Proud Of Cheesecake Austrian Sweet Delectable Dessert

When Abraham Ribicoff was elected governor of Connecticut in 1954, friends asked his wife how she felt.

"I don't know how it is now, but in my day, it seemed to be a tradition for boys in New Britain to take our Hartford girls," she says.
During their courtship, Mrs. Ribicoff says, her husband was "always serious and very stable. He had worked his way through school, and when he was only 19 he came to Chicago to open a branch, which was pretty unusual."

She worked in a doctor's office in Chicago so they could be married while Ribicoff was attending law school at the University of Chicago.

She's a homebody, loves to cook—especially proud of her cheesecake—knits, raises potted plants and plays the piano a bit.

She has, at various times, belonged to the National Council of Jewish Women, Hadassah Synagogue Society, League of Women Voters, and others, but her time largely centers around home and family, which includes Peter, 23, and Jane, 19.
Mrs. Ribicoff was born in Hartford, Conn., 51 years ago, met her husband, who went to school in nearby New Britain, at a high school dance, dated him for four years before her marriage at 20.

CALL IT a frothy whip, as the English sometimes do. Name it an omelet soufflé, à la the French. Or say this dish is a Salzburger Nockerl from Austria. By any name it's a delectable dessert that is a cross between a pancake, omelet and soufflé.

We first tasted the sweet in a small Viennese restaurant in New York late one evening when a friend from Vienna set out to acquaint us with what he considers the perfect light snack.

When the Salzburger Nockerl was brought in on an ovenproof platter it looked like a great half-moon of fluffy ivory-colored omelet sprinkled with confectioners' sugar and surrounded with vanilla custard sauce. One spoonful of the airy stuff and we were ready to wait off to whatever Elysian fields appreciative diners go to.

If you want to try a strictly American version of Salzburger Nockerl, the following recipe will be your guide. This rule turns out a dessert that is a bit more substantial than its famous ancestor—a change that may help you to concoct and serve it easily.

Don't be fazed by the directions to turn the pancake-omelet-soufflé out of the pan. If it gets balky, loosen the edges with a spatula. But be careful not to cut into the puffy affair or it will fall before you serve.

DESSERT PUFF WITH SAUCE
1 package 4 ounces butterscotch pudding and pie filling mix.
2 cups milk
3 eggs (separated)
1/2 cup light cream
rum flavoring to taste or 2 teaspoons dark rum
Salt
6 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon butter
1/4 cup pecans (chopped)
Stir together in a saucepan the pudding mix and milk; cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a full boil. Remove from heat. Mix 1/2 cup of the pudding with the slightly beaten egg yolks; reserve for the puff. For the sauce fix the remaining pudding with the cream and rum; chill. Prepare the puff by beating egg whites and a dash of salt until soft peaks form. Gradually beat very stiff peaks form. Fold into the hot skillet. Cook over very low heat; 3 minutes, then bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven 15 minutes or until puffed high, lightly browned and firm to the touch. Place large serving plate over skillet and invert so as to turn puff out. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar and serve warm with cold sauce into which pecans are folded at last minute. Makes 6 servings.

HOMEBOODY AND SPOUSE . . . Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Ribicoff will move from governor's mansion to Washington.

WRINKLES

by Marie Davant

NEW YORK—Chemical science has found a white substance made with quicksilver that works wonders on wrinkled, roughened face and hands. Use it one time and it is entirely possible you will see improvement next morning. In a few days dry-skin wrinkles start to vanish. Many of the small ones around the eyes and mouth have already disappeared. But that is not all "Old-Age" (weathered) brown spots on hands and arms—brown "age" darkness on surface of face and neck fades away! Rich oils lubricate pores so blackheads can slip out without squeezing.

Surface pimples and blemishes and scars, outwardly caused, dry up or become less noticeable! But don't take my word for it. Make a 6-day test without risking one penny. Just get a jar of Peacock's Imperial Creme at your favorite department or drug store. Use this thrilling cream for 6 days—and if you are not delighted with results, full price will be refunded. No questions asked. Peacock's Imperial Creme can work wonders for wrinkles, lines, brown spots and other weathered blemishes. You may obtain Imperial Creme at Bisette's Drug Store. Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

There has been remarkably little reaction by anyone to the awarding of the Nobel Prize for Literature to the poet Saint-John Perse last November.

Perse (a Frenchman, whose real name is Alexis Leger) has written little, and what he has written, even his translators say, translates badly into English. These facts may partly explain the small stir which his Nobel Prize has created.

We have been reading some of his poems recently, and we find them difficult and strange.

On the other hand, Perse's Nobel Award acceptance speech, which we have just seen in the Washington "Post" (thanks to Jim Butler) is a clear statement of the mission of poetry in the modern world. Perse rightly says that this mission is to search for reality: "the poet keeps us in touch with the permanence and unity of being."

Poetic Bafflement
This is true. But the trouble is that poets like Perse excite us when they talk about their poetry only to baffle us with it. In short, much modern poetry is so remote and difficult that many people have simply turned away from it.

We heard a publisher say the other day, for example, that he considers a volume of poetry a success if 800 copies are sold.

Of course, this is not quite fair to Perse, since all poetry is untranslatable, and, as we said, his is even harder to translate than most. Still, the point stands with respect to the work of many of our native poets.

Bejeman
At the other extreme from Perse in difficulty is the English poet John Bejeman, whose recently published autobiography has been well received. We have not seen that, but we know some of his earlier verse. It is smart, but much of it is trivial in thought and language.

These are even worse faults than obscurity. Whatever else a poet does, he must keep freshening up the language, even if he strains his readers. In these days of the laboratory-tested cliché, perhaps this is one of his main functions.

The Arts
We trust that current efforts being made by interested citizens in Eastern Carolina will pick up more and more support. President Jenkins of ECC is leading the movement, and the resources of the college will be used.

Art Literature
Most of the talk so far has concerned art and music. We hope that literature will also get attention: How about a troupe to carry good plays to the school students with a substantial prize and meaningful recognition? Or for that matter, getting back to art, how about the permanent erection of one good piece of modern sculpture on the college campus? It seems to us that the possibilities in this area are very great.

Ike Speaks
The finest speech that President Eisenhower ever wrote, in our opinion, appears in the current "Saturday Review." And, ironically, he never delivered it, since he composed it to say in Russia last summer before he was uninvited to go over there.

Here is what he wrote about our system of government: "Choosing what works best in each situation is characteristic of Americans. They will study and test any worthy proposal; continuously try new ways and change old patterns . . . to assure the pursuit of happiness by the individual in freedom and dignity."

An attraction for music lovers next week will be the appearance on Thursday of the Karlsrud Chorale at the college as part of the Entertainment Series. The place, Wright; time, 8:15. The repertoire of this group seems to include about everything except gospel hymns.

JFK
Here is a current stage comment on the Presidency from Washington, City: "Abraham Lincoln proved that a poor man could be President; Roosevelt proved that a rich man could be President; Truman proved that anyone could be President; and Jack Kennedy proved that a child could be President."

FDR
Finally, a word about the proposed Roosevelt memorial in Washington, the design for which has been compared to bookends set at random, tombstones, etc.

Gerald Johnson has our vote for a solution: Don't do anything yet. Wait and let FDR be assigned a permanent place in history and then the problem will take care of itself.

Actor Wanted Quiet Wedding

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — "We just wanted a quiet, dignified wedding and no hoopla," actor Jack Carson said Thursday night after his marriage to Sandra Jane Tucker of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

"I didn't want any publicity about it," Carson said. "No Las Vegas stuff."

The couple was married in a swank motel suite. Dist. Judge Arnold Krichamer performed the ceremony shortly after Carson left the Gulfgate Auditorium stage when he is appearing in "Janus," a stage comedy about marriage.

Carson, 50, and Mrs. Tucker, 39, had hoped to keep the wedding a secret until after the ceremony.

Carson has previously been married three times. His ex-wives are actress Lola Albright, singer Kay St. Germain and Betty Lynn Carson.

how excellent your community will be." The Acapella Choir, under the direction of Mrs. A. P. Williams, rendered three selections.

Karlsrud, soloist with the Chorale, has established himself as a recitalist, oratorio soloist, guest artist with symphony orchestras, and performer on radio and television. His concert appearances have covered all 50 states, Mexico, and all the Canadian provinces.

Touchett has been associated with Karlsrud for several years as pianist, arranger, and musical director of their producing company, men of Song Enterprises, Inc. For seven years he was staff vocal arranger for CBS, and has had shows on the Mutual, ABC, and NBC networks. He has been associated with leading choral groups and major recording companies, has been accompanist to a number of outstanding artists, and is now a consulting editor to the Carl Fisher Music Co. Each member of the Karlsrud Chorale is a professional soloist in his own right, with an extensive background of experience as a musician.

Turned In $202 For Bookmobile

CHICOD—A total of $202 has been turned in to the bookmobile project by the Chicod community. It was announced this week by Miss Elizabeth Copeland of Sheppard Memoria Library.

Mrs. Decie Pollard, of the Calico Home Demonstration Club, and Kelly Wallace, principal of Chicod School, submitted the money on Wednesday. Actually the Chicod community had set a total of $200, and went slightly beyond that.

This community was the 10th to fill its quota towards financing the purchase of a second bookmobile for Pitt County.

Entrances to the Capitol were so crowded on Inauguration Day, 1829, that President-elect Andrew Jackson climbed over a wall and entered through a sub-basement.

Fourteen Counties Must Stay Alert

Redistricting North Carolina for 11 members of Congress rather than 12 is sure to be one of the hottest and probably hardest-fought political battles the General Assembly will face in its coming session.

If early statements by some members of the General Assembly is any indication of the feeling that may exist in other parts of the state, there is every reason to believe that Eastern North Carolina is being looked upon as the area in which a congressman may be eliminated.

The First District, of which Pitt County is a part, is the smallest of the present 12 districts in terms of population, with some 252,000 people according to the preliminary 1960 census report. A few legislators from other sections of the state already are proposing splitting up the first district and combining it with the second and third districts.

Such a plan would give an area comprising about one-third of North Carolina only two of the eleven seats the state will have after this session of Congress... less than one-fifth of the total representation of the state.

It is also significant that any plan to take the three eastern-most present districts and combining them into two districts would take in an area of 31 of North Carolina's 100 counties. Under any circumstances, each of the new districts created probably would contain many more counties than any of the other congressional districts of the state.

As the matter of redistricting is considered by the legislature some consideration must be given to the geographic area involved. The matter of redistricting should be approached from the standpoint of the state as a whole... not from the standpoint of singling out one specific area and making necessary adjustments in that one area alone.

Eastern North Carolina, and particularly the 14 counties which comprise the present First Congressional District, must be on their toes in the next few months if they are not to be shunted aside so far as congressional redistricting is concerned. The representatives of these counties in the General Assembly should not sit back meekly and allow the interests of the area to be disregarded in the matter of redistricting.

Population-wise, the area is at a disadvantage so far as the matter of eliminating one of North Carolina's congressional seats is concerned. At the same time, it has in the legislature a sufficient number of representatives to safeguard the interest of the area if they will apply themselves to that task as proposals for rearranging congressional districts are considered.

Many Share In Speech-Writing

By LYNN NISBET
SPEECH WRITING — Who writes the Governor's speeches? That question is often asked. It is apparent that the Governor cannot do the actual composition of all his speeches, much less the research necessary to prepare them.

The fact is, a great many people contribute to the preparation of the speeches. Employees and officials in all State departments are called upon to furnish data and often to do the actual writing. During most of the Hodges regime and so far in Governor Sanford's this information was double-checked by office staffers before being delivered to the Governor. Neither Hodges nor Sanford made a speech without a final personal revision of phraseology.

William S. Johnson Jr. perhaps did more of the actual mechanics of speech writing for Governor Hodges than anyone else. He is currently continued with the title of "research specialist" in the Sanford menage. Ed Rankin as private secretary did some polishing up of the text and almost always discussed the final draft with the Governor.

Johnson is writing a good many of Sanford's speeches. Graham Jones, press secretary, prepares most of the news releases and statements issued from the Governor's office. Unless there is a question of policy involved, the Governor seldom sees these releases before they are handed out. He tells the staffers what he wants said and leaves the exact wording up to them. Where significant policy is involved, he checks the language very carefully.

AUTOGRAPH — There are some cases in which the Governor himself does all the original composition of speeches and statements, even though he has relied upon somebody else to do the factual research. For example, Governor Sanford says he wrote in long hand with a soft pencil the speech he made at Chapel Hill on education and his inaugural address. He did the same thing with several of his campaign speeches. Governor Hodges seldom wrote a speech, but he dictated from notes and then checked the typed copy.

Hodges said he could "think" better about what words to use while talking with a trusted secretary. Sanford says he has acquired the lawyer habit of "thinking" best with a yellow pad before him. "A white pad just won't do," he grinned. "It's gotta be legal size yellow with light green lines."

Governor Sanford also uses a portable recording machine, so he can get on the record bright ideas that occur to him while riding or reading, or if he wakes up at night with a brilliant thought. These recordings are passed along to staff members, or used as basis for autograph composition as occasion suggests.

Many business and political tycoons use these recording machines, and there have been instances when private comment got into public circulation—to the embarrassment of a lot of people. These portable recorders had not been developed during the lifetime of the late Arthur Brisbane, but it was said that on almost all his trips he had one or more secretaries at his elbow, and he always kept a note pad and pencil beside his bed at night.

LAND USE — State College has been authorized to purchase 200 acres of land adjacent to its campus to replace a like area taken over by highway construction and other uses. The college wants an additional 800 acres in the same area, and probably will get it for expansion of the agricultural research program. The authorized purchase of 200 acres at $1,000 an acre takes $200,000 worth of property off the tax books. If the same rate applies to the additional acquisition it will mean loss of a million dollars valuation on Wake county tax books. And that can mean only that other private property owners will have to ante up more taxes on their property to support the government.

Many economists and tax experts admit concern about the amount of land being taken off the tax books for educational, health and religious activities. Many people would be surprised to learn how much land has been taken over for burying grounds — non-taxable. Highway rights of way are claiming increasing acreage every year and public parks and recreation areas also encroach on the taxable real estate and the land that can be used for production of food and fiber to support the economy.

Until now land has been the cheapest and most available resource in the so-called New World. As population density increases, need for food and clothing increases, there is developing serious question about the policy of taking so much land out of production. That is auxiliary to the problem of relationship between local and general backlogs the question of direct ad valorem taxes and indirect levies for support of the governments.

Goodwill Gesture Does Not Erase The Crime

Release by the Soviets of two American flyers held since July 1 is being viewed as a gesture of good will by the Soviets toward the new President of the United States.

There is no mistaking that this gesture by the Soviets suggests a warming of the frigid relations which have existed between the two nations since last May when the U2 incident erupted and the Paris summit conference collapsed. Even before the inauguration of President Kennedy, Soviet Premier Khrushchev had made overtures toward more amicable relations. The dramatic announcement that the two flyers had been released can only be viewed as an overture with greater impact.

It is significant also that the President announced there were no U.S. concessions made to the Soviet Union in exchange for the release of the flyers. It is not clear yet, however, whether the release was brought about through U.S. initiative or was initiated by the Soviets themselves.

In spite of the impact of the announcement of the release of these two—for which all the nation is thankful—we must not overlook the fact that four other American flyers presumably died when their reconnaissance plane was shot down over international waters by Soviet fighters. The fact that the two flyers were released does not absolve the Soviets of responsibility for the other lives. Neither should it erase from American minds the unprovoked attack by the Soviet planes on the American plane.

The gesture by the Soviets is an important one indeed, but it can not be regarded as a sure sign that the leopard has changed his spots.

President Was All Confidence

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy was much more sure of himself at his first presidential news conference than President Eisenhower was at his first conference after becoming president eight years ago.

It was expected: After 14 years in Congress Kennedy was better informed on government details than Eisenhower was when he moved into the White House after his long Army career.

Eisenhower was tense and faltered in his answers at his first conference. Wednesday night Kennedy didn't appear tense. But he was hardly lighthearted. And, like Eisenhower, he made some bobbles.

Actually, Kennedy had more reason to be tense than Eisenhower had at his first White House news session. Kennedy was being watched from coast to coast on live TV and his words, bobbles and all, once said couldn't be tidied up. Eisenhower's first news conference transcript of questions and answers, after a going over by his aides, was released without direct quotes. So the faltering and the bobbles were recorded.

Still, there was a double lack of precision in Kennedy's answers. He was a little vague on some answers, a little generalized. This is understandable since he is still in the process of whipping together programs which, if completed by Wednesday night, would have enabled him to answer better.

His precision in this area should improve steadily as his programs and policies take shape and are spelled out in detail for Congress and the country.

Whether this will change as he holds more conferences depends on his own capacity for self-criticism and the suggestions of his aides.

Whether it is an integral part of his character, or the start of a deliberate policy which he will pursue, Kennedy avoided the appearance of sensationalism even when stating the sensational. For example: The outstanding news at his conference was the announcement that the Russians have released two members of the American RB47 plane who had been captured last July. The Russians had refused to release them for the Eisenhower administration. Their doing so at

Notes From Here, There

What it was, was what? All that precipitation yesterday, that is.

Coming down it looked like sleet, but by midmorning a surprising accumulation of it on the ground covered Pitt County with a white blanket like snow.

At any rate by afternoon, it had become rain which made a slushy mess of things. Prospects for last night were another freeze and a real dangerous situation this morning.

Such is winter though.

Your columnist took a trip the other day with Roy Hardee,

C. L. Perkins and Ed Fields of television station WNCT.

Being among such a select group of television personalities, the conversation naturally turned to their experiences.

Ed recalled the time that he got stuck on the word Rhododendron on the air once.

It came out "Rho-do-do-do-do."

Woolgathering as I walked along Evans St. the other day, I happened to overhear a conversation between two sweet young things.

"I met one bachelor recently but I don't like him," one of them said.

Women are so hard to please these days!

Someone told me they saw a man chipping ice off his windshield by the post office yesterday morning. Sleet was coating it as fast as the man got rid of the ice.

The car had a Nebraska license on it, so I'm told.

The man looked at my informant as he passed, scowled and muttered, "This is the sunny south?"

Whether you realize it or not dentist have cavities, too. They can't fill their own so they have to go to some other dentist for this mental torture just like the rest of us.

Well, Dr. Badger Clark came to that day of reckoning recently, so our Caries Editor tells me. One afternoon he called on Dr. M. W. Aldridge who promptly brought out the needle and shot Dr. Clark full of novocain.

There was the usual short wait for the novocain to take effect. Then a call came from Dr. Clark's office. There was a patient there who wished to see him.

A conscientious dentist, Dr. Clark told Dr. Aldridge he'd have to go. He hurried to his office, treated his own patient and then hurried back to Dr. Aldridge's office.

He made it before his own novocain wore off and Dr. Aldridge filled the tooth without further ado.

Opinions In Brief

"It is about as useless and illogical for a citizen to denounce taxes as it would be for an individual who has purchased a fine new car to blame the finance company for demanding its monthly payments." — Sheldon (Iowa) Mail.

"One of the inconsistencies of our times, says a white collar worker, is the expectation of Christmas tips from $50-a-week collectors and the like." — Charleston News and Courier.

"These days a new organization may have to be formed, dedicated to preserving those qualities of Richmond that are distinctively Richmond's. Its motto will be brief and to the point: 'Down With Progress.'" — Richmond News Leader.

Other Editors Saying First Hand Impressions

(Kinston Free Press)
What will the new Kennedy Administration be like? is a question that has been posed to us frequently since the inauguration. While we profess no infallible discernment, we do have some definite views about what we have seen and observed of the Kennedys and their associates since the nomination last Summer at Los Angeles.

In the first place the new President is an able and intelligent man. He loves America and its liberties with a passionate dedication. He meant it when he said "we will pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe to assure survival and success of liberty."

He spoke with authority for his older brother Joe gave his life for this Republic, and expected the new President himself could have lost his life in World War II in the Pacific. He meant what he said on that score, on support of the United Nations, on the desire to improve the living standards of the masses around the globe, on his appeal for cooperation and sacrifice from every official, every leader and every citizen of this Republic.

President Kennedy is no Fabian idealist and he knows that the mere acquisition of wealth will not assure survival of America's freedom. He has drawn around him some of the ablest cabinet members in the history of the Nation. His lower echelons of leadership do not measure up quite as well as the top rank, but then cabinet rank ability may not be readily available in every walk of American life.

His work with Congress will be persuasive because he has served in it. He knows the art of government. When stands for a principle of aid to the elderly as far as hospitalization is concerned, he will seek to sell the point of crisis for the United States. But if faith were sufficiently restored in the dollar, if foreign nations believed the dollar was as good as gold and better than their own currency the flow of gold would be reversed and the yellow metal would again flow into U.S. ownership.

There has always been a large amount of American dollars in foreign hands. In mid-1958, for example, foreign governments and individuals held more than $15 billion worth of U.S. credits. Then the United States had $21.6 billion in gold. At that time, foreign governments could have shrunk our gold stock to $6.6 billion. But they took only $2.3 billion that year, only $1.1 billion in 1959, and only $2 billion since then.

Bringing servicemen's families home, cutting foreign military spending, cutting foreign aid, limiting amount spent by travelers, checking pensions and cash gifts to persons abroad, restricting American investments abroad, or prohibiting Americans from owning gold abroad can be little more than palliative.

If all those steps were taken foreign nations' credits would not grow as fast as they have been doing. But they would still hold so much in dollar credits that they could keep on demanding gold for them for years at the present rate, and continue to that $1 in gold was better than 21 in American credit.

If they had had confidence in the dollar, instead of demanding gold from the United States, they would have held on to their dollars, their U.S. bonds and other convertible credits.

In 1958, foreign nations were perfectly happy to hold on to all but $2.3 billion of their $15.4 billion in credits. They are still content to hold more than $10 billion in American credits, rather than demand gold for that amount.

Spending by investors, travelers and GI wives abroad is the how of the flow of gold abroad. The why is simply that foreign nations have less confidence in the dollar than they used to have. Significantly, the outflow of gold rose sharply in November, when the United States elected a new President. The outflow was only $8,000,000 in May, 1960. It

Public Judges Conduc

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Ours is a continuing government. It never goes out of existence, as some other governments do when there is a change. In this continuous government, controlled by a written Constitution, there have been 35 Presidential terms—some lasting four years; some eight; only one longer than eight.

The President of the United States is a powerful official but he is neither a potentate nor a dictator. He holds office by the will of the people who have several ways of showing their satisfaction and dissatisfaction. And they, the American people, do not limit their judgement to politics and economics, but they are very jealous of a President's conduct in office, his habits, his manners, his courtesies, his "good conduct," as the phrase goes.

The position of the President is lonely. If his nature is gregarious, he is forced, by the character of his office, to curb his tastes. Herbert Hoover who is Quaker and a modest man was shocked when his most intimate friends referred to him as "Mr. President," instead of Herbert. But he, like all others, soon enough realized that part of the job is maintaining the dignity of the office. It is like wearing the proper clothes on the proper occasion.

There is an old saying, "The Captain eats alone," which is true in all navies, although on passenger ships the Captain does a public relations job and eats with customers. The question is what barriers a President can let down without letting all of them down. Theodore Roosevelt and Franklin D. Roosevelt were like-minded in their interest in people whose names appeared in the news. Franklin D. Roosevelt was interested in Hollywood folks and had them to the White House. After, some of the mummies regarded themselves as outstanding students of politics and many ended in difficulties with committees of Congress.

President Eisenhower liked successful men, those who received big salaries or owned large businesses. He surrounded himself with such and was usually misinformed about the nation by them. For these tycoons represent a very small segment of the proletariat, earning their wages and fringe benefits the same as any other employees of widely-diffused ownership of corporate wealth. The test of their capacity is to observe them when they are forced to retire at a comparatively early age to twiddle their thumbs because they have not developed intense life interest outside their business. Of course, there are notable exceptions.

John Kennedy will establish his reputation as a President during his first three or four months. After that, things are liable to be routine. It is the first impact with the country that is important to him and to the people. It is not what he does and says, but how he does things, how he presents his problems to the nation, how he comports himself that matters.

It can be said that Mrs. Kennedy has already won the goodwill of the country. Television helped her. Her natural beauty, her composure, her dignity is what Americans like. The fact that she went to bed at a reasonable hour, leaving the inaugural festivities when her part in them was properly over made a very good impression. The torch, as the President said, has passed to youth and the manners of a nation are set by those on top. It appears that Mrs. Kennedy may set a new tone in manners. It looks, however, as though with youth will come no Beatniks.

The Hundred Days — as they are called—are any President's grand opportunity to create the atmosphere for himself to establish leadership. Franklin D. Roosevelt took full advantage of this period. He came out of it a very strong man—a strength which he never lost. This was not true of President Eisenhower who was more popular before his election than at any time during his first term. He did much better during his second term.

Presidents sometimes suffer from greatness; others suffer from a desire to be exactly as they were before they were elected to this high office. Harding never changed; Woodrow Wilson became overweening and

Faith In The Dollar Comes First

By ELMER ROESSNER
The only way to dam the outward flow of American gold is to restore faith in the dollar.

The United States gold stock, which was $24.7 billion in 1949, dropped to less than $17.6 billion this week.

Bringing servicemen's families home, cutting foreign military spending, cutting foreign aid, limiting amount spent by travelers, checking pensions and cash gifts to persons abroad, restricting American investments abroad, or prohibiting Americans from owning gold abroad can be little more than palliative.

rose to $39,000,000 in September, dropped back to $282,000, in October, then shot up to $495,000,000 in the election month.

The inference is that foreign countries feared that the new Administration would weaken the dollar, either through inflation or devaluation.

These fears can be dissipated if the new Administration lets the world understand that it does not intend to increase the present $35-a-ounce price of gold; if it balances the Federal budget and gives other evidence that it is opposed to further inflation; if it takes steps to increase exports and to encourage more foreigners to travel here, and if it acts to eliminate unnecessary spending abroad.

The considerable caution, steps that appear frantic, could work to lower, instead of strengthen, confidence in the dollar.

Quote...

"In face of today's many challenges, there can be no justification for complacency or self-indulgent apathy. But let us not be swept off balance; let us be aware of the emotional and transitory sacrifices of crisis. Wise citizens will not stampede but will take alert, steadfast steps to meet the demands of the long pull." — Christian Science Monitor.

Rafer Johnson Named As Male Athlete Of The Year

By HUGH FULLERTON JR., Associated Press Sports Writer
Rafer Lewis Johnson, Olympic decathlon champion, world record holder and the man who represented perfection to his teammates, is the athlete of the year for 1960.

Johnson, who beat out his protegee, C. K. Yang of Nationalist China in the grueling 10-event test at the Rome Olympics, was proclaimed the world's greatest all-around athlete after that victory.
And his teammate Lee Calhoun added: "To most of the guys on the team he represents perfection."

Johnson was named today as the Male Athlete of the Year in the annual Associated Press poll by the vote of 256 sports writers and editors throughout the United States. He won out over Arnold Palmer, whose 1960 performances ranked him as the world's outstanding golfer, by a slim margin of 19 points in the balloting. Johnson will receive the Fraternal Order of Eagles-Frederick C. Miller trophy at a civic luncheon in Milwaukee Feb. 27. He is the first American athlete to receive the trophy in three years. It was won last year by Sweden's Ingemar Johansson, then world heavyweight champion. The year before it was Herb Elliott, the Australian miler.

Johnson was named first on 93 of the 256 ballots. Palmer, winner of the U.S. Open golf championship and the Masters and second in the British open, received 73 first place votes. On a point basis, with three awarded for first place vote, two for second and one for third it was Johnson 398 and Palmer 379.

Floyd Patterson, the first boxer ever to lose the heavyweight championship and regain it, placed third in the voting with 29 firsts and 168 points. Norm Van Brocklin, who quarterbacked the Philadelphia Eagles to the National Football League championship, was fourth with 10 firsts and 141 points.

Johnson, a powerful 6-foot-3 Negro from Kingsburg, Calif., went into the Olympics as an outstanding favorite. Two months before he had bettered the listed world record of the Soviet Union's Vasily Kuznetsov by more than 200 points. He had been chosen as the flag bearer for the American team in the opening ceremony—an indication of the high regard in which his teammates held him.

Others in the top ten in the balloting were: Joe Bellino, football 68 points, fifth; Dick Groat, baseball 63 points, sixth; Jerry Lucas, basketball 42 points, seventh; Ted Williams, baseball 26 points, eighth; Vernon Law, baseball 23 points, ninth; Bill Mazeroski, baseball 23 points, tenth.

Vikings Striking For Youth And Big Future

By JACK HAND, Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The Minnesota Vikings, newest entry in the 14-team National Football League, are going all out for youth in a long range building program.
Of the 36 "veterans" taken Thursday from the 12 "old" teams (Dallas excepted), 13 were first year men and eight had only two years of pro experience. Only six had played in the league for more than four years. The average experience was 3.4 years.

Norm Van Brocklin, the star of the champion Philadelphia Eagles who is starting a new career as coach of the Vikings, said he got "about what we expected." He said the offensive line was the strongest point of his club.

"We didn't get as many pass defenders and pass catchers as we wanted," he said. "But that is something that every team in the league is looking for. With George Shaw (quarterback acquired from New York in a trade) and Fran Tarkenton (Georgia quarterback who was picked by the Vikings in the draft) we are in pretty good shape."

The Vikings, who still don't know whether they will play in the Eastern or Western Division or operate with Dallas as a "swing team", didn't release the names of all the men they took. Some of their selections were held back until the clubs had time to get in touch with the players.
The first group that was announced, the three taken from New York, surprised some for it contained Frank Youso, who has been a regular offensive tackle for the Giants for three years. Youso, however, is a U. of Minnesota product who lived in International Falls where he also operates a business. Don Boll, another offensive tackle, and Bill Kimber, a rookie end, also were taken from the Giants.

Among the better known players taken by the Vikings who must cough up $550,000 for the 36 men, were halfback Hugh McElhenny of San Francisco and Don Joyce, 31-year-old defensive end and tackle with the Baltimore Colts.

Dick Haley, former Pitt back, was taken from Washington, which also lost Red Stephens, an offensive guard. Dave Middleton, an offensive end, was grabbed from Detroit.

College Cagers Back In Action

By DON WEISS, Associated Press Sports Writer

Mid-term examinations completed at most schools, major college basketball resumes full-scale competition this weekend with seventh-ranked St. John's and ninth-ranked Southern California leading the pack back to a normal hectic schedule.
The St. John's Redmen (10-2) are scheduled at St. Louis tonight. Southern California, which rode its 12-2 record into the Associated Press' top ten this week, entertains Air Force tonight before meeting Denver Saturday night as the major voters return with a whopping program.

Tonight Temple meets Middle Atlantic Conference leader LaSalle, Brigham Young is at Utah State and Richmond plays Southern Conference challenger, The Citadel. Oklahoma City is at SMU, Oregon State at Portland, Denver at UCLA, and Washington at Oregon in non-league pairings also tonight.

Saturday, play breaks out from coast to coast after the relatively quiet last two weeks.
Top-ranked Ohio State (13-0), the only major unbeaten team, tests its 13-game winning streak and its Big Ten leadership against 10th-ranked Purdue in what promises to be a tidy duel between the Buckeyes' Jerry Lucas and the Boller-makers' Terry Dischinger. Third-ranked Bradley meets Marquette in the national T game and fifth-ranked Duke plays Clemson in search of its sixth straight Atlantic Coast Conference victory in other big Saturday matches.

Miami of Florida rolled to its 11th victory in 16 tries, 86-74 over Centenary; Arkansas (9-4) whipped Tulsa 66-58; Eastern Kentucky won an Ohio Valley Conference test from Middle Tennessee 67-57; and Morehead (Ky) whipped Marshall 70-69 in Thursday night's limited schedule.

Large Field For NAIA Cage Title

KANSAS CITY (AP)—NAIA title challengers are beginning to emerge with only five weeks remaining before the start of district playoff competition for the right to enter the 32-team national basketball tournament in Kansas City March 13-18.

The defending champion of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics is Southwest Texas State College of San Marcos.
Always tough Tennessee State University lost its season's opener by two points but since has reeled off 14 straight victories. Unbeaten Prairie View (Texas) A&M has 16 victories. Mansfield (Pa.) is the only other undefeated NAIA team and stands 8-0.

Other strong teams include Appalachian (N.C.) State (12-2), Newberry (S.C.) College (12-3), South Carolina State (13-2) and Winston-Salem (N.C.) Teachers College (13-2).

Fight Results

Los Angeles — Johnny Smith, 156½, Los Angeles, knocked out Neal Rivers, 159, Los Angeles, 8.
Sydney, Australia — Bout between Dick Fleetwood, 159½, New Zealand, and Dick Williams, 162, South Africa, stopped in seventh round and both men disqualified for butting.
West Jordan, Utah — Donnie Adanson, 126, West Jordan, knocked out David Lee, 130, Reno, Nev., 5.

Palmer Tied For Second In First Round Of Event

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—U.S. Open champion Arnold Palmer and a flock of other par-amazing pros were hot on the trail of a pair of unlikely first round leaders today in the San Francisco International golf tournament.

Sticky Charlie Sifford, the only Negro playing on the professional tour, and 240-pound George Bayer, one of the longest hitters in the game, shot six-under-par 65s Thursday over the rain-soaked Harding Park course to grab the opening lead by a single stroke.

Right behind them with 66s were Palmer, the nation's biggest money winner in 1960, Billy Casper, Ted Kroll, Doug Ford, 49ers football quarterback John Brodie and Stan Leonard, the Canadian veteran.

Chasing them at 67 was steady Bobby Rosburg, winner of the Crosby classic at Pebble Beach last week and now playing some of the best golf of his career.

Some of the sharpest young golfers in the business were right up in contention with 68s, notably Dave Ragan and Tommy Aaron. Also at 68 were Don January, Fred Hawkins, Ernie Vossler and old timer Mike Souchak.

Sifford, 37, 175-pound Los Angeles pro, has won such events recently as the Almaden and Long Beach Opens, but has never taken top money in any of the really big events.

Bayer, 35, former University of Washington football tackle, hasn't been in the winner's circle since last March when he won the St. Petersburg Open.

Weather Brings Postponement Of Local Action

Inclinate weather, including snow and sleet, turned the local sports scene into a winter wonderland instead of a basketball hotbed.
Mr. Weatherman, with his erupt appearance, brought a full slate of basketball activities scheduled for tonight to a standstill.

East Carolina College, battling for the North State Conference lead, will be idle tonight after postponing a scheduled home game with Western Carolina.

The Bucs, idle since last Saturday, will have to wait until Tuesday to get back into the thick of the race. Appalachian plays here then.

The game with Western Carolina was postponed yesterday afternoon when the Cata-mounts were unable to leave the mountain area. The game, according to EC coach Earl Smith, will be re-scheduled at a later date.

Greenville, in the thick of a five-team battle for second place in the Northeastern Conference, wasn't scheduled to play tonight. Busy this week with exams, the Phantoms are to resume play Tuesday night.

Robersonville, of Martin County, will also be idle tonight. The Rams home game with Oak City has been postponed to a later date.

In games involving Pitt County schools, the Grimesland vs Stokes-Pactolus, Belvoir-Falland vs Farmville and Ayden vs Bethel games have definitely been postponed until a later date.

No word had been received this morning at press time on the Grifton-Winterville and Chitwood Vanceboro games.

In Saturday Games State, Duke, And Wake Forest Return To Action

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Virginia, the last Atlantic Coast Conference basketball team to play a game since the mid-year exam layoff began, becomes the first ACC team to return to action when it plays host to Bucknell tonight at Charlottesville, Va.

It's the only game involving an ACC team tonight.
Both Bucknell and Virginia played George Washington in their last start. The Pennsylvanians, who have an 8-3 record, whipped GW 101-85 two weeks ago on the Bucknell court. Virginia, playing at home last Saturday, lost to George Washington 86-77 to bring the Cavalier record to 2-13.

Three games are on Saturday's conference card. Clemson is at Duke in a 2 p.m. regionally televised game. At night, South Carolina is at North Carolina State and Wake Forest is at home against Virginia Tech of the Southern Conference.

Duke and North Carolina share the conference lead with 5-0 records.
Duke has a 13-1 overall record, having lost only to North Carolina, whose Tar Heels rank fourth nationally, one notch ahead of Duke.

Clemson faces the formidable task of playing both in successive road games. The Tigers, who have a 6-9 record and are 1-3 in the ACC play at North Carolina Tuesday night.

Duke is led by its sophomore star, 6-5 Art Heyman of Rockville Centre, N.Y. He is the No. 2 scorer in the conference with a 23.1 average and also leads the team in field goals, free throws and rebounds. He has been the top Duke scorer nine times and shared that honor in a 10th game.

N.C. State, mired in a four-game losing streak, second longest in Everett Case's 15 seasons as Wolfpack coach, has a 2-5 conference record. State will be facing a South Carolina team that has a 6-3 record against outside teams, but has dropped all four of its league tests.

Wake Forest's game with Virginia Tech matches two players with All-America ambitions. Wake Forest points with pride to Len Chappell, No. 1 conference scorer and a rebounding terror who weighs 240 and stands 6-8. Tech counters with Chris Smith, a mere 6-6, 225-pounder.

Howard, Bass Come To Terms

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Differences over football recruiting have been settled by Clemson and South Carolina — for the future as well as the present.

Coaches Frank Howard of the Tigers and Marvin Bass of the Gamecocks met in a Columbia Hotel room Thursday in advance of their appearance at the annual awards dinner of the Columbia Touchdown Club.

Following the meeting the coaches issued this joint statement:
"We agreed that Coach Bass will continue to contact boys who have signed grants-in-aid or given intentions to enroll at Clemson and other institutions.

"If these high school boys say they have made up their minds to go to Clemson or other institutions Coach Bass will adopt a hands-off policy.
"That will take care of this year. We are going to propose to the Atlantic Coast Conference that it adopt the plan of the Southeastern Conference. The SEC prohibits a high school senior from signing with a member institution until Dec. 7. The boy's contract then becomes binding as far as the other SEC members are concerned.

"If we fail in that," the joint statement added, "we will enter into a bilateral gentlemen's agreement to honor each other's grants-in-aid."

South Carolina recruiting practices recently drew a verbal blast from Howard after three prep quarterbacks announced they now favor the university after previously signing letters of intent with Clemson.

Unusual Rush By Stars To Sign '61 Contracts

By HUGH FULLERTON JR., Associated Press Sports Writer

At a time of the year when a baseball player can get his name in the papers just by writing it on a contract—and even more publicity by refusing to sign—there appears to be an unusual rush by major league stars to sign up for the 1961 season.

Already such outstanding players as Ernie Banks of the Chicago Cubs, Mickey Mantle and Whitey Ford of the New York Yankees, Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals and Warren Spahn of the Milwaukee Braves have signed for salaries ranging up to estimated $75,000.

The Cubs, with 37 players already under contract, probably will be the first of the 18 major league clubs to have all their squad signed for 1961. At the other extreme, the Baltimore Orioles and the new Los Angeles Angels have announced only two signings each.

So far there are no admitted holdouts, though a few top players have indicated they're not fully satisfied with the offers they have received and still are negotiating. Baseball law requires that a club must offer contracts to the players by a certain early date. That's the start of the dickering in some cases.

Then there's the custom of holding back signings for publicity purposes and releasing a slow trickle of names. The number "officially" signed changes almost daily.
Chicago's White Sox, who have released six names so far, went to considerable trouble to contradict a report from Venezuela that Luis Aparicio had agreed to a $30,000 "tax-free" contract. After a phone conversation, publicity director Ed Short said Aparicio would visit Chicago next month to talk things over. He is believed to be asking $10,000 more than the $30,000 offered.
The six Sox include Roy Sievers and Minnie Minoos probably will be added to the list soon.
Thursday's signings included Ford and Elston Howard of the Yankees, veteran Robin Roberts of the Phillies, Bill Tuttle of the Athletics, Ed Roebuck and Norm Sherry of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Bill Henry and Orlando Pena of the Cincinnati Reds.
But Ray Herbert returned his contract unsigned to Kansas City, saying he had read that he was an outstanding pitcher so he expected an outstanding salary.
Pitcher Bud Daley also sent back his contract to the A's but Hank Bauer is among the four signed.
Others in the disaffected, or at least unsigned, group include the Cards' Boyer, who wants $50,000; the Indians' Jim Perry, the Yankees' Roger Maris; the Braves' Pete Covington; Jackie Jensen and Pete Runnels of the Red Sox and Al Kaline, Frank Lary and Charlie Maxwell of the Tigers.

Tar Heels Will Be Missed

It's official. The University of North Carolina basketball team—currently ranked fourth in the nation—will be on the sidelines when the ACC tournament rolls around in March. Whether the withdrawal was of Carolina's free will or mandatory remains undisclosed.

Some circles, presumably close to the Tar Heel situation, note the withdrawal by Carolina as a token of good faith. Other rumors have it that it was "UNC's way of expelling itself before it was expelled officially by the ACC". In print, the latter seems unlikely, considering N.C. State never received such punishment when under the NCAA cloak of bad deeds.

Regardless of why Carolina will not be playing in the classic affair, the important thing is the Tar Heels won't be there and the tournament is sure to lose some of its popularity.

Players Would Like To Prove Wares

Money-wise, the tournament will feel the absence of the Tar Heels. But the players involved may regret it most of all. The feeling among Carolina players was: "It came as a great surprise". It probably was right of the school to withdraw, but the Carolina players, already hurt by the NCAA ruling, would have liked to have had the chance of proving themselves as the best team in the ACC.

The reason for Carolina's punishment is still not clear-cut. But it seems to be a matter of what the Tar Heels didn't do instead of what they did.

If found guilty of a big infraction, the Tar Heels would have not stumbled away from the NCAA powwow with such a light penalty.

The lack of recruiting records proved to be the University's downfall. The fund, as reported, was set up and administered by students, with records not being as accurate as the NCAA desired. Such a procedure has now been eliminated and is being handled by the college administration.

Match Play And Not Strokes

Dick Groat, the Pittsburgh shortstop and ex-Duke standout, plays golf in the low 70s. After the Pirates won the World Series, a friend wrote Dick: "You should be glad the Series was match instead of stroke play."
Bill Shepherd, who has served as the official "deacon" mascot for Wake Forest athletic the past several years, is the new director of the Deacon Club, a fund-raising organization.

A short piece on the Wilmington Boys' Club and its winning the nationwide chinning title in the Boys' Club of America national pull-up championships is in the Sports Illustrated January 30 edition.
One hundred or more amateur golfers from the two Carolinas are reportedly signed up play in the pro-am tournament scheduled for March 30.

Ernie Brozilo completed 9 of 24 starts and finished 14 games in relief while taking 21 decisions for the Cardinals last year.

CHAPTER 12

The squad room was dim except for the circle of light from the lamp on Sergeant Granada's desk. His two-fingered typewriter stutted and gave up when Tony Padilla and I walked in. Granada lifted his head, heavily, as if it had been cast in bronze. "I understand you shot Augustine Donato," I said. "Yeah. He went for his gun. "Too bad you had to silence him. He might have told us some useful things. "You could like Wills. He just got off my back. Don't you climb on Mr. Gunnarson? He peered through the dimness at Padilla. "Who's your friend?" "You remember me," Padilla said. "I used to tend bar in the Rosarita Room. "Oh, yeah, Tony. Still working around town? "At the Foothill Club, Padilla said in his formal voice. There was tension between the two men. "Where did you catch up with Donato?" I said. "In the old ice plant out by the railroad tracks. It's a good place to hide, truck and all, and I figured he was out there. "That's pretty close figuring. "I had some help. A little bird told me they were in a truck, so I moosed over. I caught him unloading the stuff. "What stuff was it?" "Loot from the burglaries, cameras and furs and dresses. Apparently Broadman had it stashed in his basement. Donato killed him to get it. "Then you killed Donato. "It was my neck or his. In the light from the green-shaded lamp, Granada's face was greenish, his eyes gold. "You sound as if you wished it was my neck. I'm not asking for the rubber medal, but I did go out on my own time and take a killer. "His wife claims he's not a killer. "Naturally. She's been claiming he's innocent through four or five arrests. He's been innocent of everything from pushing down to armed robbery. So now he's innocent of murder. "Innocent and dead." Granada looked up quickly, his eyes glinting like coins. "You don't take her seriously? She's been lying her head off for yours. "You ought to know," Padilla said. "You ought to know," Padilla said. Granada rose slowly, about three feet wide and well over six feet tall. He leaned with both hands gripping the edges of the desk. "What is that supposed to mean? I used to run with lots of dames before I got wise to myself and settled down. "Her husband is the only one you shot," Padilla said. "Was she the little bird?" Granada said in a very gentle tone: "Mother told me there would be nights like this. I go out of my way to take a killer, and what happens? The Lieutenant eats me out. People come in off the street to tell me off. "Padilla said: "I'll bring you a crying towel. "Granada called him a bad name and lifted his hand a woman scurried and moaned in the hallway. Then she shrieked in the doorway. Granada looked at the lockers along the wall as though he was considering hiding in one. "Who let her in here?" Secundina Donato ran at him, stumbling and sobbing. "Murderer! I knew you would kill him. I warned him. I warn you now. Look out for me." Granada did. He kept the desk between them. "Calm down, now, Sexy. You threaten an officer, I got to lock you up. "Lock me up! Kill me! Put me in the morgue with Gus! "She went on in Spanish, pouring a torrent of words at Granada. He moved around the desk and caught her by the wrists. She sank her teeth in his hand. Granada shook her loose. She backed up to the row of lockers and sat down against them with a crash. Granada looked at his bitten hand. It was his gun hand, and the trigger finger was dripping blood. Nursing it in his other hand, he went into the washroom. Padilla stood over the woman. "Get up, Secundina. I'll take you home before you get into worse trouble. "Sally was asleep in the bedroom when I got home. "I stood and looked at her. She stirred in her sleep, and made a small quiet noise. It reminded me of an infant's gurgle. I tiptoed into the kitchen, turned on the fluorescent light over the stove, and peered into the oven. It was still warm, though the gas had been turned off. My dinner was there, in a pyrex dish with a cover. I ate it off the sink-board, standing up. The china clock looked down at me from the wall, pointing its hands accusingly at twelve midnight. Ten minutes later, after a hot shower not followed by a cold one, I climbed into bed beside Sally.

She lay with her face to the wall. I turned over to go to sleep myself. The telephone rang like an alarm set off by my movement. I levitated, dropped to the floor running on tiptoe, and got to the damn thing before it could ring again. A muffled voice said: "Is that Gunnarson? William Gunnarson the lawyer?" "This is Gunnarson, and I am an attorney?" "You want to go on being one?" "I don't understand you." "But I understand. There was a threat in the words, underlined by soft menace in the voice. I thought it was the same man who had called Ferguson, but I couldn't be sure. He snickered. "If you want to go on living, you better drop the case you're on, and I mean any part of it." "Go to hell." "You better give that some thought. You have a wife, I hear, and I hear she's pregnant. You wouldn't want her to take a bad fall or anything. So forget about Holly May and her little friends. You got that, Mr. Gunnarson?" I didn't answer. The anger in my head was like scalding ice. I slammed the receiver down. The fraction of a second later I picked it up again. There was nothing to be heard but the dial tone, the voice of idiot space. I laid the receiver down for the second time, more gently. But the bedroom light was on, and Sally was standing at the bedroom door. "What on earth was that, Bill?" I tried to recall the exact words I had spoken. I'd said too much to pretend that I was a wrong number. "Some drunk. He seems to have a grudge against someone." "Against you?" "No. Not against me. Against everybody." "He upset you, didn't he, William?" "I don't like my sleep interrupted by maniacs." "What did he say?" "Nothing repeatable. Gibberish." She accepted my explanation, at least for the present. We went back to bed, and she dropped off like a lamb. I lay awake for a long time beside her quiet breathing. We had been married for nearly three years; tonight for the first time I was fully aware of her presence to me. But I was more determined than ever to stick with the case and do my duty in it. The problem was to know where my duty lay. (To Be Continued Tomorrow)

One-Man Crusade To Help Mentally Retarded Young

By REESE HART
RALEIGH (AP) — A Burlington man who understands the plight of the mentally retarded child has waged a crusade to get increased help for these children in the public schools. Emil Cortes, a restaurant operator, knows the problem because he has a granddaughter in Greensboro who is mentally retarded. The 7-year-old girl was stricken with meningitis when she was a month old. The illness damaged her brain. Cortes noted that Mecklenburg, Guilford, Forsyth and Wake counties "have taken the bull by the horns" and are doing something about the problem of providing special classes for the educable retarded children. Cortes and State Sen. Ralph Scott of Alamance County conferred with Gov. Sanford earlier this week about the problem of the mentally retarded child. "The governor is just as concerned with the problem as we are," Scott said. "We want to arouse the public to the point that more will be done for these educable retarded children. We want the people who do not have retarded children to understand the plight of the parents who do have retarded children." Scott said he plans to introduce a bill in the 1961 General Assembly to carry out the program of the North Carolina Association for the Retarded Children. Its program calls for a minimum of 100 additional teachers for the educable retarded each year of the next biennium. It also calls for additional psychologists to meet the need for testing children who appear to be mentally retarded. "We want it so that funds appropriated for teachers for these children will not be diverted for other uses," Scott said. Dr. Charles F. Carroll, state superintendent of public instruction said there are five levels of children in the public schools above the trainable category. These are: (1) the educable with an I.Q. of 50 to 70, (2) the below average students with an I.Q. of 70 to 90, (3) average students from 90 to 110, (4) the above average from 110 to 135, and (5) the talented or gifted above 135. "The teachers should recognize the individual differences in these pupils and give them proportionately the program that is geared to his or her needs," Carroll said. He added, "We strongly favor special classes for the educable when the classes are justified. The question arises as to the need for these classes in small schools. Assuming that 2 per cent of our children are in the mentally retarded category, this would mean that only six students in a school with an enrollment of 300 would be mentally retarded. Would this justify a special class? This is a matter for determination by the legislature and tax-levying bodies which appropriate funds for the schools."

added, "These retarded children are not psychotic in any sense. I want to convey to the public the fact that they should be aware that a high fever of more than 104 will sometimes damage the brain of a child." Cortes noted that Mecklenburg, Guilford, Forsyth and Wake counties "have taken the bull by the horns" and are doing something about the problem of providing special classes for the educable retarded children. Urges Tar Heel Support Go To Rules Changes

RALEIGH (AP) — A campaign to induce support of Tar Heel Democratic congressmen for changes in the House Rules Committee was launched Thursday by the state president of Young Democratic Clubs. Wires to each Democratic House member from North Carolina were fired off by Samuel H. Johnson, Raleigh lawyer and YDC president.

Johnson also urged Young Democratic and other party leaders to add their voices to the chorus asking for support of House Speaker Rayburn's plan to increase membership of the Rules Committee. At his weekly news conference, Gov. Terry Sanford said he feels the change would help in getting through Congress federal aid to education legislation. Sanford said he has been in contact with some of the state's congressmen regarding the committee proposal, but he declined further comment.

Increasing the Rules Committee membership has been urged as a step to get liberal legislation past a conservative coalition on the committee.

In wires to the state's Democratic delegation, YDC President Johnson said: "Young Democrats are much concerned about prospects of our hard work in election being nullified by log-jam by Republicans and their allies in House Rules Committee. Please work for passage of Speaker Rayburn's plan to take control of this committee from the Republicans."

In an accompanying statement, Johnson said President Kennedy has shown interest in North Carolina "by his recognition of leadership ability from this state in significant appointments and in his moderate approach to problems we are facing." He added, "In his new administration, President Kennedy is entitled to loyalty and support in setting up the machinery to put his programs before Congress for consideration."

Hired Thief As Drastic Measure

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Wilbur Hightower says he hired a man to burglarize his mother's dress shop to force her out of business because she has a heart condition. Hightower, 36, of Pittsburgh Thursday was held for grand jury action on charges of receiving stolen goods. Police are searching for the other man who took control of this committee from the Republicans.

In an accompanying statement, Johnson said President Kennedy has shown interest in North Carolina "by his recognition of leadership ability from this state in significant appointments and in his moderate approach to problems we are facing." He added, "In his new administration, President Kennedy is entitled to loyalty and support in setting up the machinery to put his programs before Congress for consideration."

He said the hired thief was to take just enough to force Mrs. Hightower out of business. Mrs. Hightower has given up her share of the shop. TRADE PACT TOKYO (AP)—Burma and Communist North Korea signed a trade agreement Thursday in Pyongyang. Pyongyang radio announced. The North Korean broadcast did not disclose the value of trade involved.

Has New Verse For An Old Song

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Harvard Law School Dean Edwin N. Griswold has a new verse to an old song. Commenting to the Kentucky and Louisville Bar associations Thursday that 10 per cent of his staff has joined President Kennedy's administration, Griswold quipped: "Good deans never die—they just lose their faculties." The dean, incidentally, is a Republican.

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — When Viola Westberg was graduated from high school at Greeley, Colo. 33 years ago, she was awarded a half-tuition scholarship at Denver University. Instead she attended Colorado State College at her home town. She went on to become a school teacher, a wife and the mother of three children. Now Viola Bryan and a grandmother, she took leave from her elementary school teaching job at suburban Lakewood the other day and applied for the 33-year-old scholarship. Surprised officials at Denver University announced they will honor the scholarship in deference to Mrs. Bryan's long service to Colorado education.

Mother Fights To Save Her Son

DOTHAN, Ala. (AP)—Trying to save her son from a Cuban firing squad, a Dothan mother says she has contacted the Swiss Embassy in Havana and will attempt to see President Kennedy personally to ask for aid.

The son, Tommy L. Baker, is one of six Americans accused by the Castro government of trying to invade Cuba. Baker denied the invasion attempt in letters home but said he may be shot.

Mrs. James Baker told newsmen she is convinced that an audience with Kennedy is her only hope of doing anything for her son.

ICED BROCCOLI—When the temperature fell below freezing, J. T. Crosby turned on the sprinklers in his fields at Plant City, Fla., hoping the water would provide protection against frost on his strawberries and broccoli. Here he examines the ice he found on the plants the next morning. Crosby said the temperature fell to 14 degrees in one field. The broccoli apparently came through without damage, but ice harmed his strawberry plants. (AP Wirephoto)

Kennedy's Choice Is Cheered By Senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., today cheered President Kennedy's selection of Dr. Janet Travell as the official White House physician and added this plea:

"I certainly hope Jack's kind to me and lets her treat me once in awhile."

Goldwater, one of the foremost conservatives of the Republican party, said the New York doctor also had been treating him for about three years.

"Sen. Kennedy told me about her and telephoned her so I could get my first appointment," the Arizona told a reporter. "She's really wonderful."

Goldwater said he had been "troubled with what I think is a pinched nerve in my back."

"It has caused aches and pains in my arms and wrists but since I've been treated by Dr. Travell I've had nearly complete relief," he added. "But it's not something that goes away completely."

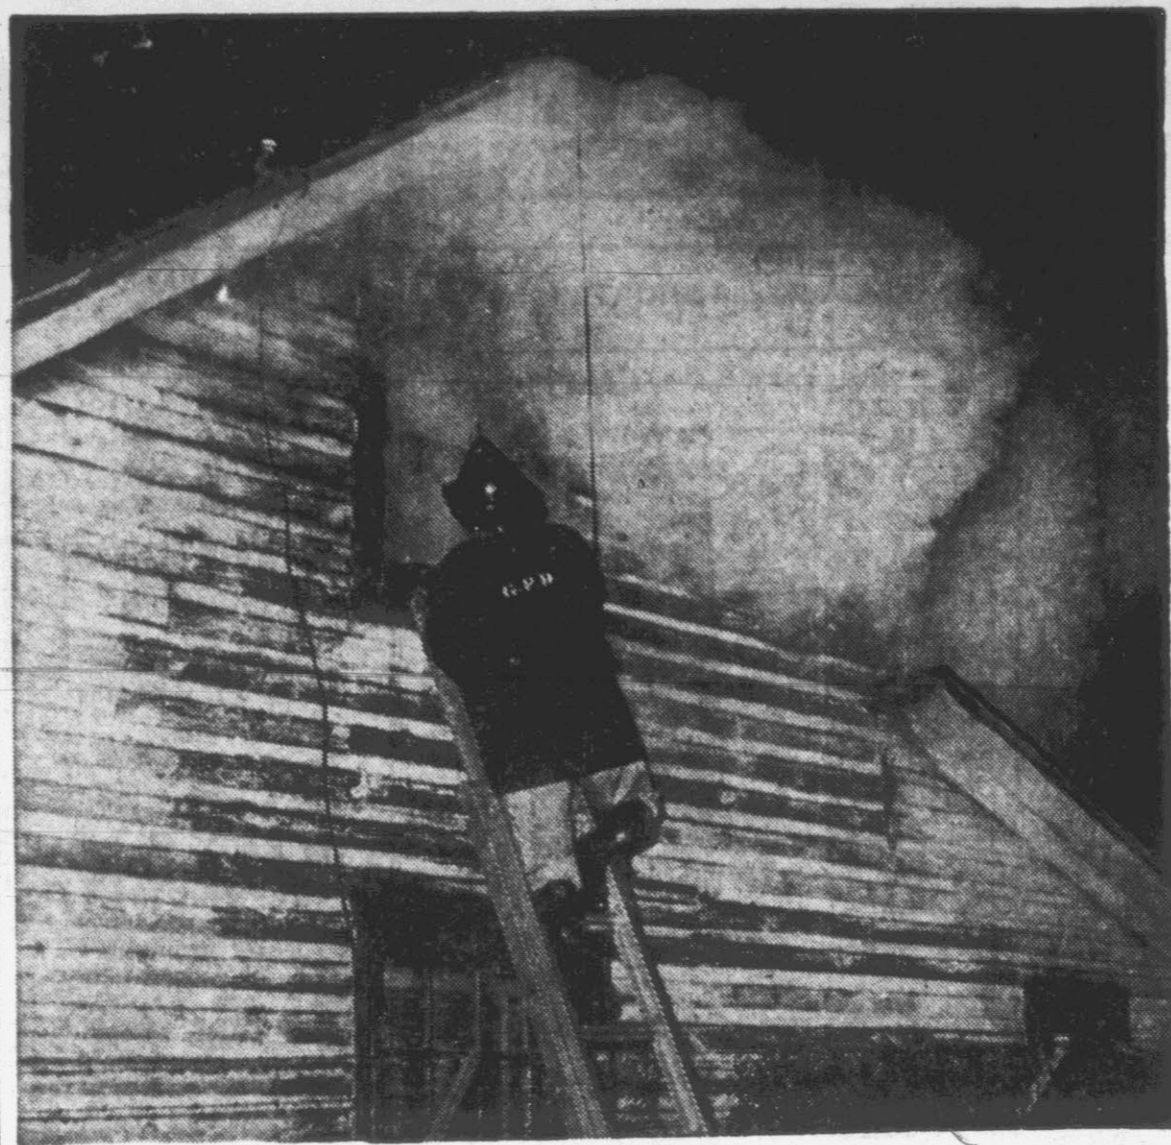

Goldwater said he visited her in New York this week without learning she was about to get the White House appointment previously limited to male physicians.

"I told her I hoped to see her soon again but she was a little indefinite," he said. "I thought she was going to be busy writing a book."

"I was pleasantly surprised when I read she had been appointed White House physician," Goldwater said. "She is a wonderful woman as well as a wonderful physician."

Dr. Travell, 59, who is married to a New York stock broker in 1955 treated Kennedy's serious back trouble, which stemmed from a wartime combat injury.

A fire, the cause of which was undetermined, resulted in heavy damage to a dwelling at 210 East Second St. late yesterday, Greenville Fire officers reported today.

Firemen responded to the call at 5:45 p.m. and found the second floor of the dwelling in flames when they arrived at the scene. Officers said Box 82, at the intersection of Second and Reade Sts., was turned in for the fire.

Chief George Gardner said 25 firemen responded to the alarm. He explained that the major portion of the blaze was quickly extinguished but firemen remained at the scene for some time checking for sparks which might cause the fire to reignite.

Firefighters said the majority of the furniture in the house was removed by neighbors by the time fire units arrived at the scene.

Did you know there is enough energy in your living room rocking chair to supply the electrical needs of Greenville for generations? All you need to do is unlock it.

In a way, we are trying to do something of this kind. We recently ordered $30,000.00 worth of Burroughs electronic bookkeeping machinery to go with our new automatic proof machine.

We figure this will replace 4 standard machines, release two bookkeepers for additional duties to speed up service to our depositors, and double our efficiency.

Why these expensive purchases? That's easy. In the past decade our deposits have almost doubled, our check volume has more than doubled, and in the past 12 months over 1,250 new accounts have been opened.

This ultra modern equipment will digest and classify the digits and papers which pour in waves through our corridors day after day.

And . . . most important of all, it will give us the time to continue to greet you in our lobby and talk with you, without losing the personal touch which haste and masses of details sometimes require.

All of it gives us a better opportunity to know you and move forward together with the people of Pitt County who own this bank and who are our customers.
