Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

The pecan is a double duty tree for use on the home grounds, if you have room for it. Not only does it furnish food for your palate, but it is a fine shade tree. If trimmed high, grass will grow under it. Its filtered shade is ideal for some lawn grasses.

The pecan likes a soil that is naturally fertile, well drained and containing quite a lot of organic matter. Soil that will produce good cotton or corn is ideal for pecans. Deep, coarse sands and soil that has a hard pan are not for pecans—avoid them.

The soil should have a pH of 5.5-6.0 (which is slightly acid) the closer to 6.0 the better. To keep from being disappointed with the progress your pecan makes, have a test made. Be sure you don't over lime. Over liming causes a nutritional disease called Rosette.

The pecan is monoecious (both male and female flowers on same tree). The failure of a tree to bare is probably due to weather conditions. Late frosts usually kill the pollen. As the wind has to scatter the pollen to ensure fruiting, cloudy rainy weather at the blooming time may stop pollination.

Pecans usually have a good year, and then a bad one as far as the nut crops are concerned. To produce normal crops each year, you have to give the tree sufficient fertilizer. Other reasons for failure may be dry weather, insects and diseases.

Don't get one of those oversized trees to plant. Get one about 4 or 5 feet high—one with a year old top. Dig a hole about 30 inches wide and 30 inches deep—one that allows roots to fit in without crowding. Use good soil and set tree 1 inch lower than it was in nursery. Fill hole about 3/4 full of soil. Let water run in slowly. After water settles, finish putting soil in hole. Then put a ring of soil about 4 inches high and 3 feet from tree. Fill this ring with water, and then mulch with pine straw. Don't use fertilizer when you plant. After tree is set, cut off about 1/2 of top.

Be sure to give sufficient water in the spring. If you are going in for pecans commercially, you will need 17 trees to the acre at 50 foot intervals, 12 trees at 60 foot, and 8 trees at 75 foot.

Pecans don't need much pruning except to remove weak, broken or interfering branches. 3/4 full of soil. This tree should be a good Christmas present to give your Gardening friend (if he has room for it). It is a lasting gift. Pecans are long life trees. Plant while they are dormant (Dec. 1 - Feb. 1).

Women Come Out In Public

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP)—Nigerian independence has given a tremendous boost to women's emancipation in the country's predominantly Muslim northern region.

Girls in the vast spaces of the North who have lived for years in Islamic seclusion are now getting out and about in the world of men.

A Lagos newspaper columnist says Northern women are now getting ready "to work side by side with their men for the progress of our newly born nation. Gone are the days when they were content to leave all the work to the menfolk."

More and more Northern women are taking up teaching, nursing and office work which previously were closed to them. One has made history by becoming the first Northern girl to be appointed assistant manager of a busy Government-financed hotel.

Previously women of the North would seldom have been seen in public in a hotel before independence was proclaimed on Oct. 1.

Good Airing Revives Clothes

RALEIGH—Give your clothes air. Clothes, like humans, thrive much better on plenty of fresh air. The fresh air policy is especially true with woolen clothes. Many a tired garment has been revived and given a new lease on life by a good airing.

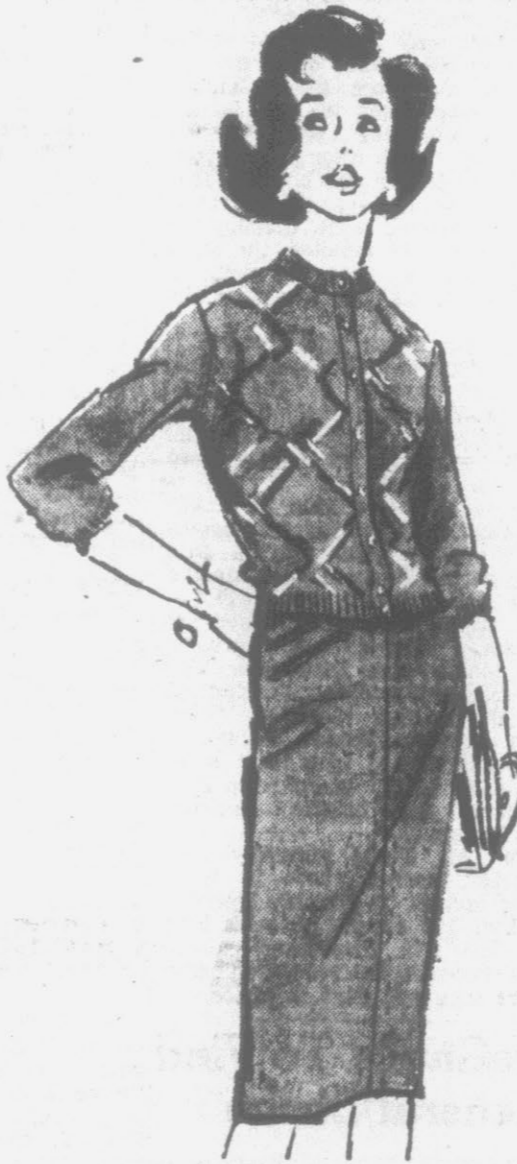

Miss Mary Em Lee, clothing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says airing clothes will also rid clothes of odors and unwanted pests.

"Don't hang your clothes out in the open on windy days," says Miss Lee. "The constant whipping of the garment by the wind can add much unnecessary wear and tear on the fabric. It is best to choose a bright calm day for this good care policy. Clothes that fade should never be hung in the bright sunlight."

Do not get a closet jam by crowding your clothes in a small space. A closet that is roomy and airy allows weather dampness and body moisture to evaporate and helps prevent unwanted wrinkles. Store dresses not worn frequently in garment bags.

Years Remembered As 'Good Ones'

The testimonial dinner honoring Governor Luther Hodges was most certainly in order.

Tar Heels do not often have opportunity to indicate their appreciation for qualities of leadership at the capital. Tuesday evening they had both the opportunity and occasion for paying tribute.

The most striking single fact about the Hodges regime was that he worked at the job of being Governor.

Whether he was personally surveying the damage of a hurricane, or working to further the cause of industry-hunting, Luther Hodges "was there."

In the uncertain weeks surrounding the school desegregation crisis, it was again Governor Hodges who counseled patience and moderation on both sides. Some say he "saved the schools" . . . and certainly, though he could not be given quite so great a credit it is fair to say he contributed much to that end.

The businessman-turned-politician applied his non-political talents to the political field and to government, and observers were often amazed at the resultant successes.

Aside from his personal qualities, Luther Hodges came on the political scene in North Carolina with fortuitous timing.

The country as a whole had "settled down" after its post-war economic splurge and was ready to embark upon a new, more substantial period of growth. North Carolina leaped forward in the years that followed, and Luther Hodges shared in the accompanying limelight.

His six years of administration were generally years of high prosperity for the state. Good use was made of this economic trend, and North Carolina's expenditures for education and welfare services are now double those of ten years ago.

One of the more promising inspirations of Governor Hodges was the "Research Triangle" which only this week counted two more additions to its facilities. While the "Triangle" is a relatively late-starter, it appears already so well established that a momentum of growth seems assured for the immediate future.

The Governor's political judgment came to the fore again in his early support of a Senator who was seeking the Democratic nomination for the presidency. He sensed in John Kennedy the qualities of a winner, and acted accordingly. That decision ultimately brought its reward in a cabinet post.

Unquestionably there were mistakes made in the Hodges' administration, but those mistakes are overshadowed by instances of good judgment, devoted effort, a spirit of service and good fortune.

The Hodges' years will be remembered as good ones.

In Washington And In Raleigh

By LYNN NISBET
TRANSITION — Government goes on in Washington and in Raleigh with only slight interruption by conferences and negotiations arranging for transition from one administration to another in January. Governor Hodges told newsmen at his weekly session with them that he is going to Washington this week to confer with Clark Clifford, President-elect Kennedy's liaison man, and next week he will confer with outgoing Secretary of Commerce Mueller about departmental problems he will face when he assumes the post as Secretary of Commerce on January 20.

The Governor noted that even while he was talking to reporters, Hugh Cannon of Governor-elect Sanford's staff was in conference with Robert Giles, Hodges' administrative assistant, and Mrs. Sanford was at the Mansion learning from Mrs. Hodges something about the duties of the first lady of the state and mistress of the Mansion.

The Governor referred to the situation in Washington as a "big transition," to that in Raleigh as a little one. The distinction is obvious and appropriate. Change will be effected in every major department of government in Washington, because the President appoints the members of the Council of State and last month they made no changes in personnel.

Furthermore, many of the high appointive positions in this state have statutory terms, with expiration dates running from January 1 to July 1.

AMENDS — Governor Hodges Hodges sought to make amendments for what he admits was an unfortunate statement made in Charlotte a few weeks ago to the effect that the late Governor Kerr Scott's "negative attitude" toward industry had retarded state development. He said that what Scott did for rural roads and schools had been very helpful in advancing the industrialization program which he spearheaded. There had been a good deal of criticism of the previous statement about Governor Scott's disservice to the state.

RESEARCH — Two new installations in the Research Triangle Park were announced. One is a building erected by John B. Wilson designed for leasing space to small industries and others desiring temporary quarters while planning their own buildings. Some companies now have office space in Durham or Raleigh. Purpose of the new facility is to get them located in the park.

More significant was an announcement that the U.S. Forestry Service is planning a southeastern regional research laboratory on a site donated to the Federal government. Importance of this laboratory was emphasized by figures supplied by Vivian Whitfield, former State Senator and ex-president of the Tree Farmers Association. He said that in five southeastern states there are 93 million acres of forest lands, and that products sold from these trees amounted to more than four billion dollars. Despite the spectacular effect of forest fires, Whitfield said, more wood products are lost each year by disease than by fire. The new laboratory will study causes and prevention of disease in trees, as well as improved practice in forestry and merchandising of wood products.

EATING & SLEEPING — The Duncan Hines Institute, of which Roy H. Park, a Surry county native and president of the N.C. State College alumni association, is editor-in-chief, has just released its 1961 directories of "Adventures in Good Eating" and "Lodging for a Night." The list includes 92 eating places in North Carolina and 140 lodging places. Which indicates that more people can eat in one room than can sleep there—which is not news.

The 92 eating places which are authorized to use the sign indicating they are approved by Duncan Hines represent a very small part of the more than 4,000 such places in North Carolina. The 140 lodging places are selected from a total of more than 1700 in the state. The 232 approved eating and lodging places in North Carolina are among 9,200 in the 50 states, which gives North Carolina a little better than average number of approved places.

Duncan Hines is only one, although regarded as one of the best, rating agencies for eating and sleeping. Travelers who see the Duncan Hines approval sign, or that of Quality Courts and Quality Restaurants, stop to eat or sleep with confidence. These insignia cannot be bought; they must be earned after inspection of facilities.

The fact that more places each year are qualifying for right to use them suggests upgrading of facilities at many places. Further fact that each year some places are omitted from the listing indicates that ratings are given only on basis of inspection.

How Will We Take It When U.S. Outvoted?

The setting, a conference of churches, seems hardly the place for a reminder to Americans they may have to someday soon subordinate their will to a majority of the United Nations.

But the element of truth is there; and the warning is timely; and, as the general assembly of the National Council of Churches was told, we might well be outvoted in the world organization sometime in the near future.

It gives one cause to pause. The vote of the United States does not outweigh that of Ghana, or that of any newly-formed and poverty-stricken nation.

Believing in the processes of democracy, it is reasonable to assume Americans could grin and bear it when outvoted on measures that did not exert too much strain on national interests.

How well we might face up to defeat on a sensitive issue is something else again.

The United Nations is a going concern today largely because this country is making it so. International strains and divergency of goals, heavy operating expenses, institution of a sort of "interposition" doctrine by certain members . . . all contribute to a weakening of the organization.

A strong UN appears necessary to the world, but its chances to attain that strength of purpose are dim today.

If it should become a strong working body, how willing will we be to subordinate our wishes? As the National Council of Churches was told, it is something to contemplate.

Weapons Tanks Cannot Match

By CARL HARTMAN
BERLIN (AP) — "There are some weapons of the Communists," said the trade expert, "that you can't fight with tanks. Bills of lading, for instance, and insurance policies."

That was his way of warning what may happen if the West German - East German trade pact due to expire Dec. 31, is not renewed. He thinks the business life of isolated West Berlin could be slowly strangled without an issue arising that would call for armed force.

Not all experts agree. Many think that if the Reds try to strangle Berlin, there will always be some point where the issue is clear and the West can take a firm stand. This expert is Dr. Kurt Leopold who for years has been dealing with the Communists about trade on behalf of the Bonn Government.

On Sept. 30 Chancellor Konrad Adenauer canceled a pact that had been running nine years. The trade pact is expected to reach a record $500 million this year.

It was canceled as a reprisal against the East German Communists who ordered Germans coming from the West to apply to them for a special pass to visit East Berlin.

If the Communists decide to play it rough, strange things could happen on Jan. 1. Small sections of West Berlin, and of West Germany, may suddenly find themselves short of gas, electricity and water.

A more serious crisis might come because of the bills of lading. Under a Big Four order dating back to 1946, these bills of freight must accompany most shipments across the 110 miles of Communist territory that separate Berlin from the West.

To the Germans, always impressed by documents, this has great importance. The East Germans may ask for impossible information and insist on elaborate inspections if they are not furnished.

A lot of West Berlin's manufacturers," explains Dr. Leopold, "are delicate precision instruments, carefully wrapped and packed. Suppose the East Germans start demanding that the truck driver and his helper take crowbars and open the cases. If they do that with only one truck out of 10, trade will be almost impossible."

Another annex includes an agreement on insurance, so that a West German car or truck is protected in East Germany. If the pact expires, the East Germans would be in a legal position to demand extra insurance coverage, at exorbitant premiums.

Western experts who think he exaggerates these dangers point out that the East Germans already control German traffic between West Berlin and the West. They once raised the rates for use of the superhighway and the West could only protest.

If the Communists decide to strangle West Berlin, these experts argue, they can always make excuses. Western officials think the Communists will not allow the trade pact to expire. They believe the Communists have too great a need for West German iron and steel.

The West Germans are trying to forget the matter of passes to East Berlin as quietly as possible.

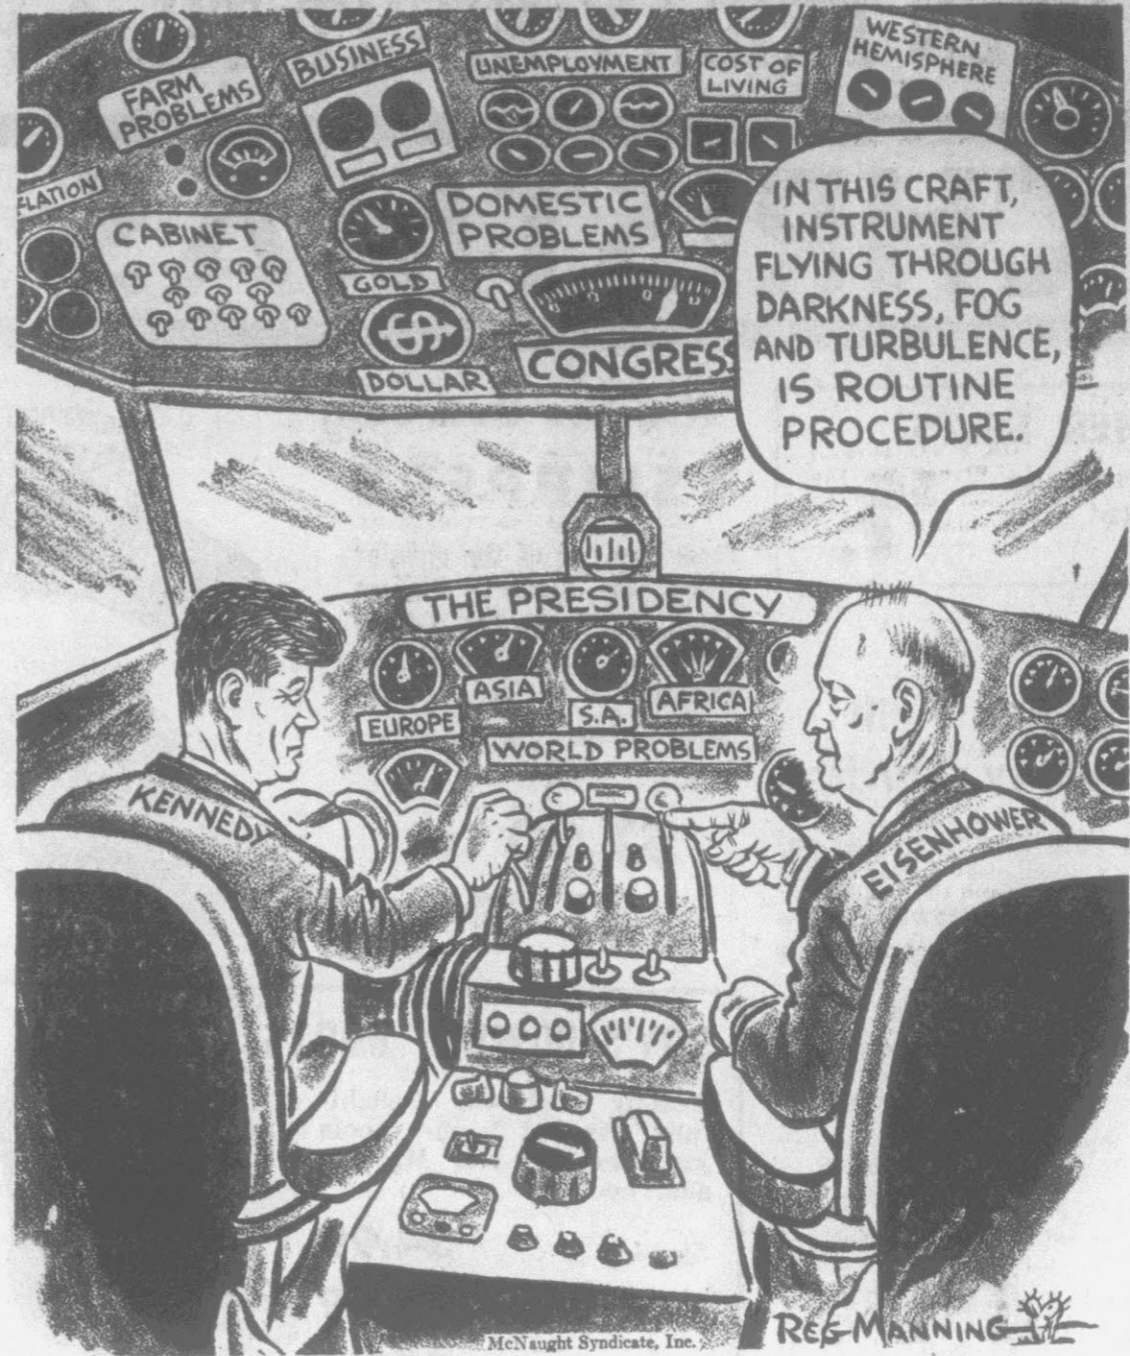

This gain for the Communist side may be significant. If it is maintained, it will mean that the Western powers have tacitly accepted Berlin from the West. (Continued on page six)

Strength For Today

LET'S FACT IT
Modern man does not like the word "sin". Let anything of an anti-social or immoral character take place and immediately a score of people, many of them posing as authorities, begin to give some psychological reason for this misbehavior. The idea of the old devil being in the hearts of all of us does not seem to be much in fashion today. Sin is now attributed to suppression, frustration, emotional instability. The devil must be having a good laugh over this whole situation. The report has gone out that he is dead and his activities are attributed to psychological upset. It will take more ingenuity, however, than humanity now possesses to get rid of the concept and the reality of sin. It is just as true now as it has ever been that we have all sinned and come short of the glory of God. We may not be gross sinners. But sinners we are, we can be sure of that. We are selfish, lacking in self-control, harsh in our judgments, often unkind and sometimes perhaps a bit on the cruel side. So what do you call that sort of thing? Is this psychological upset, emotional instability, frustration, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera. . . ? We have to face many unpleasant facts in life. Let us face the most unpleasant of all — the fact of sin.

Clarifying The Mix-Up

At the risk of repeating ourselves, we want to retell a story. We told it before, but somehow, something from a magazine slipped in and ousted a first paragraph, thus destroying the whole story and probably making whatever readers we have think we definitely were out on a limb.

It goes like this, and it happened. The clerk of Grifton Recorder's Court has been very proud to inform us that on a recent visit to the Arlington National Cemetery (Virginia) he saw the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

There he also met the widow of the unknown soldier he said. And we had visions of the black-clothed widow of the unknown soldier for about three seconds. But we didn't let him know we had caught on.

Next week we returned to the same town, same place, same time. He resumed his subject of the widow of the unknown soldier, telling us she had remarried, he had just heard. If you haven't seen through this by now, you may take your place on the limb. (Beside the rest of us.)

We read recently that the well loved soap operas which have been going on for years upon years over radio, and now television, are being taken off the air by one network. Before the stories, conclude, however, the writers will give all stories happy endings. In fact, the TV writers in newspapers have already forecast the endings.

This brings back a delightful story about one of the serials. A certain young lady for years had been on the verge of marrying a certain man, but fate always had her way and separation prevailed.

Finally, a wedding was in the offing. No story, movie or paper has ever held such avid interest to its public (except us—we were then oblivious to what was going on.) The day of the wedding naturally was extended to increase the tension and faithfulness of the watcher.

Then the day arrived. On that day, this true story goes, a guest was to arrive at a friend's home by way of bus. The friend wrote the guest that though she was delighted to have her come she could not meet the bus as planned and the guest would have to take a taxi because of an important wedding.

It was the television serial. That was the last straw for us. And people still talk about that wedding.

Other Editors Saying State Serves As Model

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
A psychologist in the Pennsylvania public school system recently observed that, in his opinion, North Carolina was not only the leading state of the South, but also one of the front-runners in the nation today in many fields where initiative and pioneering is required. More and more this kind of talk is being heard.

At a recent session in Chapel Hill devoted to problems of metropolitan growth, Frank Bane, chairman of the U.S. Advisory Committee on Intergovernmental Relations, revealed that North Carolina had been chosen as a model for a national study of metropolitan growth. He listed several reasons why the Tar Heel state was selected for this study. His reasons are very interesting.

For one thing, the state has done a good job of diluting agriculture with industry. This was recognized early by state leaders as a prerequisite for a balanced economy. Efforts in this direction have paid off handsomely.

Another reason was the noticeable lack of complication and haphazard growth in metropolitan areas. The state's penchant for experiments—lack of fear in pioneering new ideas, has been praised. Examples of this type of thinking are seen in the state's taking over the responsibility, in large measure, of public schools and the highway system, something other states might try to some advantage.

Another important reason the state has been selected for this important study is that the University system has been a pioneer in far-reaching plans and projects this state has put forth. It goes without saying that this support has been forthcoming from Tar Heels.

North Carolina has a distinguished governor who is willing to help the federal government and other states in the study of intergovernmental operations. All of these things add up to an indication of how the state has advanced in the past couple of decades. There are problems, of course.

Major prospects for the future include water resources and the need for increased watershed areas devoted to water use; continued maximum desirable consolidation of city and county governments; problems of waste disposal; control of land use for good residential and institutional development rather than haphazard "splattered" development.

North Carolina has been fortunate in its ability to permit its cities to expand into unincorporated lands. Such expansion, for example, is impossible in New Jersey and certain other metropolitan areas. The state of North Carolina ranks at or near the top among all the states in the number of cities with the city manager form of government.

All of the cities above 20,000 population have city managers, in fact. And 30 cities over 10,000 have the manager system, and even many smaller towns have this same form of local government.

It is little wonder, then, that North Carolina enjoys a growing prestige, throughout the country. This unique position wasn't reached haphazardly or through mere luck. True, the state is fortunate in its leaders, its climate and its resources. But these alone are not enough if the citizens do not support wholeheartedly the far-reaching plans and projects this state has put forth. It goes without saying that this support has been forthcoming from Tar Heels.

There's good news for us monkeys today. The 1960 world crop of peanuts is estimated at 15,200,000 tons by the Foreign Agricultural Service. That's only slightly less than the record 15,300,000 tons grown in 1959.

And there are other curious things in the business news today. For instance:

Good Taste Ignored

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Received a circular asking me whether I wanted the truth about Cuba. If so, I am instructed on the first page of a four-page leaflet to subscribe to a magazine called "The Independent." I shall know all about Cuba from a person who goes by the name of Lyle Stuart.

I turn to page two of the pamphlet and Cuba is apparently lost. I am now in the realm of love—not the love the poets write of, nor the love of mother for child. This is a special kind of love, such as Phallic Worship, or Sex Variant Women in Literature, or I am offered handsome full-page photographs of the nude female. There is more of this. For instance, there is an advertisement of the secret life of Walter Winchell.

I have known Walter, lol these many years and if he has a secret, it must be most unusual, because Walter Winchell lives way out in the open, with a ringside seat in the Cub Room of the Star Club. If a fellow can make a buck discovering some secrets about him, he must be a marvel. But why, in this circular, put Walter Winchell's secrets in the same class as a book about Messalina, a very naughty gal, indeed?

Enough of this stuff! Why are such circulars sent to decent folk who must see them before they can throw them away, because what is on the outside is an old-fashioned come - on? This is a discussion on Cuba.

And it is the Cuban come-on that leads to the inside pages which deal with various books that, to use a phrase related to one of them, "tells you the things that don't usually appear in books which these days are turned out by the ton without too much taste or originality?"

It would seem to me that we are becoming too broad-minded about some things. There are writers, and have been through the ages, who enjoy writing about erotic subjects, some of which ultimately are accepted in literature, as Boccaccio, De Maupassant and others have been. Other writers who enjoy erotica and pornography are not accepted. None of this has anything to do with freedom of the press. It has to do with taste. And the good taste of one period may not be the good taste of another. On the other hand, sheer vulgarity, imbecility are never in good taste. When a book is advertised as "Has been banned in many places," the attraction is not that this is a work of literary merit but rather that it is the sort of thing the young boy read in bed, under a blanket, with a flashlight.

The free publication of everything and anything has been defended as a sign of maturity. The assumption is that a people are so mature that they can permit little boys to write dirty words on sidewalks with joy in the literature, and the dirty words so early in life. The idea is that this is an expansion of freedom; also that it is cute.

The truth is that precisely this type of literature has become associated with the increase of juvenile criminals in the United States and the increase of children born out of wedlock. The battles for abstract freedoms do not assume any responsibility for the broken lives which result from lack of restraint, lack of self-control, sexual precocity in boys and girls. It is easy for them to say, "anything goes!" but, in truth, anything does not go in this life and the young woman who bears a child out of wedlock which she has to rid herself of one way or another, goes through her years with a miserable memory and a bruised conscience. Neither the author nor publishers of these books are willing to assume any responsibility for that.

But why cover it all up with a tale about Cuba, which has enough troubles without being used as a cover story for an advertisement for books of this type? Or are we to infer that it is all part of the same mental and emotional sickness — the defense of Cuba and the publishing of books that have been banned in many places?

Give Books For Christmas

AP Newsfeatures
 There are books for all the family, but none will be more appreciated at Christmas than books given to youngsters who are just beginning to read. "Look, ma," becomes a familiar phrase as Junior or Sis point with pride to words they recognize in their new books. A mother with foresight will purchase these beginner readers for her 6 or 7 year old. The small fry may need help with some words, but once they begin to know the joys of reading, a new world will have opened to them.

Green Eggs and Ham by Dr. Seuss (Random House), author of the hilarious "Cat in the Hat" books (still wonderful), is another adventurous tale for those learning to read. Instead of the 200 words, Seuss has been playing with his beginner readers, this new adventure uses only 50 different words. The story is about Sam-I-Am and a shaggy friend on whom he tries to foist green eggs and ham.

Air Around Us (Grosset and Dunlap) tells the story of wind, hurricanes, lightning, thunder, snow, rain and helps to answer the small child's questions in the same easy-to-read formula that marks other books in the series that includes stories of insects, reptiles, birds, time, sounds, air, port, rocks and minerals, dinosaurs.

My Hopping Bunny by Robert Bright (Doubleday) is the story of a little boy's purchase of a bunny who turned out to be very unusual. He could hop over the tallest church steeple, but then one day he hopped too high and Taylor and "At the Opening of the Atomic Era" by James Munroe. The books are fiction based on actual happenings, factually accurate.

Big Game Hunter by Felix Sutton (Messner) is the story of Carl Akeley, one of America's foremost big game hunters who did it all in the interest of science. Sutton tells Akeley's adventures in vivid fashion that should have real boy-appeal.

Another Biff Brewster mystery adventure is "Brazilian Gold Mine Mystery," and the perennial favorite Tom Swift pops up again in "Tom Swift and his Spectromarine Selector."

Books of special interest to girls are new editions of the Bobbey Twins, a new guide to good looks for young girls, "Put Your Best Look Forward," by Glyne Hiller (Doubleday) and "Your Own Room, an Interior Decorating Guide for Girls" by Mary Furlong Moore (Grosset and Dunlap).

So tired you could drop, after a day of slaving over a hot Christmas shopping list? Instead, just drop the packages and shed your shoes and stockings while you run a tub of hot sudsy water for a good foot-soaking.

So much tiredness centers in your feet after traipsing from store to store, that you'll do your whole body-spirit, too—a favor by drawing the ache out of your lower extremities.

The British Are Invading Secretarial Jobs

By ANNE RUGGERI

NEW YORK (AP)—Up to now it hasn't appeared on any tariff list, but a new British import is making inroads on the American market.

British secretaries are being brought to the United States to fill well-paying executive secretary positions and the American girls aren't too happy about it.

"Why should British secretaries be hired for the good jobs we American girls pound pavements for?" one home-grown secretary asks.

The answer is simple, says David L. Wexler of the first employment agency to import English secretaries: "The demand for competent executive secretaries is so firm hires an available British girl to fill the job."

The British girls are guaranteed one year's employment starting at an $85 a week minimum. They receive permanent visas and an option to become a citizen. They must have had one or two years' secretarial school or college plus three years' job experience before coming to the United States.

The arrival of English secretaries on the local scene has caused a disturbance ranging from the serious to the ridiculous.

The New York State Committee Against Discrimination has been investigating possibilities of racial discrimination in the importation of secretaries.

The State Department has been asked to investigate a possible violation of immigration laws. (It says the Immigration and Nationality Act does not cover secretarial imports.)

On Madison Avenue, public relations people are testing the reaction of American and British secretaries. One agency discovered after a long investigation, that three out of every hundred English secretaries wear glasses — even though they don't need them — when interviewing for a job. They prefer the brainy to the beautiful look.

And, on a recent trip to the United States, Vera Sugg, head of an English employment agency, caused a national incident when she had a fashion designer design a dictation skirt for British secretaries. She wanted to make sure the British girls weren't showing their knees, she says.

The skirt didn't go over on the American market. "It's ridiculous," one American secretary says. "I refuse to look dowdy. Beware, my boss doesn't see my legs. I sit on the other side of the desk."

All this fuss is silly, says Wexler. "We bring all types of specialists to the United States to fill job shortages — machinists, tool makers, registered nurses — besides secretaries."

"No one is making a fuss about the imports in other fields — just secretaries. There are a million extra females in England and the class system often prevents advancement there. The girls are higher paid and have better opportunities in the United States and they aren't taking any jobs away from the American girls."

"Many American girls are being paid $100 a week for sloppy work. The firms that hire British girls have looked in the home field and can't find what they want."

Some American secretaries believe the English girls are hired because "they add dignity to the office. They're hired to answer phones because of their accent."

"You can't understand them over the phone," another says. "But British girls have nothing to say about all the fuss. They just smile and pound away on their typewriters."

Young Moderns Take Time Out To Tutor

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures Writer
 If you want to do something for those less fortunate in their school work, consider letting them pick your brain.

You'll help advance them in studies in which they lag, and keep your own wits sharpened.

One group has set a tutoring plan in motion with real organization. It is comprised of five students of the Lincoln Square Boys' Club in Worcester, Mass. All the boys are A students who sacrifice Saturday mornings to tutor those who need help.

"I'll come anytime, give up anything to do this," says Al Johnson, a freshman at State Teachers College. "It's worth whatever I would make outside. When you can't help a student, teaching can be discouraging. But when a student suddenly begins to catch on, there's no more rewarding work in the world."

The young tutors begin by assuming there's no knowledge on the part of students in the subject in which help is needed. They work on the principle that the boy needs a complete overhaul. "In this we have been proved correct," all the boys agree.

One boy, a D student in algebra, was turned into an A student after several months of intensive tutoring. Another boy became a better than average student in all subjects after taking a remedial reading course because he was in danger of flunking high school English.

Classes meet for 2 1/2 hours at the Boys' Club. The faculty meets before hand to discuss the pattern for morning sessions, and meets again after classes to discuss the morning's developments, how techniques can be improved, among other things.

Daniel Flynn, a high school senior, says: "I love the English language, and if I can make somebody else love it, I'll do all I can in that direction."

Norman Wheeler, a senior who teaches math and reading, believes that tutoring works particularly well with shy students. "Many students become paralyzed with fear when they must speak in front of a large class. I try to show them how to relax. Once they do, the rest is easy." Norman has managed to make one boy relax so completely his stammering stopped.

The program begun by the five teen-agers involves six tutors and 24 students, a ratio of one to four. One of the tutors has received National Honors for poems in a Scholastic Writing Contest. Another tutor is Emerson C. Fersch, program director of the Boys' Club.

This tutoring plan is a simple one that could be adopted anywhere, and would be appreciated greatly by young people who are in overcrowded schools where they do not get enough attention, or are too shy or too slow to keep up with their classwork.

If such a group is organized, it should be kept in mind there can be no nonsense or begging off from sessions because of dates or other trivial excuses. Tutors have too much at stake. One teenage boy involved in the Boys' Club project gave up a Saturday morning job to cooperate with the tutoring plan. Two other boys work after the sessions until 10 o'clock at night, so there must be rewards in an effort of this kind.

JAMES KEENE'S New Historical Novel IRON MAN, IRON HORSE

CHAPTER 36

It was a good feeling, Ben Holiday decided, to get the railroad on schedule. It was good for business, too, for the freight manifests grew steadily fatter, and the revenue came in slowly but in steadily increasing amounts.

In one week Midland-Pacific fulfilled an army contract and shipped Gert Hutchins' cattle. Vale's widow and half-grown son came to see Holiday; he was sorry the man was dead but didn't show any false grief, since the man had picked his side and lost.

She was selling out, and he gave her a good freight rate, then sent the train north with the largest single shipment so far. It created a stir in Dodge and in the Chicago market. Midland-Pacific stock took a substantial gain, and even shrewd investors began to consider it with something else besides disdain.

Yet Ben knew that the line was a long time away from being on firm financial footing, and he hoped he could keep the boat from rocking. Western Union cleaned out the telegraph equipment, and the line to Fort Elliot was finally finished.

Some hailed this as a major communications advance but Julius Holiday, Ben's father, thought it was a bit of financial foolishness; the day would come when the railroad would regret parting with communication control.

On a Thursday afternoon, Jim Bender brought Ben Holiday the news that Murray Singer had ridden into town with six men, and that Singer wanted to see him at the hotel. Holiday took his 44 pistol from the drawer, he made sure it was loaded, and thrust it into his waistband.

Then he walked uptown to find out what Singer had to say. As he walked down the street, he could see that nearly everyone in town was gathered; if there was trouble, they wanted a front-row seat.

Approaching the hotel, Holiday didn't think about the odds; he knew how strong was Murray Singer's pride; this would be between the two of them, either talk or a fight. Singer and his men were arrayed across the front of the porch, and as Holiday stopped in the street, Jim Bender came out of the hotel and stood just behind the Singer faction.

Bender said, "No need to turn around, kents. But just keep it in mind that I'm behind you. You go right ahead, Murray. Mr. Holiday's waitin'."

Ben's father and brother Adam wheeled down the street in a buggy and pulled in by the feed store; neither man got down, but Julius said, "Ben, this damned thing has gone far enough." He started to dismount, but Murray Singer pointed a finger at him.

"If you're not carrying a gun, don't get down!" He turned his head slightly to speak to Jim Bender. "My men will stay out of this. You don't have to interfere."

"If they stay out," Bender said, "I won't interfere."

"Ben Holiday said, 'What do you want to talk about, Murray?'"

"Us," Singer said softly. "You killed my son and burned me to the ground. Did you think for a minute I'd let you get away with it?"

"I had hoped you had sense enough to," Holiday said. "Murray, ask yourself who's to blame. Who killed Skinner? Who set himself up against the railroad?"

"That part don't matter," Murray said. "I'm going to kill you just because I'll take pleasure in it."

"Are you going to start the shooting, Murray?"

"Hell, yes," Murray said, and flipped his hand beneath his coat for his gun. He was slow by some standards, but compared to Holiday's inexperience he was very fast.

Holiday jerked at his pistol in his hurry to get into action, and the hammer snagged on his shirt, ripping it, slowing him so much that Murray Singer had his first shot off before Ben was even ready to cock his gun.

The bullet spun Ben around completely, and caused Murray to miss his second shot. Ben fell down but did not drop the .44. He brought it up, sighted, and shot Murray Singer high in the breastbone.

Murray staggered back a step, hooked his heel against a crack in the porch planks, and went down hard. He kicked his legs and tried to rise, but the strength was leaving him and he died amid a fit of bloody coughing.

Julius and Adam left the buggy in a rush, and Singer's men just stood there as though they couldn't believe it had turned out this way. Jim Bender stayed behind them while a crowd gathered around Ben Holiday.

Julius was shouting, "Someone get the doctor!"

"Ben are you badly hurt?" This was Adam's concern; he raised Ben to a sitting position and looked at the blood on his coat, his manner horrified.

The doctor arrived, made a brief examination of the wound and said, "I'll have to dig that out."

It was an hour later before the bullet was removed and Julius and Adam were permitted to pull up chairs at Ben's bedside.

The young man's face was gray and he was in pain, but it didn't seem to bother him much. Someone knocked and Adam got up to open the door.

Jim Bender came in and grinned. "You were slow as hell, Ben, but you got the job done." He sighed and sat down. "Got to give Murray credit though; he went all the way." His glance touched Julius Holiday. "I don't expect you understand that."

"Frankly, I don't."

"Well," Bender said, "Murray wanted your railroad. And he went after it the only way he knew how. He was a hog who wanted it all and he grabbed and hung on and kicked until the other fellow let go. Only Ben wouldn't let go, so Murray had to start shooting."

"You make it surprisingly clear," Julius Holiday said softly. "I was going to stay here a week or so until a few of these matters pending were settled. I think now that I'll go back to Chicago. Adam, you ought to stay and help Ben until he gets on his feet. And I don't think you ought to stay here, Ben. Perhaps if I spoke to that German girl—it seems to me that she'd gladly—"

"Dad," Ben said, "will you stop running things for me?"

Julius Holiday laughed and seemed embarrassed; he got up and turned to the door. "You're right, Ben. It's time I got out and let you handle your own business."

He stepped out and closed the door softly. Jim Bender rolled a smoke and said, "He's all right. Well, Betty's going to be needing me. In a couple days we ought to do something about the Indians, huh, Ben? A man's troubles never end, but what something else comes up, I wonder what it'll be after the Indians?"

"I won't worry about it," Ben Holiday said.

Jim and Adam went out and Ben was relieved to be alone. His wound pained him like blazes, but he could tolerate that. In his mind still was the memory of that moment when Murray Singer drew his gun; the thought had been strong then that he stood a good chance of dying, and the amazing part of it was that he had entertained no regrets at all; within him there was no apology for what he was or what he had done.

"I'm going to be all right, Ben thought, then fell into a deep resting sleep.

U.S. Investors Looking Afar For Good Yields

Latin America has seen very little investment by individual Americans. Brokers here say one reason is that there are comparatively few companies there publicly owned.

In addition to whatever capital gains they may have collected on stock price rises, what returns getting on their foreign investment on their foreign investment.

At first many Americans looked to Canada and invested not wisely but too well. Valueless or dubious Canadian stock was peddled here, often by long distance phone.

Warnings on this side of the border and stricter policing on the other side have brought Canadian securities more in line with the standards on stock exchanges here.

Next to excite Americans has been the recent boom in Europe. Yields on European stocks often

Reluctant, But Went To Banks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thirty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Smoot lost faith in savings institutions. They turned to the mattress instead.

Tuesday they forgot to turn off a heating pad before they went to work in their small bar next door.

Hours later they smelled smoke. Their mattress was smoldering, filling the house with smoke.

"Our money, our money," cried Mrs. Smoot. "All our savings are sewed inside."

Luckily the $8,000 was intact. Reluctantly the Smoots conceded a fire official might be right when he suggested they put the money in a bank.

They were still cautious, though. Half went to one bank, half to another.

Official figures are meager. And foreign stocks are held by both corporations and individuals, making a breakdown hard. But based on data of the U.S. Department of Commerce, the First National City Bank of New York estimates that income from stock and bond holdings will bring Americans $500 million this year, the same as last. Earnings from direct investments in plants and resources — mostly in corporate names — is put at $2.2 billion.

One specific figure is offered by British officials who report that Americans got $104 million in dividends from British companies last year.

It's a two-way street. British direct investment in the United States is estimated at $2 billion with earnings unspecified, while the British government and individuals are thought to hold $3.75 billion in dollar shares.

Ribbon-Winner 'Learned From A Book' Believes Special Classes 'Answer'

Dwan Thomas and Thunderbird

BETHEL—A seventh grade student here who has never had a riding lesson in her life won her 20th blue ribbon in a pleasure horse championship class this fall in Wilson.

Dwan Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Thomas of Bethel, educated herself in the sport of horse riding through books and magazines. Her love for horses actually started with a bull dog named Skipper. During her early years, Dwan trained Skipper to pull her in a wagon around the town as well as around her own home.

By her eighth year, Dwan was given her first pony, Golden Rex. After Golden Rex threw Dwan, the family bought an older, more gentle horse who was also named Rex. However, after Dwan became a more experienced rider, she persuaded her family to buy Boots, a younger and more spirited horse which she had ridden before. With Boots, Dwan entered her first horse show on Labor Day, 1958, and failed to place in any class.

Later, she won a third and a fifth place in a horse show in LaGrange. With this success, Dwan decided on a horse more spirited than Boots, this one named Thunderbird.

In 1959, riding Thunderbird, Dwan won her first blue ribbon at a Wilson show. By this September she had won 20 blue ribbons. She also has won 14 trophies.

Dwan, a member of the Bethel Methodist Church, is also interested in piano and dancing.

Her prize winning horse Thunderbird is a pedigreed animal through the American Horse Breeders Association.

Oregon takes its name from an Algonquin Indian, word meaning "beautiful water."

Believes Special Classes 'Answer'

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov.-elect Terry Sanford believes special classes within the public schools rather than institutional care is the answer to the problem of the retarded child.

Sanford called for additional classrooms and teachers for trainable and educable children who presently are either sent to institutions or placed in "the unhappy position of trying to compete with normal children in the public schools."

Sanford made his comments Wednesday in a speech read to the North Carolina Health Council by his campaign aide and former law partner, Hugh Cannon. Sanford was unable to attend.

The 59-organization group held an all-day meeting hearing speakers and holding panel discussions. Sanford said, "While we are taking care of the needs of the gifted child, we must also take care of the retarded child in the public schools."

Sanford said the state must pay $1,200 to $1,500 annually to give a retarded child institutional care. However, the figure would amount to only $300 to $400 if the same child were placed in a special public school class, he explained.

"And," he continued, "with improved education, these children have a better chance of not only supporting themselves, but also of helping the state by paying taxes as citizens."

No Charges In Street Collision

No charges were made by officers in a collision which caused an estimated $100 damage to a vehicle driven by Arlando Sutton, 23, of 117 North Eastern St., yesterday on East Fifth St. near the intersection of Colancho St.

Police said the Sutton truck collided with a vehicle operated by Arthur Coye, 35, of 303 Harding St., at about 5:45 p.m.

Damage to the Coyle car was placed at $150.

An estimated $20 damage was done to a car operated by Ernest Little, 37-year-old Negro of Route 6, Greenville, when it was involved in a collision with a car driven by Anthony D. Harris, III, 34, of 1507 Chestnut St., when the two collided at the intersection of Chestnut St. and Line Ave. at 3:05 p.m. Tuesday.

An estimated $50 damage was reported to the Harris vehicle, investigators noted.

RHINOS THREATENED
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The mysterious deaths of between 80 to 100 rhinoceroses in Tsavo National Park pose a serious threat to the animals' existence in Kenya. Authorities say poachers and a drought which killed the rhinos' food may be responsible for the deaths.

Layman Seen Next Prexy Nat'l Council Of Churches

By GEORGE W. CORNELL, Associated Press Religion Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A scholarly Indiana businessman, J. Irwin Miller, was expected to be elected today as president of the National Council of Churches, the first layman ever named to the post.

He is the choice of a nominating committee, headed by the Rev. Dr. James E. Wagner, of Philadelphia, president of the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Miller, 51, and a multifillionaire, is a leader in the Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) and a Sunday School teacher in his home town of Columbus, Ind.

The outgoing president is a Baptist, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Edwin T. Dahlberg of St. Louis.

Miller, married and the father of five, heads a number of business concerns, including the Cummins Engine Co., the nation's biggest manufacturer of truck diesel engines.

He also is an ardent churchman, a generous philanthropist who gives 30 per cent of his income away, a student of Greek and theology, and a fair violinist who plays Bach for relaxation.

Associates describe him as the nation's "most literate Christian layman."

The presidency of the council, which includes 33 Protestant and Orthodox denominations with 40 million members, is the highest office in American interdenominational church life.

A lean, 6-foot-two man who wears dark horn-rimmed spectacles, he is a graduate of Yale with a masters of art degree from Oxford. He was a Navy officer in the Pacific in World War II.

He is chairman of the board of Columbus and of the Union Starch the Pacific in World War II.

He is chairman of the board of the Irwin Bank and Trust Co. of Columbus and of the Union Starch & Refining Co. of Granite City, Ill.

He also is a director of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis and of Purity Stores, a 105-store chain of supermarkets in California.

A Republican, he was among the few businessmen who opposed Indiana's recently passed "right-to-work" law outlawing the union shop. Miller's family-owned engine company, which has more than 4,000 employees, had been a union shop.

"I wouldn't know how to run a big company without a strong union," he says.

His family's wealth has been estimated at between $5 and $70 million. He tries to use it, he says "to change things for the better."

Tobacco Barn Is Lost To Flames

A tobacco barn burned on Mrs. Willie J. McLawhorn's farm on Rt. 6, Greenville, around 2:30 yesterday afternoon.

Stanton-House Fire Department Chief Ed Hemingway reported that the barn was a total loss and there was no insurance. The department was not called to the blaze, he said.

They Stand Within Shadows Of Modern Buildings

BELOW STANDARD HOUSING ON READE ST. . . . these would be included in the Urban Renewal area.

Slums become accepted by a community through the years. Clap board houses deteriorate from year-to-year and citizens, who otherwise have a fierce pride in their community, walk by them without an ounce of shame. Greenville is no exception. Within the shadows of modern commercial buildings are ancient dwellings gradually succumbing to the ravages of time.

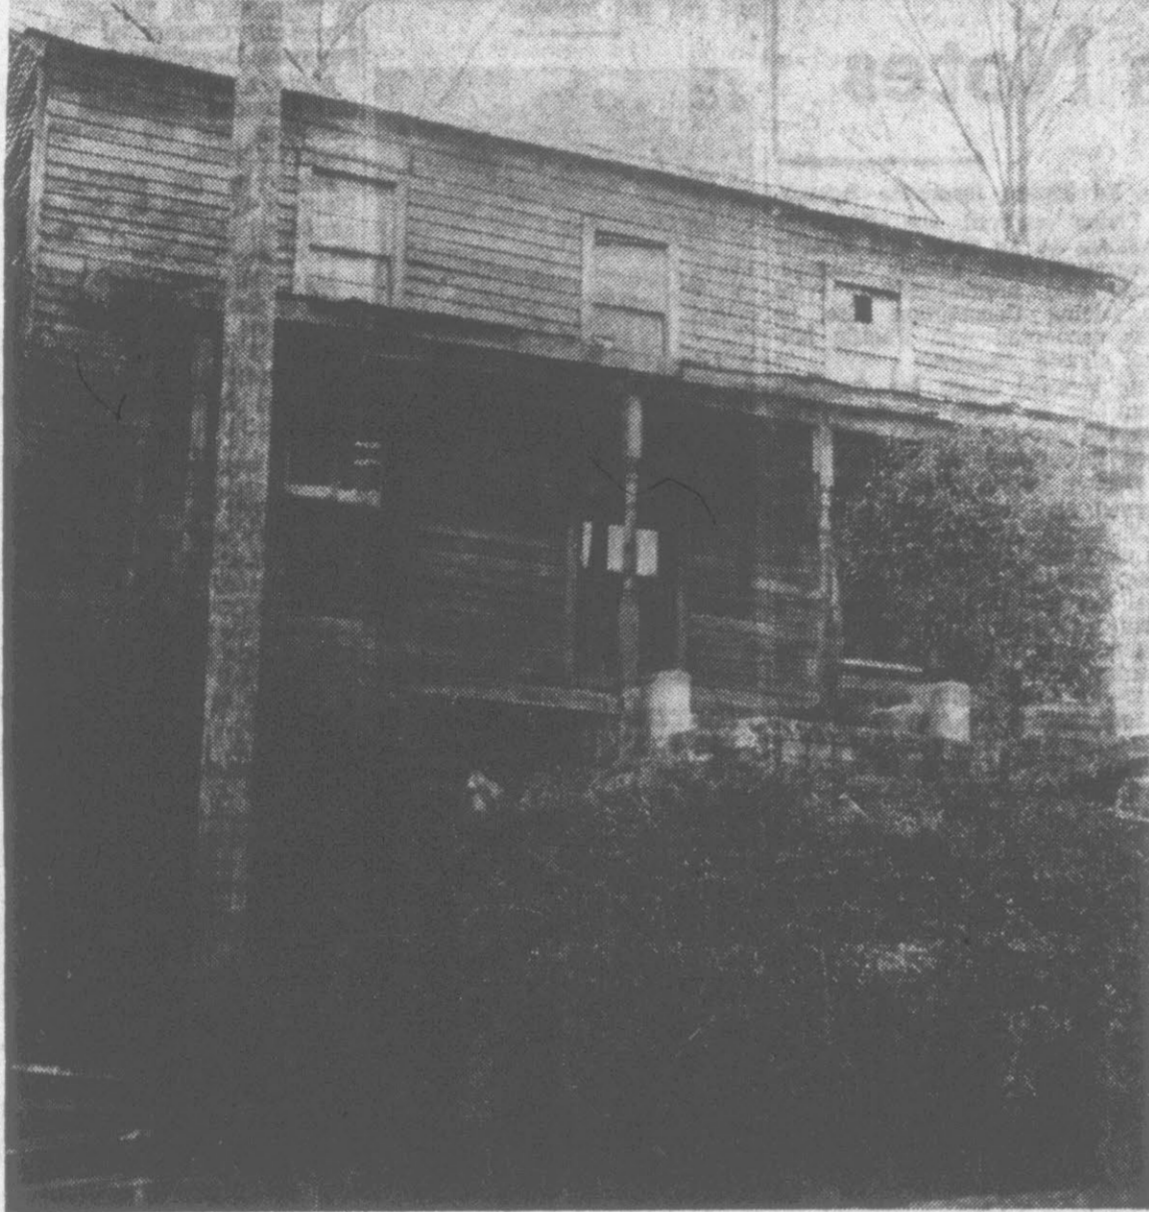

Urban Renewal Director William I. Cochran is quick to point out these blighted areas which lie in Greenville's proposed Re-development section.

He'll take you to Reade St. between Third and Fourth where the houses almost touch—and this within a block of commercial buildings.

He points to a little house on Greene St. which is overshadowed by two other larger dwellings standing on each side. Cochran says that dwellings at the very gates to the municipal garages represent a blighted area. And there is an abandoned tumble down house on Pitt St. which should have been demolished long ago.

Cochran saves the worst until last. This is a house perched on a hill on First St. It is unpainted. Its front porch has collapsed inside a Negro couple resides. They huddle around a little stove which couldn't possibly warm even one room since cracks in the walls allow winter winds to blow through.

This is what the city's Shore Drive Urban Renewal project proposes to eliminate.

HOUSE ON FIRST ST. . . . front porch has fallen in on this dwelling.

Rig Show May Pay Demo Debt

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Peter Lawford, co-promoter of a get the Democrats out of debt show, says that advance ticket sales make it look like the big show will do the job.

The show is an all-star event Lawford and Frank Sinatra have planned for Washington, D. C., on 19—the night before the presidential inauguration.

They hope the show will pay off the Democratic party's deficit from the 1950 campaign, which totals $2 million. Boxes are going for $10,000 each and bottom-dollar seats will be $100.

Lawford, President-elect John Kennedy's brother-in-law, said yesterday that he figures on the costs of tickets already sold that the show will gross $19 million. "and we are also hopeful the show can be sold to a TV sponsor for $10 million," he said.

Can Now Begin Raising Money

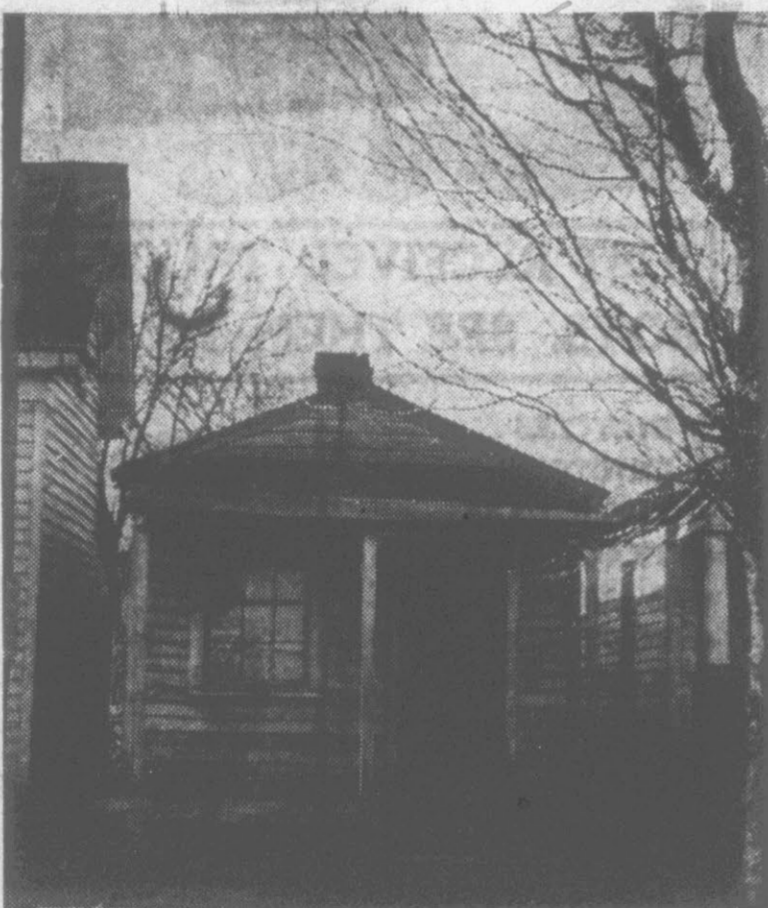

COLUMBIA (AP) — The Carolina-Virginia Nuclear Power Associates, Inc., now can start raising money in earnest for its atomic reactor steam generating plant at Parr, S.C.

The South Carolina Public Service Commission Wednesday gave the group permission to secure loans from banks to help finance the building of the multi-million dollar facility.

The short term loans, authorized by the commission, will probably carry an interest rate of about 4½ per cent.

Total cost of the plant is estimated at over 43 million dollars, of which 15 million will be put up by the Atomic Energy Commission.

Members of the CVNPA are the South Carolina Electric & Gas Co., Carolina Power and Light Co., Duke Power Co., and the Virginia Electric and Power Co.

Seen In Christopher Fry Comedy

Christopher Fry's "The Lady Not For Burning" to be presented tonight by the East Carolina College Playhouse at 8 p.m. in the McGinnis auditorium, is the story of a pessimistic soldier, Thomas Mendip, who wishes to be hanged, and of an accused witch, Jennet Jourdemayne, who prefers to escape the penalty of burning.

Peter Johl of Groton, Conn. (with viol upraised), who plays Mendip, is shown with other members of the cast in a scene in which he demands that he be sent to the gallows. The Chaplain, played by Pierre Beumouyal of Morocco, kneels before him and Edward Tapperoom, a justice, with Fitzhugh Dade of the library staff in the role, lays a restraining hand on Mendip's shoulder.

Mrs. Lois Garren of Greenville as Margaret Devise and Douglas Mitchell of Greenville as Nicholas Devise, her son, are at left.

Priscilla Kilgore of Greenville, (not pictured) is cast in the leading woman's role as the lady who is not for burning.

The Fry comedy, with a setting in England about 1400, is a witty poetic comedy distinguished by Fry's verbal pyrotechnics and the beauty and gusto of his verse.

A success on the London and the New York stages, the play will be given three performances by the East Carolina players—Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week—all at 8 p.m. in the McGinnis auditorium.

Three Perish In Flaming House

BEL AIR, Md. (AP)—An elderly man and two of his grandchildren perished in the flaming ruins of a small bungalow Wednesday when gasoline from a broken jar caused a wood-burning stove to explode.

The victims were Charles W. Minnick, 63, and his granddaughters, Ellen Marie Minnick, 5, and Sandra May, 6. Five other children, aged 9 to 14, fled the one-floor frame house before it was destroyed. Flames scorched the clothing of several survivors.

State police said the fire apparently started when a 14-year-old boy was pouring gasoline into a power chain saw in the kitchen and the jar broke, spilling the gasoline under the stove.

Trees growing along the borders of woods or on streets are struck by lightning with more frequency than those growing in a thick stand of trees.

REV. H. T. MONEY . . . Pastor of Hooker Memorial Church

By STUART SAVAGE

"We wanted a college town with a new church that hadn't been built."

That, according to Rev. H. T. Money, pastor of the Hooker Memorial Christian Church, is why he and his wife Suzanne "practically hand picked" Greenville as a place to live.

ville, Ky., attended Northwestern University and Transylvania University where he majored in Philosophy and Religion. He then attended The College of the Bible in Lexington, Ky., and at present, is working on a masters degree in History at East Carolina College.

Rev. Money, after graduating from seminary, served a year as youth director in a Kentucky church, then served as pastor of a church in Ewing, Ky., which was his first pastorate. He then served as pastor of the First Christian Church at New Castle, Ky., before coming to Greenville in June of 1958.

According to Rev. Money, the Hooker Memorial Christian Church was organized October 27, 1957 when 45 members of the Eighth Street Christian Church signed a Charter Membership Covenant to go with the new church. The first sermon to the new group was given November 3, 1957 and on April 27, 1958 a 5.7 acre lot on Greenville Blvd. was dedicated as the site of the new church.

Rev. Money preached first to the then-95-member congregation on June 22, 1958. At the end of the first year there were 117 members of the church and in the spring of 1959 a building fund drive was started. Construction plans were approved in October of 1959 and work on the buildings was started in May of this year, Money said.

Rev. Money noted that the Church, which now has 155 members, is scheduled to be completed within 60 days. The minister, who chose a "college town with a new church that hadn't been built," because he wanted to grow with the church, said one of the biggest problems in helping to build a new church is patience. "Pushing too hard then having to wait," is a hazard in building that hadn't been built.

He pointed out that "coming to Greenville has been one of the most enjoyable experiences," because of the "entirely different people" as compared with Kentucky. They are "more sincerely interested" in being a "part of the church."

Money's duties as pastor include being the "spiritual leader of the group . . . being responsible for the worship activities," and the pastoral duties which include calling on the members of the church and working with the membership on the varied programs of the church.

High on his "list of likes" next to "working up and delivering" a sermon is "meeting and getting to know people . . . especially young people."

When asked if there was anything he did not like, the youthful minister replied . . . with a smile on his face . . . "collards." Explaining his statement, Money said he had never tasted collards before coming to Greenville. He added, however, "I'll eat them."

A member of the Optimist Club, "because of their motto, Friend of Boys," Rev. Money rates sports, such as golf, baseball, and other spectator sports, and stamp collecting as his hobbies. He also coached a Teen-er League Baseball Team during the summer months.

Rev. Money noted that his wife, Suzanne lived only two blocks from his Louisville home and admitted he did not know whether she was keeping "an eye on me or whether it was the other way around."

The Money's live in the Parsonage at 1723 Leumont Drive with their "dog and parakeet."

Found One Who Took No Chances

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—When a minor fire broke out in the heating duct of a downtown hotel, firemen said they found a man who doesn't believe in taking chances.

The unidentified man Wednesday night caught the elevator on the 10th floor, rode down, and scampered through the crowded lobby—attired in only his underwear.

He later told firemen he once had to jump into a life net from the 10th floor of a burning hotel.

EXPORTS ROSE

PARIS (AP)—French exports in the first 11 months of 1960 total the equivalent of $4.3 billion, 28 per cent more than in the same period last year. Preliminary finance department figures showed today that imports are also heading for a record high with the equivalent of $4.3 billion worth of purchases through the end of November, up 27 per cent.

BUDGET NOT ITEMIZED

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP)—The 1961 federal budget is planned for a record 500 billion dinars ($166 million at official rate), or 65.8 billion dinars more than the current budget. The official Anjug news agency reported the figure without giving details.

LOCKHART, Tex. (AP)—The 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McDowell did a bang-up job of greeting her father Wednesday.

She was riding in her mother's lap as Mrs. McDowell was driving their pickup truck. Also in the front seat was another daughter, 7.

Suddenly the 3-year-old spotted her father's car coming down the road.

"There's daddy," she shrieked. Then she jerked the steering wheel, sending the pickup into the path of daddy's car.

The two vehicles collided. All four members of the family were taken to the hospital but released after being treated for minor cuts and bruises.

Packers, SF Meet In Top Pro Game

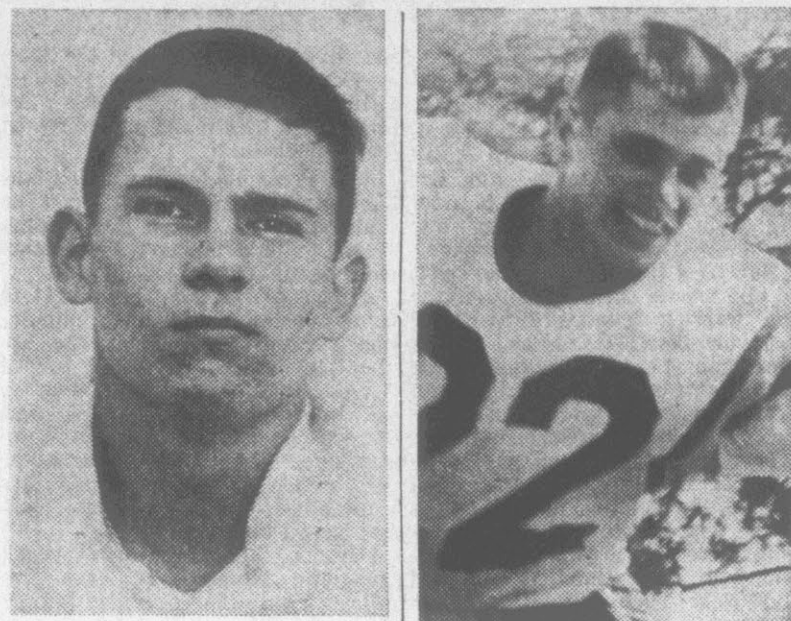

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Who would have thought the dormant Green Bay Packers and the quick-made San Francisco 49ers would be contending at this late date for the National Football League's Western Division title?

Certainly not the defending champion Baltimore Colts, tied with the Packers and 49ers for the division lead, each with a 6-4 record.

Palmer Gets Last Stab To Top Mark

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer gets his final chance to better his own record for prize money for a year in official PGA tournaments in the 72-hole Coral Gables Open Golf event starting today over the Biltmore course.

The Ligonier, Pa., pro already has picked up $74,736.66. He passed the old mark, held by Ted Kroll of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., two weeks ago when he won $2,000 first money in the Mobile, Ala., Open.

The current tournament is the final 72-hole event on the year's golf calendar.

Johnny Pot of Shreveport, La., will be after his second straight victory. He won the West Palm Beach Open last Sunday.

Willie Shoemaker, last year's leading jockey, had 347 winners in 1,285 mounts.

Robersonville Expecting To Fare Well In Cage Wars

(This is the second in series of stories featuring basketball teams in this area.)
By LEONARD LAO
Reflector Sports Writer
Coach Bob Lee is optimistic about his Robersonville basketball team's chances for the 1960-61 season, and the biggest factor contributing to Lee's optimism is a senior by the name of Tommy Ward.

Also the star tailback on Coach Lee's football team, Ward is one of the most feared shooters in the Martin County Conference. An All-County choice last season, Ward is a sure bet to repeat the honor again this year.

TOMMY WARD . . . Robersonville ace

The Rams, who finished with a 10-8 record last season, have five returning lettermen, all five starters. Only two men were lost from last year's team. Bob Grimes, an All-County guard, and Shelton Everette are the two who left Robersonville via the graduation route.

Veterans along with Ward are Bonnie Stevenson, a six foot-four inch center, Brown Keel, five foot-ten inch guard, Russ Williams, five foot-ten inch guard, and Jimmy Brown, a five foot-eleven inch forward.

Backing these five veterans is another senior who will help in the rebounding department. Six foot-one inch forward, Dallas Taylor is the number six man on the Ram squad.

Coach Lee terms his depth as average. "After those first five," explains Lee, "there is not too much experience, except for junior varsity experience."

In the size department, the Rams will rate about even with the other teams in the conference. The starting five will average about 5 feet, 11 inches.

For an average sized team, Coach Lee is confident of his rebounding strength. "It's not too good right now," says Lee, "but it will come around in time."

As far as offense and defense are concerned, Coach Lee is optimistic of one and pessimistic of the other. "On defense," said Lee, "there is a lot of work to be done." In a game with Williamston last week the Rams had 94 points scored against them.

"Our offense is going to be above average," explains Coach Lee. "Of course it will take a few games before they will start hitting consistently. After all, all five starters were on the football team."

ACC Teams Hit Road For Non-League Contests

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams hit the road for the rest of the week, taking on some formidable non-conference opposition.

The parade begins tonight when Clemson plays Marshall College in Huntington, W.Va., and South Carolina treks south to play Georgia of the Southeastern Conference. All conference teams were idle Tuesday night.

Clemson takes a 1-2 record into its game with Marshall. The West Virginia club, a member of the Mid-American Conference, is 1-1. South Carolina and Georgia each will take 1-1 marks into their battle.

On Friday night, the ACC scene shifts to Charlotte, where Duke plays Penn State and Wake Forest takes on West Virginia in a feature twin bill. Duke and Wake Forest swap foes Saturday night.

N.C. State entertains The Citadel Saturday night in Raleigh for the only ACC "home" game during the remainder of the week.

Bones McKinney, the Wake Forest basketball coach, was in fine condition after his team's workout Wednesday. "As of this moment I would say positively yes—Len Chappell will play this weekend," he said.

Without the 6-foot-8 Chappell, Wake has compiled a 1-1 record. The big junior has been out with a knee injury. "Chappell looked like the Chappell of old, and if he doesn't get hurt we're going to be all right."

Chappell and another 6-8 player, Jerry Steele, have been injured. Steele, who underwent a knee operation on Oct. 18, has played less than 20 minutes in

National Loop Looking For Expansion In 1964

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP)—The dove of peace hovered over the majors today following the American League's official move into Los Angeles with the blessing of Dodger owner Walter O'Malley and his fellow National Leaguers.

How long the bird will stay aloft no one knows. Only hours after the two warring leagues had buried the hatchet Wednesday, some American Leaguers began eyeing the Giants-occupied Oakland-San Francisco territory as the next objective in its expansion program.

The American, which will operate with 10 teams next year, has a blueprint calling for 12 teams in the near future. So has the National, which will continue to function with eight clubs in 1961 and add New York and Houston in 1962.

Informed persons confided during the three-day meetings that the National has been quietly the first two games. Chappell didn't play in either game. Without his two big men, McKinney said backcourt men Alley Hart and Billy Packer have played all but a combined six minutes in the first two games. But, Bones points out, "You have to have someone to get the points up close" and that would be Chappell and Steele.

Football star Norman Snead and Bill Hull, also a Deacon gridders, have helped fill the gap better than expected, but a healthy Chappell and Steele would go a long way toward putting the Deacons up to their pre-season ratings.

sounding out Buffalo and the Dallas-Fort Worth area for possible 11th and 12th teams in 1964. Toronto is a 12th-team possibility in the American.

At a press conference, Frick outlined the conditions that must be fulfilled in the future if any club seeks to invade territories occupied by another.

A territory will be permitted to have two teams only if its population exceeds 2.4 million. The application must be made before Oct. 31 of the year previous to the intended operation. The new ownership must satisfy the commissioner of individual character and collective financial stability sufficient to guarantee at least five years operation.

Further, the new club's park must be situated at least five miles from the existing team's stadium, unless both agree otherwise. The existing team must be reimbursed $100,000, plus half of the amount it had cost in the form of indemnity to minor league teams. In the Dodgers' case, O'Malley received $325,000. It had cost him $450,000 to pioneer West Coast territory.

Frick said future expansion by one club into another league would be permitted with only three-unanimous consent that was the major stumbling block until O'Malley relented and allowed the syndicate headed by cowboy singer Gene Autry and ex-Stanford football star Bob Reynolds to put American League baseball on the West Coast.

O'Malley, waiving the five-mile rule, compromised on a one-year stay at Wrigley Field by the new American League team, which will be called the Angels. He originally had insisted on two. He also gave the newcomers a four-year lease at his new Chavez Ravine stadium upon completion in 1962, at a $200,000 annual rental or 7 1/2 per cent of the gate.

Stas Figures LR SCORES To Score In Bowl

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Coach Clarence Stasavich of Lenoir Rhyne hopes his Bears can muster the sharp defense he feels will be needed to keep Humboldt, Calif., State from scoring too much in Saturday night's Holiday Bowl game here.

The Lenoir Rhyne Coach said Wednesday, "I feel we can score on them but it will take a sharp defense to keep them from scoring more." He noted the Humboldt, which has a 20-game victory string going, averaged 339 yards against opponents this season.

Coach Phil Sarboe of Humboldt said the Lumberjacks hadn't played a team using the single wing — and Lenoir Rhyne does — "in the 10 years I've been at Humboldt." He added, "It's going to take a lot of work in three days to get our boys ready."

Lenoir Rhyne (10-0-1) arrived Monday from Hickory, N.C., for its second appearance in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championship football game. The Bears lost to Texas A&I 20-7 last year.

The Humboldt team arrived Wednesday.

Two of the Bears' first team players were on the doubtful list because of injuries. They are star end Dick Lage and Odell White, wingback.

The Bears' triple-threat tailback Lee Farmer, went through signal drills Wednesday with a marked limp, but Stasavich said he expected he'd be in the lineup.

On the other side of the ledger, the Lumberjacks' end Matt Kelley is on the doubtful list because of a knee injury. Linebacker Mike Uthoff and end Joe Siano are ailing but expected to play.

Davidson Opens Swing Into Va.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS — A poised sophomore who's forcing Davidson's high scorer of last year to log quite a bit of bench time this season will have his work cut out for him the next couple of nights in the Wildcats' bid to escape a second Southern Conference basketball basement finish.

He's Danny Carrell, a 5-11 operative from Louisville, Ky., whose defensive work and playmaking were singled out by new Coach Lefty Driesell as one of the keys to the Wildcats' amazing 65-59 upset of Wake Forest in their opening game last Saturday night.

Carrell started in place of Bill Shinn, a 319-point scorer for the Wildcats last season, and Shinn said afterwards "I'll be willing to warm the bench all season if we can play like we did tonight."

The Wildcats didn't quite keep up the momentum, dropping a 54-52 decision Tuesday night to little Catawba. They open a two-game swing in Virginia tonight at Virginia Military Institute, then move over to title favorite Virginia Tech Friday night.

Tech showed why it's rated the team to beat Wednesday night as the Gobblers opened their campaign with a 76-54 romp over Richmond's Spiders.

Only one other conference team will see action tonight, Furman's Paladins playing host to Erskine in a bid for their third victory in four overall starts.

Robinson Moves Up In Ring Poll

NEW YORK (AP) — Sugar Ray Robinson, after his draw with NBA champion Gene Fullmer Saturday night, today advanced to No. 2 among the middleweight contenders and was named fighter of the month by Ring magazine.

Ring, in its monthly ratings, recognizes Paul Pender of Brookline, Mass., as world middleweight champion and ranks Fullmer, of West Jordan, Utah, the top contender.

Robinson had been ranked fifth among the middleweights by Ring until his surprising showing in holding Fullmer to a draw.

Other noteworthy changes in the ratings include the drop of former welterweight champion Don Jordan to ninth place after his loss to Ludwig Lightburn, and the demotion of Philadelphia's Len Matthews to fourth place among the lightweights after his loss Tuesday night to Cuba's Doug Vaillant. Vaillant, unranked last month, was jumped to No. 7.

The 1960 membership of the Professional Golfers' Association of America totals 4,600.

James Norris Faces NBA Investigators Today

By WHITNEY SHOEMAKER WASHINGTON (AP) — James D. Norris learns today whether he must face in public or in private the Senate investigators who have associated him repeatedly with hoodlum Frankie Carbo in the inner circle of the prize-fight business.

Norris was the country's foremost boxing promoter for a decade until he quit the sport last fall. His attorney asked permission for him to testify in the presumed tranquility of a closed hearing.

Physicians who have treated Norris say the tension of a public hearing might precipitate heart attack. Norris already has been stricken twice, they reported.

Sen. Estes Kefauver, chairman of the subcommittee seeking a legal deterrent for an alleged underworld tarnish on boxing, said a decision would be announced this morning.

Through ex-middleweight champion Carmen Basilio, Promoter-manager Jack Kearns and former New York Manager Herman (Hymie the Mink) Wallman, the investigators Wednesday linked Norris and Carbo in discussions of boxers and bouts.

Norris, who owns Chicago Stadium, headed the International Boxing Clubs until they were dissolved by the Supreme Court in 1959 for monopolizing championship fights. He then headed the clubs' Chicago successor before pulling out altogether.

Carbo long has been described in the side-of-the-mouth conversations as the underworld's Mr. Big of prizefighting. He is now serving a two-year sentence for under-cover managing and match-making.

Kefauver's subcommittee heard Kearns say he has been dickered with the Teamsters Union as well as the AFL-CIO on a project to unionize the entire boxing industry.

Basilio, said Carbo had called on the phone while he was staying in his terms for a possible rematch with Sugar Ray Robinson at Norris' home in Coral Gables, Fla.

Horse trainer Robert A. (Whistling Bob) Smith, who died in 1943 at the age of 73, also dabbled in boxing. He was the manager of lightweight Frank Erne.

Rebel Band Said Wiped Out In Battle Near Havana

HAVANA (AP)—The government claimed today it had destroyed a band of insurgents in a battle at Cabanas only 32 miles west of Havana.

An army communique said the entire band was cleaned up with the capture of 11 men, including its leader, Capt. Clodomiro Mian-da Mendiola, who was badly wounded, and the killing of his brother.

An officer in Prime Minister Fidel Castro's army was killed and four men wounded.

Although the army claimed the entire band was wiped out, earlier reports said Miranda Mendiola had 200 heavily armed men with him when he deserted Castro's forces and took to the hills only a few days ago.

The reports said Miranda Mendiola, commander of the garrison at Seboruco, took his outfit on maneuvers in the mountains of Pinar Del Rio Province and when he reached a selected spot informed them he was deserting and gave them a choice of returning to their post or joining him. Two hundred men reportedly stayed with him.

Provincial Commander Derfido Escalona personally directed a force of militiamen, reported to number 2,000, that was sent after the deserters.

Other bands, reliable reports indicated, were still operating in the western province. One report said an entire truckload of arms disappeared from San Julian air base, a heavily guarded depot for new weapons arriving from the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and other Iron Curtain countries.

Presumably the weapons fell into the hands of insurgents. Yet other armed insurgents were still operating in the Escambray Mountains in the southern part of Las Villas Province in central Cuba. Although the government claimed it had mopped up the last pockets of detection in that area more than a month ago, 16 militiamen were reported Wednesday to have been killed along the Las Villas-Matanzas border.

The Escambray Mountains were the scene of a mass trial of rebels a few weeks ago at which five death sentences and 180 prison sentences were handed out.

Castro dramatically spiked a report he was personally leading a rebel hunt in central Cuba by showing up at a program Wednesday night commemorating Cuba's Memorial Day.

Despite shouts from the crowd in a hall of the capital building, where the program was held, calling for Castro to come to the microphone, he refused to budge from his seat in the balcony.

It was one of his rare public appearances in which he was not the central figure. The army chief of staff, Maj. Juan Almeida, delivered the main address, which was laced with anti-Americanisms.

There was no official or semi-official reaction to the bombing of Our Lady of Charity church in Havana Tuesday night. Roman Catholic authorities have attributed the bombing, which injured no one, to Communists. The Havana press ignored the incident.

Licensed 15 To Solicit Funds

RALEIGH—During the month of November, licenses were granted by the State Board of Public Welfare to fifteen organizations for the support of their programs. It was announced by Dr. Ellen Winston, Commissioner.

All of the licenses were granted to organizations which have held licenses for previous solicitation periods. These organizations are: American Freedom Association; The Children's Village; Church of God of Prophecy; Cleveland County Girl Scouts; Local Advisory Council; Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere; Foster Parents' Plan; 4-H Club Foundation of North Carolina; Henderson Webb Junior College; Henderson County Girl Scout Association; Meals for Millions Foundation; Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America; The National Foundation; National Jewish Hospital at Denver; Pfeiffer Junior College; and World University Service.

The total amount which these fifteen organizations will seek from the public during the year in North Carolina is approximately $1,506,944.00.

During the month, reports were received on solicitations by the Federal Association for Epilepsy of Washington, D.C.; Father Flanagan's Boys' Home of Boys Town, Nebraska; and The Omaha Home for Boys of Omaha, Nebraska. The State Board of Public Welfare is pointing out that such solicitations are in violation of the State solicitation law since these associations are not licensed in accordance with its provisions.

Blind Work For Month Reported

The Pitt County Welfare Department caseworker for the blind reported 48 persons were given eye examinations, glasses were recommended for 31 and surgery for five during the month of November.

In addition, treatment for nine, eye artificial eyes for one and five eye operations were reported. For two persons, there was no recommendation for improvement of vision. Seven persons were removed from the classification of blindness.

The Greenville Lions Club arranged for payment of glasses for four and transportation to Duke for two and approved payment of glasses for 10 and an artificial eye for one, it was noted.

In another part of the report, it was noted that 145 persons received Aid to the Blind payments during November. One application for Aid to the Blind was approved and two other cases were closed.

The Lions Club was told that two visually handicapped graduates of East Carolina College who had received aid from the club have future plans in mind. One has accepted a job as teacher in Lenoir County and will start work this month. The other, assisted through the rehabilitation Division in continuing his studies in the School of Social Work at the University of North Carolina hopes to find employment as a caseworker when he finishes his training.

To Perform Handel's Oratorio On Sunday

Handel's "The Messiah" will be presented at East Carolina College Sunday, December 11, at 3:30 p.m. in the Wright auditorium. The performance, an annual event of the Christmas season on the campus, will be open to the public and is expected to attract a large audience from localities in Eastern North Carolina.

Seven student soloists, selected by faculty members of the college department of music, will sing arias in the Handel oratorio. A choir of approximately 100 voices will appear in the choruses. Accompaniment will be provided by an orchestra made up largely of faculty members of the department of music.

Dr. Carl T. Hjortsvang of the faculty will direct "The Messiah" at Sunday's performance. He is in charge of the program of instruction in church music and a teacher of voice in the department of music. He also directs the Chapel Choir at East Carolina.

Patricia Lane Roberts of Farmville, soprano, who was soloist in the 1959 presentation of "The Messiah" at East Carolina will again appear in arias of the Handel oratorio. Mrs. Martha Bradner of Greenville will sing alto solos for the third time.

Chosen for their first appearance here in "The Messiah" are Betsy M. Hancock of Rt. 2, Scotland Neck, Jessamine Hiatt of Clinton, and Marjorie Kennedy Moore of Kinston, sopranos; Peter R. Johl of Tralls Corner, Groton, Conn., tenor; and Ronald J. Knouse of Winston-Salem, bass.

Chapel Choir In Concert Dec. 14

Christmas music will be featured in a program to be presented Wednesday, Dec. 14, by the Chapel Choir of East Carolina College. The concert will take place at 7 p.m. in the Austin auditorium and will be open to the public.

Sixty-three men and women vocalists are members of the choir and sing under the direction of Dr. Carl T. Hjortsvang of the college department of music. The group appears frequently at weekly chapel programs on the campus and also participates in other events at the college.

Ardyth McCroskey of Badin, president of the Chapel Choir, will act as piano accompanist at the Dec. 14 program. Samuel S. Branson of Thomasville, flutist, will also play accompaniments for several numbers.

Soloists who will appear in the Christmas songs concert include Becky Forbes of Williamston, Majorie Moore of Kinston, Faye Coppedge of Virginia Beach, Va., and Shirley Williams of Fayetteville.

Other members of the Chapel Choir who are scheduled to appear in the Christmas concert are the following from Pitt County: Ann Frances Allen of Farmville, Elizabeth Ann Bennett of Ayden, Mildred H. Bowden of Greenville, Sallie Mewborn of Grifton, Sandra N. Sutton of Ayden, and Linda Gay Whitfield of Greenville.

Eager, Anxious College Students Invade The Schools

By CONNOR JONES
Burlington Times-News
Written for The Associated Press
BURLINGTON (AP) — Twice a year the schools of North Carolina are subjected to invasion by an eager, and sometimes anxious, army of college students.

These invaders are prospective teachers, who move into elementary and high school classrooms to acquire first-hand experience before receiving their degrees. They come to the schools from the state's various colleges and universities after three years of study.

In Burlington, 26 of these student teachers were assigned to classrooms in city schools on Nov. 14. They were placed under the supervision of volunteer teachers selected for their experience. They were placed in classes in the grade or grade-level which they intend to teach after observing other grades.

In the case of those planning to teach high school, a period of general observation is followed by actual practice in the subject area which they are studying.

What is the biggest difficulty which a student teacher has when he or she begins practice in a strange school? This question was answered quickly by the Burlington student teachers.

Patricia Litchfield of Jackson, one of 23 student teachers from the University of North Carolina, says the biggest difficulty is "getting organized, getting food and finding out where the schools are."

Dale Austin of Taylorsville, also of the University, says it is harder for the men.

"Men have to get out and beat the bushes for an apartment," he said.

SANTA'S WORKSHOP . . . has a great competitor in the field of Christmas "hustle and bustle" in the form of Greenville firemen who are shown at work repairing toys to be distributed at Christmas by the Salvation Army. Fire Chief George Gardner said today that anyone having old toys to donate to the Salvation Army should do so as soon as possible so firemen will have time to repair them and have them ready for distribution Christmas.

Both prospective elementary and high school teachers express amazement at the aptitude and courtesy of students they are to teach.

Rebecca Holland of Wilmington, who teaches in the second grade at Hillcrest, said the students "know so much more than I thought, and they are interested in learning."

Cornelia (Dee) Smith of High Point, working with first graders, commented that the students seem "more alert than we are."

She said the teacher must work constantly to stay ahead of the pupils.

On the high school level, the student teachers are surprised at the discipline of their charges. They note the students' belief in the unfavorable publicity they so often receive.

Farmville Officer Resigns, Applications Being Taken

PARMVILLE—Farmville Commissioners Tuesday accepted the resignation of William M. Boyd, hired to fill a police department vacancy three months ago, and appointed a Wilson man to serve the local force on a temporary basis. Boyd, in his letter of resignation to the board, stated he had accepted a position on the police force in Washington, N. C., the officer's home town. The local patrolman's resignation will become effective Dec. 15. On that day, I. R. Brown of Wilson will step into the vacancy until the board has had an opportunity to review applications. Town Clerk Harold Allred was instructed in Tuesday's monthly session to advertise for applications for the job. Allred said today Brown's application will be reviewed along with all other applications received by the Town of Farmville. In other action, the board agreed to have individual vehicle parking spaces indicated with painted lines on Grimmersburg St. between Main and Contentnea Sts. The action resulted from a request presented by Fire Chief Curtion H. Flanagan, Flanagan told the board the present situation on Grimmersburg creates traffic congestion when vehicles park on both sides of the street. When vehicles are parked on both sides, Flanagan said, the street's width is inadequate. In addition to instructing the police department to paint the lines designating the parking spaces, the board directed police to enforce the parking regulations on the one-block stretch to assure the street would have adequate width. The board instructed the Police Department to continue its past policy of designating by painted lines parking areas to be used in Farmville alleys. In other action, the board donated $400 to the Pitt County Bookmobile scheduled to serve the Negro population in the county. The commissioners granted the State Highway Commission permission to trim hedges and limbs adjacent to the town's park on the Fountain Highway. The trimming is required, according to the state body, to eliminate a blind curve on that highway. The board agreed to repair deterioration and Hurricane "Donna" damage to the Boy Scout Hut in northern Farmville. Repairs will include new shingles for the entire roof of the building currently occupied by the Farmville National Guard unit.

CHICAGO (AP)—James R. Hoffa, indicted with two associates in a Florida real estate venture, surrendered to a U. S. marshal Wednesday, posted $10,000 bond, then hustled back to a hotel to take up the business of his powerful Teamsters Union. Hoffa's appearance before U.S. Commissioner C. S. Bentley Pike was sandwiched in between rounds of Teamsters conferences at a South Side hotel. The president of the nation's biggest union was named in a 12-count indictment voted by a U.S. District Court grand jury in Orlando, Fla. The indictment, charging mail fraud involving alleged misuse of union funds, linked Hoffa with two other men in a 2,400-acre land development project, Sun Valley, Inc. Without waiting to be served with a warrant, Hoffa sped downtown to the U. S. Marshals office, surrendered and was finger-printed. Brought before Pike, he was ordered to appear for removal hearing Friday. At about the same time, Henry Lower and Robert E. McCarthy Jr. were arrested in Detroit, taken before Federal Judge Theodore Levin and ordered to appear Monday for a similar hearing on removal to Florida. Lower, former officer of a Detroit Teamsters local, was released on $50,000 bond and McCarthy, former branch manager of the Bank of Commonwealth at Detroit, was released on personal recognizance bond of $10,000. The indictment was announced in Washington by Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers. It grew out of a 13-month investigation by the FBI, Postal authorities and other agents, and an 11-month probe by the grand jury. Sun Valley, Inc., was founded in 1954, with Lower as its president, to develop a tract in Brevard County on Florida's East Coast. But only six houses were built on the land before the project became embroiled in law suits and subsequently was sold to Edwin H. Willis, a Titusville, Fla., banker and land developer. Rogers said the three men are accused in the indictment of using more than a half million dollars of Teamsters funds on the project, which was advertised as a retirement haven for union members.

British Dignity Wasn't Ruffled

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—British aplomb and dignity were ruffled not one whit as the frigate HMS Ulster, ran aground and perched atop a mudbank in the St. Petersburg Channel. Aboard the Ulster was Commodore Colin Shand, senior naval officer in the West Indies, who sent the following message to Frank Smitherton, the British consul in St. Petersburg: "Regret we shall be with you a little longer than planned, for the generosity and courtesy of St. Petersburg. I am not surprised the old lady does not want to leave." The ship was freed at high tide Wednesday after spending nearly six hours stuck fast in the mud. The Ulster had been berthed at St. Petersburg since Sunday on a visit. BIG ART PRICE LONDON (AP)—A picture painted by Frans Hals, a Dutch artist who died a poor man in 1666, was sold at Sotheby's auction rooms Wednesday for 182,000 pounds—($510,000) to Leonard F. Koester, London art dealer.

Scientists Want A Sea-Going Lab

RALEIGH (AP) — The fate of a potentially superior tuberculosis vaccine may depend on the ability of a group of North Carolina scientists to acquire a sea-borne laboratory.

The call for a portable, well-equipped lab on a boat was issued Wednesday by Dr. Mac Vandiviere, director of research at the North Carolina Sanatorium.

Vandiviere and his group have received the vaccine but they have not been able to give it the full-fledged test which could prove its value.

Chief reason for this is that the vaccine loses its punch unless it is used within three days after it is manufactured.

Dr. Vandiviere, who in the company of other scientists developed the product more than two years ago, said the vaccine must be tested on a population in which a minimum of 50,000 people have little change of escaping contact with an active case of TB.

He said persons living in such an area would be vaccinated in a scientifically controlled program and followed for five to 10 years.

The island of Haiti, where the death rate from the disease is 350 per 100,000 persons, is a possible location, he said.

If Haiti were selected, however, a boat-laboratory would be a necessity because there would not be enough commercial airline flights to keep up a continuous flow of fresh vaccine and the cost of chartered air transportation would be prohibitive.

Dr. Vandiviere and his associates are continuing to try to develop a means of preserving the vaccine beyond the present three day limit. "The vaccine's future," he said, "depends just as much on preservation as the outcome of the evaluation study."

In the meantime, however, the scientists are hoping that "somewhere there is an individual, a foundation, or an agency with funds and a willingness to take a calculated risk for humanity's sake."

Install New Radar System On Ships

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — A new radar that can pinpoint a supersonic target in three dimensions—range, bearing and altitude—has been installed on missile cruisers and destroyers.

The Navy and Hughes Aircraft Co. announced the development Tuesday.

The system requires only a single antenna, transmitter and receiver. Conventional radar systems require combinations of antennas, transmitters and receivers to give three-dimensional target information to fire-control centers.

The new all-weather radar is known as Frescan. Unlike conventional systems, it does not require stabilizing gear to compensate for the pitch and roll of a ship at sea.

JUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — A check for $40 was sent to St. Mary-Corwin Hospital by a woman in Hollywood, Calif. She said it was to pay for a hospital bill run up 32 years ago. The hospital withheld her name.

Honesty Results In $12 Refund

Patrick J. O'Donnell, 19, of Norwalk, a freshman at Drake University, pleaded guilty in Municipal Court to a charge of speeding. He paid a $12 fine.

A few minutes later he returned and told the clerk there had been a mistake; the usual fine in his case would have been $22. The clerk said she couldn't do anything about it, so O'Donnell went to the judge.

"I'm impressed by your honesty," said the judge. "I am going to dismiss the charge and order the $12 you did pay refunded to you."

Honesty Results In $12 Refund

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Honesty still pays—and in one case it even resulted in a refund.

Patrick J. O'Donnell, 19, of Norwalk, a freshman at Drake University, pleaded guilty in Municipal Court to a charge of speeding. He paid a $12 fine.

A few minutes later he returned and told the clerk there had been a mistake; the usual fine in his case would have been $22. The clerk said she couldn't do anything about it, so O'Donnell went to the judge.

"I'm impressed by your honesty," said the judge. "I am going to dismiss the charge and order the $12 you did pay refunded to you."

Install New Radar System On Ships

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — A new radar that can pinpoint a supersonic target in three dimensions—range, bearing and altitude—has been installed on missile cruisers and destroyers.

The Navy and Hughes Aircraft Co. announced the development Tuesday.

The system requires only a single antenna, transmitter and receiver. Conventional radar systems require combinations of antennas, transmitters and receivers to give three-dimensional target information to fire-control centers.

I'M PLANNING FOR ANOTHER GOOD TOBACCO CROP RIGHT NOW!

"Top dollar tobacco at selling time depends on getting a good start at plant bed time. And I'm going to be sure I'll have plenty of sturdy, well-rooted stock for transplanting again this year."

"ROBERTSON'S PLANT BED Fertilizer in a carefully prepared seed bed is the answer. You can't beat experience, and Robertson's Plant Bed Fertilizer has been proved by the results it gets year after year for generations.

"There's not a lot of fertilizer in a plant bed—but an awful lot depends on it. Your whole year's work, and the price you get next fall are influenced by the start you get in the next few weeks. So I'm starting with Robertson's PLANT BED SPECIAL and staying with Robertson's Tobacco Fertilizers right through the year. That's what got top dollar for me last fall—and I figure there's no better proof of good fertilizer than the figures on my warehouse receipts."

Robertson's, the "Better Ingredients" fertilizer, made right here in this section, especially for local soils, is the logical choice of more and more good farmers in this section—a choice that's based on experience. WORKING TOGETHER—Lt. Thomas Armstrong of Dallas, assistant director of administration services at Alconbury AFB in England, exchanges a pleasantry with his secretary, Jayne Pinner of nearby Little Stukley, East Anglia, under a portrait of the Queen.

HALLOWE'EN HELPERS—U.S. Air Force Lt. William E. Learnard of Chillicothe, Ohio, and Pam Palmer of Sawtry, England, share weight of a 63-pound pumpkin destined to become a jack-o'-lantern at Alconbury AFB. Pam is licensee of pub six miles from base.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A recent presidential directive trimming the number of servicemen's dependents overseas has caused a stir in both military and marital circles and poses the question: What's life really like for these displaced Americans? Here's a report from England.

By RONALD THOMSON

ALCONBURY, England (AP)—A jet plane screeched through the sky and set glasses drumming in the little pub where the sign read: "American Spoken Here."

Not a man at the bar stirred. Outside, a plowman scarcely bothered to look up. His horse plodded on, too, unmoved.

This is East Anglia—a sort of Little America on the rich, dark soil of rural England.

The whine of a jet is as familiar as the chug of a tractor. And the accents of New England and the Deep South are as common as the rough dialect of the local country folk.

A network of U. S. and British air bases, many equipped with deadly rockets, runs through the flat, bleak and marshy country side.

Just outside the city of Huntingdon, near a place called Upper Stukeley, stands one of the most important bases in Little America—Alconbury, headquarters of the 10th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing of the U. S. Air Force in Europe.

More than 7,000 American men, women and children live on or around this chilly plateau where the Stars and Stripes waves in a howling wind.

Alconbury, an oasis of the United States, radiates the American way of life. Its influence has in many ways changed the surrounding countryside.

One of England's few motels operates within a mile or two of the base. Shops in nearby towns price their goods in British pounds—and the equivalent in dollars.

The quaint old pubs now stock ice—something of a revolution in a land where beer is taken tepid.

"Not that we want the English people to change just because we are here," says Capt. Robert M. Bussjaeger of St. Joseph, Mo.

"As a matter of fact, I like the English beer just the way it is—kind of warm."

Most of the Americans found the English a little hard to understand at first.

"Their reserve used to puzzle us," says Lt. Thomas W. Armstrong of Dallas. "You know, this business about having to be introduced before you get talking."

"I'll never forget the first time I went into an English pub. There were three or four of us American and, from outside, we could hear people talking and laughing. "But when we went in the door, the noise just snapped off. Nobody spoke. When we walked up to the bar we felt as if we were throwing out waves of silence all around. It wasn't very comfortable and we didn't stay long."

"Well, the next time we went back things seemed a little easier. It took us three visits to get accepted, but it was worth waiting for. Now the regulars gathered round whenever we go in and everybody has a lot of fun. One of the boys goes down there Saturday nights to keep bar."

There is little or no anti-American feeling in East Anglia, where the free-spending Yanks have done a lot to make the area prosperous.

"There is absolutely no personal hostility," says Capt. Bussjaeger. "Even when someone writes a letter to the papers criticizing the United States, it's nearly always another Briton who replies for the defense."

Alconbury is the nerve center and control headquarters for the wing, which occupies other bases at Chelveston, Molesworth and Bruntingthorpe, 60 miles away. It's a widespread operation that costs upward of $12 million a year.

At Alconbury, you find the bowling alley and the barber shop, the stream of big American automobiles, the stores and movie theater, the handsome school, the gymnasium and library, the chapel and the cafe.

For hundreds of families, the base is like a real town—the place where they have their own house, where Dad goes to work, and kids go to school and Mom does her shopping.

But there are only a limited number of American-style houses on the base so about 1,500 men and their families have to rent houses and apartments in nearby homes amazes me.

"But life here is different in many pleasant ways. There isn't the same frantic rush—the whole pace of life is more relaxed. I like that."

Mrs. Conway's oldest child, 15-year-old Kathleen, goes to school at the U. S. Lakenheath base, 40 miles from Alconbury. It means rising soon after 6 a. m., leaving home at 7 and getting back at 5 p. m. each night—a wearing schedule for a teenager.

But that is nothing unusual for American children in this part of the world.

A fleet of buses brings them from their homes to the schools at Alconbury and other bases. For many of the kids it means up to four hours traveling a day.

The children, more than 1,250 of them, are taught exclusively by American teachers. Most of the 51 teachers live in Cambridge and commute by car to and from the base schools.

One of the most striking demonstrations of local Anglo-American understanding was spurred by Maj. Noah M. Dixon, commander of the 10th Tactical Hospital.

Early this year, Maj. Dixon—who was born in Springfield, Ill., and had a medical practice in Monroe, Wis., before joining the Air Force in 1954—invited a handful of British and American physicians to his home for an informal discussion of medical problems.

That meeting led to the formation of the Anglo-American Medical Society, which now has more than 200 members and recently held its first formal meeting in Cambridge.

It's only to be expected, however, that Alconbury and its sister bases have prompted some local complaints. The chief one is noise.

Col. Kemp—a powerfully built man who was born in Spring Ranch, Neb., and raised in Roman, Mont.—has developed a way of handling noise complaints from the local folk.

His officers make a personal call on the sufferer and explain what is being done to deaden the din—and why some noise is unavoidable.

"Usually this approach is welcomed by the complainant, who just wants to be sure we are not ignoring his troubles," Col. Kemp says.

At one local meeting attended by Col. Kemp, a heckler jumped up and denounced the U. S. Air Force for inventing jets and bringing them to this once-peaceful part of England.

Kemp chuckled as he recalled how the English chairman of the meeting handled the interruption. "My dear fellow," the chairman told the heckler, "I am sure you must have forgotten that Sir Frank Whittle invented the jet engine just down the road from here."

It was a crushing reply that at the same time stimulated the pride of the audience—reminding them of England's own responsibility for the initial development of jet flying.

Mitchum's Big Beef Is Over The Bookkeeping

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I don't mind paying my taxes. The only thing I resent is having to do the blankety-blank bookkeeping."

This was Robert Mitchum, denying some notions about his two-year absence from Hollywood. He has been making films in Australia, England and Ireland and no longer makes his residence here. But his reasons are not the same as those of other tax-wary stars.

Home for Mitchum is the far shore of Chesapeake Bay, a bearded stretch of Maryland coastline 75 miles from Baltimore. But it is no tax haven for the actor.

"If anything, I'm paying more in taxes," he said. "Everybody thinks I've got a big deal back there. An agent tried to tell me how I could get a big tax write-off on cattle. Not interested."

Moved back to Maryland two years ago for reasons other than money.

What reasons, then?

"Look—I lived in California from 1934; that's long enough to be in any one place," he explained. "I wanted to make the move a few years ago and found an island I liked off South Carolina. But my wife knew if I ever lived there, she could never get me to leave."

"Maryland isn't as remote. I can fly anywhere in no time at all. But when I'm there, it's like being in a different world. Living there means the burning of another bridge behind me.

"My unsocial nature is well known. In Maryland, I can be as unsocial as I want and nobody gives a damn."

His fellow Marylanders cooperate, he remarked, even giving obscure directions to would-be gawkers looking for the Mitchum place. The actor himself greets the rubbernecks cordially, saying he doesn't mind visitors—"But my children shoot at them."

They generally go away quietly. "Mitchum is back in his old haunts to play in a service comedy, 'The Last Time I Saw Archie' for Jack Webb. As far-longed as ever, he had many a sharp comment on the Hollywood scene. Yet he seemed to display a new seriousness about his acting career.

"I can't do just every picture that comes along—grab the money and run," he said. "That's a good way to lose everything. I've got a certain responsibility to uphold."

Free Parking' Zone Is Changed

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP)—Attorney Roger Kidston was surprised to find himself ticketed for overtime parking in what had been a free parking zone when he left his car there on Nov. 23.

Between the time he parked his car and then came to retrieve it, the police had installed parking meters.

Municipal Judge Clark M. Olmstead, in dismissing the charge Wednesday, commended police for their zeal but also said "some rentals can be overdone."

County Officials Schedule Meet

County commissioners, accountants, attorneys, and other county officials from fourteen North Carolina counties are scheduled to attend a district meeting in Kinston on Wednesday, December 14. The meeting will begin at 10:00 a. m. in the Lenoir County Court-house, and it will last until mid-afternoon. The counties scheduled to attend include Beaufort, Carteret, Craven, Greene, Jones, Lenoir, Pamlico, Pitt, Edgecombe, Halifax, Nash, Wilson, Johnston, and Wayne.

The district meeting is sponsored by the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners, and county commissioners of Lenoir County are making the local arrangements. Alex McMahon, the Association's General Counsel, will discuss legislation of interest to county officials likely to come before the 1961 General Assembly. A number of counties are planning to bring their legislators to join in this discussion.

Attention will also be given to problems of county finance, and the sources of funds available to finance expanding county activities. Particular attention will be given to the possibility of increased state aid and the possibility of new kinds of county taxes. Finally, there will be a general discussion period which will be of particular interest to new county officials.

Boy Returns Sum Lost By Woman

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—A 4-year-old boy has been credited with the return of a purse containing $329 lost by a blind woman.

Police said the Negro boy, John Edward Sanders, found the purse at a bus stop where Miss Beatrice M. David had lost it.

Police Capt. Allison Wainwright said the boy's mother tried to contact Miss David, but failed. She then called police and the purse and money were returned.

"You're always hearing of bad things," Wainwright said, "and every now and then it's good to hear of something like this where such honesty is exhibited."

Tobacco Tips

By S. J. WEEKS

Pitt County Tobacco Agent
Five new varieties of tobacco are being made available for planting the 1961 crop. Yield potential, disease resistance and quality information, including chemical characteristics, is important to the grower when deciding which variety to plant. A brief description of these five varieties is listed below:

NC 75 - (developed from a cross of DB 102 x Bottom Special) Bel 1-75) produced a high yield of tobacco rated as generally acceptable in quality by tobacco companies. It was medium in height with a high leaf number and a medium number of suckers. It had leaves of medium width and medium length that tend to wrinkle or pucker along the veins or midrib. The lower leaves have some brittleness especially under conditions of very favorable growth. The percent reducing sugar, nicotine, and total alkaloid was medium with a low nitrogen to nicotine ratio. NC 95 is rated as having high resistance to black shank, moderate resistance to Granville wilt, high resistance to Fusarium wilt, high resistance to one species of root knot nematode (M. incognita), with a low loss to brown spot. There is some indication that this variety is more adversely affected by excess fertilizer than some other varieties.

McNair 10-(developed from a cross of DB 101 x DB 102) Ox 1-181) produced a medium high yield of tobacco that rated generally as acceptable in quality by tobacco companies. It was medium tall, with a medium high leaf count and medium low number of suckers. It had medium narrow and pointed leaves of medium length. The cured tobacco had medium to fairly heavy body with a relatively desirable color. The percent reducing sugar and nicotine and total alkaloid were high with a low nitrogen to nicotine ratio. McNair 10 is rated as having moderate resistance to Black Shank, low resistance to Granville Wilt, Susceptible to Fusarium Wilt and a low loss from brown spot.

McNair 12-(developed from a cross of McNair 121 x Coker 139) produced a medium high yield of tobacco rated generally as acceptable in quality by tobacco companies. The plant was low in height with a medium leaf count and a medium number of suckers. It had medium width leaves of medium length. The cured tobacco was medium in body with relatively light color. The percent reducing sugar was medium high, nicotine and total alkaloid were medium with a medium nitrogen to nicotine ratio. McNair 12 is rated as having moderate resistance to black shank, high resistance to Granville wilt, susceptible to Fusarium wilt and a low loss from brown spot.

The chemical analysis of each of these varieties indicates that they should be capable of producing a quality of tobacco that is usable by the tobacco companies. If further information, such as yield, and per acre value, is desired, it can be obtained from the County Agricultural Agents Office in Greenville.

When deciding which variety or varieties to plant, it is well to remember that no single variety is capable of producing the types of tobacco that will meet the demands of all the buying companies; therefore, it is advisable to plant more than one variety if we want to adequately take care of the consumer demand.

lizer than some other varieties. NC 95-(developed from a cross of Coker 139 x Bel 4-30 (a nematode resistant line) x Coker 139) x Hicks) produced a high yield of tobacco that rated generally as acceptable in quality by tobacco companies. It was medium in height with a high leaf number and a medium number of suckers. It had leaves of medium width and medium length that tend to wrinkle or pucker along the veins or midrib. The lower leaves have some brittleness especially under conditions of very favorable growth. The percent reducing sugar, nicotine, and total alkaloid was medium with a low nitrogen to nicotine ratio. NC 95 is rated as having high resistance to black shank, moderate resistance to Granville wilt, high resistance to Fusarium wilt, high resistance to one species of root knot nematode (M. incognita), with a low loss to brown spot. There is some indication that this variety is more adversely affected by excess fertilizer than some other varieties.

Will Know In 30 Days About Conversion Plant

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — A recommendation is expected within 30 days on whether Wrightsville Beach will be the site of a pilot salt water conversion plant on the United States' eastern seaboard.

Allen Cywin, who heads the Interior Department's demonstration plant division, said here Wednesday a committee studying seven proposed locations for the plant expects to make its recommendations by that time. He said the committee was "completely satisfied" with a 25-acre site inspected here.

W. P. Saunders, director of the State Conservation & Development Board, guided the federal group.

The plant, which will cost up to $5 million and employ 450 persons within five years, is one of five planned in the United States to develop conversion of salt water to fresh water. It will produce between 250,000 and 300,000 gallons of fresh water daily.

In painting concrete, stucco, mortar, cement block and similar types of masonry, it is important to use paints which are immune to the alkali present in these building materials. These paints include exterior latex designed for masonry use, portland cement, solvent-thinned resins especially suitable for swimming pools, and transparent silicone coatings. Oil-based paints generally are not recommended, although the exterior kind may be used over sand, previously-painted surfaces.

Before painting masonry, all dirt and dust should be removed by brushing and scrubbing with water. Wiping with turpentine or an odorless solvent will take off oil or grease. Metal objects imbedded in the walls or other surfaces should be primed with an anti-corrosive metal primer, and all cracks should be patched. A wire brush is necessary for removing loose or peeling paint and will also take away any chalk particles.

The latex paints can be applied to wet or dry surfaces, the portland cement paints to wet surfaces only, the others to dry surfaces.

Portland cement paint comes as a powder in white and a variety of colors and penetrates the masonry. The powder is mixed with water just before use. Only enough mixture should be made which can be applied in a maximum of four hours. The walls must be thoroughly wetted and kept wet while the paint is scrubbed into the surface with a brush. While portland cement paint is often used as a sealer for cement block, it is not suitable for patios or other areas which will be walked on.

When it is desirable not to change the original color of the masonry, transparent silicone coatings are excellent. They perform their protective function by lining the pores of the material. No water can penetrate this barrier; and as it runs off, it takes surface dirt with it. Silicone rains should not be used until the surface has weathered for at least 30 days.

In painting an irregular surface, such as stucco, special long-bristled wall brushes are available. Another way to be sure the paint gets into the irregularities of stucco is to apply it with a sprayer.

Surinam, formerly Dutch Guiana, is part of the Kingdom of the Netherlands and covers about 55,400 square miles on a northeast coast of South America.

Boys Ran Away From Hospital

ERIE, Pa. (AP)—The three Mysnik brothers—Robert, 9; Steven, 12; and George, 13—are back in their beds at Hamot Hospital today. Or at least they were the last time the nurse checked.

The three had their tonsils removed Tuesday morning. Tuesday night, they got out of their beds, dressed and walked out of the hospital.

They wandered into a nearby service station and said they were lost. An attendant detected an aroma of ether and became suspicious. Police picked them up and took them back to the hospital.

The boys, sons of Mr. and Mrs. George Mysnik of Erie, were reported okay at the hospital.

Navy Caribbean Patrol Is Ended

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Navy ships that have been on patrol off Guatemala and Nicaragua have been withdrawn, the White House reports.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said Wednesday the patrol was suspended after governments of the two Central American countries reported the danger of Communist-aided revolts had passed.

President Eisenhower had ordered the patrol last month in response to requests from Guatemala and Nicaragua.

Leaders of the two countries charged that Cuban-backed revolutionaries had taken part in insurrections shortly before the request was made.

The aircraft carrier Shangri-La and four destroyers began the patrol in mid-November. The carrier Wasp replaced the Shangri-La shortly before the end of the month and five destroyers relieved those on duty.

Two long-range patrol planes were also assigned to the Western Caribbean.

The Navy said the Wasp was due today at Mayport, Fla., to unload some planes before proceeding to her home port in Boston.

ATOMIC BOMBS—These are the types of atomic bombs which exploded over Japan during World War II, according to the Atomic Energy Commission and Defense Department which released the photos in Washington. At top is the "Little Boy" type weapon which was detonated over Hiroshima. It is 28 inches in diameter, 120 inches long and weighs about 9,000 pounds. Dean Rusk Said Seriously Talked For Sec. Of State

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER WASHINGTON (AP) — Dean Rusk, who served as an assistant secretary of state in the Truman administration, today was reported under very serious consideration by President-elect John F. Kennedy for appointment as secretary of state.

Rusk, 51 and a Democrat, was said on excellent authority to head the list of possible appointees to the top cabinet post. Rusk, who met with Kennedy today, is now head of the Rockefeller Foundation with headquarters in New York.

Kennedy has repeatedly declined to comment on various possibilities mentioned in speculation on the successor to Secretary of State Christian A. Herter. Without fixing any date, he has said only that he would make his selection soon.

He has a conference scheduled today with Adlai Stevenson, twice the Democratic nominee for president and one of the first to be mentioned as a possible secretary of state. But this speculation has diminished in recent days, with Stevenson considered a more likely choice for some other high diplomatic post.

Besides Rusk, others who have been reported under consideration to head the State Department include Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; John J. McCloy, New York banker and former defense department official; David K. E. Bruce, former ambassador to Germany and one-time undersecretary of state; and Rep. Chester Bowles, D-Conn., former ambassador to India and a Kennedy adviser on foreign affairs.

Rusk, a native of Georgia who was reared in Atlanta, began his professional career as an associate professor of government and dean of faculty at Mills College in Oakland, Calif., in 1934.

Six years later he joined the Army with the rank of captain in the infantry reserve. After a military career which included two campaigns in Burma and a tour of duty on the War Department general staff, he was demobilized in 1946 as a colonel.

He immediately joined the State Department staff as assistant chief of the division of international security affairs but after a few months became a special assistant to the secretary of war, Robert P. Patterson.

In 1947 he returned to the State Department as director of the Office of United Nations Affairs and two years later was promoted by President Truman to be an assistant secretary of state.

Later he became assistant secretary for Far Eastern affairs. In that capacity was the official chiefly responsible under Secretary Dean Acheson and President Truman for the development of political policy regarding the United States role in the Korean War.

Rusk was one of the outspoken champions of the administration policy of keeping the Korean War limited instead of extending it by attacking Communist China directly as General Douglas MacArthur advocated.

MacArthur was the U.S. commander in the Far East. He was removed from his post by President Truman in April 1951 because of his public expressions of disapproval of Truman's policies.

Rusk was named president of the Rockefeller Foundation in December 1951 and left the government service soon afterward to take the position. He has held it ever since.

The foundation is one of the most heavily endowed in the country. It uses its large financial resources to promote research and development in such fields as medicine, agriculture, the social sciences and the humanities.

Dawson Said To 'Lead The Field'

NEW YORK (AP)—The Herald Tribune said today that Rep. William L. Dawson, D-Ill., leads the field for appointment as postmaster general by President-elect John F. Kennedy. If appointed, Dawson would be the first Negro in the Cabinet.

The newspaper went on to name other possibilities for the remaining posts. In listing them, the paper said that while they are subject to change, "it can be stated authoritatively" that those on its list reflect Kennedy's current thinking.

Among them:

Secretary of Defense — Thomas S. Gates Jr. to remain, with Paul N. Nitze and Roswell L. Gilpatrick as alternate choices.

Secretary of the Treasury — Douglas Dillon, now undersecretary of state. Other possibilities were seen as Robert S. McNamara, president of the Ford Motor Co., and Eugene R. Black, president of the World Bank.

Attorney General — Robert F. Kennedy, the president-elect's brother, or Byron White, Denver attorney.

Secretary of Agriculture — Rep. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., or Fred V. Heinkel, president of the Missouri Farmers Association.

Still Working On Robbery Case

Pitt County Sheriff's officers are still investigating the beating and robbery of a St. John's woman which occurred early yesterday morning, Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said today.

According to Tyson, Mrs. R. H. Smith was hit on the head with a hammer several times by an unidentified robber who took an estimated $200 in checks and cash from the Smith's store at St. John, about five miles east of Grifton.

The Sheriff, who said the robbery took place about 8:45 a.m., pointed out that before the bandit left the store he cut the wires to the telephone in order to delay reporting of the attack.

Tyson, commenting that Mrs. Smith is a "lucky woman," noted that she was hit in the head "four or five times" by the robber. Her husband was working on a water pump in their home a short distance from the store, the Sheriff said, and saw the fleeing robber's car pull away from the store as his wife came running and screaming for help toward the house.

Smith attempted to chase the fleeing car but had difficulty in finding his car key and lost the vehicle. He then stopped and telephoned officers and reported the robbery.

Mrs. Smith was treated for her head injuries by a Grifton physician, officers said.

Brought A Fire To Firefighters

STOKES—A new twist in firefighting emerged here this morning as volunteer firemen extinguished a $1,500 blaze minutes after "it came driving up."

The new technique reversed the old trend of firemen rushing to fires in the area when a Varina Wholesale delivery truck, operating out of Farmville, parked directly in front of the Carolina Township Volunteer Fire Department with a load of flaming building materials.

Assistant Chief Slade Congleton said the truck was traveling through Stokes about 6 a.m. today when the driver, Robert Beaman of Farmville, noticed the blaze in the truck's rear view mirror.

Beaman stopped the flaming truck and was directed by fireman Marvin Barnhill of Stokes to the fire department's headquarters.

Congleton said the burning materials created "a very hot fire" that firemen extinguished "in about 15 minutes."

Included in the truck's payload were sheets of plywood, cabinets, a bedroom suite, storm doors and other building materials. All the materials were reported total losses.

Varina Wholesale spokesmen this morning set damages at "at least $1,500." The truck's body, they said, was damaged to the extent of about $700.

Firemen reported no injuries.

May Figure Tax Table On States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal taxpayers who claim deductions for state sales tax payments may get special help next year from Uncle Sam.

If the Internal Revenue Service adopts a plan now being considered, it will issue tables telling how much may reasonably be deducted for sales taxes in each state which has them.

Sales taxes currently are levied in 34 states and the District of Columbia.

Most taxpayers do not keep records of sales tax payments and IRS agents often are asked how large a deduction will be allowed while the agency long has had rules of thumb to determine whether a sales tax deduction seems out of line, it never has had a national policy of giving out guidelines.

Last year, each district IRS office was allowed to decide whether to issue local guidelines or tables. These were issued in about 20 states.

It was understood the tables now being considered probably would be issued in all affected states or in none.

Reasonable deductions would be listed in these tables according to various income levels and family sizes. The tables would not take local sales taxes into account.

AYDEN—Vickie Hardee, senior, was the only student of Ayden High School to make the honor roll for the second marking period, it was announced today.

Several students were included on the principal's list. They include Ted Norris, Jackie Harrington and Linda Worthington, all seniors; Barbara York, junior.

ABC Enforcers Find Two Stills

Pitt ABC officers Tuesday destroyed two 55-gallon stills at a site near Tripps Cross Roads north of Greenville just off N.C. 30.

Officers said the unit was complete with two 55-gallon doublers, two 200 gallon mash boxes and two 55 gallon mash barrels. One 60 gallon drum boiler and a 200 gallon cooler box with auto radiator condenser were also destroyed.

Officers said no mash was present at the site, and noted the unit appeared to have been run over the weekend.

Taking part in the destruction of the illegal distillery were officers J. M. Ward, H. B. Lilley and Walter Taylor.

"OUR MAN IN HAVANA"

Former Grid Star Offered Post In Administration

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy today offered a post in his administration to Byron Leslie (Whizzer) White, Denver attorney.

Kennedy and White gave this news to reporters on the doorstep of the Kennedy home in Georgetown but declined to say what the position is.

White, 43, is a close friend of Kennedy. He was better known as "Whizzer" White while an All America football star at the University of Colorado.

White has been mentioned for both attorney general and solicitor general in the Justice Department.

Being vague, White told newsmen that no specific post was discussed. But when reporters asked if he had enough information about the offer to make up his mind, White grinned and replied, "Yes."

He said he would give Kennedy his reply in a few days. He is returning to Denver this afternoon.

White and Kennedy first met in England when Kennedy's father, Joseph P. Kennedy, was ambassador to London before World War II. White was a Rhodes scholar.

Kennedy, standing with White at the doorway, told reporters he had no plans to announce any Cabinet appointments today.

Before the meeting with White, Kennedy discussed with Sen. Estes Keauber, D-Tenn., possible choices for attorney general and assistant attorney general in charge of the antitrust division.

Immediately after their breakfast conference at Kennedy's Georgetown home, the two entered a car for a quick trip to Georgetown University Hospital and a brief visit with Mrs. Kennedy and John F. Kennedy Jr. The baby is to be baptized in the hospital chapel this afternoon.

Kefauver had time only to tell reporters that he and Kennedy had a "very pleasant conversation" in which Justice Department appointments were discussed.

Kefauver, chairman of the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly subcommittee, said earlier that his interest is in seeing that Kennedy picks an attorney general and an assistant in charge of the antitrust division of the department who will provide strong enforcement.

He said a number of men are acceptable to him, but did not give their names.

Kennedy also fitted into his busy day a leisurely talk with Adlai E.

Legislator Sees Jan. 4 Caucus

RALEIGH (AP) — A veteran Moore County legislator said today "it looks like the House Democratic members will hold their caucus Jan. 4" here to nominate a speaker and other House officials.

Rep. H. Clifton Blue said a poll conducted of the 105 Democratic members shows that 85 favored the Jan. 4 caucus, four were against it, three were undecided and one said "anytime" suited him.

"Somebody would have to assume the responsibility for making the call for the caucus," Blue said. "That is something that hasn't been decided."

The poll was conducted by Blue and Rep. Herbert W. Hardy of Greene.

In their letter to the legislators, Blue and Hardy said the caucus "in no way would necessitate a special session of the General Assembly." The expense of the trip here would be borne by the individual members.

Blue said the caucus would clear the way for the legislators to get down to work when the regular session convenes Feb. 8.
