Tear Gas, Fire Hoses Turned On Belgian Strikers

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)—Police used tear gas and fire hoses today to break up a demonstration in Ghent, Socialist union leaders promptly called for a general strike in Antwerp to retaliate.

It was the first use of tear gas in the eight-day strike aimed at toppling the government of Premier Gaston Eyskens. Strikers in Ghent were trying to force workers out of the fuel gas works administrative office.

Antwerp, lying in the Flemish northern section, has not been hit as hard by the strike which has paralyzed the Socialist strongholds in the industrial and French-speaking south.

The government had reported a back-to-work movement in Antwerp, except for workers at the big port installations. Harbor installations are still paralyzed.

If successful, the Antwerp call would spread the general strike to an important Flemish area, where many are Social Christians and back Eyskens, himself a Social Christian.

A mass demonstration of strikers was staged this morning in Brussels without incident. The capital itself appeared under virtual military siege. Policemen were camped in the central public park opposite Parliament and the royal palace, and in front of the opera house.

Rallies and demonstrations by the striking, 700,000-member Socialist unions were countered by calls from the Catholic Social Christian unions to their 800,000 members to remain steadfast at work.

The Socialists launched the walkout eight days ago in protest against Eyskens' plans for tax increases and social welfare cuts because of the country's financial setback in the Congo. They denounced the government's strike-breaking efforts as dictatorial, called Premier Eyskens a Hitler and demanded the fall of the Social Christian-Liberal coalition.

Catholic union leaders condemned the strike as political and revolutionary, aimed at overthrow of democratic processes.

Belgium, its Christmas dimmed by the strike, faced a cheerless New Year's with few trains running, many power stations shut down or nearly so, mines and industries at a standstill.

Although the government said conditions were returning to normal, the strike has not been called off.

U.S. Plane Fired On In Far East

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—An unarmed U.S. plane was hit by a gun fire while observing Soviet air drops to Pathet Lao rebels here Thursday with Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The plane, hit in the left engine and fuselage, made it back to Vientiane.

The plane was making a reconnaissance flight of Soviet drops to the pro-Communist rebels at Vangvieng, 65 miles north of Vientiane at the request of the Laotian government, the attaché's office said.

Riser, who was making a visual reconnaissance from his plane, saw a Soviet plane dropping equipment over Vangvieng, the attaché's office said.

"He flew over on top of the Soviet plane to see what type of equipment it was dropping," a spokesman added.

"When he was over the Soviet plane he received small-caliber, probably .30 caliber, machine gun fire."

"At the time he was hit he was flying over a jungle area. It is not certain the fire came from Soviet plane."

Air Force And Navy Secretaries Chosen For New Administration

On Friday Kennedy will meet at his home with Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., son of the late president and a former member of the U. S. House of Representatives from New York. Kennedy press secretary Pierre Salinger declined comment on whether Roosevelt, who campaigned for Kennedy, may get a federal job. The Zuckert and Connally appointments were announced by Kennedy after consultation with the man he has named to be secretary of defense, Robert S. McNamara, who is resigning as president of the Ford Motor Co. Zuckert was assistant secretary of the Air Force from 1947 to 1952. He was a member of the Atomic Energy Commission from 1952 to 1954 under appointment by President Harry S. Truman. Zuckert went to Yale College, Yale Law School and Harvard Business School. From 1937-40 he was a lawyer on the staff of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and later served on the Harvard Business School faculty, eventually as assistant dean. He was a lieutenant junior grade in the Navy in 1944-45 and afterward was an assistant to Stuart Symington, now U. S. senator from Missouri and then chief of the Surplus Property Administration. Zuckert was assistant secretary of the Air Force while Symington, a Democrat, was civilian head of that service. Since retirement from the Atomic Energy Commission in 1954 Zuckert has been in private law practice in Washington. Kennedy's selection of Connally, Fort Worth, Tex., attorney, was announced Tuesday night. The new secretary of the Navy was campaign manager this year for Lyndon Johnson in his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination. Connally — a distant relative of former U. S. Senator Tom Connally, Texas Democrat — served as Johnson's administrative assistant when Johnson was first elected to the House in 1939. When Johnson moved to the Senate in 1949, Connally again was administrative assistant. Connally joined the Navy in 1941 as an ensign. He was assigned first to the office of Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal and later to combat duty in the Pacific. He was discharged as a lieutenant commander in 1946 after being awarded the Bronze Star and the Legion of Merit. Connally — a distant relative of a former U. S. Senator from Texas in 1941, and was admitted to the Texas bar at the age of 21. After leaving the Navy he organized and became general manager of radio station KVET in Austin, Tex. In 1948 he managed Johnson's successful campaign for the Senate. In 1956 he was vice chairman of the Texas delegation to the Democratic National Convention. Kennedy is continuing to divide his time between relaxation and preparation for taking over the reins of government Jan. 20. His only announced engagement today is with officials of a New York firm which has turned out an educational documentary film on the White House.

District Kiwanis Governor Will Be Installed On Friday

Governor-elect John T. Barnhill of the Carolinas District of Kiwanis International will officially take office at special ceremonies here Friday.

1960 Governor Carl Hyatt of Asheville is scheduled to arrive here Friday to serve as installation officer at the local Kiwanis ceremonies beginning at 6:30 p.m. at the Rotary Club here.

Barnhill, Greenville farm implement dealer, was elected governor of the Kiwanis district that embraces all Kiwanis Clubs in North and South Carolina at the October district convention held in Raleigh.

Friday's installation ceremonies will mark the first time a Greenville has become a governor of the Carolinas District of Kiwanis.

Furthermore, Barnhill represents the first district governor to come from the Seventh Division of Kiwanis that includes the southeastern counties of North Carolina.

According to Charles Gaskins, president of the Greenville Kiwanis Club, other Kiwanis dignitaries from the area will attend Friday's installation. Among those attending, he said, will be District Secretary-Treasurer Herbert W. Hennig of Darlington, S. C.

JOHN T. BARNHILL

New Air Secretary Has Top Background

By GEOFFREY GOULD
WASHINGTON (AP) — Eugene Zuckert, who will be secretary of the Air Force in the new Democratic administration, has a top level background for the job.

He was an assistant to the first man to hold that post, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo.

Zuckert, whose appointment was announced today at Palm Beach, Fla., by President-elect John F. Kennedy, has held a wide variety of government positions. He worked for the Securities and Exchange Commission in 1937 when he was fresh out of Yale Law School, and in 1952 became a member of the Atomic Energy Commission.

He left the AEC in 1954 and has been a Washington lawyer and management consultant since then.

At 49, Zuckert is stocky and balding.

As a schoolboy he attended the Salisbury, Conn., preparatory school where his roommate was G. Mennen Williams, retiring governor of Michigan who has been named by Kennedy to be assistant secretary of state.

At Yale Law School, Zuckert went through an experimental course proposed by William O. Douglas, now a member of the Supreme Court, which combined instruction at Yale with courses at the Harvard graduate school of business administration.

After serving with the Securities and Exchange Commission for three years, Zuckert in 1940 returned to the Harvard institution as an instructor, later becoming an assistant professor and assistant dean.

During the same years, 1940-44, Zuckert was a consultant to the then Army Air Force and taught at a statistical school for officers at Harvard.

Zuckert went to the office of chief of naval operations in Washington in 1944, working on a Navy inventory control plan with the rank of lieutenant, junior grade. In 1945 he became an assistant to Symington, who then was head of the Surplus Property Administration.

When the Air Force was created as a separate force in 1947, Symington became its first civilian head. He brought Zuckert with him as an assistant secretary.

Zuckert developed a comptroller system in the Air Force, the first of the three services to have one. Later this innovation was enacted into law for all three as a result of Hoover Commission recommendations.

He was named to the Atomic Energy Commission in 1952 by President Harry S. Truman. Zuckert has been described as friendly but quiet and self-effacing. His motto is "be objective." Like Kennedy, he enjoys golf. Zuckert has been married twice and has three children.

A joint installation service for both Greenville Lodge No. 284 and Crown Point Lodge No. 708 will be held at that time. The ceremony will be open to Master Masons only.

Wanted Man Is Found in Detroit

TRYON, N.C. (AP) — A Tryon motel operator wanted on a murder charge in the gunshot slaying of a Landrum, S.C., textile worker has been arrested in Detroit, Mich.

Detectives Tuesday picked up Paul McCall in the fatal shooting of Bill Whiteside, 29, whose body was found early Monday in the trailer that served as the office of McCall's motel. The body had five bullet wounds.

Whiteside's automobile, missing after the slaying, also was found in Detroit.

Whiteside lived with his parents, who operate a produce stand across U.S. 176 from the motel.

Detroit detectives said they located McCall after receiving an anonymous tip. Sheriff Hugh Howard of Polk County, N.C., said he had notified Detroit authorities to be on the lookout, since McCall had spent some time there, and his present wife has relatives there.

Whiteside was seen to go into McCall's trailer about 4:30 p.m. Sunday, police said. The body was found about 9 a.m. Monday.

The sheriff said he will ask the district solicitor in Forest City to prepare extradition papers, which will then be forwarded to North Carolina Gov. Luther Hodges for signing. Then, if Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan also signs, the sheriff said he plans to go to Detroit to bring McCall back. He doesn't intend to go until both governors sign, and it's not known yet whether McCall will fight extradition.

Meanwhile, at Howard's request, police in Detroit are holding McCall as a fugitive.

Rev. Aitken Is Rotary Speaker

AYDEN—Rev. Louis Aitken related humorous stories about his hobbies of hunting and fishing at the Friday meeting of the Ayden Rotary Club.

The Rev. Mr. Aitken, pastor of the Ayden Methodist Church, was introduced by Hal Edwards, program chairman.

Following the program, members of the club joined in group singing of Christmas carols, led by Rotarian Corey Stokes. President Wayland McGlohon presided at the meeting.

The club had previously voted to suspend its customary supper and instead gave the money for Christmas projects.

Had No Arrests For Drunkenness

AYDEN—The Ayden Police Department experienced a "most unusual Christmas—not one person arrested for drunkenness," Police Chief William D. Brooks said.

In fact, the only offense included arrests for failure to keep proper lookout, speeding, failure to see that movement could be made in safety, running a stop sign and careless and reckless driving, Brooks said. This period included Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday following Christmas.

Town Offices To Be Open Monday

GRIFTON—The Grifton town offices will remain open Monday, Jan. 2, following New Year's day, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Joyce McCoy, town clerk.

Consequently those wishing to pay town bills will find the office open for business, as usual.

Two Fires Over Ayden Holidays

AYDEN — Two fires in Ayden over the Christmas holidays destroyed one home and partially destroyed another, Fire Chief Tillman Chauncey said yesterday.

The worst fire, which completely demolished the old Missouri Hooks home on High Street, occurred about 1 p.m. Monday. Chauncey said he believed it was caused by a defective chimney.

The home was inhabited by children of the late Missouri Hooks, Chauncey said.

Chauncey previously has called attention to the fact that there are several defective chimneys in town, which are consequently dangerous as fire hazards. The Ayden Fire Department made an inspection of chimneys during the recent Fire Prevention Week.

The other fire occurred Christmas morning about 10:15 at the home of Jasper Burney, located on Throver Street. A portion of the rear of the home burned in the fire, apparently caused by an overheated heater.

DSA Nominees

Distinguished Service Award nominations must be in by Dec. 28, Jaycee Chairman Roy Hardee reminded today.

The award will be presented to the city's outstanding young man at the Jaycee's annual Bosses Night Jan. 3, according to Hardee.

Nominees must be between 21 and 36, and they need not be Jaycees. A secret panel of judges will consider the entries and choose the man to receive the award.

Principal speaker for the banquet will be Al Sharpe, president of the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce.

More than 150 Jaycees, bosses, past DSA winners and invited guests are expected for the event. David J. Whichard will be master of ceremonies.

Mail Piled Up For 9-Year-Old

HARDY, Va. (AP) — Dorothy Ridgeway, 9, got her well-publicized Christmas wish for greeting cards but she may spend the next few days, or even months, going through them all.

An estimated 100 bags of undelivered Christmas mail filled the tiny Hardy post office and spilled out onto the steps and lawn. Another 20 or more in the mountain-side house of the Ridgeways kept them virtually immobilized in their own home.

The Ridgeways have been eating only sandwiches since Christmas. Dorothy's mother said she couldn't even get to her stove or cabinets. "I can't get to anything," she said.

The family has spent most of its time opening mail since a message of unknown origin appeared on a Weather Bureau teletype circuit last Wednesday describing Dorothy's affliction with an incurable bone disease.

Blame Birds For Poisonous Fumes

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Sparrows were blamed for carbon monoxide fumes that flooded six women employees of a trading stamp store Tuesday.

Vent pipes to heaters of the suburban store were found clogged with birds' nests.

The employees had been bothered by headaches for about two weeks but previous checks of the heaters didn't locate the trouble.

Boy's Murderer Said To Be A Young Extortionist

NEW YORK (AP)—Robert Guittari, 14, Christmas tree delivery boy murdered Friday night, was stabbed by a neighborhood bully trying to extort money from him, police say.

Acting Chief of Detectives Francis Robb said Edward Vogt, 17, a slender, good-looking youth with a crop of brown hair worn in a luxuriant pompadour, admitted the killing Tuesday.

Vogt told police he stabbed Guittari with a nine-inch hunting knife after the boy refused his demand, "Give me all your money."

Young Guittari had only two quarters in his pocket, tips from Christmas tree deliveries.

Police said Vogt told them he had been selling Christmas trees in the upper West Side when he saw Guittari "lugging a big tree." He said he thought the boy would "be an easy touch," and followed him into the building, offering to help carry the tree.

Hunting Suspect In Embezzling

CHARLOTTE (AP) — William V. Dick, 35-year-old one-time manager of house trailer sales lots in Charlotte and nearby Rock Hill, S.C., has been charged with embezzling $22,610.

Detective Lt. O. A. Crenshaw of the Charlotte Police Department, said Tuesday efforts were being made to locate Dick.

An auditor's report, Crenshaw said, alleged irregularities of $180,569 in Dick's account with the GWC Trailer Corp. between June 4, 1958 and April 30, 1960.

Skelton's wife, Georgia, his daughter, Valentina, 13, his mother and Mrs. Skelton's parents will join him tonight in a gift-opening ceremony. Friends will take Red's place in his weekly TV show during his convalescence.

HOW TO SURVIVE AN ELK HUNT—This is Dulcinea, a pet elk which hangs around the J. C. Hunter ranch at Frijoles, Tex., in the Guadalupe mountains. Since she is free to mingle with wild elk, the "NO" signs were painted on her sides during the recent elk hunt on the ranch. The amiable pet elk survived the hunt ordered by the state game commission although nine of her wild relatives fell to hunters' bullets. (AP Wirephoto)

Emphasizing Hemispheric Views

If President-elect Kennedy gives his vice president as a special assignment the job of rebuilding relationships between the United States and Latin American nations, hemispheric solidarity may be expected to see great strides during the next few years.

Vice-President-elect Johnson is well versed in U.S.-Latin American affairs, and over the years he has maintained a close personal relationship with the Latin American delegation in Washington as well as with some of the heads of state south of the border. This in itself commends Johnson for such a special assignment in addition to his other duties as vice president.

A further factor of utmost consideration is the reaction in Latin American nations that would result from the new administration giving such an assignment to the second highest elected official in the United States government. The very fact that Johnson was assigned the task would emphasize the importance with which the U.S. regards its relationships with the other countries of the Western Hemisphere. It would go a long way toward dispelling any attitude that the U. S. looks upon the nations of Latin America as of secondary importance among the geographic areas of the world.

Assertions during the recent national election campaign that U.S.-Latin American affairs had been neglected were not original with Sen. Kennedy. Over a period of years there have been many appeals for the administration to devote more attention to these nations which are our closest geographic neighbors. The fact that we may be taking too much for granted in our friendship with these countries was pointed out time and again; but for the most part under both the Truman and the Eisenhower administrations, Latin American affairs were accorded no high priority in State Department work.

There have been many indications that the Kennedy administration plans to accord Latin American relations with a priority more in keeping with the consideration this particular field of foreign affairs deserves. Certainly the designation of the new vice president to direct such activities will assure greater attention to this field than heretofore has been the case under normal State Department procedure. It will also, in our opinion, result in the establishment of firmer and longer lasting friendships between the United States and its neighbors to the South.

Some Differences Are Bound To Be Apparent

In spite of anticipated close cooperation between the new Democratic administration and the party's leaders in Congress, there already is an indication all the party leaders in Washington will not see eye-to-eye on important matters.

At least one inkling of this came a few days ago when President-elect Kennedy met with his vice president, House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Sen. Mike Mansfield who is slated to become the Democratic leader in the Senate.

While the President-elect called for federal aid to education both in the form of funds for building schools and funds for supplementing teacher salaries, Rep. Rayburn talked only of aid of school construction. The matter of federal aid for teacher salaries could be taken up after the matter of federal aid for buildings had been resolved.

As the Democratic administration begins its work with the Democratic-controlled Congress, it is not unlikely that sharp differences of opinion between the administration and party leaders in Congress will become evident. For one thing, a considerable portion of the Democratic leadership in Congress is made up of Southerners who are not likely to agree completely with some of the programs proposed by the new President. In all probability they will adopt a position more conservative than that of the administration.

It is also likely that these differences—while they will be genuine and sharply defined—may appear more subtle than they really are. As the administration moves to push its program through Congress, the practiced hand of political compromise—that of Lyndon Johnson—may find the common ground of agreement before any open controversy develops.

Though it may have been unintentional, a note injected at the conference of Democratic leaders in Florida by Speaker Rayburn suggests that the Democratic Congress will make up its own mind about proposed legislation; even though that legislation is submitted by a Democratic administration.

Brings Energy To Job That Needs It

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Kennedy brings a lot of energy to a job that can use it—as attorney general and head of the wide activities of the Justice Department.

With the exception of the outgoing attorney general, William Rogers, Kennedy's new job has been held by a long line of lawyers not distinguished for fiery zest.

As head of the Justice Department Robert will have enough to keep him busy without being an adviser—especially on politics—to his brother, President-elect John F. Kennedy, although he almost certainly will continue to do some political advising.

Many of the chores Robert undertook before can now be shifted to John M. Bailey, President-elect Kennedy's own choice for chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The Justice Department is a vague official identification that it is easy to fail to recognize the broad power over many fields of American life given to Robert by his brother.

Under the department's broad umbrella come the FBI, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Board of Immigration Appeals, the Bureau of Prisons, the Board of Parole, the United States Marshal's office and around 30,000 employees, of whom about 5,000 are lawyers. But this is only the superficial and obvious face of power in Robert's hands. The attorney general is the government's chief legal adviser. The Justice Department does all the prosecuting in federal criminal cases.

It has its hands in many other aspects of American living which it can deeply affect and influence by its activity or lack of it.

Take the Tax Division which acts against tax violations and evasions by individuals or corporations. Its Antitrust Division alone is a powerful force for preventing monopoly practices by big business.

The recently created Civil Rights Division — which both whites and Negroes will watch intently — can, if it wishes, be a driving engine against civil rights violations, particularly in the South.

Other segments include the Civil and Internal Security Divisions. The latter over the years has prosecuted many top Communists. The Alien Property Office is also under the Justice Department.

And since Robert made a reputation investigating labor racketeering he can be expected to be active in some way in this field, too.

Robert not only has drive. He has been the most controversial figure in the entire Kennedy clan. Robert will probably be a controversial attorney general.

I Don't Care What They Say—

Post-Christmas Notes

It's all over but the after-effects—Christmas, that is.

It was different for many people. For us, there was early rising to visit, and friends from far-away places home for the first time in several years. It was just the way it was when we used to gather, still in high school and later in college—perhaps it will still be 10 years from now.

For some others it was the first Christmas after the death of a loved one. Somewhat more melancholy.

Then there were the children just old enough to really enjoy Christmas, which was made for them. Lou Robin walked in awe, not sure what to play with next. Certain things received a special reverence, like the cooking set; and other things—like a nursing uniform—received the cold treatment, probably until just next week.

Then Daddy had to build a stove which Santa just couldn't squeeze under that tree with all the other toys. It was a Christmas at its best.

Some might not agree. We must offer our condolences to some of the local photographers and newsmen—Stuart Savage and Roy Hardee—who spent a good part of that precious Christmas day 'covering' the big fire in Kinston. We understand quite a few went to the city across the river to watch, and it was quite a fire. We managed to take it in ourselves.

And, just think, while the local stores are being 'mopped' by after Christmas bargain hunters and those exchanging Christmas gifts which didn't fit, four stores in Kinston are sweeping up the ashes. We hope those who bought from those four merchants don't have much to exchange.

One of the stores was a jewelry shop, with diamonds and all, you know. One friend quipped that she'd like to go and scrounge around the ashes next day, possibly to find some blackened diamonds.

Diamonds are supposed to be one of the hardest substances known to man and usually don't burn, so we were taught years ago. We are wondering about what happened to all those diamonds over a fire.

It was quite a Christmas. And it was quite a Christmas. If Christmas cometh, can New Year's be far behind?

The answer may be that Mr. Kennedy intends to run the cabinet, and perhaps the country, as autocratically as he ran his campaign. The Secretary of State is, by all accounts, chiefly a technician, without a strong personal or ideological stance of his own. The lesser offices are so balanced and limited that the President can keep as firm a hand on his cabinet as he kept on his campaign team.

Mr. Kennedy, a confident man, sure of himself, never has shown the least doubt about the assumption of power at such an early age, and with so little experience. It is not likely that the slim majority led him to alter his course or tone down his cabinet choices. He does not want strength and boldness from his officers, but absolute commitment and obedience. And brother Bobby will be there to see that he gets it.

High figures in the party were ignored, until one by one they came to Kennedy with hats in hand. The religious issue was exploited by the Adam Clayton Powell line: "A vote for Nixon is a vote for bias." The promise of the Vice-Presidency, once dangled before Northern liberals, was shifted to Johnson, conven-considerably higher than what he has been paying—sometimes twice as much. This is partly due to the fact that he is moving from a depressed or blighted area. That is why it is being redeveloped.

Beyond this, however, is the fact that owners of vacant and available commercial space in other parts of the city anticipate an increase in demand for dislocated firms and raise their rents accordingly.

Furthermore, the legal limit of reimbursement payable to any dislocated firm is now $3,000. This, say the researchers, is quite adequate to cover out-of-pocket expenses of most dislocated firms.

However, about 20 per cent of the firms affected by redevelopment have claimed expenses of more than $3,000.

HARDSHIPS NOTED
Some firms neglect to take advantage of government aid. A Hartford liquor store owner, for example, bequeathed the $1,800 he forfeited when he moved out before acquisition. A clothing store operator who gave up and went out of business two months after his move stated he could have 'made it' if his moving expenses, fixture and dismantling and re-assembly had been paid for him.

Among the nearly 25 per cent of dislocated firms that go out of business or disappear, some are submarginal and substandard operations that could not exist in any area or under any circumstances other than those of a slum area.

The study found that the great majority of firms relocated successfully are better off in new locations after six months or a year. In 85 per cent of relocations, business and profits increased. The authors concluded that businesses should take official notifications seriously, re-evaluate location and space needs, seek and accept all assistance available, and stand ready to act independently if necessary.

Urban renewal projects are underway in 400 municipalities in the United States, the professors found. And, in general, their advice seems to be: If threatened with dislocation, grab all the help and money you can get, and relax and enjoy it. Copies of the summary are free for asking S.B.A., Washington 25, D. C.

HOW TO GET PROMOTED? SOCIAL GIVES ANSWER
"How do you get promoted around here?" is a frequent question.

Standard Oil of California has come up with an answer: a booklet explaining its standards for promotion. Main points: getting job well done on time; knowing job and why it is important; being willing to take on added assignments; working well with people; adjusting well to new assignments; accepting criticism; accepting responsibility; and being willing to learn.

Society Only Varies

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Society is never killed; it is only different. There are always snobs and those who aspire to be snobs and that makes Society. In the time of Louis XIV, snobbishness was based on family, the remnants of feudalism. In the time of Ward McAllister, it was based on money and was almost entirely parvenu. In the time of Cleveland Amory, who wrote "Who Killed Society?" it is based on the opinions of peep-hole columnists and headwaiters.

Amory apparently is annoyed with the present breed because it is so vulgar and unmanly, but then it has usually been so, even in the period of the Restoration after the Puritans eschewed vulgarity in favor of piety.

Amory is offended by the "Publi-ciety" that is the luring of public relations boys and girls to keep a so-called celebrity's name in the newspapers. One marries half a dozen husbands; another has a dozen wives. Each fray brings attendant publicity and satisfies a craving to be noticed. I know a person who insists on sitting in fashionable restaurants precisely where everyone must pass him as they enter or leave, even though it is the most uncomfortable table in the place.

Life can be very troublesome if one has to bother about such brevities; nevertheless, that is what Society in New York has come down to, except some older folks who remember the good old days when neither the Irish nor the Jews needed to be invited anywhere because they did not expect it.

This has always been a country of nouveau riche because the old rich remained in Europe. Nobody on the Mayflower was a millionaire; in fact, nobody on the Mayflower was distinguished except for piety. And so, each generation produced its own superiors and it was generally based on money.

In an earlier period, those who possessed money married their daughters off to scholars, or clergymen, or graduates of West Point and Annapolis; in our generation, when parents have no voice in marriages, rich girls prefer to marry actors who are celebrities or Europeans with phony titles but good manners. Most of the nobility of the world have been debilitated by revolutions, but there are still gals who will pay for one of these republished titles and thus be sure of a mention in Igor Cassin's column when they marry. This sort of nobilitated rabble still has some currency in the United States.

Amory, of course, will henceforth be very unpopular with those whom he exposes. There are always folks who believe that they will be glorified by changing their names, having their faces lifted, changing their religions without changing their faith—all sorts of devices are resorted to in the hope that one will receive an invitation to the Bachelor's Ball, whose invitation list was reduced from 800 to 400 without much advantage.

Life is much like this in the world over. Snobbery is a delightful occupation if one has nothing better to do. Even among the lowly, there are those whom one knows and those with whom one would not be seen dead. And then there is always the maverick who crosses over and makes the grade and dies of a broken heart because at the very end somebody had to bring up old accounts.

One can be very nasty about such things—but why? Amory has a chapter on Jewish society and I must say that he is very gentle and discreet and mentions only the finest people and none of those who are ashamed to be descended from King David but prefer William the Conqueror. Personally, I prefer to be descended from Aaron, the brother of Moses, which I am on my mother's side, if you are willing to believe my records which are as good as those who claim that they came from the Stuarts when, as a matter of fact, my father knew their families in Bialystok and Warsaw.

But then we are snobs, too. We regard Romanians as inferior. It is an interesting argument, "Who Killed Society?" My own opinion is that it was Sherman Billingsley. When Sherman, out of

Maybe Too Much Over Exposure

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Whatever happened to "Jingle Bells?" There was a time that was sweeping the country from coast to coast last week. But it seems to have died out in the last couple of days. Maybe too much over exposure.

"Have a nice Christmas?" asks the pretty secretary, returning to work a day late from the holidays.

"No thanks!" grumbles the office grouch. "Just had one."

An unknown virus of lassitude sweeps the nation between the departure of Santa Claus and the arrival of the New Year.

It is the week of "the great letdown." Everybody rests on his oars in the doldrums of desire.

No one wants to sing a carol. No one wants to throw a ball. Life settles down into a vast sluggishness of mind and body and spirit. It becomes a big fat yawn.

Everyone is seasonally worn out from welcomes and wassail and turkey and pudding and good will and shopping and mailing packages and opening packages. Everyone secretly wants to crawl into a cocoon and dwell there and dream there until the first robin of spring blows his rusty bugle.

Who wants to be up and doing? At home the housewife takes a longer afternoon nap on the couch than usual. In the evening she sits and stares at the winking, blinking Christmas tree, which has already begun to shed its needles. She knows she should be scribbling Happy New Year cards to the people she forgot to send Christmas cards to, but somehow she doesn't feel quite up to it.

At the office you'd have to fire a 21-gun salute throughout the day to keep the staff awake. The tasks they now spend all week postponing they'd ordinarily romp through in half a morning any other time of the year.

Yep, the hired hand knows he ought to buckle down and wind up his yearend report. But instead he puts his feet on his desk and stares vacantly into space, robbed of all will to performance.

The boss is in the same fix. He knows he ought to be planning the firm's progress in the year ahead, but he doesn't want to. He knows that at least he ought to go out and bowl out the hired hand for doing nothing.

But is it worth the trouble? No, not now. So the boss puts his feet on his desk, too, and stares unseeing at the pictures on his wall.

Ennui holds the race of mankind from its usual promise. It is easier to postpone everything than to do anything.

The virus will pass. The great letdown will end. In another few days the world will hum as busily and shout as stridently as it usually does.

But in the week between Christmas and New Year's, personal character—plus a few teaspoonsful of bicarbonate of soda—are about all that keep the human race going.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
LOVE THY NEIGHBOR

An elderly woman much respected by all who know her tells how years ago her next-door neighbor had been very unfriendly. Try as she would, she could not get a pleasant word out of her neighbor. After several years, a mutual friend revealed to her the reason. Because she went out on the porch to bring in the morning paper, in neighborhood and neglect, and did not dress until after she had seen her husband off to work, her neighbor, peeping through the curtains, considered her an abandoned woman.

We may be inclined to laugh at such a severe judgment based on such slight evidence. But are not most of us guilty of similarly uncharitable opinions very often? It is much easier to believe evil instead of good—so much easier, and so much more exciting, especially if we have trace of jealousy or envy in us.

How much grief would be avoided if we always tried to think the best of others, not the worst. When we assume the best of people, we generally find our assumptions fulfilled. When we give them friendliness and trust, we usually get friendliness and trust in return.

If you wish to spread a good influence among those around you, fill your life with the sunshine of Christian love, and watch the blossoms spring up all over.

To Firms: 'Grab All You Can'

By ELMER ROESSNER

Nearly 25 per cent of the small businesses uprooted by urban redevelopment projects go out of business or disappear, your government would have you know.

A new publication by the Small Business Administration, called Management Research Summary No. 1, says 75 per cent of the dislocated firms relocate successfully.

The summary is by William N. Kinnaird, Jr., and Zenon (cq) S. Malinowski, of the University of Connecticut, based on a study of projects in Hartford and New Haven.

The study indicates redevelopment projects will collapse more than 37,000 businesses, mostly small, in the next decade because at least 150,000 businesses will be forced to move.

TROUBLE AHEAD
"When the businessman about to be dislocated starts looking for a new location, he finds he is competing with others also being forced out of the redevelopment area," the summary says. "He also usually finds that the rent for available space is considerably higher than what he has been paying—sometimes twice as much. This is partly due to the fact that he is moving from a depressed or blighted area. That is why it is being redeveloped.

Beyond this, however, is the fact that owners of vacant and available commercial space in other parts of the city anticipate an increase in demand for dislocated firms and raise their rents accordingly.

Furthermore, the legal limit of reimbursement payable to any dislocated firm is now $3,000. This, say the researchers, is quite adequate to cover out-of-pocket expenses of most dislocated firms.

However, about 20 per cent of the firms affected by redevelopment have claimed expenses of more than $3,000.

Congress Must Be Sold On Ambassadorial Expenses

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

As the year 1960 comes to an end and a new year beckons, the photographic annuals make their appearance with selections of noteworthy pictures and photographic personalities of the year past.

These books make wonderful little worlds into which a camera fan can retreat to browse, explore and marvel. They can transform a long winter evening or an otherwise lazy Sunday afternoon into a photographic global exploration and session with some of the world's noted cameramen.

They also can solve the problem of what to get for photo fans for Christmas since they appeal to and inspire all of them no matter what camera or equipment one may own or what type of pictures he takes. The choice, too, is literally world-wide since besides the well-known American annuals from U. S. Camera and Popular Photography, we have the British "International Photography Year Book, 1961," (St. Martin's Press, N. Y.), the Japanese "Photography of the World," (Ziff-Davis, N. Y.) and "The German Photographic Annual," (Amphoto, N. Y.).

Probably the most ambitious project of all is U. S. Camera's 25th anniversary edition, "The Picture Universe, 1961" edited by Tom Maloney (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, N. Y.). A 33-page section is devoted to individual capsule reviews, in words and pictures, of each of the preceding 25 annuals. There's a rich memory harvest in the quarter-century survey as people and memorable events parade quickly by.

A remarkable technical achievement is brought to us in a four-foot, fold-out color panorama of Switzerland taken by Emil Schulthess. The dawn to dusk composite photograph was shot in 24 sections, each turned 15 degrees, from a specially built photo tower on a mountain near Lucerne, the geographical center of Switzerland. He made 42 trips up the mountain to find one day with proper atmospheric conditions suitable for a 360 degree color photograph. It took the whole day to shoot.

In the "1961 Photography Annual," (Ziff-Davis, N. Y.), the editors' selection of the year's best pictures comprise a 78-page section. This must be high-fashion photographer Irving Penn's for public recognition for a portfolio from his new book, Moments Preserved, is also displayed in this volume.

Spotlights are also focused on photographers John Bryson, Ken Heyman, Rolf Winquist, Robert Capa and Masaya Nakamura. Bryson is a magazine editor who

By ENDRE MARTON
WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless President-elect John F. Kennedy can convince Congress that America's ambassadors need more expense money, he'll have to fill some top diplomatic posts from the ranks of the wealthy.

Kennedy started a move in the direction of more expense money this week when he had an amicable discussion of the problem at Palm Beach with Rep. John Rooney, D-N.Y. Rooney has referred to ambassadorial entertainment funds as "booze allowances." As chairman of a House Appropriations subcommittee Rooney has fought for years against increasing them.

Rooney reported that the president-elect's father, Joseph Kennedy, felt obliged to spend about $100,000 a year of his own money while he was ambassador to Great Britain. Such sums are not usually found in the bank accounts of career diplomats, the Kennedy reportedly wants to send to some of the most important—and expensive—foreign capitals.

Nobody denies that the country has had a number of outstanding amateur ambassadors. Among the 20 non-career appointees serving abroad today are some excellent men, State Department professionals agree.

But the present system makes it virtually impossible for a career man to accept an assignment to London, Paris, or a similar major post. Moreover the president could not send a non-career but brilliant man, such as a university professor who is an expert on international problems, to such a post unless he was also rich. Officials feel this is a dangerous limitation.

The pay of an ambassador varies from $20,000 to $27,500 a year, which means that an ambassador in the highest category gets more than the secretary of state, whose pay is only $25,000 a year.

How many are in this highest category is an official secret because it varies from time to time. It is no secret, however, that the ambassadors to the United Nations, London, Paris, Bonn, Tokyo, New Delhi, Karachi, Moscow, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, and some other places receive the highest possible amount.

Besides his pay, the ambassador gets two allowances. The first is the entertainment allowance. The other is the house allowance for the upkeep of his residence. The State Department prefers not to talk about the entertainment allowance. Some suggest the reason for secrecy is that the department is ashamed of how little it is.

It is generally known that ambassadors at major posts get $6,000 a year for entertaining and a house allowance ranging from $10,000 to $15,000 a year. The yearly $6,000, put at their disposal at the beginning of the fiscal year on July 1, usually lasts for four days. After the traditional July 4th parties at the embassies, nothing is left for the rest of the year.

Therefore, it has been necessary to appoint rich men to certain posts. If the department was lucky it got a rich man like Douglas Dillon, now undersecretary of state and Kennedy's Treasury secretary-designate. Dillon started his public career as ambassador to France.

How much these rich men spend from their own money is their business and anybody's guess; the State Department has no way of knowing.

James Reston, Washington bureau chief of the New York Times, wrote recently that James D. Zellerbach, President Eisenhower's envoy to Rome, spent $35,000 a year above his salary and allowances, and John Hay Whitney, the ambassador to London, over $100,000.

The embassies themselves get a certain amount for entertainment, to be divided among diplomats who have to wine and dine in the capitals in which they are stationed. The embassy in London, for instance, is understood to get $29,000 a year for such purposes, of which $6,000 goes to the ambassador himself.

The remaining $23,000 is divided among diplomats based in London, Belfast, Birmingham, Cardiff, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Liverpool, Manchester and Southampton, which leaves hardly enough for a modest dinner a year for a press attache.

While British diplomats may get less in pay than their American colleagues, their entertainment allowances are known to be far higher. The British ambassador to Washington is rumored to get 10 times as much as his opposite number in London.

In some posts the U. S. military comes to the aid of the diplomats. In Berlin, for instance, the military picks up the tab for the State Department, which has a sizable group of diplomats there.

The president-elect has to persuade Rooney's committee to help if he wants to pick, as rumored, Charles E. Bohler, as his envoy to Paris. Until then, however, he will be limited to men who can afford to pay up to $100,000 a year from their own pockets for representing the United States.

LIKE MOTHER, LIKE LAMB. The same quizzical look from a ewe and her lamb greeted photographer August Sycholt when he snapped this picture. It appears in the British "International Yearbook, 1961," edited by Normal Hall.

became a successful free lance cameraman. We are shown how he coped with a variety of assignments this past year. Heyman, another freelancer, shows us a small sample of a picture story on Nigeria, used when that nation became independent. Winquist, a versatile Swedish professional, presents a portfolio of beautiful women. Capa, a combat photographer who died in action in Indo-China, is represented by some of his famous war photographs which are now being exhibited in the U. S. and abroad. Nakamura, one of the new Japanese school of photography, has made a successful specialty of figure studies.

Other features of the annual are a section on advertising photography, examples of camera abstractions from the Museum of Modern Art's exhibition, prize winners from some of the year's photo contests, and notes on each photograph in the book which are reproduced in miniature for easy identification.

Two Peron Policemen Hide Out 5 Years In Embassy Basement

By GEORGE ARFELD
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Two of ex-dictator Juan Peron's policemen set a record this week for time spent in political asylum in a Latin-American embassy.

The brothers Juan Carlos and Luis Amadeo Cardoso have been living for 5 years, 3 months and 1 week in the basement of the Paraguayan Embassy.

That is a week longer than the famous stay of Victor Raul Haya de la Torre, leader of the leftist APRA party of Peru, who finally was allowed to go into exile six years ago from the Colombian Embassy in Lima. Haya de la Torre was accused of a part in a bloody revolt in 1938, and Colombia and Peru twice fought his case through the World Court at the Hague before they finally reached face-saving agreement.

The laws and traditions of political asylum in Latin America, born of uncertain times, are meticulously observed on a continent where the political pendulum often swings swiftly. Many an ousted dictator has managed to retire in comfort abroad because those who gained power by revolution never knew when the revolt against them might come. But in recent years there has been a rising public clamor for trial of those accused of brutality and atrocities.

The brothers Cardoso were attached to the Peron dictatorship's special section of the federal police. Their job was to extract confessions from politicians and citizens who ran afoul of the Peron regime.

Moon-faced Juan Carlos and mustached Luis Amadeo are accused of specializing in the use of an electric needle while the victim was tied to a hard table with leather thongs.

On the day the armed forces finally deposed Peron in 1955, the brothers Cardoso lost no time in racing to the Paraguayan Embassy where the fallen dictator already had taken refuge.

Peron soon after was granted a safe conduct to exile but not the Cardosos. The new Argentine government argued they were guilty of common crimes against individuals, not political crimes.

The Paraguayan ambassador puts the case for their safe conduct this way: "The nation granting asylum has the right to define the crime of the (refugees) and my country considers that the crimes of the Cardoso brothers are of a political nature, because at the time they sought asylum there was no penalty asked for, or process of law against these gentlemen."

Except for the restriction on their movements, Juan Carlos and Luis Amadeo are not faring so badly.

They have repainted the walls of their basement apartment blue to their own taste. Relatives, free to visit them, have brought two radios, a television set and a double bed for each. They have their own telephone, and after the embassy's office hours they may walk in the garden.

A Catholic priest visits them. Occasionally their wives spend the night in the basement. The Paraguayan Embassy gives them $50 a month as pocket money.

But all these years federal police have maintained a determined watch outside the building.

$9,000 Median Pay For Science

WASHINGTON (AP)—Here's a chance to check your salary against the paycheck of a scientist.

The National Science Foundation reporting today on a survey of 110,000 scientists in 1960, said the median annual salary reported was $9,000—that is, half earned more than $9,000, half earned less.

Salaries ranged from $6,000 to $15,000 yearly, with the highest pay going to scientists "employed in industry, those with a doctorate and those engaged in management or administrative duties."

In another category—the "gross professional income" for 1959—the median was $10,000. NSF said the $1,000 difference between this and the reported median salary for 1960 is probably accounted for "in supplementary employment, consulting fees and royalties."

The highest median gross income was reported by scientists in the medical field—$14,000.

Nearly half the scientists who answered a questionnaire for the NSF's "National Register of Scientific and Technical Personnel" reported their foremost specialty either in chemistry or the life sciences—that is, agricultural, biological or medical.

Sixty per cent of the employed scientists indicated they held advanced degrees; 37 per cent had the doctorate and 23 per cent had a master's degree.

The median age reported for full-time employed scientists was 38—with the range being from 20 to 60 and over.

One fourth of the respondents reported 20 or more years of professional experience and 60 per cent had five to 19 years.

Small Rates For Small Cars, Dogs

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP)—Phi Theta Kappa fraternity boys at Mesa College needed to raise money to send delegates to a national convention.

They volunteered to wash cars and dogs at a service station at these rates: a dollar each for standard cars and pooches; 50 cents for compact cars and compact pooches.

Surpassed Quota In Movie-Going

MOSCOW (AP)—The fur-trapping district of Evenkya has overfulfilled one of its quotas of the Soviet Union's seven-year economic plan by almost 100 per cent for movie-going.

The deputy from that barren Siberian region told Parliament proudly Thursday that whereas the plan calls for every citizen to attend movies 24 times a year by 1965, his constituents already go 44 times a year.

The dragonfly is depicted on some prehistoric New Mexican pottery and in ancient Oriental paintings.

Flurries Follow Big Snow Storm

DENVER (AP)—Scattered snow flurries sifted down in many sections of Colorado today in the wake of a storm that coated cities in the state with up to four inches of new snow.

Denver had the heaviest reported fall of four inches Tuesday. Akron in eastern Colorado had nearly three inches of snow.

Although all highways were snowpacked by the storm none was closed to traffic. Hundreds of minor accidents were reported in Denver where slick streets snarled traffic during Tuesday's rush hours.

Neighborhood Conservation The Answer To Greenville's Redevelopment Needs

WE ENDORSE —

- A five year program to bring all housing in Greenville up to sanitation, and safety standards.
- Expanded and well trained inspection staffs.
- Stepped-up inspections and enforcement of health and safety codes. Improvements to be made at owners expense.
- Improvements to city owned property in substandard areas (streets, schools, parks, sewers, recreational areas, garbage collection, street lighting, etc.) to stimulate owner improvements.

WE OPPOSE —

- Laws enabling the city to tear down condemned buildings at the owners expense after reasonable notice has been given and the property has not been brought up to standards.
- Establishment of a special housing court if necessary to try cases of this type presided over by a judge familiar with the building trades.
- The wholesale destruction of large areas in the city because they happen to contain some unsound buildings upon which the city government has not taken action under the existing building codes.
- The use of condemnation procedures to acquire property except in cases of extreme danger to human life.
- The use of federal public housing as it is one more step toward socialism and will kill incentive for private capital to build new housing and improve existing housing.
- Driving aged and infirm householders from their homes of long standing who are too old and tired to rebuild even though government loans may be available.

Time Called As Pro Teams Ponder Over Draft Choices

By RALPH BERNSTEIN PHILADELPHIA (AP)—"Two minute warning," said National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Rozelle had to go to extremes Tuesday to get one of the slowest moving player selection meetings in modern history into even low gear. He finally put a 10-minute limit on selections and issued a two-minute warning.

They included Mason (Boston), Snead, Rice and Baker (Buffalo), Rutgers (Oakland), McKeever and Kilmer (Los Angeles Chargers), Ditka (Houston), Matte, Casey and Adlerly (New York), Bob Crispino, Mississippi end taken by Cleveland, also was selected by the AFL's Oakland team.

After Fifty-Five Years, 'Captain Charlie' Still Is Pilot

By CHARLES L. WEST
 MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP)—"I always said that if I ever was seasick or scared, I'd quit," said Charlie Herby Piner, Morehead City harbor pilot.

At 68, after 55 years of making the ocean his livelihood, Captain Charlie hasn't quit. If he has slowed down, it's not because of fear or seasickness.

The sea has been good to Captain Charlie, but he has had to work hard for the financial independence he enjoys as he nears retirement. And there were times, he will tell you in his deep voice, when "I couldn't make enough to pay the grocery bills."

In his career, he has touched on practically every method of making a living from the sea, with the exception of commercial fishing. The list even includes a bit of rum-running during Prohibition "but don't put that in the paper."

"I was raised just as poor as a church snake," Captain Charlie continued when someone mentioned the expensive, late-model automobile parked beside his white frame home here. "And I don't see anything wrong in being good to myself now that I'm getting old."

Now, in addition to his piloting, he owns three tugs, a dredge, the home here and one in Florida, some island property and building sites and is getting stock in a marina being built at Spooners Creek Harbor on the Inland Waterway five miles from here.

His massive shoulders, barrel chest and a portly midriff—the subject of much family kidding—weathered face, twinkling eyes and ready smile give Captain Charlie the appearance of a combination dock fighter and Santa Claus.

Even when souched in an overstuffed chair for an interview, Captain Charlie has a commanding presence. He speaks with the self-confidence of a man who knows his own measure.

"From the time I was a boy," he said, "I wanted to be a pilot." Now he figures he is the oldest active harbor pilot on the Eastern seaboard.

At the age of 13, Captain Charlie was a skipper—with a mate "old enough to be my grandfather"—taking fishing parties out on a two-masted sailing vessel of the sharpie class. Most of his business came from guests at the old Atlantic Hotel, a 300-bedroom hotel which was known as "the summer Capitol of North Carolina."

He came by his love of the sea from his father, Augustine Piner, a Morehead City native and boatman. His mother was a Pennsylvania Dutch.

Captain Charlie stayed in sailboats during the early years of his sea-going life and became a coastal pilot, taking vessels from Morehead City to Miami, in 1909. Eight years later he got his harbor pilot's license for Morehead City and Beaufort.

He has been piloting ever since, although not continuously. When business was slack (and during World War II about the only piloting here was to bring in an occasional torpedoed merchantman) he broke off to skipper a trader in the Caribbean, or undertake some other seafaring venture, or vacation in Florida.

"I used to know some Florida bootleggers," Captain Charlie recalled. "I used to fish with them and the last time I saw them they had patches on their britches and were wearing straw hats."

Then came Prohibition.

"When I went back after four years they were all rich, had big diamond rings and were driving limousines."

What about his venture in rum-running "I made five trips to Nassau to New Orleans in a British schooner," he said.

Captain Charlie chuckled about this rum-running but appeared sensitive to public opinion when asked if he would approve of the pilot's life for the five boys among his 12 grandchildren.

"I would recommend they follow piloting but for one reason: people would say the Piners had a monopoly on it," he explained.

At present, Captain Charlie and his two sons—Charlie Jr., 43, and Augustine (Teeny), 40—are the only active pilots here. A fourth member of the Morehead City Pilot Association is Capt. R. A. Willis, but he retired in 1947.

Captain Charlie and Willis were among the four men who formed the association in 1935. Captains Ed Lewis and Will Smith, the two other charter members, retired about 1938.

Back then, about one ship a month was calling in Morehead City with its narrow shallow channel and 150-foot dock. Now there are about 300 dockings a year and the port can handle five or six ships at a time. The channel is 400 feet wide and 35 feet deep.

About a third of the business comes from the Navy, amphibious ships calling here in connection with activities of the Camp Lejeune Marine Base nearby. Most of the rest comes from tobacco exports and incoming petroleum

California Couples See Future In Brazil

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Three couples from California, including Japanese actress Nobu McCarthy, will set out next spring on a frontier adventure, carving out new lives in the heartland of Brazil.

"If my husband wants to go, I must go," she said. "He is like Japanese husbands. He cannot find a thing around the house without me."

Nobu is not sure how well she will like pioneering in Brazil, but she is pleased at the prospect of being reunited with her family. Her mother and father emigrated to Brazil five years ago, and her father is a dress designer in Sao Paulo.

Languages, she admitted, do not come easy to her. She still has the Oriental's problem with L and R and when she says Brassilia it somehow comes out Brassieria.

"I'm doing much better than when I first came here," she said. "My husband could speak no Japanese, and I knew no English. It could be very embarrassing."

Nobu's husband and his fellow pioneers are not going on the venture blindly. They have thoroughly researched their chances for success and found that the area they chose is the best for growing all kinds of fruit. It is frost-free with a median temperature of 69 degrees and 60-70 inches of rain. "Brazil is like this country was 75 years ago," says one of them. "The economic possibilities are unlimited."

The husbands are ex-GIs, all successful in their own fields. Dave McCarthy operates a highly imaginative advertising agency. Don Jones is a TV network publicist. Fred Higgins runs a bowling equipment store.

All three served with the armed forces in Japan and married Japanese girls. All three see in Brazil the kind of opportunity that was prevalent in this country before the West was won.

They have pooled their assets to buy 368 acres of virgin land in the highlands 120 miles north of the new capital of Brasilia. They have also been granted a 12-acre tract of a growers' organization which is planting fruit trees.

Nobu is the Japanese beauty who came to America as Dave McCarthy's bride and attracted notice with her incongruous name and her performances in films like "Geisha Boy" and "Five Gates to Hell." How does she feel about leaving to live in yet another country?

Trail-Blazing By Kennedy In Meeting Press

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—John F. Kennedy will do some trail blazing at his news conferences as president. Some of them will be carried live during evening hours on nationwide television and radio.

Kennedy's press secretary, Pierre Salinger, announced this decision—under consideration for several weeks—Tuesday night after a meeting with representatives of the major TV and radio networks. Salinger reported network officials very receptive to the plan for live broadcasts.

The decision recalls the Kennedy camp's conviction that his most effective campaigning for the presidency was in his TV-radio debates with his Republican opponent, Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

President Eisenhower's question and answer sessions with reporters have been taped for later use on TV and radio. But only one of his conferences has been carried live—a session at the Republican National Convention in San Francisco in 1956.

Died Despite Heroic Sister

COLEBROOK, N. H. (AP)—Mary Ann Linda Hebert, 14 months, burned to death Tuesday despite heroism of her sister, Suzanne, 4, when a flash fire swept through their modest home. Suzanne tried to carry the baby from the structure, but the burden was too great.

Suzanne did lead her brother, Michael, 3, and sister Louise, 2, to safety, with Louise's hair and clothing ablaze.

A neighbor, Cindy Dustin, 8, probably saved Louise's life by lousing the flames with snow. The children's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Hebert, were absent shopping.

CHAPTER 16

Within a week the new investment club met in Mrs. Stephens' home at 7:30 in the evening, and quickly made Jane's superiority official. Miss Green made the nomination and by acclamation, before Mrs. Stephens could get her own campaign off the ground, the girls swept Jane into office as their first president.

Standing proud and erect in front of the mantle, with sixteen chairs in a three-row semi-circle before her, Jane smiled her tremulous appreciation.

"The Golden Girls of the West" was approved as the name of the club, and other officers were nominated.

The Golden Girls elected Miss Green vice-president, Mrs. Spalding recording secretary, and Mrs. Hayden - Critchfield treasurer. Then when everybody suddenly realized that Mrs. Hope, one of the club's founders, had not been rewarded with an office, Miss Green saved the day by proposing that the group have a sergeant-at-arms. Mrs. Hope was the acclamation. Neatly and quickly the girls had boosted Mrs. Hope on top of the world, and her surprise was so radiant they went ahead and gave her a duty: the sergeant-at-arms was empowered to collect a $1 fine from anybody who failed to show at a meeting.

Knuckling down to serious business under Jane's leadership the group decided basic questions in short order. Three members would present three stocks for discussion at each meeting. All stocks were to be bought through Mr. Petry. Members would invest $25 each month—or a total of $400—and all decisions about what, when and whether to buy were to be settled by vote of the simple majority.

Mrs. Stephens asked for this by floor, and with a darkly conspiratorial air of expecting the worst, she rose in all her tiny height to say that every investment club should have an attorney to protect its interest and settle disputes. The club thought this idea was the greatest, and Miss Green graciously consented to serve, without fee, as legal advisor.

Jane glowed. Things were off to a wonderful start. She could scarcely wait for next month's meeting.

Jane felt a strong sense of direction, of having somewhere important to go. And as the proud owner of two beautiful stocks, she knew she was bound to get there.

Actually, Jane offered a tidy dose of confidence to everybody that summer who owned Lone Star Electronics. The shares Jane had purchased at $16 had shot up to $45; and her original investment of $3200 was now worth $9000, at least on paper. Eleanor now had $900 where she had begun with $320—and Al, with his ten shares purchased at 12, was feeling like a capitalist with his profits of $330. It was all he could do to keep from telling Rosemarie, but he had sworn to wait until her birthday in December. "By then," he told Jane, "it may well be $500. Rosie will really swoon."

Then to cap the climax, one day in late July, Mr. Ernst called, in high spirits. "Now you did tell me you were fully invested," he said. "But it occurs to me you might care to look into the boom for leisure-time stocks—particularly bowling."

Knowing nothing of recreation stocks, Jane said nothing, and Mr. Ernst went on to explain. He had personally completed a five-day study of a young company that had doubled its size every thirteen months since 1954. "In short," he summed up, "it is growing at the rate of 90 per cent compounded a year. You just may want to consider a token investment. No more."

Even sophisticated Mr. Ernst maddeningly calm as he seemed, was thrilled with his investigation. As for Jane's reaction, it far overshoot his idea of a token investment.

"How much is it a share now?" she tried to keep her voice even. "Last sale was 25, a new high. Up from 24 1/2 yesterday."

Calculating boldly, Jane ordered 100 shares, an amount that would consume almost every sou of her remaining assets. The thought was intimidating, but not insurmountable. Not with Mr. Ernst on the other end of the line. He already owned the rich knowledge she had sought so desperately.

"I am not acquainted with your portfolio," he now reminded her. "Do you continue to hold your senior securities? In sufficient balance to permit a $2500 investment in a relatively unseasoned company?"

"Oh yes. Yes, indeed," Jane sounded rally offhand about her last $2500.

"Fine!" said Mr. Ernst. "Then it's 100 shares at 25. I'll order through your Mr. Kilgore." He added pleasantly, "Won't you stop in soon? I'd love to see you."

The sound of his warm friendly

Mr. Ernst was your counselor." "Oh, didn't I?" Jane burbled her apologies.

"When he orderen Tenpins for you," Mr. Kilgore went on in a burst of confidence. "I decided to pick up a little for my mother." Jane had not exactly foreseen the day when she would help to season young brokers. But, generous-hearted, she gave Mr. Ernst half the credit.

"The mutterings of the Golden Girls burst as from a bunch of lady firecrackers set off by one match... the story continues tomorrow."

Another Look

RALEIGH (AP)—The State Highway Commission takes another look today at ferry service linking the Outer Banks to the mainland.

The commission meets this afternoon in a special session called by Chairman J. Melville Broughton Jr. to consider pleas that it review a decision against taking over a Atlantic-to-Ocracoke ferry.

A hue and cry arose in coastal areas Dec. 7 when the commission turned down the recommendation of a special committee that the ferry, launched by the Taylor brothers of Sea Level, be acquired for $275,000.

Gov. Hodges said he felt the matter didn't get the attention it deserved. A Carteret County delegation asked that the commission look further at the possibility of a lease-purchase agreement to finance the ferry from toll charges.

His Mistake In Asking Policemen

COLDWATER, Mich. (AP)—A man asked two policemen to act as witnesses at his wedding and it was a mistake. They arrested him after the ceremony.

Keith R. Lochner, 32, of Fort Wayne, Ind., came here with Gail Richter, 24, of Fort Wayne to be married Tuesday.

Indiana officials called Coldwater police to tell them a warrant had been issued for Lochner's arrest on a charge of aggravated assault.

Police checked the county clerk's office and learned the couple was headed for the Lutheran church. On the way, Lochner asked directions of two policemen and got them to act as witnesses.

Police called the church and Lochner was arrested after the ceremony. He was lodged in jail, his bride headed back to Indiana, and the policemen returned to their beat.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks made small upward progress in active dealings today.

There was a good deal of switching from group to group selling for year-end tax purposes. It all made for a confused and indefinite market.

An interesting development was a flurry around noon in rail shares, which have been laggards for a long time. The depressed Eastern roads led this short-lived flurry.

Also generally higher were steels, tobaccos and oils. Motors, merchandisers, metals and airlines were mixed.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was ahead .60 at 22.00 with industrials up .40, rails up 90 and utilities up .30.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.41 at 614.79.

Corporate bonds were mixed and U.S. government bonds were unchanged.

Monks Charged In Crime Ring

CALTANISSETTA, Sicily (AP) — Four monks of the Roman Catholic Capuchin order and four other persons have been charged with operating an extortion-rings with headquarters in a nearby monastery.

The state prosecutor in this central Sicilian town asked the court of Assizes to order the eight to trial.

The eight men and the monastery gardener were arrested 10 months ago. The gardener later committed suicide.

Officials said the monks extorted money from a number of persons after threatening them with bodily harm or property damage. The gang was accused of killing a wealthy farmer in 1958 when he ignored a demand for money.

After-Christmas Business Said Holding Up Well

AFTER-CHRISTMAS SHOPPERS . . . kept local firms generally busy as special sales and customary exchanges drew attention.

Churchmen Say Industrialist Chosen To Help Hodges' Take-Over

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church has expressed gratitude to Protestant and Jewish leaders who defended it during the 1960 presidential campaign.

A year-end report Tuesday by the National Catholic Welfare Conference spoke of the year as "a prosperous, if stormy" one.

Commenting on the campaign in which a Catholic was elected president for the first time, the report said: "Hundreds of thousands of pamphlets were distributed across the country maintaining that a man must have divided loyalty if he is Catholic as well as American."

"Church officials, faced with the decision whether to engage in open controversy to answer the attacks, for the most part chose silence."

The silence proved beneficial when Protestant and Jewish leaders moved forward to repudiate the attacks, and repeatedly asked that the man and his policy rather than his religion be the deciding factor in determining the vote.

The Welfare Conference is an agency of American bishops which coordinates common activities of the Catholic Church in this country.

Investigators Duplicate Flight In Airliner Crash

NEW YORK (AP) — A United Air Lines DC8 with crash investigators on board Tuesday duplicated the flight pattern of the jet that collided with another airliner over New York City on Dec. 16, killing 136 persons.

Aboard the jet were observers from United Air Lines and Trans World Airlines, the Civil Aviation Board, the Federal Aviation Agency and the Air Lines Pilot Association.

Flying conditions were different, however. On Dec. 16, when the jet and TWA Constellation collided, the day was snowy and overcast.

One purpose of the simulated flight was to determine why the jet apparently overshot a holding area near the Jersey shore south of Staten Island. E. R. Quesada, head of the Federal Aviation Agency, has said the collision took place 11 miles northeast of the holding area.

The jet was preparing to land at Idlewild Airport and the Constellation was coming in to La Guardia when the crash occurred.

After-Christmas business downtown is as good as ever, merchants said today, with stores crowded with shoppers looking for bargains.

Morris Brody of Brody's said his after-Christmas storewide sale is the big attraction, rather than gift exchanging. "It seems to be a normal retailing pattern that the public has been following for the last few years," he said.

J. Vance Perkins of Perkins-Proctor said those coming in to exchange Christmas items are doing just that—and, more. Once they are in the store, they buy additional merchandise, he noted. Tuesday was a big day for his store.

At Blount-Harvey Co., manager C. E. Blair said that there was a lot of shopping traffic that were buying, as well as exchanging, in his store. "We feel that yesterday as a day after-Christmas sale was very successful from the shoppers' point-of-view," Blair pointed out.

Some of the hardware and appliance businesses reported business was a little slower than before Christmas, with fewer exchanges. One store does not make exchanges.

At Edwards Hardware Store, Dennis Sutton, manager, said most buyers kept what they bought before Christmas, and the after-Christmas business was mostly new sales. M. F. Jolly of Pitt Hardware said that most of the customers in his store were buying new things, with very little exchanging. Business was about normal.

The Appliance Mart and gift shop reported that business was a little slower after Christmas than before.

The general consensus is that the clothing and variety stores were experiencing large post-Christmas sales, much of this due to storewide clearances, while some of the other dealers found business slow, or back to normal.

Civil Rights Committee Casts Critical Eye On ESC Works

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Advisory Committee on Civil Rights has cast a critical eye on the operations of the State Employment Security Commission.

A report by the committee, released Tuesday, questioned whether the agency is abiding by the federal government's policy for "employment of all persons on the basis of merit, uninfluenced by consideration of race, religion or national origin."

Henry E. Kendall, ESC chairman, said he had not seen the report and declined immediate comment.

McNeill Smith, chairman of the Civil Rights Committee, said it copies of the report would go to Kendall, Gov. Hodges and the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

The report pointed out that the $5.5 million budget for the ESC comes from federal money, binding it to federal policy against racial discrimination.

The ESC Raleigh office, as of last July, had only 10 Negro employees, the report said. It listed these as a maid, five janitors, two elevator operators and two janitor-messengers.

"There were no employees above the rank of janitor - messenger, which means no typists, stenographers, clerks, bookkeepers, accountants or persons in administrative or executive capacity," it pointed out.

Unemployment benefits are administered by the ESC, which also operates a public employment office.
