'Affirmative' Farm Program Pledged By Candidate

Smiling Nominee Nearly 'Mobbed' At Local Airport

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector City Editor

Sen. John F. Kennedy set foot on Pitt County ground today, the first major presidential candidate ever to do so.

The smiling young Democratic nominee was mobbed by the great and near great of the North Carolina Democratic party as he stepped from his private airplane here around 9:30.

He was also surrounded by newspaper and television photographers from all over the state as he shook hands with such political figures as Gov. Luther Hodges, gubernatorial Democratic nominee Terry Sanford and Sen. Sam Ervin.

There were handshakes and flashing smiles for the folks who just came to look, too, as the senator neared the roped off area on the taxi apron at Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Sen. Kennedy was greeted by Mayor S. Eugene West as he walked down the steps from his plane. The mayor presented a key to the city—a foot long gold thing—to the presidential hopeful, along with a bronze seal of the city.

Mayor West's words were drowned out by the cheering crowd of more than two thousand persons and the band in the background. However, he said before the crowd that he would welcome the senator to Greenville, express appreciation on behalf of the city for his coming here and wish him a pleasant stay.

Sen. Kennedy broke into his trademark smile the moment he appeared at the door of his aircraft. There was a cheer from the crowd as he appeared and photographers swarmed about.

Following the key presentation, he barely stopped moving until he was in the convertible—marked No. 1—which was to carry him in the motorcade.

There was a brief pause as he was moved to the waiting vehicle. He posed for pictures with Gov. Hodges and political ally, Terry Sanford.

Kennedy's vehicle in the motorcade was parked alongside the rope which held back spectators. A few lucky unknowns stuck their hands across the rope long enough for a handshake with the famous visitor.

Kennedy's three-plane group was nearly 30 minutes late in arriving this morning but there was plenty of time to entertain the first-line carrying members of the North Carolina press arrived at the airport. This was followed by a second twin-engine plane carrying Gov. Hodges and Sanford.

Sen. Ervin arrived prior to 9 o'clock by automobile, coming from his hometown of Morganton. A number of other dignitaries also came by car.

The Pike High School band, of Wilson, chosen to welcome Kennedy at the airport, furnished music until the out-of-state aircraft arrived.

The three planes appeared out of a hazy western sky. The first two aircraft, carrying members of the senator's staff and Washington newsmen, gracefully circled the airport and landed on the north-west runway.

Then the twin-engine plane carrying the senator came in for a perfect landing. It pulled up to the very center of the taxi apron. The door opened and steps were lowered. Sen. Kennedy was preceded by two or three aides. There was a brief pause before he appeared in the doorway.

Once he made it to the waiting motorcade the officials' cars moved rapidly away from the airport to the Farmers Warehouse for a mock tobacco sale.

A festive air prevailed among the waiting crowd prior to the senator's arrival.

An enthusiasm for the Democratic party was put into words by the party's leader in this state, Gov. Hodges, himself.

Asked if he could say who would win the November election, the governor replied: "I certainly can. It's going to be Kennedy all the way."

The governor said he was "enthusiastic about the upcoming election."

"It is getting better everyday," Gov. Hodges declared. "I think it is possible for Sen. Kennedy to carry 40 out of 50 states."

Sen. Sam J. Ervin echoed the governor's enthusiasm.

"If everybody votes in as intelligent and patriotic fashion as I'm going to vote, it will go strongly Democratic," he said of the November election. "In fact it will be unanimous."

The senator's plane arrived at an airport now used only for private aircraft. In years gone by, however, its runways have carried thousands of landings by training planes. It was built during World War II to train U. S. Marine fighter pilots. Later it was used as an auxiliary field for Stallings Air Base in Kinston, now closed. This base trained Air Force pilots.

Raleigh Rally To Be On Television

The rally for Kennedy in Raleigh will be shown tonight live on station WNCT at 8:30.

This program will be followed by a film and taped report on the Kennedy rally here this morning. This program is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m.

DUE ON MONDAY
NEW YORK (AP) — A spokesman for the U.S. delegation to the United Nations said Friday that Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's ship will arrive here Monday at 7 a.m.

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer

Sen. John F. Kennedy, on the first leg of his five-city Tar Heel stumping tour today, promised "an affirmative program" to help the nation's farm population before a packed College Stadium on the East Carolina College campus here.

Speaking for approximately 10 minutes during his hour-and-a-half visit here, the Democratic presidential nominee urged "faith in this great country of ours to be better."

He charged the GOP administration with failing "to have faith in our country's potential."

"Ours is a great . . . and powerful country . . . and it can be greater and more powerful," he declared. "I urge your support because I think we can do better."

The tanned candidate, looking fresh and speaking crisply, charged, "The Republicans have not moved ahead." He asserted the United States had the lowest rate of economic growth last year of any major industrialized nation.

"The Republican administration has failed to use in an imaginative way the great surpluses God has given us," he said.

"I ask your support," Kennedy stressed, "as a candidate who has the greatest possible faith in this country to become greater."

"In these difficult and trying times in the life of our country," he said, "we must do all we can to make our country stronger and greater." Kennedy repeated, "We can do better."

The 43-year-old Massachusetts senator virtually discarded a prepared address that had been distributed to newsmen upon his arrival at the airport and talked of the cuff.

In his prepared speech, Kennedy lashed out at Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson.

He told his applauding audience, estimated at between 12,000 and 15,000, "It will be my daily task to care for the hopes of our citizens and to defend America."

Kennedy said "our great ambition" is to "allow and help" the nation grow "to realize the hopes of its citizens."

He quoted Thomas Payne's assertion of years ago that "The cause of America is the cause of mankind."

He reversed Payne's doctrine by stressing, "I believe the cause of all mankind is the cause of America."

Kennedy lauded former president Franklin Roosevelt as a "good neighbor to Latin America because he was a good neighbor to the people of this country." He said the Democratic administration "will follow this policy."

The candidate urged support from N. C. Democrats for the affirmative program represented by his candidacy.

He concluded, "It can be, in 1960, a rising sun and the beginning of a great day in America."

Rousing Welcome
As the Kennedy motorcade neared the stadium, the crowd began to cheer. As the candidate rode into the stadium the packed stands gave him a standing ovation.

With the East Carolina College band playing its 11th number of the morning, the 15,000 spectators clapped in rhythm as the Kennedy car neared the platform.

Riding in the car with the candidate were John G. Clark, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic executive committee; N. C. Democratic gubernatorial nominee Terry Sanford; and First District Rep. Herbert C. Bonner.

Behind them came Gov. Luther Hodges in the second car with other high officials.

As the motorcade stopped at the speakers platform at the east end of the stadium, standing spectators swarmed over the football field to take their positions against a restraining rope, directly in front of the rostrum.

A host of newsmen swarmed over the platform for several minutes before order could be restored and the formal introductions and Kennedy's speech could begin.

Rev. Floyd B. Cherry, minister of the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church, offered the invocation in which he asked for "divine guidance" during the campaign and election.

Dignitaries introduced included Gov. Hodges, Sanford, Clark, Bonner, Sen. Sam Ervin, Sen. B. Everett Jordan, N. C. Sec. of State, had Eure, Rep. Aiton Lennon, Rep. L. H. Fountain, Dr. Henry Jordan, N. C.

Treasurer Edwin Gill, lieutenant governor nominee H. Cloyd Phillips, National Democratic Committeewoman Mrs. Martha McKay, ECC Pres. Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, and ECC student body president James Speight.

Greenville attorney Louis Gaylord served as moderator of the event. Gaylord introduced Clark who presented Sen. Ervin to formally introduce the nominee for his brief address.

With the visit here running about 20 minutes behind a carefully planned schedule, Kennedy sought to pick up a few minutes by leaving the stadium around 10:30.

He left the airport for Greensboro and the second stop on his whirlwind tour of North Carolina today. After Greensboro, stops were planned for Asheville and Charlotte before a major rally tonight in Raleigh.

Sidelights

The first light of dawn this morning revealed a small figure keeping a lonely vigil over the deserted East Carolina College football stadium where Sen. John Kennedy would speak later in the day.

Charlotte Barkley, a pretty coed from Sharpsburg, took her seat in the stands shortly before 5:30 a.m. to make sure she would see the Democratic presidential nominee.

"I was just so excited I couldn't sleep," she told a reporter. "Ever since he was nominated I've been hoping I would get a chance to see him."

"Do you think I might be able to shake hands with him?" she asked hopefully.

Going to and from his plane at the airport, Kennedy, who seemed to want to linger and talk to the people crowding around him, was almost "pulled" along by his security men and state highway patrolmen in an effort to get him into his car and "on schedule."

As Kennedy's car pulled up at the airport after the speech at College Stadium his aides jumped out and urged him on to his waiting plane. Kennedy refused to go.

He said "I've got to say good-bye" and with that, left the group around his car and walked to the waiting lines of spectators where another "round of handshaking" took place. Then, as before, officials pulled and tugged at his arms and ushered him into the waiting plane . . . and away.

A "reserved" section on the north side of College Stadium was filled early by nearly 100 ECC coeds comprising the campus Panhellenic Council.

All dressed in white and attired in the "official" Kennedy campaign hat, the girls whooped it up for the nominee.

As the 12,000 spectators sat and waited for the Kennedy motorcade, that showed up some 20 minutes later than scheduled, the coeds started the cheering.

En masse, they touched off the spark that made the crowd come alive by spelling out "K-C-N-N" (Continued on page six)

Warehouse Tobacco Auction 'Adds To Education' Of Demo Candidate

By PATRICIA MOORE Reflector Staff Writer

Democratic presidential nominee John Kennedy described the mock tobacco sale in his honor as adding "to my education."

Kennedy himself bought one pile of tobacco at the high price of 81 cents a pound. So he got a firsthand knowledge of tobacco buying. The auctioneer chanted, "Let's see old Jack get to the White House, boys."

He appeared absorbed in the auctioneering by Ray Oglesby, who began the "tobacco chant" and in the golden bundles of tobacco. He took time to stop and chat with an elderly farmer, who sat in a chair with a cane, as well as to shake the hands of those who enthusiastically tried for a glimpse of the man who might be their next president.

Kennedy watched the sale, his blue eyes intent and his mouth slightly opened as if a little in awe. And the crowd watched Kennedy. Some of them had been at the Farmers Warehouse. Kennedy's first North Carolina stop after the Greenville-Pitt County Airport, since 6 a.m. this morning, was just to see the presidential nominee.

Kennedy paused before his departure to speak to the farmers and others assembled. "I want to thank all of you. It has added to my education."

He committed himself to the "farm program which the Democratic party stands for and I stand for." This is a commitment which has been made "by Harold Cooley, Mr. (Herbert) Bonner from this state and by Democrats from the rest of the country," he said, emphasizing that his pledge to the farmers was not a new campaign promise from the Democrats.

Warehouse Arrival
A tremendous shout went up from the crowd of several thousand as the Kennedy motorcade, led by motorcycle escort and a press car, drove from the back entrance of the warehouse to the site where the auction was to take place. He was about 30 minutes late. The crowd closed in enthusiastically, led by at least a hundred news and cameramen.

Oglesby, a veteran auctioneer of 20 years, and Billy Clark, auctioneer of 30 years experience, were selected to perform before the presidential nominee. They considered their job "an honor."

Kennedy was presented a plaque of tobacco and a small bundle of the golden leaves, which he held up before the crowd.

Donkey
About the time the Kennedy airplane could be seen circling the airfield, a "Democratic donkey" housed in a wagon in the warehouse brayed loudly to herald the senator's arrival in eastern North Carolina.

People from all over the eastern part of the state were in the warehouse. Most of them were staunch Democrats who wanted a glimpse at least of a man some of their time might be as great as Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Bert Allen of Old Sparta in Edgecombe County, had never seen a presidential candidate. "I think the tobacco auction will be fine," he said, "so Kennedy can see what the farmer and his tobacco is like." He said if Kennedy is elected president, "he'll know how we are down here and might help us a lot." Allen had some tobacco on the floor during the sale.

Jarvis Worthington, who farms in Winterville, said Kennedy's visit would "help clear confusion" about the religious question.

Little Place
Burney Tucker, mayor of Winterville, who was here especially to see Kennedy, said, "If Kennedy takes time to come to a little place like Greenville, then he's getting to the level of the people. It shows he's interested in this part of the country and the farmers."

G. H. Tucker, also of Winterville, had been at the warehouse since 6 a.m. "Others fly over us but Kennedy is stopping here," he commented. He thinks Kennedy will help the farmer.

Bur farmers weren't the only people present. Small boys, girls and women interested in politics were there.

Bill Little, 15, Kenneth Paramore, 14, Cecil Boyd, 10, and Jimmy Little 12, all of Grimesland came to "see our future president." Some of their parents plan to vote for Kennedy "and we want to help him out," they said.

Mrs. Ed Reeves, of Grifton, Mrs. Craven Hughes of Greenville and Mrs. Dollye Gnagey, delegates from Pitt County to the State Democratic Convention, all were on hand.

Mrs. Hughes said she didn't expect to get close enough to shake the candidate's hand—but Kennedy stopped and shook her hand anyway. His handshake she described as firm.

The candidate himself seemed somewhat reserved. He was dressed conservatively in a pin-strip-

Russians Depart Congo--As Told

LEOPOLDVILLE, the CONGO (AP)—The Soviet Union ignominiously withdrew from the Congo today, its efforts to swing this new African nation into the Communist orbit blocked at least for now.

As Communist officials flew home, Patrice Lumumba, the fiery young politician on whom they had pinned their hopes, was reported missing, perhaps dead.

Reports swept this capital that Lumumba had been slain, but there was absolutely no confirmation. Any story of the deposed premier's death would have to be handled extremely carefully by the government to avoid provoking Lumumba's supporters in his native city of Stanleyville.

One report said Lumumba was shot trying to escape after being arrested by troops under the emerging strongman, Col. Joseph Mobutu. There was some support for this story from a source close to President Joseph Kasavubu, but details were lacking. Another report had it that Lumumba may have taken refuge in the Soviet Embassy in the hope of slipping out with the Russians.

Mobutu's coup d'etat put an end to Soviet penetration in the heart of Africa, at least for the time being. First the Czech flag came down. The Soviet banner with the hammer and sickle followed at 11:50 a.m.

Minutes later the silver-haired Soviet ambassador, Mikhail Yakovlev, drove in the sweltering heat to board a gleaming white Soviet aircraft which took off for Moscow. Czechoslovak Ambassador Joseph Virius and an embassy staff of 11 had left earlier in two small Soviet planes.

The Czechs were to stop first in Stanleyville to pick up several score Soviet "technicians."

Some reports said Lumumba had fled to Stanleyville in the eastern Congo. Others said he left for the seaport of Matadi at the mouth of the Congo River.

"Bye-bye, see you again in another place." Soviet newsmen grinned weakly at Western correspondents waiting at Leopoldville Airport.

The Soviet departure was preceded by Yakovlev's vain effort to see Kasavubu in an apparent effort to revoke Mobutu's order expelling the Communists. But Kasavubu himself had countersigned the order and refused to see the Soviet envoy.

(Editor's Note: In order to clarify and standardize Reflector policies on the handling of social page news, the following standards have been set by the Woman's Editor.)

Deadline for the Women's Department is 10 a.m. All material such as club activities and social happenings must be in by 10 a.m. in order to appear in that day's edition. If the page space is not limited.

a.m. 'til 4:30 p.m. The Women's Department reserves the right to edit all stories to appear on the women's pages. Engagement and wedding pictures should be glossy, 5" x 7". They will be held two weeks after publication.

It is preferred that all wedding information and wedding pictures be in the office three days prior to the ceremony, unless other arrangements have been made with the Woman's Editor. Parties given bridal couples prior to their marriage must appear in the paper before the wedding write-up or with the wedding publication.

Wedding write-ups brought in a week late or later will be edited according to the diminishing news value.

Cheerers Rally

By CRAIG WORTHINGTON The Rose High Varsity Cheerleaders sponsored their first pep rally of the season yesterday morning in the gymnasium.

As the students entered, cheerleaders passed out paper bags which were used later to add volume to the cheering.

The band, under the direction of James E. Rodgers, provided music for the rally.

Head cheerleader, Melinda Coleman, served as the mistress of ceremonies. She led the cheerleaders in several of the most popular cheers and explained to the students that the paper bags were for "popping."

Melinda then introduced head coach Bud Phillips, whose closing remarks were, "We made them (Jacksonville) cry last year, and we're going to make them cry again!" He made reference to the reputed strength of the Jacksonville team, which the Phantoms disproved by defeating the Cardinals 21-7 last night.

After "popping" all of the bags, the students cheered the individual team members as Melinda introduced them.

Elect Class Officers
The new class elected Bill Wade as its president in its first meeting of the year this week. Other officers elected included

Ben White, vice-president; Dallas Clark, treasurer; and Myrtle Moon Bilbro, secretary.

Larry Roberts, last year's class president, presided at the meeting. Bill Wade gave the devotion. Chappy Bradner, outgoing treasurer, made his report.

The main item of business was the decision as to whether the class would or would not sell stationery. The majority of students voted to sell the stationery this year. The campaign will begin within the next few weeks.

Juniors Choose Leaders
Jimmy Jenkins was elected president of the junior class at the class meeting this week. Billy Neal James, vice-president; Judy Thigpen, secretary; and Grace Ann Stafford, treasurer; were also elected.

Due to the absence of last year's president, Elbert Felton, Charles Forbes, the outgoing vice president, presided at the meeting.

Gigi Guice gave the devotion, after which the nominating committee, composed of last year's officers, introduced its slate of candidates. Although others were nominated from the floor, the slate chosen by the committee was elected. The voting was done by secret ballot.

To Sell Magazines
Members of the junior class will assemble Monday morning to begin their annual magazine subscription sales drive. Representatives from the company will show the students how to sell the magazines and the prizes to be awarded.

College Day
The National Honor Society will sponsor its annual College Day Wednesday, September 28. More than 70 colleges have been asked to send representatives to this annual affair.

College Day will last for two hours in the afternoon, 1:30-3:30. Seniors will go during the first hour and the juniors during the last.

This year, parents are urged to come to the gymnasium to talk with the representatives of the colleges in which they are interested.

Mrs. Clara Garris wishes to announce that she will be associated with the LeAnne Beauty Shop as of September 19. She invites her many friends and customers to come see her.

Floral Workshop Follows Meeting

A workshop on flower arranging was held Thursday morning following the meeting of the Dig and Delve Garden Club for its members under the supervision of Mrs. Beulah Staples.

During the meeting the club discussed its projects and goals for the coming year. Mrs. D. B. Armistead, president, presided during the session which was preceded by a coffee hour. Mrs. Williams Jenkins was hostess.

DEAF MAN PERFECTS SMALLEST HEARING AID

NORFOLK, Va.—(Special)—A remarkable midget hearing aid has been perfected by a man who has been hard of hearing for nearly ten years.

This small aid has no dangling cords or separate transmitting units and was announced in Virginia today as the most revolutionary product ever to appear on the market for the hard of hearing.

It is especially made for those people who can hear but not understand. This new hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television, and radio at his ear rather than at a transmitter located in the wearer's clothing.

Due to the use of 4 transistors, the user cost is extremely low and the instrument weighs approximately 1-4 ounce. It is about the size of a sewing thimble.

None Would Dare, 15 Years Ago

It is difficult to understand how Premier Nikita Khrushchev seemingly finds himself in a position to treat the United States and its leadership with so much contempt.

Can it be due to American failure to do something? Did we do something wrong?

Or, is it all merely a manifestation of supreme confidence he holds a winning hand?

Khrushchev has gone far out of his way to insult our President and Vice President.

At Geneva, some analysts at the time simply diagnosed his bad manners as a seizing upon the U-2 plane episode to avoid a meeting. But the rumblings didn't end with that.

He has since showed contempt for the two candidates for the presidency: "lackeys of monopoly capital", he called them. And even before the campaign really began, the Russian gave evidence of believing he could influence the outcome.

In Africa the brash Nikita chose to send planes, trucks, miscellaneous military aid and advisors to Patrice Lumumba . . . defying the wishes of the United Nations which was trying to resolve a difficult situation.

Within the United Nations, spokesmen for the Kremlin have been doing their level best to sow dissension and discord; working to sabotage that body's peacemaking work in the Congo. In this, the United States as principal bulwark of the UN program, has been again a favorite target.

Now Mr. Khrushchev is on his way to our shores as an uninvited guest, to press his campaign against the United States and ideals for which it stands. (We can only marvel at the gall which prompted him to protest travel limitations imposed by this country.)

Also among those present at what promises to be a historic session of the UN will be perhaps the most unsavory crew of cutthroats from Eastern Europe that has ever graced a conference table since Blackbeard's time. All will be waiting for their chance to pull Uncle Sam's whiskers.

Only fifteen years ago no government in the world . . . and no combination of governments . . . would have dared perpetrate the indignities and insults heaped upon our nation and its leadership as we have seen in the past seven years.

Most Americans, we are sure, are looking forward to a change.

The only reason we can conceive for Soviet bullying is an overwhelming confidence in their military superiority and a conviction they are now seeing U.S. leadership in the world crumbling.

It would be tragic, of course, if we should be forced to prove otherwise in that ultimate kind of showdown nobody likes to contemplate.

But it would be even more tragic if America in its search for peace should fail to recognize that there is a time when turning the "other cheek" invites destruction.

The Defection Street Is A Two-Way Affair

Lest we forget: The defection of American citizens to the Iron Curtain countries is such a rarity that across our country the story draws big headlines.

As compared with that side of the picture, defections from the Communist camp have been so numerous we doubt anyone could provide an exact total. It is almost routine.

We are shocked by disclosure that two employees of the National Security Agency turned up on the "other side"; but as against their loss, this country has acquired much bigger fish, and more of them. The millions who "voted with their feet" overwhelmingly voted against Red rule.

Our own view of American turncoats is "good riddance". The functions of democracy, the preservation of freedoms we hold dear, are all much easier without the deadwood.

On the other hand, we can afford to welcome the refugees. Many of them know hardship, and are aware that in their new world much will be required of them. In most cases they have proven willing and able to contribute to strengthening the fibre of the Free World.

The West comes out ahead.

Few Understand Economic Body

(Industrial News Review) All of us are involved in economic problems and dealings every day of our lives. We perform economic acts when we buy a new automobile or a shoe shine, when we go to a show, when we pay our bills—or, for that matter, fail to pay them. But serious discussions of economics, with all due credit to the many outstanding works in this field that have been produced over the centuries, are commonly couched in a terminology which makes lay understanding exceedingly difficult or even impossible. So economic theory has been pretty much confined to the realm of the very few.

Back in 1944, Fred G. Clark and Richard S. Rimanoczy, who are, respectively, the general chairman and the Editor-in-Chief of the American Economic Foundation, published a book, entitled "How We Live," which was designed to present the basic principles of economics in terms anyone could understand. It was astonishingly successful. Now a second and revised edition has been published (D. Van Nostrand Company, Inc., Princeton, New Jersey; $2.85). And it does what the late Channing Pollock said of the first edition: "How We Live is a step-down transformer that takes the high voltage economic thought of the transmission line and reduces it to 110 A.C. for household use."

In the authors' words, "This book takes the economic body apart and describes the parts in relation to the whole. Its purpose is to enable the average person to avoid behavior injurious to the nation's economic health." It is obviously impossible to hit more than a few high spots in a brief review. Here are some of them: The book deals in detail with the tools we must have to produce goods and services. In a simpler age, each man made his own. His productivity was severely limited. So, ultimately, corporation tools came into being. People joined and pooled savings to make possible the purchase and use of the tools. Now the 900,000 U. S. corporations have tools valued at about 1,000 billion dollars.

The much debated, much misunderstood question of "size" of business is considered. These points are made: "The test of the social desirability of any business is: Does it produce more and better goods at lower costs? As long as the customer has the power to buy from whom he pleases, no business can continue to grow after the point of highest efficiency has been passed." In other words, there is no such thing as an arbitrary "good size" or "bad size". Quality and efficiency, not just statistics, are the yardsticks, and the consumer, with his freedom of choice, decides the fate of all business. The only exception is when a business is run by government, such as the postal service, and freedom of choice does not exist.

The book also shows that, "The costs of goods and services have many different names but they are practically all one: the cost of human energy." The authors find that about 95 per cent of the revenue business gets from one customer is paid out to workers in one way or another. And so is much of the remaining 5 per cent, for the owners of industrial tools—the investors—also buy goods and services requiring labor.

Considerable space is given to clearing up misconceptions concerning workers and employers. The causes of unemployment are covered plainly. They are two. First, unemployment results when goods and services which are not wanted are produced—consumers will not exchange their money for them. Second, it results when "a worker places such a high price on his product that other workers do not have enough of their own product to make the exchange." The worker then prices himself out of the market. (Continued on page six)

While You Are In Ameriky Waters—

By HENRY HOWARD

Hard Schedule To Take

If all worked out as planned yesterday, and the day before, and the day before, etc., this column may well have been one of the few spaces in today's edition devoted to something other than the visit to Greenville paid today by Jack Kennedy.

After several seconds' thought, we decided we may as well include this space with the "majority."

Assuming all campaign stops are timed as closely as the one here today, we must venture to say, "We'd be awful hard to convince we'd be willing to go through with such a synopsed schedule day in, day out."

It must be next to unbearable.

Other Editors Saying The Two-Edged Sword

(Greensboro Daily News) Richard Nixon is utterly sincere when he urges the nation to "accept without any further questioning" Senator Kennedy's statement that his religion would not influence his conduct of the presidency.

For the vice president knows the religious issue cuts both ways. Already his followers are alarmed over the reaction in Jewish, Negro and Catholic circles in New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois to the Norman Vincent Peale anti-Kennedy meeting in Washington. A G.O.P. official told The Wall Street Journal: "I wish Dr. Peale had stayed out of the religious controversy." And a high Democrat added: "I hope Vince Peale goes on making those statements."

Times in Texas The New York Times did an opinion roundup among clergymen following Senator Kennedy's bout in the ministerial lions' den at Houston. It found Kennedy made an excellent personal impression on many Texans, but how many minds he changed is problematical. Yet the Democratic Party standard-bearer changed speech elsewhere. His Houston speech was widely televised. It put Kennedy in the underdog position—a man trying to defend himself against attacks on his religion. In the United States that can be dynamite.

In California, where Senator Kennedy recently whistled stopped down the rich Central Valley, the religious issue was on every tongue. Another Times correspondent concluded that Kennedy's appearance helped swing many lukewarm Stevensons to active work for the Democratic cause. Previously they had been sitting on their hands. The religious attack on Kennedy galvanized them into action.

So, while Nixon welcomes Norman Vincent Peale's support in the South, he is alarmed by the votes alienated in other areas. To compensate for New York's 45 electoral votes would require four or five Dixie defections. For several good reasons Vice President Nixon would like a cutoff date on religion in politics. But, up to this time he has not. Joseph Alsop reports, repudiated the support of those who raise the issue, either at the respectable or the gutter level.

Just a glance down the intricate time-table worked out by party leaders around here and in Raleigh showed the split-second timing necessary to move the candidate through the first leg of his five-city Tar Heel tour.

For instance, he was allowed a total of 38 minutes to land at the airport, greet dignitaries, move by motorcade to Farmers Warehouse, watch a mook tobacco auction, talk with farmers, return to the motorcade, travel through Greenville, and arrive at College Stadium.

He was allowed another 19 minutes to move into the stadium, hear the crowd's ovation, listen to the National Anthem, hear an invocation, watch recognition of dignitaries (all at the same time), be "introduced," and finish his address.

Another 30 minutes was allotted for Kennedy to leave the stadium, move by motorcade from the stadium to the airport, say his "goodbyes," and take off for Greensboro at 10:27 a.m.

A total of 87 minutes for all that. That, alone, would not be so very bad, but think of it every day.

Just leave us to our comparatively unscheduled, hodge-podge way of life. In that same vein, though, we might add that our duties up here in the new room were scheduled just as tightly — for the day.

The way everything was planned, we should have handled the Kennedy visit smoothly — on the same synopsed-type schedule.

By the time this is read . . . We'll know.

Win or lose, though, we'll probably be relieved to a degree to return to normal.

In view of the close time-table followed by the Kennedy visit here, we had a thought the other day.

Although we had been planning — almost depending — on it, we can understand why we had to do without it.

That is, we can see both sides of it.

Doubtless that intricate schedule of minutes allocated to various brief phases of the visit here carried a lot of weight in the national party leaders' decision to cancel the earlier-scheduled Greenville press conference.

Home intercom system. A portable home intercom system using existing house wiring is being tested in three markets and, if accepted by buyers there, will soon appear in all other markets. Costs under $80. This will be followed by another intercom consisting of two or more tiny broadcasting stations with less than 100-foot range.

Costlier salmon. This has been a frequent prediction in this column and always a sound one. Now canned salmon is about to go up again. This year's pack is extremely light and wholesalers are already bidding up the price.

More plants exported. The British fiscal structure has shown signs of weakening and the government is trying to shore it up. There's a new drive to increase exports. Quietly, there is also another drive to persuade more American corporations to establish plants in Britain, which would have the same effect as an increase in exports. A delegation now touring the U.S. is getting some encouraging inquiries.

Eaton's Idea Of Success

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1960. King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Cyrus Eaton is a capitalist speculator who has amassed a great fortune and who believes that Communism is here to stay. His prophetic insight is not historical but pragmatic. He believes that what is all right, particularly if a profit can be found in it. What he means by Communism has never been made clear. In a very lengthy sketch of Eaton issued by the Associated Press, Eaton apparently believes that Communism is the antithesis of capitalism which is, of course, an oversimplification. The reason that every member of the Communist Party anywhere in the world must be an atheist has nothing to do with favoring or opposing capitalism; it does have very much to do with the Marxist concept of dialectical materialism, and with the hypothesis that what exists is the product of casual forces in nature, not the result of the creative power of a first cause. Perhaps Cyrus Eaton understands this or may take a pragmatic view of life which in this case would mean that if a steel plant can be erected by Communist methods as well as by Capitalist methods, Communism works. No moral criteria affect his judgments.

Tom Henshaw, the Associated Press writer who interviewed Eaton, makes this interesting observation:

"Mr. Eaton, a hard-headed businessman with a Midas touch, doesn't think of himself as a starry idealist. With him, peace and coexistence are simply matters of cold logic. I do not know the difference between cold and any other temperature for logic, but there is no logic in the assumption that because a man has accumulated a large fortune that he is necessarily hard-headed or, for that matter, soft-headed. The late Henry Ford, for instance, was a master-builder of automobiles and erected an enormous enterprise, but he got that twisted up with Rozika Schwimmer and the Ford Peace Ship and he had other curious notions which did not work out. Many a very wealthy man becomes a socialist or an anarchist, sometimes for no better reason than that he cannot explain why he should have succeeded in life when his betters did not accumulate as much money. On the other hand, many a logician of the first magnitude teaches in a university for small pay.

Eaton, in this interview said: "One thing you can say about capitalists is that they want to make a profit. There is not much to gain if the United States spends $50 billion a year on armaments which ultimately will only blow us all up."

On the other hand, would Cyrus Eaton reduce the United States to the condition of Poland or Hungary or North Korea? If not, is it not necessary to be prepared to defend ourselves against the menace that an imperialistic country such as Soviet Russia holds for us? Even Red China is rebelling against Soviet imperialism. Is a profit so profitable that all the spiritual values of life are to be debased for it? True, it would be unfortunate if all our skyscrapers and magnificent industrial enterprises were destroyed by Soviet Russian bombs and missiles, which is Eaton's fear, but what about the freedom of the individual which is the essence of our civilization?

Eaton's answer is: "In a world where you have to eat three times a day, an application to material things is mankind's first job and destiny. After all, what the world pays most attention to is success. It may be a hard thing to say, but it's one of the old facts of life."

This is Cyrus Eaton's credo but there are other men who do not live for bread alone or even mostly for bread. There are men and women who would preserve their honor and dignity and their beliefs, even (Continued on page six)

Dull Hearings Are Brightened

By LYNN NISBET

PHILOSOPHY — The usually dull budget hearings are sometimes brightened by numerous comments which have a lot of philosophic truth. Dr. Rudolf Jones, president of Fayetteville State Teachers College, was pleading for more money to employ better qualified instructors. He said he had sometimes feared that the tendency was "for those who can't do, to teach; and those who can't teach, to teach teachers." He noted that the salary scale at his college was just about that of the high schools.

Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, new president of A&T in Greensboro, also gave out with some humorous philosophy. He was making the point that while his college as a Federal land grant institution was required to maintain certain standards, he was forced sometimes to use under graduate instructors in the graduate school. "I don't want to send out post graduates from my college who cannot spell 'graduate'—but that's likely to happen unless we can recruit competent professors."

Dr. Walter Ridley, also new president of Elizabeth City State Teachers College, expressed the same idea. All of these college administrators pointed out the need for more physical facilities in building and equipment, but they put major emphasis on enriching the curriculum and the faculty. Significance of that approach is that these are Negro colleges. At every Negro school more emphasis was placed on quality of instruction, while at many of the white institutions emphasis was on buildings to accommodate convenience of the anticipated increased number of students to be enrolled during the next few years.

ORANGE LIGHT—In this development there may be an orange light of caution about going so far in buildings and physical facilities at white colleges. It has been true for some years that the average salary of Negro school teachers were better prepared from the standpoint of college degrees and tenure. That this condition arose from the fact that teaching has been the best job available to Negroes, while white could go into business offices at higher pay, does not change the basic truth that the average Negro public school teacher is better prepared to teach than the average white.

Up to now that has not been true of college faculties. There are indications that it might become true, if the Negro schools continue to emphasize quality

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
ON READING THE CLASSICS
Some time ago I said to a friend of mine who does a tremendous amount of reading each year, "Why is it that the so-called 'classics' in literature are so superior to all other writings? They invigorate the mind, as the writings of modern writers do not. Why is this?" My friend's reply was, "Those guys had the stuff."

Then he went on to point out that the writers of the classics had a penetrating insight into the meaning of life, which others often lack. They were able to discern the real problems of life, to state them, and in many cases to suggest remedies.

More Labor Trouble In Offing

By ELMER ROESSNER
Here are more look-a-heads in business based on analyses of developing trends and, occasionally, on advance information: More labor trouble. The fact that unemployment is high and that there are some dips in the economy will not reduce labor demands in the coming months. Some labor leaders feel that any strikes between now and election day will aid John F. Kennedy by boosting unemployment and thereby embarrassing the Administration.

However, most leaders are against strikes that will throw no-strikers out of jobs. The quick end of the Pennsylvania Railroad strike was largely due to the fact that it was not popular among other railway union leaders, who brought pressure for settlement.

On the other hand, there will be strike talk as General Electric and the I.U.E. negotiate for a new contract to replace one expiring October 1. Some union elements would like to see a strike.

Taxes no issue. Not that neither Richard Nixon nor John F. Kennedy have called for a tax cut. It would be unforgivable hypocrisy. Platforms of both parties spell out higher Federal spending. Some planks, if taken literally, would actually mean sharp tax increases. Meanwhile, the final budget the Eisenhower Administration will send to Congress next January will call for higher spending. This will be a budget in fancy only; the 1961-62 budget will be beaten into shape by the new administration and the new Congress.

REDONE WAR
Excess of history. By the end of 1961, Americans will be as tired of the Civil War as were their ancestors in 1865. The story of the war is about to be re-regulated in advertisements, television shows, newspaper features, school pageants and everywhere else. Millions of dollars have already been contracted for in advertising alone to tie into centennial themes. There will be so much repetition, boring material that in the end many people will be wishing the South hadn't won after all.

Postal meter competition. For years one manufacturer has had a virtual monopoly on postage meters. But a new one has been developed and is said to be about to win government approval. It will launch a tremendous competitive battle for a multimillion-dollar market.

NEW INTERCOM COMING

Home intercom system. A portable home intercom system using existing house wiring is being tested in three markets and, if accepted by buyers there, will soon appear in all other markets. Costs under $80. This will be followed by another intercom consisting of two or more tiny broadcasting stations with less than 100-foot range.

A delegation now touring the U.S. is getting some encouraging inquiries.

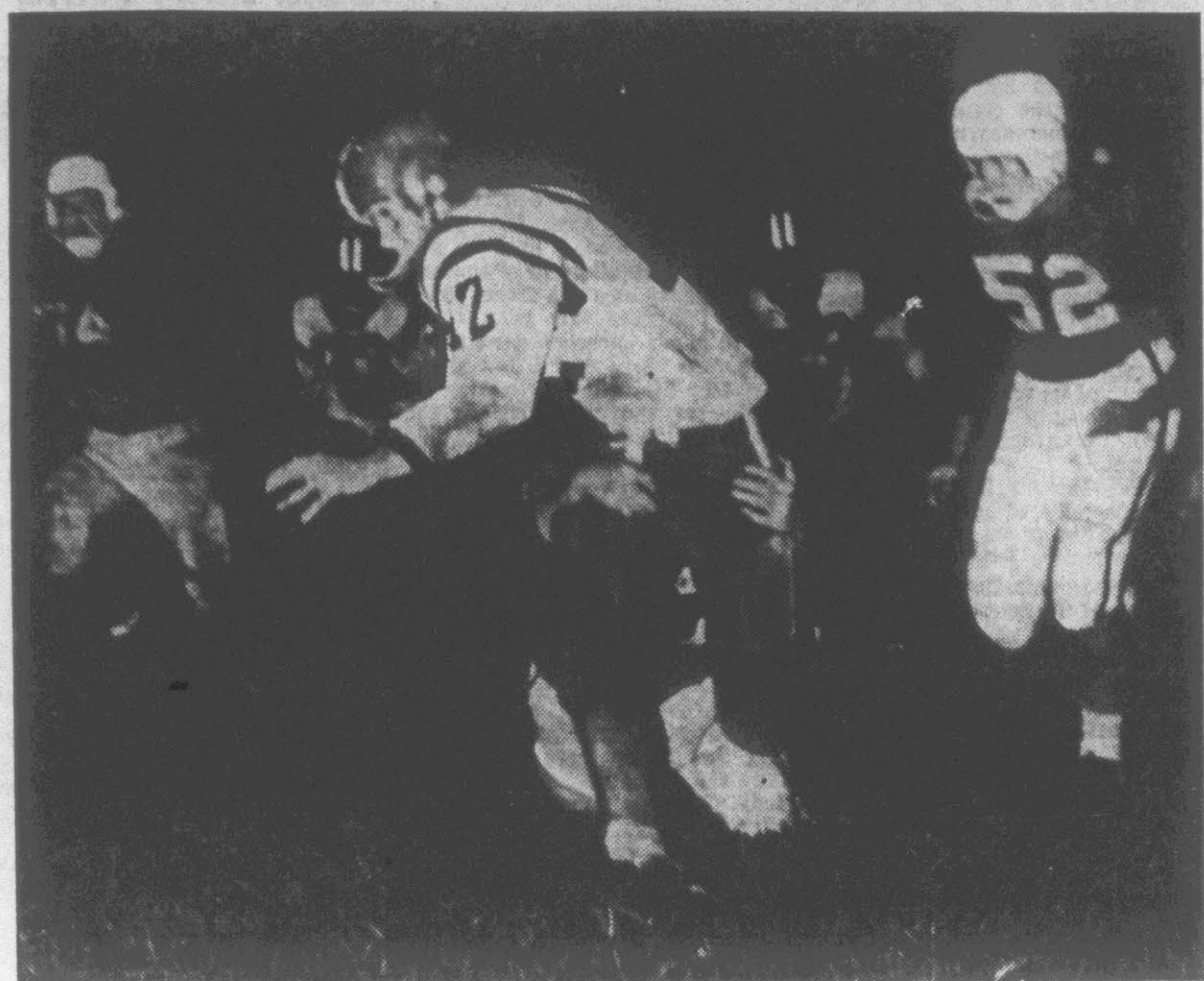

OLD PROMOTER ADVANCES NEW KIND OF INFLATION. "People are tired of old monetary inflation," the Old Promoter announced on his drop-in today. "The business of money being worth less and less all the time is wearing, disheartening and impoverishing. So I have invented reverse inflation."

"What's that?" we demanded. "The money stays the same, but goods shrink. For instance, under monetary inflation, the price of eggs has gone up from 29 cents to 79 cents a dozen over the years. But under my system, the price of eggs will always remain 79 cents. However, under reverse inflation, the eggs will get smaller and, if necessary, the count will shrink. Eleven, or perhaps ten, will make a dozen. The price of a pound of hamburger will never change but the pound will shrink from 16 to 15 or even 14 ounces."

"That's utterly fantastic!" we said. "Fantastic!" he gasped. "Look here, young fellow: Before World War II, the quart was the favorite size of bottles for distilled spirits. Now the fifth is the standard, and the price is more than doubled. Isn't that reverse inflation and classic inflation at the same time?"

No Robbery This Time, Phants Defeat Cards, 21-7

PICKING UP GROUND—Billy James, one of the sparkplugs in Greenville's second win, is shown picking up ground on a Greenville drive last night. The Phants tamed Jacksonville boasters, 21-7.

JACKSONVILLE — Fired-up to the hilt and set on a clean-cut victory over Jacksonville, Greenville's Phants last night unveiled a smooth-working offensive attack that controlled the ball three-fourths of the game and took a surprisingly easy 21-7 victory over the previously unbeaten Cardinals.

A crowd estimated at 2,000 saw Greenville strike with lightning offensive power in the first eight minutes of the game and then simmer down with some outstanding defensive prowess, leaving the Jax once-powerful offensive attack almost hapless.

The partial crowd saw championship hopes for Jacksonville dwindle in their first conference game of the season and at the same time saw their "pride of Dixie," Stuart Ellington, take a back seat in individual honors to Rose High junior, Alan McArthur.

The crowd was hardly settled before Greenville stopped Ellington and crew on three downs and then marched 79 yards for the opening touchdown.

Erskine Duff, calling a game just short of sensation, set up the first TD, skirting 31 yards after McArthur had picked up a first down with a 14 yard trot.

The drive was momentarily halted but on fourth down Duff found McArthur open with a soft toss and the fleet-back scooted into the end zone from 13 yards out. Larry Roberts' kick was true and it was 7-0.

Jacksonville received the kickoff and marched to their first score of the night. Highlighted by a 12-yard Ellington pass to end Jimmy Fullwood, the Cards moved to the Phants' 33 where Greg Steele bounced out of nowhere on an inside reverse, which caught Greenville pursuing too quick, and went the distance for the six-pointer. Ellington bucked over for the point.

McArthur took the kickoff and carried for the third touchdown within eight minutes, an 81-yard "beauty," but it was called back to the 40 due to a clipping penalty. The tireless McArthur wiggled loose again for 19 yards and Duff completed a 11-yard pass to Layne Jorgensen to set the Phants in scoring position again as the second quarter opened.

Wayne Sumrell, McArthur, and Duff carried for another first on the 13. The Jacksonville defense stiffened and another Phant first down fell just inches short on the four, giving the ball to the Cards.

The Phants were tapping at the goal minutes later after a Jacksonville fumble on the 10 was recovered by Jorgensen. The Phants took three stabs and moved it to the one but on fourth down Sumrell was stopped inches short by the center of the Cards line.

In the second half, Greenville received the kickoff, McArthur returning it 21 yards to the Phants 40. From that point, the Phants starting eating up time and yardage at the same time, grinding out 60 yards.

The attack was a steady one with Sumrell, McArthur, and Billy James picking up sizable chunks of yardage. Sumrell, as slow to the ground as a mole, plowed through the center of the line for the final five yards, carrying several would-be tacklers with him.

Roberts again converted the point and the score was 14-7. Minutes later Skip Wright broke through to block a Jacksonville punt and Greenville's Layne Jorgensen recovered on the Cards' 15. The scoring threat died when Sumrell fumbled on the first play.

Ellington, trying to put his team back in the game, took the kick but his pass was intercepted by Berney Morris who brought it back to the 18. This time the Phants scored their game-clincher.

James carried for nine, McArthur for four, and Sumrell picked up another yard for a first down on the nine. McArthur broke through the center for eight more yards and James dived over from the one. Roberts converted the point.

Jacksonville had another scoring chance in the final minutes of the game when McArthur's punt was blocked and recovered on the Phants' 16. But penalties and a hard-charging Phant line prevented a Jacksonville score.

The Phants also made another serious threat in the final period, driving to the 23, but fumbled. Duff sprinted 34 yards in the drive.

Coach Bud Phillips emphasized the victory as "a team effort" but had a little special praise for his ends, Layne Jorgensen and Skip Wright. "Our exception defensive end play stopped Jacksonville's running game and that was what we hoped to do," commented the victorious mentor following the game.

Next Friday, Greenville will be host to arch-rival Kinston in the first home game of the season. Greenville ... 7 0 14 0-21 Jacksonville ... 7 0 0 0-7

Farmville Rolls To 21-7 Victory Over Lillington

FARMVILLE — Paced by some fine running on the part of All-Conference Danny Dilda, Farmville's Red Devils offset five fumbles last night with a yardage-grinding ground attack that bumped off a strong Lillington club, 20-7.

After receiving the kickoff from Lillington, Farmville moved the ball to the 48 yard line. Dilda found an opening through the center, moving to the Lillington 35 but fumbled.

Holmes intercepted a Lillington pass three plays later but Farmville again fumbled with the Cavaliers taking over. The swapping of fumbles prevailed most of the first quarter.

Late in the period, Farmville halted a Lillington drive, recovering a fumble on their own 25. Billy Pollard sliced off tackle for 15 yards and a first down. Dilda carried for eight more and then hit J. Y. Monk with a pass, the play covering 35 yards.

Last Play TD Gives Sugg High Victory

WILLIAMSTON—A touchdown pass on the final play of the game last night brought H. B. Sugg from behind with a dramatic 12-7 victory over Hayes High of Williamston.

Quarterback Bobby Joyner hit end Jimmy Smith with a 30 yard pass on the final play of the game, bringing Sugg High its second win in as many starts.

The victors had struck paydirt first with a 60 yard drive in the second quarter, climaxed by a four yard plunge by fullback Sam McKencie. The extra point failed.

Williamston surged ahead in the third quarter on a 30-yard scoring play. The tally came on a pass from the host club's quarterback to an end.

Sugg threatened twice in the third period but were stopped each time within the Hayes 10 yard line.

Finally, with time running out, Joyner faded back, found Smith open on the 10 and hit him with a perfect toss. The flanker shook off one would-be tackler before registering the winning touchdown.

Bembrey Rose, Richard Gay William Holmes and William Steele were the standouts in the line for the winners while Willie Nelson, McKencie Willard Wilks and Joyner drew the laurels in the backfield.

Sugg High will be pitted against unbeaten Eppes High next Friday night on the latter's field. H. B. Sugg ... 6 0 6-12 Hayes High ... 0 7 0-7

The Devils climaxed their 75 yard drive in the opening minutes of the second period when the sure-footed Dilda crashed through the line for 12 yards and the touchdown. Pollard circled right end for the point after touchdown.

Lillington threatened following the kickoff, marching to the Red Devil 25 yard line. Red Hodges, just returning to action, ended the drive, intercepting a Max Jackson pass on the Farmville five yard line.

Pollard and Dilda took turns in cracking the Cavalier line. The shifty Dilda wriggled in and out of the Lillington line, shook loose and raced 65 yards for the second touchdown. The extra point attempt was no good but Farmville went out front 13-0 at halftime.

Despite a rash of injuries that has hampered the Red Devil camp this fall, Coach Elbert Moyer's club looked even sharper in the second half.

After holding Lillington for three downs, Dilda picked up some key blocks from Mose Moyer, J. Y. Monk, and Mitchell Cannon and raced from the Farmville 20 to the Lillington 45 on the punt return.

Dilda, Pollard, and Bobby Avery teamed up for a couple of first downs, moving the ball to the 20. Alex Corbett picked up seven and Pollard for three more to the 10. From that point, it was Danny Dilda again, the halfback scooting through the center of the line for his third touchdown. Corbett bucked over for the point, making the score read 20-0.

Lillington blew a scoring opportunity early in the fourth period. The passing of Jackson and the running of Jimmy Watkins moved the pigskin to the Devils' five with first down.

Mitchell Cannon, Farmville's rugged tackle, took it upon himself to end the threat, crashing through the line three times and spilling Lillington backs.

Lillington was knocking at the scoring gates four plays later when a bad hike from center on a punt situation gave Lillington a first down on the Farmville 12.

After officials' penalty moved it to the 17, Jackson took to the air, completing a pass to Neal on the six. Nepper tucked in a jump pass from Jackson just inches short of the goal, and Bell plunged over for the touchdown with less than Park 0 two minutes remaining in the contest. The Lillington fullback also added the extra point. Farmville ... 0 13 7 0-20 Lillington ... 0 0 0 7-7

Eppes High Has Second Win Of Season, 14-0

JACKSONVILLE — Scoring in the second and fourth periods, Eppes High outpointed Jacksonville 14-0 last night.

After a rash of fumbles kept the Bulldogs in hot water most of the fourth quarter, Freddy Watson took charge in the second period and moved his club 65 yards for a touchdown.

Watson, a quarterback, climaxed the drive by carrying for the final five yards. The extra point attempt failed.

Late in the fourth period, Watson handed off to Calvin Gatlin who cut of the air and set sail for the sidelines and another touchdown, the play covering 85 yards.

Joe Tyson, replacing Watson, scored the extra point.

Outstanding line play for the victors was turned in by Alton and Dalton Davis, Alton Harris and Nathan Cronwell.

Cancer Society To Hear Speaker

John R. Jordan Jr. of Raleigh will speak to the Pitt County Unit of the American Cancer Society at the group's annual Fall meeting at 8 p.m. in the City Court Room Tuesday night, according to officials of the Pitt County Unit of the society.

Jordan, a former member of the Staff of the Attorney General of North Carolina, received the Junior Chamber of Commerce Distinguished Service Award in 1958 as Raleigh's "Young Man of the Year".

At present he is a member of the Board of Directors of the Wake County Cancer Society, Chairman of the Resolutions Committee of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Board of Directors of the American Red Cross, and Wake County sponsor of the National Recreation Association.

He is also a member of the Executive Committee and Board of Directors of the North Carolina Cancer Society, and was elected to the North Carolina Senate in 1958.

As second vice-president and co-crusade chairman for the state Cancer Society, Jordan will speak to the Pitt Unit on the development of cancer research.

All members of the Pitt Unit are urged to attend the meeting, Elbert Bennett, president of the local society, said.

Exhibition Features N. C. Artist's Work

The Greenville Art Center will hold its fall opening Sunday at the gallery with an exhibition of works by W. Frith Winslow, well known artist of eastern North Carolina.

Gallery hours on Sunday will be observed from 2:30 until 5 p.m.

Approximately 25 original oil paintings by Winslow's students in Plymouth, Williamston, Windsor and Jamesville will be included in the exhibit, which will occupy the entire gallery on Evans Street.

This exhibit will continue for four weeks at regular gallery hours, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday. The gallery will be closed on Sundays and Mondays, with the exception of the opening this Sunday.

Of most interest to the public will be the oil painting, "Durant's Deed," by Winslow, which was commissioned by the Parent-Teacher Association of his native Winfall. The painting depicts the signing of the earliest recorded deed in North Carolina. This will be the first public showing of "Durant's Deed."

Winslow has exhibited throughout North Carolina and in Norfolk, Va., Miami, Fla., and a gallery on Long Island. He has sold his paintings and portraits from Florida to Nova Scotia and west to Michigan.

Asks Farmers To Support Bureau

The president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau has called on the farmers of the county to support efforts to increase membership in the organization for the year "to assist in strengthening the county voice in state and national agricultural matters."

Harry Jarvis, county Farm Bureau president, said, "Our annual membership enrollment will begin Sept. 14 with more than 200 of membership chairmen and solicitors which are farmer neighbors of most of us voluntarily going out into the county to give every farmer an opportunity to join again this year."

Local Bureau leaders point to the necessity of increasing membership "in order to do an even more effective job."

"Our organization needs every farmer in the county, who believes in the future of agriculture and is willing to carry his share of the responsibility of keeping farmers well represented in the most complex society on earth," declared Jarvis.

He promised the membership solicitors would be in every community and township within the next seven days. "Farm Bureau members have a responsibility to themselves and their families to sign up again this year and to get their neighbors to do the same," added Jarvis.

Flag To Fly

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower has ordered Panama's flag flown in the U.S.-controlled Panama Canal Zone as "visual evidence of Panama's titular sovereignty" over the zone, the White House announced today.

The flying of the Panamanian flag in the zone—a 10 mile strip running about 50 miles through the Republic of Panama—has been the center of a bitter controversy for years. There has been a dispute also over the question of Panama's sovereignty over the Canal Zone.

In Congress this year there were bitter speeches denouncing reported plans of the Eisenhower Administration to allow the flying of Panama's flag in the zone, on the theory that it would recognize Panama's sovereignty over the area—some congressmen contend this sovereignty does not exist.

Wreck Victim Said Improving

LEXINGTON, Mo.—The condition of Robert F. Thompson Jr. of Greenville, N. C., was reported by hospital spokesmen today as "still very serious; however... improved since yesterday."

Thompson, 22, was reported in "very critical" condition yesterday following a head-on collision near here in which his wife, Katherine Susan Pope Thompson, also of Greenville, was killed instantly.

He is suffering from multiple fractures, lacerations on the face, and internal injuries.

A spokesman at Lexington Memorial Hospital said Thompson is still "in a semi-conscious state and is not, as yet, communicating."

The report said the young serviceman is responding to treatment and his blood pressure "is remaining steady."

An attending nurse said, "He's holding his own. He seems to be a pretty strong boy." She said, "He does not know about his wife yet."

The spokesman said Thompson's father, Robert F. Thompson of Greenville, arrived here sometime yesterday and "he seems to be aware of his father's presence."

their beliefs in God. Back in the Middle Ages, men jumped into an auto-da-fe and were burned to death with the name of God on their lips. Were they fools? Should they not have flocks? Should they not have taken whatever benefits accrued from being consciences and a hypocrite?

Perhaps Cyrus Eaton does not understand such men. They are not the successful ones in life. From that standpoint Paul was a failure but Al Capone was a success. Einstein was a flop but Lucky Luciano was a whiz. Surely, Eaton's friend, Nikita Khrushchev, cannot believe that. After all, he is a follower of Karl Marx who only accumulated bolts.

Funeral Set For Mrs. R. F. Thompson, Jr.
Funeral services for Mrs. Susan Pope Thompson, 22, wife of Robert F. Thompson Jr., will be conducted at the Wilkerson Chapel Sunday afternoon at four o'clock by the Rev. Howard McLamb, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Thompson was killed instantly Thursday afternoon when she was involved in an automobile collision near Odessa, Missouri. She and her husband were enroute to Camp Hanford, Washington, from Greenville following their wedding here last Sunday.

Surviving are her husband; her father, Dr. Benjamin A. Pope of Norfolk, Virginia; and her maternal grandmother, Mrs. L. O. Gross of Greenville.

Bethel Principal Talks At School PTA Meeting

BETHEL—W. C. Latham, principal of Bethel High School, gave ten sure ways to make a delinquent during a address of "Juvenile Delinquency" at a Parent-Teacher Association meeting here.

The meeting was the first for this school year, and was held in the auditorium of the elementary school recently.

C. W. Pettigrew, new president of the P.T.A., made the welcome address. Rev. C. W. Barbee gave a devotion taken from Luke. He closed his remarks with prayer.

Minutes from the last meeting in May were read and approved by the group. Teachers were introduced at the meeting.

Mrs. Robert Davis announced plans were in the making for a school band.

Mrs. Agnes Case was the recipient of the door prize. After adjournment, the group assembled in the lunch room for a hospitality tea.

The crowd cheered the girls treated the "D-e-m-o-c-r-a-t-s" to a similar courtesy.

Betty Lane Evans, popular Miss North Carolina of 1958, was one of ten or twelve coeds, all dressed in white, who stood by Sen. Kennedy's convertible to welcome him.

Greenville city police detective lieutenant H.F. Lawson drew the honor of driving the convertible in which Kennedy rode while in Greenville.

All police officers working today were to be in uniform. Lawson, a big man and a former uniformed officer, has been accused of getting the job because had outgrown his uniform!

After reports, photographers, and others had been cleared away from the candidate, the speech-making session was ready to begin.

At that moment, a brave shutterbug ventured to the center of the platform to supply Kennedy with a "prop" for a photo.

The nominee grinned broadly as the photographer handed him a bright, yellow bundle of tobacco.

... COWS IN THE CORN

We were sympathizing with a customer of ours yesterday, but he let us know right away that he didn't need any sympathy.

"Don't worry about me," was his indignant reply. "I got a corn-picker in there today and got most of it out."

"What happened to the rest?" we asked, surprised.

"We got down on our hands and knees and grubbed it out."

"How did it look?"

"Not too bad," he said.

"What are the folks in your neighborhood doing about it?"

"Most of them figure on getting it out right away before a rainy spell or another hurricane wipes out the whole crop."

THIS IS A BRILLIANT THING YOU'VE DONE, LADS. WHERE DID YOU LEARN TO HANDLE SUSPICIOUS FIREARMS LIKE THIS? AT THE POLICE YOUTH TRAINING BUREAU. THAT'S WHERE.

CONGRATULATIONS, KIDS. YOU'VE BEEN TAUGHT WELL. YOU'LL HEAR FROM HEADQUARTERS FOR THIS.

MAY I HAVE MY SHOELACE BACK, OFFICER HANLEY?

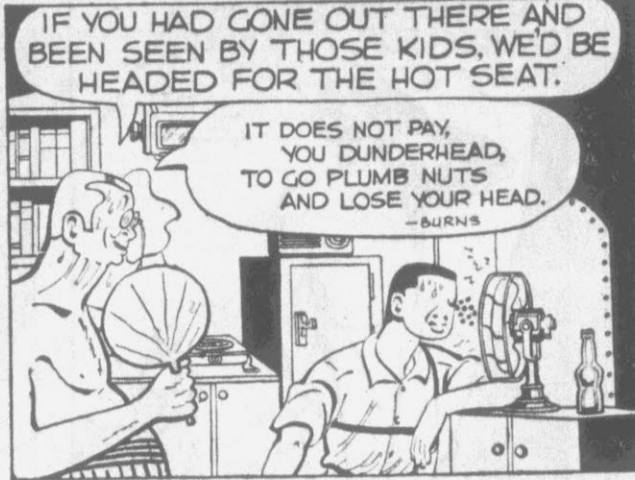

OH, YES. AND BY THE WAY, LAD, SHOW ME NOW—JUST WHERE DID YOU FIND THIS GUN?

AND IN THE PARK—

IF YOU HADN'T SOCKED ME WITH THAT BOTTLE, I'D HAVE MY GUN BACK NOW. I HAD TO STOP YOU, SPOTS.

IF YOU HAD GONE OUT THERE AND BEEN SEEN BY THOSE KIDS, WE'D BE HEADED FOR THE HOT SEAT.

IT DOES NOT PAY, YOU DUNDERHEAD, TO GO PLUMB NUTS AND LOSE YOUR HEAD. —BURNS

WHY WORRY ABOUT THE GUN? NOBODY CAN PROVE IT'S YOURS.

THOSE KIDS! I SAW THEM FIND IT.

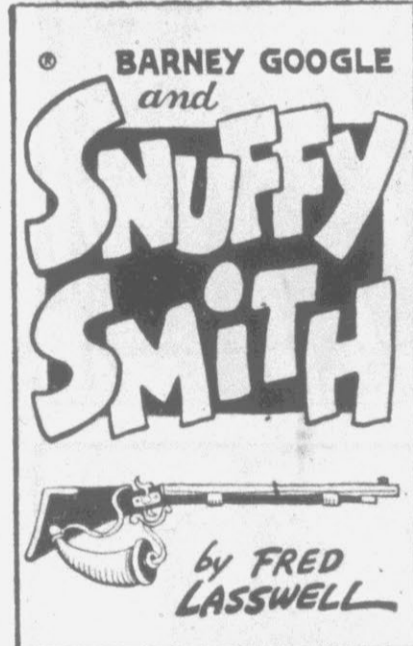

SO—LET'S USE SENSE AND PLAY IT SAFE. DON'T RANT AND SCREAM AND YAP AND CHAFE. —THACKERAY

The PHANTOM

By Lee Falk and Wilson McCoy

ADAM, DARLING! OH ~ YOU'RE HURT!

I FELL INTO A BLASTED ANIMAL TRAP. NEVER MIND THAT. YOU'RE SAFE, DARLING.

MEANWHILE, THE PHANTOM HAS A HURRIED CONFERENCE WITH THE PYGMY BOATMAN ~

ADAM, HE OWNS THIS PLACE. HE RAISED ALL THESE JUNGLE CATS ON FISH. THAT'S WHY THEY DON'T EAT THE OTHER ANIMALS.

SIR, I'M SORRY THOSE MEN SHOT THE GAZELLE. I TRIED TO STOP THEM. BUT, PLEASE ~ ~ DON'T MAKE THEM CROSS ON THAT ROPE. IF THEY FALL INTO THE RIVER, THE PIRANHA WILL GET THEM.

THEY MUST BE PUNISHED, ADAM. THEY ALMOST RUINED THIS ISLAND.

PHANTOM SAYS YOU GO ACROSS RIVER ON ROPE NOW.

~ WE'LL BE KILLED!

A PYGMY POISON ARROW! HE'S TELLING US ~ TO MOVE! WE'D BETTER ~

IS THE PHANTOM BEING TOO CRUEL? SEE NEXT WEEK.

'CORDIAL TALK
VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The new Soviet permanent delegate to the International Atomic Energy Agency, V. M. Molotov, paid a call Thursday on his American opposite number, Adm. Paul Foster. An announcement afterward said they had a "cordial talk."

Public Notices
NOTICE OF HEARING
The Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company on July 18, 1960 filed a petition with the North Carolina Utilities Commission covering proposed extension of the base rate area in Beaufort, Clinton, Fayetteville, Greenville, Henderson, Jacksonville, Kinston, Morehead City, New Bern, Oxford, Rocky Mount, Smithfield, Tarboro, Washington, Williamston, and Wilson. The company further proposes in its petition to adjust upward the rates in seventeen exchanges which in growth subsequent to 1957 have reached higher rate groups based on main station and private branch exchange trunks in the calling scope of each exchange. Exchanges affected by this proposal are: Ahoskie, Benson, Columbia, Dunn, Fayetteville, Grifton, Henderson, Jacksonville, Oxford, Pinetops, Reaford, Rocky Mount, St. Pauls, Smithfield, Snow Hill, Swansboro, and Tabor City. In addition, the company is seeking authority to regroup exchanges in the future according to the main station and PBX trunks development based on the calling scope of the particular exchange after due notice to the public and to the North Carolina Utilities Commission.

The subscriber may determine the effect of the proposed adjustments upon their monthly telephone rates by contacting the commercial office of the telephone company in their respective areas. The North Carolina Utilities Commission in its order of August 10, 1960, suspended the application until November 18, 1960, and set the matter for hearing in the courtroom of the Commission in Raleigh on Wednesday, September 21, 1960, at 10:00 a.m.

A Stirring Western Suspense Novel 'The Lean Rider' by CLIFF FARRELL

CHAPTER 32 It was late afternoon when Paul Drexel, now almost fully recovered from his wounds, stood in the stirrups, waving his hat and pointing. The long line of cattle was emerging from a notch in the mountains. Before them lay a great trough in the desert. Near at hand, threading its way across the flats, was a meandering line of willows and cottonwood and patches of marshy grass. Water! The Mojave River!

He was still driving hard, and losing steers. Their own herd was in fair shape. Abel said, and walking its fifteen to eighteen miles a day. To Lisa, the nights when their herd had been stampeded on the Pecos and Abel had panicked Travis's Longhorns steers in retaliation, and the ensuing exchange of threatening bullets through wagon tops, seemed a part of a past that was over with.

A thousand miles of dust lay between those camps and the ones they now pitched. The saber - rattling, she tried to assure herself, had halted such strife permanently. Each side had found the other armed and determined and capable of striking back violently. It was, she had told herself until she almost believed it, a truce that neither would dare break.

Travis had reached the river, revived the strength of his Longhorns for a day or two, and pulled out, following the river westward. He was still in advance of them. "But only two or three days now," Abel said. "We're beginning to pull up on him."

It was at such times that she knew in her heart that she was wrong. There was Matthew to remember. He was not forgotten. Nor was his slayer. They reached the Owens, and the herd drank cold, clear water. The long drought had ended, but too late to save the native cattle in the parched ranges in the west and north along the mountains. But the high country was green again.

Lisa halted her horse, the grandeur of the scene catching at her heart. Abel rode up unhalted also, gazing for a long time. "Finally he spoke. 'This, 'God willin', is where we'll settle. I never saw country so purty, never dreamed anything could be like this.'"

They moved through a land of oaks. It was at such times that she knew in her heart that she was wrong. There was Matthew to remember. He was not forgotten. Nor was his slayer. They reached the Owens, and the herd drank cold, clear water. The long drought had ended, but too late to save the native cattle in the parched ranges in the west and north along the mountains. But the high country was green again.

They trailed northward through a broad valley, shadowed by snow-streaked peaks. Settlers were in this country, and mining camps in the mountains. Rushing streams came down from the canyons, nourishing meadows on which the Longhorns thrived. Around them the rabbit brush was budding, and some of it was bursting into golden yellow bloom. They moved through a land of oaks.

They descended into the basin and bedded the herd that night on grass that brushed the stirrups. "A hundred miles to Reno," Abel said. "Less than a week's easy drive. An' this is the third day of September. We stand to beat delivery date by a considerable margin. Might come close to sellin' at twenty-three a head, countin' bonus."

Days later, to the west, an enormous range of mountains began to bulge higher as they advanced, and another mountain mass came into view to the north and east. They were imperceptibly climbing to higher elevation and leaving the furnace-heat of the desert behind. But always ahead of them owas the trail of Travis's cattle.

Lisa awakened and lay listening. Through a slit in the wagon flap she could see the morning star blazing brightly. A horse was moving somewhere near the camp, but the sound was so elusive she felt she was sensing it, rather than hearing it. She probably was one of the men from the late watch, coming in to awaken the camp. Still, this almost inaudible presence seemed to be circling the wagons rather than approaching them. She dressed quickly beneath the blankets, pulled on her boots and slid to the ground without awakening Hester.

The men were all asleep beneath their tarps. The peaks to the west were black, formless shadows against the cold stars. The air had the sharp, brittle chill of new ice. She could feel its sting deep in her throat. She became aware of another shadow nearby. A horseman was halted just beyond the wagons.

The sulphur friction match flared. Her first thought was that it was to light tobacco. She now discovered that two riders were there—vague shapes in the darkness. The match burned steadily. Something new ignited. A streak of fire came sailing through the air into the camp, sparks flying. Lisa realized what it was! She screamed, "Abel! They're trying to blow up the camp!"

The oncoming object landed a dozen feet beyond her and went rolling and bouncing, the sputter of fire continuing to burn balefully. This came from a lighted fuse. She raced in pursuit of it. Her outcry had brought Abel and the others out of their blankets. The object rolled toward Paul. He leaped, seized it up, whirled and hurled it far over the wagon. "Get down!" Abel shouted. Lisa dropped flat on the ground. The earth seemed to lift and strike her with a solid impact, and the concussion punched at her eardrums.

"Lisa became aware of a new, deaf sound. The herd was running, panicked by the blast. . . the story continues here Monday.

Catfish Starves Self To Death

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — There's no telling what was on the mind of Flathead the catfish, but if he wanted another beer he didn't get it. The huge catfish died in his 1,700-gallon tank at the zoo Thursday of self imposed starvation. It was his second and final hunger strike. The first one, coming right after his capture, ended when zoo men poured a bottle of beer down his throat. That stirred Flathead into a healthy appetite that lasted six months. But he quit eating again three weeks ago. His weight dropped from 57 to 44 pounds. The zoo is looking for a replacement that won't be so choosy.

PTA Council's Meeting Opens 1960-61 Term

The City Council Parent-Teacher Association began its 1960-61 term this week with a meeting at Wahl-Coates School. P.T.A. presidents, school principals, study course chairmen and members at large from the city schools of Greenville were on hand for the meeting to discuss various activities and problems that confront the city schools and to make plans for the coming year. Mrs. Lacy Harrill, District 10 president, urged members to attend the district meeting to be held in Morehead City Oct. 12. Mrs. M. P. Bailey Jr., new president of the City Council P.T.A., presided at the meeting. Other officers for this year are Mrs. Cameron Dudley, vice president, and Mrs. I. J. Edwards Jr., secretary-treasurer.

Art Center Will Resume Classes

Greenville Art Center opens its fall classes Sept. 20 with an expanded program requiring addition of teachers in oil painting and in children's art. Two newcomers to the center's staff, Mrs. Metz Gordley and Thomas Mims, each will conduct weekly classes in painting. Mrs. Gordley, who holds the Master of Fine Arts degree from the University of Oklahoma, will teach a morning class. Mr. Mims, who received the Master of Arts degree in painting from East Carolina college and who is an instructor in the college art department, will teach an evening class. Classes for children, will be taught by Mr. Lynn Burgess, a senior art student at East Carolina. Saturday morning classes will be held for the age group, 6 through 14. A Thursday afternoon class will be conducted for the age group, 15 through 18. Mrs. Bernard Jackson and Mrs. Sam Brooks, instructors in ceramics at the center during the summer months, will hold an afternoon and an evening class each week during the fall. Registration for classes may be arranged by calling PL 2-1946 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. the week of Sept. 20. An instruction fee will be charged students in children's classes and in painting classes. Mrs. Harold Hoke, supervisor of craftwork, said classes in weaving, textile painting, scrapbook and portfolio binding and rug making (braided and crocheted) will be organized when there is demand. A sculpture class can be organized, also.
