First Lady's Chief Designer Will Influence Women's Dress

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor
NEW YORK (AP)—Oleg Cassini may not have achieved Cabinet status with his appointment as the next first lady's chief designer. But in his way he may be pretty influential—especially among American women.

"The Jackie Kennedy look will sweep the country," he predicts. "It will develop in France and Italy. She will be in the most seen, the most talked about, the most photographed woman in the world."

"For the first time in history all the elements are present to make a tremendous fashion story: the looks, age, style sense of the next first lady. Measure that against what we've had in the past. They've been very fine ladies but minus zero to the fashion world."

Cassini, 47, dapper, slim and mustached, is feeling modest about his new eminence, elated about the chance to "glorify the American look that has never been defended by anyone except me," and somewhat belligerent about the skeptics.

There's no doubt that Mrs. Kennedy, long a loyal customer of the Paris couture and especially of the avant-garde designer Givenchy, threw the fashion world into a tizzy the other day with her selection of Cassini clothes. A most un-Givenchy designer, Cassini delights in revealing the figure—"I look at fashion with the eyes of a man," he declares stoutly.

He says his Kennedy assignment includes doing "the majority of all her things, plus coordinating hats, shoes, bags, jewelry. It's going to be a big job, especially since she's not going to be in New York."

The first Cassini gown will be worn at a gala Jan. 19 in Washington.

"Mrs. Kennedy is the best prototype of the American girl," insists Cassini, Paris-born of an Italian mother and titled Russian father.

"She can go no more to the French. She has to push American business, and the dress industry is the third largest in the country. It's tremendously important for the economy and well-being of our country. Together—her wonderful sense of style and my designs—we will sell something here in this country, instead of having it transferred from Europe."

"I will study all the things good on her and bad, although," he adds quickly, "she can wear almost everything. But she has preferences. Out of this will evolve a real Jacqueline Kennedy look."

He defines the look: "Imagine a royal princess with a touch of fashion fantasy. She'll be elegant, dignified. There will be none of the dowdiness that goes with great austerity. There's going to be pepper there. But it will be in extremely good taste—and very much herself."

Cassini says he thinks the Kennedy's chose him because they have been friends for many years and could trust him.

"They wanted someone in America, someone who could stand on his feet and slug it out with detractors, someone who had every respect for Mrs. Kennedy at all times, not to use her but to serve her," he says.

He will continue to design clothes for his own business. "I will not put things I've designed for her into the collection, although, they will influence it."

Because the first lady wants secrecy, Cassini says he has set up an elaborate system at his workshop.

"I've put a new lock on the door to one room, and only one assistant and I ever go in," he says. "We now even have a speakeasy-like peephole in the door. The sketches are locked up at night where we keep the cash. They're covered with muslin and pinned so we can see at a glance if they have been opened."

Ministers Give Clubs' Program

The Rev. John Drake, Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Greenville, and Mr. Richard Ottoway, the curate, gave a program on Christmas customs at the joint meeting of the Greenville Garden Club and the Woman's Club of Greenville Friday afternoon.

As this is the Advent season—or a preparation time for Christmas—Rev. Drake spoke first of the custom of the Advent Wreath. Another custom, said Rev. Drake, is one where straws are placed on a tiny manger by each child for good deeds or sacrifice, and on Christmas morning a baby is placed in the manger. This also shows progression toward the Christmas season.

Variation of customs in other lands is shown by celebrations on days other than the 25th. Dec. 6 is St. Nicholas Day in Holland, beginning their Christmas season and a time of gift giving. Dec. 13 is St. Lucy's Day or Day of St. Lucia.

Our season begins the 25th, but in some places, such as the Outer Banks, "Old Christmas" is still celebrated.

Many customs are attributable to pagan forebears. When Pope Julius I set Dec. 25 as Christmas Day, the early Christian leaders hesitated using the choice of the date as it was associated with pagan festivities, a Roman feast for the "God of Light" or the sun. "We have given a religious significance to some customs of Pagan origin," concluded Rev. Drake.

Mr. Ottoway told of the origin of the picture of Santa Claus. The legends and lore of St. Nicholas were kept alive by a society for that purpose. Original poems were often read. Clement Moore's poem about St. Nicholas was published and from a cartoon published along with it came our picture of Santa Claus. The dress was similar to a Bishop's at that time.

Out of the passion of giving at Christmas time has come the idea of "Christmas Seals" which have helped many tubercular patients. It was a postal clerk in Copenhagen who first thought of selling a stamp.

Perhaps of the many customs, that of hymns and carols is the most moving, Mr. Ottoway said. Mr. Ottoway chose two American ones: "Joy to the World" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem."

Mr. Ottoway remarked, there is no special strand in our customs that is strictly American, but strands from many lands have been here cluttered together to form our customs.

During the business meeting which followed, the Garden Club voted to give its regular contribution to Christmas Seals. The Woman's Club voted to include the Junior Woman's Club as a Department of Public Affairs of the Woman's Club.

Party Honors Nurse Children

The children of Nobles Nursery and their parents were entertained at their annual Christmas party on Sunday, Dec. 18, by Mrs. Herman Nobles and Miss Jean Nobles. The party was held in the West Greenville Skating Rink which was decorated in the Christmas motif highlighted with a large Christmas tree and fireplace. After brief welcoming ceremonies by several of the children, each child's family was introduced to the group by Mrs. Nobles.

Colored slides and a recording depicting the story of the Nativity were presented after which the children gathered in the center of the room and sang Christmas carols. Upon the close of the carols by the children, Santa Claus entered and presented gifts to each child and family.

Each child received a personalized stocking of goodies and toys. Santa then passed out gifts the children had brought to exchange.

Refreshments were served and punch was poured by Miss Jean Nobles. Open face sandwiches in the shapes of bells, wreaths, and stars were served with cake decorated in red and green. The table was centered with Santa and his reindeer.

Wedding Called Off
The December 25th wedding of Miss Martha Ann Branch and Thomas Wayne Hardee of Greenville has been called off by mutual agreement.

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN
It seems that all the days of a year lead to Christmas. It is a day when that which is spiritual, and that which is earthly, should combine to make it the most important of all days.

It began one day, long ago, with a promise to a young girl who lived in the rocky hillside town of Nazareth.

It had its fulfillment, one cold winter night, under the stars of a Judean sky in the manger of a stable in a place called Bethlehem.

Sometimes, in the midst of our modern way of living, we lose sight of the real meaning of the day. It is because we let our idea of happiness become entirely an outward thing. It has become a time to please the eyes and ears;
a time to feast and swap gifts that grow old and forgotten in a week or two. We make it a time of fret and hurry. We approach it in a frenzy of shopping, and wrapping, pausing only to figure out if we have forgotten someone.

To many the day's end is a relief, and frankly, they are glad when the last carols die out on the winter air.

But we need the pageantry of the day — its bright lights, ribbons and tinsel. We need the holly, the mistletoe, the sprigs of juniper and pine bough. We need the joy that children's laughter brings. We need the tree, the singing and the star. However, with these alone, the day ends incomplete. For with all the color, we need time for reflection. A time to realize that riches and poverty can also be conditions of the soul and that material possessions, as necessary as they may be, are not the greatest good.

True riches are inward things;
a willing heart can become a manger — a place for miracles to be born.

The story of Christmas will always have its wise men, its gifts, its songs, and its star. But the real story of Christmas, and the magnitude of its meaning, is found in the simple wonderful words of Saint John: "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us."

10-Month School Up To Assembly

The state commission studying public school operations has taken a far-reaching step with its recommendation that public school units of the state be given permission to embark on a 10-month school term to replace the present nine-month system.

In spite of the fact that several big questions remain to be answered in connection with the recommendation, and in spite of the fact that the proposal called for the longer school year on an "experimental" basis, it holds tremendous potential for improving public education in North Carolina.

The study group, in its report, bypassed some phases of school operations which may have been expected from its deliberations, but the one recommendation it has brought forth appears to us to justify the work that has been put into the study.

Originally formed to study "a 12-month use of public school buildings and facilities for public school purposes", the committee apparently steered away from the 12-month idea. It likewise failed to bring forth a recommendation that would reduce school costs; a point that was a key to proposals for greater utilization of school facilities through a 12-month operation.

How the committee's recommendation is accepted by the legislature, and what provisions the legislature makes for implementing the recommendation will determine what effect it may have on public education in North Carolina.

If the legislature authorizes local school systems to adopt the 10-month program on an experimental basis, but leaves to the local school system the entire financial burden of the extra month of the program, the number of school systems that join in the experiment will be extremely limited. If the legislature, on the other hand, provides funds for the state's prorata part of the extra month of school, the number of units joining in the experiment will be greatly increased.

The tenth month of school reportedly would add some $20 million annually to the cost of operating public schools in North Carolina. With such a cost factor involved, it is readily seen that many other proposals for spending this sum on the public schools will be forthcoming. Already there are a number of other proposals for improving the calibre of public education in North Carolina. In the final analysis it will be up to the legislature to determine how much more will be spent on public education in the state during the next biennium, and in what manner such money will be spent.

It is, we believe, a foregone conclusion that North Carolina will continue to improve its program of public education in the years immediately ahead. Adding an extra month to the regular school year would strengthen considerably the public school program. But whether this recommendation will take priority over others which already have been advanced remains to be seen.

Percentages Offer No Consolation To Dead

When you drive your automobile during the Christmas weekend, keep in mind there'll be some 74 million other motor vehicles on the road unless the National Safety Council has missed its guess.

Also keep in mind that the miles recorded on your speedometer during the three-day Christmas holiday will be among the six billion miles that motor vehicles in this country travel during the holiday.

Against the backdrop of these staggering figures, the 510 holiday traffic fatalities predicted may sound small. Considering the number of vehicles that will be on the road during the holiday and the number of miles they travel, the odds are heavily in favor of the average motorist getting to and from his destination safely.

But for those 510 whose lives may be snuffed out in traffic accidents during the holiday, the percentages will mean nothing. For those whose holiday is marred by traffic accidents which will injure thousands in addition to those who will be killed, there will be consolation in the fact that odds were in their favor when they left home.

We wish for each of our readers a safe Christmas holiday. And we urge each one to take special precautions when he uses his automobile during the week-

Picked Cabinet 'In Own Image'

By JAMES MARLOW WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy has picked a 10-man Cabinet in his own image. It's conservative-liberal and hard-driving. Therefore, a lot of action can be expected from the new administration.

The incoming Cabinet differs from President Eisenhower's first Cabinet of 1953 in two obvious ways: Eisenhower's was much more conservative, and Kennedy's is far more scholarly. While action capability is expected from the new administration, it does not judge from the records of Kennedy himself and his hand-picked top 10 men—figure to be of the startling kind.

There is a basic difference between the Kennedy administration and Eisenhower's: The new one is already committed to having the government take a stronger hand in American life than Eisenhower favored.

For example, the five-point plan on which Kennedy Tuesday said he will seek quick congressional action: federal aid to education, raising the minimum wage from $1 to $1.25, a program for medical care for the aged tied to Social Security, expansion of federal aid to housing, and help for depressed areas.

None of the five points is new or startling, Kennedy promised them all in his campaign. All would put the fingers of the government deeper into American life.

Some may not like the thought of this, but those fingers have been going deeper year by year as the American society becomes more complex and interdependent.

There is an explanation why the Kennedy Cabinet should be conservative-liberal instead of extremely liberal or wholly conservative.

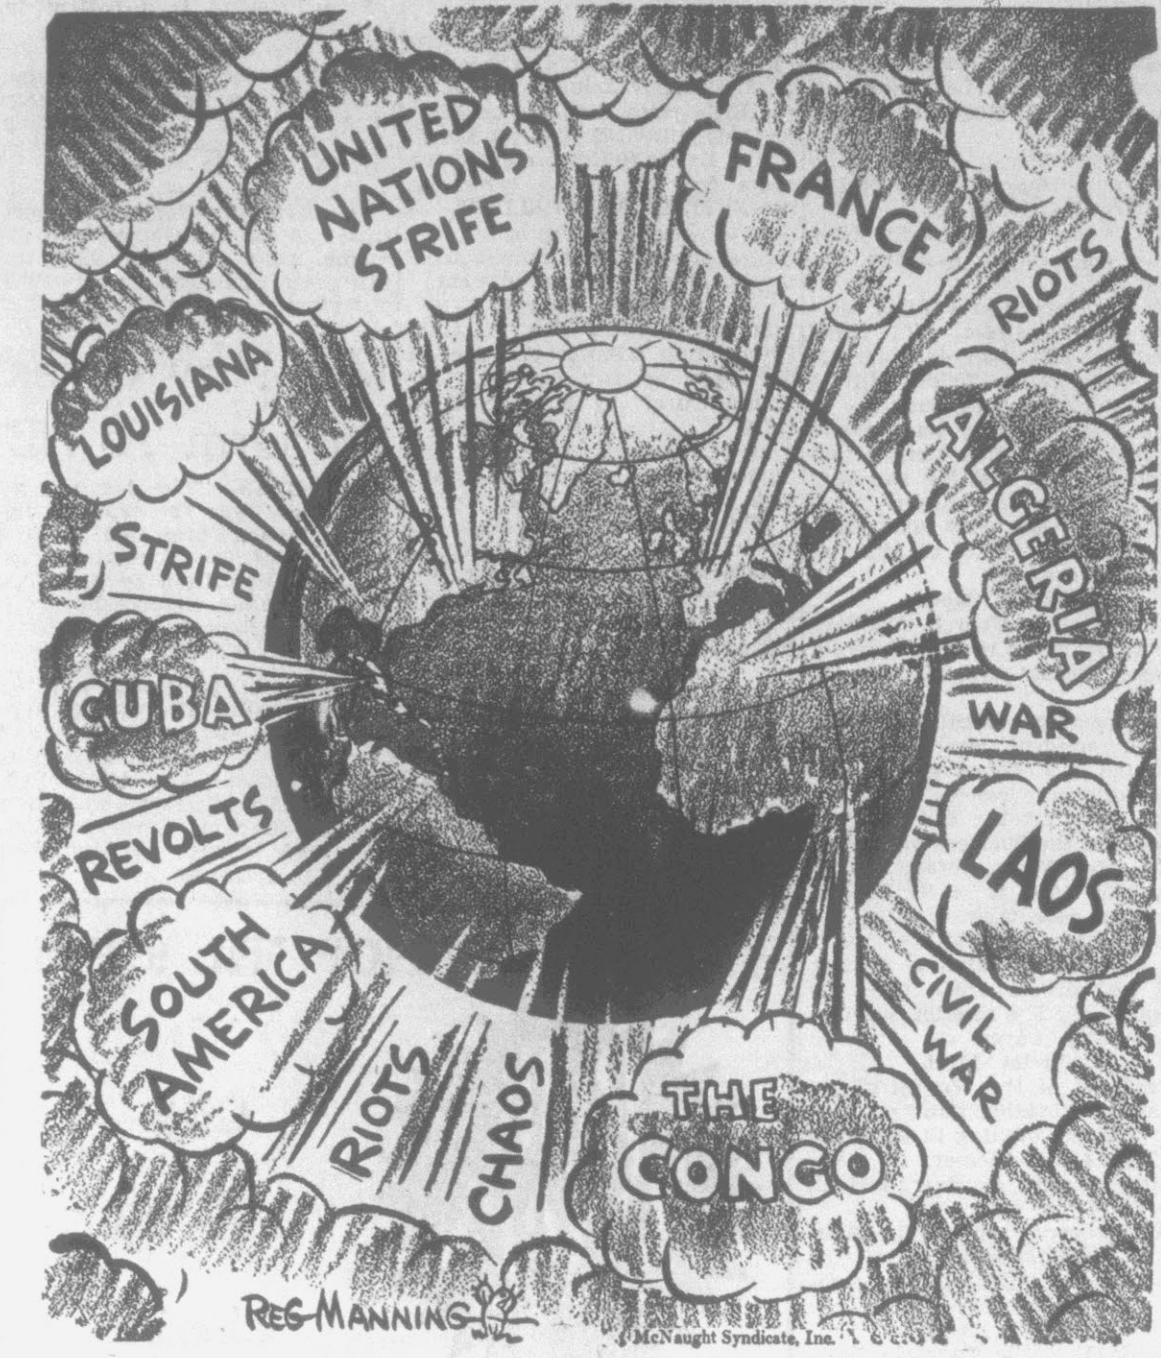

This is not a time of acute distress, requiring extreme and sudden remedies as was the case with President Roosevelt's early New Deal when innovations were needed to cope with the depression.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS ON THE OTHER SIDE One of the great books of all time is Pilgrim's Progress. It was written by the great Puritan, John Bunyan. It has fed the moral and spiritual life of generations. It is honored today as one of the great English classics.

There is a brief passage which is known to everyone who loves this wonderful book. Here it is: "When the Day that he must go hence was come, many accompanied Mr. Valiant-for-Truth to the Riverside into which as he went, he said, Death where is thy sting? And as he went down deeper, he said, Grave where is thy victory? So he passed over and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side."

Questions Put To Payton

Lie detectors are nothing new in crime detection. In fact they have been around for a considerable number of years and, so far as I know, they've yet to be proved inaccurate.

As I understand it, the machines measure pulse and breathing rate and blood pressure as the subject replies to questions. These show up on a graph which the machine operator interprets.

Still when such a machine shows that a man like Boyd Payton is lying about his part in the Harriet-Henderson Mill strike, it is rather chilling to the average citizen.

What sort of questions were used to show Payton was lying? They were very direct questions concerning his part in the Vance County Power Co., substation bombing. Here are some of them: Prior to your arrest in June 1959, did you know for sure of the existence of a plan to dynamite the Vance County Power Company sub-station? (Payton's answer: "No".)

Prior to your arrest in June 1959, did you directly or indirectly authorize the dynamiting of the Vance County Power Company sub-station? (Payton's answer: "No".)

During June, 1959, did you intend to directly or indirectly make money available to pay for the dynamiting of the Vance County Power sub-station? (Payton's answer: "No".)

Prior to your arrest in June 1959, did you directly or indirectly authorize the burning of the Henderson Mills main office? (Payton's answer: "No".)

Other Editors Saying Ounce Of Prevention

(Rocky Mount Telegram) A progress report from the National Safety Council comparing the 1959 accident rate to previous years points out that while there has been improvement in the national accident problem, the American people are still living too carelessly for their own safety—on the road, at home, at work and at play.

The result of carelessness which leads to accidents is loss of death, disabling injuries and the loss of billions of dollars. It is a problem to which the National Safety Council is dedicated, and while improvement has been noted over the years, the complete solution is a long way off.

America is a restless land of restless people living in a restless time. We are people always on the move. We travel fast, live hard, relax too little and fail to take enough care when we play.

Evidence of this can be found in our accident rate figures. In 1959 we traveled ourselves to death. On our streets and highways 40,600 people died in accidents, a million and a half more were disabled and financial losses were $14 billion. In the home, accidents took 26,000 lives and disabled almost four million. Accidents at work killed 13,800 and disabled nearly two million. And in our leisure time, play and recreation accidents produced 5,800 deaths.

The 1959 totals show 91,000 deaths from all accidents, 9,200,000 disabling injuries and a cost in dollars of $13 billion. While the figures appear to be staggering, they do present one bright side to the bleak picture—that of improvement.

While we appear to be killing ourselves through carelessness, the accident rate is actually going down. In the past 10 years alone the population death rate for all classes of accidents has declined 15 per cent. It is down 30 per cent for home accidents. Occupational deaths per 100,000 workers have dropped 18 per cent. The motor vehicle mileage death rate (based on deaths per 100 million miles) has improved 23 per cent.

These figures, which might be called the story of accomplishment by the National Safety Council, produce evidence that the Council is right when it says that accident prevention works. The Council is the backbone of the American safety movement and accident prevention is its trademark. The "ounce of prevention" produced by the Council since its birth in 1913 has helped lead to a steadily reduced accident death rate that has brought a saving of over 850,000 lives.

The report covered here is one of statistics compiled to show the importance of accident prevention. But the real story is the one behind the cold figures—the human story of families free from heartache and debt, of carefree children and secure old age, of efficient production and reduced waste, of a moral concern with individual safety and welfare that is one of the proud traits of the American people.

Are you withholding any information whatsoever about the June 13th dynamiting conspiracy? (Payton's answer: "No".)

This is the conclusion that Cleve Backster, examiner for Backster Associates, Inc., reached: "In the opinion of the examiner, after careful analysis of all charts, Boyd E. Payton was attempting deception when he gave each of the answers indicated next to the pertinent questions listed above. Based on the restricted scope of the pertinent questions asked, in regard to the specific conspiracy in question; it is the further opinion of this examiner that Payton had definite knowledge of, and did directly or indirectly authorize the conspiracy charge against him."

On Dec. 16, Johnson Mathews, chairman of the State Board of Paroles, wrote Gov. Hodges informing him of the results of the test.

Within the letter he stated: "The Board of Paroles does not recommend executive clemency for Boyd E. Payton."

ice? (Payton's answer: "No"). During June 1959, did you intend to directly or indirectly make money available to pay for the burning of the Henderson Mills main office? (Payton's answer: "No".)

Prior to your arrest in June 1959, did you directly or indirectly authorize the dynamiting of the Henderson South Mills boiler-room? (Payton's answer: "No".)

During June 1959, did you intend to directly or indirectly make money available to pay for the dynamiting of the Henderson South Mills boiler-room? (Payton's answer: "No".)

On or about June 4, 1959, at the time you talked to Harold Aaron over the Vance Hotel room telephone, were you aware that he was part of a plan to dynamite the Henderson South Mills boiler-room? (Payton's answer: "No".)

Have you answered truthfully each question on the test about the June 13th dynamiting conspiracy? (Payton's answer: "Yes".)

My guess would be—and it is, of course, only a guess—that the basic decisions in foreign policy have been formulated in Kennedy's mind and are ready for implementation. My guess is that his inaugural address will contain several paragraphs as clearly and firmly stated as the Monroe Doctrine which was not a separate document or a treaty but President Monroe's message to Congress of 1823.

Such a declaration of principle would, of course, be personal but it could be made binding on the nation. It is also my guess that John Kennedy will write his own document, will circulate it among Dean Rusk, Adlai Stevenson and such others as it would be polite to consult and that he will speak as he chooses concerning the outset of his career that he has assumed the obligations and responsibility of conducting the foreign policy and will do so.

In foreign affairs, this will be an asset, for some will imagine, particularly the British who often mistake a correct pronouncement of English for intelligence, that Adlai Stevenson will be the smart boy in this Administration. They will soon discover why Kennedy passed Adlai Stevenson over for Dean Rusk whom he did not know. He wanted no Seward in his Cabinet—that is, a Secretary of State who would look down his nose at the President as Seward did at Lincoln.

In Need Of New Policy

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Revolution is world-wide and explodes like bubbles in a pot of thick soup. Some revolutions occur because of popular resentment over bad government; others are fomented by Soviet Russia and Red China in their empire-building effort to develop a universal Marxist state which is essential to their creed.

The United States, which has accepted the role and responsibility of world leader, cannot rush to each revolution to put down the Communist forces. At this moment, revolutionary movements bespeak themselves in Laos, Ethiopia, Nepal, Congo, Cuba, Venezuela, Brazil, Algeria, Rhodesia, to mention a few that are seething or simmering. Shall the United States, like a universal fire department, run to each one or should we leave it to the United Nations which has proved in the Congo that it cannot depend on its members and in Laos that the Russians supply arms to each revolutionary group?

In a very few weeks, the Kennedy Administration will have to face the facts of this situation and will need a policy. Will it pursue the Dulles policy of seeking peace by agreement and the Eisenhower policy of good-will to all with a smile? Will John Kennedy, when he is actually in power, disappoint his liberal counselors by adopting a nationalistic policy or will he disappoint his conservative critics by insisting that American rights be respected and defended and that American lives be regarded as sacred?

It is obvious from his Cabinet appointments that as President, Kennedy will formulate his own policy and expect it to be carried forward. His models are more likely to be Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson than Franklin D. Roosevelt who moved us into an Alice-in-Wonderland confusion of world leadership.

In a very few weeks, Truman State Department experts who were wholly dependent upon managed to lose China just as John Foster Dulles's error at Suez lost for us Africa.

Nearly all the mistakes that could be made have been made and it is about time for a program of constructive Americanism, which in terms of the foreign policy must mean that every step taken must directly or indirectly benefit the United States and not such a nebulous concept as the Free World. This we shall soon know because the Soviet is acting fast and is lighting fires in several places at once, assuming that the Eisenhower Administration cannot act between now and January 20 and that the Kennedy Administration will not be ready to act for some time after January 20.

My guess would be—and it is, of course, only a guess—that the basic decisions in foreign policy have been formulated in Kennedy's mind and are ready for implementation. My guess is that his inaugural address will contain several paragraphs as clearly and firmly stated as the Monroe Doctrine which was not a separate document or a treaty but President Monroe's message to Congress of 1823.

Gold Problem's Easy Solution

By ELMER ROESSNER To one whose only gold hoard is in his dental fillings, the remedy for the current gold crisis seems amazingly simple. The United States is in a bind right now because it is losing more gold to foreign nations than it gets in. The U.S. Government knows exactly how much gold flows out. But it probably has only vague ideas of how much flows out in each category.

The channels through which we lose gold are: Investments abroad: Every American dollar for plants, mills or other facilities abroad, or for foreign securities, is an export of dollars. EXPORTING JOBS: Buying components abroad: Every dollar spent for components made abroad—transistors in Japan, watch innards in Switzerland—transfers gold to foreign ownership. This is what is known as "exporting jobs" because every day's work bought in foreign countries is a day's wage lost to an American worker.

Government aid: Most foreign aid does not involve a gold loss. Indigent countries are given credits that are spent in the United States. To that extent, foreign aid helps American production. But when aid consists of dollars that can be spent in foreign countries, it is a gold drain. Military expenses: When the Services spend money abroad for labor and material, including goodies for post exchanges, the money eventually comes from the U. S. gold supply. Military personnel spending: The pay of officers and enlisted men spent abroad, except for American goods at PX's, is a drain. TRAVELERS' GOLD LOSSES: Travelers' spending abroad: Every dollar spent abroad, including those spent in Mexico and Canada, is a potential drain. So is money spent for duty-free foreign goods, which can be as much as $1,000 a year for each member of a family. Expatriates and repatriates spending: A big drain, discussed here yesterday. Gifts to foreigners: An uncalculated amount of money is spent by Americans and American residents to relatives and friends abroad. Some of these outlays are offset by our excess of exports over imports. By selling more of our products and services abroad than we pay for foreign goods, we reduce the gold drain. In fact, one of the best ways of halting the outflow would be to sell more in foreign countries.

In addition, money spent by travelers here, or invested in American enterprise, or coming in as gifts to Americans, also offsets gold losses. A SOLUTION: Until more sales abroad can reverse the trend, it might be wise for the government to set up controls so that it would know the daily or weekly outflow of American dollars abroad and the corresponding inflow of foreign money. Then when the outflow rose in one category, steps could be taken to correct the situation. Thus, if travelers' duty-free purchases became unusually high, the limits could be lowered. If travel expenditures got wildly out of balance, they could be limited. If the pension drain became unfordable, limits could be placed.

These adjustments could conform with the realities of the situation and would be preferable empirical solutions, such as returning servicemen's dependents from abroad. READERS' QUESTIONS: Q: How can I be sure that I have been credited with all my Social Security deductions. A: Ask your Social Security District Office for Form OAR-7004. It's a postcard for which, when filled out and mailed, you will receive a statement of earnings and credits. Q: Where can I find out what state and city sales taxes are levied on food in the United States? A: Try the Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.

Governor Avoids Court Discussion

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)—Gov. David Lawrence of Pennsylvania does not plan to talk to a Donaldson Air Force Base sergeant who instituted telephone protests that his divorce proceedings were being unnecessarily slowed.

"I am the head of the executive branch of the government in Pennsylvania," Gov. Lawrence said to a newsman in Pittsburgh, "and it would be improper for me to discuss such matters as courts and divorce action."

"There are the three branches of government—executive, judicial and legislative," the governor said. "I don't believe the sergeant studied civics in school; his proper recourse is with the court of Berks County."

M. Sgt. James H. Hatfield, 38, began the telephone protest on an hourly basis Wednesday. He started at 10 a. m. and said he planned to try to reach the governor each hour.

He was unavailable for comment later on whether the campaign was meeting with any success.

The sergeant said his wife, the former Phyllis Ketner, 37, contested the divorce.

In the divorce action brought in March, 1959, Hatfield charged his wife with indignities. He said his wife and daughter live in Philadelphia.

Hatfield said the proceedings were bottled up because the Pennsylvania court must determine whether he is entitled to a hearing under that state's laws since he is stationed at Donaldson AFB in South Carolina.

"I'm not asking the governor for a divorce," Hatfield stated. "All I want is a chance to be heard."

Hatfield said he had been married 15 years, and spent nine years in the Air Force.

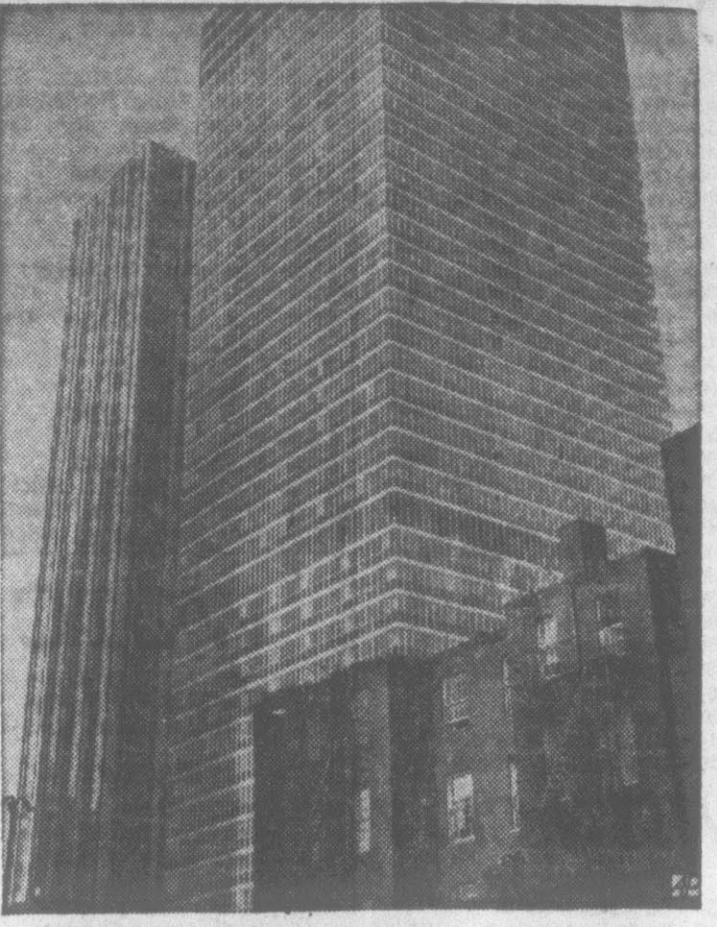

If the calls to Gov. Lawrence prove unsuccessful, Hatfield said he has lined up friends in Texas, New Mexico, California, Illinois, Massachusetts and South Carolina to telephone their congressmen to plead his case. "I spent about $50 telephoning them," he said.

The initial calls to Gov. Lawrence, he said, were person-to-person and he had not paid for them.

The Clovis, N.M., native said, "The (Pennsylvania) courts have met on the matter several times, but they refuse to reach a decision. . . It just seems silly to me that the action has been delayed so long."

The couple, he said, was married 15 years ago. The family moved to Reading, Pa. (Berks County) in 1950, shortly before he entered the Air Force.

Hatfield said it had cost him an estimated $11,000 over the past three years to pay court costs, travel, attorneys fees and the allotment for his wife and daughter.

A 'Christmas Present' To AT & T Stockholders

NEW YORK (AP)—Stockholders of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. have received a surprise package in the form of higher dividends and valuable rights to buy more stock at a bargain rate.

As a result, the price of their stock skyrocketed Wednesday to an all-time high of $103.50 a share before dipping slightly in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The nation's largest family of stockholders, 1.9 million strong, will begin collecting $3.60 a share annually in July. The rate has been $3.30 a year since July 1959.

Next March they will receive rights to buy at an undetermined price, lower than market value, 1 share of AT&T stock for each 20 held on Feb. 23, 1961. This financing promises to be the largest in U. S. corporate history, with a total value of over $750 million.

Directors of the world's largest utility came up with the surprise package at their regular monthly meeting yesterday. They said the company needs money for a $2.5 billion expansion program planned in 1961.

The dividend increase, amounting to about nine per cent, is only the second for the famous "blue-chip" stock since 1921.

The first, amounting to 10 per cent, was proposed in another Christmas season surprise on Dec. 17, 1958.

Stockholders attending the 1960 annual meeting this April in New York expected another increase, based on the continued record earnings of the Bell System.

When the news came Wednesday afternoon, the stock was selling at $97 a share, up 87 cents for the day. Within an hour it zoomed above $100. Before the close a peak of $103.50 was established. The stock closed at $102.50, up $6.38 for the day.

The day's high was equal to $310.50 a share on the old stock before last year's 3 for 1 split. The previous all-time high was set Sept. 19, 1929 at $310.25 a share.

AT&T wound up the second most active issue on the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday with 102,900 shares changing hands. The value of the shares traded was about $10 million.

The stock offering, to shareholders only, could result in the issuance of about 11 million shares, since there are 223,400,000 outstanding. However, a share owner who didn't want to buy more stock could sell his rights at the going market value. Trading in the rights, on a when-issued basis, usually takes place for a limited period about the time they are issued.

Barry Sullivan 'Changing' His Hat' Without Strain

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Television hero Rod Cameron, who has appeared in a long list of syndicated adventure series over the past few years, recently was asked by an interviewer how he moved so easily from one part to another. "I just change my hat," replied Cameron.

Barry Sullivan doesn't change hats quite as often or easily as Cameron, but he has survived two series—"The Man Called X" and "Harbor Master," neither of which caused any great stir in the business. Now he is playing the leading role of a marshal in a Western called "The Tall Man," an NBC entry which slipped quietly into the TV stream.

On Dec. 28, however, Sullivan will be putting on his "Man Called X" hat again for an evening, the lead in a spy thriller on CBS' Steel Hour drama, "Operation Northstar."

"I wanted a change of pace and a change of scenery," explained Sullivan, "and I knew it would be back last August when I arranged to have 10 days off now to do the play. It's good for an actor to get to New York and have a chance to work with New York actors. And it's good to be wearing a necktie again."

Sullivan is a versatile performer—he toured with Bette Davis recently in a reading of Carl Sandburg's writings—and has no difficulty getting good parts. So, after his experiences in two short-lived series, he swore he would never get mixed up with another. "But I have three children," he said, "and the money is a factor. For another, I've discovered that in television, a performer can be in one poor show after another and still survive without injury to his reputation. It's different in the theater or even motion pictures—there is so much television and it is so immediate that people know that you've been appearing and they know if they like you, but they tend to forget how good or bad your show was."

rather remote personality even when he's being an actor.

This week's "Thriller" drama, "The Man in the Middle," was one of Charlotte Armstrong's good, solid plots and would have been one of the series' best if the principal character had been cast more wisely. Garry Moore certainly does look like Buster Keaton even if he doesn't mimic his style very well.

Remains of "The Roy Rogers Show" will be shown Saturday mornings, beginning Jan. 7. Roy undoubtedly will look slimmer than he did in the other night's "Home for Christmas" show—he's picked up quite a few pounds during his recent vacation from the studio's corral. . . . Next two-part "Family Classic series on CBS will be "Vanity Fair," Jan. 12 and 13.

Still another sponsor has lined up his do-it-yourself network. A compact car manufacturer has bought time on 115 TV stations on which to show "Mister Ed," a comedy series starring Alan Young and a talking horse.

LADY in the MARKET

CHAPTER 12

At the brokerage firm, a bright-eyed, wire-haired young man across the floor from Jane caught her eye. Smiling hopefully, he freed himself from a small group of mourners — the market was a graveyard that day — and bounded over to her. Over-enthusiastically, he introduced himself as Mr. Kilgore and talked about the morning fog as he escorted her down a narrow hall to his office.

His office was the size of a small pony stall and, once they had settled down, Jane found herself uncomfortable with the ash-tray under her nose and her knees hard against the desk. Now, in the place where decisions had to be faced, how cold things suddenly seemed! Jane was dismayed that brokerage firms — of all places — were so careless about putting customers at their ease. A broker's office ought to be cheerful, not chilly and cramped.

"Now!" Mr. Kilgore exclaimed. "What's on the little lady's mind?"

The little lady, wincing slightly, said she would like to make a purchase, and handed over a sheet of paper. "This is a baby blue chip," she smiled. "I want to buy 200 shares."

Mr. Kilgore looked at the name of the stock, consulted his Stock Guide, eyed her with noble pity, and then slowly shook his head.

"I would be most reluctant," he began, "most reluctant. Especially during these trying days." He paused, frowning, finally asked, "May I inquire what you are in now?"

Nettled, Jane couldn't resist. "Until recently, Longfellow Leasing. I sold at the top." Pausing to enjoy the effect of her astuteness, she went on gaily. "Right now I'm in Canadian Countess." The effect of this fell flat.

Mr. Kilgore looked shame-faced. "I never heard of it."

Brushing aside the possibility that he must not get around much, Jane explained, "It is comparable to buying American Telephone in 1912 at three cents a share." Then she added, "But it's in the family, so to speak."

"Oh, hard to come by," Mr. Kilgore supplied, and dismissed the Countess as privately held and pretty smart. Then he pressed on. "Let me tell you about a little over-the-counter beauty."

Writing a name on a pad of paper, as if sharing a secret, he confided, "I put my mother in this only last week. It's slow growth, but steady and safe."

"I can't afford slow growers," Jane went on to explain that she was accustomed to doubling and tripling the value of her purchases — usually within a few months. She didn't have a lifetime ahead of her for leisurely growth, and stocks as fast as Canadian Countess would have to be her answer. Nevertheless she assured Mr. Kilgore, "I don't want to seem unreasonable."

Since he was obviously unappreciative, Jane could do little but promise to think about his suggestion and take her leave.

Going three doors down the street to another firm, she met a breezy young customer's man named Mr. Gaylord. His office, too, was in a row of tiny stalls but even so, he talked loudly enough to command an auditorium. Taking one look at Jane's proposed purchase, Mr. Gaylord's adam's apple bobbed over his blue bow tie. "Yipes!" he boomed. "You are a speculator, aren't you?"

Jane softly quoted Webster. "To speculate is merely to think about."

Jarring her with his decibels, Mr. Gaylord shouted on, introducing the idea of mutual funds as "wonderful for one in your position" — not that he knew what that was.

Sweetly, Jane pointed out to Mr. Gaylord, "I can buy my single stock for much less commission. And of course it will do far better."

Mr. Gaylord raised an eyebrow and persisted, "But a mutual gives you diversification."

Jane gave him her nicest smile. She didn't bother to tell Mr. Gaylord, but her notebook also said, "Diversification is a sacred cow." Making no headway with the mutuals, Mr. Gaylord next tried the utilities. "They are depression proof," he said. "I put my mother-in-law in Harbor Sound only last week."

Jane only hoped Harbor Sound was the name of a utility. Promising Mr. Gaylord to think about utilities, and taking her leave, she reflected that her maiden visits with brokers were teaching her at least one thing: she appealed to their filial instincts. Sentimentally, she wondered if Wally had been thoughtful enough to put his mother in Canadian Countess.

Later one Thursday morning the mailman rang and handed Jane a bulky brown envelope with 21 cents postage due. It contained her certificates of the Canadian Countess Petro-chemicals Company.

Considering that they represented, they were, to her dismay, folded much too carelessly. She removed them tenderly while admiring their handsome red borders, the Old English print, and their illegible signatures. Bringing out the ironing board, she ironed out the creases under a damp cloth, then rolled them into slender cylinders.

Finally, rummaging among her old Christmas wrappings and ribbons, she tied a slender red ribbon around each certificate. There were forty-eight in all, each one representing 250 shares of a grand total of 12,000 shares, and stacked on the kitchen table they made an awesome pyramid of assets.

Taking three empty coffee cans, she stood her 48 certificates upright in the cans and put them high on a pantry shelf. There, behind a cupboard door, they would be safe and out of sight. She couldn't resist opening the door again to look at her investment of $3000 and realize anew what the handsome certificates meant to her security.

Her mood of exaltation soon sagged, however, to give way to an aching desire to share her secret with Al and Rosemarie. Nothing was fun unless it was shared. Why, oh why, she thought impatiently, had Wally been so insistent upon keeping such a fortune secret?

For one minute Jane remained torn in indecision. Should she or shouldn't she tell them? Then a perfectly splendid rationalization came to mind. She owed it to her safety to show Al and Rosemarie exactly where she kept her mounting assets. What if she were suddenly taken to a hospital? There could be a fire or an earthquake! Who would know to rescue her certificates? And what if she died in the hospital? It was morally wrong not to trust one's friends.

In a spirit of emergency, Jane turned to bang on the kitchen wall, and her thumbs quickly brought

Further Recognition For Local Youth As Sketch Wins Prize

Louis Jones of 400 Elizabeth St., a senior at J. H. Rose High School, has been the recipient of recognition for his work in art before, but his most recent award is first prize for an animal drawing and painting in the Annual Competition of Art Instruction, Inc., of Minneapolis, Minn.

The prize winning selection was in the medium of pen and ink, though Jones is interested in other media—water color, oils and pencil.

His mother, Mrs. Louis Jones, said the family realized that Louis had an unusual talent at about the age of four.

Most of his instruction has been gathered through his own initiative, with little formal instruction.

Louis won a complete study course from Art Instruction, Inc., by entering a small sketch in "The Progressive Farmer" magazine which sponsors contests in art and awards scholarships every three months, he relates.

His winning sketch in the Annual Competition of Art Instruction, had been entered in competition with hundreds of entries from contestants from every state in the United States and all provinces of Canada.

Louis has exhibited selections of his art work in Greenville at the art center, when it was located in Sheppard Memorial Library, and has participated in the sidewalk exhibits during the Fine Arts Festival here. He has been invited to exhibit in sidewalk art show in New Bern, also.

Having lived previously in West Virginia, Texas, Pennsylvania and in North Carolina points, Louis has had displays in those localities.

Following his graduation from high school, he plans to enter East Carolina College, where he will major in art.

Louisiana Sales Tax Increase Handed Rebuff

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Administration leaders were undecided today whether to press for a new House vote on a controversial sales tax raise, designed to aid segregated schools, after their efforts were rebuffed in both the Legislature and the federal courts.

The House Wednesday turned back the $28 million tax hike, which would lift the statewide sales tax from two to three percent for the first eight months of 1961. The vote in favor was 65-36, three short of the necessary two-thirds.

Gov. Jimmie H. Davis proposed the tax raise to support the state's grant in aid program for private schools.

Speculation was the measure would either be brought up for another vote on reconsideration when the House meets this morning, or it would be held over while the Legislature takes a long Christmas and New Year's holiday. The Senate also meets today.

Minutes before the House vote, a three-judge federal panel in New Orleans cited Lt. Gov. C. C. Aycock and two other state officials for contempt and ordered

New Orleans banks to honor checks of the embattled Orleans Parish School Board.

Aycock, House Speaker Thomas Jewell and State Education Supt. Shelby M. Jackson were cited for refusing to release salaries for teachers and other employees at William Frantz and McDonogh No. 19.

These are the two elementary schools integrated Nov. 14 by federal court order. White boycotts have cut attendance to eight whites and one Negro at Frantz and just three Negroes at McDonogh.

The Legislature has cut off funds to the school board and ordered the banks to freeze some $728,000 in the board's account because the board had complied with U. S. Dist. Judge J. Skelly Wright's integration order.

The court also restrained the City of New Orleans from withholding some $200,000 in tax money due the board.

The judges also restrained Gov. Davis and other officials from using newly passed legislation to name a five-man board to replace the Orleans School Board. This was the fourth time the court has prevented the Legislature from replacing the board. The court set Jan. 13 for Aycock, Jewell and Jackson to show cause why they should not be held for contempt. The three, along with Davis, the Legislature and other officials, have been enjoined from interfering with operation of New Orleans schools.

In Baton Rouge, Rep. Risley Triche, administration House leader, said the court's action would make it impossible for the Legislature to meet the $2-million teacher payroll due Friday. He said the Legislature would have to reappraise resolutions providing for teachers' pay.

Now 51 Dead In Munich Tragedy

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—The crash of a U.S. Air Force Convair jet into a streetcar packed with Christmas shoppers last Saturday claimed its 51st victim today with the death of Ingeborg Kraus, 19, a Munich clerk.

Thirteen other Germans are still in the hospital with severe burns from the crash. All 20 Americans aboard the plane were killed.

During the 3 1/4-hour debate in the House Wednesday opponents of the tax complained that no private school system had ever been set up.

Tax foes loudly and frequently warned the Davis administration was using the segregation cause as an excuse for a tax hike without proving it really was needed for that or any other purpose.

Most of Louisiana's large daily newspapers, some Chambers of Commerce, and labor leaders are opposing the sales tax hike. The newspapers include those which supported and others which opposed Davis for governor.

Maritime authorities said the missing 19 seamen were believed to have perished when the 9,393-ton Elorrio broke in half off Galiano, on the Bay of Biscay coast.

The empty freighter was en route to Valencia to be broken up after 38 years of service.

Club Decorated City Art Center

The Greenville Art Center has been decorated for the Christmas holidays by the Lakewood Pines Garden Club of Greenville.

Two nut and cone wreaths, with bronze bows, have been placed on the front and side entrances to the center as outside decorations.

Within the center, the stairway is decked with cedar and holly. The mantel beneath Mrs. J. H. B. Moore's portrait is decked with pine, ivy, magnolia and cones. A mantel in the front gallery is decked with cedar, holly and red candles.

Throughout the Greenville Art Center, greenery and decorations of the Christmas motif will be noted. An arrangement of a brass candelabra holding red candles and surrounded with holly has been placed on the receptionist's desk in the center.

A Christmas tree, featuring gold and red colors, has been placed in the bay window of the North Gallery.

Though the entire garden club participated in making the arrangements, the following group was responsible for installing them in the art center: Mrs. Harry Billica, Mrs. F. F. Hendrix, Mrs. William Wright, Mrs. William Reading, Mrs. K. G. Harris, Mrs. Richard Heller and Mrs. W. J. Stell.

Hear Testimony On Integration

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — R. N. Harris, the only Negro on the Durham City School Board, testified in Federal Court here Wednesday that 40 per cent of the Negro students in this city's junior and senior high schools would be eligible to attend predominantly white schools, were assignments made on purely geographical zones.

However, Harris told Judge Edwin M. Stanley, at the elementary level very few Negroes would be assigned to schools other than those they now attend.

Earlier, City Schools Supt. Lew Hannen testified that the Durham Vocational Education Center — due to open in 1961 — "is set up to accommodate any pupil, without consideration of race, who qualifies."

Hannen also told the court of what school integration already had been completed in Durham. He explained how the various school zones in the city are set up.

Presentations of evidence and testimony in the suit, a consolidated action in behalf of 277 Negro pupils, was completed Wednesday. Judge Stanley set Jan. 26 as the date for oral arguments in the case. The next hearing also will be in Durham.

The Negroes contend in the action that the City School Board assigns students according to race and also attacks the North Carolina Pupil Assignment Act as unconstitutional and calls for integration of school staffs from janitor to principal.

Astronomers Still Unable 'Explain' The Star That Guided 3 Wise Men

WASHINGTON (AP)—Astronomers still have not pinned down any scientific explanation for the star of Bethlehem which guided the Magi to the crib of the Christ child, a naval astronomer said Wednesday.

Neither have they come up with any new theories beyond the three major alternative speculations which have cropped up since professional stargazers first began to theorize on the subject more than 200 years ago, says Simone Daro Gossner of the U. S. Naval Observatory.

These three possibilities are: 1. A supernova—a star that suddenly flares up much more brilliantly than previously. 2. A comet. 3. The configuration, or apparent close proximity of several planets in the sky.

Mrs. Gossner says the difficulty besetting any real attempt to link the Magi's guiding star with a specific astronomical event is that "neither the year of Christ's birth nor the season of the year when it occurred are known with certainty."

She said in an interview that historians estimate that the earliest possible year was 11 B.C. and the latest, 4 B.C.

"And," she said, "while the time of year when the birth occurred has not been fully established, most probably it occurred in the springtime, rather than in December.

"The Bible story speaks of shepherds watching their flocks by night—and they'd only do such night watching when the sheep were having lambs. That is, in the springtime."

She said that in the early days of the Christian era the Christians celebrated the Nativity in the springtime but later changed this several times, finally settling on Dec. 25.

One view, she said, is that the ultimate change was made because Dec. 25 was "the date of the Roman Saturnalia, when all the Romans were whooping it up, and the Christians felt that their own celebration of a religious event could pass undetected at such a time."

Of the three astronomical theories offered to explain the star, Mrs. Gossner said the configuration-of-planets concept conceivably might tie in best.

"The Magi," she said, "were astrologers as well. And the possible appearance of three bright planets—for example, Venus, Jupter and Saturn—in apparent very close position to each other in the heavens might well have been considered a mystic symbol by the Magi."

Mrs. Gossner said that astronomers have computed that Jupiter, Saturn and Venus formed a close triangle in early March of the year 6 B.C.

"This configuration," she said, "appeared in the constellation of Pisces—the Fishes—which had always been held sacred to the Jews."

Costly Losses From Three N. C. Blazes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fires in Charlotte, Bryson City and Mount Pleasant resulted in many thousand dollars damage Wednesday. No one was injured in the three blazes.

In Charlotte, two furniture stores and a loan office were struck by a downtown blaze. Although the two buildings were not destroyed, merchandise was heavily damaged by smoke and water. Damages of close to $100,000 resulted when fire roared through the gymnasium, band department and home economics wing of the Swain County High School in Bryson City. The students had been dismissed earlier in the day for the Christmas holidays.

Fire gutted a highway commission repair shop just outside the Mount Pleasant Prison Camp. Damages were placed at $25,000. The fire apparently started in an oil heater of the concrete block building.

The Charlotte fire resulted in damages described as several thousand dollars by firemen. Hardest hit was Uncle Sam's Loan Office on East Trade St. Also damaged, mainly by smoke and water, were Pliner Furniture Co. and Meyers Furniture Co. The cause of the fire was undetermined, but apparently started in a restroom of the loan company.

None of the 109 prisoners at the Mount Pleasant Prison Camp were affected by the flames. However, before the fire was brought under control, a pickup truck, dump truck and motor grader inside the building were destroyed. Also, such equipment as acetylene torches and machinery, tires and repair equipment was burned.

In the Bryson City fire, the gymnasium was the most severely damaged. Most of the damage was from smoke and water. The building was a stone structure.

Duke, Heyman Bomb Gators 83-64

By JACK CLARY

The St. Louis Billikens, in the past always willing to slug it out point for point on a basketball court, have the new look of a fine defensive team this year.

with Kentucky's scoring average of 63 for a 4-2 mark. Offensively, the Bills, whose only loss was 81-66 to top-ranked Ohio State, have averaged 64 points compared to Kentucky's 62 points allowed six opponents.

Dayton hander Seton Hall its first defeat 66-45. St. Louis' defense almost didn't make it for a while Wednesday night as Cal overcame a 28-20 half time deficit and tied the score 49-49 at the end of regulation time.

John Turner's 24 points and 16 rebounds paced Louisville, while Bobby Bland got 18 for Vanderbilt (7-0) which took advantage of cold shooting by New Mexico in the second half.

Blue Jays Look To Future For Basketball Recognition

By JOHNNY HUDSON
Reflector Sports Editor

"Rome wasn't built in a day." Few adhere to this philosophy more than coaches Jack Edwards and William Harrison of Stokes-Pactolus.

Problems galore have confronted these two veterans of the coaching fraternity in their attempt to mold winning basketball combinations for the Blue Jays. In reality, the coaches speak of the future instead of the present.

The community's pride in past years has centered around the quality of girls' basketball coached by Edwards. The Blue-jay tutor has worn the winner's belt about as often as Santa Claus comes on Christmas Eve.

But Edwards, who has won the regular season Pitt title for four years running, and his damsel may find the road a bit rocky this winter.

Three All-County girls and two other starters are gone from last year's club which raced to the title. The team is made up in its entirety by non-seniors.

Junior Phyllis Barnhill, a guard, is the only returning starter. Sophomore Lillian Crisp rates high in Edwards' hope for the future. Crisp has topped the scoring column in early games.

Others holding a place for the future include Jeanie Forbes, Dail Coward, Linda Warren, Margaret Lee, and Rosa Fleming.

The team has won only two of its first 10 games but both victories came in the final two games. "By the end of the season, we feel we should have a good club," says Edwards. "It is the best crop of freshmen we've had in some time."

Harrison, a graduate of East Carolina College and Atlantic Christian, is in his first year as head coach of the boys' team. The prospects that greeted Harrison wasn't a coach's utopian. He has attacked the problem with a hope of building for the future.

The club dropped all 10 of its pre-holiday contests and will be given little chance of improving the mark when action swings back into full gear in January.

Lack of experience, height, and speed are just three factors keeping the Jays with their backs to the wall. As a whole, the club is a young one and inexperienced. Harrison hopes to see improvement with each game.

A leader and outstanding shooter are other holdovers on the squad. A starter hitting double figures for the Jays has been a rarity thus far.

Joel Jenkins and Louis Moore are the only seniors on the club and neither has seen a large degree of action. Carroll Fleming and Jackie Harris are underclassmen that could produce a small flame before the season comes to a close.

The present picture for Stokes-Pactolus isn't bright. Several freshmen have threatened to capture starting jobs, nudging out upperclassmen, and this could change the complexion by tournament time. All in all, Harrison can't expect more than a handful of victories but it should be an interesting winter for the former Beargrass pilot.

Barnes Defends Amateur Tennis

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I know of no cases in this country where players are paid under the table," the president of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association said in reply to comments by Davis Cup player Earl Buchholz on the integrity of the amateur game.

Buchholz, of St. Louis, and Barry MacKay of Dayton, Ohio signed contracts in Sydney, Australia, Wednesday to play with Jack Kramer's professional tennis troupe. The two top U.S. stars were on the team which recently lost the Interzone finals to Italy. The contracts promised each at least $50,000 in three years.

In signing the pro contract,

Buchholz remarked: "We have been taught to be honest and it is always a very uncomfortable Salt Lake City, while in Australia, and dirty feeling for us to take money under the table as we do as amateurs."

George E. Barnes of Chicago, USLTA president, visiting in Houston, Tex., said in reply: "I feel sure that Mr. Buchholz is referring to world tennis and not to tennis in the United States. If that is so, then he is correct. Other countries do not observe the amateur rules as we do. I know of no cases in this country where players are paid under the table."

Barnes said Buchholz and other U.S. Cup team members had been under supervision of the team captain, David L. Freed of Salt Lake City, while in Australia, and observed of Buchholz: "He has received no monies other than the expenses that are approved by the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association."

Edward A. Turville of St. Petersburg, Fla., the association's first vice president, said: "If a tennis player wants to take money under the table, by his own act he is showing his dishonesty. I am pleased that they are turning professional."

MacKay had said professional tennis was the only realistic way for a person who wanted to compete on a big time basis.

"Technically, a person wishing to devote himself entirely to tennis—as I do for the next few years—could not do it as an amateur because he couldn't afford it," MacKay said. "We know that it is possible under our present structure, but it is not for me. I want to do it above board."

Turville said that MacKay had been supported and kept by the USLTA since he was graduated from the University of Michigan, and declared he "shows little respect for the organization that made it possible for him to rise to a position worthy of recognition by the pro group."

"Virtually the same applies to Buchholz," said Turville. "What organization provided them the opportunities to enter Davis Cup play? The day that a individual feels that he should be able to make his living out of amateur tennis is the day he should either turn pro or leave our tennis ranks."

Is Ohio State Good Enough For 2nd Bid?

By HAL PARIS

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Just how good is Ohio State's basketball team?

Good enough to win a second straight national championship?

The No. 1 rated Buckeyes have romped to five straight victories and most veteran outside observers agreed on one thing: "They've got a heck of a good ball club."

After Ohio State demolished a fine California team last March to cop the NCAA title, not many people thought such a near-perfect performance could be improved upon.

Even Coach Fred Taylor voiced some complaints.

"We don't have the size or depth we had last year. Physically, we can't be as strong," Taylor commented in a preseason sizeup of his squad.

So what happens? Ohio State runs through five straight opponents and even Taylor is ready to admit that this team is as good as last season's.

"Our defense has done a fine job and our offense should do better," says Taylor. "But we'll know more about the team in the next week or so," he continued, adding:

"We have to play a good Detroit club tonight and then next week in the Holiday Festival in New York there are teams like St. John's, Seton Hall, Providence and St. Bonaventure."

The Ohioans are sparked by All-America Jerry Lucas. He gets considerable help from such notables as Larry Siegfried, John Havlicek and Mel Nowell.

Boiled down, it's tough beating a team that averages 90 points a game, connects on half of its shots and captures 50 rebounds a contest.

Not since San Francisco turned the trick in 1955 and 1956 has a school repeated as national champion.

Baseball Could Expand To Three Big Leagues By 1964

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball could expand to 24 teams and perhaps three leagues by 1964 with further changes as close as 1962, Commissioner Ford Frick predicts.

"You know how these baseball fellows are," the commissioner was quoted by Dick Young of the Daily News in today's edition. "It takes them a long time to get moving, but when they do, they want to keep moving."

"The only thing I'm afraid of is they may try to do it too fast," Frick said he personally favors expansion that will get away from the 10-club setup the American League will have next year and the National League in 1962 when Houston and New York are taken in.

Under a 10-club setup there are two objections he believes: The idea of teams finishing ninth and tenth, and a 162-game schedule which destroys the long-time structure based on 154 games.

Expansion to 24 teams by 1962 either as three eight-team leagues or with two 12 team leagues split into six-team divisions, he pointed out, could mean a return to a 154-game season schedule.

Frick said he had heard the American League has a faction which favors expansion to two Greenville Man Is Coon - Huntingest Man In Florida, Maybe In All U.S.

CLASSIFIES THE "TALLHASSEE RACCOON"
... Edwin L. Tyson, originally of Greenville, works on doctorate.

TALLHASSEE, Fla.—A coon's son's study is expected to provide an answer as to whether the Tallahassee raccoon is an Alabama coon, a Florida raccoon or, so to speak, a "Big Bend" raccoon with a pedigree all its own.

In studying the skulls Tyson places them against photographic paper and flashes a light against the side of the skull, thus producing an outline of the size and curvature of the skull for careful measurement later. He's planning to borrow 60 coons from the University of Florida and 100 from the University of Georgia in furtherance of his studies.

Tyson has learned a lot about coons in 11 years of collecting and studying them. He's learned they are pretty scrappy. One large animal, blind in both eyes, charged him when released and he had to outrun it. Another big animal jumped on him to fight after he tripped on a log and fell.

The largest coon he's ever caught in Florida weighed 17.2 pounds. This one was caught in DeSoto County, which is not far from the southern extremity of the range of the Florida coon. In Collier, Dade and Monroe counties other varieties of coons are found.

It's true coons are curious and this trait gets them into trouble, he says. To trap them he uses sardines or frequently an awful smelling concoction from the musk glands of foxes, bobcats, skunks and coons. Coons come sniffing around this witch's brew like a housewife looking for the source of a bad smell.

Once caught, coons are difficult to recatch. They learn to avoid traps and the bad-smelling bait. Thus to study their movements, marks are designed so they can be read in their tracks in mud. This way movements can be followed without recapturing the animal. At Wakulla Beach where this work is being done, the local people have returned three or four animals that have been marked.

Tyson got a bachelor's degree in biology from Duke University and his master's degree there. He was with the State Board of Health one year and the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission eight years. While with the commission he did a great deal of deer research, in Eglin Air Force Base reservation and in Ocala National Forest and he has published several papers on this work.

He's tramped around the world considerably in pursuit of scientific knowledge, traveling widely in North America including Canada and in the Caribbean. Once on a fossil hunt in Alaska he got 350 miles away from the nearest community. During his year in Alaska he found no coons which, he said, like a sensible animal prefer to live much farther south, and particularly in Florida.

So far biologists have not classified the coons which roam Leon, Wakulla, Gadsden, Liberty, Franklin and Jefferson counties between the two rivers and Ty-

Tobacco Tips

By S. J. WEEKS
Pitt County Tobacco Agent

This week, I should like to share with you a Christmas Prayer by Peter Marshall:

"WE THANK THEE, O GOD, for the return of the wondrous spell of this Christmas season that brings its own sweet joy into our jaded and troubled hearts.

"Forbid it, Lord, that we should celebrate without understanding what we celebrate. or, like our counterparts so long ago, fall to see the star or to hear the song of glorious promise.

"As our hearts yield to the spirit of Christmas, may we discover that it is thy holy spirit who comes—not a sentiment but a power—to remind us of the only way by which there may be peace on the earth and good will among men.

"May we not spend Christmas out keep it, that we may be kept in its hope, through him who emptied himself in coming to us that we might be filled with peace and joy in returning to God.

"Amen."

Finally Tired Of Supporting Him

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—Actress Marilyn Maxwell says Jerome L. (Jerry) Davis, movie-TV writer-producer, told her the day after their 1954 wedding he had married her "because I was a glamor girl and could help support him."

"I thought that was an odd sense of humor, but later I found out he wasn't kidding," Miss Maxwell, 38, told a judge Wednesday. Alleging extreme cruelty, she obtained a divorce.

The blonde actress also said Davis, 43, was jealous of her leading men when she was making movies. She said he gambled every Monday, Thursday and Saturday.

Under a property settlement Miss Maxwell will receive $500 monthly alimony and $150 monthly support for the couple's son, Matthew, 4.

Tied Up Women, Stole $14,000

LELAND, N.C. (AP) — Two gunmen, one of them armed and masked, apparently know what they would find when they entered a combination service station - home near here Tuesday night.

They tied up a 71-year-old grandmother, left to tend the store, and a woman customer and made off with $14,000 in cash and an undetermined amount of government bonds.

They left few clues. Sheriff Ed V. Pleasants said officers, including his deputies and the State Bureau of Investigation, were given a skimpy description of the bandits and no description of their getaway car.

He also said he was trying to learn why that much money was kept at a small rural service station-store.

The sheriff said Mrs. Alice Benton, 71, was left to run the establishment when her daughter, Mrs. Marie Willetts, went to Virginia to visit relatives.

Mrs. Willetts, he said, was fined and taxed with court costs three months ago for possessing liquor illegally to sell it at the station.

Mrs. Benton told him the two gunmen took $3,200 from a cedar chest and the rest of the cash and government bonds from a small safe. They took a pistol also.

Mrs. Benton said she and Mrs. May Fisher, 55, a customer, were tied with a necktie and bedsheet and left in a bedroom she said the gunmen did not handle them roughly, but held a .32 caliber pistol on them during the robbery. She told Leonard she untied herself minutes after the bandits left, untied Mrs. Fisher and ran to the highway to summon police.

The store is located on State Highway 74-76 near this small Brunswick County community about 10 miles west of Wilmington.

Prompt Reply To Letter In Braille

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—A letter to Santa Claus—in braille—resulted in an early Christmas for David Ray Glover, 8-year-old student in the Texas School for the Blind.

Davis, in his letter three weeks ago, said: "I'm sure you can read braille, Santa, because you were so good to me last year."

The Austin American-Statesmen printed the letter and it was read by toy salesman Henry L. Klein in Miami, Fla. Klein sent, via Austin police, all the things David had asked—a flashlight, thermometer, an airplane with blinking lights and a battery-run toy car.

Barbecue Christmas Party Is Given Carrier Boys

REFLECTOR CARRIER BOYS . . . receive Christmas gifts at yesterday's party from circulation manager John Slaton (lower right).

Forty-six Daily Reflector carrier boys and motor carriers attended the circulation department's Christmas party yesterday.

A complete barbecue dinner was served the circulation staff and carrier boys in the National Guard armory on Evans St.

Christmas gifts were presented to each of the carrier boys. To those unable to attend, the gifts were delivered during the afternoon.

Serving the dinner were D. J. Wichard, publisher of the newspaper, and Billy Tripp, Bonnie Hardee, Mac Boyd, and Ricky Harrington of the circulation department. John Slaton, circulation manager, said all the boys seemed to have had a very good time.

Following the dinner and presentation of the gifts the boys were provided a basketball by National Guard officials and the Reflector carriers went through a light workout in the armory.

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP)—A 24-foot shark weighing 6,000 pounds was caught in the nets of a commercial fishing boat Wednesday.

John Fitch, director of the California Marine Laboratory, said it was a harmless basking shark that feeds on shrimp and small fish. He said it was the largest ever caught on the Pacific Coast.

"Young Artists of Eastern North Carolina," an exhibition featuring four artists, has opened this week at the Greenville Art Center.

The artists are Nelson Dudley of Greenville, Ed Lancaster of Vanceboro and James B. Roper of Belhaven, three senior art majors at East Carolina College; and Joe Stell of Greenville, a 1958 graduate of East Carolina College.

The exhibition is designed to give recognition to natives of eastern North Carolina who plan to make work in the field of art a career.

Media in the show include painting, sculpture, drawing and graphics. The styles range from realistic to abstract.

Three of the group plan to become teachers following their graduation. Stell is presently engaged in designing sets and lighting for theaters in New York City.

Joe Stell is represented in the exhibition in the media of sculpture, water color and pen and ink. While at E.C.C., he was a member of the Art Club and Kappa Delta Pi, honor society in education. He served as set designer and technical director of several Student Government association musical productions.

None Injured As Car Somersaults

WEST MEMPHIS, Ark. (AP)—An automobile doing a police-estimated 110 miles an hour hit a sloping railroad crossing Wednesday night with these results:

It turned three complete somersaults, landed on its wheels, hit a tree, skidded back on the pavement and came to rest, still upright, a block and a half away. But none of the six teen-agers aboard suffered a scratch.

With two seasons of professional stock theater in Maryland and Massachusetts as additional background, Stell designed sets and lighting for shows such as "West Side Story," "Bells Are Ringing" and "Stalag 17."

Presently he is working as set and lighting designer and stage manager for the Merri-Mimec Professional Children's repertory theater in New York City.

This year in a one-man show at the town library of his native Belhaven, he exhibited tempera, paintings, ceramics, jewelry, textiles and prints. Roper served a tour of duty with the Air Force following his 1954 high school graduation. He entered East Carolina College later and there has served as president of Delta Phi Delta, a national honorary art fraternity with a chapter at E.C.C. He is also a member of Phi Sigma Pi, national honorary professional fraternity.

He plans to teach on the high school level, in preparation for teaching on the college level, and hopes to acquire advanced degrees.

He is represented by one etching, one lithograph and one block print in the current

One print on display at the center, a colored block print entitled "Forms and Water," merited entry in the North Carolina Artists' Competition in 1959 and was shown at the N.C. Museum of Art in Raleigh during December 1959 and January 1960. "The Lamp," a copy of one of the two prints accepted for exhibit at the same museum show this year is included in the Dudley group at the center.

A Report Of Progress

Almost 25 years ago, a "pressing club" business was founded in a room on Johnston Street. Because it faced toward the College, the business was christened simply "College View Cleaners." Back in those days, suits were picked up in Greenville, carried to Bethel for cleaning and returned to Greenville.

Over the years the business grew, until today it comprises three scientifically modern and efficient plants in Greenville, Kinston, and Jacksonville. No longer is the Greenville plant near the college. It moved to Grande Avenue, where there was room for expansion. But it took its name along, and is still known as College View . . . with branches located at Colonial Heights and East 5th Street.

Recently, its founder met an untimely death, and there is a sadness for us in this holiday season. But we are proud that this business had been so well organized, its employees so loyal, its reputation for high quality service so widely known, that all of us at College View can continue to serve this community and Eastern Carolina.

We cordially invite you to visit this most modern plant in Eastern Carolina. We take pride in the high quality of our service, the efficiency of our processing and the hygienic cleanliness of our production facilities.

The good will developed by a reputation over the years for dependable top-quality laundering and dry cleaning gives us confidence in our standard of service expressed in our slogan: "If you want it done just right, take it to College View!"

Bolivia Air Crash Voted Top N.C. News Story Of '60

By HOWARD CRISWELL JR., Associated Press Staff Writer

It was a cold, rainy night last Jan. 6 when the Florida-bound National Airlines DC-8 mysteriously disintegrated and crashed near the hamlet of Bolivia, N.C.

The crash killed all 34 persons aboard, including Julian Frank, 32-year-old Westport, Conn., lawyer self-insured for nearly one million dollars.

The crash, the subsequent revelations concerning Frank and his questionable financial dealings, and statements from the Civil Aeronautics Board that a bomb exploded aboard the ship near Frank's seat, made this the top story in North Carolina during 1960.

The strange crash, voted first place in a poll of Associated Press member newspapers and radio stations, nosed out by only one vote the exciting election which saw presidential candidate John F. Kennedy and gubernatorial candidate Terry Sanford carry North Carolina.

Close behind these two stories came the Negro sit-in movement born at Greensboro on Feb. 1. The movement spread through North Carolina, carried into other Southern states, and soon reached national proportions. As a result of this movement, many Tar Heel cities broke with tradition and allowed integrated lunch counter service.

Many editors observed that 1960 was the most active year for news stories in the state in memory.

Several of the stories broke late in the year, after the AP poll was taken, or else dovetailed with other stories. One such story was the appointment of Gov. Luther Hodges as secretary of commerce in President-elect Kennedy's cabinet. The story obviously tied in with election developments and drew many write-in votes.

Election stories nailed down fourth and fifth places in the poll. The two hard-fought Democratic gubernatorial primaries which Sanford won were voted fourth place and the heated presidential campaign which brought Kennedy and Vice President Richard M. Nixon to North Carolina was fifth.

The next five:

6. Hurricane Donna which did multi-million damage to eastern North Carolina in September.
7. Wide-spread snows which struck the state in March mauling hundreds of mountain residents which resulted in a gigantic rescue operation.
8. The census which showed North Carolina's population at 4,556,155.
9. The drawn-out case of textile labor leader Boyd Paton and seven others who finally went to prison on conspiracy charges stemming from an attempt to dynamite the struck Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills two years ago.
10. The upset of Duke by North Carolina in their traditional football game.

Other good stories prominently mentioned in the voting included the integration of Charlotte's public swimming pool; the marriage at Hendersonville of heiress Gable Benedict to her chauffeur, Andre Porumbanu, after a madcap trip to the Carolinas from New York; the death of the fabulous religious leader Sweet Daddy Grace; the imprisonment and release of T. Lamar Caudle, the Wadesboro lawyer who served in the Truman administration and who was charged with conspiring to help fix a tax case while an officer of the Justice Department.

The prison escape of Robert Tyson which resulted in the murder of a prison official's wife, the rape of a Negro woman, and a gigantic manhunt by National Guardsmen who finally found Tyson dead by his own hand; the retirement of two veteran congressmen, Graham Barden, chairman of the important House Labor Committee, and Carl Durham, chairman of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee; and the battle by Indian children in Harnett County to attend white schools there.

In a nutshell, here are the facts behind the stories:

1. "They've got to prove this was suicide. I'm confident this can't be established," said the lawyer representing Julian Frank's lovely 28-year-old widow. This was the crux of the strange plane crash.
2. After the crash, investigators found that Frank was covered by a million dollars in insurance. They also found he was involved in some questionable financial dealings and that he was under investigation in New York, where he had his offices, on complaints of misappropriation of funds.
3. The CAB reported its findings showed a bomb caused the crash. Whether it was suicide or a murder plot, or something unrelated to Frank, has not been established. Frank's wife, who returned to her modeling career after a miscarriage, has not collected the insurance.
4. Probably no election in history generated as much excitement and attention as the one Nov. 8. Surprisingly strong Republican sentiment left most political observers in doubt as to its outcome. Both Kennedy and Sanford won the state in close battles which produced a record turnout.
5. Kennedy received 713,136 votes to 655,420 for Nixon, a narrow margin of 58,716. Sanford defeated Republican Robert L. Gavin 735,248 to 631,975, a record turnout for the GOP. Then Gov. Hodges, who played a leading role in Kennedy's campaign, was named by the President-elect to his cabinet.
6. When the few Negro high school and college students sought service at a white lunch counter in Greensboro, Feb. 1, they had little idea of the scope of the movement which they started. Within weeks, Negroes were seeking service at segregated lunch counters throughout the nation. Then came church kneel-ins, swimming pool wade-ins and many other protests.
7. There were a few scattered trouble spots where fights broke out, but most of the demonstrations started and ended peacefully. Many of the Negroes were arrested and charged with trespassing. But meetings of merchant and civic leaders with the Negroes resulted in acceptance of lunch counter integration at many cities. This story, obviously, is not over and the social ramifications undoubtedly will be felt for a long time.
8. Terry Sanford, I. Beverly Lake, John A. Larkins Jr., and Malcolm B. Seawell were the field in the Democratic gubernatorial primary last spring. Sanford, whose only public service was one term in the State Senate but who had been a part of the political organization of the late Sen. Kerr Scott, was the high man. Still, he didn't receive a majority and was forced into a bitter runoff with Lake, former assistant state attorney general and a staunch segregationist.
9. Sanford, who campaigned on the state's moderate approach toward school integration, better teacher pay and more money for schools, won handily in an obvious endorsement of the Hodges administration. Disenchanted Lake supporters failed in an attempt to organize a write-in movement for the general election.
10. Early in the campaign, Nixon appeared in the Greensboro Coliseum. The huge enthusiastic welcome he received encouraged him to stage a spirited campaign in the traditionally Democratic South. Late in the campaign, he appeared in Charlotte and received a similar welcome. Kennedy made a three-stop aerial jaunt through North Carolina, climaxed with a major speech at Raleigh.

The appearance of the two pres-identical candidates, first time in North Carolina it occurred, plus campaigning in the state by both vice presidential candidates, various members of Kennedy's family and political leaders from both camps, brought a near fever pitch to election night.

Such issues as Kennedy's Roman Catholic religion, his stand on labor and agriculture, and the liberal vs conservative approach on many issues, turned the traditionally Democratic state into a battleground of major importance. Despite their defeat, Republicans claimed substantial gains.

The storms came on top of a severe winter and soon reports trickled out that stock was dying, people were short of food and firewood, and the situation was potentially dangerous.

Gigantic snow relief operations were put into effect. The Army sent helicopters and snow vehicles, and the state and Red Cross rushed emergency equipment and supplies to the northeastern mountain region. Hundreds of mercy flights and ground expeditions were made into areas where as much as 30 inches of snowfall had left drifts as deep as 20 to 30 feet.

The cost went into the millions and the Highway Department estimated it would take $5 million to repair road damage alone in the 11th, 13th and 14th divisions. Yet there was no loss of life.

8. A rise in population of more than 11 per cent still resulted in North Carolina losing a congressman. The 1960 census showed the population shift in the state from rural to urban areas, plus the population explosion of the major cities of Charlotte, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Durham, Asheville, and Raleigh. The final figures showed a population of 4,556,155, more than an 11 per cent increase.

9. The story of the violent Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mill strike which started in December of 1958 and the involvement of Boyd Paton continued to make news through 1960. Payton, regional director of the Textile Workers Union of America, and seven other union men were convicted during 1959 of conspiring to dynamite installations at the struck plant. Their long battle to stay execution of their sentences ended in November when the United States Supreme Court declared a second time to review the case and the eight were imprisoned.

Payton, who maintained his innocence, agreed to a lie detector test in December. New York City officers who conducted it said the results indicated that Payton was "attempting deception" in some of his answers and that the Charlotte labor leader failed the test. Payton's request for a parole was denied and he faced 14 months in prison before being eligible for another parole request.

10. For fans of the University of North Carolina football team, a disappointing season became a success with one game. The Duke-North Carolina game, long one of the nation's most colorful spectacles, was filled this year with drama and suspense.

Before the season started, North Carolina was expected to be one of the nation's powers.

Duke, heavy with sophomores, wasn't given a chance in the tough Atlantic Coast Conference. But in the crazy game of football, the situation suddenly became reversed. The Tar Heels suffered defeat after defeat, many of them humiliating. Duke, meanwhile, came up with a powerful team and a "new" passing look. When the two met, Duke was ranked among the nation's top 10 teams with a 7-1 record. North Carolina was 1-7. The week of the game, North Carolina officials stopped rumblings of unrest by giving Coach Jim Hickey a new contract as a vote of confidence. Thus was the stage set.

The game was bitter and hard-fought. Duke finally scored in the final quarter, but the excited extra point kicker missed. Then the Tar Heels found new life. They roared back, ramming down the field for a touchdown and the extra point for a 7-6 victory.

Duke, which already had won the ACC championship, the following week accepted a bid to play Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl.

Christmas Spirit Prevails In Writing To 'Dear Santa'

By PATRICIA MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

Christmas, in spite of all grown-ups do, is for children.

If you don't believe it, read some of the letters they have dropped in Santa's letter box this year.

Little Clifton Barnes of 1600 A Spruce St. writes Santa that "I would like a hopey horse and a wagon and a toy boat and an electric train and an Esso toy sirves stashed and a toy monkey and a toy clown. I am a baby, too."

In his own language, he has captured the child's Christmas.

Some of Santa's letters have been very artistically illustrated with pictures of various toys desired, and of Santa himself. Lynn Hudson of 101 S. Library St. enclosed his picture of Santa, dressed in his traditional red suit trimmed in white fur.

His letter is more conversational:

"Dear Santa Claus: How are you? Sure hope you haven't been working too hard so you can have a nice Christmas.

"I am a little boy six years old and in the first grade at Wahl-Coats School. And I am good most of the time.

"Please bring me a cowboy suit and boots, electric train, guns and a basket for my bike. And anything else that you think I might like."

Lynn tells Santa that cookies and a soft drink will be left under the Christmas tree for him.

Raymond Earl McLawhorn of 315 W. Fourth St. puts the personal touch in his letter, too. He tells Saint Nick that "I am a little boy six years old. I would like for you to bring me a bicycle, a watch and a cowboy suit. Santa, look on the table in the living room and get you a cocoa and some candy. Loving you always, Santa, Raymond Earl McLawhorn."

Jeanette Mills has injected her own personality into her letter, in which she carefully instructs Santa what her cousin wants, and tells him where both girls live!

"I want a doll baby for Xmas and a cage for my doll to ride in. O.K.? Jeanette Mills."

Then, she says her cousin Angeles K. Johnson of 507 McKinley Ave also wants a doll. "We have been good little girls, so please bring them. O.K.?"

Another youngster, Judy Elaine Kovalchick of 1408 E. Wright Rd. is more specific about her Christmas wishes.

"Dear Santa Claus: This is what I want for Christmas, I want a three-year-old doll, record player, Majorette suit." Judy has taken the capacity of older sister in stride, asking Santa to remember her sister Terry and to bring them "some presents, too."

There are some most unusual requests in Santa's mailbox. Deborah Sue Cannon of 2702 Jackson Dr. writes that "I want a Coca Cola machine." In a business like manner, she tells him "Thank you" in advance at the end of her letter.

Denyse Fornes of Rt. 3, Box 552, Greenville, is not to be left out of Santa's present giving. "I want a newborn baby doll and a baking set." Here are mother instincts.

Peg Horne of 1813 Circle Dr. obviously is interested in animals. After she requests a watch with Cinderella on it, she says, "I also would like two stuffed animals, one an owl and the other a seal, and anything else you would like to give me. Thank you. Love, Peg Horne."

One youngster explains what he wants and why he hasn't gotten it before, and qualifies his request with "I am big enough" now, in his own way he has presented a good argument.

"Dear Santa Claus, For a long time I have wanted an Indian suit but my mommie has always said I was too small—this year I am big enough and I want an Indian suit, Indian hat—building blocks, a farm set and record player. From a sweet little boy, Thank you, Waverly Raine, 1602 E. Wright Rd."

Waverly placed the "S" monogram for Santa on the outside of his note.

Here, perhaps, we have captured some of the spirit of Christmas, in the language in which it was written to "Dear Santa."

Carlos M. Lechuga made the charge Wednesday in an angry speech before the Council of the Organization of American States. Lechuga is the Cuban ambassador to the OAS.

He also said a million-dollar fund made available for Cuban refugee aid by President Eisenhower is being used to wage psychological warfare against Cuba and to "incite Cubans to leave their homes. Now the United States pretends this is an act of humanitarianism."

Property Owners Form Association

A group of Greenville property owners last night formally organized the Greenville Property Owners Association "to serve as a clearing house for information on problems of mutual interest," a spokesman said.

The organization, apparently a move to oppose local public housing connected with Greenville's redevelopment project, elected its officers and voted to submit a petition to the City Council and the Redevelopment Commission urging consideration of an alternative program.

The new association's petition will endorse consideration of the Neighborhood Conservation Program of the National Association of Realtors that provides for inspections of all property within a city to determine whether the property is substandard.

Included in the national association's program are provisions to allow property owners adequate time to repair property to bring it in line with standard requirements. If property owners do not comply with standard required improvements, the plan provides for property removal by the city at the expense of the owner.

The national association suggests such a program be spread over a five-year period.

The newly-organized group last night pointed out such a program would leave property in private hands and "the sound homes, churches, and business property would be conserved, not torn down as planned in the Shore Drive project."

A spokesman said, "This would be done without city or federal funds at the property owners' expense. There would be no mass dislocation of families and hence no need for public housing. In short, private enterprise could do the job."

Charles D. Cobb was chosen president of the new association. Other officers include Joe Goodson, vice president, and Carl Pierce, secretary-treasurer.

Jim J. Perkins was named Finance Chairman. His fellow committeemen are Hugh Winslow and Jesse Moye. Chairman of the group's bylaws committee is Carl Pierce while other members are Banfroft Mosely and P. L. Goodson Jr.

John Grier, local realtor, appeared before the group to determine whether private investors were available to finance public housing for families displaced by the proposed Shore Drive project should it materialize.

Discussion showed the group felt none would be available since the new housing could not be erected for the rentals now being charged in the area slated for redevelopment. It was further pointed out potential investors could not be certain another of the projects planned for Greenville would bypass new housing units.

An exact date for presentation of the petition to the council and commission was not disclosed. The association approved an "extensive advertising campaign" and employed Roberts and Stocks, local law firm, as legal counsel.

CAIRO (AP) — King Saud of Saudi Arabia has relieved his brother, Crown Prince Faisal, as premier and taken back the full powers of government he gave him more than two years ago.

Observers familiar with affairs in Saudi Arabia said hawk-nosed Faisal, 56, apparently antagonized too many people, especially the scores of free-spending, money-loving princes whose subsidies and salaries were cut in Faisal's regime of austerity.

Faisal also was said to have disappointed some supporters who expected him to carry out an energetic program of modernization of the political system.

Mecca Radio broadcast two decrees Wednesday by Saud, 58. The first said, "All ministers are regarded as having resigned after the resignation of the premier."

The second said Saud, "with the aid of Most High God, had taken over all Faisal's jobs himself."

Beside being premier Faisal was foreign, defense and finance minister. The radio gave no reason for the king's action.

CHICAGO (AP) — A bus loaded with Christmas shoppers was the scene of panic and bloodshed Wednesday night in a wild gunfight between two passengers. Six persons were wounded, one critically.

Police said the battle apparently stemmed from a sudden quarrel near the exit to the crowded bus on the city's west side.

Police gave this account: One man, complaining he was jostled by three others as he moved toward the exit, drew a pistol and threatened, "Either you get out my way or I'll blast you in the mouth." He then opened fire.

One of the men blocking the exit fired back. About a dozen shots raked the rear of the bus. In the melee, the man police said fired first fled after pulling an emergency exit lever. The other gunman, identified as Thurston Burgess, 22, was listed in serious condition at a hospital.

Luther Perkins, 18, one of the five passengers hit by bullets, was reported in critical condition. Two others, Otis Porch, 29, and Ernestine Russell, 16, were reported others, Otis Porch, 29, and Ernestine Russell, 16, were reported seriously wounded. Two others were less seriously hurt.

NEW YORK (AP) — A fire destroyed the old wing of the Willford Elementary School near here early today doing an estimated $85,000 in damage.

Nash County Fire Marshal Perry O'Berry theorized that a gas explosion started the fire.

Twenty pieces of fire-fighting equipment from eight volunteer units and the Rocky Mount Fire Department battled the fire through the night.

Rudolph Davis, a member of the Sharpsburg Volunteer Fire Department, was overcome by smoke and hospitalized.

The school was built in the early 1920s. Shortly after World War II, an additional wing was added. A fire wall between it and the old wing saved it.

The school was appraised at $223,900 last March with the $85,500 appraisal on the old wing, all of which was covered by insurance.

O'Berry theorized that gas leaking from a pipe which went beneath the kitchen to the auditorium exploded from the heat of the furnace.

It was the largest school fire in Nash County history and the first serious school fire since 1930.

County School Supt. L. S. Inscoe said 11 classrooms, the auditorium, lunch room and offices were destroyed.

He said plans are being made to double up classes when the school reopens after Christmas and the children also will be assigned to two other county schools.

BRITTON, S.C. (AP) — A fire in a building here early today did $100,000 in damage.

The fire started in a building housing a restaurant and a dance hall. The building was owned by the late Mrs. J. W. Williams.

The fire was caused by a gas leak from a pipe which went beneath the kitchen to the auditorium. The pipe was rusted and leaked gas which ignited.

The fire was out in about 30 minutes. The cause of the fire is being investigated.

Barry Bratler, 15, can tell you.

Barry, sleeping on the lawn of his parents home, woke at 6 a.m. to find a 2 1/2-foot copperhead curled up on his stomach. The boy knew that a move would bring a deadly strike. He waited 2 hours until the snake slithered away then shot it with a rifle lying beside him.

Quite A Year Behind Hollywood Newsbeat

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Oh, it was quite a year!

Any year is bound to bring a lion's share of news and surprises from the town called Hollywood. In 1960 it was more so. Rarely have a year's events seemed so varied.

Some news was momentous, some monumentally trivial, some sad, some amusing. As the first year of the new decade ended, it appeared that despite its business woes, Hollywood would continue to add its contribution to American culture and legend, for better or worse.

Here are the 10 stories that seemed the most newsy and/or significant to this reporter during 1960:

1. The death of Clark Gable. No movie death in recent years received such worldwide prominence. The reason was simple: Gable had been a part of everyone's life for more than 30 years.
2. The movie strikes. The already invalidated film industry seemed in grave danger of extinction when hit by strikes of writers and actors. The gentlemanly strikes, without picketing or name-calling, ended in compromise when the guilds realized the producers wouldn't give them a royalty on old films sold to TV.
3. The Desilu schism. TV's most famous team came to a personal and corporate division when Lucille Ball divorced Desi Arnaz.
4. The Monroe-Miller split. Marilyn was seldom out of the news, and her marriage to playwright Arthur Miller was rumored in danger of a backstage romance.
5. New moral attitudes. Hollywood films were bolder and franker in 1960. This brought a wave of reaction from Roman Catholic bishops and Protestants, too, with indications of rough relations ahead between the film industry and the moralists.
6. Ben-Hur wins big race. The chariot race was nothing compared to "Ben-Hur's" triumph in the academy sweepstakes: A record 11 Oscars.
7. The squared-off triangle. Debbie Reynolds wedded Harry Karl quietly. She formerly was married to singer Eddie Fisher, now husband of Elizabeth Taylor.
8. Liz's ailments. Few toothaches earned as much coverage as Liz Taylor's, which delayed filming of "Cleopatra" amid much turmoil.
9. Hollywood's runaways. The most significant business development was the rise of production overseas. Main reasons: Tax breaks for stars living abroad; subsidies and cheaper costs.
10. Million-dollar wedding. Starlet Jill St. John supplied the Cinderella tale of the year by marrying heir-speedster Lance Reventlow.

Below-Freezing Cold Here Today

Thursday was marked with cold, cold temperatures on the heels of winter's official entrance as of yesterday.

The low temperature recorded for this morning occurred at 8 a.m. and was 19 degrees, according to Vance Briley of the Greenville Utilities Plant. The temperature was slightly higher, at 22 degrees, Briley said. The recorded reading for noon today had climbed to a cool 30 degrees.

Yesterday was a little warmer, even though it was the first day of winter. The high recorded was 55 and the low was 28 degrees.

The Tar River level began to fall slightly today and was measured at 3.8 feet.

Rainfall during the past 24-hour period was .44 of an inch, Briley said.

Winds reached up to 20 miles per hour in gusts yesterday, slowing down to 12-18 about midnight and subsiding even more for today.

Hopes To Decide At Early Date On Next Steps

CARTHAGE, N.C. (AP) — Solicitor M. G. Boyette says he hopes to decide by the first of the year whether to take action on a State Bureau of Investigation report of alleged Highway Department irregularities.

The bureau was called in last month when State Republican Chairman William Cobb complained that one highway official had been "guilty of misappropriating state property" in Stanley County.

Cobb brought the charge in a letter to State Atty. Gen. Wade Branton shortly before the Nov. 8 election.

The SBI's report was turned over to Boyette, who said Wednesday he was giving it study "but haven't reached any definite conclusion."

Boyette declined to make public any portion of the 25-page SBI document.

Strikes Spread Over Austerity

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Strike paralysis threatened all Belgium today as workers in the main cities joined the spreading protest against the conservative government's austerity program.

Six policemen were injured in a clash with strikers the government said were led by Communist agitators in Antwerp. The huge port was at a standstill with 106 ships stranded in the harbor.

Thirteen leaders of the walkout were arrested.

Socialist and Communist newspapers hailed the creeping shutdown as a victory in their fight against the government's program calling for new taxes and a cut in state expenditures.
