Roosevelt Asserts Demo Promises Would Cost $15 Billion A Year More

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer

Republican campaigner John A. Roosevelt this afternoon praised the Eisenhower administration for its defense program and charged the Democratic party with "making promises that, if carried out, would cost" the U. S. "$15 billion more each year."

Speaking before a crowd of some 350 in McGinnis Auditorium on the East Carolina College campus here, the son of the late Democratic President Franklin D. Roosevelt said the Republican administration during the last eight years has stepped up spending on long range ballistic missiles "tremendously."

He asserted the Truman administration, in 1952, was spending "only $1 billion annually. Today we are spending 10 times that much every day."

The lone Republican in the FDR family urged support for Vice President Richard M. Nixon on Nov. 8. He described Nixon as "a working vice-president who knows the peoples of 55 nations around the world . . . and who is experienced . . . in this nation's top meetings."

"On the other hand," he said, "Sen. Kennedy is a nice young man, but one who lacks maturity and experience . . . whose judgment under pressure is to apologize to Mr. Khrushchev."

Roosevelt said he believes the United States is the strongest overall military power in the world. "But," he added, "I do not say we should rest on our oars. From 1952 to today, we have a sound basis upon which we must continue to produce the deterrent force so the Communist nations will know it is suicide to ever press the fatal panic button."

Main Issue "The main issue in this campaign," the campaigning businessman said, "is which candidate is best qualified to maintain peace and world leadership for the United States."

Roosevelt took a jibe at the Democratic candidate for the vice-presidency, Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas. "Sen. Johnson," he said, "has so little faith that he will be elected that he is running simultaneously for the Senate seat from Texas."

The former President's son explained why "I broke with the Democrats in 1952." He said, "I had seen over seven years of the Truman administration. . . I had seen the mess in Washington. I did not believe the Democrats could clean up that mess? Roosevelt added greater concentration of the federal government more government spending, a drift toward "socialism" and "sagging" the position in world standing were other factors influencing his decision to join the GOP.

Nixon pointed out his mother's uncle was a Republican President, one of the Federal Reserve Board. This, Nixon said, "is something the opposition seems bent on doing and which is already causing concern in responsible circles both in our country and abroad."

Much of what the Republican presidential candidate said in his speech—which he described as the most important of his campaign on business and economic matters—expanded on proposals which he previously had made in criticism of Democratic programs.

For the first time he emphasized the possibility of "an early warning economic intelligence system." He said it could operate through flexible credit and fiscal possibilities, that could include tax adjustments, to protect the econ-

Theodore Roosevelt, and added, "This may not be a departure from the Democratic fold but rather a return to the Republican fold."

Praises Gavin Roosevelt praised the Republican party's candidate for N. C. governor, Robert L. Gavin. Gavin was on hand today to introduce the speaker. Roosevelt declared, "You are fortunate to have a man like Bob Gavin who will be your next governor."

Both Roosevelt and Gavin seconded the Nixon nomination at the Chicago GOP convention in July.

Both Gavin and Roosevelt were greeted today by standing ovations as they stood before their audience. Roosevelt arrived here at noon by plane from Wilmington and an earlier speaking engagement. He was whisked to the auditorium by a 15-car motorcade.

The national Republican figure was scheduled to lunch at the Hotel Proctor here before visiting the Citizens for Gavin-Nixon-Lodge headquarters in the same building. His itinerary calls for another flight into South Carolina for a speaking engagement in the Palmetto State tonight. Dignitaries greeting Roosevelt included Greenville Mayor S. Eugene West, Citizens Committee Co-Chairman James Keel, ECC Student Body President James Speight, and Wiley Gardner of the local Citizens Committee.

—AT WILMINGTON WILMINGTON, N. C. (AP) — John Roosevelt, Republican scion of a world-famous Democratic family, said today that if millions of Americans go to bed hungry, "it is because they are too darn lazy to open the icebox after watching the late, late show."

The son of the late president Franklin D. Roosevelt thus challenged a recent statement by the Democratic candidate for president, Sen. John F. Kennedy, that 17 million Americans go to bed hungry each night.

Roosevelt, a New York stockbroker, spoke in a hotel here before about 300 persons in behalf of Robert Gavin, Republican candidate for governor of North Carolina, and of other Republican nominees.

Gavin, in introducing Roosevelt, criticized the refusal of city officials to grant a permit to hold the rally on the steps of City Hall. Gavin said: "It is indicative of the entrenched one-party political machine in this state that they would attempt to deny the use of a public building, built by taxpayers' money, built by all of the citizens, for a fundamental American usage. It is apparent that the ideas we might discuss in Wilmington, such as the necessity for a two-party system, the necessity for sound, conservative government, and the necessity for freedom is dangerous, and in total opposition to the entrenched political bosses' beliefs."

City officials had said the City Hall has not been used for political rallies, and that such use would constitute a traffic hazard since the building is in the city's main thoroughfare.

Roosevelt speaks at East Carolina College in Greenville, N.C., later in the day and in Spartanburg, S.C., tonight.

Khrushchev Says Nuclear Subs Now With Red Fleet

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev said today the Soviet Union, which is credited with the world's biggest undersea fleet, now has atom-powered submarines armed with nuclear rockets. Khrushchev spoke before 15,000 Muscovites packed into Luzhnik Stadium. It was his first speech since he returned last week from his desk-pounding visit to the U. N. General Assembly.

A summary of his speech distributed by Tass news agency in English gave a paragraph to his announcement of the nuclear, rocket-armed subs. It said "he served this notice on American generals and admirals in connection with the report that the Pentagon decided to send submarines armed with missiles and nuclear weapons to the shores of the Soviet Union."

He said new Western proposals to the U. N. assembly show the Western powers are continuing to use disarmament talks to cover up an arms race policy. "They are an ill omen for the future," Khrushchev said.

Khrushchev said the first stage of the 15th General Assembly was marked in the main "by the struggle of the new, the progressive, with the old, the outworn, which was impeding the growth and development of the new."

Kennedy Lists 13 'Misstatements' And 'Distortions' By Dick Nixon

NEW YORK (AP)—Sen. John F. Kennedy today accused Vice President Richard M. Nixon of trying to debate with one-sided statements, while refusing "to make his answers and charges in direct television confrontations with 70 million people watching."

The Democratic presidential nominee, with this preface, issued his own written reply to a Republican "white paper" put out Wednesday.

In this earlier paper, Nixon said he was naming what he termed 13 misstatements or distortions Kennedy made during the campaign. In a point-by-point reply, Kennedy said Nixon repeated "some of the most glaring errors" the vice president had made during the campaign.

The dispute about the future of the television debate series between the candidates went on. Emissaries of the two scheduled discussions today of possible extension of Friday night's meeting to two hours, instead of one.

This was Nixon's proposal accepted in principle by Kennedy although the Democratic candidate has been insisting there should be a fifth debate, close to the election.

Kennedy said today it is "an interesting fact" that Nixon is willing to continue the debate by issuing statements with a duplicating machine.

Kennedy said the answer to the Nixon "white paper" will be "millions of white papers cast on Nov. 8."

And he added that while he was replying to Nixon, "the total record of Nixon's misstatements, omissions and distortions does not possibly be answered in a single white paper."

On various points, the Kennedy rejoinder said: Kennedy had contended the United States last year had the lowest rate of economic growth of any major industrial society. Nixon said the rate was 6.9 per cent, higher than that of major European powers. Kennedy replied the Joint Economic Committee of Congress placed the 1955-56 average at 2.3 per cent, half the Western European average.

Nixon has not made a case that Kennedy distorted President Eisenhower's views on Quemoy and Matsu by quoting out of context a line from an Eisenhower letter. Rather, Kennedy said, Nixon "has not only misstated my position, he has also misstated his own."

Kennedy said he had spoken for defending the Chinese offshore islands if their defense was necessary to halt an attack on Formosa and the Pescadores but not without this necessity and that "I would never retreat from Quemoy or Matsu under fire."

This position, he said, was consistent with the Eisenhower administration position and with treaty obligations. But Kennedy said Nixon had first gone beyond this stand by pledging defense of the islands whether or not such action was essential to defense of Formosa. Then, he went on, Nixon in the third television debate retreated from his position "until his position now accords with mine and that of the administration."

Kennedy went into a detailed discussion of civil rights action in an effort to rebut the Republican contention that the Eisenhower administration deserved credit for great progress in this field.

Johnson Questions Nixon 'Apology' To Khrushchev

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Sen. Lyndon Johnson has asked the State Department to release a transcript of Vice President Nixon's talks with Premier Nikita Khrushchev in Moscow last year.

Johnson, the Senate majority leader and Democratic vice presidential candidate, said here Wednesday night he wants to know whether Nixon apologized to Khrushchev for a congressional resolution commemorating the "Captive Nations week."

The Texas senator, campaigning in North Carolina for the second time in 10 days, told an audience of nearly 6,000 here that he wrote Secretary of State Christian Herter on Oct. 7 asking that the transcript be made public.

He noted that Sen. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, had "raised the point of this memorandum or transcript quotes Mr. Nixon as apologizing to Mr. Khrushchev for expressing regrets to Mr. Khrushchev" over the Captive Nations issue.

If such an apology was made, Johnson said, "it is a very peculiar set of circumstances when a member of one branch of our government apologizes for an action of another branch of the government."

There was no immediate comment from Nixon, campaigning in New York as the Republican presidential candidate.

Johnson called the memorandum "one of the best secrets of the past year," and said he was sure the vice president would "want to have all of the facts laid on the table, so that any misunderstandings can be cleared up."

Johnson read a copy of his letter to Herter to his audience here. In it he said he felt both Congress and the American people "have a right to all the facts concerning the Khrushchev-Nixon conversations."

Earlier in his prepared text, Johnson brought a thunderous ovation from the audience when he suggested that Nixon and his running mate, vice presidential nominee Henry Cabot Lodge engage in a "giant television debate to settle the differences between them."

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN
Mid October has come and gone. Morning Glories are hurrying their bloom in the dew drenched mornings trying to do their best before frost comes.

In the gardens, cosmos, marigolds, scarlet sage, chrysanthemums and other late flowers await a touch of the white hand that will end their journey. The holly berry will soon lose its yellowish tinge and turn red. Pyracantha with drooping clusters of orange and red berries, add to the mood of the season.

In the woods, the Tupelo is a scarlet flame; and other trees have noticed and will soon follow, lending their colors to the autumn fires that are kindling slowly in the tree tops.

One leaf, stiff and crisp, scrapes across the asphalt, making its way only when the wind has a mind to move it. The October sun touches the arched back of its leaf with its pale light. But the leaf does not respond to its touch—nor does the pushing wind trouble it. It died, having fulfilled its promise—nor does the tree care that held it fast since spring care—a new bud has formed.

The sun has gone behind the spreading cloud cover. A sound of thunder rolls in among the trees lining the banks of the river—a long roll of the drum of nature, calling together the winds, marshalling frosts and snows. All the living things: trees, shrubs, flowers, insects, birds and four footed climbers of trees, and those that dig and burrow in the ground, feel the pull of it and understand. This is the end of the Indian Summer—a stolen season—a bit of summer, a bit of fall—a touch of green and a touch of gold. The year has crossed another valley and has but one more hill to climb.

Judge James Speaks To The Round Table

Mrs. E. E. Rawl Sr. was hostess to the Round Table Tuesday afternoon at her home on Pitt Street. She received in the living room for an informal social hour.

Guests were invited into the dining room where Mrs. D. L. Moore served frosted punch. The tea table was centered with a fall arrangement, carrying out the hostess' color scheme. Guests served themselves party sandwiches, pastry, and sweets.

After the president, Mrs. D. L. Moore, adjourned a brief business session, she acknowledged Mrs. Tom Patterson, program chairman.

Mrs. Charles O'H. Horne, program leader for the afternoon, presented Judge Dink James, who gave a summary of the development of the Presbyterian denomination in North Carolina.

The speaker returned his listeners to the reformation era in Europe, emphasizing the impact that such dynamic leaders as John Calvin and John Knox had upon the denomination even centuries later.

"While the Presbyterian church thrived in Maryland, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey as early as 1630," said the speaker, "North Carolina Presbyterians think of 1740 as their origin."

Judge James called familiar family names of early contributors to Pitt County Presbyterianism, some of whom were ancestors of present club members. The current expansion efforts of the Presbyterian church through its mission churches in Pitt County is a tribute to the denomination.

Judge and Mrs. Dink James were the invited guests for the meeting.

Dr. Petterson Is Speaker

Dr. Donald R. Petterson of the Geography Department was the speaker at a meeting of the Greenville Branch, American Association of University Women, at the Alumni House on Monday evening.

Dr. Kathleen Stokes, president of the branch, introduced the speaker, and told of his having spent several years in Africa.

Dr. Petterson gave a detailed description of the physical features of the Congo, the country about which he lectured. He said that it is as large as the part of the United States east of the Mississippi River. It is a large river basin with hills and mountains rising from the Congo River is the chief means of transportation. He mentioned the minerals—copper, uranium, cobalt, gold, and diamonds—and the valuable woods that are found in the Congo.

The population, numbering about 15 million, is heterogeneous, with different races and levels of society. The white people, chiefly Belgians, form about three-tenths of one per cent. Until last summer, they were the rulers with charge of teaching, administration, and commerce.

Dr. Petterson believes that freedom has been acquired too suddenly in the Congo. The people have not been sufficiently trained, educated, or prepared for self-government. Furthermore, the struggle for independence was a revolt which left power in the hands of a military man, who is not responsible to the electorate.

During the business session, Mrs. Marguerite Perry, chairman of the Foreign Study Scholarship Fund, read a letter from Miss Jane Murray, the most recent recipient of the fund. Miss Murray is studying music in Munich, Germany and rooming with Miss Barbara Harris, the recipient of the scholarship two years ago.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Miss Lillah Gaut, Mrs. David Proctor, Mrs. Helen Snyder, and Mrs. Estelle A. Striplin.

Will 'Cooperate' On Own Terms

Soviet officials have made it clear now that the implication Premier Khrushchev made at the U.N. General Assembly has become part of Soviet policy: Russia is interested in cooperating toward easing international tension only if other nations are willing to do it Russia's way!

At the outset of the disarmament debate, the Soviet representative has declared his nation is willing and anxious to renew negotiations. He was careful, however, to add the stipulation that the Soviet Union would feel free to withdraw its representatives from such talks if Western nations continued to insist on proposals that did not reach Soviet approval.

On numerous occasions in the past the United States has insisted on some show of good faith on the part of the Soviet Union before entering into negotiations pointing toward easing international problems. In some instances the U.S. has been criticized by other Western allies for taking such a stand. From a practical standpoint, it appears essential that the United States continue to stand by this position.

It should not be difficult for other nations to see from this latest Soviet statement—considered against the background of Khrushchev's position during his U.N. visit—that Russia is primarily interested in removing every obstacle which remains between it and its goal of global domination.

Its primary interest is not in easing international tension, but in having its own way in world affairs.

Even the emerging nations of the world which have taken a neutral position between the Eastern and Western blocs have been able to see this in recent Soviet declarations. While these new nations may not yet be willing to place themselves squarely beside the United States in the cold war, neither are they willing to become a satellite under Soviet domination. India and others among the better established nations of the neutral bloc apparently are becoming more suspicious, more afraid of the Moscow intent and thus have become more impressed with the position the United States has taken.

If the Soviet Union is willing to discuss international problems only if its proposals will be adopted, there is certainly little to be gained by representatives of the East and West meeting to consider means of solving these problems.

This position now openly taken by the Soviet Union, it seems to us, supports the U.S. position that the Soviets have not in the past negotiated in good faith for the easing of international tension and are not likely to until a change of attitude gains the upper hand in Moscow.

Only Right That They Should Answer Charge

Several months ago most people thought they had heard the last of the TV quiz show scandal, but now some of the big names in the scandal are being called to answer to the courts on perjury charges.

The big winners caught up in the net of getting help on questions, winning money and attracting audiences found themselves free of violating any laws so far as their activities in connection with the TV appearances were concerned. Those connected with the fixing of quiz programs were dealt with by the individual television networks.

Now those who told conflicting stories to grand juries on different occasions while the fixing of programs was being exposed find themselves on the hot seat again.

It is only right that these individuals should be called to answer the charges of perjury for their conflicting testimonies before grand juries in 1958 and in 1960. Though their acceptance of help in assuring the "fix" on television programs apparently violated no written law, they certainly violated the law if they offered false testimony before grand juries.

The "fixing" of quiz programs on TV is serious enough in itself, but the matter of committing perjury before grand juries strikes at much more basic things in our system of justice.

Lodge Getting Into Deep Water

By James Marlow
WASHINGTON (AP)—The statements of Henry Cabot Lodge, No. 2 man on the Republican presidential ticket, are getting his personal attention over and beyond the usual requirements.

For instance: what he has had to say about a Negro in the Cabinet and about the legality of the U2 spy-plane case. He was back on the Cabinet-Negro theme again Tuesday.

On Oct. 12 in Harlem he said there should be a Negro in the Cabinet and added it is "part of our program" if Vice President Richard M. Nixon wins the presidency and "it is offered as a pledge."

This was hardly the kind of remark which would exhilarate white Southerners at a time when Nixon was extremely anxious to induce a large chunk of the Democratic South to vote Republican.

The next day Nixon toned down his running mate's statement by saying he would choose a Cabinet based on ability and not on race or creed. And Lodge, speaking that next day in the South, said Cabinet jobs should go to capable people, regardless of race.

He said picking a Cabinet was something for the president to handle but that he himself would favor a Negro in the Cabinet. Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic presidential candidate, said Lodge was talking "racism in reverse."

Last Sunday Nixon and Lodge met in Connecticut but the New York Times said they failed to eliminate entirely "their policy differences over appointment of a Negro to the Cabinet."

Lodge said the article in the Times had been a work of imagination.

Tuesday Lodge returned to the subject and predicted that a Negro would be appointed to the Cabinet if Nixon wins. He made this statement in Albany, N.Y., just as Nixon was in the Deep South, at Miami, making a campaign speech. Nixon said when asked about Lodge's latest statement: "I have made no commitments, if elected, I will appoint the best man."

Lodge got into an argument with Kennedy Oct. 8 about a statement made by Lodge in a TV interview Sept. 18.

Lodge was asked: "Relative to the Soviet Union, do you think we have as much prestige and as much influence in the world as we had eight years ago?"

The transcript of the program quoted Lodge as saying in reply: "Let me just point to the U2 case. Now you might say that if there was a case where we didn't have the law on our side, it was the U2 case."

The U2 plane was forced down over Russia last May.

Kennedy remembered that Lodge TV interview of Sept. 18. And in his Oct. 7 TV debate with Nixon, Kennedy quoted Lodge as conceding that this country did not have the law on its side in sending the plane over the Soviet Union.

But Lodge said Kennedy "completely misstated my position on the U2 case." He first said it was a questioner on the TV show who suggested the United States did not have the law on its side, and that he was merely repeating the words of the questioner.

Kennedy, contending he had quoted Lodge accurately, produced the question and answer from the transcript.

Lodge said the "you" referred to his interrogator when he said "now you might say that if ever there was a case where we didn't have the law on our side it was the U2 case."

He contended he never had expressed a personal opinion on the legality of the U2 flights.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
CONCERNING PREACHING
A minister speaking recently before a group of fellow ministers had this piece of advice to offer: "Either put more fire into your sermons—or vice versa."

We wonder sometimes as we partake of tasteless food how some people can take the wonderful food we have today and render it almost inedible. Likewise we should wonder every time we hear a dull sermon how anybody could possibly be guilty of such an outrage. To be sure, it takes many hours of consecrated work to produce an effective sermon, or an effective address of any kind. But the material is at hand if we only have the sense to use it. Just as it is a crime of major proportions to take good food and spoil it by poor culinary procedure, so it is a sin before God to take His gracious message of love and redemption and make out of it a dull disquisition on nothingness.

Pity the poor preacher. He has to please all kinds of people, to be on the alert all the time, to be up to date and yet to hold fast to eternal truths. There is no group in the world who work harder than ministers and who frequently see so little result from their efforts. But there are results which the Most High knows and which help them to put fire into their sermons. And if they can't do this, then counsel them to put their sermons into the fire.

THE UNITED WAY

The Objective

By DON SCHLIENZ

Oct. 31 And Foresight

Immediately after Halloween 1959, the writer prepared some column notes for use prior to Halloween 1960.

The notes were placed in a desk drawer, almost one year ago, and today they floated to the top ready for action.

With a year of ripening, these thoughts on Halloween must be pretty deep stuff; because ordinarily my tongue and typewriter work on a sort of extemporaneous basis.

Obviously it's impractical and impossible and improbable that a meeting of parents be called to lay down some ground rules for Trick-or-Treaters.

It is likewise far-fetched to look around for a Trick-or-Treat czar to write a rule book. But here are some suggestions prepared when experiences of that one-night-of-the-year were in vivid memory:

(1) Homes prepared to extend a welcome to the little people should have their front lights or carport lights turned on; that way, children can avoid the grouches.

(2) Age of the trick-or-treaters should be limited by mutual agreement to twelve years or under; accompanied by one adult; maybe offspring of two or three families can travel in a pack.

(3) Tie up the family dog.

(4) Working hours should run between sundown and 8:30 p.m. (Even so, it means late hours for some of the tots.)

(5) For safety's sake, a flashlight should be in the crowd.

(6) For goodness' sake, don't both parents go out to escort their small fry; leave someone at home to meet other guests.

And while we're on the Halloween bit, it's as well to remember there'll be another crowd of visitors on the street that night. That would be the young people asking pennies, nickles and dimes for United Nations Children Fund.

It's to their credit that these youngsters are not asking anything for themselves, but for the hungry, the sick, the forgotten children in other lands.

They aren't asking much because through UNICEF a very little can go a long way. Last year the young canvassers collected something over $300.

Still another note to prove October 31 is going to be a busy night.

Junior and senior high school students in the country are being invited to "street dance" at the local Moose Lodge parking lot, between 8:00 and 11:00 p.m.

If the weather's bad, the dance will be held in the lodge auditorium. Elsewhere in the paper will be found more information on the affair.

When Sputnik provoked such a hue and cry for more and better engineers, mathematicians, and scientists we applauded the eruption of concern. Certainly, a technological society needs plenty of well-trained technical people. At the same time, however, we were worried about an over-emphasis on physical science to the neglect of the humanities and social studies.

The survey reported above vividly demonstrates how we need to improve our education for citizenship just as badly as we need to increase the production of competent scientists. Perhaps, right now the need for the former is greater than the need for the latter.

The National Civic Review commented on the steel company survey in its September issue. We think they state the problem brilliantly: "How can we ever expect to win the war of ideologies if we fail to mass produce enlightened citizens?"

As the 1960-1961 school year settles into its customary rut, this question deserves searching thought by educators and laymen alike.

Other Editors Saying... Petering Out?

(Waukegan, Ill., News-Sun)
Now that the United States has hung a few satellites in the sky, the hubbub over the shortcomings in our educational system seems to be petering out.

In case you are one of those who today are less concerned than you were when the Russians beat us to the punch with their Sputnik 1, here's something to mull over.

The Taxpayers Assn. of New Mexico has reported the results of an extensive analysis made by a major steel company among 3,500 of its management personnel (supposedly well-educated people). The findings are shocking:

1. Eighty-seven per cent had no clear idea what kind of government the U. S. Constitution sets up.

2. Seventy-five per cent could not pick an outstanding Republican from among five men (four of whom were Democrats).

3. Seventy-nine per cent did not know that the Supreme Court is independent in our constitutional system.

4. Sixty-six per cent had no idea what is meant by separation of powers.

5. Fifty-five per cent did not know how Federal laws are passed.

6. Forty-seven per cent think Capitol Hill is the location of the White House.

7. Thirty-two per cent think Sate Nayburn is a Republican.

Need we go on? If you're not appalled by now then there's something drastically wrong with you too.

When Sputnik provoked such a hue and cry for more and better engineers, mathematicians, and scientists we applauded the eruption of concern. Certainly, a technological society needs plenty of well-trained technical people. At the same time, however, we were worried about an over-emphasis on physical science to the neglect of the humanities and social studies.

Little More Than A Gesture

By ELMER ROESSNER
Cutting off United States goods to Cuba, excepting foods and medicines, is little more than a gesture.

Shipments of goods had dwindled to a trickle by the first of this month. Value was estimated at between 10 and 15 per cent of the flow a year ago.

The chief reason is that United States sellers demanded cash on the barrelhead.

American sellers were mindful of the grab policy of the Castro regime. It seemed less than prudent to ship goods to Cuba if they risked "nationalization" when they arrived.

Furthermore, the foreign trade restrictions imposed by the Castro government made it doubtful that the United States vendor could get his money even if the goods were not nationalized.

CULTIVATING THE CUSTOMER
In addition, many U.S. industries have been declining to sell to the Cuban government because such action may cause them to lose sales in the United States. For example, machine tooling companies have been reluctant to sell replacement parts to Cuba for the oil refineries that Castro seized from American companies. Such a sale might result in an industry-wide blacklist for the vendor.

Even companies not in danger of being put on an industrial blacklist have been reluctant to sell because of the danger of being put in the position of "trading with the enemy."

Those companies that were willing to sell, however, have insisted on payments through irrevocable letters of credit.

These operate this way: The Cuban buyer, usually the government itself, deposits the purchase price in branches of Canadian banks in Cuba. The branches thereupon issue irrevocable letters of credit to the area where the goods are ordered.

When the shipper gives the bank evidence that goods have been shipped, the bank pays the value of the letter of credit to the seller.

WHAT CUBA NEEDS
A German ship that left New York September 23 for Havana listed these items in her cargo: 398 cases of trucks and parts; tires and tubes; templates, electrical equipment, chemicals, insecticides, raw materials for plastics, roller bearings, some sugar mill machinery, some petroleum products and some vitamins.

Cuba is short of U.S. dollars because we have cut off purchases of sugar, because tourist spending is almost nil, and because dollars were shipped out of the country or put in hiding as Castro grabbed

Futile Island Debate

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
COPYRIGHT, 1960, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

It is ludicrous that the most fiery debate in the present campaign should develop over the islands of Matsu and Quemoy. Senator Kennedy raised the issue as a passing remark; Vice President Nixon grabbed at it. Senator Kennedy's "Irish" rose and he grew obstinate, even accusing Vice President Nixon of being trigger happy. Vice President Nixon tried to establish that Senator Kennedy did not know what he was talking about.

May I make the observation that Senator Kennedy, if elected President, will not surrender Matsu and Quemoy but will be governed by the developments in our relations with Soviet Russia. May I also observe that if only Matsu and Quemoy stand in the way of a solution of all outstanding questions between Soviet Russia and the United States, a way will be found to handle that situation, should Nixon be President.

In a word, this matter is being exaggerated out of all reality. But why? What Kennedy says is that we shall defend Formosa and the Pescadores but not Matsu and Quemoy. The reason he gives is that Formosa and the Pescadores are mentioned in our treaty; Matsu and Quemoy are not mentioned.

Nixon makes the point that if, at this time, we make a surrender of territory to Soviet Russia or to Red China, our entire structure of defense with allies and associates collapses. Kennedy complains that our prestige is low, the Vice President contends that if we surrender these islands our prestige in the world will dissipate itself to zero.

This is a condensation of the argument. As I am more familiar with this particular field of China and the relations of China to the United States than either Senator Kennedy or Vice President Nixon, having devoted all of my adult life to it, I can say that Nixon's views are correct.

If the Red Chinese get one inch of territory, they will imperil Formosa, the Philippines and Japan and we shall find ourselves in a Far Eastern war beyond question. Matsu and Quemoy mean nothing; surrender means everything.

The Red Chinese had no prestige, no strength, no impudence until they defeated the United States in Korea. At that moment every nation in the east of Asia had to adjust its policy to meet the rising power of Red China. That country embarked on making the Chien Lung Line the western and southern boundary of China. This has meant the seizure of Tibet, the infiltration into Ladakh, an area of Kashmir, the penetration into Nepal and peril to Assam and Sikkim.

This means that Red China seeks to extend itself until it controls areas down into the Bay of Bengal. India would be reduced to a fief of Red China and would have to fight for its existence.

Red China has established a hegemony over North Korea and North Vietnam and has weakened the remaining nations of which used to be French Indochina, Burma and Malaya are in peril.

There are some who believe that Red China will extend itself northward as well, which would mean the establishment of a hegemony over Mongolia and over some areas of Russian Turkestan. Those who have this hope in mind anticipate a war between Soviet Russia and Red China.

This is a futile speculation. Who can tell what the order of events will be?

But this anyone well experienced in Far Eastern affairs can say: Surrender an inch to Red China and the demand will be for everything. Chinese of all kinds are so accustomed to dealing with strong Westerners that when they meet a weak one, they kick him all over the place. I witnessed that in 1926 and 1927 in the Yangtze Valley when the British were pushed out of the Treaty Ports, but the French and Japanese took their time about it. The British thought that they could accomplish something constructive by a soft policy; they suffered an economic boycott.

Senator Kennedy has a tiger by the tail and he would be (Continued on page eight)

NEW YORK (AP) — Gold shares reported to greater heights in response to the soaring price of bullion in London but the rest of the stock market was mixed in quiet trading early this afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was unchanged at 208.90 with the industrials off .10, the rails up .10 and the utilities unchanged.

Some of the gold stocks ran up more than 2 points to their highest prices in years. Meanwhile Wall Street demonstrated extreme caution about the economic and political implications as many of the pivotal issues showed little or no change.

Coppers, however, moved ahead nicely. Oils drifted off. Steels, autos, rails, chemicals and drugs were mixed.

Changes of most key stocks were from fractions to about a point. Popular market averages do not include the gold shares so their strength was not reflected in these barometers.

The gold stocks advanced on a broad front. At one phase, Dome Mines was up close to 3 points. Ahead more than 2 were Homestake, McIntyre Porcupine and U.S. Smelting.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 1.62 to 585.39. Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds were higher.

Houk Appointed Yanks' Manager

NEW YORK (AP)—Ralph Houk, a 41-year-old onetime second string catcher, was named manager of the New York Yankees today succeeding Casey Stengel.

The contract was for one year at Houk's request.

Stengel, who guided the Yankees to 10 American League pennants and 7 world championships in 12 years, was released by the Yankees Tuesday because of his age.

The elevation of Houk, a Yankee coach since the 1958 season, was announced at a noon press conference.

Dan Topping, co-owner of the Yankees, made the announcement in the presence of General Manager George Weiss and Assistant General Manager Roy Harney. Stengel was present.

No announcement was made on the expected reorganization of the Yankee front office. Weiss, 65, is slated to retire as general manager and step upstairs as chairman of the board of directors.

He will be replaced by Hamey, 52, a longtime Yankee career man who defected briefly to the National League. Jack White, former Yankee ticket manager, is expected to be named assistant general manager.

Houk said he would retain Ed Lopat and Frank Crosetti on the coaching staff and name a third member later.

Scrapsketches And Modern Art Shown

Scrapsketches and modern art were the focal points in the new exhibition which opened this week at the Greenville Art Center.

The scrapsketches, an original craftwork by Miss Hilda Lanier Ogburn of Greensboro, have attracted considerable attention at the art center. The artist does most of her work in oils and watercolors.

Miss Ogburn was the first director of the Greenville Federal Art Gallery during the W. P. A. days and was technical advisor of the N.C. Federal Art Project.

In her scrapsketches, Miss Ogburn uses scraps of material to picture everyday scenes in life. Those on exhibition at the art center center around life of the southern Negroes, hanging out a wash, crossing the street, and "Doing Nothing."

Mrs. Gordley, who has previously delivered a series of art lectures at the center and now teaches a weekly class there, has eight oil

Nobel Prize Shared By Australian And Briton

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — An Australian, Prof. Frank MacFarlane Burnet, and a Briton, Prof. Peter Brian Medawar, were awarded the 1960 Nobel Prize for medicine today.

The winners of the $43,627 prize were selected in a two-hour session by the Royal Swedish Academy.

The five annual Nobel prizes are awarded in fields of medicine, physics, chemistry, literature and peace work, and stem from the fortune left by the late Alfred Nobel, inventor of dynamite.

Burnet and Medawar were awarded the 1960 prize for medicine jointly for the discovery of acquired immunological tolerance, said the official citation of the awarding body.

The two noted medical researchers have solved one of the major obstacles for transplantation of tissues from one body to another.

Burnet is director of the Walter and Eliza Hall Institute for Medical Research in Melbourne, Australia.

Medawar is professor of zoology and comparative anatomy, University College, London.

The Caroline Institute's citation of the award said: "Transplantation of tissues from one part of the body to another does not present any particular difficulties — the graft usually heals easily. Exchange of tissues between different individuals is a problem of a total different order and for the following reasons. All the body's cells and tissues carry a certain immunological pattern. Individual patterns show the same variability as fingerprints and can equally well serve to identify their owners. The differences between such patterns are too subtle to be demonstrable by any known chemical methods but they are readily recognized by the extremely sensitive immunity apparatus. If, therefore, a foreign pattern is introduced with grafted tissue, it is immediately identified as foreign, and an immune reaction is elicited. After about two weeks the graft, which might have healed in the meantime, is demarcated and rejected. Only genetically closely related individuals, such as identical twins or mice of the same highly inbred line, carry sufficiently similar patterns to accept each others tissues.

"Graft reactions were first clearly recognized in the field of experimental tumor research. Later the problem was studied systematically by Medawar on grafts of normal tissues and the immunological nature of the phenomenon was clearly demonstrated."

When, in 1949, Burnet attempted the formulation of a general theory on the mechanism of immunity, the graft reactions served more or less as his starting point. Apparently it is of vital importance that the body's own tissues do not induce reactions, while it is equally important that the defense mechanisms are promptly alerted by the intrusion of foreign substances.

'Sinking Sensation' In Long Beach Nearly Over

By JOHN FLYNN

THIS 1926 FIRE TRUCK . . . has been on display in Ayden since Fire Prevention Week. Fire Chief Tillman Chauncey, pictured on the truck, said the truck was one of the first ever owned by the town. Volunteer firemen would like to restore the truck to use again.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—For years downtown Long Beach has been slowly sinking—and putting up walls to hold off the ocean. But this subsidence may stop soon, city officials say, because the palm tree-shaded parks, office buildings sites and broad streets now rest on water instead of air. And it's about time, they say, because one building worth $22 million has dropped 27 feet since the 1930s.

They blame the oil wells. For years hundreds of them have been pumping out the black gold from an abnormally shallow deposit. The sandy earth was left with nothing to beef it up. The surface began subsiding into the shape of a giant bowl.

The center and deepest part is under Long Beach's bustling harbor. The shoreline forms one of the bowl's edges.

As the earth settled, pipelines were pinched off, storm drains and sewers disrupted, railroad tracks buckled and buildings cracked.

Most folks just waited and Eleven public holidays a year are celebrated in Japan, during which all banks and most businesses close.

hoped the sinking would stop. But some decided it wouldn't stop while millions of gallons of oil and large deposits of natural gas were being removed. The only remedy, they said, was repressurization.

After extensive legal work, the city started a few years ago pumping sea water into the ground. To date, 250 million barrels have gone through perforated pipes into the sandy soil. In the last year the injection has averaged 370,000 barrels a day.

B. N. Hoffmaster, chief harbor engineer, looked at his charts Monday and announced: "Subsidence has stopped in some areas and has been greatly slowed in others in the last 2 1/2 years."

An annual survey shows land sinkage as been virtually eliminated in the downtown area. The giant bowl is several sizes smaller, leaving the harbor the main trouble spot. Here too, subsidence has been drastically cut. The 1959 study indicated the center—where one firm spent $6 million on dikes—was sinking at the rate of one foot a year. It's half that now.

"If all goes well and plans work out the way we hope they will," said Charles L. Vickers, general manager of the port, "we will be in real good shape to completely eliminate subsidence by a year from now, and possibly as early as next July."

Students Miss Money Worries

By REINHOLD G. ENSZ MOSCOW (AP)—Money is one thing the Asians, Africans and Latin Americans attending Moscow's new Friendship University don't have to worry about.

The students told foreign newsmen touring the university Tuesday that the Soviet government pays the plane fares to and from Moscow. They get an initial 3,000 rubles to buy a winter wardrobe. Room and tuition are free. And they say they get a monthly allowance of 900 rubles—the pay of an average Soviet factory worker—to cover food and incidentals.

The ruble is valued officially at 25 cents but 10 cents is considered a more realistic rate.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev announced during his tour of Indonesia last February that the university would be established for students from the three underdeveloped continents. After considerable fanfare, the institution opened Oct. 1 with a student body of about 300, including 65 Soviet students specializing in foreign languages. Soviet officials say the enrollment ultimately will total 500 from 65 countries.

Some of the foreign students said their home governments tried to stop them from attending.

"Eleven wanted to come from my country," but only I made it," Joseph Sankona, 25, of Cameroon reported. "Our government didn't want us to go."

Sankona said that he escaped from his West African homeland by getting permission to fly to Togo, and the Soviet consulate there helped him fly to Moscow.

Several students said they had come to Moscow instead of seeking education in the West because of fear of racial problems at Western universities.

Those interviewed included students from Zanzibar, Sierra Leone, Chad, Japan, Ceylon, Cameroon, Kenya and Mexico.

The university offers a five-year course, and the foreign students spend most of the first year studying Russian. Asked if he found it difficult, Khamis Haji of Zanzibar answered, "Russian isn't any harder than English."

Awoke To Find Husband Slain

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Mrs. Lillie Mae Todd, 35, said she had a nightmare in which Indians were chasing her and she awoke clutching a pistol. Her husband was dead in the bed beside her, two bullets in his head.

"I dreamed I was fighting Indians," Mrs. Todd told police.

The North Charleston woman, accompanied by her 5-year-old daughter, called police from a restaurant near her home at 3:40 a.m. Wednesday. Officers went to her home and found the body of her husband, Milton, 30, in the bed with two bullet holes behind his left ear.

Mrs. Todd had a .32 caliber pistol in her possession when she met police at the restaurant, police Capt. Silas B. Welsh said.

Mrs. Todd said she and her husband went to bed about 9 p.m. She said she dreamed they were in a tent and that Indians were prowling about, trying to get to her.

When she awoke, Mrs. Todd related, the pistol she habitually kept under her pillow was in her hand and her husband had been shot to death.

She was taken to the county jail and charged with murder. Dr. Phillip S. Cromer, county medical examiner, recommended that she be committed to the State Hospital in Columbia for a mental examination.

Todd was employed as a meter checker for the South Carolina Electric and Gas Co.

Neighbors told police they knew of no arguments between the couple during the seven months the couple had lived in the neighborhood.

TOYS FOR CHARITY

Residents of this area will have an opportunity to win free toys for their favorite children's charity under a unique Christmas Gift Party Plan sponsored jointly by the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., 1809 Dickinson Ave., and A. C. Gilbert Co., toy manufacturer.

Details of the plan are as follows: The local Pepsi-Cola bottler will receive, along with his Christmas Holiday display material, a number of A. C. Gilbert toys, including American Flyer electric trains, erector sets, microscope sets, telescope sets and lab technicians sets.

Ballots will be distributed in retail food outlets and other stores. Pepsi-Cola is sold. These ballots give the public an opportunity to vote for a favorite local children's hospital or charity.

Ballots are to be deposited in boxes placed in retail outlets and the winning charities, by virtue of polling the highest number of votes, will receive a free gift of A. C. Gilbert toys. Votes will be counted and the winning charities notified in time for Christmas delivery by the local bottler.

According to scheduled plans, the Pepsi-Cola-A. C. Gilbert Christmas Gift Party, will get underway shortly after Thanksgiving in this area.

Chicod Senior Class Is Off On New York Trip

By LINDA EVANS

CHICOD — Chicod High School's senior class Monday began the long-awaited and well-earned dream of each senior class — the senior trip.

Plans include visits to Washington, D. C., and New York City before returning to Chicod Saturday. Chaperones for the excursion are Mrs. Katherine Edwards, the class sponsor, and Norman Porter.

We all miss the seniors, but don't wish they were here. . . We wish we were there!

County-Wide Meet
Chicod High served as host Oct. 12 to the Pitt County chapter of the North Carolina Education Association in its first meeting of the 1960-61 term.

Dr. A. C. Dawson, executive secretary of the NCEA and Atlantic Christian College graduate, spoke on "Knowing Your Professional Organization."

Mrs. Katherine Edwards, Chicod teacher and president of the Pitt County chapter, presided at the hour-long session. The devotion was presented by the Rev. Floyd B. Cherry.

Principal Kelly Wallace of Chicod extended a "hearty welcome" to attending guests and members and Miss Judy Corbett, a Chicod student teacher, provided the meeting's special music.

FHA Rally

Chicod High will be in charge of registration at the Pitt County Future Homemakers of America rally scheduled for Ayden High School Oct. 20.

A reported highlight of the coming gathering is a discussion entitled "Youth Wants To Know," led by Sam D. Bundy, principal of Farmville High School. Planning to attend from the Chicod FHA chapter are: Evelyn Smith, Linda Coward, Ida Lynn Harris, Carol Gaskins, Patricia Mills, Barbara Harris, Mary Smith, Carolyn Hathaway, Bel-sv Smith, Cheryl Sutton, Linda Evans, Dorothy Purser, Carolyn Stokes and Jackie Dixon.

Also attending will be Mrs. Lynn Sutton; Mrs. Carl S. Venters; Miss Jesse Ellis, student teacher in home economics; and Mrs. Betty Turner, chapter sponsor.

The Cagers
A general feeling of anticipation was rising around Chicod High as both the Hornets and Hornettes began warming up their respective basketball squads with initial practice sessions this week.

Coach Bob Howell and the student body are hoping for a successful season in Pitt County Conference warfare.

Salesmen?
Chicod is doing its part in the promotion of salesmen.

All CHS classes and organizations are selling everything from hosiery to fruit cakes.

Anyone can easily recognize a Chicod student. . . Just listen for someone saying:
"Could I interest you in a . . . ?"

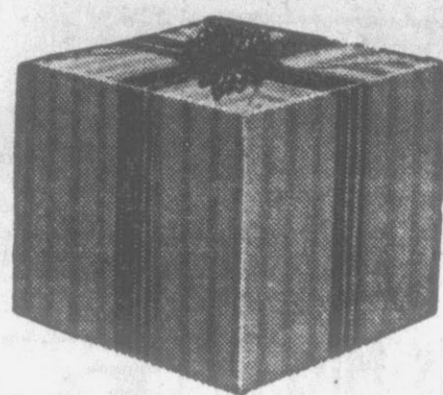

Chicod High's thought for the week:
Late to bed,
And early to rise;
Makes you saggy, draggy,
And baggy under the eyes.

Judge Loses Appeal And Right To Retain His Seat

RALEIGH (AP)— Judge Paul H. Strickland has lost an appeal to the State Supreme Court to keep his seat on the Dunn Recorder's Court bench.

The high court, in an opinion handed down Wednesday, ruled that the Harnett County Board of Elections had legal authority to order the recount which gave Woodrow Hill the Democratic nomination for the judgeship.

The first count from a June 25 runoff primary gave Strickland the decision by eight votes. The recount put Hill ahead by one — 1,172 to 1,171.

The high court acted on a split vote. Associate Justice William Bobbitt wrote the majority opinion concurred in by Justice Charles Higgins, Justices W. B. Rodman Jr., R. Hunt Parker, and E. B. Denny held to the majority view in a separate opinion.

A dissenting view was taken by Associate Justice Clifton Moore, with Chief Justice J. Wallace Winborne concurring.

Moore endorsed the stand taken by lawyers for Strickland, who contended that state law permits a county board to recount ballots only if there are errors in counting or tabulating votes, or filling out blanks on election returns.

Strickland's attorneys claimed that affidavits presented by Hill when the Harnett board ordered the recount did not allege such errors.

The majority opinion said the county board had authority to make the recount under a section of the law which says county boards shall judicially determine results of elections.

Defector Wants To Visit Home

Editor's Note — The following dispatch was delayed a day by error.

MOSCOW (AP)— Guy Burgess, the British diplomat who defected to the Soviet Union nine years ago, appeared unexpectedly at a Western party in Moscow Wednesday night and said he would like to go back to Britain for a holiday visit—but "only as long as I could be certain I could get back to the Soviet Union."

Burgess, who with Donald Maclean sneaked off from the British Foreign Office in 1951 and defected to the Soviet Union, appeared somewhat nervous when he was surrounded by Western journalists.

"Are you happy after 10 years?" he was asked.

"I am more happy after 10 years than I was after 5 years," he replied quickly but somewhat defensively.

He also said: "I have not taken Soviet citizenship. I am a British subject but I can't speak for Maclean."

Burgess said he had not had any contact with Bernon Michel or William Martin, the two American code clerks who left the United States in July and are now in the Soviet Union, where they have been granted Soviet citizenship. But again he added: "I can't speak for Maclean."

Burgess asserted several times he would not go back to Britain as long as the cold war is on. Questioned on the cause of the cold war, he retorted: "Ask the Americans."

He also said the British would not let him visit his homeland.

"They are more afraid of my going back than I am," he said. "Just think of the pressure the Americans would put on."

VENLO, Netherlands (AP) — Harry Holthuyzen waited on the steps of St. Martin's Roman Catholic Church Wednesday for his bride.

Toos had turned up at the church in her bedroom slippers. After a quick change she returned a bit breathless but wearing her wedding shoes.

Endorse Stand On Toothpaste

Bank Directors Told Presidential Candidates Resources At New Peak Agree: Issue Is Declining

WILMINGTON—Directors of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company heard reports this week of record high resources and substantial increases in deposits, loans and capital funds.

"Resources are at a new peak ago. This is a record for banks in the Southeast," Waldrop said. Deposits on Sept. 30 were $586 million as against $509 million on the same date last year; and loans were $343 million compared with $299 million a year ago.

Waldrop reported $1.5 million added to the bank's surplus during the third quarter. Capital and surplus now total $47,763,335, another record for banks in the Southeast, compared with $40,030,600 a year ago.

"With the growth in our deposits and loans and the expansion of our operations, it is essential that these capital funds be continually increased," he said.

The directors met in the bank's new six-story Wilmington building opened in August. The $1.5 million structure houses the main Wilmington operations and the headquarters of the International Department of Wachovia.

Attending from Greenville were Waldrop, senior vice president and director, and R.W. Howard, vice president.

The bankers toured the state port facilities prior to the meeting, at which Peter B. Rutlin, chairman of the bank's Wilmington board, reviewed the development of the state ports in recent years.

He told of plans of the Port Authority to expand the terminal facilities in both Wilmington and Morehead City and predicted continued increases in shipments in keeping with the economic growth of the Southeast.

Merger
The shareholders of Wachovia and Commercial National Bank of Kingston enthusiastically approved a plan of merger last Friday, the directors were told, and the banks were to seek approval of the consolidation today from the State Banking Commission. The merger must also be approved by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Commercial National has offices in Winston-Salem, Raleigh and Sea Level. Applications by Wachovia to establish two new offices, on South Tryon Street in downtown Charlotte and in the North Hills Shopping Center at Raleigh, will also be heard by the commission.

The directors declared a quarterly dividend of 12 1/2 cents per share payable Nov. 9 to shareholders of record at the close of business Oct. 25.

STRAW IN THE WIND
SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP)—Since 1940 students at Trade High School have taken a straw vote on each "presidential" campaign and have always picked the winner. This week they voted 863-426 in favor of Sen. John F. Kennedy over Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

"That means it will be at least Friday before they will be served, so the children will not go to school this week," Taylor told newsmen. "They will be on hand Monday morning."

The lawyer said he expects no trouble when the Indians enter the Dunn High School.

"It's our opinion that the majority of public opinion is definitely with the Indians, in Harnett County as well as across North Carolina and the nation," Taylor said.

"I am sure the people of Harnett County are going to respect orders of the court, just as we would if the order was against us."

Three Indian children staged a sit-in demonstration at the Dunn school for one week at the start of the school year. This was halted by a state court order restraining any interference with the school's operation.

The next step is a Federal Court hearing on whether to make permanent the temporary order signed last Monday by Judge Albert Reeves of Missouri. The hearing is set for Nov. 26 but Taylor said it probably will be held much sooner. He said lawyers on both sides probably will suggest a date; if they do not agree, he said, the court itself may set an earlier date.

The attorney for the school board, Robert E. Morgan, declined to speculate on board action. He declined comment himself until he has seen the order.

DISTILLED FROM GRAIN

NEW YORK (AP)—The 1960 presidential candidates, speaking Wednesday night at the annual Alfred E. Smith memorial dinner, agreed that religious bigotry is less of a factor in this year's election than it was in 1928 when it weighed heavily against Smith.

Both Vice President Richard M. Nixon, the Republican candidate, and Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic nominee, renounced the religious issue.

Francis Cardinal Spellman officiated at the dinner which honored the only Roman Catholic other than Kennedy to run for president. The $100-a-plate dinner, attended by 2,000 persons, raised funds for charities for people of all races and faiths.

Kennedy, first to speak, said: "I believe 1928 and 1960 may be very different. I do not believe the American voter of 1960 is the same as the American voter of 1928."

Smith, the Democratic nominee, was defeated by Republican Herbert Hoover in 1928.

Kennedy said he is confident that the judgment of the voters on Nov. 8 will "not be based on any extraneous issues" but on what is best for the country.

"When that happens," he added, "the bitter memories of 1928 will begin to fade."

Nixon, a Quaker, said in his speech that "religion should not be an issue and will not be an issue if we try to keep real issues before the American people."

Nixon added that he believes the times call for a leader who has faith in God and faith in the rights of man.

Both candidates drew loud applause for their remarks on the religious issue.

In addition to their serious comments on the religious issue, Kennedy and Nixon did some joking in their talks at the nonpolitical dinner. And they drew a lot of laughs.

Kennedy said he was glad that Cardinal Spellman had brought together amicably two political leaders "who are increasingly apprehensive about the November election, and who have long eyed each other suspiciously, both publicly and privately—Vice President Nixon and Governor Rockefeller." This was a reference to New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, a guest at the dinner, who once considered challenging Nixon for the Republican presidential nomination.

Nixon said he had been subjected to one of "the worst smears in American political history." He said he had read in the newspapers that Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro said the two men running for the U.S. presidency are a couple of beardless youths. "Now, I resent that," Nixon grinned. "I resent it because, as Sen. Kennedy well knows, after my first television debate, my makeup man said I had the worst beard since Sal Maglie—the baseball veteran who had a habit of not shaving on the day he was to pitch."

LONDON (AP)—An English lady—a titled lady—had a kind word Wednesday for Mr. Khrushchev.

"I don't think he's as bad as they make out," said the Countess of Home, wife of Britain's foreign secretary, Lord Home.

The countess met the Soviet premier when she accompanied her husband to the U.N. General Assembly in New York.

She told a party of women journalists that "they made a lot of his banging his hands, but most of the time he was doing it with a broad grin on his face."

Assembly Recess To Aid DeGaulle

PARIS (AP)—The National Assembly early today was recessed for 24 hours in a maneuver expected to clear the way for approval of President Charles de Gaulle's plan to give France an atomic striking force.

Opponents of the plan still had one weapon left—a censure motion against the government. But it was unlikely they would make the move.

De Gaulle himself displayed no concern about the outcome and was leaving Paris tonight on tour of southeastern France and a visit to Prince Rainier and Princess Grace of Monaco.

Balloting on a vote of confidence in the government was set for Monday.

Premier Michel Debre hurled the gauntlet at the opposition by cutting off debate on the plan for $1.2 billion force of atom bombers and rockets and calling for a vote of confidence.

Under parliamentary procedure of the Fifth Republic, the opposition has 24 hours to decide whether it wants to risk a censure motion. If it doesn't and the government wins the confidence vote Monday as expected, the bill goes to the Senate for minor amendments agreed to by Debre.

Doesn't Think He's Really Bad

LONDON (AP)—An English lady—a titled lady—had a kind word Wednesday for Mr. Khrushchev.

"I don't think he's as bad as they make out," said the Countess of Home, wife of Britain's foreign secretary, Lord Home.

The countess met the Soviet premier when she accompanied her husband to the U.N. General Assembly in New York.

She told a party of women journalists that "they made a lot of his banging his hands, but most of the time he was doing it with a broad grin on his face."

Phants At New Bern In Crucial Game

By JOHNNY HUDSON Reflector Sports Editor

Football battles between New Bern and Greenville have never been as fierce as the one expected to take place tomorrow night in New Bern. Both teams enter the game primed for "the kill".

The long-awaited contest, scheduled for the New Bern stadium, will pitting two of the strongest Eastern North Carolina prep powers meeting in a head-on-head contest with plenty at stake.

New Bern, currently in second place among Northeastern Conference competition, is undefeated for the season but starting tomorrow night, the rock-tough Bruins have a rugged road to travel.

The Phantoms from Greenville have their best opportunity in many a moon to become the conference kings. But the G-men were knocked from their top pedestal several weeks ago by Tarboro. A defeat at New Bern would destroy all remaining championship dreams.

The game will match power vs. deception. New Bern, running from its spanking new offense—the single-wingbanks on powers plays for the largest portion of acreage. With some fancy-running back in its lot, Greenville has a few more wrinkles in its offense.

The Phants are expected to have the edge in passing with Erskine Duff and Billy James geared to keep New Bern's defense loose. Alan McArthur, who is making a strong bid for All-State laurels, can also launch an accurate air bomb.

Cliff Rowe, an elusive tailback, handles most of the Bruin's passing. The club isn't billed as a strong passing club although they have scored a number of their touchdowns on the feared running pass.

Greenville coach Bud Phillips is hopeful his club will be up to the performance of last Friday night. In shellacking Elizabeth City 41-12, Phillips thinks it was his club's "best effort" of the season. "I hope we will be right for New Bern—we will have to be to beat them", stated Phillips following the Phants final day of rough work yesterday.

The head mentor reported that

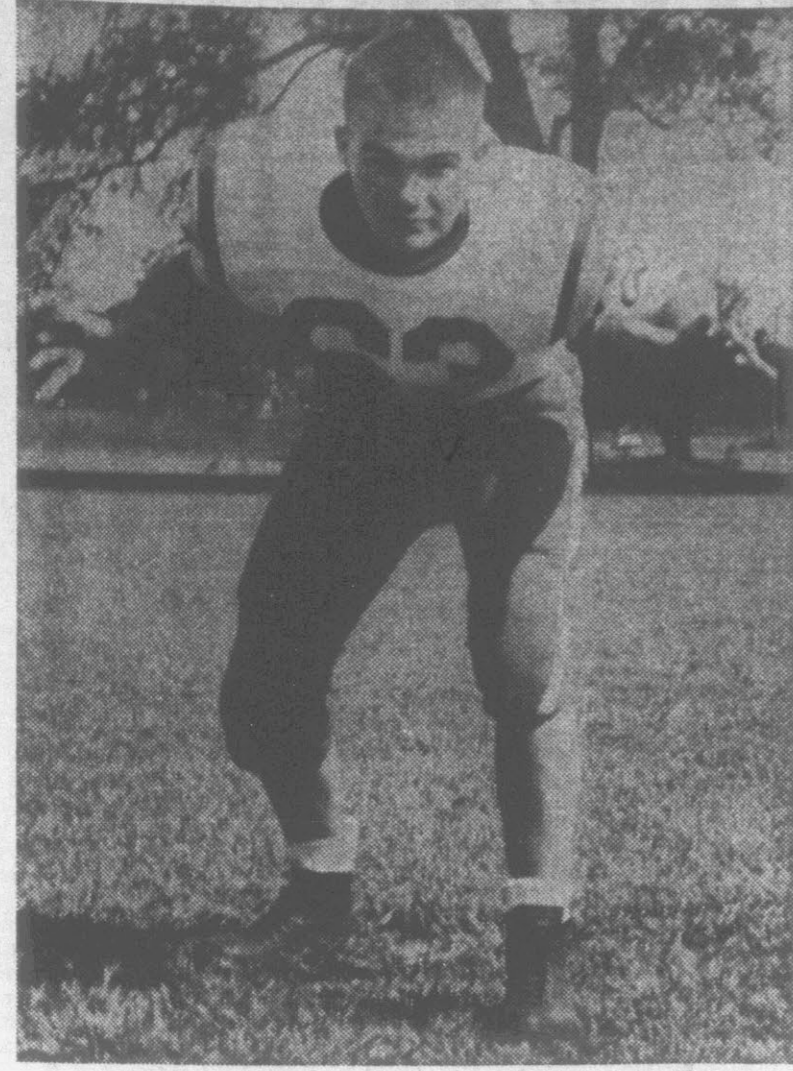

George Van Nortwick may miss the New Bern game due to an ankle injury. Other than the junior guard, Greenville will enter the crucial game in top condition. Many rumors had it that Greenville was pointing for New Bern the night it lost its zest in a 15-7 defeat by Tarboro. Phillips is also hopeful that this might be the answer.

The Bruins have been looking forward to this one for some time. Since whitewashing Jacksonville 27-0 on Sept. 30, New Bern has warmed up with two non-conference weaklings.

Little can be concluded from common foes, Greenville edged by Jacksonville 21-7 while the Bruins defeated the Cards 27-0. Against Washington, New Bern scored a 21-0 triumph and the Phants came rolling along two weeks later to paste a 34-0 licking on the same pack.

In other games, Jacksonville holds victories over Morehead City (14-6), Roanoke Rapids (32-6), Goldsboro (33-7), and Jones Central (34-12).

Greenville's victory column includes Ahsokie (19-0), Kinston (33-14) and Elizabeth City (41-12.)

RUGGED GUARD—Don Joyner will be in Greenville's starting lineup tomorrow night and hopes to assist in putting a road-block to New Bern's winning streak.

Howard Has Respect For Duke Blue Devils

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I didn't know ole Preacher had so many good players... Duke is the finest football team we've seen this year, either on the film or on the field."

"Preacher" is Clemson Coach Frank Howard's nickname for Duke's Coach Bill Murray. And the plain-spoken Howard was referring to his team's opponent in a Saturday headliner in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Howard, whose team is 3-1 overall—same as Duke, warned his boys they can't go to Durham (where Duke is located) "and dilly-dally around... If we do," he added, "they'll run us out of the place."

Duke leads the ACC with a 3-0 conference mark while Clemson (2-1) is third behind North Carolina State (3-1).

Another feature, Maryland's Saturday night visit to Wake Forest, should produce aerial fireworks at lighted Bowman Gray Stadium in Winston-Salem, N.C. The game will bring together a couple of quarterbacks who like pass—Norman Snead of Wake Forest and Dale Betty of Maryland.

Snead, the husky senior, is second in the conference on total offense with 466 mostly passing yards. Betty completed 12 of 16 passes in Maryland's 19-17 upset of Clemson last Saturday, including eight in a row. Two of Betty's passes went for touchdowns.

Hard-working South Carolina again drilled past dusk Wednesday preparing for Saturday's ACC battle, with North Carolina. The teams, who play in a State Farm game in Columbia, S.C., can count only one win between them. South Carolina Coach Warren Giese reported halfbacks Reggie Logan, Melvin Harris and Bill Cambrell looked good offensively. South Carolina has lost three straight. Meanwhile, the Tar Heels in Chapel Hill held a brief scrimmage to windup heavy drills for South Carolina. Guard Fred Mueller and halfback Jimmy Addison were used occasionally on the first unit.

North Carolina State polished its offense for Mississippi Southern without third unit fullback Ron Wojcicki, whose shoulder injury may keep him at home.

Tigers Seek New Club Manager

By DAVE DILES Associated Press Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP)—The Detroit Tigers are likely to have a manager signed to a three-year contract within the next 10 days. He's expected to be a man with big league managerial experience.

Rick Ferrell, the man who is screening the applicants, says nobody has any inside track to the job. Ferrell prefers "someone we can depend on in our rebuilding program."

So far there have been about 15 applicants and half a dozen of them now are "being seriously considered." Ferrell said he talked to most of them during the recent World Series.

John E. Fetzer, owner of the Tigers, will confirm Ferrell's choice. He wants to rid the club of what has been almost a dial-manager program over recent seasons.

Bill DeWitt, still employed by the Tigers at a $50,000-a-year salary, but ousted from control when Fetzer purchased the stock that gave him sweeping powers, has nothing to do with selecting the new field boss.

It was DeWitt who demoted Ferrell last spring. Ferrell was named acting general manager when John McHale quit the Tigers to become general manager of the Milwaukee Braves. Later the "acting" part of the title was removed.

DeWitt became president last October, made vast changes in the organizational structure and one of them was the removal of Ferrell's authority. Ferrell became assistant to the president.

So far as anyone knows, that's what he is now.

Louis Signs Name

NEW YORK (AP)—The wife of another former heavyweight champion walked up to ex-champ Joe Louis at a sports dinner Wednesday night.

"Mr. Louis," she said, "I'm Mrs. Jack Dempsey. My daughter would be very pleased to have your autograph."

Louis bent down and signed his name.

Ayden Risks Perfect Mark Friday

By LEONARD LAO Reflector Sports Writer

The Maroon and Gold of Ayden, High School host seventh place Contentnea tomorrow night in a Coastal Conference match. Ayden, who is currently resting on top of the conference standings, will be heavily favored over the visitors.

The Tornados have chalked up 5 conference victories without a loss, and are currently riding high on a seven game winning streak. If everything goes as planned, Contentnea should provide win number eight for the visitors.

In their seven victorious outings the Tornados have racked up a total of 191 points while holding their opponents to only three touchdowns and 18 points. This defensive feat is second only to unscored upon Beaufort, the team which holds down the runner-up spot to the Tornados.

Last week Ayden knocked off La Grange, who was cracked up to be one of the teams that were to give the Tornados a lot of trouble. The league leaders dropped La Grange by a 19-0 score to remain top men on the totem pole.

Louis, Schmeling Dine Together

By JIM KENSIL Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Joe Louis trust his famous right hand out from his shoulder—the same powerful right that destroyed Max Schmeling. Louis followed with his left—the same left that sent Schmeling to the ring floor more than 22 years ago.

The hands joined behind Schmeling's back, and Louis, the former heavyweight champion who once fought Schmeling with hate in his heart, said, "Great to see you, Max. You haven't put on any weight."

Schmeling, too, embraced Louis and said, "Nice to see you, too, Joe. You are looking great." The applause of the crowd in a hotel ballroom drowned out these comments spoken by Louis in a soft whisper and by Schmeling whose English is laced with the thick accent of his native Germany.

This is how they met Wednesday night, only a few miles from Yankee Stadium where Louis was kayoed by a scowling Schmeling on June 23, 1936, then came back mercilessly to knock out Schmeling—the hero of Hitler's prewar Germany—in 2 minutes, 4 seconds of the first round on June 22, 1938.

That was another night, though. That time it took a bitter challenge by Louis to bring Schmeling across the seas for a rematch. This time Schmeling, who holds the Hamburg franchise of an American soft drink company, came on his own.

He came to be with Louis along with Jimmy Braddock, the man Louis dethroned as heavyweight champ in 1937; along with Ezzard Charles, the ex-heavyweight champ who whipped an aging Louis who had once been his hero; along with Sugar Ray Robinson, the ex-welter and middleweight champ who knew Joe as a boy in Detroit; along with Louis' family, friends and other boxing associates.

The occasion was the annual dinner of the People-to-People Sports Committee Inc., a group dedicated to fostering international good will through athletics. As part of the festivities, Louis and 17 other athletes were honored for their service to sports.

The Louis-Schmeling meeting occurred on the TV show which will be seen nationally next Sunday, (NBC, 9:30 p.m., EST).

Bear Back Leads League Rushers

GREENSBORO (AP)—Hard-running Lee Farmer, Lenoir Rhyne's amazing fullback, completely dominates latest North State Conference individual football statistics.

The Canton senior, who weighs 186 pounds, played only slightly more than a half as his undefeated team whipped Guilford last Saturday.

Farmer leads in total offense with 748 yards in five games—340 yards better than the runner-up, Gene Worthington of Catawba, who has played six games.

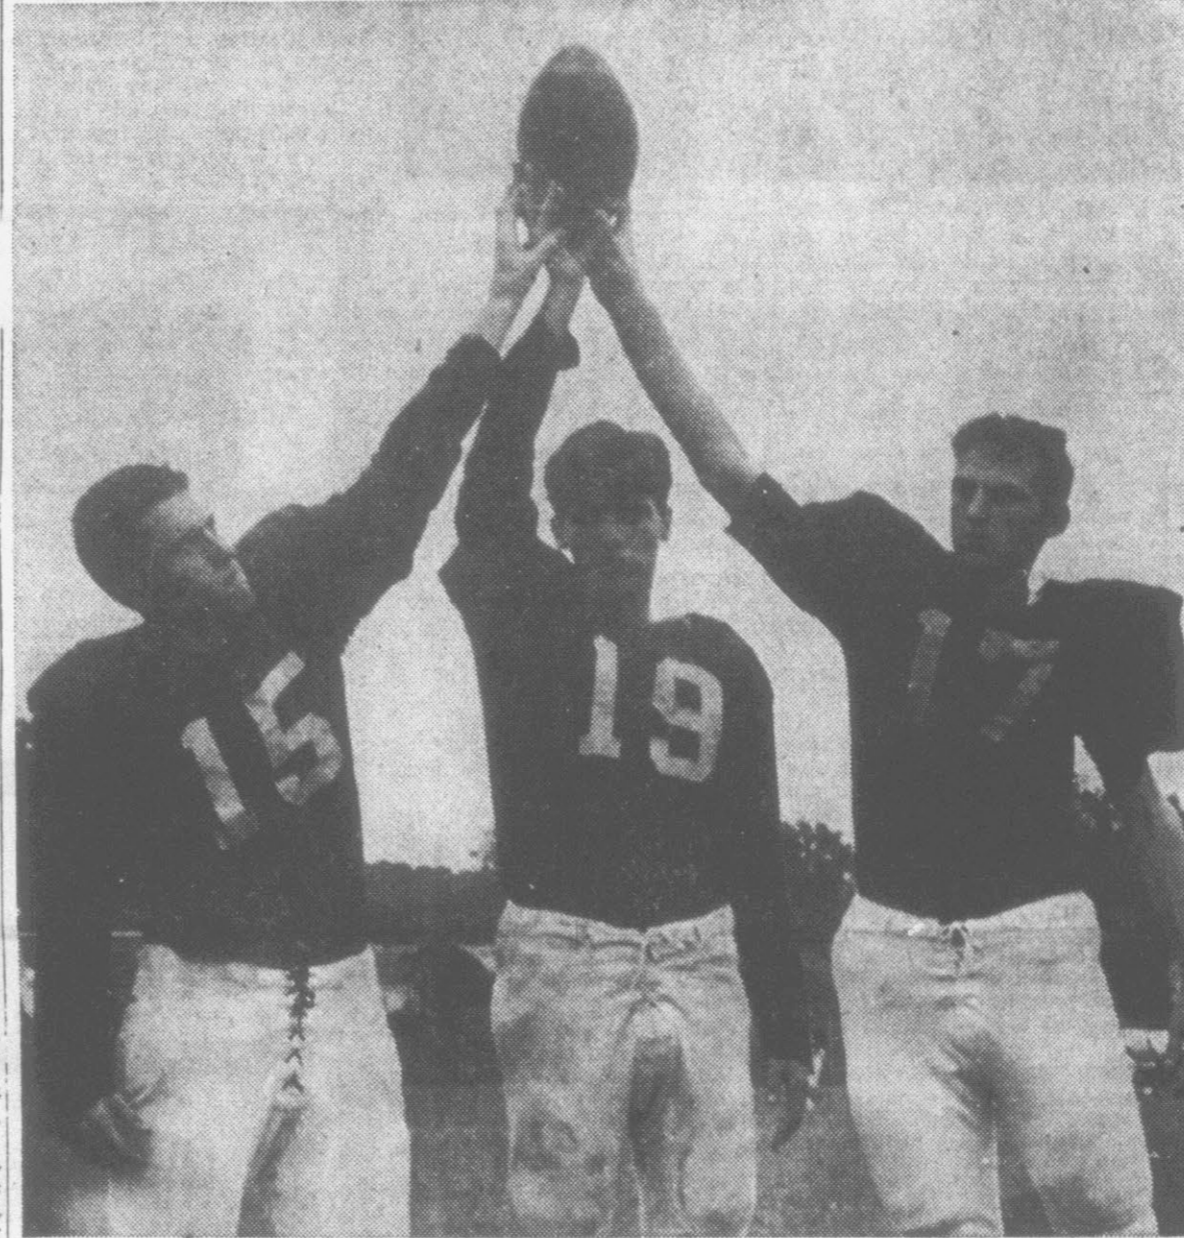

In rushing alone, Farmer has 433 yards for a 5.8-yard-per-try mark while Worthington also runs in this division. Worthington has 301 yards for a 4.1 average. Farmer has attempted 55 passes, completed 26 and accounted for 315 yards. Runnerup is Tommy Wilson of Appalachian with 24 completions of 61 tries and 310 yards.

The center of attraction in the Tornado attack is a 170 pound fullback by the name of Dennis "Dinky" Mills. The speedy Mills should prove to be a thorn in the side of Contentnea, who has only won one conference tilt since joining the league last year.

Another top notch performer in Coach Stuart Tripp's Ayden eleven is All-Conference tackle Donald Menter. According to the Tornado head mentor, Carmen is one of the most outstanding linemen in the Coastal Conference. Though he weighs only 170 pounds, Carmen is a fierce blocker as well as a rugged tackler, and should be a shoo-in to repeat on the All-Conference team this season.

Although the Tornados will be pre-occupied with Contentnea tomorrow night they will find it difficult to keep from looking forward to their next week's opponent, Beaufort. The Sea Dogs are also undefeated in Coastal Conference play, but have two tie

AYDEN FLANKERS... Nolan Norman (15), Bud McGlohon (19), and David McGlohon (17) will be set to help Ayden keep its undefeated record intact tomorrow. The Tornados lead the Coastal Conference with a 5-0 record.

Spahn Top Man In Annual Poll

NEW YORK (AP)—Warren Spahn of the Milwaukee Braves a 20-game winner for the 11th time, topped the balloting for the 1960 Associated Press Major League All-Star team selected today. Of the 192 baseball writers taking part in the annual poll, 188 named Spahn as the best left-handed pitcher.

The Braves dominated the voting with third baseman Eddie Mathews, outfielder Hank Aaron and catcher Del Crandall also named to the squad.

Others chosen were first baseman Bill Skowron and outfielder Roger Maris of the New York Yankees, second baseman Pete Runnels of the Boston Red Sox, shortstop Ernie Banks of the Chicago Cubs, outfielder Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants and right-handed pitcher Vernon Law of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Only four players repeated from last year's squad—Mathews, Banks, Mays and Aaron.

The balloting for second base honors produced the closest vote. Runnels polled 68 votes, Nellie Fox of the Chicago White Sox 60 and Bill Mazerowski of the Pittsburgh Pirates 56. Another tight race was for first baseman with Skowron edging Roy Sievers of the White Sox, 65 to 53.

Mays was the second highest vote-getter with 182. Law was next with 144 and then came Maris with 132. Banks had 111. Crandall 114, Mathews 83, Runnels 68, Skowron 65 and Aaron 55.

The best of the second team, in addition to Sievers and Fox: third base—Brooks Robinson, Orioles (60 votes); shortstop—Dick Groat, Pirates (68); outfield—Roberto Clemente, Pirates (54), Minnie Minoso, White Sox (46) and Tel Williams, Red Sox (36); catcher—Yogi Berra, Yanks (39), left-handed pitcher—Whitey Ford, Yanks (2) and right-handed pitcher—Ernie Broglio, Cards (28).

Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh credits the comebacks of Bob Friend, Bob Skinner, Roberto Clemente and Bill Mazerowski with having much to do with the Pirates' showing this season.

Farmville Bidding For Fourth Win Of Season In Homecoming Contest

Farmville's Red Devil grid team, winner of only one Coastal Conference game this season, hosts last place Vanceboro, winner of no conference tilts. Game time is set for tomorrow night at 8:00 on the Farmville field.

The Red Devils, fresh from a 45-0 drubbing by a strong Beaufort eleven, will be out to hand the visitors their sixth conference loss, and from the way things shape up, the Red Devils are favored to do just that.

The host team will throw a strong backfield with several break-away threats against Vanceboro. Leading the backfield attack for the Red Devils is halfback Danny Dilda. The fleet footed back does about half of the passing for the Red Devils, along with carrying his share of the running chores.

Another standout in the Farmville backfield is Jimmy Pollard. A halfback, Pollard has been out with various injuries most of the season, but he is expected to be in uniform tomorrow night against the Vanceboro club.

Quarterback Dean Oglesby has come a long way for the Red Devils in their seven previous games this season. Only a sophomore, Oglesby has improved his passing game along with developing the knack to call the right plays at the right time.

Still another backfield threat to the visitors is halfback Alec Corbett. Corbett has been alternating with Pollard in order that Coach Elbert Moye can get the services out of both of the fine runners.

Spearheading the forward wall play for the Red Devils have been J. Y. Monk, Moses Moye, Bob Eason, Mitchell Cannon, Dan Monk and Bob Avery. Probably the most threatening of this list is Cannon, a tackle.

Coach Moye will go into the contest with a total of 18 players, the most he has had in recent games.

Virginia Tech Coach Worried About Virginia

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Will the enemy attack principally by ground or by air?
That's the poser facing Virginia Tech Coach Frank Moseley this week as he prepares his defensively strong Techmen for their Saturday battle with arch-rival Virginia at Roanoke.

Tech, with its 3-2 record, will be highly favored over the Cavaliers whose 22-game losing streak is the longest in major college football. But Moseley is apprehensive just the same.

"They're too good to go on losing," he says.

Indications from Virginia Wednesday were that the Cavaliers may turn to the air again with sophomore flash Gary Cuzco doing the pitching at Victory Stadium Saturday afternoon. At least, that was the word from coach Dick Voris, who had Cuzco passing frequently at practice.

Moseley, meantime, split Tech's practice time between offensive and defense with Allen Whittier, Don Oakes and Don Vaught looking especially sharp in the defensive session.

Elsewhere on Southern Conference practice fields:
VMI, which plays Boston College Saturday, got a look at BC plays as executed by the "rat" team, then turned to offense with Howard Dyer leading a practice attack on BC defenses.

William and Mary concentrated on goal line offense, with Sloy, Cox and Barton drawing praise from the coaches for their running and play-calling and halfback Jim Porach starring on pass defense.

Davidson, which has a conference date with Richmond coming up divided time equally between offense and defense in a heavy scrimmage. Johnny Crute, senior tackle injured in Monday practice, probably will play Saturday. Richmond, for its part, got a brisk workout on pass defense and worked also on downfield blocking passing, kickoffs, punting and punt return.

The Citadel polished its air attack for its weekend conference game at Furman, ending two days of heavy workouts without an injury. Furman, also at top physical strength, labored on pass defense after a rigorous offensive session.

Bulldogs Fired-Up For Visiting Wilson Tomorrow

Undeclared Epes High observes homecoming tomorrow night against invading Darden High of Wilson. It will be the final home game of the season for Epes.

Coach Percy Daniels is expected to have his club primed for the homecoming battle against often-beaten Darden High.

Daniels strategy is to stop Darden's wide stuff. "We have been looking good this week but we have concentrated on stopping their wide sweeps and off-tackle plays. We shouldn't have too much trouble but we can't take anybody light."

With only one win in five starts, Darden may run into a hornet's nest tomorrow night. Scored on for the first time last week on a "fuke" situation, the Bulldogs are still head-hunting and Darden may take the punishment.

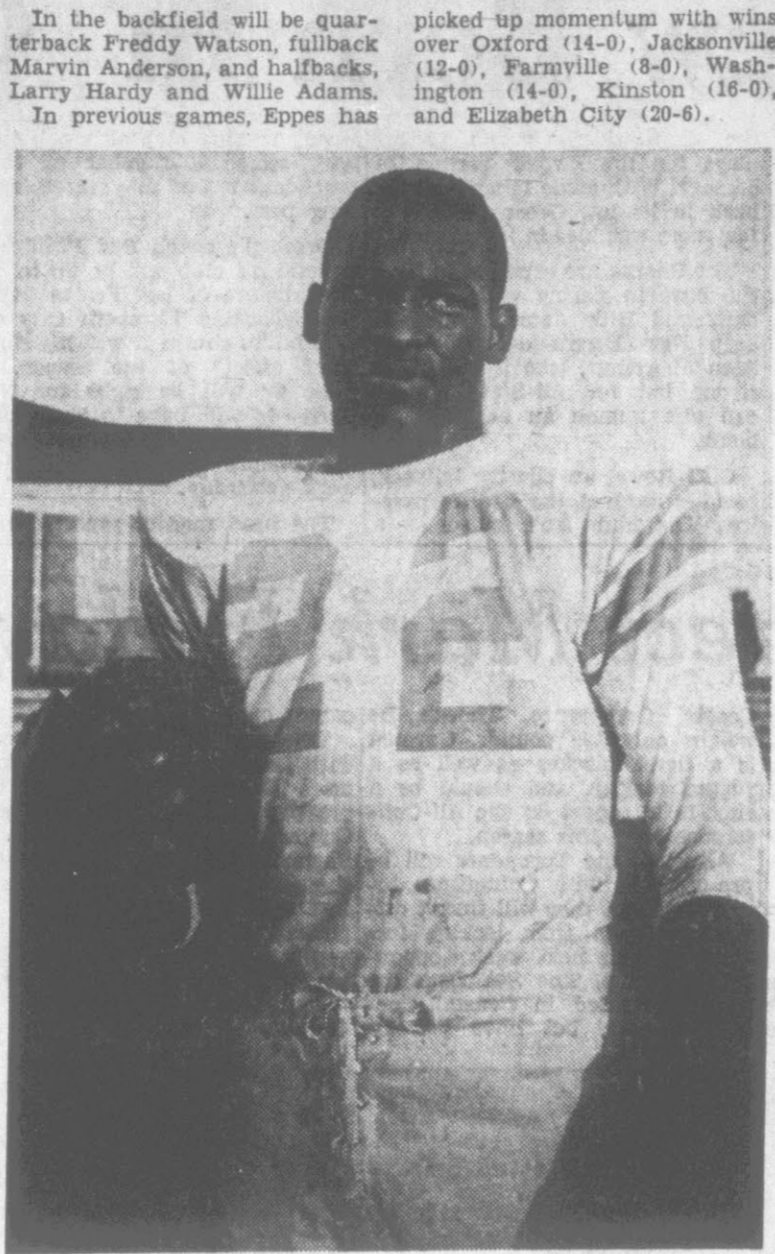

"We are in good physical shape with only one bruised suffered in scrimmage this week. Our reserves have been running Wilson plays all week and we plan to stop their big fullback," Daniels informed.

Alton Harris and Nathum Cromwell have led the defensive play in practice this week. The former is an end with Cromwell guarding a tackle post.

Nine seniors will pass in review for home fans for the final time tomorrow night. Epes will conclude its 1930 grid campaign on the road with games at Goldsboro and Fayetteville.

Daniels related yesterday that the largest crowd of the season is expected. A special halftime show, including the crowning of the queen, will be given.

Starters for Epes will be: Alton Harris and Calvin Gatlin at ends; Nathan Cromwell and Alton Davis at tackles; guards Raymond Tucker and Dalton Davis; and center Levon Little.

SPARKS EPES ATTACK—Quarterback Freddie Watson, a 175-pound senior, will be scheduled to direct Epes High tomorrow when it goes against Darden High of Wilson

Lenoir Rhyne Is New Leader In AP Weekly Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Lenoir Rhyne College of Hickory, N.C., is the new leader of the small college top 10 as determined by the weekly Associated Press poll.

The Bears, who have won their five games this season by an average 24-6 score, replace Ohio University at the top. The Ohioans slipped to second after winning from Xavier of Ohio by a 6-0 score while Lenoir Rhyne wallopped Guilford, 21-6.

The small college top 10, an innovation this year with The Associated Press, is selected by a panel of eight football experts. Each surveys his NCAA district, weighs the ability of his prospects against those of the best in the other areas, and then votes for the 10 best teams.

Four of the eight selectors voted for Lenoir Rhyne as No. 1. Altogether the Bears got 61 points of a possible 80, on the basis of 10 points for first, nine for second, etc. Ohio U. got 41 points and Tufts 38.

Ohio University, which lists a 36-6 conquest of Boston University among its 1930 achievements, topped the list for the first two weeks.

Third on the current list is Tufts. The Medford, Mass., Jumbos blanked Lehigh, last week's third place team, in their meeting on Saturday and shot from the honorable mention listing to that of contenders.

Others in the top 10 are Iowa Teachers, Whitworth, Humboldt State, Chattanooga, Southeast Louisiana, Southern Illinois and Florida A & M. Only one team in this elite grouping has suffered a defeat, that was a 10-0 loss by Chattanooga to Auburn of the Southeastern Conference.

Rams Hopeful Of Denting Beaufort's Forward Wall

Robersonville, which hosts unbeaten and unscored upon Beaufort tomorrow night, would probably be eager to get back into the thick of the Coastal Conference race after their 34-0 drubbing by non-conference Plymouth last week if it were not for the fact that they return to play the Sea Dogs. But the Rams have as good a chance as any team of scoring on the visiting Beaufort club.

Sparked by tailback Tommy Ward, the Rams will throw a potent attack at the Sea Dogs. Ward was picked to be a conference standout last year and had a big start, scoring three touchdowns in the Rams' first 1930 game before breaking his arm and being sidelined for the remainder of the season. The big senior has returned to the Robersonville club this year, and has led the Rams to a 2-2 conference mark to date. A combination of his running and passing could produce a score against the Sea Dogs.

Ward's favorite pass receiver is a big 190 pound end by the name of Bonnie Stephens. The dangerous duo have teamed up for plenty of yardage for the Rams this season, and will pose a definite threat to the visiting Beaufort team.

Another threat to the Sea Dogs is Ran wingback Jimmy Brown. The senior sprinter, who has been out much of the season with injuries, is expected to bolster the Robersonville offensive attack.

The visiting Sea Dogs bring one of the most potent clubs to Robersonville in the Coastal conference this season.

Leading the visiting aggregation is David Jones. Although he was selected to the All-Conference team last year for his outstanding display at the flanker position for the Sea Dogs, Jones has proved that he is a very capable runner as well as pass receiver. Last week Jones worked at the halfback position for the Sea Dogs against Farmville, and he put in a performance that the Red Devils are not likely to forget anytime soon.

healthy to be a winner," he said. "That hasn't happened. Quarterback Dick Thornton, the offensive spark of the team, tore a high muscle in the Oklahoma game. The Wildcats' big end, El Kimbrough, was hampered by injuries in the Minnesota game then another end, Paul Yanke missed last week's game against Michigan and will not play Saturday. Neither will halfback Ray Purdin, fastest man in the backfield, or tackle Jack Cvercko.

Notre Dame's weak knees, and an even bigger weakness at quarterback, forebode possible doom for the Irish. The Ramblers already have lost their best halfback, Red Mack, and end John Powers for the year from injuries after the second game. Guard Myron Pottios has seen limited service because of his knee injury.

Before the season's opener, first string tackle Bob Bill fractured his wrist and is just now coming around. Halfbacks Ray Ratkowski and Angelo Deberio were injured against California and haven't moved at full speed since.

A great many television viewers will watch Notre Dame and Northwestern play football this Saturday, not to mention the 55,000 who will fill the Wildcats' Dyche Stadium, and wonder why these two clubs are having their miseries.

Each has won only once in four outings. Notre Dame 21-7 over California in the season opener and Northwestern battered down Oklahoma 19-3. The Irish then were swamped 51-19 by Purdue, upset 12-7 by North Carolina and shutout 21-0 last week by Michigan State. Northwestern fell 42-0 to Iowa 7-0 to Minnesota and 14-7 to Michigan.

Both coaches knew the good and bad of the situation before the beginning of the season, and it centered on one thing, injuries.

Notre Dame had a rash of knee operations during the off season and each was a question mark. Northwestern coach Ara Parseghian feared for the health of his team.

Casey Stengel Will Not Be Forgotten Soon By N Y

NEW YORK (AP)—Today the Yankees will name a new manager. He will be 41-year-old Ralph Houk.

But never to be forgotten will be the old Yankee manager, Casey Stengel, the old man the Yankees dismissed to make room for the younger man in line with the club's new policy — the youth movement.

"The youth movement of America is for kids," blared old man Stengel in an acceptance speech Wednesday night climaxing an emotional evening during which he was given a farewell dinner party by the New York Baseball Writers.

"Sure I'm old," 70-year-old Stengel challenged an audience that included Yankee owner Dan Topping, 48, the man who fired him; George Weiss, 65, the general manager who will be the next man to be forfeited under the new "youth program" policy of the owners; and Roy Hamey, 58, who is slated to succeed Weiss, and Branch Rickey, 79, president of the dormant Continental League.

"But I thought I could build a young team. I thought I could advance skill and youth without waiting years. Don't forget it was I who started the Yankee youth program which saved the club three-four years by instructional schools in the winter. I got the youths to play baseball instead of ice skating in the winter."

All this, of course, was a pointed reference to the reason given by the Yankee ownership for his dismissal Tuesday — that Casey was too old to continue as manager.

Looking directly at Topping, Stengel said: "This is not a ridicule of Topping who has the nerve and the guts to be here tonight."

Earlier Topping, obviously tense and nervous had been among the dozens of persons—baseball officials including Commissioner Ford Frick and American League President Joe Cronin, writers and friends who had paid tribute to the most successful manager in baseball.

"After reading today's press," Topping said slowly, "maybe I should shut up; maybe I've said enough. I feel a little like Khurshchev when he spoke before the United Nations."

"This has been the toughest decision (firing Stengel) the Yankees have had to make in all my years with the organization," Weiss, generally regarded as a cold, all-business individual with little or no sentiment, broke down in his eulogy of the man who brought the Yankees 10 pennants and seven world championships in 12 years.

"Maybe I should paraphrase an old line," he began. "Old codgers should be seen and not heard. But I feel I would be remiss if I didn't say a few words about Casey. It's been a privilege to work with him."

Casey was both funny and serious in his "thank you" speech to the writers who presented him with a silver tray inscribed: "In appreciation of your friendship and cooperation through a dozen happy years."

Stengel began his speech by saying: "I'd have to say this is the first time I've ever been near to tears."

He ended it with a bit of advice to his erstwhile owners and successor as Yankee manager. "If you think you can take a nap as a major league manager, or as an owner, you got to pay for it. You did it big in the last 12 years and you've got to say you can still do it and you don't give up. Tomorrow is another day."

O' Case also gave a hint to his future.

"They never fail to hire a man who's got it regardless of age."

Robertson, West Enjoy First Game

CINCINNATI (AP) — Coach Charley Wolf sums up the "new look" Cincinnati Royals' record victory this way:
"Rebounding did it."

He referred specifically to the first half of the Wednesday night National Basketball Association season opener, when the Royals grabbed 47 rebounds to 25 for the Los Angeles Lakers, and raced to a 140-123 victory.

Three-time All-America Oscar Robertson lived up to expectations in his pro basketball debut, scoring 21 points. He also was largely responsible for the Royals' improved rebounding. He grabbed 12 from his guard position, leading everybody but the Lakers' Elgin Baylor with 17, and contributed 10 assists.

The Lakers' Jerry West snapped back after a poor first-half showing and netted 16 points in the second half for a 20-point total in his pro debut. He was All-America at West Virginia.

Robbins Advance In Golf Tourney

PIEHURST, N. C. (AP)—The quarterfinals of the North and South Seniors Golf Tournament are being played today with two former champions still in the running.

Thomas Robbins of Pinehurst, 1936 champion, won his second match Wednesday, ousting Loyal Safford of Randolph, Mass., 3 and 2. J. Wolcott Brown of Sea Girt, N. J., who won two years ago, whipped Allen Rankin of Columbus, Ohio, 2 and 1.

Meanwhile, both co-medalists in Monday's qualifying are on the sidelines. Last to go was James Kirkpatrick of Manchester, Conn., whose late rally Wednesday was choked on the 18th hole by L.W. Ramsey, 56, of New Castle, Ind., for a 2-up victory.

Moore Entering Political Scene

By TED MCKENNA
SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Light heavyweight champion Archie Moore is taking to politics as he takes to prize fighting—in a relaxed manner.

Moore, a registered Democrat, is running for a two-month term as a state assemblyman in the Nov. 8 election, but he has no speaking engagements.

In fact, he left for Italy Wednesday to prepare for a 10-round, non-title fight with Julio Ranillo, Italian light heavyweight champion, in Rome Oct. 29.

Moore's political campaign will sort of take care of itself—with the help of other Democratic candidates—he figures.

Archie is running against another Democrat, George J. Lapthorne, San Diego real estate man, for the short term left vacant when George C. Crawford resigned to become a judge. Lapthorne has been a frequent unsuccessful candidate for public office.

The office Archie seeks will be largely an honorary one. The legislature will not meet during his two months in office from November to January. He will receive two months pay at $500 a month if he is elected.

Ole Miss Takes Defense Honors

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Mississippi Rebels, opponents known, are a tough defensive outfit. And statistics backed them up today as records of the NCAA Service Bureau disclosed that Ole Miss finally has dislodged Syracuse as the country's leader in rushing defense.

The Rebels' consistency is unmatched in recent major college football records, with Mississippi among the top 10 in one of the four principal defense categories every week since the start of the 1956 season.

Syracuse, leader in rushing defense for more than a year, now holds only one first — a bare decision in total defense over Wyoming.

Long-Delayed Big Hunt Is On For Storied 'Snowman'

By WATSON SIMS
NEW DELHI (AP) — Some people say it eats people. Others insist it's a vegetarian. There are those who think it's a bear or an ape, or a humanlike creature 10 feet tall. But one thing is sure: Something has been leaving huge tracks in the frozen snow of the Indian and Nepalese Himalayas for years.

The tracks of the "abominable snowman" are the starting point for a major new expedition by Sir Edmund Hillary, the conqueror of Mt. Everest.

"I don't think we can question the fact that something is making these tracks," Hillary said before setting off for the mountains.

"It may be the half human-half animal 'yeti' of the Sherpas; or a red bear or a langur monkey straying far above its habitat; or even deformed or frostbitten human feet. Whatever it is, we are anxious to try and answer once and for all."

A 20-man British-American-New Zealand team led by Hillary will spend nine months in the Everest region, the first ever to stay the entire winter in the Himalayas. The expedition will carry out research at high altitude which may aid future space travel. It will attempt to climb 27,790-foot Mt. Makalu.

And, perhaps most challenging of all, it will seek to establish the true nature of a creature which has never been positively identified.

The yeti, or abominable snowman, has been a legend of the Himalayas for a half century or more. Sherpas, the Nepalese porters who guide expeditions, believe it is a half-human creature which lives in caves and shuns contacts with human beings. To Westerners, its only trademark is footprints in the snow.

The first authenticated sighting of its tracks was made in 1921 by Sir Howard Bury, a British mountaineer then reconnoitering Everest. Bury's Sherpas were terrified by the huge footprints. They said the tracks were made by a man of the snow.

An adjective used by the Sherpas could be translated either as fierce or filthy which led to the term abominable snowman. Bury's report caused a sensation in Western newspapers, but 16 years passed before new tracks were discovered by another British mountaineer, Frank Smythe, at 16,000 feet in the Garwal area of the Indian Himalayas. Numerous other sightings followed, and so much interest stirred that five fullscale expeditions in search of the yeti have been made since World War II.

The closest approach to finding him was made in 1951 by explorer Eric Shipton, in the isolated Menlung Glacier area south of Everest. Shipton found a long trail of tracks each a foot long and half as wide. Each print showed three large "toes" in front, a thick "thumb" to one side. The tracks were clear — Shipton obtained photographs which were published throughout the world — and appeared fresh. But Shipton found no other sign of their author. The tracks simply disappeared into frozen crevasses of the mountains.

More tracks were found in the same area in 1955 by a British Royal Air Force expedition. It reported the tracks sank four inches deep into the frozen snow, while heavy alpine boots of expedition members made impressions only one inch deep, and concluded that the yeti — or whatever it was — was much heavier than a man.

Two major theories have been offered by Western investigators. The most popular is that the tracks are made by a species of red bear which sometimes walks erect. Other scientists believe they are caused by a species of ape which normally lives below the snowline but may stray to higher altitudes.

Such orthodox explanations have done nothing to still the legend among Sherpas of the yeti as a creature which howls pitifully far outside the warm circle of expedition tents and may sometimes long for human compan-

They Pick Jail Instead Of Bail

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Following a pledge of "jail instead of bail" policy, integration leader Martin Luther King Jr. and 35 other demonstrators against segregated eating facilities were behind bars today awaiting trial on charges of violating the state anti-trespass law.

They were among 51 Negroes and one white person arrested Wednesday following a well-organized invasion of downtown Atlanta by Negroes picketing and staging sit-in demonstrations at stores with segregated lunch counters.

King, who said he was an invited participant and not a leader of the demonstrations, vowed to remain in jail a year if necessary rather than make bond. He also said the demonstrations will continue "until something is done."

Also arrested was Lonnie C. King (no kin), head of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, which one of the demonstrators said sponsored the demonstrations.

All arrests were made at Rich's Department Store on charges of violating a 1960 act making it a misdemeanor to refuse to leave private property when requested to do so.

There was no violence during the demonstrations and picketing. All defendants pleaded not guilty before Municipal Judge James Webb. Charges against 16 were dismissed when an officer testified they had been requested to leave the dining room but not the store.

At his hearing, the Rev. M. L. King, who led the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott, said his family spent $4,500 at Rich's during 1959 and that "we are welcome at all counters but the lunch counter."

ship. Sherpa songs and tales tell of women snatched away as mates for the lonely half-humans of the snows.

Hillary's expedition is the biggest and best organized campaign ever made in yeti research. It will make its headquarters in the Menlung Glacier area where Shipton's photographs were obtained nine years ago, using equipment of which Shipton never dreamed.

One device is a .202 hypodermic gun which can put the yeti to sleep at long distance by firing needle-tipped hypodermic syringes.

If the expedition is unable to examine the yeti, it may still get his photograph. A dozen cameras will be staked out which can be set off by trip wires stretched over game trails.

The expedition will set up its cameras in a valley where tracks have been sighted in the past; then retire to observation posts overlooking the valley from a much higher altitude, keeping watch with telescopes.

Romance Is Given A Hand By State

RALEIGH (AP) — A teenage girl wrote the North Carolina State Highway Commission with a romantic problem.

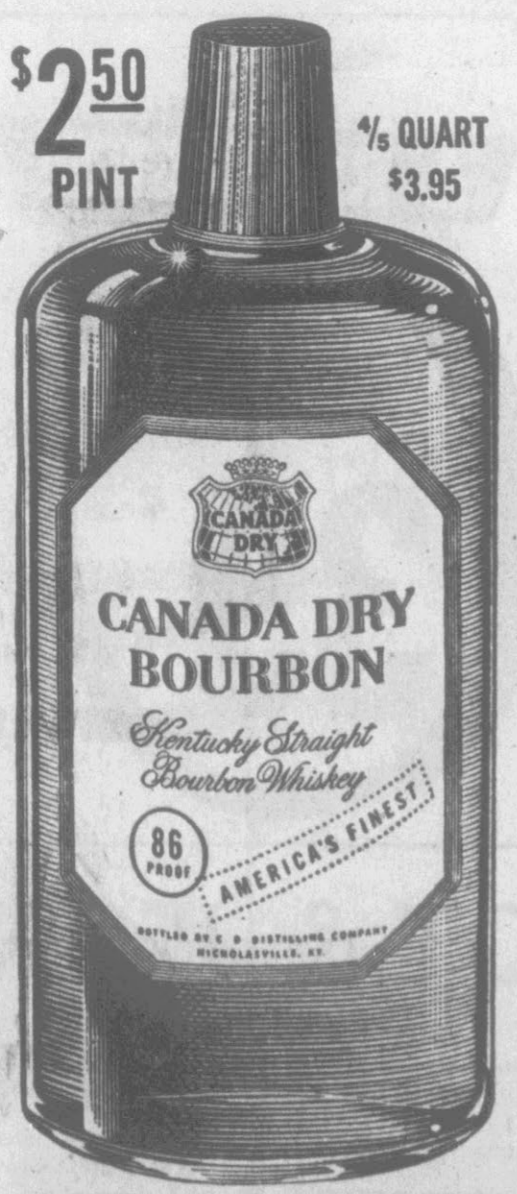

She loved the boy, she said. He'd been going steady with her. But he loved more the 1955 Ford on which he lavished time, money and tender care.

Now he hadn't dated her in a month. The last time he drove up their road he almost broke an axle on the ruts and potholes.

"Now, I love that guy, so could n't you please fix our road," the letter concluded.

They'd do it at once, the commission promised.

Difficulties In Applying Pressure On Cuba

Tobacco Tips

By S. J. Weeks
Pitt County Tobacco Agent

Each year the stored tobacco moth causes serious damage to stored tobacco on many farms. Most damage caused by this insect occurs between the time the tobacco is cured and the time it is sold. The attack of this insect is confined to fire-cured and Turkish tobaccos, preferably of the better grades—those high in sugar and low in nicotine.

The life history of the tobacco moth is similar to most other insects. The moth lays the eggs in or near piles of stored tobacco. The larvae are tiny when first hatched, but grow to about one-half inch in length. They are pinkish white in color with a reddish brown head. When the larvae is full grown, it spins a weblike cocoon in which it transforms into a pupae, then emerges as an adult moth. In summer conditions the life cycle from egg to egg averages approximately 50 days. Usually the tobacco moth passes the winter as an adult larva. In the fall most of the mature larvae leave the tobacco and migrate to cracks and crevices about the building, where they spin loose cocoons of silk in which to hibernate.

Most farmers have either finished, or are nearly finished, marketing their tobacco crop. Therefore, it is a good time to start control measures that will help keep the loss caused by the tobacco moth to a minimum. As soon as the crop is graded and sold, the packhouse and grading room should be thoroughly cleaned. When cleaning, all slats should be removed from the walls, then the walls should be brushed down. All scrap tobacco should be removed from the packhouse and destroyed. No seed, feed, or fertilizer should be stored in the packhouse. If grain or feed is stored in the packhouse, the moths will breed in this material until tobacco is harvested. After thoroughly cleaning, the packing and grading room should be sprayed with a 5 percent DDT solution, which can be made by mixing two quarts of 50 percent DDT emulsifiable concentrate with five gallons of water. The walls, ceiling and floor of the packhouse and grading room should be sprayed again in the spring with a 5 percent DDT spray solution. This prior to the beginning of the tobacco harvest, preferably in April.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States apparently faces serious difficulties in imposing any major new economic or political pressures on the pro-Communist Castro government of Cuba.

State Department officials said today that this country has gone about as far as it can go for the time being in applying what amounts to sanctions against the regime of Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

The latest move came Wednesday when the Commerce Department ordered a curf on all U. S. exports to Cuba except medical supplies and some foodstuffs. The partial embargo applies mainly to machinery and industrial equipment and supplies. The Maritime Commission at the same time banned the transfer of American-owned ships to Cuba.

Earlier this year the United States had cut off aid to Cuba and had virtually closed the U. S. market to Cuban sugar purchases. Wednesday's trade ban was clamped on after Vice President Richard M. Nixon, speaking in his presidential campaign at Miami, Fla., Tuesday, advocated a policy of quarantining Castro's Cuba and said that "a number of steps can be taken to do this and are planned."

Diplomats dealing with the problem reported that considerable has been given to a wide range of measures.

The next most likely step—though it is not yet worked out in detail—could be the freezing of Cuban assets in the United States. Officials said they were not sure of the volume of these assets but that they probably were not more than a few million dollars.

Apart from keeping friendly Latin-American governments informed of all that can be learned about Communist activities in Cuba, the idea of isolating Cuba from the rest of the hemisphere has not been worked out as to specific detail.

From time to time, informants also have arisen of the possibility of establishing some kind of a patrol of air and sea craft around Cuba and of trying to prevent flow into Cuba of arms from Communist countries. Such activities, however, responsible authorities said, come close to blockade actions if they are to be effective.

Blockade raises questions of the use of military force which apparently no one in the government considers seriously.

There has also been some talk of the possibility of breaking off diplomatic relations with Cuba, but the State department officials discount this completely under present conditions. They would prefer to maintain some channel of communication with the Cuban regime such as is afforded by the U. S. Embassy in Cuba.

The possibility of taking action with other Western Hemisphere allies through the Organization of American States is under constant study at the State department. The problem is that Latin-American countries such as Cuba have the status of a popular revolutionary hero. Though the governments are aware of the danger now presented by Cuba they feel themselves restricted in what they can do because of Castro's appeal among many of their own people.

Finch-Tregoff Murder Trial Is Again In Hands Of A Jury

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The jury is at last deliberating in the Finch-Tregoff murder trial—the longest criminal hearing in Los Angeles County history.

For 16½ weeks one man and eleven women jurors have heard evidence and argument supporting and denying the state's claim that Dr. R. Bernard Finch and his pretty mistress, Carole Tregoff, killed his wife.

The handsome, balding surgeon, 42, was red-faced in apparent anger as a prosecutor told the jury Wednesday: "We have demonstrated the guilt of these two defendants."

Then Finch appeared composed as the jury filed out after the judge's instructions. He yawned. He clasped the hand of red-haired Miss Tregoff, 23, his onetime receptionist, and spoke reassuringly to her.

She smiled, but her lip trembled. Her brown eyes moistened as a matron led her back to jail.

After an overnight stay at a hotel, the jury continues deliberating on an issue on which a previous jury deadlocked last March.

The charge that Finch and Miss Tregoff went to his estranged wife's home in suburban West Covina the night of July 18, 1959, and that he deliberately shot socialite Barbara Jean Finch, 36, to death. The state says the defendants wanted to avoid sharing his wealth with his wife in a divorce settlement.

The physician and his code-fendant say they went to the house to discuss a divorce with Mrs. Finch, that she produced a gun and it discharged accidentally as Finch grabbed it and tried to throw it away. Mrs. Finch died of a bullet in the back.

The retrial was staged under circumstances that contrasted sharply with those of the earlier trial.

It was held in a drab, tiny courtroom; the first was in the county's largest, bright and new. Prosecutors jabbed pitilessly in demanding a conviction for the two lovers. In the earlier trial the prosecution was more restrained.

Until the last few days, the principals showed little emotion, as though spent from the stress of having gone through it all before.

One issue which this jury, like the first, must decide is: Did smooth-talking jailbird John Patrick Cody tell the truth?

On this jaunty, oft-arrested man hinges much of the prosecution's case for first-degree murder. Both defendants say he lied. Cody, 29, came here from a Minneapolis jail, to testify that Finch and Miss Tregoff hired him to murder Barbara Finch. He said he never intended to go through with it, merely planning to take them for the $1,400 they paid him.

The defendants insist they hired Cody, not to kill Mrs. Finch but to get incriminating evidence for a divorce case—if necessary try to seduce her.

Five Minneapolis policemen swore they wouldn't believe Cody under any circumstances. Two others said they would.

The first trial took 11 weeks. After nearly 40 hours of sometimes highly emotional deliberation, the jury deadlocked and was discharged. It was later disclosed to have split 10-2 to convict Finch, 8-4 to acquit Miss Tregoff.

Rather Bland Treatment For Automobile Industry

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—It would be well, let's say injudicious—for a company that manufactures steel to sponsor a television program dedicated to satirizing the American automobile industry which uses a lot of steel and also has some brand new models out. So "step on the gas," Wednesday night's CBS Steel Hour special, didn't.

What it did was poke fun at very old cars, automobile horns, credit cards carried by motorists, and—of course—women drivers. There were also some dances and some songs relating to automobiles one way or another. Jackie Cooper, Shirley Jones, Hans Conried, Shari Lewis and Pat Carroll did their best with the rather bland material.

At the beginning of Wednesday night's Perry Como Show, guest star Jack Paar announced that some people had suggested that Paar was okay on late evening television. "But that," he'd die around 8 or 9." Well, some people proved good prophets but it was too bad he had to take the whole Como show along with him.

Just about the only way the performers in NBC's Hour of Great Mysteries series seem to be able to play their parts in the musty adaptations is tongue-in-cheek. A little of this goes a long way, and surely there must be some way to shine up these period pieces so that they all won't seem to be burlesques.

Tuesday night's "Inn of the Flying Dragon" was no better than the rest of the series—at best disappointing. All that mysterious nonsense, poison draughts, strange "zizz" and evil looks couldn't save the four-long effort out of the doldrums. This week's "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" was one of the most delightful half hours encountered on television in months, and a real off-beat treatment for that usually mischievous show. It was a delicately told story about a little boy and his love for his father—with a real snapper of an ending which both was surprising and brought a quick tear to the eye.

A real private eye named Richard Rutherford complains that TV private investigators often present "a false, degrading and professionally damaging public image" and are often depicted as trigger-happy and willing to commit any crime to earn a client's pay. All I have to say is that this private investigator doesn't watch as many private eye TV shows as he should.

Peter Gunn, Michael Shayne, the boys of Suriside 6, 77 Sunset Strip, Hawaiian Eye and Coronado 9—just to mention a few—are paragons of virtue. They never shoot unless shot at, and they don't even slug villains unless slugged first. And Perry Mason's honorable Paul Drake is constantly worrying about having his license lifted.

Motorcyclist Finally Met Kim

SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP)—Motorcycle officer Fred Hall got to meet actress Kim Novak Wednesday.

He even got her autograph—on a citation for following too closely and not having a driver's license in her possession. Officer Hall met Miss Novak on Gier Boulevard, northbound, at Knob Hill Drive, in this Los Angeles suburb.

Tobacco is undoubtedly Pitt County's major money-making "industry", and the job of keeping the program producing and moving ahead falls in part to Sam J. Weeks, tobacco agent of the Pitt County Farm Agents office.

A native of Sampson County, Weeks attended High School at Fuquay Springs in Wake County. He then attended North Carolina State College in Raleigh where he graduated in 1940 with a major in Agronomy, the study of field crop production and soil management.

After graduating, Weeks went to work for the Farm Security Administration where he worked for 15 months before coming to Pitt County as tobacco agent.

The veteran Pitt agent noted that Pitt was the first county in the state to have a special agent in tobacco. "There are eight or 10 that have them now," he noted.

Weeks, being a special agent, works almost entirely with tobacco, conducting demonstrations, holding educational meetings on timely subjects, and making farm visits to give aid on specific problems.

Weeks, who also fills in "some with other programs" sponsored by other county farm offices, also conducts result-demonstrations on farms where neighboring about having his license lifted.

Tax Liens Filed On 2 Actresses

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Tax liens have been filed against actresses Margaret O'Brien and Eleanor Powell.

The Internal Revenue Service claims Miss O'Brien and her husband, Hershel R. Allen Jr., owe $3,073 in income taxes for last year. The lien against Miss Powell is for $10,481, also for last year.

The amount of their incomes was not disclosed in the papers filed Wednesday.

ing farmers can observe the results of special practices.

The thing Weeks likes best about his job is "being able to help rural people to improve their livelihood by assisting them in improving their practices of growing tobacco . . . and increasing their net income. It is a challenge working with tobacco farmers . . . to help them to try to maintain a margin of profit that producing tobacco has shown in the past."

"It is a challenge," Weeks stated, "because farm mechanization has not as yet been made adaptable to tobacco production as it has in other growing enterprises . . . and it requires much hand labor. We try to make improvements in tobacco production . . . increase the yield . . . use better production practices and improve varieties."

He said that in Pitt this year, 18 varieties were field tested in the county, noting that there are now about "25 varieties being grown in Pitt County."

Weeks stated that the tobacco yields in the county have increased from 1,051 pounds-per-acre when he came to Pitt to a 1958 average per acre of 1,931 pounds. He attributed the increase to better production practices and improved varieties of tobacco being planted.

Weeks said tobacco accounted for 70.56 per cent of the total average income in Pitt County for the years 1956 through 1959, a sum averaging $24,241,258. If "we go backward" in the tobacco program, "it will affect the entire economy" of the county. "We must try to improve the quality of tobacco," he emphasized, noting that "if tobacco sold for three cents per pound more, it would mean an increase of $36 per acre to the farmers, making an increase over the county of $1,359,294."

The tobacco agent said one of the important advances in tobacco production in the past several years has been the use of irrigation, but warned that it can harm crops if used incorrectly.

Weeks, who said irrigation has been used to help increase yields on many farms, commented "It is a practice that should be used as an insurance policy . . . to assure farmers a normal amount of moisture for the crop at the most important times during the growing season. These times "are at transplanting and when filling out at the top."

Weeks stated that "irrigation is beneficial at other stages of growth . . . depending on the amount of rainfall and the availability of water". He added that "too much water can be applied . . . and if so would effect the quality of the leaves."

Weeks is a member of the Greenville Masonic Lodge and a member of the Board of Stewards. He also holds membership in the State County Agents Association.

"I don't have much time for hobbies," he noted but listed gardening as his favorite.

Weeks married the former Lillian Hines of New Bern and they have two sons, one 8 and the other 3.

CERVANTES LIVES AGAIN

The townspeople create the music of old Spain as a dancer whirls through her steps in the Plaza of San Roque.

Cervantes, the famed 16th century Spanish author, as portrayed by Onacio Lopez Suarez, professor of Spanish literature at Guanajuato University.

Rosa Macias, a Guanajuato beauty parlor employe, makes up for part in play.

In the storied Mexican mountain town of Guanajuato, Don Quixote, Sancho Panza and other immortal characters from the pages of Don Miguel de Cervantes, the famed 16th century author, soldier, poet and adventurer, have become familiar personages in the life of today. A unique theater has brought about the new interest in the Golden Age of Spanish literature.

Each year, in the town plaza of San Roque, in a natural setting of old balconies, Toledo gratings and narrow alleyways, the "Entremeses Cervantinos," or interludes from Cervantes, are staged. The actors are the townspeople themselves—merchants, artisans, students, housewives and children—some 40 of them who speak their lines in Cervantes' glorious Castilian.

The audience made up of tourists and townfolk alike watch the performance from portable stands set up on one side of the plaza. Actors enter and exit from the narrow alleyways to either side of the plaza. Action begins following the appearance of Cervantes who places himself off-stage. A narrator using a public address system sets the scene and describes the action.

At the conclusion of the scene the actors freeze in position. A clattering of hooves announces the coming of Don Quixote, who in full armor and mounted on horseback followed by his servant Sancho Panza on burro, rides across the plaza signaling the end of each interlude.

Beautiful Josefina de Echanove, who portrays "La Dama de la Silla" (the woman of the chair), is assisted from sedan chair by her gallant suitor.

"Gay lassies adorn the scenery coming down the hill," is this scene described in a Cervantes Interlude.

Victorious swordsman, played by Raul Trujillo, a drug-store clerk, stands over his fallen foes, near end of play.

Don Quixote, on horseback, portrayed by Luis Mario, walks among the "dead" and "wounded" in climax of play. He's followed by his servant, Sancho Panza.

General Electric Seeks Beat Union At Its Own Game

By NORMAN WALKER
WASHINGTON (AP) — A novel mode of collective bargaining — pegged on beating a labor union at its own game — is now being tested in the crucible of industrial conflict at General Electric Co. The industry and union men who keep thrashing out the terms of the nation's major labor contracts are intently watching the battle. Because if the plan works it could spread to other industries. The showdown is between one of the nation's largest corporations, General Electric, and one of the top labor organizations, the International Union of Electrical Workers.

GE has been developing and practicing its bargaining plan for a dozen years, but it has never been put to so severe a test. Essentially, it's a method of strengthening management's hand in calling the tune on labor contract terms.

The GE approach to labor bargaining is two-fold: First, a steady, unremitting drumfire of "Papa knows best" counseling to the workers contending that the company rather than the union, is their best protector and welfare provider.

Second, a sizable contract offering containing "everything the company believes to be right" and, except for minor variations, sticking to it even if it means a strike.

The system has worked well — in the sense that the company views have substantially prevailed without incurring any company-wide labor stoppages — since GE Vice President Lemuel R. Boulware devised the technique in the late 1940s.

In fact, it's worked so well a new word, "Boulwarism," has been coined by industrial relations practitioners.

TOUCH TEST—Princess Michiko tugs on whisker of a stuffed tiger while shopping in New York toy store before return to Japan with her husband, Crown Prince Akihito.

But the plan is meeting an acid test. The present strike is not only the first major walkout at GE since "Boulwarism" came into vogue; it's also the first time in years that a major employer has tried to keep plants operating in face of a strike.

What are the effects of the plan on GE's employees? And on the union? It seems to leave the workers confused in their loyalties, and the union in a state of angry frustration.

The Schenectady local already has shown signs of revolt against the strike by returning to work. Other locals may follow.

James B. Carey, head of the IUE, and the onetime "wonder boy" of the old CIO, hasn't been able to get his IUE membership to go on strike all these years in an effort to better GE's offers.

Negotiations have now pretty much deteriorated to a union-management shouting match.

His talk in Atlanta will be one of several appearances by Dr. White this month before business education groups.

The Atlanta meeting has been arranged by the State Supervisor of Business Education in Georgia. It will be held at the State Department of Education.

Since 1954 Dr. White has served as State Advisor for the North Carolina FBLA, an organization of 75 chapters with a membership of more than 3,000 young people.

Dr. White will be principal speaker before the Business Education Department of the Eastern District of the N.C. Education Association in Goldsboro Friday, Oct. 21. His topic will be "The Community Survey: How to Make It and How to Use It." He appeared before the same department of the South Piedmont NCEA in Rockingham Oct. 7, and before the N.C. Business Education Council at Wake Forest Oct. 1.

How much this recommendation of a popular President will sway the voters remains to be seen. Republicans believe it will be particularly useful in helping some undecided citizens, who may not be enamored with either of the candidates, to make up their minds in favor of Nixon.

Ike's Campaign Closely Watched

Editor's Note: What will be the effect on the election campaign of President Eisenhower's current tour, described as nonpolitical? Jack Bell, AP political writer, assesses it as Eisenhower moves into pivotal California.

And the President is talking about one man—Nixon—and not a collection of candidates with whom he had only occasional contacts. He stresses that Nixon has been trained in daily consultation in the innermost administration circles.

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP) — Politicians are watching President Eisenhower's current tour for new answers to the old question of whether a president can pass among his popularity.

How much this recommendation of a popular President will sway the voters remains to be seen. Republicans believe it will be particularly useful in helping some undecided citizens, who may not be enamored with either of the candidates, to make up their minds in favor of Nixon.

The White House has called Eisenhower's nine-day tour non-political, but the President has been doing some obvious plugging for election of Vice President Richard M. Nixon to succeed him.

Democrats say they don't think any retiring President can influence the election results much. But they would be happier if Eisenhower weren't trying.

While the returns are awaited from scheduled Eisenhower appearances in San Francisco tonight and San Diego Friday, the consensus seems to be that the President is giving Nixon some needed help.

If Eisenhower gets in some of the same kind of licks in California that he registered for Nixon in Michigan and Minnesota, Republicans are going to be mighty happy about his tour of political hot spots.

Eisenhower has struck at the campaign theme of Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic presidential nominee, that this country has stood still and has lost prestige in the world. The President said it was idle to say this country "doesn't hold its head up any place in the world."

But even some Democrats concede that this year's campaign is different. Republicans contend—and Democrats don't dispute it seriously—that Eisenhower's popularity remains tremendously high.

Renault Workers Protest Cutback

Home-Building Prop To Economy Now Wobbly

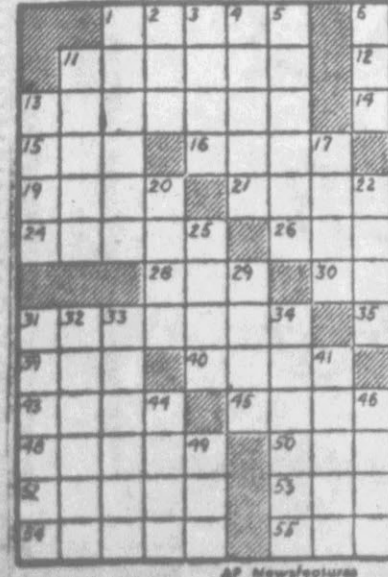

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP) — Another prop to the economy is proving wobbly. Home building had been expected to pick up under the prodding of easier credit. Instead, it is sagging sharply.
A pickup in housing was supposed to jab the economy with both a dollar and a psychological needle. Other business needles also have proved blunted of late.
Builders say the slowdown—officially reported as a 17 per cent slump in September from August—is continuing this month.
Easier credit may have been offset by uneasiness over the general trend in the economy.
Also blamed is a hangover of unsold homes built last year, high prices of these and prices of constructing new ones, and the suspicion that the big building boom of recent years may have sopped up a major portion of demand.
A few builders say this isn't so. They announce good sales of their houses and say it's because they're giving the public the value it craves. Defining what the public wants is hard. Each builder usually says it's what he is offering.
Announcement of the housing decline—this September was off 29 per cent from a year ago and the total started so far this year is 19 per cent below the first nine months of 1959—comes at an unfortunate time psychologically.
It coincides with, and adds to, uneasiness due to reports that the total dollar volume of output of goods and services in the nation has dropped below the record $505 billion annual pace set in the April-June quarter.
It casts doubt that this granddaddy of the statistics can climb enough in the final three months of the year to make the $510 billion total which Washington officials were still hoping for only a few weeks ago.
Housing's failure to give the economy the expected push follows hard on reports that industrial output in September was at a 10-month low; that retail sales

Found Ring Lost 50 Years Ago

ETNA, Maine (AP) — In the 55 years Mrs. Leighton S. Sylvester has been married, her wedding ring has been lost more than 50.
She first lost it less than two years after her marriage while digging in her garden. Twenty years later her husband found the ring. Less than two years it was lost again.
Now, the ring is back in Mrs. Sylvester's possession once more. A tenant on the farm the Sylvesters formerly owned dug it up.

Doesn't Recall Pet And Message

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — Dewitt D. Phillips, Jr., was 15 years old in 1937 when he solemnly placed the body of his pet turtle in a box, put it on a rafter in a neighbor's attic and left this note:
'If this corpse should be found please notify me. Or in case this is found later than 2037 please notify Dewitt D. Phillips III.'

Twenty-three years later, Z. C. Hubay, remodeling the house, found the turtle's skeleton and contacted Phillips, now a doctor.
Phillips had no recollection of the turtle but he said, 'I must have done it.' As for Dewitt III, the doctor isn't married yet.

Doctor's Error; 'Son' Was Girl

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The doctor came out of the delivery room and told Arthur McCoy his wife had given birth to a daughter.
McCoy told his many friends as he passed the cigars around, but when he brought wife and baby home three days later the daughter was a son. The doctor was red faced. "Most embarrassing incident of my practice," he apologized.

University Had To Refuse 200

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — The University of Illinois denied admission this fall to 200 women undergraduate students because no approved housing was available in Urbana.
Dean Charles W. Sanford, says the school's doors opened to a record breaking enrollment of 22,500, over the estimated enrollment by 900.
The student body hadn't been expected to reach 22,500 until September, 1961.

Build A Machine Of Many Parts

PONTIAC, Ill. (AP) — The old-fashioned steam threshing machine that Floyd Kenyon and his son, Franklin, displayed at the annual Central States Threshermen's Reunion was a machine from many parts.
The Kenyons assembled the machine with a chassis and cab from a locomotive-type steam threshing and plowing engine made in Peoria. The boiler came from a Canadian model Fort Huron engine. The double-cylinder engine was salvaged from a steam shovel. The flywheel came from an old hay baler.

The whistle came from Eureka College where it once announced opening of school each morning. A second whistle is a retired village fire siren.

Top Russian Pianist Grips U.S. Audience

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Sviatoslav Richter, the one Russian pianist the music world of the West has longed most to hear, made his first New York appearance in Carnegie Hall Wednesday night.
He gave an austere, demanding program of five Beethoven sonatas, the first chosen from the early Haydn-like Opus 2 but moving up for the emotional and technical climax to the "Appassionata."
There was a rare excited buzz in the capacity audience before he walked on stage—a tall, deep-chested man with red hair thinning on the crown but bushy in the neck.
But he got noisy reminders to the contrary after each number, when the public made itself heard with clapping, whistles and cheers; and when this reviewer could play better. But in the second half of the evening, he did.

Reunion Proved Fracturing Time

DURANT, Okla. (AP) — Lewis V. Hampton, Jr., of Dallas, Tex., and his father held a reunion at the senior Hampton's home here and the overly exuberant greeting put the 26-year-old son in the hospital with a broken leg.

PAUL GALICCO'S NEW BESTSELLER Mrs. 'Arris Goes to New York

CHAPTER 24 Kentucky Claiborne took up a kind of a defiant stand in a corner of the room and said, "If you all think you're going to come over me, for givin' that kid a poke, you can guess again. The little brat was annoyin' me at mah rehearsal. I tol' him to beat it—he got fresh and Ah belted him one. And what's more, Ah'd do it again. Ah tol' you Ah didn't like foreigners. All they have to do is keep out of mah way, and then nobody is goin' to have any trouble."

[may cause you some astonishment. In my neighborhood in London there lived a lonely child, starved, beaten and abused by cruel foster parents, unbeknownst to his father in far-off America. It—that is to say, we, Mrs. Butterfield and I—have rescued this child from the clutches of the unfeeling monsters into whose hands he had fallen and brought him here to you. That child is little Henry here, none other than your own natural son, Henry, go 'over and give your dad a great big hug and kiss."

that?" Before he could reply something that might have been unprintable, from the twist that his mouth had taken, Mr. Schreiber, who saw that Mrs. Harris was floundering and things getting out of hand, interpolated quickly, "Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Butterfield live right next door to these people—the Gussets—they were the foster parents—that is to say, Henry's mother boarded the child with them after she remarried, and when the money stopped coming and they could no longer find the means to abuse the child, Mrs. Harris couldn't bear it and brought him over here to you. She is a good woman and had the best interests of the child at heart and—"

"Yes, yes," said Mr. Schreiber testily. "We know all that." But now that he had Kentucky Claiborne safely under contract he was no longer compelled to be as patient or put up with as much. "But that isn't what I've asked you to come here to talk about today. It's something quite different. Sit yourself down and let's go at it."

While Mrs. Harris was going over their speech and clinging to her fancy to the last, Mr. Schreiber uncovered the papers on his desk and Kentucky, attracted by the rustle, looked over and saw the photostatic copy of his Air Force record, plus the photograph of himself. It cooled him off considerably.

Here she suddenly realized that her explanations were sounding just as lame and flustered as Mrs. Harris's had a moment ago, and she subsided in confusion, looking to her husband for help. "That's about the way of it, Kentucky," said Mr. Schreiber, stepping into the breach, "though I think maybe it could have been better put. When she brought him over here Mrs. Harris didn't know who the father was, except she figured when she located him and he found out how much the kid needed him and what was happening to him, he'd take over."

Relieved somewhat that the purpose of the get-together was not to chew him out for slapping the child Kentucky sat on a chair back-front and watched them all suspiciously out of his small, mean eyes.

"Your serial number in the Air Force was AF28636794, like it's tattooed on your wrist," said Mr. Schreiber, "and your record up to the date of your discharge is all here, including your marriage and the birth of your son."

Here she suddenly realized that her explanations were sounding just as lame and flustered as Mrs. Harris's had a moment ago, and she subsided in confusion, looking to her husband for help. "That's about the way of it, Kentucky," said Mr. Schreiber, stepping into the breach, "though I think maybe it could have been better put. When she brought him over here Mrs. Harris didn't know who the father was, except she figured when she located him and he found out how much the kid needed him and what was happening to him, he'd take over."

Mr. Schreiber said, "Your right name is George Brown, and you did your military service in the U.S. Air Force from 1949 to 1952." Kentucky set his jaws. "What if Ah am and what if Ah did?" Mr. Schreiber, who appeared to be enjoying himself—indeed, he now relinquished the role of detective and was seeing himself as Mr. District Attorney—said, "On the fourteenth of April, 1950, you married a Miss Pansy Amelia Cott, nee Tunbridge Wells, while you were still in the Air Force, and approximately five months or so later a son was born to you, christened Henry Brown."

Kentucky glared at Mr. Schreiber and said, "So what? What if it is? What business is that of anyone? Ah deevoc'd the woman—she was a no-good dame. It was all done legal and proper in accordance with the laws of the state of Alabama, and Ah got the papers that say so. What's all this about?" Mr. Schreiber's interrogation continued as inexorably as his fancy told him it should. "And the boy?" he asked. "Have you any idea where he is or what has become of him?"

Here she suddenly realized that her explanations were sounding just as lame and flustered as Mrs. Harris's had a moment ago, and she subsided in confusion, looking to her husband for help. Diplomats Take Tour Of Siberia

MOSCOW (AP) — Forty foreign diplomats, including U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, today started a tour of Siberia as guests of the Soviet Foreign Ministry. The party took off in a TU104 jet airliner for Irkutsk, some 3,750 miles to the east. Most of the three-day tour will be spent in the Irkutsk region, visiting construction sites, and there will be a side trip to Lake Baikal.

Seamount Helps In Ocean Probe

SEATTLE (AP) — The peak of a submerged mountain in the Pacific Ocean will serve as an anchor for a scientific instrument designed to probe the secrets of the deep. A "telemeter buoy" will be fastened to the summit of the Cobb Seamount, a 9,000-foot mountain which lacks 100 feet of reaching the ocean surface. It is 270 miles off the Washington coast. The project is made possible by a grant of $207,100 to University of Washington scientists by the National Science Foundation.

Future May Hold All-Steel Home New York (AP) — Imagine a house without windows and doors that swell, plaster cracks, and termites...an all-steel house. Such a house is a prospect for the future. Steelways, publication of American Iron and Steel Institute, says a new process in which sections of the house are stamped out of steel has made the mass production of all-steel prefabricated homes economically feasible. Inside, the home would have textured and patterned steel walls. Interior walls would be mounted on wheels, making room shapes as easy to rearrange as furniture. Exterior walls, says Steelways, can be etched and sprayed with a stucco-like material.
