debris along the causeway made driving hazardous. It was still dark . . . too dark to see the bakery warehouse to our right was no longer standing . . . too dark to tell that the go-kart track was a shambles or a house trailer, which once was a fine summer-dwelling would not be used again.

Deputy Smith joined our party on the beach and we headed for Salterpath . . . to see what damage had been done there and to see if George's father, who had chosen to stay in his home there, was okay.

After clearing debris from the Colony Bay Club out of the road we continued on to Salter Path with no difficulty. The Deputy's father was "doing okay," so we continued on in an effort to get to Emerald Isle.

About half-way, we had to stop. There was no road. The heavy surf had cut a path across the dunes and cut the road in two. We got out of the cars and several of us walked on a little further . . . far enough to get an even bigger surprise.

It was almost unbelievable . . . it created a feeling of unreality . . . of science fiction, especially in the dark where a cool wind was still blowing and blowing the sand.

The small hole in the road seemed more natural, but this one . . . we estimated it to be about 150 feet wide. Like someone with a steam shovel had just gone there and dug a ditch from the beach to the sound.

We turned around then and headed back . . . back to a breakfast of bacon, eggs, bread and coffee supplied by our faithful deputy at his motel, the "Kincade". Luckily for us, it had escaped the wrath of the storm.

After breakfast, about 6 o'clock, the task of recording the night's destruction on film began. The sights that greeted us were almost unbelievable.

House trailers, torn all to bits; three houses, which once stood on the water front hunched together in a pile on what once was a street; other gaping holes in the streets behind the first and second row of cottages on the West end of the beach, caused by the washing waters of the Atlantic Ocean as it spilled over the cement Sea Walls.

Five fishing piers on the East end of the beach and sound damaged . . . partially blown away. The Dunes club, which

Opinions Differ Between Donna And Big Hazel

Was Hurricane "Donna" worse than famous "Hazel" of October, 1954?

There was a difference in opinion around Pitt County today. Sherman Husted, weatherman at Greenville television station WNCN, recalled Hazel's winds reached 135 miles per hour on the coast but "lost a lot of velocity inland."

Husted reported winds of 102 miles per hour when Donna last night at the television station. He said damage, according to reports from throughout Eastern North Carolina, is "much more extensive than Hazel."

"Morehead City and Atlantic Beach were very heavily hit," he said. Husted said he "heard part of a message that indicted winds of 100 miles per hour and extensive damage to business property" in that area.

Frank Harrington of the local telephone office believed Hazel was worse. "I think we had more damage then," he said.

However, he reported, "We're in a heck of a mess. We've got trees all through our toll lines."

Two Killed
Hazel pulled up second to Donna in at least one respect. Donna turned killer in Pitt County, snuffing out two lives with falling trees.

Both deaths resulted when large trees crashed into homes, killing the victims while they slept. A three-year-old Negro boy, Larry Outlaw, Rt. 1, Stokes, was killed when a huge oak tree crashed through the roof and pinned him and his mother in bed. The mother was injured slightly.

Another large oak fell on and demolished a house near Farmville, killing 60-year-old Hattie Carr Galloway. The Rt. 2, Farmville Negro and a 13-year-old girl were pinned in their bed by the falling tree.

Hazel took her toll in property damage, leaving no deaths in her path through the county.

Communications Cut By 'Donna'

Greenville was virtually without communications with the outside world this morning because of Hurricane Donna.

Long distance telephone lines were completely out, it was reported. The Daily Reflector's Associated Press teletype was out of commission. Radio stations and television station WNCN reported their teletype services out.

Only short wave police radio and ham operators were able to reach other areas following last night's disastrous storm.

The Reflector's news coverage of the storm is furnished through eyewitness reports of staff members, and the cooperation of persons traveling into Greenville from other areas.

Bureau Kick-Off Set For Tuesday

Saturday's edition of the Daily Reflector erroneously reported a Pitt County Farm Bureau meeting would be tonight.

The "Kickoff Meeting" for the bureau's membership drive is scheduled for 7 p.m. at Respass Brothers Barbecue tomorrow.

SPILLED MILK
BREWER, Maine (AP) — There is no use crying over spilled milk — 30 gallons of it.

A Canadian woman tourist, a milk truck driver and Brewer police agreed on that after the woman went through a stop sign. The truck had to stop so quickly that its cargo of milk cans upset. The woman paid for the milk and went on her way.

once stood at the ocean's edge, now spread over a wide area . . . with its floor filling up a hole in the Fort Macon Road washed there by the sea which crossed Bogue Banks at that point too.

The boardwalk businesses were destroyed too. The popular teenage meeting place "The Pavilion"; "Giggles" old snowball stand and "Herring's Bath House" included.

We then left the beach, and heard reports from the Highway Patrol that the Croatan Sound Bridge was under water and that 200 utility poles had been blown down at Nags Head. We also learned that "Donna" was south of Cape May, New Jersey . . . off the Maryland coast.

Returning to Morehead, we found that the cause-way to Beaufort was washed out and that parts of the roof on a warehouse at state ports had been blown off. The warehouse reportedly contained Six-million dollars worth of tobacco.

After surveying the damage at Morehead City, and learning again from the highway patrol, the wind reached speeds of 110 miles per hour here, we returned home, much the wiser and much more the believer in what a storm like "Donna" can do.

Most Schools In County Are Closed By Storm; Damage Said Widespread

By PATRICIA MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

Hurricane Donna has passed, but she left her mark in Pitt County. Reports trickled in this morning of damaged school buildings, roofs blown off and other damage to crops and homes.

Flooding prevailed in some sections and power and telephone lines were still out this morning in many areas.

All city and county schools, with the exception of those in Farmville, were closed today. School authorities couldn't get the message to Farmville, so their schools have operated with light attendance.

Following a survey of Pitt County schools, Superintendent D.H. Conley said four classrooms in one building of Bethel Union School were unroofed and another building of Bethel Union School had about two rooms uncovered. Conley noted that the roofs were metal and were rolled off by Donna.

A section of the old maintenance building at Winterville was unroofed and part of the Ayden High School gymnasium was without roofing this morning. Conley found general flooding in most of the school basements, along with power failures at the Stokes, Belvoir, Chicod and Winterville schools. "We don't know what else we'll discover as the day wears on," Conley said.

The county and city schools both plan to operate Tuesday. Ayden High School was closed Tuesday. General flooding in some sections and power and telephone lines were still out this morning in many areas.

At 2:20 a.m. today, firemen responded to a power line fire in the alley behind Sears and Roebuck Store on Evans St.

They also answered calls to power line fires at 409 Meade St., 411 Elm St. and at 204 14th St. They were called to the Meade St. fire at 2:45 a.m., to the Elm St. fire at 4:04 a.m. and to the 14th St. fire, a burning transformer, at 6:50 a.m.

Five fire calls were answered by local firefighters over the weekend, with at least four of them being directly caused by Hurricane "Donna."

According to fire officers, trucks responded to a call from the 300 block of First St. when electric wires caught fire Saturday about 11:40 p.m.

At 2:20 a.m. today, firemen responded to a power line fire in the alley behind Sears and Roebuck Store on Evans St.

Firemen on a call saw the windows of Three Sisters blow out and they had to take refuge in doorways to escape the deadly bits of flying glass.

Greenville Utilities was harassed with power outages all night and work on the lines was continuing this morning.

And Frank Harrington, manager of the local Carolina Telephone and Telegraph office, reported, "We're in a heck of a mess. We've got trees all through our toll lines. We've been completely isolated."

Harrington said the telephone company lost its last outside line this morning at 3:30 and it started losing outside circuits at 10 o'clock last night.

Twelve to fifteen poles were broken, Harrington reported. He said 200 to 300 phones were out in Greenville and the "rural area is probably worse than the city."

Farmville had quite a bit of damage to its telephone lines and it was the same in Fountain, Harrington said.

A secondary problem caused by the hurricane was developing this morning and it promised to have serious consequences. That was the flooding of canals and streams which simply couldn't take off the deluge brought on by Donna.

All over the county there were reports of low land flooding and the streams overflowed their banks. In Greenville Green Mill Run was out of its banks early this morning. Water was running over the run's bridge on Evans St. Ext. and high water closed Charles St. at the Norfolk and Southern overpass and 14th St. at the bridge.

Television station WNCN reported winds up to 102 miles per hour during the wind night.

At the Utilities Commission plant, observers said winds were blowing 50 to 80 miles per hour over the run's bridge on Evans St. Ext. and high water closed Charles St. at the Norfolk and Southern overpass and 14th St. at the bridge.

The rainfall at the Utilities plant was measured at four and a half inches, but observers said this is not an accurate measurement since the wind blew precipitation out of the rain gauge.

Tar River stood at 8.6 feet this morning. It is expected to rise as tributaries dump flood waters into the river.

The barometer stood at 28.45 at 2 a.m. but began to rise during the next hour. It stood at 28.9 at 3 a.m.

Civil Defense Director Rose said this headquarters received a report shortly after 11 o'clock that the eye of the storm was approaching Cape Hatteras. The winds died down a little and it appeared the danger might be over.

"Then it really started and we spent about two and a half hours trying to find where it was," he declared.

"We finally learned that it came in west of Morehead, then advanced toward New Bern, Vanceboro and then Washington. It was at Washington about 3 a.m. It stayed in the triangle area between here and New Bern and Cherry Point. It slowed down for about three hours and about 3 a.m. began to move away from the Washington area and our barometer started rising. The wind shifted from north to northwest so we knew it was leaving."

The backwash after that was worse than anything before. It went on until about 4 and then began to taper off. "We knew the worst was over," he said.

According to fire officers, trucks responded to a call from the 300 block of First St. when electric wires caught fire Saturday about 11:40 p.m.

At 2:20 a.m. today, firemen responded to a power line fire in the alley behind Sears and Roebuck Store on Evans St.

They also answered calls to power line fires at 409 Meade St., 411 Elm St. and at 204 14th St. They were called to the Meade St. fire at 2:45 a.m., to the Elm St. fire at 4:04 a.m. and to the 14th St. fire, a burning transformer, at 6:50 a.m.

Firemen on a call saw the windows of Three Sisters blow out and they had to take refuge in doorways to escape the deadly bits of flying glass.

Greenville Utilities was harassed with power outages all night and work on the lines was continuing this morning.

And Frank Harrington, manager of the local Carolina Telephone and Telegraph office, reported, "We're in a heck of a mess. We've got trees all through our toll lines. We've been completely isolated."

Harrington said the telephone company lost its last outside line this morning at 3:30 and it started losing outside circuits at 10 o'clock last night.

Twelve to fifteen poles were broken, Harrington reported. He said 200 to 300 phones were out in Greenville and the "rural area is probably worse than the city."

Farmville had quite a bit of damage to its telephone lines and it was the same in Fountain, Harrington said.

A secondary problem caused by the hurricane was developing this morning and it promised to have serious consequences. That was the flooding of canals and streams which simply couldn't take off the deluge brought on by Donna.

All over the county there were reports of low land flooding and the streams overflowed their banks. In Greenville Green Mill Run was out of its banks early this morning. Water was running over the run's bridge on Evans St. Ext. and high water closed Charles St. at the Norfolk and Southern overpass and 14th St. at the bridge.

Television station WNCN reported winds up to 102 miles per hour during the wind night.

At the Utilities Commission plant, observers said winds were blowing 50 to 80 miles per hour over the run's bridge on Evans St. Ext. and high water closed Charles St. at the Norfolk and Southern overpass and 14th St. at the bridge.

The rainfall at the Utilities plant was measured at four and a half inches, but observers said this is not an accurate measurement since the wind blew precipitation out of the rain gauge.

Tar River stood at 8.6 feet this morning. It is expected to rise as tributaries dump flood waters into the river.

The barometer stood at 28.45 at 2 a.m. but began to rise during the next hour. It stood at 28.9 at 3 a.m.

Civil Defense Director Rose said this headquarters received a report shortly after 11 o'clock that the eye of the storm was approaching Cape Hatteras. The winds died down a little and it appeared the danger might be over.

"Then it really started and we spent about two and a half hours trying to find where it was," he declared.

"We finally learned that it came in west of Morehead, then advanced toward New Bern, Vanceboro and then Washington. It was at Washington about 3 a.m. It stayed in the triangle area between here and New Bern and Cherry Point. It slowed down for about three hours and about 3 a.m. began to move away from the Washington area and our barometer started rising. The wind shifted from north to northwest so we knew it was leaving."

The backwash after that was worse than anything before. It went on until about 4 and then began to taper off. "We knew the worst was over," he said.

laze dried cleaning up operations became easier.

With school out for the day, the kids pitched in to help their parents clean up the debris left by the storm.

All over the city there was damage which gave testimony to the savagery of the great hurricane. Countless plate glass windows were completely broken out or cracked. Flying debris or the force of the winds themselves caused the damage. In North Greenville the windows in the showroom of Bright Leaf Motors crashed during the night. There were reports that a wind-carried limb crashed through the big plate glass windows of White Chevrolet at West End Circle.

A vacant building at West End Circle also lost its front windows during the night and awnings crashed into the windows of Cozart's Super Market.

Opinions Differ Between Donna And Big Hazel

Was Hurricane "Donna" worse than famous "Hazel" of October, 1954?

There was a difference in opinion around Pitt County today. Sherman Husted, weatherman at Greenville television station WNCN, recalled Hazel's winds reached 135 miles per hour on the coast but "lost a lot of velocity inland."

Husted reported winds of 102 miles per hour when Donna last night at the television station. He said damage, according to reports from throughout Eastern North Carolina, is "much more extensive than Hazel."

"Morehead City and Atlantic Beach were very heavily hit," he said. Husted said he "heard part of a message that indicted winds of 100 miles per hour and extensive damage to business property" in that area.

Frank Harrington of the local telephone office believed Hazel was worse. "I think we had more damage then," he said.

However, he reported, "We're in a heck of a mess. We've got trees all through our toll lines."

Two Killed
Hazel pulled up second to Donna in at least one respect. Donna turned killer in Pitt County, snuffing out two lives with falling trees.

Both deaths resulted when large trees crashed into homes, killing the victims while they slept. A three-year-old Negro boy, Larry Outlaw, Rt. 1, Stokes, was killed when a huge oak tree crashed through the roof and pinned him and his mother in bed. The mother was injured slightly.

Another large oak fell on and demolished a house near Farmville, killing 60-year-old Hattie Carr Galloway. The Rt. 2, Farmville Negro and a 13-year-old girl were pinned in their bed by the falling tree.

Hazel took her toll in property damage, leaving no deaths in her path through the county.

Greenville was virtually without communications with the outside world this morning because of Hurricane Donna.

Long distance telephone lines were completely out, it was reported. The Daily Reflector's Associated Press teletype was out of commission. Radio stations and television station WNCN reported their teletype services out.

Only short wave police radio and ham operators were able to reach other areas following last night's disastrous storm.

The Reflector's news coverage of the storm is furnished through eyewitness reports of staff members, and the cooperation of persons traveling into Greenville from other areas.

Bureau Kick-Off Set For Tuesday
Saturday's edition of the Daily Reflector erroneously reported a Pitt County Farm Bureau meeting would be tonight.

The "Kickoff Meeting" for the bureau's membership drive is scheduled for 7 p.m. at Respass Brothers Barbecue tomorrow.

SPILLED MILK
BREWER, Maine (AP) — There is no use crying over spilled milk — 30 gallons of it.

A Canadian woman tourist, a milk truck driver and Brewer police agreed on that after the woman went through a stop sign. The truck had to stop so quickly that its cargo of milk cans upset. The woman paid for the milk and went on her way.

once stood at the ocean's edge, now spread over a wide area . . . with its floor filling up a hole in the Fort Macon Road washed there by the sea which crossed Bogue Banks at that point too.

The boardwalk businesses were destroyed too. The popular teenage meeting place "The Pavilion"; "Giggles" old snowball stand and "Herring's Bath House" included.

We then left the beach, and heard reports from the Highway Patrol that the Croatan Sound Bridge was under water and that 200 utility poles had been blown down at Nags Head. We also learned that "Donna" was south of Cape May, New Jersey . . . off the Maryland coast.

Returning to Morehead, we found that the cause-way to Beaufort was washed out and that parts of the roof on a warehouse at state ports had been blown off. The warehouse reportedly contained Six-million dollars worth of tobacco.

After surveying the damage at Morehead City, and learning again from the highway patrol, the wind reached speeds of 110 miles per hour here, we returned home, much the wiser and much more the believer in what a storm like "Donna" can do.
