Honor Bestowed On Greenville Woman

BOOK OF GOLDEN DEEDS AWARD . . . for 1960 is presented by Exchangeite President Ray D. Minges to Mrs. Maxwell Moore.

'Book Of Golden Deeds' Is Bestowed On Mrs. Moore

By HENRY HOWARD Reflecter Staff Writer Mrs. J. H. B. Moore, Greenville organizer, leader, and culturist, last night became the seventh chapter in the local Exchange Club's Book of Golden Deeds. The annual award's presentation was made to Mrs. Moore at the Exchange's annual Ladies' Night observance at the Country Club here by the club's president, Ray D. Minges. The Rev. Richard Ottaway read a brief biographical sketch announcing Mrs. Moore's selection. Nearly 100 Exchangeites and wives and guests watched the climax to last night's program and gave the local art enthusiast a standing ovation. In announcing the selection of the Golden Deeds award for 1960, Rev. Ottaway said, "No woman in the history of Greenville has contributed more nor meant more to the cultural growth of the city; nor put forth any more efforts entirely in behalf of community progress. He described Mrs. Moore as "indeed a prime mover in the cultural life of Greenville." He continued, "Without a double, the 1960 entry's most Golden Deed has been that of her interest and leadership in making Greenville a cultural center and leader." Speaking in behalf of the Exchange Club, Rev. Ottaway told his audience, "The award tonight is our effort to recognize a member of our community who is making the most indelible mark." Biography Mrs. Moore, a Kenansville native, moved to Greenville in 1922. Since that time she has served on the Advisory Board of the Salvation Army; held the chairmanship of the USO during the war and served on the Mayor's Committee; served as president for the Greenville Garden Club; been active in a Greenville "clean-up" program; and served with the local Red Cross organization. She is a member of the Eighth St. Christian Church here and has served as a Sunday School teacher there for many years. Mrs. Moore is a charter member of the Pitt County Historical Society and the Greenville Music Club. For a total of 16 years, she has served as president of the Greenville Woman's Club and is currently that organization's Honorary Life President. In the North Carolina Federation of Woman's Clubs, she has served as a leader for over 25 years. She was among the founders of the East Carolina Art Society and was a leader in the group that founded the local art gallery 30 years ago. Mrs. Moore was instrumental in the establishment of the present Greenville Community Art Center. In North Carolina, she has been honored by the Associated Artists and has served on the Board of Directors of the State Art Society since its beginning. She is current director of the Greenville Art Center and has been director of the local art gallery for 18 years. Mrs. Moore resides at 1600 E. Fifth St. here. Last night's recipient succeeded six previous community servants selected by a secret committee of the Exchange Club each year since 1954. Previous recipients, in order, are William C. James, J. H. Rose, Mrs. Helen Barrett, Mrs. James T. Little Sr., Mrs. Hugh Ragsdale, and James W. Boykin. In addition to the presentation of the Book of Golden Deeds Award, last night's program included a social hour and banquet followed by a musical program featuring a barber shop quartet led by Frank Hill.

Violation Charged Driver In Accident

Highway Patrolman H. R. Winslow said today F. C. Hester, 17-year-old Negro involved in an accident with Jimmie Spain of Route 4, Greenville, who died Thursday of injuries received in the collision, has been charged with failing to stop for a stop light. Patrolman Winslow said a citation charging Hester with failing to stop for the light, was given to Hester Monday after two witnesses were found who said Spain had a green light. Winslow said the Spain car was headed north on U.S. 13-N.C. 11 while the Route 1 Fountain man's vehicle was headed east on N.C. 43, at the time of the mishap. The officer said citations, charging Spain with failure to stop for a red light and Hester with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, were written November 25, but not given the two drivers, due to Spain's condition. The collision occurred about 5:45 p.m. November 23, he pointed out. Both of these charges were dropped when the two witnesses came forth and supported Spain's statement that he had the green light, Winslow stated. The officer commented that the previous charges were made on the basis of statements by Hester and a passenger in his car, and by other evidence available at the time of the wreck. Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey said yesterday an inquest "will probably be held," but no date has been set. Harvey noted that Spain died while being transferred from Pitt Memorial Hospital, where he had been a patient since the wreck, to N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. He stated that the death was a "result of injuries received" in the accident, noting that Spain was suffering from internal bleeding as well as kidney and lung damage.

Louisiana Moving Toward Two School Systems

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — New Orleans ended ten days of school integration today with the Louisiana legislature offering new defiance of a federal court while moving toward a system of both public and private schools. The weekend holiday offered a respite from pickets who have screamed hatred at one school where a boycott by white pupils showed signs of weakening. A complete of white pupils held through the week at McDonogh No. 19 Elementary School, attended by three Negro girls in the first grade. Irate women and a few men concentrated their picketing on the William Frantz School, where 10 white children joined one Negro student Friday. Only one white child was brought to the Frantz school last Monday. Five more showed up Thursday and another four Friday. The two schools have a total enrollment of over 1,000. Many of the pupils have been going to school in an adjoining parish. United States marshals escorted the Negroes to and from school. Patrolmen provided protection for white children passing near demonstrators to enter Frantz school. Booming pickets and spectators were held across the street from the school by 100 or more police. The Louisiana House gave quick, unanimous approval Friday to a bill providing grant-in-aid funds for parents who wish to send their children to private schools. A sponsor said the measure would not interfere with the public school system. The measure won speedy approval from a Senate committee Friday night. Leases were signed on two buildings to be converted into private schools for pupils in the first three grades of Frantz and McDonogh schools. C. E. Vetter, a member of the Downtown Citizens Council in New Orleans said volunteers would work on the structures over the weekend and classes may be started in them Monday. A three-judge federal court issued sweeping injunctions against Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, other state officials and the legislature Wednesday to prevent them from stopping integration. The court said any legislation that defeated the right of Negroes to attend public schools is unconstitutional. Despite this, House Speaker Thomas Jewell announced Friday the legislature is withholding pay of teachers in the two integrated schools in New Orleans and has placed the teachers under investigation.

Sir Walter Raleigh Award Again Won By Ovid Pierce

RALEIGH — East Carolina College Professor Ovid Pierce won the Sir Walter Raleigh Award for fiction last night for his novel, "On A Lonesome Porch." It was the second time in six years that Pierce was honored by the Historical Book Club of North Carolina, which established the award. Pierce received his first Sir Walter Raleigh Award in 1954 for his first novel, "The Plantation." He was among four North Carolinians winning top literary awards during sessions of the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association during Culture Week. The Mayflower Cup for non-fiction went to Dr. Richard Bardolph of Woman's College for "The Negro Vanguard." The Juvenile Literature Award of the American Association of University Women went to editor Jonathan Daniels, the News and Observer, for his book, "Stonewall Jackson." Carl Sandburg of Flat Rock won the Roanoke Chowan Poetry Award. Clara Booth Byrd of Greensboro, president of the Historical Book Club of North Carolina, presented Pierce's award. The fiction winner was chosen by a board including Thad Stem Jr. and Dr. Richard H. Thornton, both of Oxford, Mrs. Luther Hodges of Raleigh, Dr. Richard Bardolph and Dr. Amy M. Charles, both of Woman's College. The Novel "On A Lonesome Porch" is a story of the Reconstruction Period in Eastern North Carolina about the year 1864. Pierce traces in the novel the impact of change following the Civil War upon three generations of a family. The novel received high praise from critics throughout the nation. "The Plantation," the author's first novel, also received good reviews and was even brought out in a French edition a year after its publication by Doubleday in this country. Ovid Pierce, a native of Halifax County, joined the faculty of East Carolina College in Greenville in 1956. Having restored a house on his farm near Weldon, N.C., the author spends most of his week-end there, writing and engaging in the interests of a land owner. He graduated from Duke University in 1932 with a bachelor of arts degree. There he was Phi Beta Kappa and edited "The Carthage," the campus literary magazine. He later attended Harvard, graduating with a master's degree in English. At Harvard, Pierce studied with Pulitzer Prize winner Robert Hillier. Following graduation he returned to Weldon, where he wrote his first novel. It was rejected. During World War II, Pierce entered the army and served with counter intelligence, stationed on the Mexican border for awhile, and later being sent to Puerto Rico, Trinidad, Haiti and British Guiana. After the war he taught about 10 years at Southern Methodist and Tulane Universities. He now is teaching courses in the English department at East Carolina College. He was honored in Greenville this year during the Fine Arts Festival, Saturday, April 30, was proclaimed "Ovid Pierce Day" and a luncheon was held in his honor. Outstanding writers from throughout North Carolina came to pay tribute to him. These included Henry Bell of Goldsboro, Ingils Fletcher, Bernice Kelly Harris and Thad Stem.

OID PIERCE

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy today chose North Carolina's Gov. Luther Hodges, 62-year-old former textile industrialist, as secretary of commerce. Kennedy announced his selection for the $25,000-a-year cabinet post with Hodges, a Democrat, standing at his side on the patio of the home of the president-elect's parents on the Atlantic shore. Kennedy read a statement saying he was making the Hodges appointment with great pleasure. He added: "At a time when the strength and accelerated growth of the American economy is vital to our own prosperity and to our ability to fulfill our commitments to the cause of world freedom, the Department of Commerce has become one of the most important agencies of government." Kennedy noted that the department employs more than 36,000 people and is spending more than a half-billion dollars this year to carry out its functions. Kennedy then said: "Gov. Hodges will bring to his new position experience in both business and government. During the last four years, under his administration, the State of North Carolina has secured $1 billion in new investment in manufacturing activities, in addition to huge sums for electric utility expansion. Much of this was made possible through Gov. Hodges' background in industry. "We are fortunate to be able to secure a man of Gov. Hodges' ability and background for this important post." Hodges' selection came as no surprise since it had been rumored for weeks that he was in line for the Cabinet post. This was Kennedy's second appointment to his Cabinet. Earlier this week, he named Gov. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut as secretary of health, education and welfare. The president-elect also has made two other major appointments this week—at the sub-Cabinet level. He chose David E. Bell as budget director and Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan to be assistant secretary of state for African affairs.

Governor Didn't Depart Unnoticed

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Hodges left Friday night for a conference with President-elect John Kennedy in a trip which apparently was to have been top secret. On reaching the train station, Hodges appeared surprised to see reporters. As he walked the ramp to his Pullman car, a conductor hollered, "Let me be the first to congratulate you, Mr. Secretary of Commerce." Obviously startled by the comment, Hodges, clad in a heavy overcoat against the early December chill, said "Thank you, but that's premature." Then, noting the reporters, he yelled over his shoulder with emphasis: "Very premature!" Thus began Hodges' long-awaited trek to meet with Kennedy. Speculation has been intense that the President-elect would part Hodges for secretary of Commerce. Several newspapers predicted it flatly. But, mum was the word around Capitol Square in Raleigh as frantic reporters grabbed at whatever they could find to give stature to their speculation. After the New York Times and Chicago Sun-Times said Hodges was the commerce secretary, Raleigh newsmen figured it to have been an obvious leak in connection with the governor's good-will tour to South America. They figured it would give the tour of 25 state governors more significance if the entourage included a Cabinet selection. Hodges aides, his administrative assistant, Robert Giles, and his private secretary, Harold Makepeace, weren't talking. Makepeace said all day Friday he knew nothing of any trip to Florida. "I'm just taking the governor to Sanford, my home. We're just going down for the weekend," he said, tongue-in-cheek. Hodges declined to comment on Kennedy's plans for the meetings. Before departing, he said Kennedy "asked me to come. Anything further will have to come from him. I don't know what he's going to say."

Russians Fail To Return Satellite

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union's race toward putting a man in space met a setback when Soviet scientists failed to bring back to earth a five-ton, dog-carrying satellite. But the Soviets claimed their latest space ship "yielded new data for manned space flight in the near future" before it shot off course Friday and burned up in the earth's atmosphere. Before the Soviets announced their failure—the first time they have done so—the launching was considered one of the last before a man might be rocketed into space and brought back alive. What went wrong was not announced, but Moscow radio did say Soviet scientists signaled the satellite to return to earth on a pre-calculated orbit and that it veered off course and disintegrated. Hours before the Soviets admitted defeat, scientists around the world said their tracking stations had lost contact with the space ship.

The Soviets launched the satellite Thursday amidst jubilant praise from Soviet Premier Khrushchev. The satellite carried two dogs, Fecheika (Little Bee) and Mushka (Little Fly), plus insects and plants. In announcing failure, Moscow radio did not mention the dogs. But it said earlier they survived the shoot into space and quickly became organically normal. Air conditioning, heat regulation and communications aboard the ship functioned reliably, the broadcast said. When the latest satellite went into orbit, Khrushchev said it represented "a great victory and a step to man's flight into space." E. K. Fedorov, Soviet Academy of Science vice president, said the project's purpose was "to gather information about the response of living organisms to space travel and thus pave the way for putting a man in space."

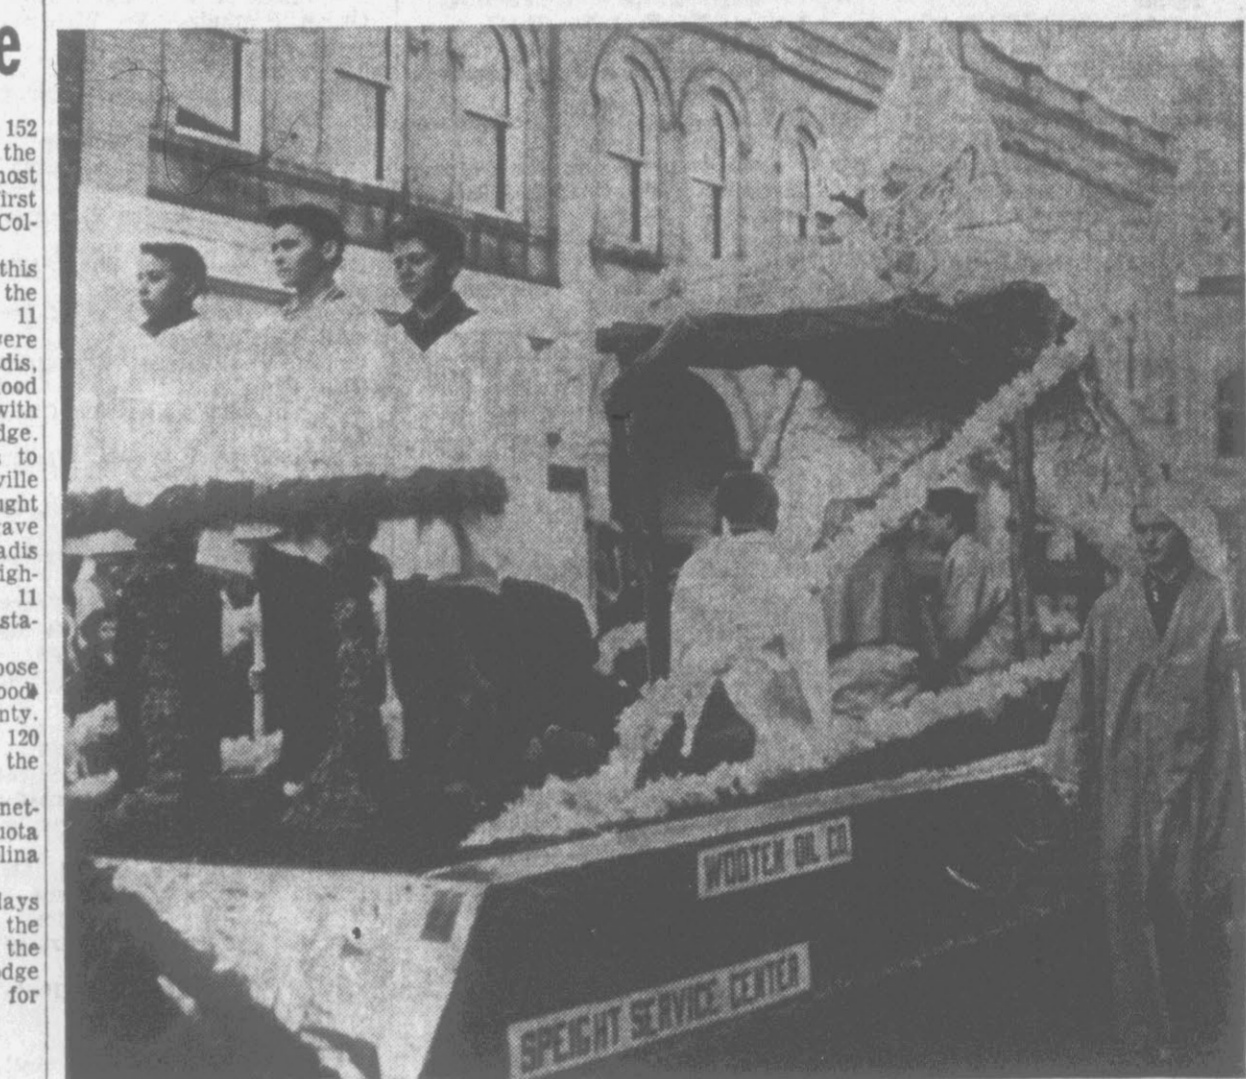

U.S. Prestige Said Damaged By Fraud Charges

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP)—Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., says that charges of voting irregularities in the presidential election will damage U. S. prestige. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, also said Friday night that he had not discussed any Cabinet post with President-elect John F. Kennedy. He added: "As far as I am concerned, I would like to be the senator from Arkansas." He has been mentioned as a possible secretary of state in Kennedy's Cabinet. During a speech to the Arkansas Turkey Federation, Fulbright recalled the presidential campaign issue of American prestige overseas. Then he said, "The accusation of illegal voting in the last presidential election would do more than anything to lower the prestige of the United States in Europe and other places." He added, "The election is over. Everyone ought to start pulling together now."

Gave 152 Pints To Bloodmobile

The bloodmobile collected 152 pints of blood from donors at the Moose Lodge yesterday, almost making up the deficit of their first day's visit at East Carolina College. The Red Cross reported this morning that in addition to the 152 pints of blood collected, 11 more donors appeared but were rejected. Dr. Howard A. Gradis, chairman of the Pitt County blood program, was very pleased with the showing at the Moose Lodge. He expressed special thanks to C.K. Beatty of the Greenville Street Department, who brought 28 men to give blood. They gave a total of 27 pints. Dr. Gradis also expressed thanks to the Highway Department, which sent 11 donors to the Moose Lodge station. The Friday visit to the Moose Lodge concluded a two-day bloodmobile collection in Pitt County. The quota for each day was 120 pints, a total of 240 pints for the two days. The first day of collection netted only 68 pints out of the quota from students of East Carolina College. The total collected for both days was 220 pints, just 20 short of the 240 quota. Dr. Gradis said the 163 donors at the Moose Lodge "was a wonderful turnout for Greenville."

Farmville Santa Parade Draws Crowd

FARMVILLE'S ANNUAL CHRISTMAS PARADE . . . Pictured above is one of 17 elaborately decorated floats included in yesterday's Yuletide ceremonial in Farmville. FARMVILLE — Cold, blustery weather here yesterday afternoon helped usher in Farmville's Christmas season as some 10,000 spectators lined the streets to watch an hour-long Christmas Parade. Sporting a total of 17 majestic floats, the parade wound through Farmville's business streets while frigid spectators, heavily wrapped against sub-freezing temperatures, watched eagerly. No winning floats were announced under a new program begun this year by the Farmville Chamber of Commerce. Prizes will be awarded around Dec. 18 to the best window displays by Farmville merchants. All 17 floats were, as usual, decorated under the supervision of Vassar Fields and his wife. Included in the gay entourage were three high school marching bands, complete with high-stepping majorettes; several clowns; old cars; a brigade of prancing ponies; and Santa Claus himself. The 10,000 spectators lined most of the parade route that stretched a total of 12 blocks through Farmville's business district. Beginning promptly at 4:30 yesterday afternoon, the professional, 29 units strong, slowly made its way down Main St. from its point of origination at Horne Ave. It turned right at Cotton St. and circled back to intersect Main St. via George and Wilson Sts. After crossing Main at the town's main intersection, the parade again circled via Wilson, Contentnea, and Grimmersburg Sts to again intersect Main. It continued north on Main to its point of origination where it disbanded. Moments before the parade began, Farmville's six blocks of Christmas lights, standing ready for nearly two weeks, were turned on for the first time. Following the parade, Farmville merchants began the usual season schedule of keeping their stores open until 9 p.m. Louis Williams of the local Chamber of Commerce said today the parade was "considered a big success" here, but added attendance "may have been off a little because of the cold weather."

Johnny built a snowman! From white, cold snow he made it. It was hard work, and Johnny was justly proud.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship.

Johnny built a snowman—in a day! He packed the snow hard, put in coals for the eyes and nose, and Daddy's hat was placed on top.

But, far more of Daddy than just his hat went into this snowman. Just as Johnny worked hard to build the snowman, his father is hard at work too...

Luckily for Johnny, Daddy is a wise father. He realizes that the most important single influence upon his son's life is the teaching of Christ.

Protected By Compulsory Insurance

North Carolina's compulsory motor vehicle liability insurance law—regardless of the criticism leveled at it over these past few years—has afforded citizens of the state a greater degree of protection than they have ever before had on the highways.

To deny the people of the state the protection of this law and revert to the situation which existed prior to the enactment of the law is unthinkable.

It is no secret that insurance companies operating in North Carolina have fought against the law since it was proposed by Walter Jones of Farmville several years ago. The companies are continuing to fight for repeal of the legislation, using as their principal basis for argument the assertion that insurance claims are causing the companies to lose money and further that over the long run continuation of the law will sharply increase the cost of liability insurance for every motor vehicle in North Carolina.

On the other hand, the law has been effective in providing protection for people who suffer injuries or property damage from vehicles operated by others. Prior to enactment of the law, many individuals who owned or operated motor vehicles in the state were not financially responsible for losses caused by the vehicles. Many of those who suffered injuries or property losses found it impossible to recover from persons who were at fault in the accidents.

Since the compulsory liability insurance law has been in effect, the number of such cases has decreased sharply. People using the highways are afforded greater protection against losses, and at the same time, automotive liability insurance rates have been held within reasonable bounds.

The compulsory liability insurance law of North Carolina should not be repealed at the behest of insurance companies who have been against it since its inception. The protection afforded the people of North Carolina should not be junked when obviously the need for such protection continues.

If there are logical revisions which should be made to the original act, certainly they could be considered by the 1961 legislature. If there are alternate methods of affording protection for the people who use the state's highways, these should be considered also. But under no circumstances should the law which has meant so much to the people of the state be repealed unless a better one is enacted to take its place.

Research Triangle Is Rapidly Growing Asset

It was just a few years ago that North Carolina's Research Triangle was just an idea of Gov. Hodges to create a research center for industry that would enable private enterprise to make use of research facilities at the three major educational institutional of the state.

Today North Carolina's Research Triangle has gained nation-wide attention, it has attracted research departments from several of the nation's major industrial firms and its growth potential increases with each new firm that moves into the area.

Just this week it was announced that still another firm—this one from California—has chosen the Research Triangle for the site of an advanced research laboratory. The Triangle has moved out of the realm of a dream and has become in North Carolina a genuine asset, not only to industrial research, but to the industrial and economic development of the state.

Based on the progress made since the founding of the Research Triangle project, there is every reason to believe it will become the major industrial research center of the South, and certainly one of the more important centers of its kind in the nation. As the research center of the state grows we can also expect the economic potential through industrial development to grow.

In the state's Research Triangle, we have another example of what forward-looking leadership can provide to an area, even though at the outset many may scoff an idea as impractical or too far ahead of its time.

Attention Given Critical Africa

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Associated Press News Analyst

President-elect John F. Kennedy focused national attention at a critical moment upon the battle ahead in Africa.

His appointment of Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams as assistant secretary of state for Africa comes amid indications from the huge continent that the Congo situation has aroused fear and suspicion of Communist intentions. This is detectable even among leaders who consider themselves leftist and who are loud in their condemnation of the West.

If this is so, there is a chance that black Africa soon will simmer down, at least sufficiently to give its leaders a chance to assess cautiously what may lie ahead.

This by no means softens the warning by Sen. Kennedy that "the fate of Africa, which is now the object of a giant Communist offensive, will affect vitally the security of every citizen of the United States."

There is no easy solution in store for black Africa's problems. It will remain the arena for a grim cold war struggle.

But it will be important for Americans if African leaders realize that there is more than one kind of outside domination. The Africans are familiar with the sort which came from Europe and which has just about been consigned forever to history. Africans have had no experience with modern Communist colonialism which surrenders none of the vast territories it has conquered.

The Congo remains a key to Africa's immediate future. There is little hope for stability while superimposed African leaders look upon Red interference in the Congo as an instrument to further their own ambitions.

But Westerners who know Africa say what has been going on among its new nations has been a sort of flexing of muscles in a contest to determine which will emerge as the leading influence in the continent.

Probably, in the long run, neither Ghana nor Guinea, which seem to be in the forefront of that contest, will be strong enough to occupy the role. The emergence of Nigeria is among factors working against the pretensions of the other two to leadership. Indeed, Nigeria can turn out to be, eventually, a significant force for stability in African politics.

Undoubtedly most young African leaders are impatient to erase all traces of European colonialism. Britain and France, the major colonial powers, aware that the old sort of imperialism is dead, have been seeking to bridge the colonial era and independence.

Moscow wants no such bridge. Immediate independence for all dependent areas would suit Moscow's purposes, since it would foretold chaos, confusion and rivalries.

Africans may be tumbling to this. One indication is a recent Asian-African resolution in the U. N. which though it seeks the end of colonialism, makes its demand read "quick steps toward a" independence. The word "toward" suggests Africans, too, see a need for a bridge, in the light of the Congo experience. The resolution probably jolted Moscow.

Whatever rival muscle-flexing is going on in Africa, whatever designs leaders like Sekou Toure of Guinea or Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana may have had in the Congo, there seems a hint now that they look upon all this as an African affair and not the business of a gigantic Soviet power thousands of miles away.

This can suggest to the Kennedy administration that the patterns of African development are far from frozen and that there is reason to hope the continent's leaders will attempt to find their own way, independent of outside domination.

Strength For Today

WATCH THOSE MOODS

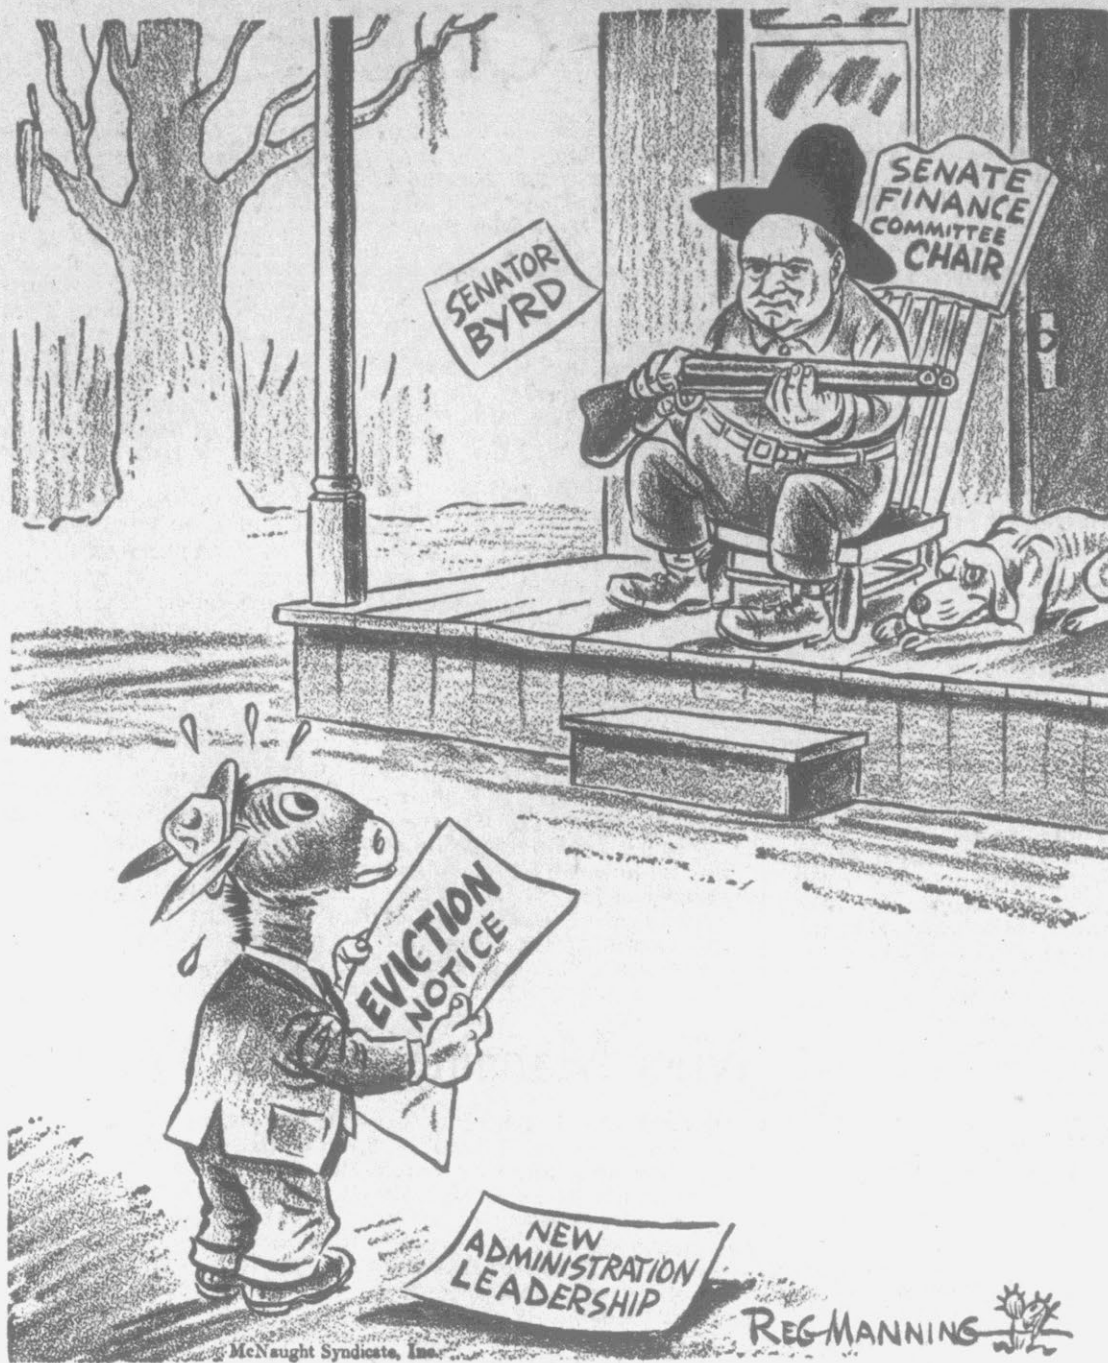

It is a dreadful thing if we become prisoners of our moods. We can have happy moods, and we can have moods that are deeply melancholy, moods filled with a gnawing sense of injustice and injury—moods aflame with resentment, hot anger, and the resolution to get even for some wrong done us.

When people find themselves in a continual state of dejection they would do well to consult a physician. Such moods may arise from wrong mental attitudes and patterns of thought. Even more often melancholy moods have their basis in some physical disorder. If we all ate properly, got sufficient sleep, and carefully watched the habits of our living, most of our melancholy would disappear.

Sometimes we are depressed about certain situations. Some of these situations can and should be changed, and if this is the case we should lose no time in changing them. There are other situations in our lives which cannot be changed. God does not intend us to endure these situations in a sullen spirit, but to rise triumphant above them. If there is some situation in your life which makes you very unhappy and which cannot be changed, then ask yourself how you can live with that situation and really get on top of it instead of allowing it to get on top of you.

So far nothing has been found to equal will power, religious faith, and righteous purpose in the living of a radiantly happy life.

Lookin' Fer Me, Young Feller?

By HENRY HOWARD

Contemplating Frenzy

Somebody was wondering aloud—perhaps slightly too loud—last night, "What's this world of ours coming to?" Now this particular person, as rational as you or anybody else, was wondering and wandering along lines familiar, to one degree or another, to most of our populace.

Many, and probably a very high percentage, of us find ourselves pausing not infrequently for a fleeting moment here and there to wonder haphazardly,

"Where are we headed in such a rush . . . and just how fast?" As each of us will realize when we find the time to combine two or even three "fleeting moments" into a single brief period of straight thinking, the current trio or so of living generations is merely struggling to carry on the age-old battle.

"But," we say, "What battle must we continue to struggle with?" Actually, we (none of us) are really quite unqualified to describe what battle is being waged. All we can say is that the tempo of the world's activities has continued to increase with each new generation.

"But," we say again, "why must the activity of our everyday lives be increased to such a frenzied pace?"

"Well, some masterminds will readily inform inquirers with such questions: 'Situations like this are inevitable; it's a natural thing with the population increasing by leaps and bounds the way it does. People just have to scramble to survive.'"

Others will say the pace is not really so frenzied at all—it's just some kind of blanket psychosis or neurosis we're obsessed with that makes us feel rushed. The problem, this particular school will say, will begin to correct it. (Continued on page six)

Other Editors Saying Education - - Nat'l Goals

(Wilson Times)

One of the controversial points in the presidential campaign just closed was federal aid to education. The difference in the planks or positions of the two candidates was the course the aid would take. Both candidates favored federal aid for education.

Senator Kennedy favors federal aid to education including teachers' salary. Vice-President Nixon favors federal aid to education for school construction thus releasing local funds for teachers' salaries. The difference is in the teachers salary provision. The fear here is federal control.

Now the national goals for education are out and these come from the Commission appointed by President Eisenhower on national goals. Again the commentators emphasize the federal participation. And again we will quote the exact content of the report. It needs no interpretation.

The main point we do want to stress is what the report emphasizes. This is that "Education is primarily a responsibility of the states. They have delegated responsibility for public elementary and secondary education to local authorities and universities. This is the firmly established pattern, it can be made to function satisfactorily to meet the needs of our vast and diverse nation."

This last sentence is all important for it stresses the success of local authority. The black print says that education at every level and in every discipline be strengthened and its effectiveness enhanced. Greater resources, private, corporate, municipal, state and federal must be mobilized. A higher proportion of the national product must be devoted to education. By 1970 expenditures should be approximately $40 billion, double the 1960 figure. This is taken from the report.

"Most of these funds must continue to come from state and local governments, tuition, payments and gifts. State and local appropriations have more than doubled since 1960. The federal role must be expanded." All this is picked up, word for word from the report.

"Federal aid to higher education must include increased scholarship and loan funds, support of research and direct assistance for buildings and equipment."

"The federal government should supplement state funds where per capita income is too low to maintain an adequate school program. It should also offer matching grants for educational purposes to be determined by the states."

"Since the Northwest Ordinance of 1787 the federal government has participated in the support of education without destroying local initiative and responsibility. In the future these values should still be safeguarded."

There is nothing in the entire context that advocates a change in the present pattern of local and state control.

The report advocates consolidation of small and inefficient school districts, strengthening the local school boards, increased teachers' salaries and two year colleges within commuting distance of the majority of high school graduates.

But again the report says "The local school district remains the key to good public education. There is no shifting of the responsibility of management or financing in this program. Read the statement on federal aid to higher education. It goes to scholarships, buildings and equipment."

"Clearly the goal is to bring every state nearer the present

Public Forum

TO THE EDITOR:

Should we deny our youth the right to retain buildings, which house the history of our city, and which echo the footsteps of our local ancestors treading many weary miles trying to preserve our inalienable rights?

Should we tear down such a building which is not only dated by tradition and beautiful, but lends dignity and respect to all who survey it and build another with green timber and modern architecture to please those that believe that the new is all important regardless of waste and expense?

The building I am describing is our beloved courthouse, which in my humble opinion should be kept intact and cherished as a landmark for future generations.

We fill our museums full of relics from the past and tear down the historical structures of our cities which should continue to stand and house the memoirs of our past generations.

In the teaching professions, this is not quite the same because there are varieties of opportunities, from teaching in colleges and universities to kindergarten. Colleges and universities can no longer afford to give teaching positions to those who are definitely not suited for scholarship. The teacher who is one bone ahead of his class will only too soon be shown up by the bright students who are unwilling, in these competitive times, to waste their days with a dopey teacher.

College And The Future

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"The Insider's Newsletter," a knowledgeable publication, says: "Educators who are accustomed to thinking in terms of college teachers and classroom shortages, are apprehensive about a recent study showing that within the next decade, the proportion of young people who desire a college education may actually begin to decline. The two reasons: 1. Having a college education is no longer the prestige symbol it used to be now that so many more people are getting them, while 2. Skilled labor is beginning to pay off as well if not better than many a growing number of people are coming to recognize this fact."

The A.B. degree has lost prestige because there are too many colleges in the United States whose standards are too low both for entrance and for graduation. The result is that persons own an A.B. degree and some even a Phi Beta Kappa key who are altogether lacking in the cultural attainments of a European high school graduate. It is true that many such persons ridicule what they call the Ivy League universities, but this can be said for the latter that a graduate from one of them is likely to speak grammatical English; he is undoubtedly aware of the vast accumulation of other people's knowledge running back through the past eight or ten thousand years; he is likely to know something about science. He will know at least one ancient and one foreign language apart from his own English which will not be as rough when he graduates as when he matriculated.

In all European countries, a university exists for only one purpose, learning. No one goes to a European university because it is fashionable or because it is possible to make a better marriage, or because one must be at school or be a delinquent, or because he wants to learn to play the saxophone or to be a drummer. There are advantages may be attained; the university is for learning and for nothing else. No A. summa cum laude student is kept back because he has not passed gym. It is acknowledged that many learned persons do not care about gym.

Our brighter students realize that all colleges are not alike. They battle to get into the good ones. They recognize that an A average is hard to get but there are students who make it and they get into the colleges of their first choice.

More attendance at a college does not pay off. Ten years later the student who got through with a gentlemanly C running snap courses, may discover that his undisciplined mind does not serve him in these tough times.

For a young person, these are very tough times. Take for instance a law student who does not make the Law Reviews, whose standing in his class is below the top 25, what are the possibilities for him? He is not likely to get into a distinguished law firm. He probably can get a job in government service but he will not be practicing law; he will be doing clerical work in an administrative agency. He might hang out a single and practice solo.

The same difficulties face the young doctor who does not graduate with distinction. His opportunities for internship and residence in outstanding hospitals and association with outstanding physicians and surgeons are limited. The A students are at a premium. Everybody seeks them.

In the teaching professions, this is not quite the same because there are varieties of opportunities, from teaching in colleges and universities to kindergarten. Colleges and universities can no longer afford to give teaching positions to those who are definitely not suited for scholarship. The teacher who is one bone ahead of his class will only too soon be shown up by the bright students who are unwilling, in these competitive times, to waste their days with a dopey teacher.

'Revolution' In The Ad Field

By ELMER ROESSNER

What is likely to be a sweeping revolution affecting almost every business in America has broken out in advertising.

The first stroke of the revolution was the announcement that Shell Oil had arranged to pay its advertising agency, Ogilvy, Benson & Mather, a flat fee.

The idea that a corporation should pay a flat fee for a professional service, just as it pays flat fees for legal advice, engineering, design and management guidance, may not seem revolutionary to the average person. But flat fees are relatively rare in advertising especially in big-corporation operations. Most advertising agencies survive or die on 15 per cent commissions on the money they spend for clients. The commissions are paid the agencies by newspapers, magazines, television stations or other media.

There is no secret kick-back. The system is above-board. Company, advertising agency, media and all their competitors are fully aware of the method. All know that if an advertising agency buys space and time for a $1,000,000 advertising campaign, it will collect $150,000 from the media. Out of this it must pay its own cost of salary, art work, rent, management and so on. Advertising authorities say a typical net profit after expenses is $20,000.

There are some exceptions to this 15 per cent commission rule. An advertising agency cannot and will not work for mere commission on small orders. Writing, illustrating and placing $1,000 in advertising cannot be done for 15 per cent. $150. Small accounts must therefore pay fees.

Again, big advertisements often pay fees for surveys and other special services. And from time to time, medium size agencies have experimented with fees. But the advertising business has largely been on a commission basis.

LONG ACCEPTED

criticized. Some have objected because one party (the medium) paid the other party's (the advertiser's) employees. The system has caused many media to adopt two rates, one for agency-placed advertising and one for advertising placed direct by the advertisers. It has caused agencies to demand commissions on classified advertising, usually priced low to cover commissions. It has induced some advertisers to set up captive agencies, that is, agencies which handled only the accounts of the company plus one or two small firms as window dressing. These agencies channel commissions back to the master company, or to that company's favorites.

The most serious trouble however, is that the system tends to produce mediocre advertising. Since an agency is limited to 15 per cent, it is inclined and sometimes forced to cut production outlays. This often resulted in ineffective, bland and even stupid advertising. An agency with $1,000,000 worth of advertising and a need to make $20,000 profit will have to keep art copy and production costs to $130,000, which may or may not produce advertisements that will return a profit on $1,000,000 invested.

Now Shell and Ogilvy, Benson & Mather have made their deal. Media and advertising men everywhere are watching it closely. Details are not fully revealed, but it is understood that the agency will be paid a fee of about 25 per cent of the advertising outlay, plus reimbursement for extraordinary expenses, and that commissions collected from media will be credited to Shell.

If it works out, it may mean the end of the old 15 per cent. Media may like it, because it would simplify their rate structures. Agencies would like it, because they could charge professional fees, rather than be dependent on sometimes inadequate commissions. Advertisers would like it, because they would be reassured that the advertising agencies were working for them and not for the media who paid them their commissions.

Another Wagonmaster Is Seen For 'Wagon Train'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)—"Whither 'Wagon Train'?" That question has been asked ever since the high-ranking Western lost its wagonmaster with the sudden death of Ward Bond four weeks ago. Now comes Bond's co-star and scout, Robert Horton, with an inkling of what the future will hold.

"I have an idea that we'll finish out this season without replacing Bond," said Horton. "We still have five pictures in which he appears, and that should carry us through the next two months."

"I'll be doing more than my usual share, and we'll probably make use of the two other continuing characters, the wagonmaster's right-hand man, played by Terry Wilson, and the cook, played by Frank McGrath."

High School Guidance Program Discussed At Rose PTA Meet

The High School Student and the Guidance Program" was the topic discussed by a panel Thursday night at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Junior High School.

The participants were introduced by J.E. Waldrop, chairman of the program committee. The panel consisted of Mrs. Grover Everett, a former guidance counselor in the city schools of Lynchburg, Va., now a member of the English Department of East Carolina College; Dr. Frank Fuller and Dr. Richard Spears, both members of the Department of Education, faculty of the college and of the American Personal and Guidance Association. Mrs. Everett served as Moderator of the panel.

Dr. Spears, in discussing the question, "What is guidance," stated that a good guidance program includes individual inventory, information, counseling, placement, follow-up, and group guidance.

Dr. Fuller emphasized the need for counseling in high school and in college, saying "good counseling is that phase of the school program which concerns itself primarily with the uniqueness and individuality of each student. It is the insurance we take out against mass education." Both panelists mentioned the tangible results of good counseling services.

During a business session which preceded the program, Dr. Grover Everett, president of the Association, welcomed those present and presented Rev. Thomas Money, pastor of Hooker Memorial Church, who offered prayers and gave a devotional.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Laughlin, co-chairmen of the home-room committee, have named the following parents to serve as room representatives:

Patrolmen Engaged In Closing Out '60 Safely

An all-out campaign to "Close Out Sixty" safely was launched Thursday by members of the State Highway Patrol in Pitt County.

Local officers, participating in a state-wide effort to reduce the number of highway accidents and fatalities during December, began a saturation and selective enforcement patrol campaign, which will see three Pitt County patrolmen assigned to a specific, high-accident-frequency area for their entire eight hour duty period for four days each week.

Cpl. J. T. Jenkins explained that the officers working on the special program have been assigned to key roads and areas where accident rates are high. The roads and areas will be patrolled under this special program Thursday through Sunday each week, and the officers will stop at least one vehicle per pedestrian each 15 minutes, even if the vehicle is not observed violating a law. Each motorist or pedestrian contacted while on patrol will be given a safety leaflet, Jenkins added.

Areas which have been designated this week are: the Black Jack-Grimesland area; N.C. 43 from the city limits of Greenville south to the intersection of N.C. 102; and from the northern city limits of Greenville on N.C. 11-U.S.13 for a 10-mile radius, including part on N.C. 903. Officers assigned the areas this week include Ptl. Howard Winslow, Ptl. W. K. Chapman, and Ptl. Luther Long.

Jenkins stated, "Officers will concentrate their efforts on dangerous moving violations," placing special attention to speeding, operating on the wrong side of the road, and failure to grant the right of way—the three leading causes of wrecks in Pitt County.

Jenkins emphasized that the officers not assigned to these areas should be alert for special saturation patrols will be patrolling the remainder of the county and operating in the usual manner.

District III Sgt. Louis B. Lane of Rocky Mount noted that for December 1959, "124 traffic deaths" were reported in the state, while 13 persons were killed on Christmas day. The death toll for December was "the greatest number for any month since 1955," the veteran officers pointed out. He added that more than five day holiday period last year (December 24-28) 39 citizens lost their lives due to traffic mishaps in the state.

"Through co-operative effort, we should be able to effect a reduction in the fatalities this year," the sergeant concluded.

Cpl. Jenkins urged motorists to co-operate with patrol officials by driving safely and displaying courtesy on the highways in an effort to reduce the mounting accident and fatality rate in the state, and in Pitt County. He pointed out that highway patrolmen are working to make the roads safe, but the officers "are unable to accomplish any reduction in the number of accidents without the help and full support of the motoring public."

HIGHWAY PATROLMEN . . . in their effort to stem the rising tide of traffic accidents in Pitt County will be especially watchful for "Stop" and "Yield Right of Way" sign violators in their "Close Out Sixty" safety-enforcement program.

More People Reading For Information

SELECTING READING MATTER . . . Mrs. Frank M. Park of 1102 E. Fourth St. is a frequent visitor at the library. She enjoys reading light novels for the most part.

A TEACHER . . . Mrs. Lucille Mayo, home economics instructor at Grimesland School, engages in after-school activity as she delves into subject matter in the card file.

ABOUT THE MIDDLE OF THE AFTERNOON . . . the Sheppard Memorial Library begins to swell with patrons, including school youngsters, college students, teachers and townspeople.

By PATRICIA MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

What are you reading now? Why?

Most likely, you are following the present trend in reading matter and are exploring the vast area of "information" books.

"More and more, people are coming for information books," says Miss Elizabeth Copeland, librarian of Sheppard Memorial Library. "The trend is not so much away from fiction—it is as popular as it has always been—but people are reading more information books than ever before," she added.

There are a number of reasons for this trend. Probably you are aware of many of them yourselves.

In the first place, there are more good books available than before, Miss Copeland said. And, they are better written.

People are reading more books these days, be it fiction or information.

People know so much more than they ever have before, and they are consequently more curious, Miss Copeland notes. She pointed out that the medium of television especially has brought the furthest parts of the world right into people's homes, adding to knowledge and arousing curiosity about subjects not thought of before.

The public is satisfying curiosities by reading books, Miss Copeland said. This is contrary to an idea when television first came out that it would stifle reading incentive.

In addition to television, radio and newspapers are informing people better than ever before.

People are more concerned about things, and want to know more about the events of the country and world.

Then, too, more subject matter is available in book form now than ever before.

In Greenville's own library, at the end of June, 1950, the adult book collection was just about half and half in regard to fiction and informational reading material. Probably not many libraries have as many information as fiction books, Miss Copeland noted.

Academic Community

The fact that Greenville is located in an academic community influences the buying of books and choice of reading matter. There is a high level of education among the population, partially because of East Carolina College.

Of course, this has something to do with which books are selected to fill the library shelves.

Miss Copeland says several factors influence her buying of books. One is what is coming off the press at the time.

She studies special fields of knowledge and tries to balance the library's collection, filling in gaps.

And, "We are a large enough library to fill demands," she added, saying that the public demand does influence buying, somewhat.

Seasonal Reading

There are other factors which influence choice of reading matter and add to the increasing demand for information books.

It shouldn't be surprising to learn that the seasons, particularly the religious seasons, strongly influence choice of reading matter.

During the "political season," the library had a strong run on books on politics, policy, candidates, the political parties, general elections and similar topics.

Seasonal books now in demand pertain to Christmas, including Christmas cooking, parties, and meaning of Christmas, decorating and religious material. Many church groups who use Bible studies depend on the library for information in preparation of lessons. Naturally, Thanksgiving and Easter are other seasonal reading times at the library.

Always In Demand

There are many informational books always in demand these days. Among these are science, biography and autobiography.

"We have more and more landowners," Miss Copeland said, "who ask for information on architecture, gardening and landscaping." Very recently a family called for information on insurance. They felt they could get an impartial, unbiased information from the library which would not be slanted toward any one company or policy.

"This is the greatest asset the library has: it furnishes information on both sides of the story, and the decisions and reactions are left entirely up to the reader, with no pressure," Miss Copeland pointed out.

The library, thus, is the one institution we have which is strictly voluntary, she said.

As for history books, they are in constant demand. The increasing scope of knowledge, plus the events brought to people through television, radio and newspapers, as noted before, have increased curiosities. The world situation itself has aroused concern among the people. Many of them are now reading history books in order to be informed.

People are asking for books on N.A.T.O., Korea and other subjects they hear discussed now but never felt close to before.

Reading Habits

Reading habits, like other habits, tend to form early, Miss Copeland has observed. Children who establish library habits before they go to school never grow away from them and they adapt to learning more quickly than children who have not been introduced to books, she believes.

She has noticed a definite correlation between honor roll students and the regular readers at the library. If a student likes books, he will enjoy his text books more, she says, and a regular reader will understand better what has been read.

The adult circulation of Shep-

LITTLE PEOPLE . . . like to read books, too. Mrs. Marshal Henson of 1706 Forest Hills Dr., assists Lane Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Johnston, and her own daughter Holly, five, select some of Dr. Seuss's books. Holly's mother reads about 10 books to her every week. Reading habits established early carry into later life and help the child with learning.

pard Memorial Library is greater than the children's. The adult circulation includes high schools age people as well as adults, it should be noted.

In the summers, reading among young people increases. It might be noted that Sheppard Memorial Library has a summer reading program widely participated in by school students.

As for using the library, the library here is "extensively" used.

However, the number is not so great as it should be for the population, Miss Copeland says.

Nevertheless, it is used by young and old alike, and well used by city school students, who begin their lessons and use the reference material. These students are always well behaved, Miss Copeland said, and present no problem as in some other cities.

The patrons come from throughout the county, in addition to Greenville citizens. And the librarians encourage this usage.

Due to interest in reading, new libraries have opened this year in Grifton and in South Ayden.

STUDENTS FIND A QUIET PLACE TO STUDY . . . at Sheppard Memorial Library. They use facilities, as well as reference books. Here Judy Tucker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Waldrop, Ramona Sawyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shelton W. Sawyer, and Helen Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Brown, keep quiet as per library rules. There is no juvenile problem at this library.

THE CAMPBELL COLLEGE CHOIR will present a concert for the Associational Training Union "M-Night" of the South Roanoke Baptist Association here Monday night at Immanuel Baptist Church. Five hundred Baptists from the six-county area of the association are expected to gather for the program. "M-Night" is the Mobilization meeting of Baptist Training Unions held simultaneously in associations throughout the area of the Southern Baptist Convention when purposes, plans and goals for 1961 will be presented and adopted.

Some 300 Delegates Attend Three-Day Program At ECC

Some 300 delegates from colleges, universities, public schools, and welfare and recreation agencies in the State are completing today at East Carolina College a 3-day program presented at the annual meeting of the North Carolina Organization of the American Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation.

Nat'l Council Of Churches Assembly To Open Sunday

Drop Philippine Storm Warnings

MANILA (AP)—Storm warnings were cancelled throughout the Philippines today as typhoon Ophelia veered into the northeast. Weathermen located her 748 miles southwest of Iwo Jima island, lumbering along at 10 miles an hour in the general direction of Japan. Her deadly interior winds register up to 132 M.P.H.

Composer To Conduct Orchestra In Sunday's Concert

With John Barnes Chance, young American composer, as guest conductor, the East Carolina College Orchestra will appear in concert in the Wright auditorium Sunday, at 3:30 p.m. The program is the third presentation on the college Entertainment Series for 1960-1961.

Chance, now composer in residence in Greensboro, will conduct the orchestra in his "Symphony," to be performed as a special attraction of the afternoon. Donald H. Hayes of the college faculty will direct the ensemble in works by Brahms, Handel, Strauss, and others.

Chance, a native of Texas, now holds a Humanities and Arts Grant from the Ford Foundation and is spending the 1960-1961 school year in Greensboro as "composer in residence."

Beginning the study of music at the age of nine, Chance was interested in composing during his high school days and wrote music for orchestra, including the first movement of a symphony.

He attended the University of Texas and holds both the bachelor and the master of music degrees from the institution. While there, he twice won the Carl Owens Award for the best student composition.

First Appointees Already Active

WASHINGTON (AP)—The first major appointees of President-elect John F. Kennedy already have taken the early steps toward mastering their new assignments.

David E. Bell, named budget director Friday, met with the outgoing director immediately after Kennedy announced the appointment.

Gov. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut, the incoming secretary of welfare, telephoned the present secretary and scheduled a conference with him in Washington Tuesday afternoon.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, the new assistant secretary for African affairs, made plans to tour Africa before the inauguration of Kennedy next month.

Bell lunched with the present budget director, Maurice Stans, who promised him "the fullest cooperation in every way" in achieving a smooth transition.

Bell, a Harvard professor who was a Budget Bureau specialist during the Truman administration, said, "I expect there will be no difficulty whatever in achieving a smooth and effective transition."

"As a general proposition," Bell said, he agreed strongly with the fiscal position taken by Kennedy during the campaign: budgets should be balanced except during emergencies or recessions.

Stans said Bell would be given an office and a secretary in the bureau for his use during the transition period. The bureau is located next door to the White House.

Ribicoff said that after conferring with Secretary of Welfare Arthur S. Flemming Tuesday, he planned to hold preliminary discussions with others on the organization of the department.

Tax Trial Set For Ex-Mobster

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A judge has set ex-mobster Mickey Cohen's trial on federal income tax evasion charges for April 3.

"A defendant is entitled to a speedy trial whether he wants it or not," federal Judge George H. Bould of Tacoma, Wash., said Friday in refusing a defense request for postponement.

For two years he was conductor of the Fourth U.S. Army Band at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. He arranged music for the band and continued his work as a composer during this time. Later he was with the Eighth Army Band at Seoul, Korea.

Since 1959 he has been the manager of High Fidelity, Inc., Austin, Texas.

The East Carolina Orchestra, an organization of 67 members, includes students and faculty members at East Carolina and other instrumentalists from Greenville and the surrounding area.

With Mr. Hayes conducting, the concert will open with Brahms' "Symphony," No. 2, first movement, and will include Handel's "Water Music" and the Emperor "Waltz" by Strauss.

In addition to the Chance Symphony, of particular interest on the program will be Gould's "Declaration Suite," based on the Declaration of Independence and performed by the orchestra and a speaking chorus from Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, national professional music fraternity for men.

Chance's appearance at East Carolina as guest conductor is sponsored by the college Entertainment Committee and the Student Government Association.

JAMES KEENE'S New Historical Novel
IRON MAN, IRON HORSE

CHAPTER 32

Four of Murray Singer's men remained still while the rest started to move away. Singer said, "Well, what's the matter with you?"

Mr. Gary has his section in place and will pay particular attention to guarding the cañon. He blew out a long breath. "I believe everything is ready. The waiting is hell though."

The Indians retreated out of rifle range and drew together for a lengthy discussion. After fifteen minutes of this, Ben Holliday decided that there wasn't going to be another attack.

DONALD H. HAYES, conductor of the East Carolina Orchestra, is shown during a rehearsal session. The orchestra will be presented in a concert Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in Wright Auditorium at which time composer John B. Chance will act as guest conductor for his own symphonic work.

Civil Defense Radio Plan For Pitt County Is Sought

Plans were set in motion Thursday night for a Pitt County-wide radio communications system under the Civil Defense program. Cliff Blalock, assistant Civil Defense Communications officer for North Carolina, described details of the Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service plan that is proposed for use in Pitt by the Greenville Amateur Radio Club.

Under the RACES program, four separate departments would be required. (1) a control communications center, (2) an engineering department, (3) an operators' department, and (4) a central receiving department for telephone and personal emergency messages to be transmitted over the system's radio network.

The proposed program would ask the county to purchase units to be used in rural areas without municipal governments with adequate funds to finance one of the units. Municipal governments would be asked to finance (around $200) units to be purchased cooperatively with CD to be used in their particular areas.
