One Survivor Remaining Aboard Broken Tanker; Search Goes On

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A destroyer sped most of the 29 survivors of the storm-broken tanker Pine Ridge toward shore today while the Coast Guard prepared another search of the angry Atlantic for eight crewmen still missing. Still aboard the bobbing stern section is Chief Engineer John Richards, 36, of Wilmington, Del. He may be joined today — if weather permits — by volunteers from the crew who would assist in salvage operations. Coast Guard planes were set to take off at dawn to search for those still missing. The commercial tug Lamberts Point stood by to take the ship into tow for Norfolk. Survivors were transferred from the aircraft carrier Valley Forge to the destroyer Conway for the run to Norfolk. The Conway is expected to arrive about 4 p. m. today. The Pine Ridge ripped apart Wednesday in 100-mile winds that churned waters 100 miles east of Cape Hatteras, N. C.—the storied graveyard of the Atlantic. Twenty-eight survivors were plucked from the tossing stern section Thursday by Navy helicopters from the Valley Forge. But Richards kept a lonely guard aboard the stern to protect his owners' rights to salvage. Eight men were missing and apparently lost, but the search went on. Among those feared drowned is the master, Capt. Clark Snyder, 44, of Havertown, Pa. Snyder is no stranger to peril at sea. He had two ships torpedoed from under him on Caribbean runs in World War II. Richards' vigil aboard the stern half of the Pine Ridge may parallel the feat of Capt. Kurt Carlson, who stayed aboard the American freighter Flying Enterprise for two weeks before it sank. Should the engineer leave the decks, the hull becomes fair salvage prize for anyone daring enough to board it. In the past two years two ships in American waters have been salvaged by wildcat crews, one not far from the stricken Pine Ridge and the other off the Louisiana coast in the Gulf of Mexico. Believed to be on the ship's crew and feared lost are: Joseph Marine of Marcus Hook, Pa., chief steward; Allen H. Branch of Baltimore, Md.; Joseph D. Courson of Nashville, Ga.; Raymond Brazner of Odenton, Md., radio operator; Harry Davis of Savannah, Ga.; Edward Gulden of Houston, Tex.; Eugene Larry of Seabrook, Tex., chief mate. When the Pine Ridge began breaking up Wednesday, distress signals summoned the Valley Forge from Florida waters. Earliest in the week the carrier fished a missile capsule out of the South Atlantic. The Valley Forge was in position to launch its first helicopter by 6:45 a. m. Thursday and completed the hazardous job by 4 p. m. One by one the helicopters hovered into position over the bobbing stern to scoop up the waiting seamen. One of the pilots, Lt. (j.g.) John D. Hausman of Monroe, Mich., said it was treacherous work, keeping the "copters" free of the whirlpash of the stern as 10-foot waves swept it rapidly up and down. Everett Bell of Jacksonville, Fla., assistant third engineer, appeared to be the only survivor seriously hurt. He had severe cuts on his right upper arm. He and several others with lesser injuries were all reported in good condition. Oiler James C. Lewis of Winston-Salem, N. C., who was on the stern of the tanker when it began to break up, said he was eating chow. "It happened so fast we thought the screw (the propeller) was off," he said. "I ran right down and got a life jacket. We got the lights on," he said. Lewis said he didn't see any crewmen on the bow before it drifted away. The injured Bell said the break-up of the tanker came after a terrific roll of the ship which tossed him against a work bench. Other than the helpless feeling that came from being tossed about in the powerless stern, the survivors said they didn't fare too badly. They were able to listen to radio rescue traffic from the Navy and Coast Guard, and there was heat, light and food. The fourth man hoisted off the tanker was Chester Reed of Corpus Christi, Tex. He said morale was "pretty good" after he saw the helicopters and all.

Christmas Baskets For Needy Being Delivered; More Donations Needed

Pitt County Welfare Department workers were still on the job this morning delivering Christmas food baskets to needy families and awaiting contributions to buy more. At 11 a. m. today, cash donations totaling $240 had been received to be converted to Christmas food and spread evenly among some 100 families. Welfare Supt. J. S. Grimes said the 100 families represented the most needy of families not included in a county-wide Christmas operation that conveyed material Christmas to hundreds of Pitt families. He reported the donations figure with hopes more contributors had not yet notified the department of their gifts. Grimes said the department converts it to baskets and begins delivery. About half the donations were made before 1 o'clock when about half the year's total $500 fund had been raised. Pitt citizens and organizations to spread Christmas among the county's needy families. Welfare employees, whose authorized holiday began yesterday at noon, remained by department telephones to receive contributions. Others were busy delivering food baskets prepared specially by local grocery stores for purchase with the donations on a cost basis. Grimes said he and some of his staff members would stay on the job until it appeared donations would cease. He said the department had a few calls this morning. More Families In addition to the persons phoning in donations, more calls were coming in as late as yesterday afternoon adding the names of needy families to the list. We must stretch what these donations are in as far as the number of families, Grimes said. The department expressed appreciation to contributors, workers, and news media for their helping us in this drive. Christmas aid to families began in December through the department. Grimes described the effort, that included gifts from individuals and organizations throughout Pitt, as "highly successful and very beneficial to hundreds of our needy families."

The current food basket drive, he explained, is to provide material Christmas for those families not embraced by the earlier organized program. The $300 in donations already received, Grimes noted, came from a wide variety of sources. Sizes of individual donations ranged from $100 to $1. Among this morning's mail donations, Grimes cited a $3 gift from a deaf man living on a pension. An attached note said: "Though I am deaf, I have heard about your call for donations for needy families in the city and county . . . I want to do my part." "You can't get around it," Grimes said, "That's real Christmas spirit."

No Pay Day For Teachers In New Orleans Schools

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Public school teachers here did not get paid today for what normally is a holiday season — 10 days off for students, Christmas pay check for teachers and administrative personnel. The students will have their holiday, but for 4,000 teachers and other personnel, caught between the federal courts and the State Legislature in the integration fight, today appears likely to be a payless day, barring a miracle. The Legislature has cut off the Orleans Parish School Board's funds because the board complied with federal court integration orders. Some hope for the board appeared Wednesday when a three-judge federal court ordered four New Orleans banks to release some $728,000 in a bond board fund that had frozen also ordered the city to pay to the board $200,000 in taxes that have been held in escrow. With appeals from the board actually in the hands of the courts, the funds being held in escrow, even if the board had been able to get the money, it would not have been enough. The Legislature, which paid November salaries for all teachers except those at the two integrated schools, would provide December payments, too. But angered by the court ruling, which also cited three top state officials for contempt of court for withdrawing the salaries at the integrated schools, legislative leaders of the Davis administration decided against introduction of resolutions to provide the pay checks.

Living Costs Hit November Peak

WASHINGTON (AP) — A jump in food prices and living costs a month before Christmas. The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today its consumer price index rose to 127.4 from 127.3 in October. In this index, 100 represents average prices for the 1947-49 period. It is unusual for food prices to rise in November. The bureau said this is the first time they have gone up in a November since 1951. Also contributing to the November rise in the index were increases in movie admission fees and in costs of hospitalization insurance. Utilities Creation Will Be Called Utilities bills will be on call during the holidays to handle emergencies but the offices in City Hall will be closed Saturday and Monday, Supt. Leonard Bloom said today. The offices, along with city offices will close at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. They will remain open for business Tuesday morning.

Mail Volume Up By 10 Percent

The increase in mail volume during this year's Christmas season has been estimated to be about 10 percent at the local post office. The increase was announced through J. Knott Proctor, postmaster. Postal officials say it is a "substantial" increase for this year. On Friday, the next to the last day for Christmas mailing, business at the post office was beginning to drop off a little and things were being cleaned up for Christmas. The post office will close at noon Saturday and remain closed through the Monday following Christmas. It was noted that packages coming into the post office tomorrow will be delivered to local citizens. J. E. H. Smith, superintendent of mail for the Greenville Post Office, said.

Assembly Bldg. May Be Started In Two Weeks

RALEIGH (AP) — Construction is expected to begin within two weeks on a new state legislative building which will radically alter the Capital Square complex in downtown Raleigh. Contracts totaling $4,401,718 were awarded Thursday on the new structure, which will be located adjacent to Capital Square straddling Halifax Street north of the Capitol. The State Legislative Building Commission delayed a decision on the type of stone to be used on the exterior. Possibilities are limestone, cast stone, granite or marble. The 1961 Legislature, which convenes Feb. 8, is expected to be the last to use the present Capitol. The new building is scheduled for completion before the 1963 Assembly gathers. Low bidder on the general contract was REA Construction Co. of Charlotte, which offered to do the job for $3,051,650. The REA bid was entered with the understanding it was for a limestone exterior. The commission said it was awarding the contract but reserved the right to decide later on what type of facing to use. The 1959 Legislature appropriated $4½ million for the modernistic structure designed by the Raleigh firm of Holloway and Reeves and New York Architect Edward Stone. The total contract figure included $185,000 for design fees, but did not include the cost of furnishing or landscaping the building or for equipment in the kitchen and dining room.

Below-Zero Readings Midwest's Big Cold Wave

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS A severe cold wave stung much of the eastern two-thirds of the country today. And more snow headed across the snow-covered northern sections from the Rockies into New England. The iciest weather in several years toppled temperatures to record lows for the date in some areas. Not much relief was in sight immediately. The Midwest, hit by a heavy snow storm earlier this week, got the zippiest weather, including a bone-chilling 24 below zero in Joliet, Ill., and -23 in International Falls, Minn. South of the bitter cold, the freezing line extended into northern Florida, the central Gulf Coast, northern Texas and Louisiana. Snow flurries peppered the Ohio Valley southward into Tennessee and northern Georgia. The cold air brought much discomfort as it swept from the highlands of the Carolinas into parts of Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama and into west-central Florida. Some southern city low marks included Tallahassee, Fla., 25; Atlanta 21; Jacksonville, Fla., 30; Tampa, Fla., 37; Mobile, Ala., 26; Miami, 48. The early winter cold zeroed across most areas of the Midwest. Below-zero marks were general from the eastern Dakotas into the upper Great Lakes region, northeast Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Indiana and northwest Ohio. In Chicago, some 40 miles northeast of Joliet, the reading was the lowest mark in line since Dec. 16, 1957. The temperature dropped to -20 at Hare International Airport, northwest of Chicago. In St. Louis, Mo., the temperature was -20 in Grantsburg, Wis., and in both Bradford, Ill., and Mason City, Iowa. Slices were cleared in the West. The mercury also dropped there, below zero in East-ern areas, but not as low as in the Midwest. It was below zero in Albany, N. Y., and Harrisburg, Pa. The -2 reading in Lansing, Mich., and -1 in Detroit were record marks for Dec. 23.

Christmas Sales Paint Rosy December Outlook

A steady stream of Christmas shoppers was still steady—maybe even steadier—today as Greenville merchants still painted the rosiest of December sales pictures. Store managers throughout the city reported sales were noted climbing during the week. Most thought today and tomorrow would be two of the biggest days for local stores. A trend towards buying medium to higher priced items was noted as shoppers in general seemed to consider quality of more importance than bargain. Many merchants said shoppers are making the price of an item a secondary consideration. Bitter cold weather that descended upon Greenville helped in an overall boost of heavier clothing sales. Along with the winter wraps, the usual gift items—men's shirts, jackets, sport coats, and trousers and women's lingerie, sweaters, jewelry, and handbags—continued to move well. Throughout the week, local stores remained open until 9 p.m. nights to allow the working force ample time to rove through the business district and select its Christmas gifts. The outlook for the 70-hour sales week—the longest of the year—seemed brighter than for any other six-day period. Usual gift items continued to move in large volumes with the last minute rush. However, appliance outlets reported a tapering off in the major appliance line. Shoppers were leaning more toward the medium and smaller appliances, television sets, hi-fi and stereo units, and transistor radios were reported the largest sellers. Early merchants had reported large sales volumes of washers, driers, and even ranges and refrigerators. Novelty gifts still moved across the counter at a good pace. A large percentage of shoppers seemed primarily interested in discovering new-looking gifts. However, the new look seemed only one of three qualifications sought by shoppers. In addition to "looking new," the items were required to be practical and "something for somebody who has almost everything." With only a day and a half remaining during the business end of Christmas, 1960, Greenville merchants sized up the situation with comments that ranged from "very optimistic" to "sales averages are going up" to "best December yet" to "We're hoping for our best December." With more cash money available to shoppers, merchants felt the extra effort would be rewarded by a six-day Christmas week would push sales during the usual high month to an all-time high.

Thieves Looted Christmas Gifts

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Thieves broke into a Salvation Army warehouse here last night and took 17 bicycles and 200 toys, all Christmas presents for underprivileged children. Salvation Army Capt. James Hips said the toys were collected over a two-month period and had been repaired by firemen. The Goldsboro News-Argus announced its reporters volunteered their free time tonight and Saturday to answer calls for more toy donations. A local trucking company also said it would make pickups.

Mercury Fell To 16 Degrees Here

Greenville got its share of low temperatures last night, getting down to the 16-degree mark, as recorded by Sherman Husted at WNCN television station near here. At the Greenville Utilities Plant, Joe Stoneham said the midnight and 4 a.m. temperatures were recorded at 19 degrees, rising very slightly to 20 degrees at 8 this morning. Thursday's low temperature, as recorded at the utilities plant, was 19 degrees, with a high of 32 degrees. Winds were blowing out of the northwest this morning from eight to twelve miles per hour.

All-Out Safety Enforcement Drive Set For Holiday Weekend

The North Carolina Highway Patrol in Pitt County will conduct an all-out safety-enforced campaign over the Christmas holidays in an effort to reduce wrecks and local accidents and arrest drivers violating the law. Cpl. J. T. Jenkins said the patrol's safety enforcement and "Smoke Out" patrol, which was started on December 1, in Pitt County, will be in effect again this weekend. He said Ptl. W. K. Chapman, Ptl. W. E. Williams, and Ptl. J. B. Surles will be assigned to the special program. Areas to be patrolled under the saturation patrol will include U.S. 264 east of Greenville to the Beaufort County line; all roads within a five mile radius of Greenville; and U.S. 264 and N.C. 43 from Ballard's Crossroads on U.S. 264 west of Greenville, to Cox Crossing east of Greenville on N.C. 43. According to Jenkins, the officers assigned to the patrol will stop a vehicle or pedestrian every 15 minutes, even if no violation is observed, and each person contacted, he added, will be given a safety leaflet. Jenkins reported that 139 drivers have been arrested over the past three weekends when the saturation and selective enforcement patrols have been in progress. He added that over 797 vehicles and over 29 pedestrians have been stopped, while the officers traveled over 5,200 miles on their assigned patrols. He explained the special program was instituted in an effort to reduce the number of accidents during the month of December—the worst month for traffic accidents in North Carolina. Troop "A" Commander, Capt. S. H. Mitchell said, in addition to the selective enforcement patrols, floodlighted check stations, "wolfpacks" and "Smoke Out" programs will be in operation. He explained that the floodlighted check stations are designed primarily to seek out the drinking driver and persons driving without operators license. He pointed out that many cars with faulty equipment are found at floodlighted check stations also. "The wolfpack," according to the captain, "will be used in areas where drunken driving is believed to persist with frequency, as well as areas that have had accident and violation-frequency rates." At least three patrol cars will operate together under the program and will check any and all dangerous moving violations, either pedestrians or drivers and arrest those who have committed the violation. "In areas which have masses of troublesome drivers and other persons congregated to drink intoxicants and engage in unlawful action," a group of patrolmen will be assigned to "Smoke Out" the violators—check all violations and arrest the person making the violation. Then the officers will remain in the area until the violator element has been dispersed, or return en masse at irregular intervals to disrupt planned violations on the highways, Cpt. Mitchell added. The officer said all leaves and holidays for Patrolmen have been cancelled and officers will be working around the clock. Cpt. Mitchell urged motorists to drive safely and cooperate with the Highway Patrol in their safety program. He added that persons making long trips should leave early and make frequent rest stops, noting that drivers who do not stop and relax are not as cautious and do not act as quickly in emergency situations.

Miss Linda Chauncey and Kide Baldree invited callers into the dining room for refreshments. The table was overlaid with a cutwork linen cloth and held an arrangement of silvered cedar, with pink poinsettias and miniature pink reindeer with pink candles.

Punch, bridal squares, salted nuts, and mints were served. Assisting in the home were Mrs. Milton Hart, Mrs. Edward Hart, Mrs. Walter Patrick, Mrs. Roger Johnson and Mrs. Joe Goolsby. Approximately 75 friends called during the afternoon.

Holiday hosiery is gossamer sheer, often seamless and without heel or toe reinforcements. This makes good fit particularly important.

The Calm And Hope Of Christmas

The running, the rushing, the fever pitch of business, the whirl of social activities, the mad pace of getting ready for Christmas will end suddenly tomorrow night. Men's minds will turn from the thoughts of Christmas with its tinsel, its twinkling lights, its gaudy wrappings.

In the place of these a stilled hush will settle over the world. Adults will contemplate the meaning of that hour 20 centuries ago when the bright star came to rest over the lowly stable in Bethlehem. Even for the youngsters whose visions tomorrow night will be of Santa, the last few minutes before bedtime will bring a reading of the Christmas Story from Luke: the birth of the Lord, the singing of Angels, the quiet vigil of lowly shepherds and the long journey of wise men.

Youngsters too will sense the change, and in their young minds and hearts they will see something brighter than the glittering tree, something more hopeful than the waiting stockings.

It is an evening with a calmness all its own that is approached by no other night in the year. The feeling of brotherhood among men steps through the hearts of all races and nestles snugly near the soul of mankind. The peace that stilled the earth on the night of Christ's birth holds sway in the minds of men.

In the stillness and meditation adults withdraw from the glitter and gaiety of the occasion as did the shepherds 2,000 years ago to contemplate that which has come to pass; that which has been made known to them. Each retreats to his own thoughts to reflect upon the birth of the Lord and its meaning for his life, his generation and the world in which he lives.

Men feel close to God in those hours, and close to His Son, the Child of the stable whose birth was attended not by kings and princes, lords and mighty warriors, but by the Angels.

The miracle of the birth of the Savior brings with it new miracles in those hallowed hours of each Christmas Eve. The haughtiness and arrogance of man is replaced by humility and genuine gratitude. The selfishness and the intolerance which are exemplified so frequently in man's actions suddenly drop away as the leaves of a tree before an unseen breeze. The tensions, the fears that fill so much of life are replaced by the calmness and hope seen in the true Spirit of Christmas.

It is our prayer that the Star of Bethlehem which guided those first humans to the manger will lead each man, each woman, each child to the fullest meaning of this Christmas Season.

Merry Christmas.

Party Time On Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

LAWYERS—The annual society party of the Robeson county Bar Association has come to be of more than local significance in North Carolina. It is unique in that it attracts more members of the Supreme Court and the Superior court benches than any other county bar meeting, and each year has an outstanding speaker.

It is recalled that a few years ago the late Judge John J. Parker, senior judge of the Fourth Circuit Federal Court, delivered an address which he later repeated to the American Bar Association in the United Nations and to other international groups, and which became an important state paper.

This year the speaker was Hon. Irving E. Carlyle of Winston-Salem, who talked on the "Lawyer's Role of Public Service." The dinner was staged at the country club in an atmosphere of mingled conviviality and serious thinking. At least 88.44 percent of the attendants were lawyers—including a flock of judges—and they understood what the man was talking about, when he said there is no real conflict between a lawyer's duty to his client and his obligation to the public good. Because his primary objective is justice.

While lawyers have had a leading role in politics and government, they have further obligations. Because the lawyer is committed to the supremacy of the law and the rule of reason, a vital part of his calling is to see that both human rights and property rights are protected. This obligation extends beyond the courtroom and judicial process, and into the realm of public relations. The lawyer learns early in his practice, said the speaker, that the freedom provided by democracy gives greed a chance to do its dirty work, therefore the lawyer must remember always that he is a guardian of liberty and a foe of justice.

JITTERY—The Christmas parties staged by the State government departments and divisions this year have all the outward appearances of good cheer normal to such occasions. At many of them is the background feeling of jitters and insecurity and uncertainty that belies the surface cheeriness. Very few of the participants in the festivities owe their appointments directly to the Governor. But the folks on the lower levels know that if the big boss who heads the department is bumped off, they are likely to be casualties, too.

So it is that many of these Christmas parties do not live up to the admonition to "let joy be unconfined." Reports from most of them indicate a restraint and a reluctance on part of many participants to be too friendly to others whom they fear may be on the way out. For that reason some of the parties lack the joyousness usually attendant at such affairs. But that is under the surface. For the record, the parties are just as free and easy as ever.

And all this week, although business is supposed to be going on as usual, letters are being answered and visitors entertained, nearly every office around Capitol Square is giving a lot of attention to Christmas, with little trees in many offices, good wishes and smiling greetings everywhere around the place.

The casual visitor would never suspect what the experienced observer can see that there is in many instances an undercurrent of concern about what the future may hold for the employees.

COPELAND—There is unavoidable speculation about the role of William Copeland as legislative counsel for Governor Terry Sanford. In three sessions of the senate and one term as member of the Advisory Budget Commission Copeland has been regarded as a high priest of the ultra conservative cult when it came to appropriating tax money.

Terry Sanford is generally regarded as a liberal in his attitude toward the spending of tax money for public services, especially education. Neither legislative counsel is completely true. Careful analysis of positions will show that both Copeland and Sanford have been mainly concerned about getting a dollar's worth of value for the dollar spent. At the same time, the Copeland appointment has occasioned some questions as to how enthusiastic he will be in promoting the Sanford spending program.

The appointment follows a pattern set some years ago for Governors naming former appropriations committee chairman to handle their legislative programs. Governor Umstead chose Frank Taylor, who had been chairman of the House appropriations committee. Governor Hodges picked John Larkins and Joe Eagles, both Senate appropriations chairmen. The idea seems to be that a former appropriations committee chairman should know how best to get appropriations bills through the committee and the Legislature—and the heart of any administration program is the proper allocation of tax collected money.

None of those who have served with William Copeland in prior sessions of the General Assembly will question his ability to put across his ideas about how tax money should be spent. He is capable in debate and skillful in diplomacy, and has the respect and confidence of his former colleagues. These are essential qualifications for his post as liaison man between the executive and legislative branches.

Here Comes Santa—

By DON SCHLIENZ

Emptiness In The House

If you have small children, you'll understand what I mean: Once you get used to them, it's awfully quiet around the house when they are gone.

Even after they have been put to bed you are mightily aware of their presence. Always always something to pick up, or you speak in hushed tones, or the phonograph or sound on the TV set is turned low. But when they are spending the night away from home there is an unfamiliar emptiness in the house.

Wednesday afternoon the Missus took our pair over to their uncle Jimmie's and aunt Thelma's farm. It was a pre-arranged deal; a sort of prolonged baby-sitting operation.

Of course the kids were delighted. . . . the boy tried to coax his mother into making it a two-night stay, which our plans didn't include at all.

The supper table (ours) seemed immoderately peaceful and orderly that evening. And when I returned from a little extra work at the office, the house seemed too big and deadly quiet. Too, it seemed odd at bedtime to omit the customary checking to see they hadn't kicked their covers off, or too much space wasn't being given to dolls or books or such, in their beds.

Breakfast was even more depressing.

All we did was eat. No babbling or feeding or distractions from two empty chairs; no discourses on what their favorite cereal would do for them, no suggestions we couldn't afford to pass up the premiums offered by cereal-manufacturers . . . pretty dull.

The radio was playing an occasional Yuletide recording, but with no young voices volunteering their opinions on what Santa was going to bring them (they have that fever), the radio might just as well have been playing marches.

Leaving for the office gave some relieve because there was ample distraction on tap for the day.

Later, returning home, it was good to encounter a more familiar atmosphere. The chattering sounded good, the whole house was filled by the returnees. . . . which is remarkable in itself, because they are very small people.

As time goes, our boy and girl haven't been with us very long; but as I told their mother, "I guess we'll just have to keep them."

What did we ever do before the children came along?

Other Editors Saying No Status In Court

(Henderson Dispatch)

Since results of lie detector tests have no official status in court, it would seem that the furor over the examination which Boyd Payton underwent last week is of itself without too much significance.

The former textile union official at first declined to submit to the test, then a few days later said he wanted it, although against the advice of his attorney. Just why he changed his mind so suddenly was not explained that we ever observed.

Some months ago Payton went to Washington and had a similar examination, and reports on the results were that his claims of innocence in the conspiracy case here, in which he was convicted and for which he was sent to prison, were substantiated.

The one in Raleigh last week, made by a reputed expert from outside the State, was unfavorable, and the examiner all but accused the prisoner of false statements, with the opinion that he appeared to be guilty of the charges against him, so far as this device could reveal.

In view of the fact that the courts do not recognize this procedure, its effect, for or against any individual, can only be psychological. If the reaction is favorable to the prisoner, he makes the most of it. If the opposite, the prosecution takes comfort in the finding.

Payton's lie test last week was decidedly to his disadvantage. His attorneys and officials of the union, therefore, denouncing the procedure. Undoubtedly they would have used it as a lever designed to spring him had it gone the other way. Little has been heard from the prosecution, other than the presumption that the conviction was correct and proper, from their viewpoint.

It is not difficult to find those who concede that the evidence produced at the trial was weak as it related to the union official. But the jury's verdict was one of guilty. That was concluded in by the State Supreme Court, and the U. S. Supreme Court declined to review the case, which was equivalent to affirming the lower judgment.

Twice Governor Hodges refused appeals for clemency for all eight of the men convicted in the conspiracy case. The State Board of Paroles refused to recommend it. And now the lie test, to which Payton submitted voluntarily and without coercion, goes against him. His attorneys, however, say they have not finished with their efforts to free him from the prison sentence. What their next move may be has not been revealed.

Transition from his former role as an executive of the textile union to that of a felon in State Prison is difficult. Adjustment to such a status would be an ordeal of the first magnitude for any individual, as it is for him. The emotional change in the life of any person is tremendous. That in itself may have been a factor in Payton's request for the test after he at first refused it.

The prisoner has powerful forces at work in his behalf. But the courts have spoken, and they have in countless other cases, and in many of which support of the character behind him has been lacking.

The lie detector examination is not infallible. Absolute accuracy is not claimed for it, although it would have been relied upon heavily had the results been all in Payton's favor. It would have been represented as substantiating his claim of innocence. Regardless of the move, however, a running fire of agitation may be expected, and other claims and arguments will most likely be heard too long hence and even after that.

Rusk Won't Be Like Sec. Dulles

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—A lot less talking a lot less traveling. Those will probably be two basic differences between the way the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles handled foreign affairs and the way Dean Rusk, who will take office as secretary next January, will do his job.

There's another: Rusk appears to be more of a team player than Dulles, who ran a one-man show.

Right at the beginning of 1953 the nation got an early insight—although this wasn't realized at the time—into how President Eisenhower's new secretary, Dulles, would operate.

Rusk, President-elect John F. Kennedy's hand-picked secretary, has already perhaps given an early insight into his ideas on running the State Department. If so, they are quite different from Dulles'.

Only six days after taking office on Jan. 21, 1953, Dulles was making a report on Eisenhower's foreign policy before it had even begun.

It set the pattern for many similar reports and public pronouncements to follow in the next six years before Dulles died May 24, 1959.

Only nine days after taking office he dashed overseas for a 10-day European survey. This set a pattern, too. Dulles made so many overseas trips he became far and away the most traveled secretary of state in history.

But this traveling brought him a lot of criticism on grounds like these:

1. That he should have spent far more time in Washington, thinking about foreign policy and listening to advisors, instead of racing around the world to attend to details and negotiations.

2. That his apparent feeling he had to handle everything personally showed little confidence in his ambassadors abroad and his staff at home. Instead of teamwork, the State Department wound up with a one-man operation.

Dulles was a dominant man, and Eisenhower relied on him tremendously. Dulles was already a national figure in the foreign field before he took office. Rusk is hardly known to the public.

Therefore, it would be unusual if Rusk attempted to start out with the same take-charge air that Dulles showed. Rusk doesn't seem to approve of traveling around anyway.

He said "too much personal travel can get to be a bad habit." On Dec. 12, when Kennedy appointed him, Rusk was asked by newsmen if he had any very early travel plans. He said no.

Nor does he seem anxious to start making foreign pronouncements about foreign policy problems in a hurry.

He told the same reporters on the same day when asked his foreign policy views: "I think it would be wiser for me not to get into specific questions on policy matters. . . at this time."

Rusk, judging from what he reportedly showed before being named secretary, doesn't minimize the role of the secretary of state in foreign policy but considers the role of the president in that field as of the first importance.

This attitude may explain in part why Kennedy picked him after looking over the field of likely prospects for the job. It seems clear from Kennedy's conduct he intends to be boss in both domestic and foreign problems.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

WITHOUT HIM — DARKNESS
"I am the light of the world." Astronomers tell us that beyond the pathway of the sun's rays, outer space is characterized by darkness of such intensity that human imagination cannot picture it. What is true of the physical world is even more true of the spiritual. Beyond those rays of revelation which God has given us by a disclosure of Himself and supremely in the ministry, death, rising, and ascension of Jesus Christ, there is impenetrable darkness.

Jesus Christ came to bring light. Jesus Christ himself was light. He was the coming into human life of those aspects of almighty God which man can understand and use. Without him all is hopeless. With him, in spite of the overwhelming challenge of human life and the immensity of that creation of which we are a part, all is hope.

We should also recall at this time of year two other things which Jesus said about himself. One was that he is the Bread of Life. He not only reveals God to the individual soul but brings nurture and sustenance.

Another thing he said about himself was that he was the Door and that by him if any man enter in he would be saved. Thus at this season of the year we are thinking about the birth of one apart from whose coming human life is dreadful to behold and hard to endure.

But with him, and in him is Light and Life.

Who Is This Person?

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The anti-Castro Cubans have been telling me for more than six months that an official of the State Department, William Arthur Montenegro, is responsible for the success of Fidel Castro.

But the State Department records do not show the employment of a William Arthur Montenegro. Is this a personality with two names? Does a person who has an effective voice in determining American policy in Latin America go by two names? Latin American Communists know of two men by the name of Montenegro, one who is actually a Communist Party member; another who was very sympathetic to the party. Both were journalists.

This is a case for Robert Kennedy, the on-coming Attorney General, a very tough "Mick" who is not likely to look on a cover-up very kindly. His book, "The Enemy Within," establishes that he regards the Department of Justice with a jaundiced eye because it has lost too many cases in the courts which adequate preparation should have won. Searching for Montenegro ought not to be difficult. No matter what name he employs, the record of how things were made easy for Castro by the government of the United States will lead directly to a case which, if properly prepared, will make previous cases look very mild, indeed.

William Arthur Montenegro under that name and under another name wrote for the "Havana Post" from 1933 to 1937. That is a good place to start if anyone needs a tip. There are articles in that newspaper which were contributed by such a person.

The State Department has a technique for covering up and for evading scandals. When a State Department official goes wrong or is caught with bloody hands, the trick is to send him to other parts of the world, far from news centers until those who are interested forget about him, get interested in something else, or die. Then the career official who went away may return to Washington.

But the Cuban story will not die down. Too many Cubans have been robbed of their homes. Too many Americans have lost their businesses. Too many Latin Americans fear the Communist menace. They are after William Arthur Montenegro, by whatever name he has gone in the State Department. They know who he is and they will not rest, no matter to what embassy in Europe, the State Department sends him.

Were there such a committee as Senator McCarran or Senator Joseph McCarthy headed, there would be an investigation, of major magnitude and it would be out in the open. Senator Fulbright is insistent that the State Department depend upon especially-trained men, career men, those who prepare themselves for the Foreign Service and serve it as a life work. Therefore, it is up to Senator Fulbright to investigate William Arthur Montenegro by whatever name he has gone in the State Department for nearly two decades. Also they would want to know precisely what incomplete educational preparation this person had for a State Department career.

How is it possible for a person to enter upon a State Department career without training, with a record of only one year in college and an incomplete pre-medical course? What goes on in that very choice department of government?

On this subject, there ought to be a public hearing and the first three men who ought to testify in public should be Robert Hill, American ambassador to Mexico; Arthur Gardner, American ambassador to Cuba; Earl E. T. Smith, American ambassador to Cuba. These men should be required to tell publicly, under oath, what their personal experience has been in the Castro matter and what their experience has been with the State Department, and what reports they sent to the Department warning of the perils in Latin America and how their warnings were ignored. It

Some More About Moonlighting

By ELMER ROESSNER

The moonlighting problem threatens to bother every city, county and state. It has already concerned New York City to the extent that police have been forbidden to accept after-hours, or "moonlighting," work.

Moonlighting is also a problem for non-governmental employers and unions. Government figures indicate that 3,500,000 persons hold two or more jobs. Thus, if moonlighting were prohibited, the unemployment problem would all but disappear.

Curiously, unions have up to this point largely fought for moonlighting. Many labor contracts expressly provide that employers may not object to work outside of regular hours as long as the extra work does not affect the full performance of the primary job. And now unions are finding that their very broad-mindedness is hurting them. A schoolteacher working behind a lunch counter evenings may be keeping a union waiter out of a job.

BLOWING OVERTIME
There's another union bind: many moonlighters will work in non-union establishments, or work below union rates. A frequent complaint is that moonlighters blow the overtime; that is, when a manufacturer needs 10 hours of production to fill schedules, moonlighters will work two hours a night, thereby depriving the regular workers of two hours of overtime at premium rates.

But cities, counties and states have an even more complicated problem with moonlighting. Many encourage it. Summer resort communities find it much cheaper to hire otherwise unemployed individuals to work part time as police, firemen or lifeguards. Even larger cities save taxes by hiring people during lunch and after quitting hours to handle traffic or relieve regulars. As a rough guess, one-third of all school bus drivers are moonlighters, even though they work in daylight.

PRO MOONLIGHTING
Governmental divisions often favor moonlighting because:

1. They operate on the principle that a man's off-time is his own, and that any attempt to regulate it would be illegal, or would make the government responsible for pay for the off hours.

2. Police, fire and other city employees need more money to meet inflated prices, and it is cheaper on taxpayers to allow them to hold off-time jobs than to pay them what they are worth.

3. Personal problems, such as operations or deaths, impose added burdens on civic employees and, unless they are permitted to moonlight, welfare agencies must help them meet expenses.

4. City employees are highly trained and taxpaying merchants would be angered if forbidden to hire trained policemen, firemen and teachers.

RYE OR BOURBON?
The reasons against moonlighting by city and state employees:

1. They would monopolize most extra jobs, since few employers would turn down, say, an electrical inspector for a part-time job. Would you dare hire a teen-ager to shovel your snow if a policeman was there looking for the job?

2. There may be conflict of interests. For example, would policemen hired for part-time jobs by a brewery enforce traffic laws against brewers' trucks? A policeman tending bar after hours may not involve conflict of interest, but it would probably stir criticism," observes Municipal Personnel Administration, newly published by the International City Managers Association.

3. Moonlighting pay can be a form of what cops call "honest graft." Instead of bribing a cop or inspector, it may be indictment-proof to hire him to check the brakes on the briber's car.

4. City employees, however honest, may be less efficient on their jobs if they have spent part of the night on other labor.

5. Moonlighting tends to tranquilize the fact that city, county and state officials are still being paid substantial wages in most jurisdictions. Even though local taxes are rising, many of these employees are still being paid jobs if they can earn in non-governmental jobs. And for those reasons, moonlighting will be a growing problem in your community and, in the end, will probably cause you to pay more taxes. The comfort: you may get more for your money.

"TWAS THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS" . . . (almost) and the busy and gaily decorated streets are lined with last minute shoppers caught up in the mad rush of Christmas gift seekers. The multi-colored lights and decorations only add to the festive feeling . . . the feeling of rushing to have a Merry Christmas.

Grace F. W. B. Announcements

Prayer for revival will be conducted at 9:00 a.m. All officers of the church and officers and teachers of the Sunday school are urged to be on time for prayer. "The Greatest Gift" will be the subject for discussion in the Sunday school at 9:45. Memory selection: "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift." (II Cor. 9:15)

Christmas Services At St. Paul's

The Nativity of Our Lord will be celebrated with two services of the Holy Communion on Christmas. The first celebration will begin at 11 p.m. on December 24. As is customary, the congregation will sing Christmas hymns and carols until 11:30. At 11:30 the Holy Communion will begin with the Ante-Communion and Sermon by the Rector, The Rev. John W. Drake. According to this arrangement, the Communion proper will be celebrated on Christmas Day beginning at midnight.

The Second Celebration of the Holy Communion will begin at 10 a.m. on Christmas Day. The Rev. Richard Ottaway will be the celebrant. The Junior Choir will provide the music for this family centered service. The families are encouraged to attend. Each child is asked to bring his most prized Christmas gift to be blessed when he comes to the Altar. (We are not collecting toys, but participating in the Birthday celebration with Birthday gifts.)

The public is cordially invited to attend these services. Private Communion will be taken to the shut-ins on Christmas Day by the Clergy.

Salvation Army Begins Yuletide Distributions

Food baskets and toys were being distributed among 212 families with well over 1,000 children by the Salvation Army in Greenville this morning, as part of their annual Christmas activities.

Preparations for their extensive Christmas projects began Dec. 5, according to Mrs. Captain Reagan, wife of the Salvation Army head.

The Salvation Army prepares the food baskets every Christmas and distributes them to the needy.

In addition to this project, the organization already has taken favors and distributed them at the Pitt County Home, along with individual fruit baskets.

The Salvation Army also has on hand favors for the population at the prison farm and plans to take fruit to them on Christmas Day when a religious service will be conducted by Captain Reagan. On Christmas Eve, favors will be taken and given out at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

This organization is one of the most active at Christmas participating in a vast program of services to the needy throughout this and other counties.

In addition to activities outside the church, The Salvation Army has had its Sunday School Christmas party for its own members, with each of them receiving a gift and a fruit bag. This past Sunday, the church held its Christmas play, directed by Mrs. Delores Faulkner. A film was shown on the birth of Christ this week for those interested.

Carole Tregoff Will Be Angel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carole Tregoff will perform in two skits at the county jail tonight—in one of them as an angel.

That will be a playlet about the Nativity, with Carole as an angel in the chorus. In the other, "Who's in the Ice House Now?" a parody on politics, she'll portray a hepcat Santa Claus helper.

Sixteen women will be staging their annual Christmas program for other inmates.

Miss Tregoff and her lover, Dr. R. Bernard Finch, 42, are charged with murder in the gun slaying of his wife, Barbara Jean, July 18, 1959. Juries failed to reach a verdict at two trials, and a third is pending.

This will be the couple's second Christmas in jail. Carole will turn 24 Christmas Day. She works as a meal server in the jail cafeteria, where she formerly was a dishwasher.

Anti-Castro Cubans insist that to understand the State Department attitude toward Castro, it is essential to have Matthews identify Montenegro. Also, Ambassador Earl E. T. Truman Says MacArthur Wanted A-Bombs

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman says that Gen. Douglas MacArthur wanted to A-bomb China and eastern Siberia during the Korean conflict. MacArthur terms Truman's assertion "completely false."

Both men are in New York. MacArthur resides here and Truman arrived Wednesday to spend the holidays with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Daniel.

An official at the hotel where the former president is staying said Truman would accept no calls until morning.

The controversy was touched off by Truman during a television interview last Saturday night in Chicago. The transcript of the interview became available Thursday.

Irv Kupcinet, a Sun-Times reporter, moderator of the program, had asked Truman if, when he was president, he had been under pressure to unleash the atomic bomb during the Korean War.

He said Truman replied: "Yes, MacArthur wanted to do just that. He wanted to bomb China and eastern Russia and everything else."

MacArthur issued a statement Thursday night denying this.

"Any statement such as that attributed to Mr. Truman that I advocated the use of atomic bombs in the Korean War is completely false," MacArthur said.

"The records are available and will show that atom bombing in the Korean War was never discussed either by my headquarters or in any communication to or from Washington."

"The allegation that I contemplated or even considered action against Siberia or areas not directly within the field of operations is equally fantastic."

"We did not need the atom bomb here any more than we did in the war against Japan," added the former supreme commander of Allied forces in the South Pacific.

Truman relieved MacArthur of his Far East post in 1951.

Truman told Kupcinet: "I recalled him (MacArthur) for disobedience of orders. He was in private contact with the Republican minority leader in the House of Representatives, Joe Martin (of Massachusetts) and had been warned that the commander in chief was still the commander in chief."

"MacArthur was just another general as far as I was concerned."

Commented MacArthur: "It is equally untrue to say I disobeyed any orders. The members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, my superiors in the conduct of the Korean War, testified under oath at the congressional hearings that there was no insubordination or disobedience of orders on my part."

MacArthur continued: "Our failure to win the Korean War was a major disaster for the free world."

"It is with deep reluctance I continue this controversial dispute of the long past when the world is now desperately beset with momentous troubles, and I do so only to prevent a complete prevarication of history designed to cover up Mr. Truman's past failures."

In the television interview, Kupcinet asked Truman if he meant MacArthur wanted to use the atomic bomb.

Truman: "Why, of course, that's the only weapon we had they would understand."

Kupcinet: "This was one of the main reasons you recalled him?"

Truman: "I recalled him for disobedience of orders."

Officers said he wrathfully crashed into the office where Miss Ellen Burn, 42, works as a bookkeeper because she quit last September as his nurse. She said he made 80 telephone calls to her about it in three days.

Cigarettes Have New Pace-Setter

NEW YORK (AP) — Pall Mall has displaced Camel as the top-selling cigarette, an industry expert reports.

Harry M. Wooten, a private consultant in the cigarette industry, writing in the Dec. 23 issue

Third Wedding Makes It Legal

LOS ANGELES (AP)—After a third ceremony, Gregory (Pappy) Boyington, World War II Marine Corps ace turned author, says his marriage to the former Dee Tatum is now legal in all 50 states.

Boyington, 48, and the television actress, 34, were married Thursday by a judge. Their previous marriages were Oct. 27, 1959, in Denver and Feb. 16, 1960, in Las Vegas, Nev.

They said they didn't want to rely on these two because the first followed Miss Tatum's quick divorce in Alabama from commercial pilot Carson Shade and the second took place before her California decree became final.

Also, Boyington's divorce from his second wife, the former Frances Baker, wasn't final until Dec. 2, 1959. Boyington, author of two books, is working on a third.

of Printers' Ink magazine, estimates

Pall Mall's 1960 sales at 67.2 billion cigarettes. Others in the top 10 were:

Camel 66.8 billion, Winston 52.4, Lucky Strike 42.5, Kent 38.5, Salem 35.1, Chesterfield 27.4, L&M 25.3, Marlboro 22.0 and Viceroy 21.5.

Wooten's yearly sales estimates have appeared in the magazine since 1941. His top 10 for 1959 were:

Camel 65.0 billion, Pall Mall 62.5, Winston 46.0, Lucky Strike 43.8, Kent 37.4, Salem 28.2, Chesterfield 27.8, L&M 25.2, Viceroy 21.5 and Marlboro 20.4.

Wooten wrote that, although there are 45 cigarettes or different types or sizes of the same brands, the first 10 sellers account for 83.8 per cent of the country's domestic consumption.

Wooten reported that cigarette consumption this year is currently estimated by government and private sources at 475.5 billion. This is a 4.8 per cent increase over last year's record output for the domestic market.

Reassured As To Nuclear Project

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — U. S. fears that Israel was trying to become the world's fifth nuclear military power were reported eased today by assurances from the government at Jerusalem. Officials here said they hoped that the assurances also will be favorably received by Arab governments. Reports of Israeli activity in the nuclear field in recent weeks have been seen as a threat to political stability in the Middle East.

The State Department officially welcomed Thursday night assurances by Premier David Ben-Gurion and Israeli Ambassador Avraham Harman that a new reactor being built in the Negev will be used entirely for peaceful scientific purposes. Some authorities said privately, however, that they are still worried about the question of what Israel will do with the plutonium which the reactor is expected to produce as a by-product of the fission of the uranium fuel it will use. Plutonium can be employed in the manufacture of atomic bombs.

The cautiously worded U. S. statement said: "It is gratifying to note that, as made public, the Israeli atomic energy program does not represent cause for special concern."

At the same time, the statement served notice that the United States will continue to do whatever it can "to insure that developing atomic energy programs everywhere will be devoted exclusively" to peaceful purposes. The Israeli project, which has caused considerable concern here, was started 18 months ago. Ben-Gurion told his Parliament Wednesday that it will be completed in three or four years. He described it as a 24,000-kilowatt atomic research reactor. By contrast, Israel has a reactor near Rehovot, constructed with U. S. help, which has a capacity of only 1,000 kilowatts.

It has been reported that France, a relative newcomer to the ranks of atomic powers, was helping Israel with the Negev installation. Some officials have speculated that Israel might turn over the plutonium by-products from the plant to France.

The other atomic powers are the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union. All have expressed concern in the past at the dangers of the spreading manufacture of atomic weapons.

One source of worry here has been that Israel had given no information at all about the Negev project to the United States, despite U. S. cooperation with Israel in the Rehovot project. The State Department asked several days ago for information on the new reactor.

County Planning Holiday Menus

Those of the population inhabiting the Pitt County Home, county jail and prison camp will be served turkey with all the trimmings at Christmas day dinner.

Miss Mary Jane Lancaster, dietitian at the county home, said people there will get barbecue in addition to their turkey. The menu also includes potato pie, coconut cake, chocolate cake, bread and tea or coffee.

At the Pitt County jail, Sheriff Ruel Tyson said turkey with all the trimmings will be served with cranberry sauce, vegetable, potato salad, dessert, candy, oranges, apples, bread and tea or coffee.

The menu fares just at little at the prison camp, where roast turkey and boiled ham will make up the principal part of the meal, with gravy, creamed potatoes, sage dressing, carrots, and peas, cranberry sauce, hot rolls, coconut pie, and coffee with cream and sugar.

Will Close Art Center Two Days

The Greenville Art Center will be closed the Monday and Tuesday following Christmas, it was announced today.

The center will remain open Saturday until 5 p.m. and will reopen at its usual time on Wednesday morning, at 10 o'clock.

Hard To Determine Celebration's Cause

By BOB THOMAS

AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — 'Twas the night before the night before Christmas, and all through the town the visitor could find no indication of what the celebration was about.

He walked along the marble-fronted buildings of Beverly Hills, their windows ablaze with sable and silver. The street lamps of Wilshire Boulevard were brightly lit with pictures of choristers, reindeer and a fat man in a chimney. Judging from these, the season might mark some pagan fete.

TV cowboys just off the range were filling their sports cars with gifts. The choice was vast. At Uncle Bernie's Toy Menagerie, parents could buy their kiddies a six-foot stuffed dinosaur for $320 or some singing toy birds for $400, including cage.

At the Gourmet, late shoppers could pick up fresh Iranian caviar at $45 the pound or a methuselah (208 oz.) of French champagne for $75. Or, for those with jaded tastes, there were baby bees, chocolate covered ants, buffalo meat, quail eggs, rattlesnake (diamond back, of course), alligator soup, fried grasshoppers, whale meat.

The visitor wandered into the drug store at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel. It was also equipped for the outpouring of dollars. Five hundred of them could buy a man's hair brush—satinwood, wild boar bristle—$450 a solid gold compact.

"We don't sell many compacts because they're too heavy," explained a salesgirl. "But we do sell some of the brushes; they're a nice gift for the man who has everything."

The visitor journeyed eastward, stopping at a wayside inn on the Sunset Strip. There he found celebrators but no hint of what they celebrated. Some gained cheer with a wassail called the Santa baby cocktail — cranberry juice and vodka.

Onward to Hollywood Boulevard he went, there to be greeted by endless repetition overhead of Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer wreathed in gold tinsel. The visitor contemplated what Dancer, Prancer and the other black-nosed veterans would say about this reindeer-come-lately.

The visitor failed in his quest until he left the brilliant lights behind and started over the Chhuenga Pass. High on a hill above the pilgrimage theater he discovered a white neon cross that gave him a hint of what the celebration was for.

Lost One Dollar, Boy Found $2,884

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Two Cub Scouts started to a lumber yard Thursday to buy material for a scouting project. On the way Robert Joe Hoffman, 8, lost his dollar bill.

He ran home, crying, and told his mother. She told him to go back and look for the money.

Presently Robert and his pal, Dennis Brown, also 8, returned with not only the dollar bill but a satchel containing $2,884.

"We found it in the gutter," Robert told his mother.

A policeman ascertained that it belonged to Phillip A. Dubin, a cafe owner. He said he apparently had left the money on a curb while straightening his car's floor mat before driving to a bank.

Dubin promised the Cubs a nice Christmas present for their good deed.

Favorites won 185 of the 540 races at Yonkers Raceway during the spring harness meeting, for an average of 34.3 per cent.

Third Title Fight Set For March 20

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson today was made an early line 3-1 favorite to beat Ingemar Johansson in their third title fight at the Miami Beach Convention Hall March 20.

This should bring a big smile to Ingo's face, since the betting choice in this rivalry has been knocked off twice.

Patterson was an almost prohibitive 5-1 favorite to win the first fight June 26, 1959, at Yankee Stadium. The big Swede, then unbeaten, blitzed Patterson on a seven-knockout, third-round technical knockout.

A year later, June 20, 1960, at the Polo Grounds, Johansson was the 3-2 favorite. Patterson knocked Ingo unconscious with a jolting left hook to the jaw.

Johansson already has expressed confidence in his ability to regain the crown. He even told Bill Pugazy of the promoting Feature Sports, Inc., to line up "a top contender" for another fight this year in the U. S.

The site and the date for the rubber match was announced Thursday at news conferences in both New York and Miami.

In New York, Jack Pugazy, uncle of Bill and managing director of FSI, said William MacDonald, prominent Miami Beach sportsman, had offered a "substantial guarantee." No figure was announced, but it was understood to be between $450,000 and $500,000.

Convention Hall can seat 18,000. Jack Pugazy said tickets would be scaled from $20 to $100, making for $1 million at capacity. He said he would settle for $750,000.

The big money, however, will come from the ancillary rights including closed circuit television into theaters and arenas, movies and radio.

With the fight at Miami Beach, the closed circuit can be piped into the rich New York and Los Angeles markets.

The metropolitan New York area was blacked out of the theater-TV the last two times, yet the ancillary rights amounted to more than three times the live gate of $21,561. The entire receipts for the second fight came to more than $3,500,000.

MacDonald, at the Miami news conference, said he thinks "this will be the best run championship fight in the history of boxing. We have facilities and the organization will know how to handle it." He said one Miami Beach man already has ordered $10,000 worth of tickets.

With the fight indoors, the promoters won't have to worry about the weather and postponement of complicated network hookups for the television.

Big Four Idle Until Dixie Classic Time

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Atlantic Coast Conference teams bowed out of the basketball picture for the Christmas holidays with South Carolina's 106-75 loss to Virginia Tech Thursday night.

South Carolina will be the first conference team to swing into action again after the layoff. The Gamecocks take part in the Gulf State Classic at Shreveport, La., opening next Wednesday.

The next day, the Dixie Classic opens at Raleigh with five ACC teams and three non-conference teams involved. And in Richmond, Va., the Richmond Invitational opens with Virginia taking part.

VPI of the Southern Conference crushed South Carolina with hot outside shooting and a zone defense. The Gamecocks now have a 3-3 over-all record.

VPI grabbed the lead for good in the early minutes, although the Gobblers didn't have the game in the bag until making the change from a man-to-man to a zone defense at the start of the second half.

The Gobblers led 46-38 at the half. Chris Smith led VPI with 28 points.

Art Whisnant led South Carolina with 15 points, and four other Gamecock players scored in two figures. Scott Ward had 13, Clyde Cronin and Bob Robinson 12 each, and Ron Johnson 11.

South Carolina faces Louisiana Tech in the first round of the Gulf State Classic. In other games, Mississippi meets Georgetown DC, Northwestern faces Middle Tennessee, and Ceneyan meets Texas Western.

In the first round of the Dixie Classic, North Carolina collides with Maryland. N.C. State faces Villanova. Wake Forest takes on Marquette, and Duke clashes with Wyoming.

Clemson also gets back into action next Wednesday, meeting Texas at Houston.

In the Richmond tournament, Virginia plays William and Mary of the Southern Conference in the first round.

Passing Vs. Running In Packer - Eagle Title Game

By GEORGE ESPER
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Green Bay Packers will pit powerful runners Jim Taylor and Paul Hornung against the passing of quarterback Norm Van Brocklin of the Philadelphia Eagles in Monday's National Football League championship game.

A sellout crowd of some 67,000 will watch the contest in Franklin Field with thousands of others looking in on television. The kickoff is 12 noon, EST.

It could be the last game for the 34-year-old Van Brocklin and also Eagles' coach Buck Shaw, 61, both of whom have announced their intention to retire.

Ironically, both Van Brocklin, a 12-year NFL veteran, and Shaw, who has been coaching for nearly 40 years, came out of retirement to join the Eagles in 1958 and guide them from a last place finish that year to the Eastern Conference crown this season.

Green Bay has established an early 6-5 favorite on the basis of a solid line and the running of Taylor, a 215-pound fullback from LSU who finished second in rushing in the NFL, and Hornung, also a passing and place-kicking threat who finished seventh in rushing and set a new NFL scoring record. But some observers feel it's a tossup and while others favor the Eagles because of Van Brocklin's precision passing.

Shaw is hoping for a dry field because he feels a muddy or soggy field would be advantageous to the Packers.

In leading the Packers to their first western conference title since 1944, Taylor ground out 1,101 yards while Hornung, the 215-pound triple-threat halfback from Notre Dame, picked up 671. Hornung set the new league scoring record with 176 points on 15 touchdowns, 15 field goals and 41 conversions, surpassing the old mark of 138 set by Don Hutson of Green Bay in 1942.

Van Brocklin is virtually the Eagles' entire offensive attack. The former Oregon great who played in four championship games during his nine seasons with the Los Angeles Rams finished second in the league in touchdowns passes (24), total yards gained (2,471) and average gain (8.70 on 153 completions in 284 attempts).

Both teams have been practicing all week but have been hampered by snow, rain and cold.

Philadelphia and Green Bay did not meet each other this year. But in previous games, the Packers hold a 13-1 edge. The last time the two teams met was in 1958 with Green Bay winning 38-35.

This will be the first meeting between the two clubs for the title. Green Bay last won the NFL championship in 1944 by defeating New York 14-7. The Eagles did it last in 1949 with a 14-0 victory over Los Angeles.

Honolulu Set To Play Baseball

HONOLULU (AP) — Pacific Coast League officials maintained today that Honolulu was all set for the 1961 baseball season but there were still some unresolved technicalities involving Honolulu Stadium, the ball park the new club hopes to use.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Harold Y. Shintaku advised regents of the University of Hawaii Thursday to request a circuit court decision on a proposed stock transfer which would turn operating control of the stadium from the regents to a group of minority stockholders.

Chinn Ho, a Honolulu financier group of minority stockholders.

Chinn Ho, a Honolulu financier who is leading the minority group's bid for control of the stadium, said, "They're just passing the buck."

Regents already have approved trading their majority share of stock for land. Stadium stockholders also have approved the swap.

Shintaku's advice was interpreted simply as legal protection for the university.

In Salt Lake City, Nick Morgan Jr., owner of the Honolulu franchise, said a delay on the stadium question would make it "very difficult to commence operations in the PCL on the opening date," next April 21.

LISBON, Portugal (AP)—About 1,000 Portuguese poor people—over 40 per cent of them children—received Christmas gifts Thursday from Americans. Several trucks distributed hundreds of hampers of candy, toys, wheat flour and warm clothing to needy families.

In six years at West Virginia Tech, Basketball Coach Neal Baisi has compiled a record of 143 victories and 31 defeats.

Alumni Game

AYDEN — The Ayden High School Student Council and Athletic Association will stage a basketball game here Monday night, December 26th, pitting the varsity against a club made up of alumni.

Starting time for the Alumni-Varsity match is 8:00. A small admission will be charged.

The alumni, coached by Turner Thompson, will feature seven former All-County stars. They are: Tod Itrell, Thomas Heath, Lindy Dunn, Bert Tripp, Ham Lang, Leslie Stocks, and Mac Whitehurst.

Others playing with the alumni will be Clarence Mills, Willis Manning, Bobby Bateman, Kenny Harris, and Ikie Balder.

Coach Stuart Tripp's varsity has won five of its first six starts. Center Ted Norris, forward William Edwards, and guard Tommy Dunn have been the big point-makers for Ayden. Starting with this trial will be Celm McGilgohorn and Dinky Mills.

A collection of former cheerleaders, consisting of Patti McKay, Carolyn Turnage, Dawn Rouse, Brenda Davis, Gloria Crawley, Francis Booth and Kay Currie will also take part in the Monday night attraction.

Other Ayden alumni interested in joining forces with Thompson's crew are asked to contact either Thompson or Mickey Stocks.

Ohio State Rips Detroit, 84-73

By JACK CLARY
Associated Press Sports Writer
This Ohio State team is tough, really tough. Not only do the Buckeyes win with finesse and power, but they have the brain cells going 24 hours a day, too.

Ohio State, currently the nation's top-ranked college basketball team, beat highly-touted and ambitious Detroit Thursday night 84-73. Big thanks goes to a successfully executed plan by Coach Fred Taylor and player John Havlicek.

Taylor said he knew that Dave Debusschere, Detroit's big scorer, had been under the weather and was seeing a doctor.

"This confirmed what our scout Frank Trull told us, that he (Debusschere) had not been working hard for his shots," Taylor said. "We figured to force him far out on the floor and make him shoot long shots. In the second half he got only six shots off Havlicek and didn't make any."

In fact, Debusschere got only 14 points, 10 early in the game, and the Titans simply couldn't match the overall fire power of All America Jerry Lucas & Co.

St. John's, which could possibly meet the Buckeyes next week in New York's Holiday Festival, beat Gonzaga 97-89 Thursday night. Both the Redmen (No. 6) and Ohio State have 6-0 records.

St. John's must beat scrappy Providence, and Ohio State has to get by Seton Hall to set up a semifinal round pairing between the two. The winner is the most likely tournament champion.

Tom Kieffer's crucial points behind helped St. Louis beat Kentucky 74-72 in overtime and win the Wildcat invitational tournament. California took third place, beating Illinois 72-54.

Elsewhere Utah used reserves most of the second half and still walloped Los Angeles State 105-76. Kansas won over San Francisco 60-43. Brigham Young defeated Kent State (Ohio) 66-51. Michigan State beat Iowa State 92-81. Virginia Tech ran over South Carolina 106-75. Oklahoma conquered Texas Tech 75-56, and NYU squeaked past Long Island U.

64-62. Arkansas defeated Tennessee 82-76 and Texas edged Alabama 79-78 to complete a four-game sweep of the Aluminum Bowl by the two Southwest Conference schools over the two representatives from the Southeastern Conference.

Lucas had his best scoring burst of the season, 30 points, and the Bucks got 18 from Mel Nowell and from Larry Sigfried. A 14-10 rampage by Ohio State late in the first half gave it a 40-34 advantage, and another 8-0 spurt as the second half began made it 50-38, killing Detroit's chances. Charley North's 25 points paced the Titans (5-2).

Average Declines, Wins Slug Title

CINCINNATI (AP)—Frank Robinson's batting average and home run output declined in 1960 but the Cincinnati Reds' outfielder still won the National League slugging championship, official averages confirmed today.

Robinson came up with a .505 slugging percentage with 276 total bases in 464 times at bat.

However, his batting average was only .297 compared with .311 in 1959. He had 31 home runs in 1960 and 36 in 1959.

Robinson succeeded Milwaukee's Hank Aaron as the slugging champion. Aaron finished second during the past season with a mark of .566.

Gamecock Wins Blocking Award

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — "As every play started, he had a key block. It was to protect our quarterback. No one ever got to our quarterback."

This description from University of South Carolina Athletic Director Warren Giese sums up the blocking ability of the 1960 Jacobs Blocking Trophy winner in South Carolina — guard Jake Bodkin.

Bodkin was named the winner of the annual award as the result of a poll conducted by the South Carolina Association of Sports-writers.

Executive Secretary Bill Rone of the association made the announcement here Friday. Bodkin will be honored at the Columbia Touchdown Club Jamboree in January.

North Has Edge In Kicking Game

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—If kicking Paul (Bear) Bryant, who with Darrell Royal of Texas is in charge of the South squad, named his offensive team today, Howard Dyer of VMI will be at quarterback. Bud Whitehead of Florida State and Don Kern of VMI at the halves, and Bobby Way of Vanderbilt at full. Gerald Burch of Georgia Tech and John Schroeder of North Carolina will be at the ends; Charles Lanning and John O'Day, both of Miami, at the tackles; Alvin Dalton of SMU and Jim Windham of Houston at the guards; and Bob Barbieri of George Washington at center.

The average yearly income of a veterinarian is estimated at $10,000 a year.

"Last year we couldn't find a placekicker until the final day of practice," says Dale Hall of Army, co-coach of the North-easterns with Bump Elliott of Michigan. "This year we have three fine kickers in Mike Stock of Northwestern, Henry Opperman of Penn State and Army's Tof Blanda.

"Stock probably will get the call when needed, with Ike Grimley of Michigan State doing the punting. Bill Brown of Illinois also can punt them a mile."

Va. Tech Still Team To Beat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Virginia Tech's Gobblers have finished off Southern Conference basketball battling until after Christmas, and they continue to look like the team to beat for the title.

The Gobblers brought an end to cage activity by league quintets by walloping South Carolina's Gamecocks of the Atlantic Coast Conference 106-75 Thursday night at Salem, Va.

Strangely enough, Tech was the last conference team to see action before Christmas, and the Gobblers will be the last to return. Their next game isn't until Jan. 3—a league tussle with The Citadel's Bulldogs.

The eight other circuit clubs get back into the swing of things next week — all on Thursday, to be exact. And all but one will be playing in tournaments.

Richmond, Virginia Military and William and Mary will play in the Richmond Invitational. Richmond meets VMI and W&M faces Virginia of the ACC in the opening round games Thursday night.

The Citadel and Furman will be playing in the Foinsettia Invitational. West Virginia will be in action in the Sugar Bowl Tournament and Davidson will compete in the Laurel Invitational.

Nab Ayden Man At Still Site After Foot Race

AYDEN—A man was taken into custody at a distillery site yesterday afternoon after being arrested earlier this week on charges of receiving stolen sugar.

Chief ABC Officer J. M. Ward identified the man as George Burney, 31-year-old Negro of 608 S. Pitt St., Ayden.

He said Burney was arrested by ABC Officers H. B. Lilly, W. M. Taylor and himself after a short footrace.

Following yesterday's arrest, Burney was charged with manufacturing non-tax-paid whiskey for purpose of sale. He was placed in Ayden jail under $700 bond.

Ward said the officers broke up a still including two 55-gallon doublers, a 60-gallon drum boiler, six 300 gallon mash boxes containing 600 gallons of mash.

They also destroyed 40-gallons of freshly made spirits, according to the officer.

Also included in the equipment was a 100-gallon cooling box with radiator condenser and a 100-gallon pre-heater box.

The still was in operation at the time of the raid. It was located about two miles southwest of Ayden near the old Snow Hill highway.

Officers used dynamite to blow up the steam distillery which was fired with bottled gas.

Ward said Burney had been arrested only last Tuesday on a charge of receiving stolen goods. Involved was a quantity of sugar reported missing from Lutz and Schramm Pickle plant in Ayden.

Ward reported that two 100-pound bags of sugar were found when officers searched the home of Thomas Dixon, 36-year-old Negro, of Ayden. Officers charged him with receiving stolen goods and possession on non-tax-paid liquor.

Further investigation implicated Roy Lee Quinley, 24, Lloyd Barnes, 31 and James Roundtree, 21. All are of Ayden and each was charged with larceny and receiving stolen goods.

Burney was also arrested with this group and charged with receiving stolen goods.

Bond for each was set at $200. Participating in the investigation of the larceny case were Ayden Chief W. D. Brooks, Ayden officers James Ross and Herbert Gardner, Constable Joel Wingate, Deputy Ralph Tyson and ABC Officer H. B. Lilly.

Trial in the larceny and receiving cases was set for Dec. 28 in Ayden court.

December Marriages Definitely Increasing

By ROSALIE MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

June is usually thought of as the month for brides. Christmas or December marriages are replacing June brides in numbers. Here in Pitt County, there are frequently, more marriage licenses issued in December than in June. In 1958, 55 licenses were issued for the month of June and in December, the number was 60.

For 1959, June had a total of 60 and December 62. This year, there were 70 in June and to date, December has 41.

"Marriage licenses issued and weddings in December have definitely increased over the number for June since I have been here," states Mrs. Blair Wheless, register of deeds for Pitt County.

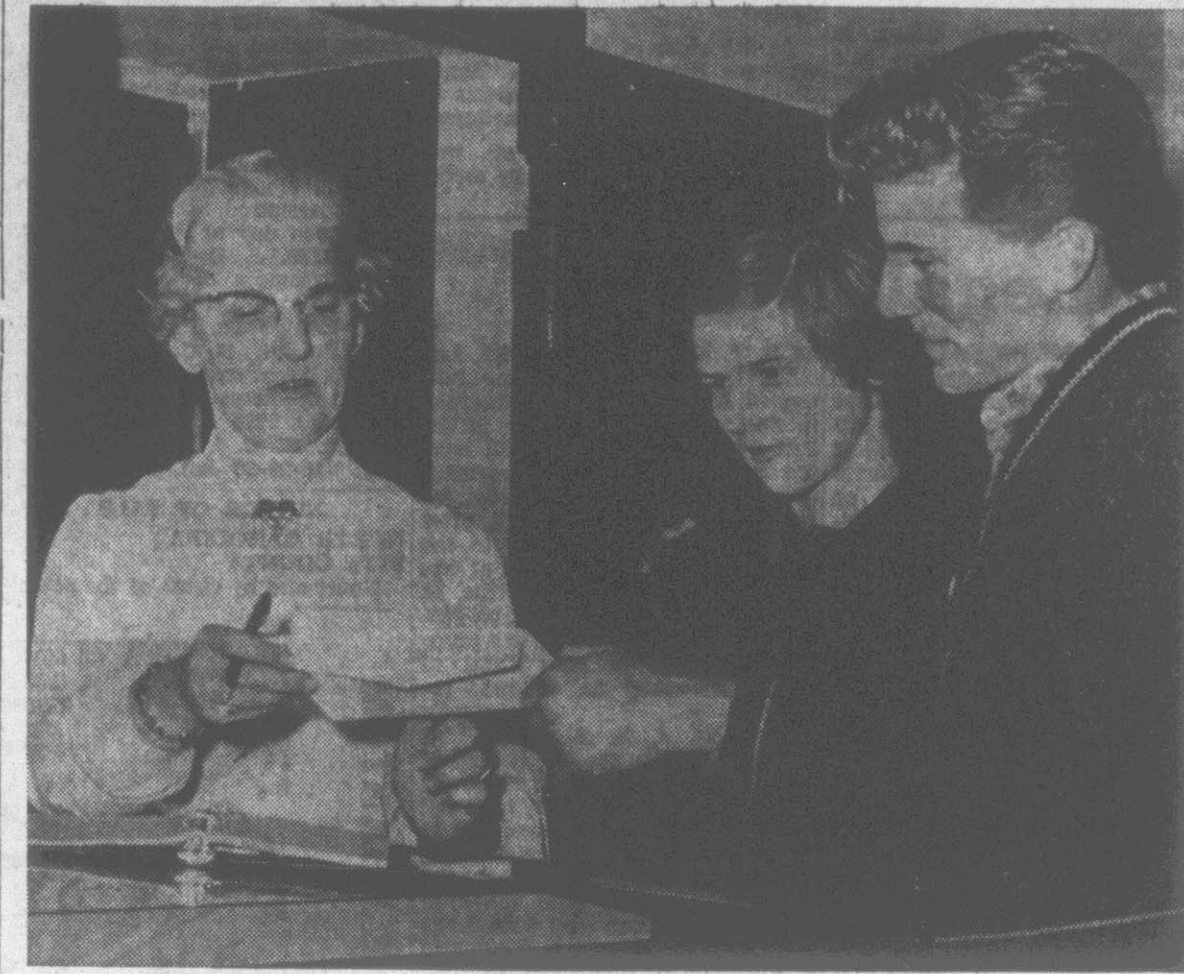

"The couples that come in during this holiday season seem to be happier and more excited about their wedding plans than they are during the other months," noted Mrs. Wheless.

One of the advantages of a wedding in late December is that the college students are home on vacation, local schools are closed and some of the men in service receive leaves for the holidays.

A disadvantage for that particular time is — that Christmas is considered a time for families.

Christmas means different things to different people. Christmas seasons of the future will have a

OPEN
 Sunday, December 25, until 1 p.m., and all day Monday December 26.

At Last Truly Free, He Heads For Family Reunion In Houston

RALEIGH (AP) — John W. McHargue was head for a Christmas reunion with his family in Houston, Tex., today, a truly free man for the first time in many years.

McHargue escaped from a North Carolina prison camp in 1951, went to Texas where he lived a model life, married and began buying a home.

His world exploded last Friday night when a fingerprint check after a traffic violation in Houston revealed he was a wanted man.

After waiving extradition and saying he would face whatever he had to, he came to North Carolina. "I don't guess I'll be able to enjoy Christmas with my kids now," said the 36-year-old man.

Tar Heel Gov. Luther H. Hodges however, had an unexpected Christmas gift in the form of a commutation. After studying Paroles Board records of McHargue's solid citizenship, Hodges freed him by commuting the 10-12 year sentence to time served.

At McHargue's home in Houston, his stepdaughter, Kay, 14, said:

"I think it's the most wonderful thing that ever happened. He's just like my real daddy—he's been wonderful to me."

Kay said her mother left for a beauty shop to have her hair set as soon as she heard her husband was on his way home.

Later Mrs. McHargue said her husband had telephoned her from the prison.

"It's the nicest Christmas gift anyone could have given me," she said.

"I just didn't realize people could be so wonderful. I'm so happy, but I want to take time to thank everyone who helped us so much when we needed it the most."

"They have helped make this the happiest Christmas we'll ever have."

In Houston, McHargue has worked for several food stores. His latest employer, Felix Muscasey, said:

"I would be glad to take him back. He was a hard worker and did a good job."

McHargue entered prison in 1946 after he held up a tall driver. Records show he was a model prisoner and was made a honor guard at the State Penitentiary at Raleigh. One day in 1951 he escaped.

"I was a trusy," McHargue related, "driving a milk truck. One day I just walked off. I came to Houston and got a job."

Under the name of James Paul Connor, McHargue succeeded in living within the law. "I've spent a thousand sleepless nights wondering when I'd be found out," he said.

He married his wife, Sue, in 1958. She had two children by a previous marriage.

City Police Open New Club House With Party

Members of the Greenville Police Department celebrated a long-awaited occasion last night—the opening of the department's new club house—with a Christmas supper, including barbecue with all the trimmings, and a Christmas tree.

In addition to the members of the department, guests included the officers' wives, city department heads and members of the City Council.

Police Chief S. G. Gibbs, in commenting on the building, said members of the department had been working on the club house for about two years. He commented that most of the work was done by officers on their off-duty time.

The Chief expressed his thanks "to all our many friends who have contributed to it" and said "without their help it could not have been done."

Both Mayor S. E. West and City Manager L. P. Bloxam commented that the building is an asset to the community and expressed their pleasure in the completion of the structure. The building is located behind Greenwood Cemetery at the Department's pistol range.

At the close of the supper, City Manager Bloxam acted as "Santa Claus" and distributed presents to each member of the department.

A special gift, a tool set, was presented to Chief Gibbs by members of the department.

Pilot Ejected At Low Altitude

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — A jet pilot staged a dramatic escape from his falling craft Thursday in full view of several Marines driving home for lunch.

The motorist was stopped by a red warning light at the intersection of a main highway boulevard and a runway at this Marine Air Station.

Two planes were taking off from the same runway. The first gained altitude with no difficulty, but the second wobbled and rolled at about 1,500 feet.

The pilot, Lt. Col. William D. Patterson, 39, ejected himself from the F4D Skyray jet and parachuted to safety about 100 yards away. The jet hurtled into Slocomb Creek about 200 yards across the highway.

Greenville Firemen were called to the Pitt FCX building at 7:14 a.m. today when Box 128 at the intersection of Dickinson and Line Ave. was turned in.

No damage was reported. Last night, firemen responded to Box 226 at the intersection of South Pitt and Brown Sts. and found a light fixture in a house at 1718 South Pitt St. had been short circuited.

Firemen said no damage resulted in the 8:20 p.m. fire. At 7:40 a.m. yesterday, fire units were sent to C. Heber Forbes store in the 400 Block of Evans St. when a lighting fixture shorted out there.

Grifton Residence Damaged By Blaze

GRIFTON—Fire of an unknown origin did an estimated $4,000 to $5,000 damage to the home of J. R. Edmondson, located at 308 Saint David St., here early Thursday afternoon.
Fire Chief Wilbur Murphy said the fire was confined to the upper story of the two-floor brick home, which was fairly new. Most of the furniture and belongings of the second floor were damaged, though furniture of the first floor was saved from burning.
The only damage to the downstairs was that caused by water, Chief Murphy said.
No one was injured during the fire, he added. Both of Grifton's fire trucks answered the call which came about 2:15 p.m.
Chief Murphy noted that firemen "did a good job" and managed to extinguish the fire in time to save the roof of the home, which never fell in, he said.

Plan Christmas For Hospital Patients

Patrons and staff members of Ed cherry nut salad on lettuce, fruit cake and rolls, as the regular diet. For patients on soft diets, there will be no salad, but cranberry sauce instead and cherry jello cubes with whipped cream. Sliced bread is always served at meals, Mrs. Gladson said. Mrs. Harriett Page is dietitian.
The Service League has hung Christmas bells on the patients' doors and has placed decorations in the lobbies of the hospital. They also decorated the dining room for the nurses. Members, in addition, have bagged fruit and nuts for employees.
On the pediatrics floor, the Girl Scouts have decorated trees, and on the first floor, one of the local Catholic Churches has brought bags for the patients here.
Large, attractive paper wreaths have been placed on different halls, Mrs. Gladson said, and there is a large decorated tree in the main lobby downstairs.

Each Christmastide Their Home Delights The Eye

LAMP POST . . . is even decorated for Christmas Holidays along with traditional door spray at the Bunting home.

By ANNE KEZIAH
Reflector Staff Writer

For the past several years the J.A. Buntings have had one of the outstandingly decorated homes in Greenville.

Mrs. Bunting uses a color scheme of silver, pink, gold and white, which blends with the decor of her home. Mrs. Bunting stated, "I still think red and green are Christmas and I used them in decorating my den."

In the entrance hall, a gold tinsel tree with pink angel lights grace the top of a marble top table. For an added touch, Mrs. Bunting uses two pink reindeer on one end of the table.

In the living room the center of attraction is a large white and gold tree centering the bow window. Decorations on the tree are crystal prisms with styrofoam balls and bells adorned with pink and gold sequins and beads. The tree is spotlighted for effect. Framing the bow window are crystal twinkle lights that go on and off alternately.

Pink feather angels are used on the living room mantle around which Mrs. Bunting works other decorations in contrasting colors.

Mrs. Bunting said, "I don't have a certain theme I use. I make up ideas as I go along. I try to always use a Madonna and a bible in my Christmas decorations."

In the dining room the oval table is overlaid with a cloth of pink with appliques of silver sequins. Atop the table is a silver tinsel tree.

Mrs. Bunting said this is the first year "I have used silver, before I used pink and gold, and white and gold alternating from year to year."

In years past Mrs. Bunting had used a sleigh filled with gaily wrapped gifts in front of the dining room window. One year humorous incident happened to Mrs. Bunting. Warren Gaylord, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gaylord Jr., who live across from the Buntings, looked at the sleigh in the Bunting window and, noticing that the packages were still in the sleigh after Christmas, promptly told his mother that Mrs. Bunting hadn't given her Christmas presents away. Mrs. Bunting said that in the future "I always made sure to take packages out of the sleigh on Christmas eve."

Enhancing the den is a tremendous fireplace of slumbrick extending the length of the room. There are three staggered shelves on the fireplace on which Mrs. Bunting uses arrangements of artificial greens and red candles. On a desk she uses greenery with cone shaped Santa candles.

Mrs. Bunting said "I usually let my 10-year-old niece Susan Hice, decorate the tree in the den when she comes over to visit."

Mrs. Bunting carries her color scheme out in wrapping gifts using gold, pink and silver metallic paper with contrasting ribbon.

Mrs. Bunting stated that she had been using these same decorations since they had moved in their Brookgreen home. "Every year I add something extra to my decorations," she said. This year "I added the silver tinsel tree in the dining room and the gold tinsel tree in the entrance hall."

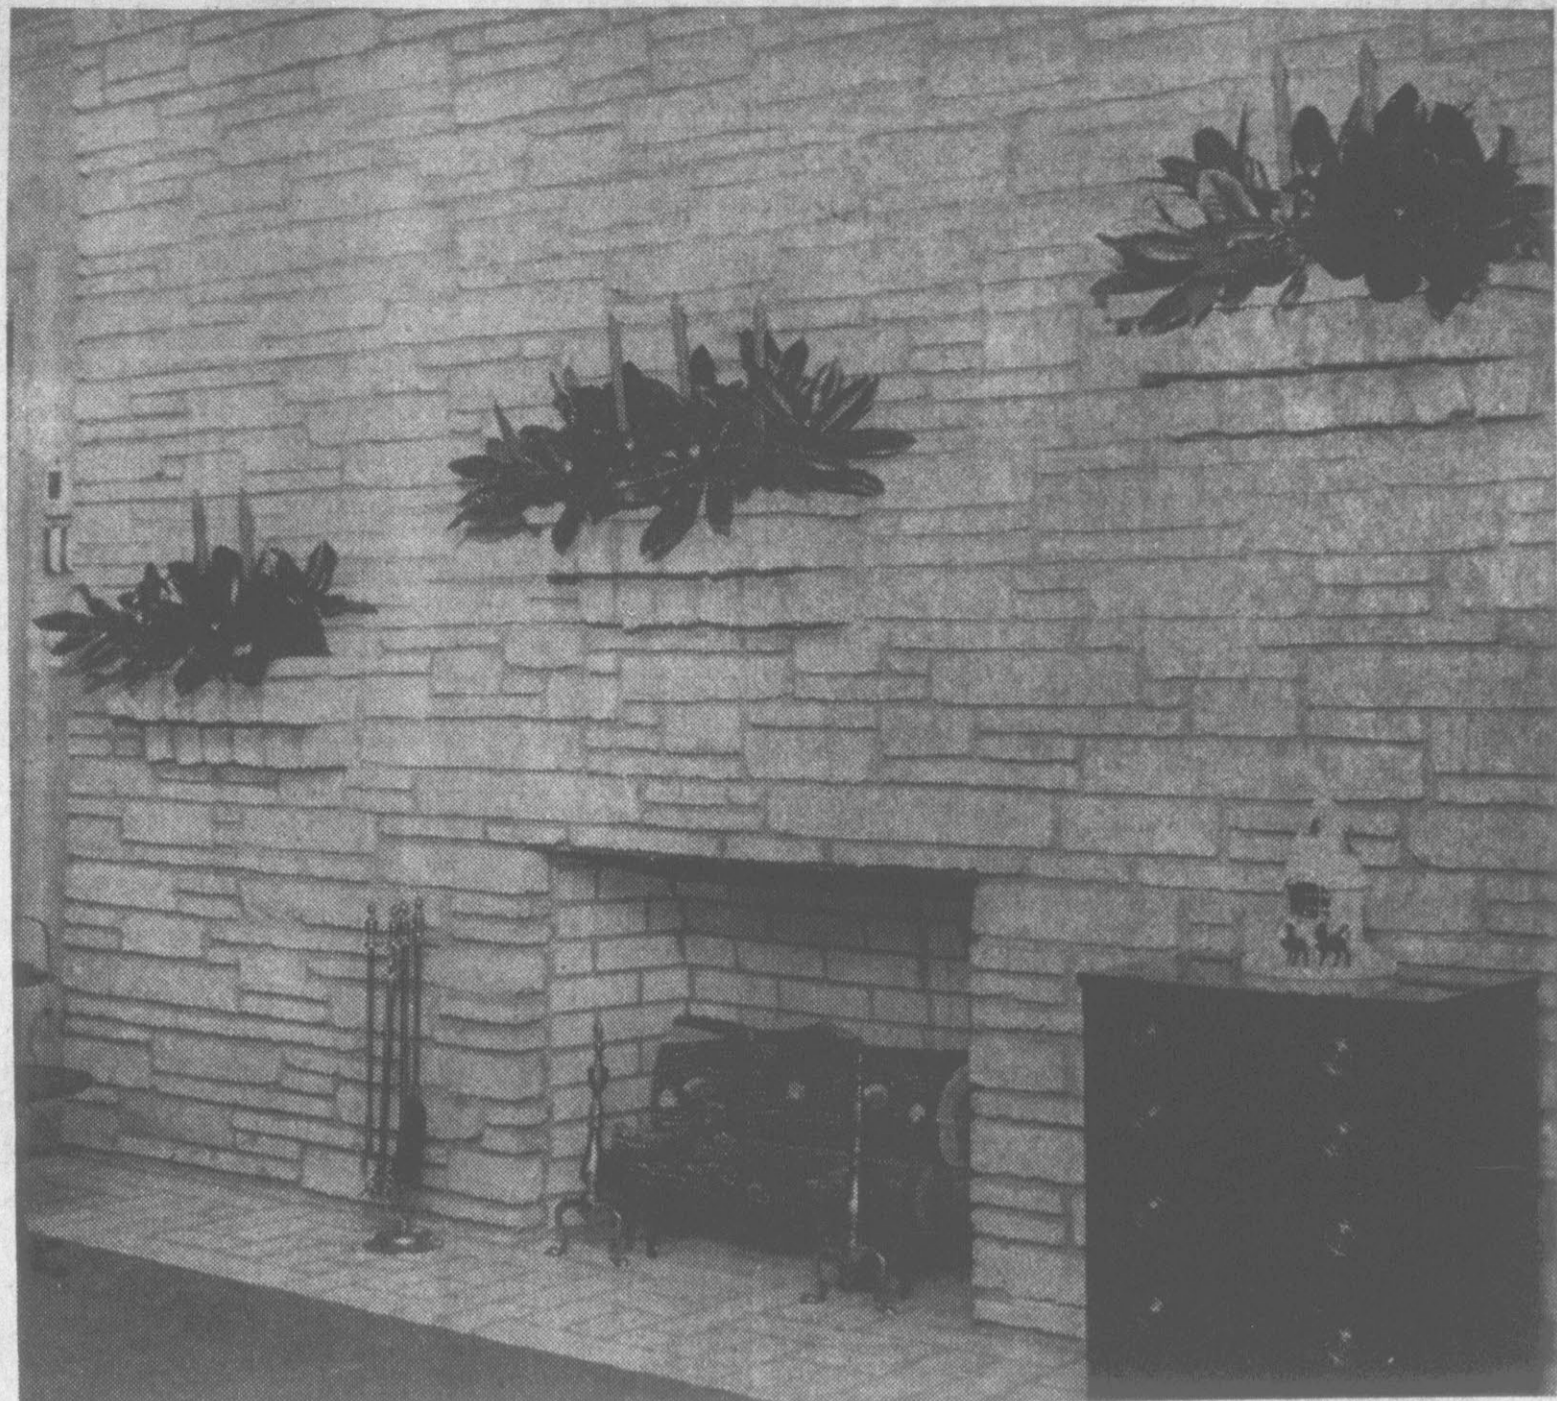

Mrs. Bunting sets up her decorations a week before Christmas and leaves them up until the last of December. The Buntings enjoy sharing their Christmas array with others.

Paralyzed, They Plan Yule Vows

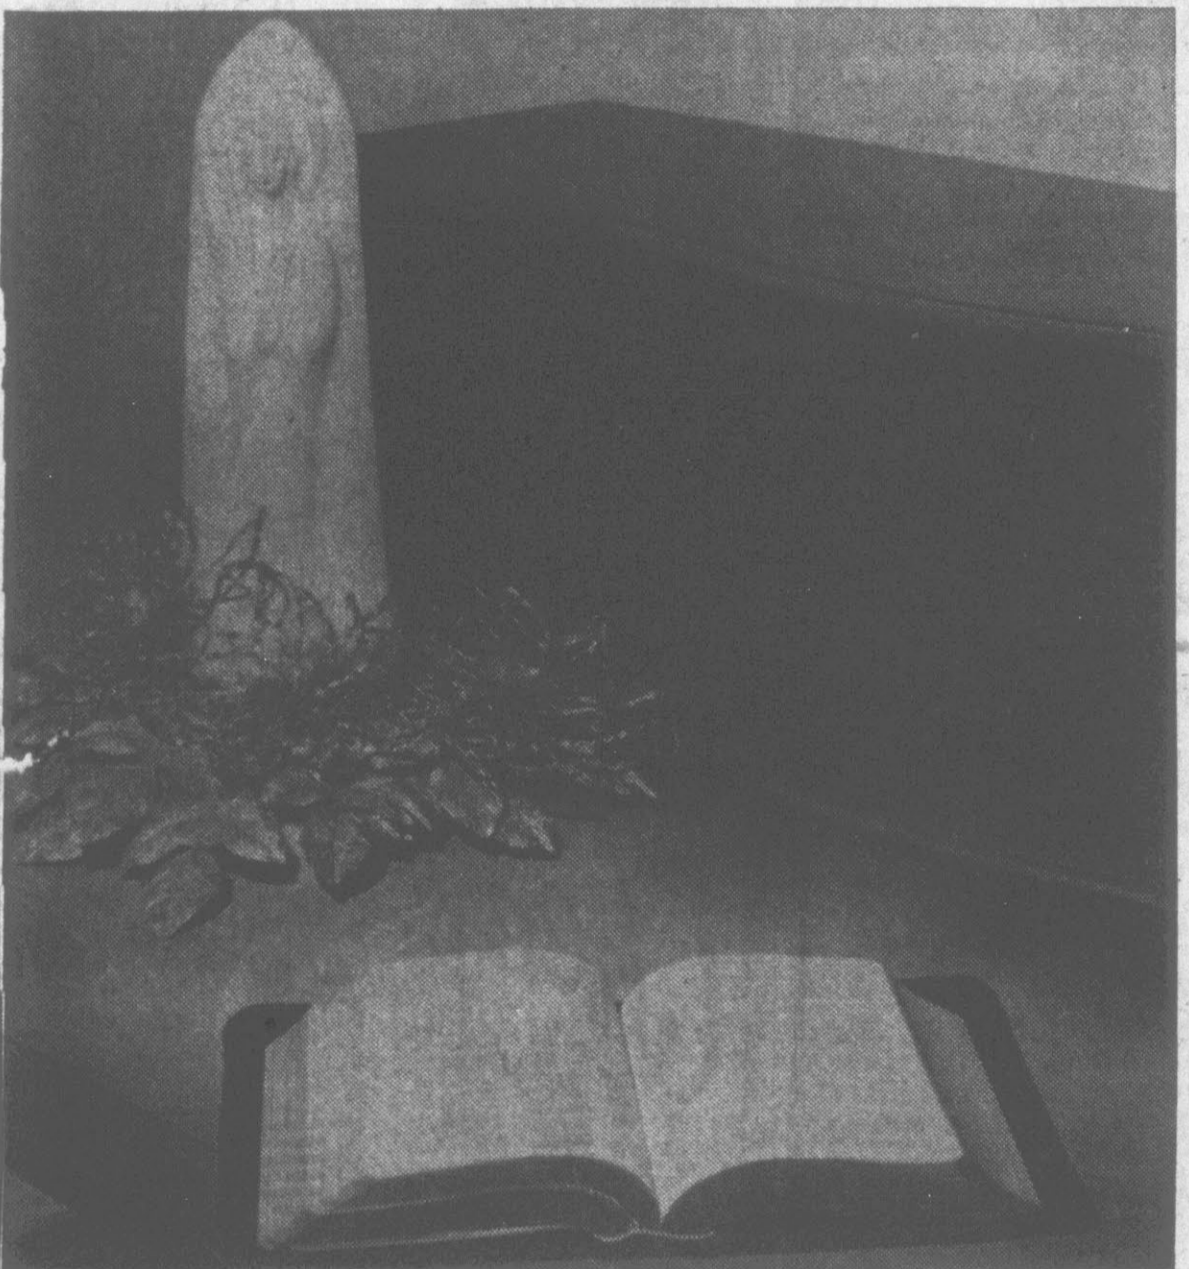

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP)—For Lila Latham, 23, and Don Harper, 25, both in wheel chairs, are to be married Christmas Eve.

Paralytic polio struck down both while they were teen-agers. They met in 1955 while under treatment at Texas' Warm Springs Foundation Center. They were engaged by Christmas of 1957, but college came first.

Now Harper has finished at North Texas State College, Lila is through with studies at Del Mar College here and they're proudly ready to strike out on their own. Their first home will be an apartment in Denton, Tex.

FIREPLACE IN THE DEN . . . is decorated with arrangements of greenery and red candles on the staggered shelves.

Despite Reluctance, 'Xmas' Usage Correct; It Antedates Our Language

By G. CAREY HAYES
The Anderson Daily Mail
Written for The Associated Press

ANDERSON, S.C. — (AP) — "Xmas greetings" are no less correct, proper and reverent than "Christmas greetings."

For despite a growing reluctance to use the abbreviated form in recent years, "Xmas" as a word is as ancient as the "Xtian" religion, spanning two languages and antedating English by well over 1,000 years.

The use of the ancient abbreviation has been declining, apparently because of the suspicion that "X" is a mathematical term for "unknown."

But its use as a mathematical symbol began more than 1,600 years ago after it was used to represent the word "Christ."

A part of the fascinating story of this ancient, now maligned, symbol was told recently by an Anderson school teacher who has been keeping notes about its history for several years.

She obtained her information, in part, from the School of Theology at Erskine College in Due West, the headquarters for the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church.

Perhaps the first use of "X" by early Christians was in Asia Minor. Then, the ancient Greek letter "X," pronounced "chi," was the name of a pagan religious festival. Since it is the same Greek letter which began the word for Christ, persecuted Christians adopted it as a convenient abbreviation to help avoid identification, and to confuse the pagans.

In Greek, the language of the early church, the word Christ begins with "xp." Early theologians and others commonly contracted or abbreviated the word "Christ" to "XP" in fact, a monogram from these two Greek letters, called a "chrismon," was a common device in early writings.

Early English derivatives from the Greek word produced such English words as "Xpian" for "Christian," "Xpenned" for christened, and "Xtianity" for Christianity.

An example of the use of "X" for Christ is this formal declaration from the rolls of Parliament of England in 1485: "Any kyng or prynce in England xpenned (christened)."

An 1842 dictionary continued to spell "Christopher" as "Xopher." The use of "X" for an unknown quantity didn't come along until it was originated by Descartes, who in 1637 published his famous "Geometries."

Descartes decided to use the letters A, B and C for known quantities and X, Y, and Z for unknown quantities.

Has Toe-Tapping Church In Mind

HONOLULU, (AP) — The Honolulu City Council has been asked to approve a loud speaker for a new dancing religion.

A letter of application submitted to the council said, in part:

"May I apply for a permit to use a loudspeaker when our fellow members of the dancing religion go out for public sermon on various street corners and parks to convey to them, the public, the good tidings conveyed by the dancing goddess?"

The letter was signed by a former Honolulu doctor.

Next Time, Just Let Him Know

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Jackie Rose, 3, wanted a fire engine for Christmas.

Other youngsters in his neighborhood suggested how he might get one. Jackie tried it.

He hauled a stool from his home, climbed up to the red box on the corner and, with a screech of sirens, along came two fire engines.

Jackie was puzzled. He couldn't decide which one he wanted.

His grandfather, Superior Court Judge Edward Molkenbuhr, told him he could have neither and added that the next time he wanted to contact Santa Claus, he should let him know.

Gifts For 'Those Who Have Everything' Can Be Found

May a wreath of good fellowship and happiness be around you and yours during this Holiday Season... this is our most sincere wish.

Claude A. Plyler Jr.
Insurance

Every year there are those special gifts "for the person who has everything."

Greenville merchants had plenty of their own oddities, or specialties, in the gift line this year which will make handsome gifts for anyone, including the person who traditionally has everything.

One of the most unusual and catchy items might at first go unnoticed. It is called a "light brush," and is designed to help the hostess do some cleaning up after a party. The light brush is flashlight size, in pastel colors, with a small vacuum and bag to hold the particles, as well as a three-way light switch. The light can be controlled to three degrees of brightness. At first, one might pass it by as simply a flashlight.

Imported gift items, in assorted colors, shapes, sizes and prices have been plentiful and have been good selling items, the merchants say. Some of these include accessories for the bar, with everything from bottle covers, whiskey bottles, and flasks from all over the world. Bottle covers have been especially colorful and assumed their own personalities in the shape of a Scottish man, cowboy, gentleman in tux, Santa Claus and others.

If you wanted a container for the whiskey itself, there were some Japanese bottles, handpainted for various specialties.

For the outdoorsman, there was even a replica of an antique gun in the shape of a cigarette lighter—perfect for a coffee table.

For youngsters, there were the usual autograph dolls, but for Christmas, transformed into huge high topped items, with room for a host of signatures. And the ever present foot-long pencil assumed the latest fashion of pretty face and fur hat.

Barometers were available in every shape and size, for the desk or the wall. A picture of one is shown on this page, this one a wall-size barometer which is in reality a lovely piece of furniture, and a complete weather indicating outfit. It is more in the luxury class.

One of the more luxurious of the luxury items out this year is a $40 shoe shine set, with soft facilities for brushing up the best leather. It operates by electricity and the man can switch it on with a kick of the foot, and place the shoe under the brush—and come out with a bright shine.

In the larger items, huge glass ornamental pieces shaped like mosques, in assorted colors, were available as well as life-sized post lanterns. These, too, are actually pretty pieces of furniture. And in the more expensive category.

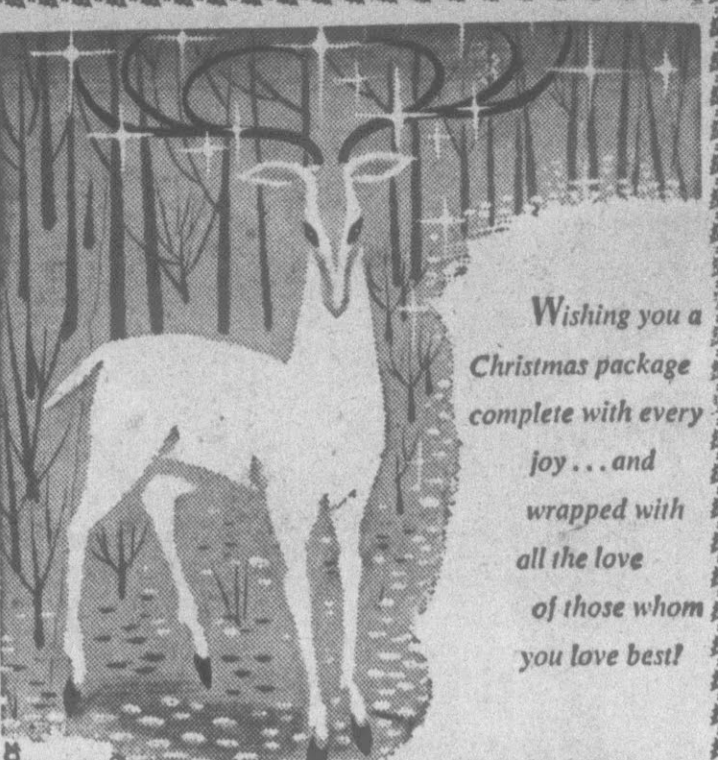

But, back to inexpensive and specialty gifts, there are wide varieties of party matches available.

Something for everyone, gifts in the specialty category, which have been on display in the local stores.

You will probably find some of them under your tree Christmas Day.

HOW ABOUT A $40 SHOE SHINE SET? . . . This colorful item, one end red and one end black, operates via electricity. Store manager illustrates here how it operates. It is definitely a luxury item, as shoe shine kits go.

Travelers Look For That Light In The Sky

By PATRICIA MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

Riding the country's highways from year to year at Christmastime, when houses are lighted in gay colors, the traveler becomes accustomed to the contribution which the small town makes, in observance of Christmas: the water tank.

This bleak, sometimes eyesore, is transformed into a star, a cross, or a maze of glimmering lights at night. In daytime it still looks like what it is — a water tank.

Travelers using the same highways from year to year probably begin to look for the lighted landmarks and point them out to children eager for Christmas cheer.

Out of the numerous towns in Pitt County, three, all located along Highway 11, decorate their water tanks at Christmastime.

Coming from outside Pitt County, the first town with a decorated water tank is Grifton, which has used a large white star atop the tank for several years. The star can be seen for several miles, from Highways 118 and 11.

Just a few miles further along Highway 11, the traveler comes into the city limits of Ayden, a town going into its second year of decorating a water tank.

At night, the water tank, transformed into something beautiful, seems to be floating in the air. The dome is decorated with a basic color scheme of red, white and green. White tops the dome, from which red vertical streamers flow towards the base, which has horizontal strands of red, green and again red lights.

Down the highway a few miles the traveler reaches the community of Winterville, which makes itself known for miles around by its water tank, decorated primarily with blue lights.

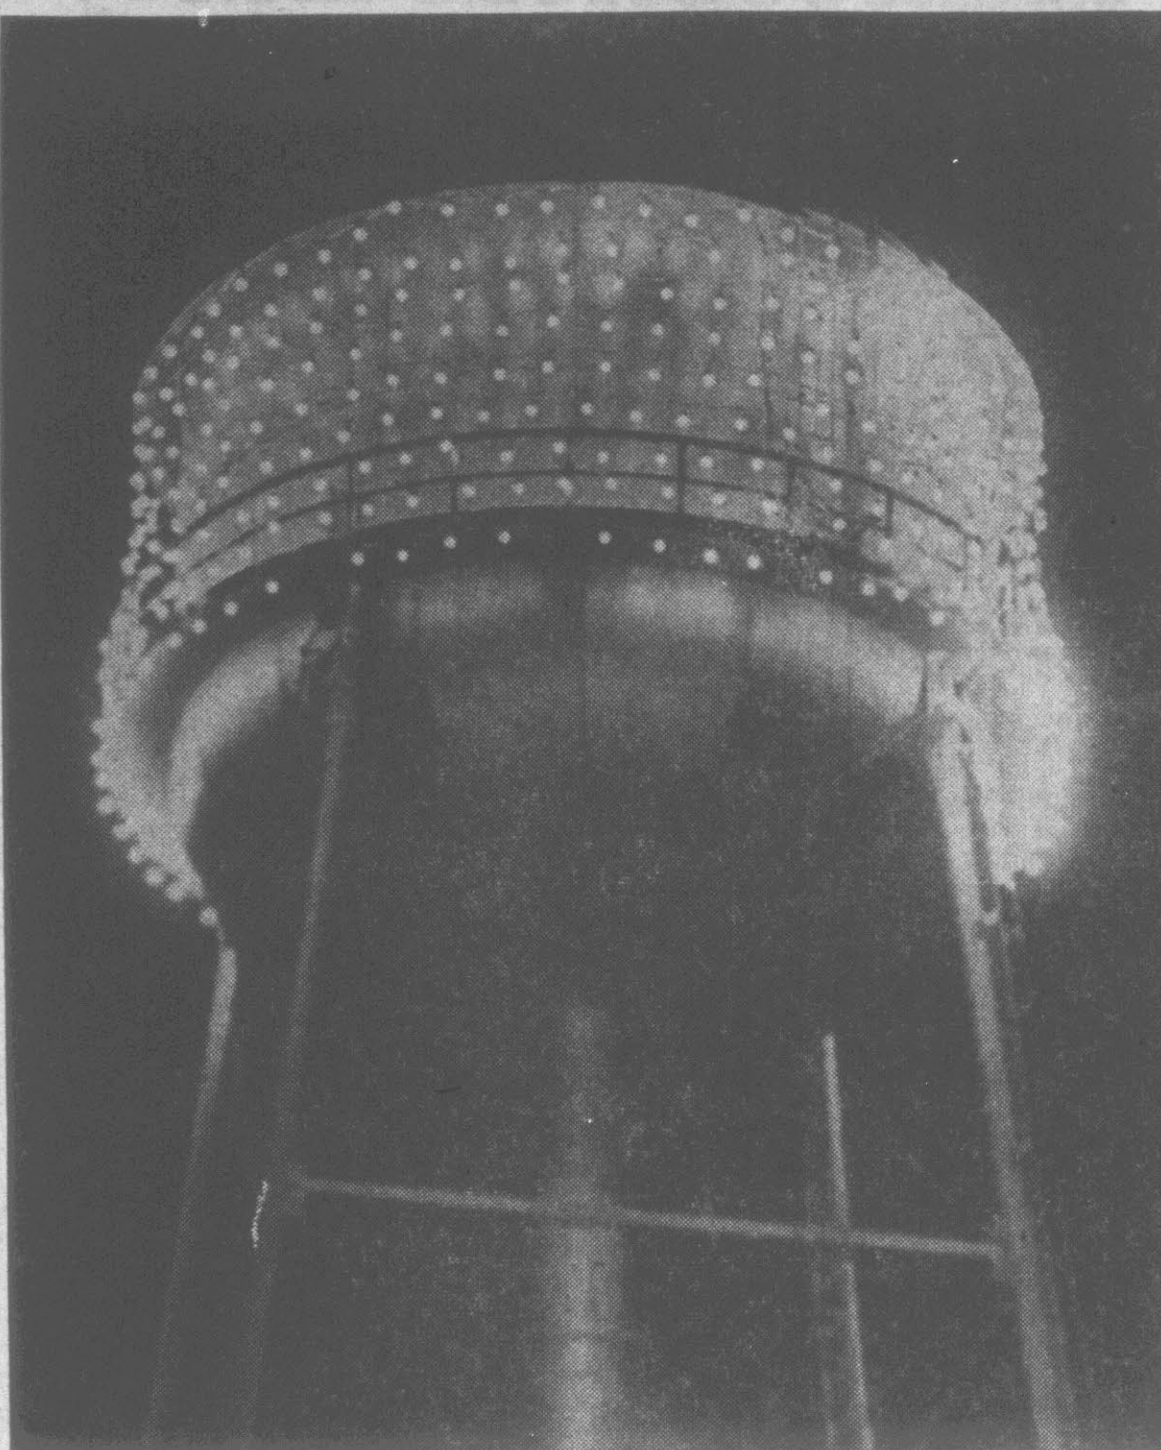

There are five other small towns in the county and the largest one, Greenville, which have not pursued the practice of decorating water tanks at holiday seasons.

City Manager of Greenville, L. P. Bloxam said Greenville's water tanks have never been decorated and it would be a costly affair.

Farmville's Mayor Charles Edwards said his town's water tank has never been decorated, but next year there may be a possibility.

Unusual Situation
Grimesland is in the peculiar situation of never having decorated a water tank because there wasn't one before last spring. There tank isn't "old enough to be decorated this year," town officials say.

Mayor of Fountain J.M. Horton said that Fountain's water tank has never been decorated.

WINTERVILLE'S WATER TANK . . . appears to be floating in air by night at Christmastime. The blue lights can be seen for miles.

Christmas Clubs Ease The High Cost Of Giving Today

By NORMA GAURN

People are finding a way to be merry at Christmas despite the high cost of giving.

They don't leave town or decline to give presents. Instead they sign up in a Christmas savings club.

The Christmas Club plan for enforced savings is 50 years old this year. And judging by current trends, total deposits should exceed the billion dollar mark for the ninth year in a row.

Banking men say Christmas clubs make people appreciate the rewards of thrift. Says one banker:

"The human race doesn't have a built-in instinct for saving, like squirrels for storing nuts and dogs for burying bones."

But a person who can't save money for a nest egg will cheerfully stand in line at his bank once a week for 50 weeks, looking forward to a specific goal for his hoard: cash for Christmas gifts and year-end bills.

In 1959, the American Banking Assn. (ABA) reports more than 13 million Christmas clubbers saved a total of $1,405,000,000 — 3 per cent higher than in 1958. Average savings per member was $108.

Prior to 1940, most people saved $1 a week in the clubs; after World War II the amount went up to $2. Now $5 a week is an average in larger cities, although deposits can be as low as 25 cents or as much as $50.

"Christmas clubs force people to save in much the same way as when they pay off an installment debt," says an ABA spokesman.

"The big difference is that the person saves ahead to buy later instead of vice versa. Also, he saves paying interest charges on the loan."

Christmas Club rules vary from bank to bank. Some even pay interest on club accounts although most do not.

Generally members join in November and December to insure a full 50 weeks of savings. Once in, the money stays in until time is up. Premature closing of the account or missing a payment means a service charge.

Banks say that 80 per cent of those who sign up finish their payments. And once a Christmas clubber, always a Christmas clubber—people keep on in the plan year after year.

More than half the total club members come from young families between 25 to 40 years of age. They're the ones who are likely to feel the pressure most from Christmas demands of small children.

Recessions and strikes have had little or no effect on club savings. For example, banks reported that workers affected by the 1958 steel strike kept up payments virtually without interruption.

A non-banker gets credit for the first Christmas club. In 1910 Herbert F. Rawll improvised on a coupon sheet service worked out by a cashier at the Carlisle, Pa., Trust Co. to help customers save for Christmas.

Rawll ran his business almost single handed for 37 years and died a wealthy man in 1947.

Christmas Is For Kids, Which It Should Be

By HAL BOYLE

What is Christmas? It began with the worship of an infant, and even today you miss the sparkle of Christmas unless you see it by the candles of joy in a child's eyes.

Christmas is the one holiday of the year that adults can never take away from the kids—so they might as well quit trying. From the dawn's early light until the twilight lowers to the music of a tired, sleepy hand beating on an already broken drum, Christmas properly is the property of childhood.

act, but our real role is that of appreciative audience. There is no fun on Christmas greater than watching a kid have fun. And how could there be? For only in such a manner can we ever truly bathe in the fountain of youth, and know again the morning delights we somehow lose along the way.

Some adults feel hurt if they don't get more Christmas cards than they send out—as if Christmas were a popularity contest, and they had lost it. Others worry if they do get back more cards — as if Christmas were a matching contest that the rules of a courteous jungle require to come out even. Still other adults get secretly or audibly miffed if they get a wrong present—as if Christmas were a competition between pocketbooks.

Rules On Playing The Santa Role

1. Dress for the part and groom carefully.
2. Study the part, read all you can about Santa Claus.
3. Know toys, so no child can surprise you with a request.
4. Act the part of Santa Claus as best you can.
5. Study the children, act interested in them.
6. Don't play to your own children or a friend's children any more than any other.
7. Don't step out of the role at any time while dressed for it.

It is these so-called grownups who most often complain that Christmas has become a racket, and as far as they are concerned they are quite right. To them it is a racket because they have approached it in that spirit. Childhood would be a racket, too, if a mother had a baby only to sell it to the highest bidder.

All such spiritually barren folk should have their hearts, if not their heads, examined and be given a massive dose of the world's oldest wonder drug—the elixir of loving kindness.

What makes a child love Christmas? Wonder and surprise. The immortal ecstasy of opening a package and finding something new inside. The value of a gift means nothing to him. And what difference does it make if the child breaks his gift five minutes after he opens the package? He has given you a reward that will last as long as memory—the wonderful look of happiness when he first saw his gift, his face sweet as the spring sun and his voice like a glad bird's cry.

If someone deeded you the earth and threw in the moon for a souvenir, could you summon up such utter appreciation?

There are some who say that there is too much emphasis on giving presents to children at Christmas and too little emphasis on religion—too much of Santa Claus, too little of Christ. But I recall reading that the three wise men brought gifts to the infant Jesus in the manger, and I don't recall reading that He grew up a spoiled child.

Someone told me a story once of a little boy who surprised his mother with a present for her birthday. It was a big, awkwardly tied package. As the mother pulled more and more wrapping out of the box without finding anything, she began to suspect a trick.

"Why, I don't believe there's any present inside at all," she exclaimed, pretending disappointment.

"Yes, there is, too!"

"What is it?" asked the mother.

"It's me!" said her little son, jumping up and down with glee.

There is a French maxim that says, "Zest is the last gift of the gods."

What is Christmas but zest—the TYPICAL PRE-CHRISTMAS SCENE . . . in first grades around Greenville and Pitt County was teacher's reading of Christmas stories to youngsters gathered in gaily decorated rooms.

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer
Though Christmas spirit is just about at its peak for 1960 with Christmas Eve only hours away, school children in Greenville and Pitt County schools have already seen at least one aspect of Yuletide come and go.
While the outside world was still thinking about what preparations might be in order for the year's most universal holiday observance, school children and teachers were in the midst of the Christmas hustle and bustle that annually invades schools in early December.

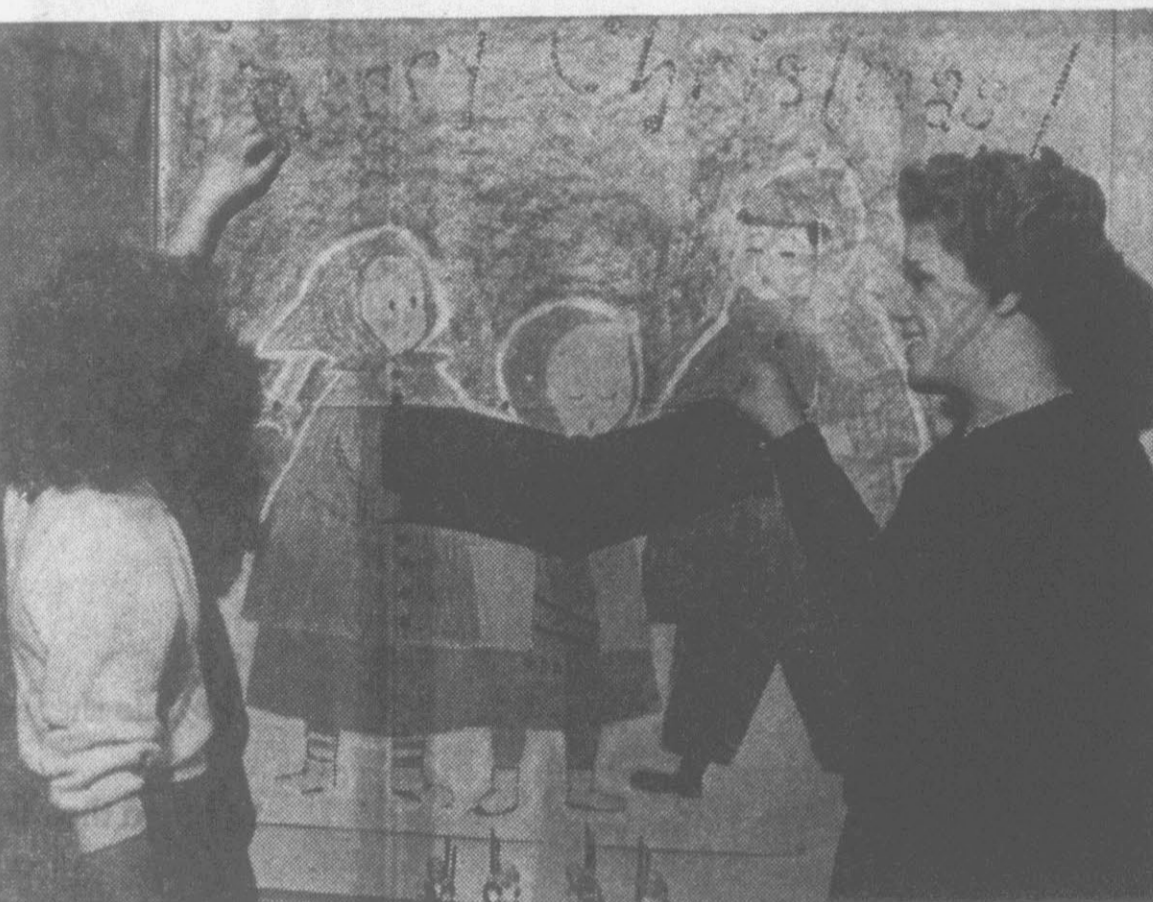

As a matter of fact, class parties and school programs were all completed well before last Friday when the area schools closed their doors for the term's longest holiday.
Before the schools' closing, virtually every pupil in the city and county school systems had participated in some sort of Christmas activity at school.
All around the county, the kids planned and displayed elaborately decorated bulletin boards, rehearsed and staged special Christmas programs for Parent-Teacher Association gatherings, and completed other special Yuletide activities.
In the primary grades, teachers guided children through sessions of fashioning bulletin board displays from cutouts, trimming special Christmas trees for the various classes' last-day-of-school parties, making colorful Christmas cards for parents and relatives, and other preparations for the annual school Christmas observance.

The higher grades' activities included some of the same and included rehearsing for the annual Christmas pageants. Junior and senior glee clubs practiced long hours to tune their collective voices to as near perfection as possible.
Teachers, students, and parents worked diligently preparing scripts, stage props and costumes for the Christmas pageants. The faculty rehearsed and re-rehearsed the respective pageants' familiar to them. Everything had to be in readiness for the big night.
By some 10 days ago, all the schools had everything tuned to the high pitch. All displays stood ready for inspection by parents and friends. Pageants and musical programs were ready for the stage. Final trimmings and arrangements for Christmas parties in each classroom were complete.

With all decorations colorfully adorning Pitt and Greenville school rooms and halls, students and teachers stood by to watch admiring parents and friends inspect the handwork. All were apparently satisfied.
After all had seen all, most thoughts began to turn to "that last day before the holidays begin." Still enthusiastic with the spirit of Christmas, faculty, students and parents awaited the schools' "letting out."
The day came and went, leaving all school buildings entirely void of people. Still, with everybody gone for a couple of weeks, the halls and rooms retained their

Their Family, All Of Them, Will Be Together Again

NEW ROOMS . . . Mr. Jones is finishing two rooms for additional sleeping space for family visits.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Jones believe that Christmas is a time for families to be together—and in keeping with their tradition, their eight children and 18 grandchildren will return home to share a day of merriment.

The Jones reside on Rt. 2 near Ballards Cross Roads. Their children are grown and have families of their own; but they will be coming home Christmas Day.

Mrs. Jones will be busy tomorrow and Sunday preparing the Christmas Day menu. Her sister will give a helping hand to the cooking and readiment of the two turkeys and country ham which the Joneses have been saving for this special day. They will also have chicken salad, Brunswick stew, vegetables, turkey dressing and accessories. Mrs. Jones said, "My children have requested that I cook collards."

For dessert there will be ambrosia, coconut cake and two five pound fruit cakes that Mrs. Jones cooked weeks in advance.

Mrs. Jones said, "Some of the foods will be prepared the day before Christmas, but I always cook the turkeys Christmas morning."

The day will be bustling with good food and fun. Dinner is served family style on a banquet size dining table, with card tables set up to accommodate the grandchildren. Mrs. Jones notes, "I get to eat when the family does, and others help me with the serving."

Besides plenty to eat, there will be presents for everyone. Each year the family draws names for gift giving. Mrs. Jones said she and her husband give each one of their family a gift, but "they don't give much."

The Joneses nearing 70, take pride in talking about their children and grandchildren of whom they are proud.

Mrs. Jones said the "grandchildren love the country and the chickens are a curiosity to the younger ones."

Appears Younger
Mrs. Jones' appearance belies the fact that she has raised eight children. Though her hair is now gray, she seems younger than her 70 years. She has a ready smile and exhibits much enthusiasm as she goes about the big task of preparing for the Christmas visits.

Mrs. Jones enjoys homemaking and sewing. She does all of her own gardening that can be done by hand, canning and freezing foods to last from one year to the next. It serves a useful purpose since some of their children come home most every weekend.

She said, "I don't sew as much as I used to, but I still sew for some of my children and friends occasionally." Two years ago when her youngest child was married, she made her wedding dress and trousseau clothes.

Mrs. Jones is active in the Lang Home Demonstration Club in which she has an 11 year perfect attendance record, and in the Christian Women's Fellowship.

She graduated from Ayden High School and entered then East Carolina Teachers College the first year of the college's existence (1909) taking a special teacher's course for about two years. Professor Ragsdale was one of her teachers and there were 14 teachers in the college at the time. Mrs. Jones said, "I have always been very proud of East Carolina College."

Mrs. Jones taught in the Pitt and Greene County School five years. She is a descendant of the Rountree family of Pitt County.

Jones Retired
Jones is a retired farmer, turning his farm operations over to his son, David, who lives across the road from the Joneses.

Jones enjoys raising hogs and beef type cows, and going fishing when he has the opportunity. He is presently engaged in building two rooms over a double car garage to accommodate their children when they come home to visit.

Jones is a descendant of the Tyson-May family of Pitt County. The Joneses are members of the Farmville Disciples of Christ Church.

Family Reunions

Christmas is not the only time the Jones family gets together. They have a family reunion once a year, whenever convenient to the family. They were together Thanksgiving at the home of their daughter, Mrs. C. B. Roebuck, in Hamilton. In the summer they usually all gather at the cottage of a son on Chocowiny Bay.

The Joneses live in an attractive seven room frame home, on their farm consisting of 58 acres of land. They raised their eight children on the farm (24 of which Jones inherited from his father) and sent them to college. Seven of their children attended college and six are college graduates. Mrs. Jones recalled that her "oldest child graduated from college in June of 1936 and my youngest child was born the following August."

All the children with the exception of one, have moved away. The Jones children are:

Clifton L. Jones, Jr., Hopewell, Va., is assistant general manager of Allied Chemical Corp. He is a graduate of State College, married and has two children.

Mrs. Diana Roebuck, Hamilton, is a graduate of East Carolina College and has two children. She has taught school for 20 years.

Mrs. Hazel Pleasant, Raleigh, is a graduate of East Carolina College and has four children.

Norwood E. Jones, Erwin, is principal of Erwin School near Dunn. He is a graduate of East Carolina with B. S. and M. A. degrees, and is now working on his Ph.D. at Carolina. He has two children.

David L. Jones is a farmer and floor manager of Puritt Tobacco Warehouse, Farmville. He lives across the highway from the Joneses. He has two children.

Mrs. Peggy Smith, Wilmington, is a graduate nurse, who has been affiliated with Baltimore Medical Hospital, Md., and James-Walker Hospital in Wilmington. She has three children.

Mrs. Frances Albritton, Goldsboro, attended Nursing School for two years at Woodard-Herring in Wilson. The Albrittons have three children.

Mrs. Patricia Conway, Clayton, is a graduate of East Carolina College and teaches in the Clayton Schools.

The Joneses now live alone, but look forward to their children coming home on visits. One of the times is Christmas.

Filipinos Have Three Weeks In Yule Season

By TONY ESCODA

Filipinos love holidays, but they love Christmas the most. They have one of the longest Christmas seasons of any country, running from Dec. 16 to Jan. 6.

It begins with an old Spanish tradition of early morning mass every one of the nine days before Christmas. Early means 5 a. m.—that's why the masses are called "Misas De Gallo" (masses at the cock's crow).

Church service is usually followed by a Filipino-style breakfast featuring rice cakes and a horde of other native delicacies. A diet is out of the question this time of the year.

Then comes Christmas day, when all families get together. Since cousins six times removed are considered close relatives in this country, family gatherings can get pretty big.

Gift-giving is on a massive scale. It's considered bad form to leave anyone out, even that distant cousin.

After that there's New Year's Eve. Filipinos shift gears at this point. Everyone stays home Christmas. No one stays home New Year's Eve.

The whooo-do-do is Western style, complete with noise-makers, crazy hats and hangovers. Nightclubs are jammed.

There are fireworks, of course. Most of them are manufactured locally, and it's an unusual year when one or two fireworks factories don't blow up—wholesale.

In between Christmas and New Year's there's a legal holiday honoring the national hero, Jose Rizal. That's Dec. 30. It has no connection with Christmas, but it helps keep the spirit going.

Jan. 6 is the Feast of the Three Kings, another Spanish tradition. More gift-giving. This time, however, it's permissible to leave out that distant cousin. Unless he happens to be a 10-year-old or thereabouts. Three Kings is especially destined for that age bracket.

By then most Filipinos are exhausted, poverty stricken but happy. They can hardly wait for those 11½ months to go by before the next Christmas season rolls around.

"It's the happiest commuting day of the year for us," says James S. Morgan of Wyncote, Pa., one of the commuters.

A 'Pool Of Siloam' Is Located In An Ozark Mountain Town

By BOB HARING

At Christmastime in the little Ozark mountain town of Siloam Springs, Ark., they tell the story of Christ in a nightly panorama at the "Pool of Siloam."

It's a natural setting—a small lake in the center of town with rocks and forests for a backdrop. Choral music echoes the words of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. It began in the mind of a newspaperman and flowered through the efforts of an artistic sign painter backed by the town's Chamber of Commerce.

R. S. Knowlson, weekly newspaper editor, was first to visualize the lake formed by Sager Creek as a "Pool of Siloam." That first year, 1957, only the nativity scene loaned by Jim Dodson, a businessman friend of Knowlson, graced the pool.

The next year, more scenes were added. Then last year, Burdette Woody adopted the project. Woody, a sign painter, spent more than 500 hours fashioning huge figures—more than 50 of them—for the final 10 scenes in the life of Christ.

Last Christmas they dedicated the completed panorama, perched on a hillside over the lake. Thousands came to see it, but Knowlson wasn't among them. He died in 1957.

Figures, most of them eight feet tall, form the traditional manger scene. Then follow scenes of the flight to Egypt, Christ as a boy, talking with the doctors in the temple, leading His sheep, restoring sight to a blind man, raising Peter from the waters, at the Last Supper, the Crucifixion and the Resurrection.

As the story is repeated by a narrator, each scene in turn is illuminated. The portrayal concludes with the spotlighting of a 15-foot tall Christ, His arms spread to His people with the familiar words of John: "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in Me though he were dead yet shall he live. And whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die."

Commuters Like Playing Santa

DUNELLEN, N. J. (AP) — A friendly wave started a Christmas tradition five years ago for a trainload of commuters and a half-dozen roadside workers.

Every year a few days before Christmas, the Reading Railroad's crack "Wall Street Express" stops briefly on the outskirts of town. A commuter dressed as Santa Claus hops out with a bagful of money and wishes a "Merry Christmas" to the men who work for a nearby type foundry.

The practice has been going on since the commuters noticed the overall clad men waving at them every morning, rain or shine.

How Child's Coming Changed World

By TRUMAN B. DOUGLASS

How can the birth of a child nearly 2,000 years ago have meaning for the world today? Why, with the coming of Christmas, do people join with shepherds and wise men of old in journeying to the manger in Bethlehem to look upon the face of a child?

First, because the object of the pilgrimage is a child—a child who has become for the imaginations and hearts of men a symbol of every child. In the coming of every child into the world are epitomized the mystery, the wonder, and the promise of our human existence.

There is the mystery of the perpetuation and renewal of life—the incredible process by which the human organism is formed. Through the biologist can watch this process under his microscope and can even start it in motion artificially, the delicate but powerful forces which initiate it and keep it going remain invisible. The external phenomena of life can be seen, but the primary reality, life itself—the dynamic behind all the chemical changes and the arrangement of cells—is still unanalyzed and mysterious. Every child coming into the world is a vessel and a manifestation of this eternal mystery.

There is the miracle of individuality, which makes every person from the day of his birth different in a thousand ways from every other.

There is the wonder of the child's role as link between the past and the future. The continuity of society, of culture, of civilization is dependent on the communication of the achievements of man's mind and spirit from individual to individual and from generation to generation. And the indispensable element in this process of communication is always the child—able to learn, acquire, inherit, appreciate and pass on the treasures of the past. There is the promise and excitement of unfolding potentiality. Every beacon-bearer of our race, every leader, every genius, every saint began life as a helpless infant. Looking at a baby, who can tell what gifts and powers are there to be unfolded and released? How much of the hope for mankind's future lies in the unpredictable capacities resident in some child who may be born today? There is the assurance of the durability of life. How reassuring is this endless procession of the generations? Is it not wonderful that people continue to have children, in time of famine and war and revolution—even under the present shadow of nuclear holocaust? It is a sign of the marvelous resilience and toughness of life, and in this there is hope.

But Christmas is not only the festival of the birth of a child; it is the festival of the Christ Child. When the aged Simeon first looked upon the infant Christ, he prophesied that through this Child "the secrets of many hearts will be revealed." At every Christmas He comes as the revealer of the secrets of human hearts. In addition to the theological significance of Christ, there is a human significance that is universal. The peace which He holds in the loyalties and affections of men in every land and time reveals "the secrets of many hearts." The fact that it is the Christ Child—not an infant Caesar or Napoleon or Khrushchev—who occupies this exalted position in the adoration of men tells us something about the human heart. The men of power and violence may for a time gain the center of the stage of history, but they do not gain our affection. The men of shrewdness and cleverness may win our grudging admiration, but they do not win our love. We give our love to those who have a capacity for human warmth and tenderness, for understanding and forgiveness. That this is so tells us something wonderful about our human nature. So long as the remembrance of the coming of the Christ Child sets the world aglow—so long as the sight of the helpless-ness of a child pulls at our heart-strings and stirs us to give protection and nurture—so long as warmth and tenderness awaken a response from our spirits which pomp and power cannot command—so long as self-forgetfulness and self-sacrifice evoke our highest gratitude and love—there is hope for mankind and for humanity's future.

LOOKING IN THE TOY STORE WINDOW... and wishing is a great pastime of youngsters these days. Looking at all of the many beautiful new toys and wishing for that "special one" he or she wants Santa to bring. These boys, Eddie and Frank, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Taylor of 1502 East Fourth St., are no exception and, in fact, have long ago informed Santa of their wishes for Christmas.

Present Date For Christmas Chosen To Supplant An Old Pagan Festival

By JAMES LOH
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Plainly the birth of Christ was one of the most significant events in the history of the world. It brought lordly kings to a lowly stable; it caused Herod of Judea to commit one of the cruelest atrocities known to man; and it gave the world a new date of reckoning—anno Domini.

Logical, maybe, but not easy. The transition began about the year 354 and took nearly two centuries. Though all aspects of paganism were gone from the Christian application of the feast, Syrians, Armenians and others who clung to Jan. 6 accused the Roman Christians of sun worship; and when Bishop Juvenal introduced the new date in Jerusalem it caused riots.

As Christianity spread, acceptance of Dec. 25 as the Lord's birthday gradually came about. Soon circus games—one of the chief diversions of the Roman sun festival—were forbidden on the feast, and in 529 Emperor Justinian declared the day a civic holiday.

In the years that followed Christmas gained increasing importance in the Christian world. Traditions sprang up, and the 13th century gave birth to a new type of joyful hymn called the Christmas carol. But the struggle wasn't over. Puritans in England held that no feast of human origin should outrank the Sabbath and did not celebrate Christmas. When they came into power in 1644 Parliament ordained that Christmas celebrations be banished from the land, and there were punishments for violators.

As, in Jerusalem ages earlier, the new rule was not well received. "The mob mauled the mayor of Canterbury, broke all his windows as well as his bones, and put fire to his doorsteps," said a London magazine recalling the incident 10 years later. The Puritans fell from power in 1660, and Christmas returned to merry England; but the zeal of Puritan immigrants to America persisted to the latter part of the last century. Christmas celebrations were forbidden in Puritan colonies, and Dec. 25 was a common workday in Boston until 1856. As late as 1870, in fact, classes were held on Christmas day in Boston's public schools.

But immigrants from other countries came to America, too, and brought not only the feast but most of the Christmas customs we since have come to regard as "American." And one group, from Oberndorf, Austria, brought with them a simple song penned by their parish priest on Christmas Eve 1818. He wrote it after the church organ broke down and he contemplated midnight Mass without music. It began, "Silent night—"

Old-Fashioned Christmas Is Again Recalled

By PATRICIA MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Christmas tree has always been a symbol of the holiday season—and procuring it has been a highlight in years past with families who enjoyed the traditional "old fashioned Christmas."

Now, like many other things, the manufacturers have produced silver tinsel trees, gold trees, and green trees, a product of the factory which can be used year after year, and which have come into homes, replacing—for some—that homegrown cedar or fir which used to come from the woods.

But the story of how the old fashioned Christmas was, before the time when people had electricity and store decorations, remains. Mrs. Herman (Edna Earle) Baker of Farmville can still recall that old fashioned Christmas.

That Christmas goes back some 45 years, to her childhood, on the Lewis family homestead near Farmville.

"The most fun out of Christmas was getting the tree. We spent half a day in the woods, scrambling over fences, through fields and over streams," she remembers. There were eight children, a closeknit family, of whom Mrs. Baker was the oldest. They were guided by their father on their excursions.

The tree was always a cedar, and one of the most perfectly shaped ones in the whole woods. "We were never satisfied with a little tree," she says. After the family had found the tree of their choice and had it cut down, they managed to get it back to the homeplace, and a standard was fashioned out of wood. When they had put it up, the tree always reached to the top of the high ceiling.

The decorations were of strings of popcorn and handmade things. Little candles, about the size of a finger, were used for lighting purposes, since there wasn't electricity then.

"We cut snowflakes out of paper, and figures out of tin, which we shaped and crushed to the desired shape and size," Mrs. Baker remembers. "Then we attached them to the tree."

Before there were too many in the family, the traditional stockings were attached to the tree. Later, the family switched the eight children's stockings to the mantel.

Around the base of the tree, the Lewises laid cotton which was gathered from the barn, where it had been stored after the cotton was gathered. This covered the floor around the tree.

As for other decorations in the home, holly was used profusely. "A spring of holly was placed behind every picture on the wall, protruding, and on every table. A home wasn't decorated without holly," Mrs. Baker says.

And mistletoe—the children searched the woods over until they found mistletoe. On Christmas Eve, something was left for Santa under the tree, with his name on it.

The Lewises weren't the only family to hold such a Christmas celebration. Their neighbors followed the same plan, and found their trees in their own woods.

The tree was never dismantled until after the old Christmas—about January 5 or 6. "We weren't sure that the old Christmas ended on the 5th, so we always waited until after that to take the tree down," she recalls.

Mrs. Baker can remember the years, a little later, when the cedar became scarce on their own farm, and they began to search the farm of an uncle for their Christmas tree.

Now, apparently, the cedar tree has become more scarce in these parts. One doesn't see as many used as Christmas trees.

Nevertheless, even into her own family life, Mrs. Baker and her husband have managed to obtain a "homegrown" Christmas tree from within Pitt County. They hope to this year.

The Christmas tree industry imports large quantities of trees from this country and Canada, which grace people's homes. And not too many go into the woods. Last year at least 28 business places carried religious motifs in their displays. Every Christian church and religious center participated. About 6,000 folders explaining the project went to church members. And promotion of the campaign began on a national level.

and red and gray colors, to the use of pinks, blues, silver and gold predominately.

The change in the use of "real" trees began some 15 years ago, when the first artificial green trees were manufactured. About five years ago, the silver versions began to crop up, and there are many homes which now prefer the modern tree for the modern home, and the modern way of life.

Mrs. Baker avows that an artificial tree will never come into her home. And this Christmas all her family, about 57 people, will gather to exchange gifts in one of the family member's homes, sing carols and gather around a green Christmas tree.

Windows Stress Religious Motif

Businessmen, ministers and church members in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, are hoping their program to "Put Christ Back into Christmas" will catch on nationally, as it goes into its third year.

Nativity scenes and other Christian themes replace toys and gifts in the organized drive to help people remember that there is more of a reason for Christmas than giving and receiving gifts.

Last year at least 28 business places carried religious motifs in their displays. Every Christian church and religious center participated. About 6,000 folders explaining the project went to church members. And promotion of the campaign began on a national level.

The program originated in 1958 as a businessmen's project. They obtained the assistance of the ministers and churchgoers. Under the program, each business co-operating turns one or more of its display windows over to one of the churches. Volunteers from the congregations set up a religious display of their choice.

"Many retail business people are donating valuable window display space to the churches because they feel that Christ comes before profit," says Robert Petersburg, chairman of a committee which is coordinating the project.

"Churches," he says, "appreciate the opportunity to be able to witness for Christ during the Holy season."

A Home Away From Home For Yuletide Travelers

A lonely old man slowly climbs a flight of stairs back to his second-floor hotel room to spend Christmas Day.

Two elderly grandparents, part of the Christmas overflow at their son's home, drive up to a suburban motel on Christmas Eve.

An Arkansas construction worker unhurriedly and deliberately turns the key to lock his hotel room and begins a search for some sort of companionship for Christmas dinner.

So goes the story of the hotel and motel business come Christmas time.

In sharp contrast with stepped-up activity in other phases of the business world, the business of catering to the traveler comes to a near standstill during Yuletide.

But with the drastic drop in activity, hotel and motel operators don't close their doors. They observe their own private Christmas but have an adequate supply of empty rooms standing ready for unexpected Christmas travelers.

Tourist traffic during Christmas through Greenville drops to zero. Most hotel and motel rooms are vacant, but they have been prepared and are standing ready for the unexpected Christmas guest.

Motel guests at Christmas according to local operators, can be sorted into two main categories. One group included the out-of-town relatives visiting Greenville residents. The other category of Christmas travelers is composed of persons detained because of emergencies of various types. Visiting relatives often find they have joined a host of other relatives gathering at one household for Christmas. The answer to the overflow, generally, is a suburban motel. And sometimes, elderly visitors head for the motel of their own free choosing. The reason? They seem to enjoy their holidays more when they can escape "those noisy youngsters."

Sometimes, however, travelers who had originally planned to be "home for Christmas," find their plans unavoidably interrupted. Accidents, illnesses, and other unforeseen circumstances contribute to the plight of the traveler detained from his Christmas at home.

Greenville motel operators relate various instances of both types of Christmas guests. "The business is slow," they report, but still the motel rooms are prepared.

In addition to the routine daily preparation, special Christmas decorations are added. As it usually turns out, most of the special Yule decor goes unnoticed since most rooms remain empty during the holiday. Still the operators apply the holiday dress—"just in case we do have guests."

Most occupants of hotel rooms in Greenville during Christmas are either natives of distant points holding down semi-permanent jobs in the area or elderly people with no place else to go.

Employees of major construction projects are usually hesitant about making what is often a 1,000-mile journey home for Christmas. Consequently, they are obliged to spend the year's most longed for holiday in the comparative solitude of their hotel rooms.

And elderly persons who have long since spent their final Christmases with families call their motel rooms home.

As in the motel business, the hotels' operators seek to brighten up their Christmas guests' spirits. Decorations are spread over the premises, Christmas trees are put up in lobbies and colorful wreaths and lights adorn the hotel windows.

So, as Christmas approaches, the Christmas traveler or hotel guest is being considered. In cases where it becomes impossible for this minority to be home for Christmas, motel and hotel operators strive, as much as possible, to create a home away from home.

All Pitched In To Replace Gifts

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Christmas spirit at St. Columba School was aroused after theft of 24 presents belonging to pupils in the fourth, fifth and sixth grade.

Children in all grades pitched in their pennies and nickels to make up $13 to buy additional presents for today's school party. The thieves opened all presents but took only those "in which boys might be interested," an official explained.

The Christmas Rush Is Pleasant Experience To Some

By ROSALIE MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

With Christmas so near, one almost expects to bump into Mr. S. Claus or one of his reindeer on the street. Traditionally, shopping has always played a prominent part and is synonymous with Christmas.

The Christmas rush in Greenville is a pleasant experience for at least five of the sales clerks in the various stores.

The clerks interviewed believe the Yule shoppers this season are enjoying the rush and looking for gifts.

When do the majority of the sales personnel in Greenville do their own shopping? The trend for this season of gift-giving includes shopping early on lunch hours and at the last minute.

Department Store
Sam Fleming, an employe of Belk-Tyler's, did his shopping for Christmas four months ago, "in order to get the exact gifts that I wanted."

"The Christmas season is the one time of the year that I really enjoy. During the rush, there is little chance of making errors and we don't have much time to just stand around. I think that the relaxed sales person makes more errors than the person who is kept on his toes all the time," Fleming stated.

"Saturdays for me are the hardest working days. Extra sales clerks are working and competitor to make a sale is higher," he noted.

Clothing Store
Mrs. Jessie Jones says, "Men have selected items from Bloom's for gifts. They include skirts, sweaters, dresses, and coats."

Mrs. Jones enjoys working with the public. She did her purchasing for the holiday season on her lunch hour.

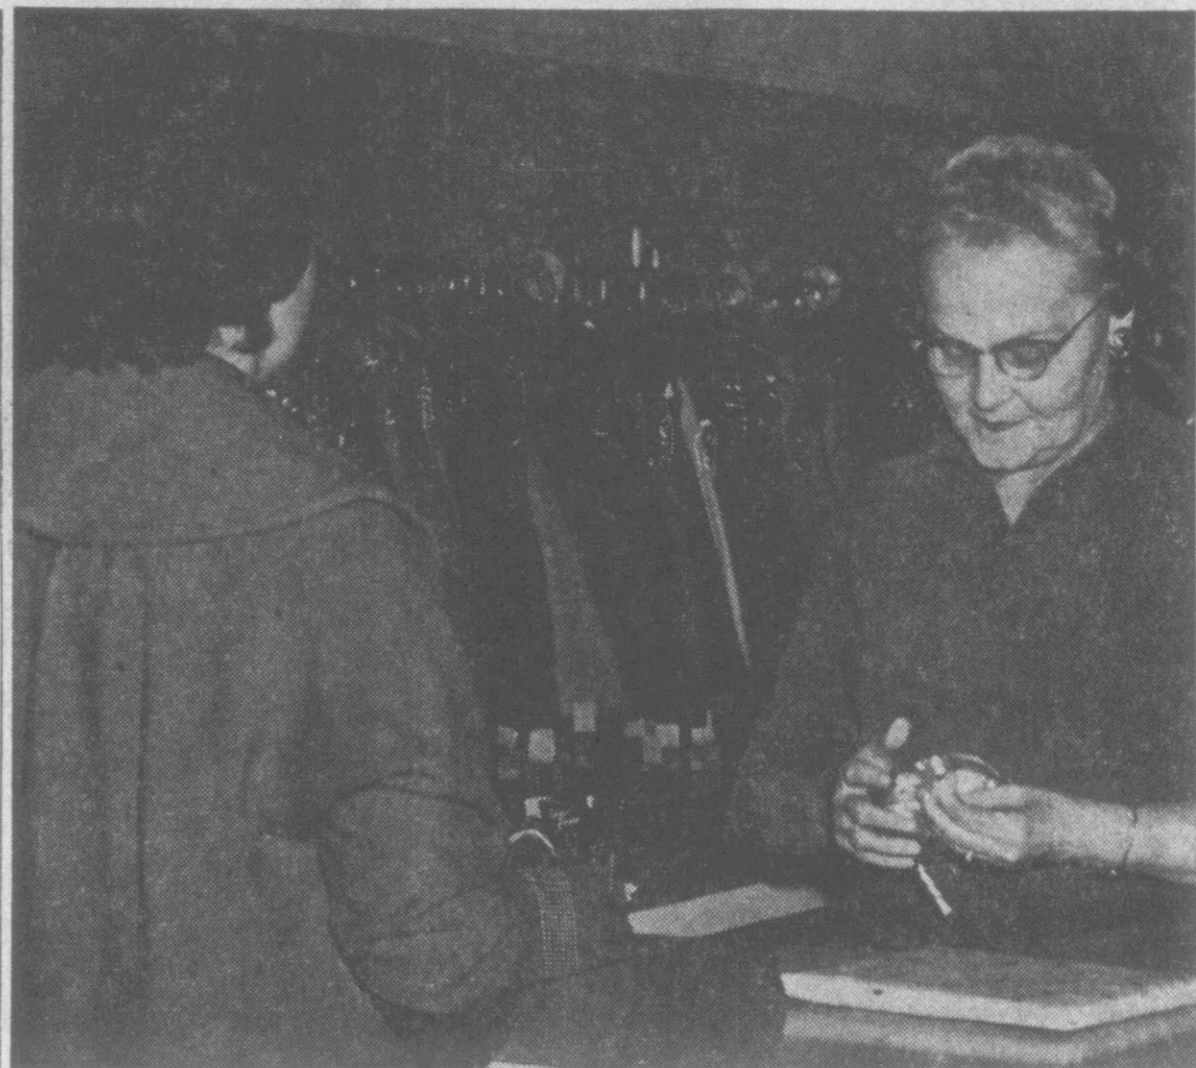

Jewelry Store
Mrs. Elizabeth Baker's son, Fred, 15, has been doing the decorating at their home for some time.

"Teenage boys this year are buying charms and charm bracelets for gifts," noted Mrs. Baker. "I did my shopping madly, frantically and whenever I had a minute," commented Mrs. Baker.

Mrs. Baker's sister, Mrs. Henrietta Johnson, also works at Best Jewelry Store. "People are always getting us confused," the sisters said.

Grocery Store
Using an arrangement of greeting cards on the French doors are part of the decorations for the Christmas season at the home of Mrs. Pennie Dunn.

"Our customers seem to enjoy shopping—they watch for specials, bargains and displays in the store," remarked Mrs. Dunn, ask me, if I am about ready for asks me, if I am about ready for Christmas. To me, each customer is an individual and I try to treat each one as such," she said. Mrs. Dunn is employed by Colonial Stores, Inc.

Dime Store

Mrs. Gladys McMillion, one of the floorladies at Rose's Dime Store, states, "During this season, I get tired, but I really enjoy the rush. I think the shoppers have a wonderful spirit and a lot of enthusiasm."

Decorating and cooking at the McMillion home is done at night. Mrs. McMillion started her shopping the first of the month and finished last week.

No Electricity This Christmas

GRANBY, Vt. (AP) — Candle light in the austere little church. From an old stove, the crackle of burning wood. And in the air, an incense combining odors of candles, faint wood smoke, and the fragrance of a fresh Christmas tree.

The light wavers on young heads bowed over worn books of Christmas carols. Above the crackling of the stove rise the young voices, blending with the chorus of an old organ. They sing of the first Christmas.

This is no stage set. This is real. This is Christmas in a corner of 20th century America. The Vermont towns of Granby and Victory have no public power for electric lights—or for television sets.

Besides the time and effort involved in giving their children a community Christmas, there is a calculated risk. Townsmen seated in the worn, brown pews cast worried glances at the candles on the tree. Buckets of water stand handy. Outside are shovels beside banked-up snow.

The villagers, in two years, have raised $2,000 to bring electric lines to their hamlets. It will cost much more. But they keep hoping that next year they will all have their best Christmas present—electricity.

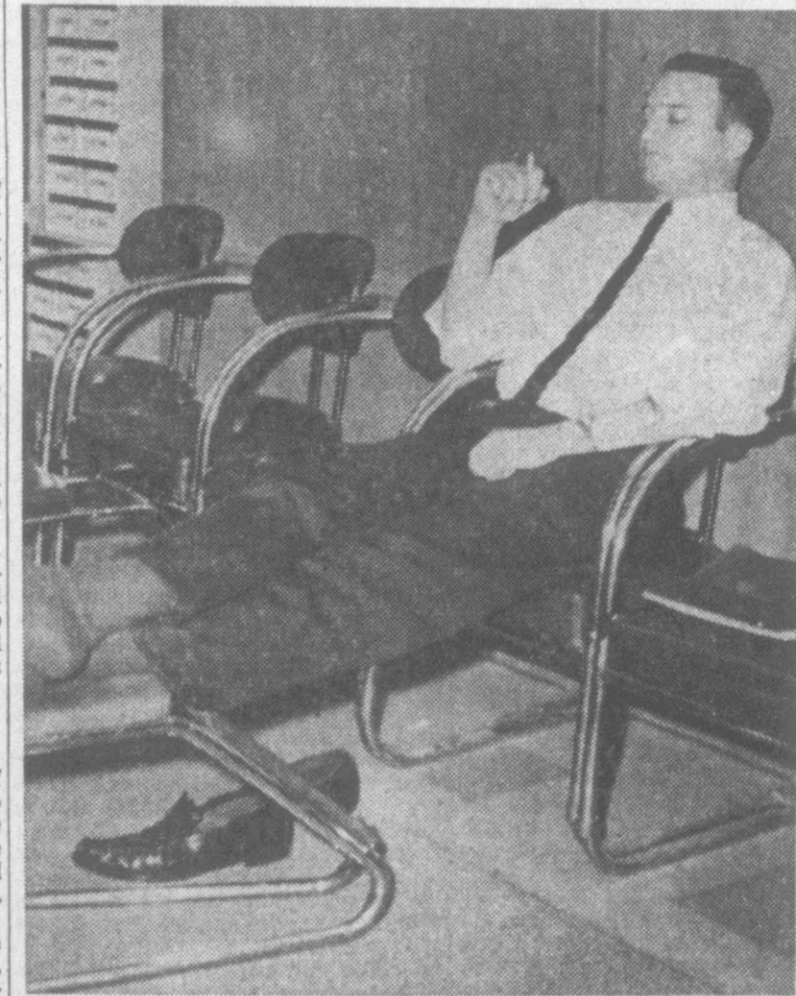

PICK SAFE TOYS

In shopping for toys, beware of ones that could be dangerous to your child or others. Special care is needed in choosing space age toys, since missiles, rockets and projectile toys have become a new hazard.

Toys to avoid are those with protruding points, sharp edges, and small, detachable parts. Likewise flammable materials or plastics that shatter. Especially hazardous to very young children and infants are toys that contain marbles, pebbles, chips or beans.

Origin Of Carol Is Lost In Time

We probably never will know the story behind the carol which—according to statistically-minded authorities—is sung more than any other single carol throughout the world: "O Come, All Ye Faithful." It is lost in the mists of time.

Certainly it is one of the earliest forms of carols, taken from a Latin canticle, either by medieval British or French monks. The tune to which it is sung today was first published in 1751 in a collection known as "Cantus Diversi."

From its original Latin, the carol has been translated into 120 languages, among them all the European, Scandinavian, and Slav tongues, Chinese, Japanese, Swahili, Malagasy, Urdu, Korean, Melanesian and Polynesian.

There are at least 40 English versions of the words, but the best known is that by Frederick Oakley:

O Come, all ye faithful,
Joyful and triumphant,
O come ye, O come ye, to Bethlehem;
Come and behold him,
Born the king of angels,
O come, let us adore Him,
O come, let us adore Him,
O come, let us adore Him,
Christ the Lord.

Sing choirs of angels,
Sing in exultation,
Sing all ye citizens of Heav'n above:
Glory to God,
In the highest,
O come, let us adore Him, etc.

Spiritual And Material Help In Reagan's Life Work

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Helping people spiritually as well as materially is part of the job given to Capt. Earl Reagan, Officer of the local Salvation Army.

Reagan, born in Bryson City, received his schooling in Gastonia, then married the former Edith Cleary of Gastonia in 1941. In 1943 he entered the U. S. Army and served two years in Europe with the Fifth Infantry Division, winning a Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman's Badge and the Expert Infantryman's Badge in his five major campaigns.

In 1954 he entered the Salvation Army Training College at Atlanta, Ga. and graduated a year later and went to Greensboro. Reagan also served at Smithfield and Charlotte before coming to Greenville in September of this year.

As Officer or minister of the church, Reagan's main duties include delivering the sermons at the church, organizing the varied programs carried on by the membership, and general administrative duties . . . seeing that the programs are carried out.

A "religious welfare organization." Salvation Army members are known as "soldiers," according to Reagan, and the church, a "Corps." Included in the activities of the Corps are the youth club, the Corps Cadets, which study the Bible and the orders and regulations of the Salvation Army; the Girl Guards (similar to the Girl Scouts); the Young People's Legion and the regular Sunday school and worship services.

The busiest time, according to Reagan, "is at Christmas," when the Corps gathers food and toys for families throughout Pitt County who need help.

The officer pointed out that in order to receive aid from the Salvation Army at Christmas, the family has to apply for aid, then is investigated and checked with other welfare groups to see that no duplication is made and to make sure the family needs help.

So far, about 200 families have applied for help, and of this group, according to Reagan, at least 200 will be helped. Each family is notified by mail whether it is or is not eligible for help, and if not, is given the reason.

"The Army helps its fellowman in every bit of its work," Reagan said, adding that it is "really a job—but a rewarding one."

He said "helping people spiritually and morally to get on their feet" is what gives him the most satisfaction. "People need material and spiritual help when they want to make something of themselves . . . and take their proper place in society," according to the officer. He added that the Salvation Army helps by letting them know "someone cares."

Reagan, as are all Salvation Army officers, is an ordained minister. He is a member of the Greenville Rotary Club and the assistant Chaplain of the Greenville Fire Department.

In the hobby line, Reagan says he likes to play volleyball, swimming, fishing, miniature golf, bowling and all sports in general.

The Reagans have three children, Becky, 18, who is attending the Salvation Army Training College; Joyce, 17, a junior at Rose High school, and Michael, 14, a student at the junior high school.

Certain Indiana Town Knows Of Santa Claus

By DALE BURGESS

Santa Claus missed Abraham Lincoln by 25 years.

The little southern Indiana hill town of Santa Claus, located only four miles from Lincoln's boyhood home, was named in 1855. The 21-year-old Lincoln and his family had moved on to Illinois in 1830 after living in the neighborhood 11 years.

Lincoln scholars (Indiana is full of them) say the Civil War President didn't talk about Christmas celebrations in his youth. On a raw frontier, a child was lucky to get a corn husk doll.

This isn't to say that Abe wouldn't have approved of Santa Claus Land, the commercial year-round tourist attraction that has been developed since World War II. One of his favorite spots in Washington was Joseph Stuntz's toy shop, four blocks from the White House, where legend has it that he often browsed among the trinkets and usually bought something for Willie and Tad.

The village started forming about 1850 when the German Methodist Church was organized. The community became known as Santa Fe and applied for a post office in 1855.

The day before Christmas, the village was notified that Indiana already had a Santa Fe and another name would have to be selected.

How "Santa Claus" was picked at the town meeting is a matter of legend. One version is that a meteor fell, a little boy cried, "The Christmas Star is falling," and that somehow led up to Santa Claus. Another story is that a villager in a Santa Claus suit came in to distribute gifts.

Louis J. Koch, Evansville, Ind., industrialist and father of nine children, retired at the beginning of World War II and took up the development of Santa Claus Land as a hobby.

Construction of the various buildings was started in 1946 and the project has expanded to include a quarter-mile midget railroad, houses full of dolls and antique toys, a deer farm, a collection of Lincolniana, and—of course—a year-around Santa Claus.

GREETINGS AND ALL OUR BEST WISHES

Cozart's Auto Supply

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

Naturally, the very busiest season of the year for Santa Claus comes along with Christmas.

For during the universal commemoration of the Christ Child's birthday, old Santa must make his rounds to bestow Christmas gifts upon children the world over.

Granted he has always seen an even dozen busy months each year since he must work year round preparing the boys and candy for Christmas delivery.

Still, as Christmas nears, the jolly old man from the North Pole must make his preliminary visits to the Little People to determine their Christmas wishes. On top of that, he must return to his frigid headquarters in time to pack up his payload of joy to youngsters and again wing his way southward Christmas Eve.

A Daily Reflector reporter wanted an interview with Santa—the busiest person on earth this time of year. Would he have time for an interview? Well, not exactly, but Old St.

Nick thinks of everything. He has a very special friend in Greenville to handle things like newspaper interviews for him. Thoughtful Santa, it seems, has an answer for practically everything.

His representative in Greenville, John Zeh, proved to be a very helpful representative at that. John, being an intimate friend of Santa's, served the reporter's purpose.

Apparently, John maintains very close contact with Santa because he seems to know the exact thoughts of the jolly man from the north.

As the star of the reporter's interview, John outlines what hopeful children around Greenville have asked Santa during his visits here. "They seem to still want the traditional baby dolls and cowboy pistols," he says.

Additions this year, however, include specific types of guns such as "one of those short guns like Josh Randall on TV carries" or "those little rocket ships like the ones that launch satellites." John conveys Santa's feeling that the Space Age's influence is apparent in the younger set.

But Santa's Greenville friend has an even greater knowledge of the Christmas elf's innermost feelings. And John speaks of them with apparent authority.

As he describes the feelings of joy Santa derives from his chats with youngsters and from his presenting gifts to them, John speaks with such authority one may have the vague feeling that Santa's representative is Santa himself!

John tells how joyful Santa is when young smiles beam through his long, snow white beard to his smiling face. He describes the tingle in Santa's ear when the little people's whispering voices announce their hearts' desires.

It's simply amazing to realize how well John conveys Santa's feelings toward the little people. It's almost as though he is using the exact words of the jolly old elf.

And John is thoroughly familiar with Santa's schedule. He feels certain Santa will make at least

LADY in the MARKET

BY FRANCES V. RUMMEL

From the novel "Aunt Jane McPhlips and Her Baby Blue Chips," published by Prentice-Hall, Inc. © 1960 by Frances V. Rummel. Distributed by King Features

"Rose doesn't know it yet," Al Bonelli confided one day to Jane. "I want to surprise her. But I dug up enough cash to get ten shares of your A Number One Choice U.S. Inspected stock! I bought day before yesterday and it's already up fifty cents! I've already made five dollars!"

"But you rogue!" Jane said. "You beat me to it. I can't find a broker who'll let me buy it!" "You went to the wrong places. My man knew it. Even though I must be smart."

Thus early Monday morning, shortly after the market had opened, Jane was sitting across the desk from Al's broker, a Mr. Blasingame. She tried to order her stock, but Mr. Blasingame would not be rushed. Finally, he told her, "Yes, I recall Mr. Albert Bonelli and his purchase very well indeed. But his circumstances are somewhat different from yours. He is a businessman. You are a widow. You do not have regular employment. You say you own no life insurance, no property. Then you do have a savings account?"

"A small one," Jane wondered angrily whether he was trying to make her burst into tears. She knew what was coming.

"I would say that the ideal investment for a widow in your situation is a mutual fund. Now Amalgamated Investors has fine diversification, and some of the smartest managers in the business."

There is a wonderful place for mutual funds," Jane waved her hand to encompass a fair share of the world, but a stubborn line formed between her eyes. "With investors who don't read or won't read, and they are many. I know them. I'm a teacher."

When she walked out of Mr. Blasingame's office she was nearer to tears of frustration than favorite stock.

If Jane turned out to be an orthodox investor in unorthodox times, it was because she was, she eventually decided, firmly against Wall Street doctrine, which seemed to operate like a conditioned reflex. What's more, it was outmoded as a surly and ferociously entrenched. Not a single adviser she had met had used any imagination about the special problems, the special needs, that the state of widowhood itself implied.

This is out of Jane's notebook: "The individual with the least amount of money, and who therefore needs money most, is the one who gets the least expert help. She is the one who gets offered widow and orphan stocks or mutual funds. Thus she, of all investors, has least chance."

This observation bothered her so profoundly that she finally brought it up for class discussion. Mindful of her teacher's role, she tried to be tactful.

"Would you please explain the difference," she asked Mr. Petry, "between a customer's man and an investment counselor?"

The minute the question was out she knew there wasn't enough tact in the world to contain it. Being polite, Mr. Petry indulged in a few moments of bland bumbling and wound up saying nothing — beyond the fact that a customer's man preferred to be called "a registered representative" or "an account executive."

Sensing what Jane was trying to get at, and delighted to see his rival's discomfort, Wally Gooch chimed in and pressed the question. "If you want to invest a hundred thousand," he said, "you can rate the services of an investment counselor. But if you have only a thousand bucks, you don't get beyond the customer's man."

Mr. Petry began to protest. "The investment counselor is more—well, he goes in for programming the individual account."

"Yeah," Wally grunted. "But you've got to have a tidy pile of dough before you can rate all that attention."

Jane kicked Wally's foot. There was no point in badgering poor Phil Petry, who was doing his level best to help people help themselves. She wished she had never brought up the question.

Meantime, this exchange had stirred up Mrs. Hope, who had never before heard of an investment counselor. She whispered hurriedly, "You mean I can have a really special personal counselor? If I have a hundred thousand dollars?"

Jane whispered back, "Yes. But you'd better hurry!" Mrs. Hope, ecstatic to realize her new possibilities, couldn't wait to be faithless to her customer's man, Mr. Evans.

Resolving the whole question in terms of her own resources, Jane jotted down her next between-the-lines lesson in the conventions of investing. It was stated with classical simplicity: "The timid and the poor are to remain the timid and the poor. Only the rich are to become richer."

It was then that Jane decided she was wasting time. She would just have to be determined with the next broker, and this time she would choose him carefully in advance—preferably an older man who wouldn't think of Mother's Day the minute she walked in.

Next, he had to be a specialist. Jane had no disposition to be critical of customer's men—but she did feel put out about so much advice, especially when it was unolicited.

A day or so later, after considerable cogitation, Jane entered one of San Francisco's most distinguished investment counseling firms. There she calmly asked to see his head, a Mr. August Ernst. The receptionist smiled, invited her to be seated.

It was Mr. Ernst's late wife who had served on the school board and exhibited views that Jane had admired. Also, aside from this tie, which gave her courage, she had seen Mr. Ernst's grey-thatched, kingly picture many times in the local press.

Suddenly the receptionist said, (To Be Continued Tomorrow)

'Daddysville' Is Name That Stuck

ZEBULON, (AP) — "Daddysville" is the state-erected sign you'll see at a country crossroads near here on U. S. 64—but it's not a haven for beatniks. Elbert Averett owns the store at the crossroads. When he was a small child he had long curls and his parents, who had wanted a girl, called him Sister. When he was 3 his parents got his hair cut and bought him a pair of long pants.

When Elbert was asked what he wanted for a more suitable nickname, he replied, "Daddy." It stuck. And when Highway Department engineers asked him to name the crossroads, "Daddysville" was the name he chose.

"Not a creature was stirring all through the house"

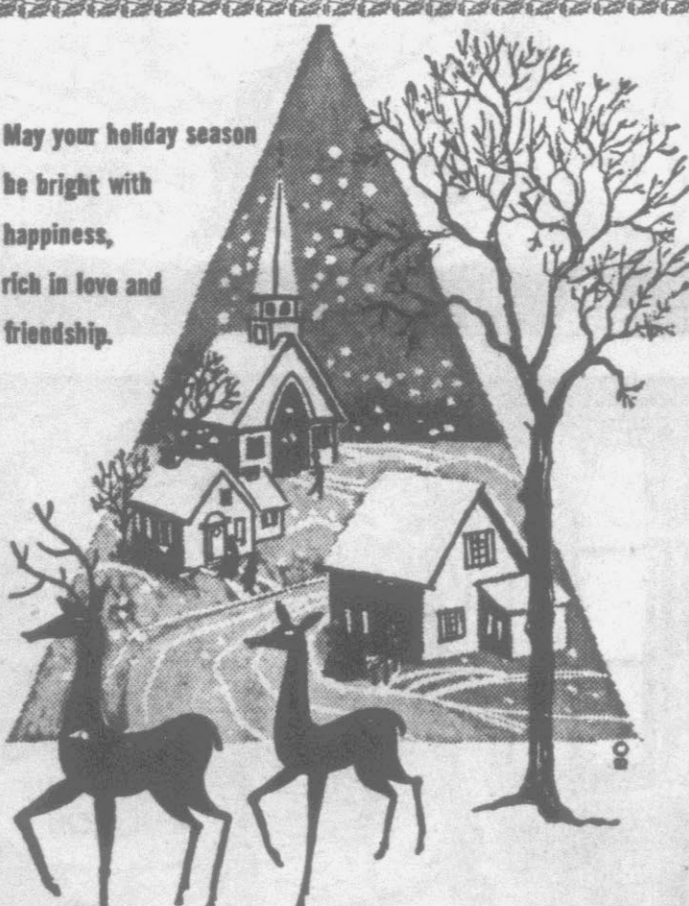

The storybooks tell us our children are nestled in their beds while visions of sugar plums dance through their heads.

As parents we know they are more likely having a pillow fight in the bedroom. Every few minutes at least one will tip-toe to the door to see if it's time for Christmas.

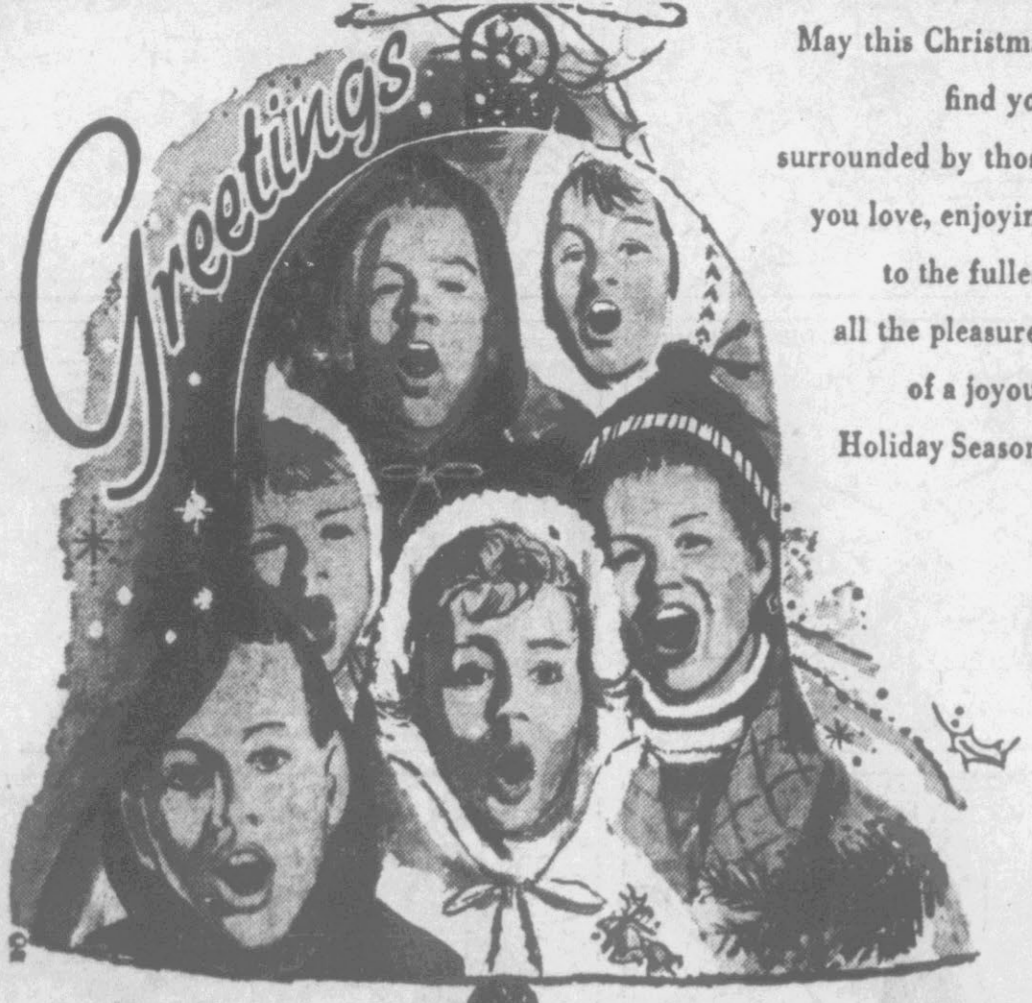

Christmas, to the young, is mostly waiting. To the grown-ups, it's anticipation. And there is nothing quite like it.

It is the sincere wish of The Planters National Bank and Trust Company that the joy of anticipating Christmas will be yours throughout the year, and that the remembrance of why we have a Christmas will guide us all from day to day.

May your holiday season be bright with happiness, rich in love and friendship.
