President Calls This A 'Time Of Emergency', Tide Running Against U.S.; Orders Buildup Of Defenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy, solemnly calling this a time of national emergency with the Communist tide running dangerously against America, today announced he has ordered swift bolstering of U.S. military defenses.

In his first State of the Union message, the President said the orders provide for an immediate speed-up in Polaris submarine construction and in development and production of missiles, and for prompt increase in air-lift capacity to deal with "any problem at any spot on the globe at any moment's notice."

But in his address to Congress and the country, Kennedy also pledged his administration to exploration of "all possible areas of cooperation with the Soviet Union and other nations" to invoke the wonders of nuclear and space science instead of the terrors.

He specifically invited the Soviet Union to join with the United States now in a science space program "which some day may unlock the deepest secrets of the universe."

Kennedy, speaking before a joint session of the House and Senate and to a nationwide television and radio audience, said that despite the current urgent need for greater military might until tensions ease, arms control and disarmament will be "a central goal of our national policy." He called for new efforts to end the arms race.

Meanwhile, he said: "The tide is unfavorable. Life in 1961 will not be easy. There will be further set-backs before the tide is turned. But turn it we must. The hopes of all mankind rest upon us."

The youthful President dealt mostly with the world situation, which he painted in somber tones.

There also was a note of graveness in what he had to say about the home front.

"In short," he declared, "the American economy is in trouble."

He said that for the last seven months business has been in the throes of recession. He said further that there have been "three and half years of slack, seven years of diminished economic growth, and nine years of falling farm income."

Kennedy sketched in general terms a program for dealing with this matter, saying his administration "does not intend to stand helplessly by." He promised to detail the program in special messages to Congress during the next two weeks. The remedies he outlined broadly are largely those he advocated during the presidential campaign.

The President said that barring development of urgent national defense needs or a worsening of the economy, proposals he advances in all fields "will not of and by themselves unbalance the budget" he inherited from the Eisenhower regime. It calls for outlay of $80.9 billion and a surplus of $1.4 billion in the fiscal year starting July 1.

However, Kennedy made it plain he is nc blindly wedded to the idea of a balanced budget.

"We will do," he said, "what needs to be done. For our national household is cluttered with unfinished and neglected tasks."

In the monetary field regarding the balance of payments problem and the related flow of gold from the United States, Kennedy promised new steps to ease the situation.

But he also said: "This administration will not distort the value of the dollar in any fashion. That is a pledge. This administration intends, in short, to back up all our efforts abroad, and to make certain that, in the future as in the past, the dollar is 'as sound as a dollar.'"

Speaking of the Communist threat, Kennedy said that during his first 10 days in office he had been staggered to learn of "the harsh enormity of the (international) trials through which we must pass in the next four years."

As a result of a global review with key advisers, Kennedy said, he has instructed Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara "to reappraise our entire defense strategy" and make a preliminary report by the end of February.

Kennedy pictured the Communist menace as so serious that he has ordered an immediate strengthening of defenses on three fronts—Polaris submarines, missiles and the air-lift operation.

"I speak today," Kennedy said, "in an hour of national peril and national emergency. Before my term has ended, we shall have to test anew whether a nation governed and organized such as ours can endure.

"The outcome is by no means certain. The answers are by no means clear."

Kennedy said "we must re-examine and revise our whole arsenal of tools" for dealing with the threat to the free world — economic, political and diplomatic as well as military tools.

"We are moving into a period of uncertain risk in which both the military and diplomatic possibilities require a free world force so powerful as to make any aggression clearly futile," Kennedy said.

In the field of economic aid abroad, he called the problems towering and unprecedented.

"The response must be towering and unprecedented a, well, much as lend-lease (in World War II) and the Marshall plan (of the post war years) were."

Kennedy singled out Latin-American countries for special aid, after saying that "Communist agents seeking to exploit that region's peaceful revolution of hope have establishel a base on Cuba, only 90 miles from our shores."

U.S. Admiral Prepares For Parley With Rebel Aboard Portuguese Ship

RECIFE, Brazil (AP)—A U. S. admiral agreed today to a meeting at daybreak Tuesday with the rebel captain of the seized liner Santa Maria to arrange for the release of her 588 passengers.

Rear Adm. Allen E. Smith Jr., U. S. Navy commander in the Caribbean, said he received a message from Capt. Henrique Galvao proposing the meeting on the high seas. Smith quickly accepted.

The Portuguese luxury liner, whose 42 American and other passengers have been virtual hostages since Jan. 22, was reported lying about 60 miles due east of Recife.

Smith will sail on the destroyer Gearing for the rendezvous with the political foe of Portuguese Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar. The Gearing, one of four U. S. destroyers assigned to track the captive ship, now is heading for Recife.

Smith flew to Recife from Belem Sunday night to take charge of arrangements for the release of the passengers.

Smith said he planned a rendezvous about 35 miles off Recife but that he expected full instructions from Washington to be sent him aboard the Gearing. He said three other U.S. destroyers were en route here.

Asked if he expects to transfer all the passengers or only the 42 Americans aboard, Smith replied that this depended on the outcome of his talk with Galvao.

U.S. Navy planes spotted the Santa Maria at 7:30 p.m. Sunday cruising in apparently aimless patterns off Brazil's Atlantic coast.

Galvao was under instructions from Gen. Humberto Delgado, exiled leader of the Portuguese National Liberation movement, to keep the Santa Maria in international waters until after the inauguration of Brazilian President-elect Janio Quadros Tuesday.

Quadros gave assurance that if Galvao sails into a Brazilian port for safe discharge of the passengers, he will not seize the $16.6-million liner for return to her Portuguese owners. He also offered Galvao a haven.

"Henrique Galvao is my old friend," Quadros told newsmen in Rio de Janeiro. "Being my friend, he knows I will not turn over the ship to Portuguese authorities in any manner."

Quadros predicted that Galvao would sail into Recife or the Brizilian port of Salvador about Wednesday and, "if this happens, I shall give him every guarantee" against internment.

The outgoing administration of President Juscelino Kubitschek decided Saturday to offer Galvao political asylum if he entered Brazilian waters, but to turn the Santa Maria back to her Portuguese owners, the Colonial Navigation Co.

The United States had proposed that Kubitschek permit the Santa Maria to enter a Brazilian port to discharge her passengers without threat of seizure.

U.S. officials in Brazil appeared relieved at the stand taken by Quadros, who succeeds Kubitschek at noon Tuesday in a ceremony at Brasilia, the new capital.

Delgado hailed the incoming president's stand. He hastened to Rio de Janeiro from his exile home in Sao Paulo and said he would go to help Galvao if the Santa Maria enters port.

Two Arrests In Grimesland May Cost Chief Job

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

GRIMESLAND — Grimesland's Town Board is expected to oust the town's police chief tomorrow as a result of a controversy that grew from a pair of Saturday afternoon arrests here.

Russell Elks and Lawrence Elks, according to H. R. Winslow of the State Highway Patrol, were arrested for public drunkenness and disturbance Saturday by Chief J. Mack Bunting. Bunting could not be reached for comment today.

Winslow said he and Cpl. J. T. Jenkins, Pt. Luther Long, and Ptl. Bruce H. Jackson answered a call for assistance from the Grimesland chief around 5 p.m. Saturday.

The patrolman said Bunting had attempted to arrest Russell Elks on the street but that Elks had run into the Elks' Grill here, Winslow said, "They locked the door on Mack (Bunting) but it was unlocked when we arrived."

He said the patrolmen were "standing by to guard against any outbreak." Winslow said Lawrence Elks was "already in jail when we arrived."

Grimesland Mayor Leslie Elks said today members of the board asked Bunting for his resignation Saturday following the arrests. He predicted the board, at its called meeting, would fire Bunting.

He said the two men arrested were in jail for about four hours before being released after posting respective $25 bonds.

The mayor said the board had originally planned a meeting to consider the incident for today but had decided to delay the session until tomorrow. A municipal court session has been set for tonight to dispose of the cases brought by warrants served by Bunting.

Elks said the warrants served Saturday were still in the possession of Bunting and, consequently, they were not available to the press.

The mayor said the board had "had a long talk" with Bunting at its last meeting to ask the officer to make some changes in the performance of his duties.

Elks said townspeople have had reports Bunting has attempted to exercise authority outside his jurisdiction. "It's a wonder he hasn't gotten us in trouble before now," he said.

Bunting, 27, has served Grimesland as police chief and caretaker of the town's water system since July 1, 1960. He was hired by the town following the June resignation of Chief Bill Ennis, who is current Winterville Chief of Police.

Ennis gave criticism of the

Bookmobile Fund Goal Is Topped

The city of Greenville exceeded its goal in the bookmobile drive, officially turning in a total of $2,400 on Saturday, J.H. Rose, committee chairman, announced today.

W.H. Davenport, principal of Eppes High School here, spearheaded the Greenville drive, whose original goal was $1,800. Davenport turned in his fulfilled quota on Saturday to Joseph S. Moye, treasurer, Sheppard Memorial Library.

Rose also announced today that the bookmobile itself has been completed except for painting, and may be delivered next week. In that case, it possibly would go into operation in February, he said.

The total goal in the bookmobile drive was $7,400. Present contributions bring the total to over $7,200, and still several communities have not turned in their quotas.

The following communities, in addition to Greenville, have successfully completed their drives and submitted their quotas:

Farmville, $1,200; Winterville, $600; Grifton, Grimesland, Stokes and Fountain, each $300; Belvoir and Falkland, each $250; Chicod and Arthur, each $200. In several instances, the communities slightly exceeded their goals.

So far, Pactolus, Simpson, Ayden and Bethel are the remaining communities to complete their drives in the bookmobile project.

It was announced last week that Miss Mary Hawkins of Grimesland, graduate of N. C. College in Durham, has been selected to serve as librarian for the bookmobile. An assistant will also be hired.

Key House Rules Vote Is Scheduled For Tomorrow

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Kennedy administration faces its first key vote in the House Tuesday. It is on a plan to enlarge the Rules Committee, the group of 12 men who decide what bills come before tht House.

Speaker Sam Rayburn announced over the weekend there would be no compromise on his plan to add three members to the committee. This would break the power of four conservative Republicans and two Southern Democrats on the committee who consistently have blocked House votes on many social welfare bills.

Ending this power is the first key to getting President Kennedy's New Frontier legislation through Congress. Many House liberals regard the step as absolutely essential if bills are to be enacted covering these Kennedy pledges: aid to education, aid to depressed areas, housing aid, medical care for the aged under Social Security, and raising the minimum wage.

Rayburn is deeply committed to ending the bottleneck power of the committee. His "no compromise" announcement Saturday indicates he thinks he now has the votes to win.

Rep. Howard W. Smith of Virginia is chairman of the Rules Committee and one of the Southern Democrats who teams with the Republicans to produce bill-blocking 6-6 tie votes in the committee.

Smith had offered to clear the five major Kennedy legislative

Four Injured In Collision Here Today

FOUR PERSONS WERE INJURED . . . when these two vehicles collided at the intersection of Fifth and Elm Sts. early today. The car in the foreground was driven by Thomas Leggett while the other vehicle was operated by Ennis Tyson, officers reported.

Four persons were injured this morning in a collision at the intersection of Fifth and Elm Sts., which caused an estimated $1,100 damage to the two cars involved..

Police listed drivers of the cars as Ennis Carroll Tyson, 22 of Rt. 5, Greenville and Thomas Graham Leggett, 33 of 1715 South Elm St.

Investigators said the injured were Tyson; Melvin Perry, of Rt. 5, Greenville, a passenger in the Tyson car; Leggett and Melvin Albritton, 32, of Snow Hill, a passenger in the Leggett auto.

Hospital officials at noon today said both Tyson and Perry were released following treatment, while Leggett and Albritton were still undergoing treatment.

Police, who charged Tyson with failure to stop for a red light, said his vehicle was traveling East on Fifth St. while the Leggett auto was headed North on Elm St.

Damage to the Tyson car was set at $400 while an estimated $700 damage was done to the Leggett car.

The collision occurred at 9:35 a.m. investigators said.

New Orleans Father Again Defies Boycott Of School

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—A drug store clerk continued his defiance of a white boycott at integrated McDonough No. 10 school today—sending his 9-year-old son to the school for a second day.

John N. Thompson, 33, father of six, sent his eldest child Gregory to McDonough in a car with two U. S. marshals.

Gregory went to the school for the first time Friday. It was the scene of angry mass picketing in November.

Today, a crowd of 35 angry neighborhood women and men surged across the street onto the neutral ground, yelling—"Nigger lover. Go home. Go home."

The marshals hustled the boy into the school building. Police ordered the women off the neutral ground—restricted to newsmen—and back across the street.

Nippy weather in the mid-30's held down the number of pickets. But it was the largest throng at the scene since the picketing was at its height following the Nov. 14 integration.

Also on the scene today was police Supt. Joseph Giarrusso, U. S. Marshal Elward F. Petitbon and about 15 newsmen.

Thompson earlier had said he would send a second son—8-year-old Michael—to McDonough if the boy had recovered from a spell of asthma. However, Michael was not seen.

The two boys had been attending segregated schools in neighboring St. Bernard Parish where most of the white children from McDonogh and Frantz—the city's other desegregated school—were enrolled after the first strife-torn week of integration.

Ethel Arieux, 33, who withdrew her two children from McDonogh, voiced a typical neighborhood reaction to Thompson's action.

"I don't think there'll be many white children back in McDonogh. I know I won't put mine back if I have to go to work to send them to private school."

"After all, that Thompson is an outsider. The boycott wasn't broken by one of us," said Mrs. Arieux.

Thompson, a native of Sylacauga, Ala., came to New Orleans a year ago. The family moved into the McDonogh school neighborhood after the integration order.

Thompson is expected to begin work this week at another drug store operated by the chain which employs him. The day he took Gregory to McDonogh he was reportedly fired by the firm but company officials denied this and said Thompson was only being transferred to another store as assistant fountain manager.

A plea by the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice for Catholic parents to ignore the almost-complete white boycott is expected to have little effect in the predominately Catholic neighborhoods surrounding McDonogh and Frantz, where seven white pupils have been going to school with one Negro.

The conference meeting Sunday in Chicago suggested that Catholic laymen who kept children away from the schools "publicly defy and revile their appointed church authorities."

Pleads Guilty

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — Mrs. Burnice Iverson Geiger, accused embezzler of $2 million from her father's bank, pleaded guilty of 35 counts in U.S. District Court today.

Judge Henry N. Graven deferred sentencing pending a presentencing investigation and continued bond at $10,000. She did not immediately post bond.

She could conceivably get 175 years in prison. The penalty for embezzlement is five years in prison or $5,000 fine or both on each count.

Mop On Top Now Scottish Rage

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — A leading barber reported today the latest rage is the John F. Kennedy hairdo—a mop on top, parted on the side.

"Young Scots are giving up the crew cut and going in for this in a big way," said the barber. They say it makes them look older, more mature.

"On the other hand, middle-aged men are coming in for the same type of haircut because they think it makes them look younger."

RESUME JAMMING

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union resumed jamming Voice of America broadcasts beamed to the Soviet Union today after 24 hours completely free of interference.

Powell To Press For Federal Bar

NEW YORK (AP)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., D-NY., says "the time is long overdue" for implementation of his long-pending proposal to bar federal funds to schools discriminating against Negroes.

Powell, speaking at a dinner in his honor Sunday night, said the proposal which he made five years ago should be adopted now either through legislation or eyecutive order.

The Harlem Negro congressman was acclaimed on his forthcoming chairmanship of the House Labor and Education Committee in a telegram to the dinner from President Kennedy.

Don't Know Fate Of Other Airmen

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP)—An Air Force officer on the Pentagon staff disclosed Sunday night that Capts. John R. McKone and Freeman B. Olmstead don't know what happened to three members of their RB47 crew still listed only as missing.

McKone and Olmstead, at home after seven months in a Soviet prison camp, were relaxing today with their wives and children. They are under orders not to grant any interviews.

They were among six airmen in the plane shot down in the Barents Sea near the Soviet Union last July. The body of one crewman, Capt. Willard G. Palm of Topeka, was recovered and returned to this country.

Lt. Col. Robert Eby, who accompanied the two fliers to Topeka's Forbes AFB, Saturday, said he had talked to them and "they just don't know; the three men are still missing as far as we are concerned."

McKone and Olmstead were released uneypectedly last week. They flew to Washington where they were welcomed by President Kennedy and their wives.

Badge Vs. Badge In Traffic Scene

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP)—It was badge against badge in Billings. And a male maneuver won over feminine wits.

It began when an off-duty traffic policeman a block from his car saw a meter maid watching the final seconds tick away on his parking meter.

Click went the meter and the maid started across the street, ticket ready.

"One more step and I'll pick you up for jay-walking," bellowed the patrolman.

He waved good-bye from his car while the meter maid was waiting on a red light.

Smart Chimp Will Soon Test Reflexes During Space Flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —A very smart young earthling soon will test whether the brain clicks along normally or goes haywire in space flight.

This earthling will be a chimpanzee, one of man's closest cousins in the department of smartness.

He, or she, will provide the first careful measurements whether mental faculties and reflexes are affected by the weird stresses of taking off in a rocket, and floating in space without the familiar sensation of having weight.

On this answer could depend partly the prospects that humans ever can go to the moon or Mars or on jaunts through space.

Animals have ridden up and down in rockets before, and Soviet dogs have even been brought safely home after orbiting completely around the earth.

But none of these was ever before analyzed to learn whether they can think and react normally. This is one of the significant elements in a new test preparing for man in space.

A highly trained chimpanzee is scheduled to ride Tuesday 115 miles up and 290 miles down range into the Atlantic ocean from this famous space port.

Later, if all goes well, one of seven human astronauts is scheduled to take the same type of ride in another step toward human trips orbiting the earth.

The chimpanzee will have jobs to do in his brief ride.

Mental processes of the young chimps are closer to those of man than the ape, scientists report. And their reaction time of .7 of a second is close to man's .5 of a second.

Six chimps have trained to flick levers when lights go on or else they get slight electrical shocks through the foot. They have learned to perform almost perfectly in the laboratories.

A key question is whether they can do as well under the oppressive pressure of rocket takeoff and during nearly five minutes time of zero gravity in the arcing ride.

Cameras and electrodes will record expressions and reactions, heartbeat, respiration and temperature, to correlate with the chimp's performance as "pilot."

One of the biggest unknowns is whether anything happens to mental faculties during the peculiar state of weightlessness. The weightless state cannot be duplicated on earth for many seconds except in certain airplane flights.

Katanga Mercenaries Getting Bigger, Uglier And Tougher

By ADRIAN PORTER

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga (AP)—"They get bigger, tougher —and uglier—every day."

The security officer at Elisabethville Airport looked distastefully at a group of young men clambering out of the plane that had just come in from Europe.

They were the latest additions to the Katanga gendarmerie, now recruiting men from all parts of the world to defend Katanga's independence.

These mercenaries are joined every day by new soldier-adventurers. Lured by high pay, they have come from the United States, Britain, France, Germany, Poland, Israel, South Africa, Rhodesia—and, of course, Belgium. Some of the better types become officers but the others, undisciplined, untidy, rowdy and ruthless have joined a group known as "Les Affreux" (The Frightfuls).

The Frightfuls swagger—sometimes stagger—around town with revolvers slung low from the webbing of their camouflaged paratrooper smocks. They are usually unshaven, have cropped heads or long oily hair, and sport bushy moustaches. You can find them in any bar—usually drunk.

When the Belgian army stationed in Katanga withdrew following independence, President Moise Tshombe's government had little left in the way of a defense force. A few Belgian officers and men volunteered to join the new Katanga gendarmerie and, after sifting carefully through the African remnants of the old mutinous Force Publique, began forming a new army.

Their work was speeded, first by the threat of invasion by the pro-Lumumba Congo national army, and then by a Baluba rebellion.

As an experiment, a combat group was organized without any definite mission except to keep order and "make an impression" on rebels and invaders. It consisted of a few Belgian officers, warrant officers, a handful of African soldiers and European "other ranks."

Then it was decided to recruit as many whites as possible for similar groups and Defense Minister Joseph Yav went to Europe to find "technical advisers." Overnight Elisabethville seemed to be filled with a new foreign legion.

The volunteers, who are joined by new members daily, earn from $400 to $840 a month, depending on rank and the amount of time they spend fighting in the bush. They disappear for about three weeks to a month and then return to the bars of Elisabethville dirtier, smellier, tougher—and drunker.

Pi Kappa Alpha House Dedicated

Members of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity at East Carolina College held open house at their chapter house on East Fifth Street during the weekend. They welcomed to their recently acquired residence more than 700 guests at entertainments held Saturday and Sunday.

An informal entertainment at the Pi Kappa Alpha house, formerly the residence of the late J.B. James of Greenville, included among guests Saturday afternoon administrative officers of East Carolina College, alumni members of the fraternity, brothers of the East Carolina chapter, and their dates.

A banquet Saturday night at the Moose Lodge in Greenville presented Dean of Men James Mallory of East Carolina as principal speaker. He spoke to members and guests on the ideals and responsibilities of fraternities and their members. The program was followed by a dance.

At the banquet Dean Robert L. Holt of East Carolina gave the invocation. Donald Conley of Greenville, president of the college Interfraternity Council, acted as master of ceremonies. Guests were welcomed by Sherrill Norman of Morehead City, president of the East Carolina chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha.

A room in the house was dedicated to the late Orval L. Phillips, registrar of East Carolina College and founder of the Epsilon Mu Chapter at East Carolina College.

Dr. Phillips acted as the first alumnus counselor of the chapter at East Carolina. He was the only member of Pi Kappa Alpha to found two chapters of the fraternity. In addition to the Epsilon Mu chapter at East Carolina, he founded the Delta Mu chapter at Mississippi Southern in 1949. His portrait hangs in the living room of the chapter house on East Fifth Street here.

Welcoming guests Sunday at the fraternity open house were the following officers and members of Pi Kappa Alpha: President Norman; Interfraternity Council President Conley; Jerry Wilkins of Dunn, vice president; Robert Edwards of Greenville, treasurer; Keith Hobbs of Warsaw, secretary; and James Loftin of Mount Olive, house manager; Charles Paradee of Dover, Del.; Fred Robertson of Littleton, alumnus counselor; Thomas Jackson of Godwin; Mrs. Delphia Corbett, house mother; and others.

Refreshments were served to guests rom an attractively appointed table. Tours of the house were conducted by members during the afternoon.

The Pi Kappa Alpha house, purchased some weeks ago, has been redecorated by members with the volunteer help of Jack Thomas, Antiques, of Greenville. Twenty-one members of the campus chapter are now in residence at the fraternity house.

It's Too Low Overhead

TOKYO (AP) — "Watch your head, please!"

Ignore the warning if you want. But in a Japanese style house you'll wish you hadn't.

Mathematically it's simple: (A) Foreigners come in larger sizes than Japanese. (B) Japanese doorways come no higher than necessary for Japanese to pass through.

But all that is about to change under the government's adoption this year of the metric system for measuring lumber, one of the last remaining strongholds to resist the encroachment of the decimal.

For centuries Japanese housebuilders have measured by the shaku. One shaku equals 0.30303 meters of 11.9303 inches. The unit below is the sun, with 10 sun make one shaku. The unit above is the ken. Six shaku equals one ken.

Lumber is pre-cut to these measurements for standardization, and one ken was considered an adequate height for a doorway. When trimmed and finished, this reduces the Japanese doorway to about 5 feet 9.

To complicate matters, there are two shaku standards, with Northern Japan using the short shaku and Southern Japan the long shaku.

Use of the metric system will permit measurement standards that will enlarge Japanese houses by 18 per cent, officials say.

In addition to reasons of efficiency, it is pointed out that Japanese themselves are a taller race today than they were when the shaku standards were set.

However, popular resistance the metric system has encountered in other areas makes it likely its acceptance for lumber will likewise be slow.

Dinner Honors Missionaries

The Rev. and Mrs. Kenneth S. Jones, missionaries on furlough from the Congo, were guests Saturday afternoon of Dr. Bessie McNeil, director of the home economics department at East Carolina College, and of students living during the winter quarter at the Adelaide E. Bloxton Home Management House on the campus

Approximately seventy guests were present to meet the honor guests, who are spending several days in Greenville.

Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Jones were again entertained at the Home Management House at a dinner given by home economics students.

Last summer Dr McNiel spent several weeks in the Congo, where she worked with Mr. and Mrs. Jones in training natives of the area in home life.

At Saturday afternoon's reception Dr. McNiel was assisted in entertaining by Misses Alice Oglesby of Winterville; Elizabeth Wilson of Mount Olive; June Barrow of Draper; Carolyn Daugherty of Dover; and Charlotte Humphries of Roxboro.

The Home Management House at the college was attractively decorated for the social event with arrangements of red roses and other spring flowers. Refreshments were served from a table covered with an embroidered linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of tulips, chrysanthemums, and Dutch irises.

Hostesses at Sunday's dinner were Dr. McNiel, and Misses Charlotte Purifoy of New Bern; Linda Whitfield of Robersonville; Ruth Holder of Blowing Rock; Jessie Ellis of Tarboro; and Betty Rose Frazier of Henderson.

Mrs. Holt Speaks To Round Table

The Round Table Book Club met Tuesday with Mrs. T. M. Davis at her home on Oak Street.

Mrs. D. L. Moore, president, presided over a short business session.

The club voted to contribute $5 to the fund for a second Pitt County Bookmobile. The president appointed the following committees: Mrs Daniel Taylor and Mrs. H. T. Patterson, a nominating committee to secure officers for the 1961-'62 club year; Mrs. E. E. Rawl, Mrs. E. R. Browning and Mrs A. A. Hines to serve as the program committee for the club year 1961-'62.

Mrs. H. T. Patterson, program chairman, introduced Mrs. Robert L. Holt, whose subject was "Satire On Organized Religion" by Sinclair Lewis. She stated that the religious satire in the novels by Lewis may be broken down into three major aspects: the institution and institutions of the church (Protestant in the main); the membership of the church; and the leadership of the church—its ministers, evangelists and lay leaders. This satire is pointed out in Mr. Lewis' novels: "Main Street," "Elmer Gantry," "Arrowsmith" and "Babbitt."

Mrs. Johnnie Edwards was a guest for the afternoon.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. C. O'H. Horne, served a salad course with coffee.

Plans For Big Tobacco Sale To The Philippines Bogged

By JAMES B. SIBBISON

WASHINGTON (AP)—Plans to sell 16.5 million pounds of U.S. tobacco in the Philippines this year seem to have bogged down.

"Frankly, I do not know that any progress has been made," Mauro Calingo, minister of the Philippine government, told a reporter.

Just last month, Chairman Harold Cooley, D-N.C., of the House Agriculture Comm.ttee said he expected $8 million worth of flue cured tobacco to be sold to the Philippines in 1961.

The idea would be to re-open this once lucrative market for U. S. tobacco in exchange for increased purchases of Philippine sugar, which could run as high as $150 million a year.

Cooley, questioned by a reporter, agreed that so far nothing has been done in the Philippines to buy the tobacco. He said he still has hopes, however.

The basic problem in the Philippines is considered here to be political.

Tobacco growers in the Philippines have piled up a surplus of an inferior grade that the cigarette makers there don't want. Philippine law, however, bars them from buying U.S. tobacco, which they do want.

Minister Calingo said the problem is essentially a fight between Philippine tobacco growers and sugar planters.

An outline of the Philippines tobacco problem was released recently in a Philippine government publication called "The Cooperative Farmer."

At one point, the publication said that Eugene Ransom, agricultural attache of the American embassy and a tobacco dealer, George Thomas, had discussed negotiations in the Philippines last Dec. 7.

The publication said Thomas represented Congressman Cooley and American tobacco interests.

Asked about this, Cooley said that he knew about Thomas' trip but that Thomas was not his representative. Cooley said that negotiations such as this can only be handled by the ambassador.

Thomas, he said, represents the Monk - Henderson Tobacco Co. of Wendell, N.C.

"I'm sure he wasn't speaking entirely for his own company," Cooley said.

Psychotic Charmer Played By Mitchell

When the Playhouse casting for Emlyn Williams' "Night Must Fall" was completed at East Carolina College recently, the man who had won the coveted role of Danny, psychotic young charmer, was Douglas Mitchell of Greenville

The play, to be presented in McGinnis auditorium February 9, 10, and 11, at 8 p.m. is a modern suspense drama which enjoyed a highly successful run on Broadway.

Unique in its demands on the actor, the role of Danny gives young Mitchell a chance to experiment with an interpretation he has never done before. Danny is a deceptively charming psychopath whose antics create problems for all the members of Mrs. Bransom's household. Dorning Jenkins, also of Greenville, portrays Mrs. Bransom, in the Playhouse production.

Says Mitchell of his role in "Night Must Fall," "Usually you can call on experience. This one can't be done that way. I've not enough psychotic tendencies to call on. Danny has to do two things. He must be so charming that Mrs. Bransom is not aware. But the audience must know. It requires acting within acting—a character within a character."

Doing Danny is not easy even for a seasoned performer like Mitchell. Many scenes have no time for build up. The role requires a great range of emotional interpretation, some faked and some for real.

In one scene Mitchell has the problem of crying as Danny himself, and then two minutes later crying for the inspector merely for show. The audience must know which is which.

Is it hard to cry 'Crying isn't hard," says the youthful actor. "It's harder to be a good comedian. But showing the audience the difference in the two levels of emotion is difficult."

Difficult as this interpretation is, Mitchell has much experience in theater to bring to the part. Much at home on the stage, he has been active in theatre in many areas. During the summer of 1955 he toured with the Drama Caravan to such cities as Atlanta, Mobile, Birmingham, and New Orleans.

He has studied acting in New York and in Washington, D.C., and has appeared in the "Lost Colony" here in North Carolina. Last summer he had a leading role in "The Third Frontier" in New Bern. He also appeared at Carolina Beach in "See How They Run," a Playhouse summer production at the college, and finished the summer season by returning to "The Lost Colony" for its final week of performance.

He is no newcomer to audiences at East Carolina College. He has appeared with the Playhouse here in "Robin Hood," "Born Yesterday," "Everyman," "Teahouse of the August Moon," "The Lady's Not For Burning," and other plays.

Mitchell is the son of Capt. and Mrs. S. H. Mitchell of 1112 South Overlook Drive. He is now working toward the master's degree at East Carolina College.

Does he like the role he has in "Night Must Fall"? I was always the plaster of paris hero, the boy next door. This role is a great experience," he says — JANICE HARDISON.

Experts To Rear Newest Twins

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Montgomery twins will be reared by experts.

The boys were born Sunday. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Montgomery have two other sets of twins. The newcomers are the third set in six years.

"This time we weren't surprised," said the father at Lakewood Hospital. "The doctor told us two months ago we could expect twins."

The birth of the first set definitely surprised the Montgomerys, since they already had five children. The parents haven't decided yet what to call the new boys.

"We've about run ouf of names," the father said.

ANNOUNCE REVIVAL

The Maury Free Will Baptist Church announces a revival February 1-12. Services will begin each evening at 7:30. The Rev. Jack Paramore of Greenville will serve as evangelist. Special singing is planned for each night. The church provides a nursery for babies, and the public is invited.

Less Formality In White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy is going in for less formality in his White House office—logs burning in the fireplace, flanked by two comfortable sofas, with a coffee table in between.

Kennedy has had the oval presidential office repainted from pale green to off-white and ordered pictures of George Washington and other historical predecessors removed in favor of stirring naval battle scenes.

Reporters got a weekend look at the executive office after Kennedy vetoed the green walls which had just been freshly redone for him in the same color favored by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Kennedy has on his desk some bookends left over from Eisenhower. They feature gold eagles mounted on a navy blue base with five gold stars—the insignia of a general of the army. The bookends hold a copy of the Bible, a world Almanac and two books written by Kennedy himself.

On Kennedy's desk are the beginnings of what looks like a comfortable permanent clutter: a coconut shell war memento, a favorite pair of daggers, paper weight and an ash tray to service his occasional cigars.

The coconut shell, encased in plastic, is the one scratched with an SOS message which Kennedy sent with a native for help when he was marooned on a Pacific island after his PT boat was cut in two by a Japanese destroyer during World War II.

Ike To Try Luck In South Georgia

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (AP)—Private citizen Dwight D. Eisenhower planned today to try his luck hunting south Georgia quail on the plantation of former Secretary of the Treasury George Humphrey.

The former President drove over from Albany Sunday where he had been hunting on the Blue Springs plantation of W. Alton Jones for a week. Accompanying him on the two-hour trip were Dr. Howard Snyder, Robert Woodruff and William Robinson.

Eisenhower did not go to church and was unable to hunt because Georgia law prohibits such activity on Sunday.

Eisenhower plans to leave Humphrey's Milestone plantation Thursday by car for Tallahassee, Fla., where he will board Woodruff's private plane for a flight back home to Gettysburg, Pa.

Alive Because Of Dialing Error

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — William Horowitz dialed a wrong number Sunday and may have saved a man's life.

"Please help me," cried a man at the other end of the line. "I'm dying."

Horowitz asked the man's name and phone number. When he dialed back and got the same plea for help, he called police.

Patrolmen checked the address listed for the number and found Anthony J. Lancor, 74, suffering from a heart attack.

Taken by ambulance to a hospital, he was reported in satisfactory condition.

Eastern Division Of All-State Band Clinic Here February 3-4

The Eastern Division of the All-State Band Clinic will bring to the campus of East Carolina College Friday and Saturday, February 3 and 4, a group of talented instrumentalists from high schools in the area, Herbert L. Carter, director of bands at the college and chairman of arrangements for the event, has announced.

Two bands will be organized here during the two-day meeting. A Symphonic Band of young musicians selected earlier by a committee conducting individual auditions in Eastern North Carolina counties will play under the direction of Earl E. Beach, head of the East Carolina music department. A Concert Band, with members representing schools throughout the area, will be conducted by W. C. Duvall, director of music education in Norfolk County schools in Virginia.

Students attending the clinic will also participate in a series of sectional rehearsals for various of the band instruments. Band directors in charge of these events will be Durwood Bray, Edenton; William Glasgow, Farmville; Harry Shipman, Kinston; John Lowery, Plymouth; Frank Hammond, Rocky Mount; J. C. Sykes, Rocky Mount; Robert Crumpler, Tarboro; and William Adcock, Wilmington.

Two public concerts will be presented as highlights of the clinic. The East Carolina College Concert Band, with Mr. Carter as director, will give a program Friday at 8 p.m. in the Wright auditorium. The Clinic Symphonic and Concert bands will appear Saturday night at 7:30, also in the Wright auditorium.

Members of the Greenville High School Band are assisting the college music department in arranging the entertainment of high school musicians during their participation in the clinic.

A number of social events being arranged for visitors on the campus include a dance Friday night after the concert. Music will be provided by the East Carolina Collegians.

During the clinic here, auditions will be held to choose members from the Eastern North Carolina counties who will play with the All-State High School Band at a regional convention of the Music Educators National Conference in April at Asheville.

To Hear Talk By Noted Chemist

Faculty members of the department of science at East Carolina College whose major interest is chemistry will attend a meeting Feb. 7 in Kinston at which Dr. Jacob Bigeleisen of Brookhaven National Laboratory, Long Island, N.Y., will address members of the Eastern North Carolina Section of the American Chemical Society.

The meeting will include a dinner, the program of the evening, and a coffee hour providing informa discussion among members. It is scheduled for the ballroom of the Hotel Kinston, with the dinner at 6:30 p.m. and the program at 7:30.

Dr. Bigeleisen's topic will be "The Chemistry of Isotopes."

After receiving his undergraduate trainging at New York University, Dr. Bigeleisen did research with Dr. Otto Redlich at the State College of Washington on the dissociation of strong electrolytes. He later began research for a Ph.D. with Dr. G. N. Ward at the University of California in Berkeley. With Dr. Lewis, he worked on general acids and bases, absorption spectra of dyes, photo-chemistry in rigid media, and semiquinones.

In 1943, he joined the Manhatten District project at Columbia University where, jointly with Dr. Maria G. Mayer, he advanced the theory of isotope exchange reactions. In 1948, he joined the Chemistry Department at Brookhaven National Laboratory, and is now a senior chemist there. For his work in isotopes, he received the American Chemical Society Award in Nuclear Applications to Chemistry in 1958.

EVANGELIST Frank Duncan (above) will be guest speaker at evangelistic services this week being featured by Calvary Baptist Church. Services begin each night at 7:30. Visiting singers each evening will provide special music.

Presidential Reception Given Official Family

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Kennedy shook hands with 300 members of their official family at a gay White House reception Sunday night, featuring champagne and mixed drinks.

The President said it was the first chance he had had to meet many of the new members of his team.

The 5 p.m. gathering—first major social event at the White House given by the Kennedys—started off with the swearing in of 15 of the latest appointees. Chief Justice Earl Warren, introduced by Kennedy as "the busiest man in Washington," officiated at the ceremony in the East Room.

Mrs. Kennedy, in a black velvet sleeveless sheath dress, stood with her husband, vice president and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson and the Warrens to receive the guests in the Blue Room, where a fire burned in the stately fireplace.

The guests mingled later in the state dining room, where a buffet table was laden with tiny handwiches, cakes and goodies. Drinks, including California and New York champagne, were served at a nearby bar-table. The Marine Corps Band played in the north lobby.

Invited to the reception were 149 administration officials. All appointees to major posts in the administration were on the guest list.

The Kennedys left for their private quarters after about an hour on the receiving line and did not join the guests in the dining room.

The party brought together some of the President's very newest appointees, such as Edward R Murrow, director of the United States Information Agency, named only Saturday, and some holdovers from prior admnistrations, such as long-time FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover.

During the day, Kennedy also attended a solemn Red Mass, celebrated by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Roman Catholic archbishop of Washington, invoking divine blessings on the administration of justice.

Found Dog With Body Of Youth

SAN MARCOS, Tex. (AP) — Puzzled relatives learned Sunday why one of two pet dogs who disappeared with Bobbie Jack McMullin, 14, last Tuesday didn't come home.

Members of a big search party found the dog keeping watch beside Bobbie's body in rough country on the L. O. Backus ranch 3½ miles west of here.

The boy, a slight 60-pounder clad only in blue jeans, a light shirt and jacket, and tennis shoes, died about Friday of exposure to sub-freezing cold, said M. C. Williams, county health officer.

Made Good On A Campaign Claim

President Kennedy has made good one of his campaign claims—that the U.S. had lost prestige in some parts of the world last year—by authorizing release of two foreign opinion samplings taken by the U.S. Information Agency.

As President Kennedy had asserted during the national campaign, the polls showed that people in most parts of the free world felt that the Soviet Union was ahead of the U.S. in space achievements. The opinion studies further indicated that people in other free world nations feel that the Soviets will hold their lead for the next 10 years.

Results of another poll made public showed that in England and France the prestige of the United States suffered following collapse of the Paris summit conference, although U.S. prestige continued to be far above that held in those two countries by the Soviet Union.

While these two studies indicate a sagging of American prestige abroad, it is also important to note that both the United States and President Eisenhower enjoyed greater prestige than the Soviets and their premier Khrushchev also lost prestige, the studies said, following collapse of the Paris conference.

Although the results of these polls shocked many Americans both during the election campaign and upon their release last week, it is much better that they have been brought into the open. They dispell any illusions Americans may have had that their government can do no wrong in the opinion of its allies in the free world. It emphasizes the need for closer coordination of major policy decisions among the nations of the free world in the cold war against communism.

As for the opinion regarding space supremacy, this naturally is closely tied with the ability of the free world to protect itself from possible communist aggression in the years ahead. If our allies feel the position of the United States is inferior to that of the Soviets. They must also feel that in the future they and we will have to negotiate with the communist from a position of weakness rather than from a position of strength. This in itself could have an adverse effect upon the mutual confidence of the nations of the free world and the unified front they present against unreasonable Soviet demands.

Even though these possibilities do not present a pleasant picture, it is much better that we make ourselves aware of them than it would be for us to ignore them. They afford a position from which we can more carefully and accurately plan for the future to strengthen our weaknesses and thus place ourselves and the entire free world in a better position to protect itself and other parts of the world from further inroads by communism.

(First of three articles on Women Legislators)

"Woman's place is in the home", according to established theory and practice of the early days of Rome and the edrly days of government in North Carolina, too.

Old adages sometimes cry out for revision, but ofttimes their truths speak today with an even more firm, convincing tone. "Woman's place" still is in a home, but "home" no longer consists of a dwelling complete with stove and dishpan. The stove and dishpan still exist, but not all of the 87,858,000 women in the United States are needed to man kitchen equipment.

State and federal legislatures are "homes" of government, and the best talents of both men and women are needed for legislative housekeeping.

In state legislatures across the country this year there are 318 women serving; a total of 30,000 women today hold elective offices in federal, state, and local government. Last year 1,500 women were top government appointees.

February's convening of the North Carolina State Legislature will bring a record number of women to the House. Four women will represent Alexander, Lenoir, Macon, and Stokes counties. Two of these are returning from the 1959 session.

In the history of the Old North State, however, there have been a total of only twelve members of the gentler sex to be seated among their distinguished colleagues in the otherwise-masculine domain of the North Carolina legislature. Only two of this small number have served in the State Senate.

In 1921, Buncombe county sent Miss Lillian Exum Clement to the State House of Representatives, where she became not only the first woman to serve in the N. C. Legislature, but also the first woman in the South elected to a House of Representatives. Twenty-seven years old, Miss Clement had studied law under a private tutor, and although woman suffrage was not in effect in 1920 at the time of the primary, she had been nominated by a county committee to replace a primary nominee. History records that Miss Clement of Black Mountain is particularly noteworthy since she secured her nomination over two men before the ratification of the nineteenth admendment.

A tall, angular woman whose reddish hair was always covered with a hat during sessions of the 1921 House, Miss Clement was placed on several committees by House Speaker H. P. Grier. Committees wre not then formed in entirety as at present; additions were made from day to day and occasionally new committees were formed. During the third week of the session she was named chairman of the Committee on Institutions for Deaf and Dumb.

One session of the legislature seemed enough to satisfy her political ambitions; after her subsequent marriage domesticity replaced leanings toward the limelight.

Though it was still an "unheard of thing" for a lady to hold a public office, in 1925 Mecklenburg sent Miss Julia Alexander to be seated in the House. Against the wishes of her father, Capt. Sydenham Alexander, who later himself went to Congress, Miss Julia had studied law. Being steeped in the traditions of a prominent Charlotte family (descended from Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence signer John McKnitt Alexander and W.A. Graham, former Tar Heel governor) made her entry into politics natural, if one does not consider that there had been only one feminine precedent previously set.

Miss Alexander, who died three years ago, is described by those who remember her presence in the 1925 session as being reserved, but very capable. It is said that the whole body of men with whom she served had deep respect for her. She, too, was seen during each session dressed in a large hat, compulsory attire for even the most "daring" of women who entered the business or professional world.

Her range of legislative interests, committee-wise, varies from agricultural to monetary appropriations.

Like Miss Clement, she did not seek a second term, but unlike Miss Clement, Miss Alexander returned to her home to continue her public life. She remained active in legal, church, and civic circles, never marrying.

Mecklenburgers revoted their confidence in women's political ability the following year, electing Miss Carrie McLean to the 1927 House session. Speaker R. T. Fountain also voiced his confidence in Miss McLean by placing her at the head of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, as well as assigning her duty with the Committees on Public and Private Laws, Constitutional Amendments, Congressional Districts, and election Laws.

Having studied law privately, she was in her mid-forties when licensed to practice law, but a few years later she was elected by fellow-lawyers in Charlotte to the office of President of the Mecklenburg Bar Association. With more than fifty years behind her and more than a few gray hairs arranged in the bouffant style of the twenties (and the sixties), Miss Carrie is staunchly described by those who knew her as being above reproach. An unsuccessful bid for the Senate seat in the following election ended her political goals, but her legal interests continued the remainder of her life.

These three women paved the way, with their legislative ventures, for more women to enter politics. They had successfully invaded the North Carolina House, demanding recognition as lawmakers, not as women. Feminine frills they had left behind, and the majority of their colleagues traded them respect and admiration, however doubtful at times it seemed. In the thirties the Senate, too, was to open its doors to women. The next two decades were still far from seeing a rush of women into the Capital building, but perhaps this decade will welcome even more talent, enthusiasm, and ability, regardless of gender, into the "home" of its government.

Best To Put Proposal Directly Before Voters

The decision to take to the people of North Carolina the proposition of another bond issue to finance expansion of its state-owned port facilities has greater merit than the initial proposal of issuing revenue bonds to be retired through earnings of the ports.

According to Gov. Sanford, the revenue bond financing of new facilities would have cost the state considerably more in interest rates, and in addition to that a number of legal hurdles have loomed up since the initial proposal was made.

By taking the issue directly to the people of the state, officials will receive the reaction from the voters of the state as a whole. If the issue is approved, the financing of the proposed improvements will be considerably easier, and the state will in all probability have to pay much less interest on the money it has to borrow.

Another factor is that North Carolinians, in all probability, will have other capital improvement bond issues upon which to make a decision by the time the 1961 legislative session ends. The people will have a better knowledge of what is needed in terms of capital improvements for all the phases of state operations. They will have an opportunity to determine whether the state can afford all the capital outlay programs which are proposed for bond financing, and if not, which of those programs are most essential to the state at the moment.

While port development appears to be one of the needs of the state, it is important that the citizens view the needs of the state as a whole before determining which of these needs to finance through bond issues. The matter of ports improvements can best be considered along with the other needs, and presented to the voters of the state with other bond proposals.

Report Is Keyed To Earlier One

By RALPH ROBEY

President Eisenhower's final Economic Report is, as would be expected, in harmony with his earlier State of the Union and Budget messages. The Economic Report is prepared with the aid of the Council of Economic Advisers and with the assistance of the heads of the various executive departments and independent agencies whose fields are covered.

Most of the work, however, falls to the Council and it primarily deserves whatever credit or criticism arises from the Report. This year it is credit, although there doubtless will be plenty of criticism because the Report takes a fundamentally optimistic point of view.

The first chapter discusses economic developments and policies of 1960. Chapter two is a resume of experience under the Employment Act of 1946, which created the Council of Economic Advisers. The third chapter is devoted to "Policies for the Future," which contains the legislative recommendations. Then comes the customary report on the activities of the Council of Economic Advisers during 1960. Next is an analysis of three outstanding problems — employment and earnings, agriculture, and United States foreign trade and payments. Finally there is the usual series of statistical tables.

The statistical tables are a most valuable source of factual data. The discussion of the three problems is excellent. The recommendations for legislative action are repetition and will carry no particular weight in the present Congress. The history of experience under the Employment Act is interesting and gives a good perspective on this period, but the chapter on what happened in 1960 and the business outlook is by far the most important and significant.

In this analysis by the President there is a clear recognition that, while 1960 was the best year in the nation's history, a mild downturn started in the second half and gradually spread over a wider and wider proportion of the economic system. At no point, however, is the term "recession" applied to this slackening of business activity, and it is emphasized that the decline is so small that no special government action is needed to get us on the upgrade again. Further, it is anticipated that an upturn will start in a short time.

The budget message makes this same assumption, and that, plus the recommended legislation, such as increasing postal rates, is what provides the projected budget surplus for the fiscal year starting next July 1.

It goes without saying that this is contrary to the task force recommendations that have been made to President Kennedy. These have been to the effect that it will get much worse before it gets better, therefore positive government action is necessary, and all such action must increase expenditures.

Which one of these two points of view will win out in the Congress is not much of a question. Government spending will increase beyond any doubt, and was so recommended by the outgoing Administration. The amount of the increase is not yet determined, and neither is the place nor means for bringing about the rise. But the rise will be an appreciable amount and since states and municipalities also are increasing their outlays, the total will be sufficient to have an effect upon the business trend.

This is one of the so-called favorable factors listed by the President in his Economic Report. Of more importance, how-

Conflict Of Generations

Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A troubled mother writes to me:

"Our children were really loved. We earned and saved and spent money together. We went on trips together; read together, played together, prayed together.

"Then our children became teen-agers and they 'discovered' that we had been doing everything wrong. Our gals had only three or four sweaters, others had fifteen. We waited 'til we could pay, others simply bought. Our children walked, others rode. Ours drank milk, others had pop!

"Then came the shock. Our eldest son threatened to leave home unless he could have a car. The eldest girl threatened to leave unless she could be married before graduation. Our close, well-loved children had become monsters. Not because of us believe me, but because of the 'others'!"

Togetherness is delightful for parents but children want to walk their own paths and to build their own lives. Parents may guide their children, but the generations are different. Jack Kennedy and Ike Eisenhower are of different generations and they respond differently to identical conditions. My correspondent seems worried about over-indulgent parents who "forgot that chastisement is a sign of love."

The conflict of generations is eternal and the current generations face stresses and strains which arise from war, from taxes, from insecurity, from mixed moral criteria, from postponed marriages and postponed careers. Chastisement does not solve problems; chastisement can only impose the decisions of one generation upon another, often unrealistically. Children set up defenses against parental correction and learn how to get around them.

For instance, this girl who wanted to be married before graduation was in a hurry for many reasons, one of which, probably the unspoken reason, was that she feared that she would lose her boy. When I went to college, students were expelled if they married before graduation; if they attempted trial marriage, or to use a vulgar term, shacking up, they were most certainly expelled. Today, it seems different. The colleges and universities have abandoned supervision over such matters, just as some professors permit smoking in class and the boys and girls dress like hooligans, without taste or distinction.

Parents are often taken by surprise, as my correspondent apparently is, but the young people are not necessarily "bad" because they want cars and desire the adventure of early marriage. They are, of course, inexperienced and many of their ideas do not serve them effectively. A young man, still at college, with a wife and perhaps a child could slow up his career because many opportunities are lost to him. On the other hand, many students claim that married life is less exhausting and time-wasting than courtship and much less expensive, because the compulsive showing-off costs are eliminated.

It is difficult for many parents to know what to do when they face children who become Beatniks, who use soiled language, who associate with bad companions, who drift away from the advantages of means and education, who develop an affinity for dirt. Parents become distraught. In a decade they may be proud of these same children. It takes time in a period of change.

Yet if they will think back to

Other Editors Saying To Check The Court

(Richmond News-Leader)

Last May the Legislature of Louisiana recommended an amendment to the United States Constitution, intending to create some machinery by which the States themselves could have a final say-so on decisions of the United States Supreme Court in areas of constitutional interpretation.

A copy of this resolution reached us just the other day. The proposal is poorly drawn and reflects insufficient thought given to the mechanics of the plan, but the idea is basically so sound that the Virginia General Assembly might wish to join Louisiana in this approach.

The Louisiana plan rests in the clear intention of the United States Constitution that no change should be made in our fundamental charter unless that change is acceptable to at least three-fourths of the States. This is the margin required in Article V for ratification of a proposed amendment. Thus at least 38 States must ratify the proposed 23rd Amendment, now being circulated, by which residents of the District of Columbia would be permitted to vote in presidential elections. If 13 States disapprove, the amendment cannot become law.

But effective changes in the Constitution, as Southerners are ruefully aware, are made not only by formal amendment of the Constitution; changes also are made, and far more frequently, by opinion of the United States Supreme Court. The high court's opinion of 1954 in the school segregation cases effected the most spectacular amendment, in terms of powers prohibited to the States, but many other opinions, especially in the area of interstate commerce also have served either to expand the powers of the central government or to diminish the powers of the States.

Under the Louisiana plan, any 13 States would have the power to suspend the operation of a Supreme Court opinion having such an effect, by filing notice of protest and disagreement with some appropriate official. Unless a full three-fourths of the States thereafter expressed formal approval of the offending decision, the opinion would become void and no precedent.

The Louisiana resolution, if it ever were to be considered seriously, would have to be modified to take into consideration the position of the litigants in these great contested cases. No party to a suit reasonably could be expected to wait three years, as the resolution proposes, to see if more than one-fourth of the States intended to register objections. With careful thought, however, some workable procedure doubtless could be devised by which the protests of, say, half a dozen States, filed within ninety days after a key decision, would suspend a new constitutional doctrine for an additional 18 months. This would provide sufficient time for the States to approve or disapprove the court's shaping of the Constitution, and in very few cases would such a "freeze" affect the interested parties severely.

Some such procedure, in our view, would be completely in keeping with the federal nature of our Union. A part of the genius of our government lies in the fact that political power resides in the people acting through their States. It is thus the States that delegate power to the central government, and they rightfully should be able to maintain a tight control over such delegations.

The States have no such control now. They are helpless before the authority of the Supreme Court, backed by the executive power. If they ever are to regain the role envisioned for them by the founding fathers, some additional check on the court, along the lines of the Louisiana plan, will have to be adopted.

Turmoil In Commodity Markets

By ELMER ROESSNER

Expect turmoil in the world commodity markets, especially in the food markets. There have been serious crop failures in both Russia and China. The Communist High Commands in both countries are busily passing blame on to subordinates; horrendous denunciations are being used to distract the attention of the hungry.

Meanwhile, Russia and China are buying up foodstuffs in the world market. Castro is a double blessing to Khrushchev. Castro is not only a stepping stone for Communist expansion in the Western Hemisphere but he is a provident supplier of cheap sugar and, perhaps, other foodstuffs.

China is reported to have purchased 250,000 tons of wheat from Australia, 200,000 tons from Canada and an unannounced amount of rice from Burma.

As winter worsens, the entire Red Bloc will be in need of grains, pulse, fats, oils proteins and fibers. While China's international credits are low, Russia is believed to have a large store of gold which it may be willing to spend to prevent unrest at home.

FARE CHARGE-OFFS

Commutation deductions ahead: Griping labor for years has been the fact the executives and salesmen can deduct travel costs to produce income, while workers can't deduct commutation costs to produce theirs.

If other pro-labor legislation is blocked, look for the new Administration to advance legislation to make bus, train and other commutation costs deductible in calculating taxable income.

School - aid blocks ahead: Toughest Kennedy plank for Congressional digestion will be proposals for Federal aid to education. Segregationists won't like it because it will be easy to tie desegregation qualifications to the program. Religious groups are opposed because they say it would be unfair to parochial schools, or because it may easily be extended to aid sectarian schools. And many others will think the plan is the first step toward Federal control of education. (It is, of course.)

MORE FROM HITHER TO YON

Higher postal rates: The new Congress has little choice: it must vote higher rates or higher appropriations for subsidies, most likely the former. Many believe it will be better to get the agony over with immediately than to wait until an election year.

Highly vulnerable are magazine rates and the new "educational materials" rates by which Lumumba music on records can be sent at rates originally intented for bibles and other books.

Rise in credit promotions: Unemployment is nibbling away at retail sales, although so far sales are holding up well. But the threat of decline is causing many merchants to prepare fresh promotions for credit sales, sprinkled with many recession gimmicks, such as insurance payoffs in case of death, suspension of payments in event of layoffs, and renegotiation privileges in event of financial strictures.

Americans Getting Younger, Old Promoter Insists

The Old Promoter was in a contentious mood when he came in today. He was holding a magazine article that said, because of miracle drugs, the average age of Americans was getting greater.

"Miracle drugs or not, it's nonsense!" he declared. "Because of the competition for jobs, Americans are growing younger. Men and women who used to be three years away from Social Security a few years ago are now only 49, and they have the face-lifts to prove it.

"And youngsters who were 17 back in 1958 are still 17, because if they get older their fathers will lose tax deductions.

"Miracle drugs may extend human life, but they cannot reverse the effects of economics and taxes."

Place Of Cuba In Trade

By ROGER BABSON

KEY WEST, Florida, – I am writing this in Florida. It is only a "stone's throw" from Key West (100 miles). My first request is for every reader to get his child's geography and study Cuba.

LOCATION OF CUBA

It will be seen that Cuba is not just east of Florida; but is at the mouth of a body of water between Key West, U.S., and Yucatan, Mexico. It may truly be said that whoever controls Cuba will control the Gulf of Mexico. This means that our city of New Orleans, the outlet for all shipping on the Mississippi River, our Texas ports of Galveston and Corpus Christi, as well as the leading Mexican ports, could be closed. All this was anticipated when we built out base at Guantanamo Bay on the extreme southeast end of Cuba, about 50 miles east of Santiago de Cuba. This is Cuba's great shipping port for sugar. At one time this site was wanted to protect our Panama Canal, but the latter has been written off since the Atomic Era. What country controls Cuba controls the gateway to the heart of the U.S. Therefore, you can be sure it will not be Russia or any other enemy.

DISTANCE OF CUBA FROM RUSSIA

By airplane Cuba is about 6000 miles from Moscow. Yet Alaska is only about 2000 miles from Vladivostok, Siberia, the eastern terminus of the Siberian Railway. So why should we fear even if Russia is friendly with Cuba? We already are closer to Siberia at Alaska and we don't worry.

I personally do not directly know much about Cuba, but I once taught in and owned a college in Guatemala. I know that the Spanish people get easily excited. They love to threaten and fight by propaganda. This is what Castro is now doing. We should not take it too seriously. I feel that President Eisenhower got frightened too easily and made a great mistake by breaking off diplomatic relations as he did.

WEALTH OF CUBA

Cuba is a wonderfully rich country. It possesses marvelous soil. It enjoys plenty of rain in the right seasons. It is flooded with sunshine. Neither Florida nor the Gulf Coast have anything to fear from Cuba. After it settles down it will be a great asset to these sections. Cuba could well develop another boom in Florida. I am sure that President Kennedy will work out a satisfactory solution, as he knows Cuba from his winters at Palm Beach.

For several reasons Russia would not go to war with us to get Cuba, and Castro knows it. There are several reasons, but the chief one is that such a war by Russia or by one of her satellites would alienate all of Latin America against her. Do not forget that Lyndon Johnson, our Vice President, knows that Cuba holds the ocean gateway to Texas. It is silly to think of Russia taking over Cuba with our Guantanamo Bay forces being among the strongest in the world.

WHAT KENNEDY WANTS

President Kennedy wants most to make a good President. Second, he wants to develop some kind of an understanding with Russia so as to honestly say: "I kept you out of war." Third, he wants to have a good stock market and to have the Dow-Jones Averages in the 1962 higher than they are today. His friends may let prices fall off during 1961 as a part of the "readjustment." He is willing to "let the recession come and get over with" so he can have a good market in 1962. Ex-President Eisenhower had little interest in our stock market; but the Kennedy family is stock-market minded. It always was and surely will be during the next two years.

It is very possible that Cuba could be used to develop another bull market. Castro may be bought off—or shot off. Kennedy could make a spectacular play by restoring diplomatic relations, which I think he will do. Just now Cuba is playing Russia against the U.S. It is a great game of poker and I am ready to bet on President Kennedy. Hence, I am not bullish on Cuba and perhaps on the entire United States.

AEC Retiring Some Obsolescent Nuclear Weapons

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has built up such an arsenal of new and improved nuclear weapons that it has started relegating obsolescent models to retirement, the Atomic Energy Commission disclosed today.

The AEC said the nation's present nuclear weapons strength—both in numbers and variety—offers a "powerful deterrent against aggression."

But the AEC added this alert to its annual report to Congress: Further dramatic advances in weapons are possible through further nuclear testing, and therefore a threat to the free world is "implicit in a continued unpoliced moratorium on weapons testing."

The commission indicated its belief in the possibility that the Soviet Union may have been conducting underground sneak tests of weapons during the current moratorium, in effect since 1958.

"This commission is full in accord," said the report, "with the national policy of attaining cessation of nuclear weapons tests under a treaty that would establish international controls adquate to assure compliance with its provisions.

"The commission, however, also feels a strong sense of responsibility to point out the risks to free world supremacy in nuclear weapons—and the resultant threat to the free world—that are implicit in a continued unpoliced moratorium on weapons testing."

The AEC added: "Nuclear weapons development is not a static science. Important advances in weapons design are possible—advances which would have great military significance. They could include improvements in many fields, such as new 'battlefield' weapons and improvements of the weight-to-yield ratio of a variety of bombs and warheads. Our weapons scientists are convinced that further nuclear testing would achieve major advances in weapons design.

"It is technically possible at present to conduct nuclear tests underground in a clandestine manner, with little or no possibility of detection and identification. Methods also could be developed for conducting tests in outer space—tests that would be extremely difficult to detect and identify.

"The military advantages to be gained from clandestine nuclear testing are great, and the probabilities of detecting and identifying clandestine tests are very small. This will be the free world's situation so long as there is an unpoliced de facto moratorium on nuclear weapons testing."

The AEC gave its appraisal of America's present strength in nuclear arms.

"In the field of national defense," it said, "the commission can take satisfaction in having developed and manufactured a variety of nuclear weapons and warheads in ample quantities to meet the current requirements of the Department of Defense.

"Nuclear weapons have been made available for Strategic and Tactical Air Forces and for missile batteries. During 1960, the first submarine armed with nuclear missiles as well as powered with a nuclear reactor—the Polaris missile-carrying USS George Washington—undertook its first routine mission."

"The world knows," said the AEC, "we have an ample store of a variety of nuclear weapons—an armament that represents a powerful deterrent against aggression."

During the past year, said the report, the commission's weapons production work included "meeting new weapon system capabilities, modernization of older and less efficient designs in the stockpile, and a retirement program for obsolescent weapons."

This was the commission's first public reference to a retirement program for its older weapons.

The commission said its weapons research and development work last year consisted largely of translating results of the 1958 Nevada tests—the last conducted by the United States—into "operational weapons" for the defense department.

The AEC said further laboratory work, even without field tests, can continue to produce some improvements in weapons design, but added: "However, without nuclear testing, major advances in nuclear weapons design do not appear possible."

"The commission recognizes that radioactivity from nuclear tests is a source of concern in the minds of many people," the report said, "regardless of whether or not the fears of fallout radiation are scientifically valid.

"Accordingly, the commission would propose that future tests, if any, be conducted underground, or in space beyond the earth's atmosphere, in such a way as not to cause fallout."

In other highlights of its 544-page report, the commission revealed:

1. Progress toward producing atomic power at costs competitive with power produced by conventional fuels, and "we are exploring new and radical concepts for power reactors with the objective of reducing further the cost of power from nuclear sources."

2. Advances in developing nuclear-powered space rockets and nuclear-powered aircraft.

3. Radioactive Strontium 90—the same material that's so greatly feared in the fallout from nuclear bombs tests—is being used to develop special electric power units and will be used by the Coast Guard in coastal light buoys and by the Navy and Weather Bureau for automatic weather stations.

4. Work has started to develop special instruments which could be carried by space satellites to detect nuclear explosions in outer space.

Kennedy's Order To Speed Polaris Sub Production May Be 'Easiest'

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Of President Kennedy's three "prompt action" orders to the military today, the one for speeding up Polaris missile submarine production may be the easiest to carry out.

Top naval officials believe that even with existing building facilities, the rate of Polaris sub production could be more than doubled.

His State of the Union message request for accelerating the whole ballistic missile program could present more difficulties. Delays occurred in building the launching sites for the missiles. His demand that duplication in the missile program be reduced could compel sharp changes in production programs, elimination of some weapons and stepups in others.

Kennedy said the system for speeding fighting men to any spot on the globe at a moment's notice to cope with threat of limited war requires more air-lift capacity—without delay. If more long-range transport planes are to be acquired quickly, they must be bought "off-the-shelf," he added. There wouldn't be time to design and build entirely new ones.

The President wants equally swift action from the strategy makers. By the end of February—a month from now—he expects Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to submit a preliminary report on the precise state of the nation's defense strategy.

This includes: "Our ability to fulfill our commitments—the effectiveness, vulnerability and dispersal of our strategic bases, forces and warning systems—the efficiency and economy of our operation and organization — the elimination of obsolete bases and installations — and the adequacy, modernization and mobility of our present conventional and nuclear forces and weapons systems in the light of present and future dangers."

Almost every one of these topics has at some time been a point of issue in inter-service arguments.

Kennedy took cognizance of this. In the past, he said, the "lack of a consistent, coherent military strategy, the absence of basic assumptions about our national requirements and the faulty estimates and duplication arising from inter-service rivalries have all made it difficult to assess accurately how adequate—or inadequate—our defenses really are."

The President's three-point weapon speed-up program can cause some unhappiness within the individual armed forces.

In ordering that the Polaris program be stepped up, Kennedy said that unobligated ship building funds would ge used "to build and place on station, at least nine months earlier than planned, substantially more" Polaris missile firing submarines.

This apparently means that money which the Navy had expected to use for building other types of ships—destroyers, service and support vessels—will be turned into expediting the Polaris program.

Fourteen Polaris submarines have been built or are building. Money for 19, including those built or building, has been provided. Two Polaris submarines, the George Washington and Patrick Henry, have joined the fleet. Another, the Robert E. Lee, has completed missile firing tests and is in the yard for final check before going into operational status. By the end of the present calendar year, the Navy expects about eight Polaris submarines to be ready.

Prior to the submission of a fiscal 1962 budget by the outgoing Eisenhower administration, the rate of production for Polaris submarines was running at about three a year.

Adm. Arleigh Burke, chief of naval operations, is on record as saying that production could be increased to 12 Polaris submarines per year. The Navy at present believes the total Polaris fleet should be about 45.

In directing prompt action to accelerate the entire missile program, Kennedy said that until the over-all survey by McNamara is completed, emphasis "will be largely on improved organization and decision-making—on cutting down wasteful duplications and time-lag that have handicapped the whole family of missiles."

the crazy 1920's with its spiked bob, its Charleston and bunny-hug and all the goings on which accompanied Prohibition, including blanket parties on the campus and panty raids of the sororities—it would seem that the world is always somewhat mad and only me and thee have lived sanely all our lives. And truth to tell, I know so little about thee. As for me, I have yet to write an autobiography.

So what we need to do is to give our children some early guidance, to let them live with their own generation from early childhood, so that they gro strong and wholesome and are not astounded by a realistic world. This togetherness business between parents and children is psychologically hard on children who want to live with young people their own age This is always true and parents need to respect that. But parents want to live their own lives, being very critical of the parents and their conduct, expressing their criticism, often in bookishly contemptuous language. Parents do not have to take second place if they can hold their own among their progeny.

Talk Teenage Marriage Question At 4-H Meet

During the January 4-H Club meeting for Negro members, the topic "Teenage Marriages" was discussed among the senior clubs.

The 4-H'ers were informed of the topic during December meetings, at which they discussed "Dating." The purpose of the discussions was to enable youths to be more aware of different problems which might confront teenage marriages.

The following questions have been asked concerning marriage by the clubs: At what age should one marry? Should teenagers' parents keep them from getting married? Should teenagers get married and let their parents support them? Why shouldn't a couple marry if they are in love? What is the cause of teenage marriage? Should teenagers be forced to marry because of illegitimacy? Why is teenage marriage the least stable of all marriages?

How long should a couple date before marriage? Should a teenager continue going to public schools after marriage? What effect might religion have on teenage marriage?

The agents, leaders and students participated in the discussions.

Miss Annie Jones, senior 4-H leader at Pitt County Training School in Grimesland, concluded the discussion for the month with the following statement: "It takes more in marriage than love: it takes understanding, security, confidence, respect, trustworthiness and a mature open mind, along with love for a marriage to be successful."

In order to ascertain what qualities 4-H'ers of Pitt County have that make them qualified for marriage, club members rated each other on "Are You Marriageable?"

This Early American collection by Continental has all the charm of the past with the design skill, the technical "know-how" and the liveability of today.

The solid hard rock maple used in this group has matchless grain markings and fascinating figure patterns that give the furniture an individuality all its own.

An authentic handcrafted touch is the exposed dovetailing of the drawer rails into the end panels, as is the "softened off" effect on the corners of the tops. Even the drawer sides and backs are solid maple.

Loyal North State basketball fans are beating the drums for the Lenoir-Rhyne-Appalachian meeting in Hickory Saturday night. But East Carolina, calm as a March breeze, gets a shot at putting the damper on the weekend hulla-boo tonight.

The two quints, ranked two and three in the current standings, meet on the Pirate's home court at 8:00.

Although not impressive in losing to the big powers—Lenoir Rhyne and Appalachian—Coach Earl Smith has carried his club along lightly and now rest in third place, just one game short of a first place tie.

The home court—a big advantage in the North State—is expected to serve in East Carolina's favor but Smith is hopeful his club won't be rusty from a long lay-off.

Winners of four of five contests since Christmas, East Carolina has been idle since bombing Pfeiffer 79-64 more than a week ago. A game with Western Carolina last Friday was snowed out.

Appalachian has been reeling in a downward fashion since marking up an outstanding pre-Christmas work pad. The Apps dropped a game to Lenoir Rhyne, barely squeaked past Catawba by one point, and was upset by Atlantic Christian. They gained the winning touch to down Pfeiffer but were upended again Saturday, this time by Belmont Abbey.

Yet, the Apps still rest in second place and only one-half game short of the league lead. Many still regard them as the team most likely to succeed.

Strong in 1959-60, posting a 19-9 log, Coach Bob Light has the backbone of that team back.

Rich Howe, a 6-4 200 pounder, and Don King, a sharpshooting guard, constitute the offensive punch for the Apps. Both were All-Conference and averaged more than 18 points per game last season. The duo are high in the conference scoring race again this season.

Missing from the club is big Willard Swift and Wayne Proffitt, both double digit scorers.

Jim Richardson, a 6-4 freshman, has played a large part in the Apps' success thus far. A good rebounder, the thin North Wilkesboro native has earned a starting slot.

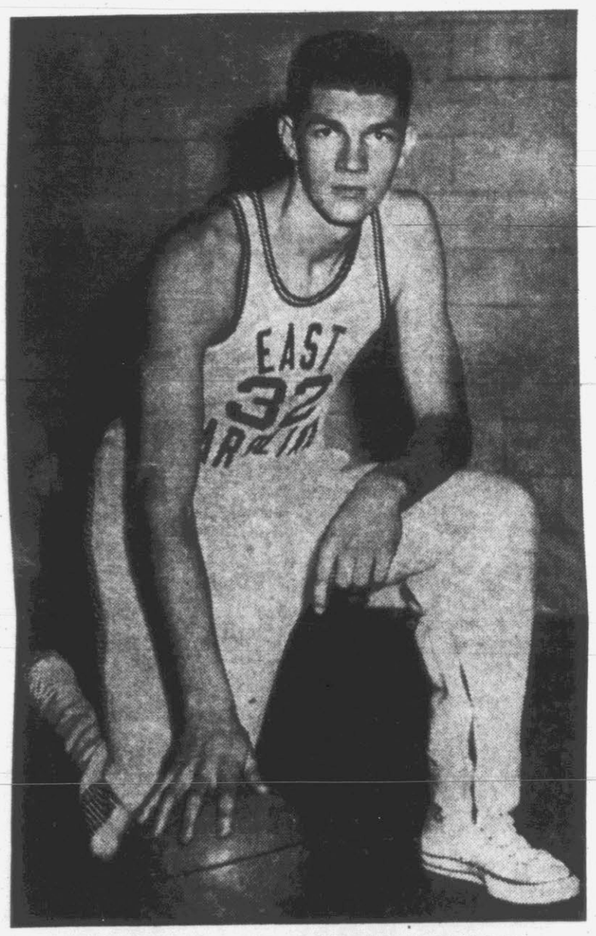

Harold Oetting, a junior, has shown vast improvement and gives Light more scoring punch. A guard, Oetting has hit double figures often this season.

With only an unexpected one-sided dumping by Lenoir Rhyne blotting its post-Christmas play, East Carolina is at full strength for the Tuesday night contest.

Senior captain Don Smith (15.1) is set to lead the charge. Other Pirate starters averaging in double figures are Cotton Clayton (14.9), Charlie Lewis (13.7), and Bill Otte (11.8).

East Carolina is home again Friday night when it plays arch-rival Atlantic Christian.

Other games in the conference tonight will find Elon at Pfeiffer and Lenoir Rhyne at Guilford.

LACY WEST . . . to start against Apps tonight

Cary, Hamilton Named Hall Of Fame

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Max Carey and the late Billy Hamilton are the latest additions to baseball's Hall of Fame. The two former National League center fielders, famed for their base-stealing ability, will be inducted formally July 24 at the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Carey, 70, holder of the modern National League record for stolen bases with 738 in a 20-year career from 1910 to 1929 with Pittsburgh and Brooklyn, said in Miami Beach, Fla., he was "happy and proud of the honor of being selected." Max expects to be on hand personally when his plaque is dedicated.

Hamilton, who died in 1940, was one of the truly great stars of the pre-1900 days of baseball. He had a lifetime batting average of .344 while playing with Philadelphia and Boston from 1890 to 1901. Known as "Sliding Billy", he stole 797 bases, the all-time league record, in that span and also stole 140 with Kansas City in the American Association which considered itself a major league. If those were counted his total would be 937.

The two men were named Sunday by the veterans' committee, headed by Warren Brown of the Chicago American, which considers only men who have been inactive as players for at least 30 years. It was their first chance to honor Carey who previously had been under the jurisdiction of the baseball writers who select from among those out of baseball at least five years but not more than 30.

Carey, known as "Scoop" for his great knack of coming nifast to grab sinking liners, played the outfield more games than anybody (2,421) and holds the league record for most assists (339) by an outfielder. In 1922 he was caught only twice in 53 attempted steals.

Max played with Pittsburgh from 1910 to the middle of 1926 when he went to Brooklyn on waivers. He played with the Dodgers through 1929 and managed the club in 1932-33 until replaced by Casey Stengel, an old teammate. Since then he has coached, managed minor league teams, scouted and worked as an official at dog races in Florida.

Hamilton's records border on the fantastic. In 1891 he stole 115 bases, the all-time league high. In 1894 with the Phillies he hit 398, stole 88 bases and scored 196 runs, another record. Yet he was low man in the outfield. The Phils' picket line in '94 included Ed Delehanty in left (.400) Hamilton in center and Sam Thompson in right (.403). The utility man, George Turner, hit .423.

Teen-ager Wins

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—The 20-year speedskating empire of Ken Bartholomew crumpled on the bell lap of the mile race, and a Chicago teen-ager skated the old master out of a title.

Eddie Rudolph, a 19-year-old senior at Glenbrook High in suburban Chicago and a 1960 Olympian, won the senior men's outdoor championship at Lake Como Sunday.

Carolina, Duke Set To Renew Feud Saturday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Seven Atlantic Coast Conference teams Tuesday begin a heavy post-exam schedule. Wake Forest and North Carolina each face three foes during the week and only Maryland does not play.

Clemson, with a 1-5 conference record and 6-11 over - all mark, travels to the home court of fourth ranked North Carolina. It will be the first game for the Tar Heels since Jan. 18, when they beat N.C. State 97-66.

Fifth-ranked Duke, with a sparkling 6-0 ACC record, is at South Carolina which is still looking for a conference victory after five games. The Blue Devils are 14-1 over-all and South Carolina 6-8.

Wake Forest (7-1 and 11-5) is host to St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania and N.C. State (3-5 and 10-6) entertains Virginia (1-7 and 2-14) in other Tuesday games.

In Saturday's action, Duke kept its ACC record clean with an easy 79-59 victory over Clemson.

Duke Coach Vic Bubas said, "It wasn't too bad for right after exams. All coaches fear this two-week period. You don't know what they'll do (players) after the layoff and most coaches just hope they can win anyway they can get the job done."

In other Saturday games, N.C State clubbed South Carolina 106-79 and the Deacons of Wake Forest humbled Virginia Tech of the Southern Conference 100-84.

The Wolfpack's 106-point tally was the team's biggest basketball point total since December 1956 when it beat Duke 102-80 in a Dixie Classic game. Earlier this season Duke beat the Gamecock's 107-79.

The N.C. State - Virginia game Tuesday could turn out to be a battle of the "little men" with State's six-foot guard Ken Rohloff pitted against Virginia's Tonly Laquintano, a 5-11 guard.

Rohloff is among the leaders in the conference in percentage of field goals made. Laquintano, at last count, was averaging 20.1 points a game and was ranked sixth in ACC individual scoring.

In other games this week, Maryland (3-3 and 10-5) is at North Carolina and Wake Forest is at South Carolina Thursday. Virginia is at Clemson Friday.

Saturday, North Carolina is at Duke, Maryland at Wake Forest, N.C. State plays West Virginia at Charleston, W.Va., in an afternoon regionally televised game and Virginia is at South Carolina.

Buckeyes Handle Purdue Easily

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer

One week doesn't make a basketball season, but this one could for St. Bonaventure, Bradley, North Carolina, Duke, and Southern California—a havoc-wrecking handful just waiting for national leader Ohio State to stumble.

While the beat-em-all Bucks take their 19-game winning streak on the road against Wisconsin (Monday) and Michigan (Saturday), a air of second-division Big Ten clubs, the others have some championship elimination matches coming up in probably the most important week of the season.

St. Bonaventure (14-1), second-ranked nationally, plays at Marquette Tuesday, then heads for New York's Madison Square Garden for a showdown with third-ranked Bradley (14-1) on Thursday. Bradley first goes to Cincinnati, a surging club with a 9-game winning streak, for a Missouri Valley Conference challenge on Tuesday.

Fourth-ranked North Carolina and fifth-ranked Duke renew their battle for the regular season title in the Atlantic Coast Conference—the only title the probation-penalized Tar Heels have to aim at this time around.

The Tar Heels, 12-2 with a 10-game winning streak, play Clemson Tuesday and Maryland Thursday before colliding with Duke at Durham on Saturday. Duke, its only loss in 15 games to North Carolina in the Dixie Classic final, plays at South Carolina Tuesday.

Ninth-ranked Southern California, now 14-2 and unbeaten in its last seven games, defends its Big Five Conference lead against runner-up UCLA Friday and Saturday in the two-game set that could decide which goes into the NCAA tournament.

All the other conference teams are in action during the week as well as tse independent clubs that are trying to build up credentials for consideration for the non-automatic berths in the two post-season tournaments—the NCAA and the NIT.

Bradley, which whipped Marquette 84-68 in the national TV game last Saturday, could just about put away the Missouri Valley title if it can win at Cincinnati. The Thursday battle with St. Bonaventure in New York could decide the successor in the polls to Ohio State should the Buckeyes falter. The Bonnies' only loss was by two points to Ohio State in the Garden's Holiday Festival in December.

The Buckeyes easily handled 10th-ranked Purdue 92-62 Saturday as Larry Siegfried scored 21 points, and All-America Jerry Lucas had 17 points, 17 rebounds and a bundle of assists to overcome a 23-point burst by Purdue's Terry Dischinger.

Duke got back in action after mid-term exams and won its sixth straight ACC game, 79-59 over Clemson as soph Art Heyman and Doug Kistler each scored 22 points. Southern California completed a successful weekend, beating Denver 68-52 Saturday after whipping Air Force Friday night. UCLA, now 12-3 overall, beat the same opponents on alternate nights.

In key games Saturday:

Paul Hogue's 24 points and 21 rebounds led the way as Cincinnati's streak went to nine and its record to 14-3 in an 80-70 triumph over Drake. Kansas State kept on Kansas' heels in the Big Eight, beating Oklahoma State for the 17th straight time, 45-43. Colorado State held its Skyline lead beating Wyofing 73-55. West Virginia, the Southern Conference leader, toppled William and Mary 76-69.

Florida remained unbeaten in the Southeastern Conference, routing Georgia 90-68; and SEC leader Mississippi State won its sixth in a row, 99-77 over Delta State. Memphis State (14-1) routed Mississippi 88-61, Indiana (9-3) handed DePaul its third straight loss, 81-78; Oregon State (11-4) routed Washington, 74-46 for a weekend two-game sweep of the Huskies, and Providence (13-2) spilled Scranton 78-56. Army won its eighth straight and 12th in 16 tries, 64-62 over Ivy leader Princeton.

Greenville's Phantoms will attempt to turn over a new leaf in the Northeastern basketball race tomorrow night when they host arch-rival Washington.

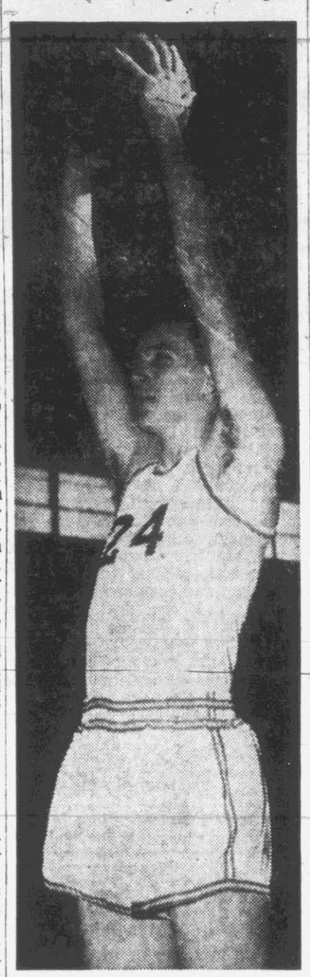

The game is scheduled to start at 8:00 with a junior varsity game prior to the main event.

By comparative scores, which actually aren't worth a dime, you couldn't pick a favorite in this meeting. Both have 3-3 conference records thus far.

Washington's big win was an upset of Tarboro (71-65). Other victories came at the expense of Elizabeth City (49-31) and New Bern (82-70). Their defeats came to Kinston (83-60), Roanoke Rapids (61-41) and Jacksonville (49-35).

Greenville holds victories over Jacksonville (53-49), New Bern (60-50) and Elizabeth City (63-50). Defeats were administered by Tarboro (58-43), Roanoke Rapids (67-50) and Kinston (73-54).

The Phants haven't experienced a losing streak this season but are also void of a winning spell — their longest being two straight.

JOHN BYNUM . . . Phant ace

Farley has whipped his club into a running five capable of hitting the hot night. Shooting has been a big problem and remains as the big question confronting the Phants as they head into the second-half of the campaign.

Alan McArthur, a junior forward, and center John Bynum have been the club's most consistent scorers for the year. McArthur has been a hot-and-cold jump shooter while Bynum, an unexpected starter, has flourished since the Christmas holidays.

Guard Erskine Duff scored 23 points in his last outing for his season high.

Other Phant regulars are veterans Layne Jorgensen, Billy James and Krognie Andresen.

The game against Washington tomorrow night opens a three-game home stand for the Phants. They met Tarboro on Friday night and Jacksonville next Tuesday.

Player Wins Tourney In Rain

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A cool South African lad, who idolizes Bobby Locke and intends to play at least 20 years more as a golf pro, was $9,500 wealthier today after winning the $57,000 San Francisco International Open with a blazing six-under-par 65 windup.

Husky Gary Player with alfost machine-like accuracy scored six birdies in his final round Sunday to come from four strokes behind leaders George Bayer and Ted Kroll to win by two strokes, in a pouring rainstorm.

The 25-year-old Johannesburg star—on his seventh American tour since 1955—finished 12 under par for his four rounds, taking a total of only 272 strokes.

Bayer, the 240-pound ex-Washington football player who shared the lead through three rounds, shot even par 71 but he couldn't cope with young Player's sensational birdie shooting in the rain.

Bayer settled for 274 while Kroll, the tournament veteran who had started the last round tied with Bayer, fell back to 276.

Don Whitt came up strong over the sodden 6,672-yard Harding Park mire with a five-under-par 66 to tie Bayer at 274. The two collected $3,800 each.

CHAPTER 14

"Larry Gaines told me he always wanted to be an actor," Ella Barker said. "I guess he'd make a good one."

Her tone was sardonic. She was finding her armor, hardening her personality against life in jail.

"Why do you say that?"

"Look how he took me in. The great lover. When he gave me that diamond ring, that watch, I thought he'd bought them for me. Honest."

"I believe you."

"Nobody else around here does. Even the other girls think I'm holding out. They keep asking me questions about Larry, like I was really close to him, and knew all about him. I been asked so many questions, my head spins. I wake up in the middle of the night and hear voices asking me questions. I'm going to go nuts if I don't get out of here."

"If we can get our hands on Gaines, it's going to help you."

"Where is he?"

"That's the question. It's why I'm bothering you again."

"You're not bothering me. It's nice to see a friendly face, somebody I can talk to. You're nice to me, Mr. Gunnarson. Don't think I don't appreciate it." She gave me a dim smile, her first.

"You should smile more often. Your smile is your best feature."

It was a broad compliment, but not too broad for the occasion. She really smiled this time, and dropped five years. "Thank you, sir."

"Getting back to Gaines, if you can bear to — did he talk much about acting?"

"No, just once or twice. He mentioned that he did some acting."

"Where?"

"I think in high school."

"Did he say where he went to high school? Think hard."

Dutifully, she wrinkled up her forehead. "No," she said after a pause, "he never mentioned that. He never told me anything about his past life."

"Did he talk about his friends?"

"Just Broadman. He thought Broadman was a slob."

"Did he ever say anything about actors or actresses?"

"No. He never even took me to the movies." She added bitterly: "I guess he was saving his money for the blonde."

"What blonde do you mean?"

"The one I caught him with, the one I said looked like Holly May. I guess he was going with her all the time."

"All what time?"

"When I thought he was my boyfriend, and maybe we'd get married, and everything. It's really her he was interested in, probably."

"What makes you think so?"

"What she said."

"I didn't know you ever talked to her. How often did you see her?"

"Only the once—the time I told you about. I remember exactly what she said? 'You little tomcat'—talking to Larry — have you been playing games behind my back?' She said: 'I'm not flattered by your choice of a—choice of a substitute,' something like that."

A slow blush mounted from Ella's neck to her cheeks. It softened her mouth, and then her eyes. She said in an unsteady voice: "I made a fool of myself with that aines, didn't I?"

"Everybody's entitled to one big mistake. You could have come out of it worse."

"Yeah, if he really had married me. I see that now."

"Did he ever give you presents besides the watch and the ring?"

"No. He gave me flowers once. One flower, a gardenia. He said that it would be our flower. That was the night he let me in on the big robbery plan. Thank Heavens I didn't go for that, anyway."

"Do you have anything of his? Clothes, for example, that he may have left with you?"

"What do you think I am? He never took off his clothes in my apartment!"

"Sorry, I didn't mean anything wrong, Miss Barker. I thought you might have something personal of his. Some keepsake."

"No, all I had was the ring, and I sold that. I forgot about the watch." She wrinkled up her brow again. "There's something else I forgot. It doesn't have any value, though. It's just an old sharkskin wallet."

"Larry's wallet?"

"Yeah. I noticed one night when I gave him my picture—one of those wallet-sized pictures. I noticed that his wallet was all worn out. So I went downtown next day and bought him a new one, an alligator wallet. It cost me twenty dollars, with the tax. I gave it to him next time I saw him. He liked it. He took all his money and stuff out of the old one, and he was going to throw the old one away. I wouldn't let him."

"Did he leave anything in the wallet?"

"I don't think so. But wait a minute. There was a piece of paper in the back compartment—something cut out of a newspaper."

"What newspaper?"

"It didn't say. It was just a piece cut out of the middle of a page."

"What was the piece about?"

"A show, some kind of a show. I think it was a school play."

"Did you ever ask Larry about it?"

"No. He would have thought I was silly, keeping it."

"You kept the clipping?"

"Yeah, I tucked it back inside and kept it. You'd think it was money or something. How silly can a girl get?"

"Do you still have it?"

She nodded. "I forgot to throw it out. It's in my apartment."

"Where in your apartment?"

"In the bureau, the top drawer of the bureau in the bedroom. I have a little redwood chest I call my treasure chest. I put it in there. Mrs. Cline will let you in." She shook her head. "I hate to think what her opinion of me must be."

"I'm sure it hasn't changed."

She raised her head and looked at me levelly with soft, bright eyes.

I lost no time in getting to Ella's apartment, and the landlady let me in. I found the clipping in the wallet, where Ella had said it would be.

It was a tired old clipping, beginning to come apart at the folds. As Ella had said, it seemed to be a review of a high-school play. Part of it, including the headline and byline, was missing. The rest of it said:

"Dorothy Drennan was her usual charming self in the role of ingenue. Claire Zanella and Marguerite Wood were charming as the bride's-maids. Stephen Roche and Hilda Dotery performed excellently as the comic servant couple and had the large audienct of friends and parents in stitches, as did Frank Treco and Walter Van Horn with their usual live-wire antics.

"The surprise of the evening was Harry Haines in the demanding role of Jack Treloar. Harry is a newcomer to local high school theatries, and impressed us all with his talent. Also to be commended are Sheila Wood and Mesa McNab, who performed well in supporting roles, as did Jimmie Spence. The play itself left something to be desired in the writing department, but our young Thespians made it an enjoyable evning for all concerned."

The sentences about Harry Haines had been underlined in pencil. For a boy of that name, I thought Larry aines would be a natural alias. I turned the clipping over. The other side carried a news - service story about Dwight Eisenhower's election to the Presidency, late in the fall of 1952. I folded the clipping carefully, replaced it in the wallet, and dropped the wallet in my jacket pocket.

Gunnarson is going to lose the friendship and help of a police lieutenant. The story continues here tomorrow.

Airport Fights Big Fog Problem

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP)—Medford Airport is taking steps to eliminate an unusual fog problem.

The field is the second busiest in Oregon, yet during the winter months the fog brings traffic almost to a standstill.

It's nalled "supercooled fog."

It dips into the valley area around Medford bringing with it temperatures of freezing or below.

Yet, while the valley is cooled and obscured, surrounding hills are clear with temperatures often in the neighborhood of 50 to 60 degrees.

The warm air holds the cool fog in the valley.

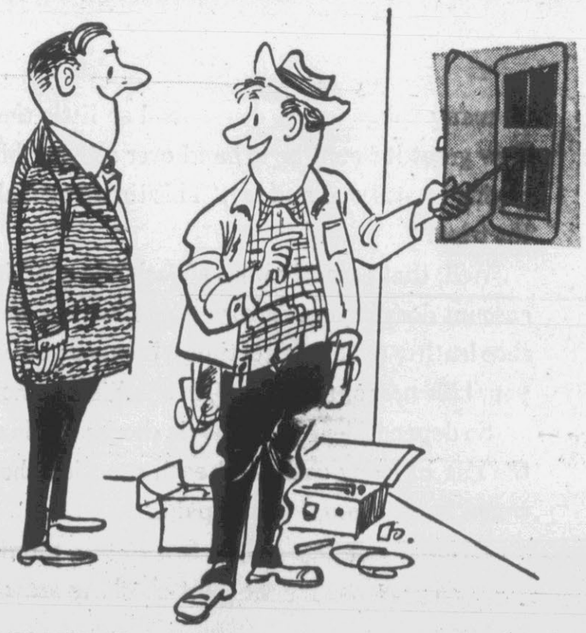

The fog-clearing experiment will be done with a weather balloon and dry ice, says airport manager Gil Gujahr.

The dry ice will be suspended from the weather balloon some 100 to 200 feet up on a cord from a vehicle, which will travel the length of the runway.

It is hoped the chemical reaction between dry ice and fog will temporarily clear the air allowing a plane to land.

Gutjahr says the experiment can be tried only with this special type of fog.

United Airlines, which had some 60 flights ofuled up by the fog last December, will participate in the experiment.

Two Young Farmers Win Short Course

SCHOLARSHIP CHECKS . . . presented by County Key Banker Marston (left) to young farmers McLawhorn (center) and Carraway.

Two young Pitt County farmers today headed for Raleigh and the ninth annual two-week Short Course in Modern Farming on the campus of N.C. State College.

Billy McLawhorn of Route 2, Ayden, and Charles Carraway of Route 1, Greenville, were selected recipients of $65 scholarships presented by J. T. Marston, County Key Banker for Pitt County.

Marston announced last week the banks in the area would send the two young farmers to Raleigh.

The course, sponsored by the N. C. Bankers Association in cooperation with State College, begins today and winds up Feb. 10. An enrollment of around 150 is expected.

While in Raleigh, McLawhorn and Carraway will be introduced to the latest developments in agriculture. Classes will be taught by members of the staff of the State College School of Agriculture.

The young men will live in college dormitories and have their meals in the college dining hall.

McLawhorn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McLawhorn and Carraway is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Carraway. Both young men live at home with their parents.

Marston was appointed County Key Banker last fall by Ernest Paschall of Wilson, president of the NCBA. He is president of the State Bank and Trust Co. of Greenville.

Since 1953, according to the Bankers Association, over 1,000 young Tar Heel farmers have attended the short course.

ASC Notes

"TREES are a good invesment for conservation and for a financial return," according to Office Manager Wayne L. Wang of the Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation program.

Wang has urged Pitt County land owners to "take advantage of ASC help" available through the agency's ACP cost-share program.

The cost of 1,000 seedlings, he points out, is $4.50 "and it will plant acres of your land."

The ACP program furnishes: $8 per acre for forestry thinning; $12 per acre for planting trees; and $15 per acre for land preparation for reseeding.

Further information is available from either state or county foresters or at the local ASC office on Johnston St. in Greenville.

PREMEASUREMENT field work is scheduled to begin through the Pitt ASC program this week, Wang reports.

However, he points out, "this office is currently accepting requests to measure land on which farmers intend to plant their allotment crops for the 1961 crop year."

He urges, "If you want your acreage premeasured please make application as early as possible. The cost to you is $3 plus $1 per acre with a minimum charge of $8 per farm."

"HI-LIGHT WEEK", a special drive by the county ASC committee for uging release of idle cotton acreage, has been scheduled for Feb. 20-24.

The committee has planned the special reminder week to urge "cotton producers who will not plant their cotton allotments in 1961 to release it to the committee."

Committee Chairman J. Lyman Edwards points out: "Producers will preserve their allotment by either planting 75 per cent or more of their allowed acreage or by releasing their cotton allotment to ASC."

Edwards urges, "Consider these facts and take appropriate action to preserve your allotment."

All cotton released to the committee will be reapportioned by ASC upon request of other Pitt farms. Applications for the released acreage must be submitted by April 15.

REMINDERS went out Saturday from Wang at the local ASC office:

1. Jan. 31—Deadline for making loans on small grains and soybeans.
2. Feb. 15—Deadline for filing new grower applications for cotton, tobacco and peanut allotments.
3. Feb. 28—Deadline for completing price support loans on corn.
4. Applications for premeasurement will be accepted until all requests that can be filled are received, or Feb. 25, whichever is earlier.

TOMORROW is the final date for returning peanut marketing cards furnished by the ASC office.

Wang today urged, "If you have not finished selling peanuts, or if you have lost your peanut marketing card, please notify this office immediately."

He added, "Be sure to sign the card and show the amount of peanuts on hand, if any."

WHEAT MEASUREMENT, Wang points out, can be hastened if the county's farmers who have planted wheat acreage will complete and return the cards recently mailed by ASC.

Farm visits to measure wheat acreage, he says, can be more efficiently planned after all cards have been returned with proper information on them.

Soil surveyors of the Soil Conservation Service mapped more than 50 million acres in fical year 1960, an increase of 2 million acres over 1959.

Pig Conference Slated Tuesday

WASHINGTON—A Feeder Pig Conference is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the Beaufort County Agriculture Building here.

The purpose of the conference has been cited: "To provide a better understanding about how to grow feeder pigs, who should be growing them, the problems involved, and the economic impact the production of quality feeder pigs could have on this area."

Included on the program will be Beaufort County Agent M. P. Chesnutt; Dr. Al Clawson of N.C. State College's swine research program; Marketing Specialist Art Pitzer of the N.C. Dept. of Agriculture; Veterinarian Dr. B. H. Kinsey; Jack Kelley of the State College extension animal husbandry program; and assistant Beaufort County Agent J. W. Parker.

Trial-And-Error Method Applied

GASTONIA—How do you please both yourself and your cows with a silage feed trough?

Les Stroupe who runs a "one-man" dairy-poultry farm at Alexis in Gaston County, used the trial-and - error method, says J. C. Barber, assistant agent in the county.

"He would build part of it, watch the cows eat and then make changes or add to it, until he got what was most satisfactory to him and the cows," says Barber.

Stroupe also has remodeled his barn and poured concrete in the barnlot and trench silo. He has 29 dairy cows and 1,000 caged layers. He feeds and milks the cows, while his wife looks after the chickens. Their two children help after school.

Angus Bull Sale Set Next Week

ROCKY MOUNT — The ninth annual Angus Bull Sale, sponsored by the N. C. Angus Association, is scheduled for next Monday at 1 p.m. at the East Carolina Livestock Arena here.

From a record number of bulls nominated for the Feb. 6 sale, the group of 40 selected animals "is the most outstanding group of bulls ever assembled in any one Angus sale in the state," according to Hans C. Rohdenburg of the NCAA.

All bulls are of service age and represent some of the best breeding in the state, Rohdenburg said.

In 1957, Pitt County swine raisers could account for nearly 40,000 hogs.

Tobacco Tips

By S. J. Wells
Pitt County Tobacco Agent

The yield and quality of tobacco produced on a given field quite often can be improved by following a suitable crop rotation.

Residues from crops grown in rotation with tobacco improve the tilth or structure of the soil. Increased water penetration and a slight improvement of organic matter control is obtained when a good tobacco rotation is followed.

One of the most important benefits of a good rotation is that it will aid in the control of some soil borne diseases such as black shank and nematodes.

When planning a rotation for your farm you should include crops that will make as much of a contribution as possible to the farm income. Residues from crops grown must be manageable in preparing for the succeeding crop.

The crops used should aid in controlling one or more of the disease problems present insofar as possible. Some of the crops used should add organic matter conserve soil and increase water penetration.

The rotation used should be as long as possible without a fixed sequence of crops. In other words, "Rotate the rotation".

Some suitable crops that can be used in a rotation are: Small grains, fescue, rye grass, millet, sudan grass, corn, sorghum, cotton, sweet potatoes and peanuts.

Fescue is considered as one of the best alternate crops to use in a tobacco rotation because it is highly resistant to both root knot and meadow nematodes and it also improves the tilth of the soil.

The crop residues shoull be turned under early so that decay will take place before transplanting tobacco. Some downward adjustment may be needed in nitrogen fertilizer where peanuts or heavily fertilized corn precedes tobacco. Soil test results can be helpful when determining how much adjustment to make.

Bet results from a tobacco rotation can be obtained when tobacco is planted only once every four years in the same field. However, even a two-year rotation will give better results than when tobacco is grown continuously in the same field.

WATSON 826 AND BEST X3 were Northeastern North Carolina's top yielding corn hybrids in the official 1960 Corn Performance Trials conducted by N. C. State College.

Watson 826 led the full season test with a yield of 124.4 bushels per acre. Funk 90014 was second with 123.4 and Watson 726 was third with 122.1

Best X3 led the short season test with a yield of 127.9 bushels per acre. Wood V-51A was a close second with a yield of 125.2, while McNair 304A placed third with 120.7.

North Carolina Corn Performance Trials are conducted each year by State College. Supervising the tests again this year was A.J. Crowley of the Department of Field Crops.

The trials give commercial seed companies an opportunity to test hybrids and advanced breeding lines under farm conditions.

Results are not to be taken as State College recommendations, Crowley has pointed out. Instead, they should be used as a guide in selecting next year's hybrids.

In commenting on the trials, Crowley said that the hybrids in the short season tests vary in maturity.

"The very early maturing hybrids which are desired by many Northeastern North Carolina farmers normally are not the highest yielders in the tests," he added.

Some of these early maturing hybrids were VPI 648, Speight D-8, Watson 516, Funk G-76, DeKalb 803-A and Pioneer 342B. All of these hybrids averaged from 102 to 108 bushels per acre.

Two other characterists of particular importance to Northeastern North Carolina farmers are ear height and the ability of stalks to stand up under adverse weather.

In this connection, Crowley pointed out that high-yielding Wood V-51A had the poorest standability of all hybrids entered in the short season test.

"Generally," he added, "lower yielding hybrids have better standability."

If a farmer is interested in planting a different short season hybrid from what he has grown in the past, Crowley suggests that he plant only a small plot the first year. In this way, he can come nearer deciding if the hybrid meets his needs.

Complete information on the 1960 Corn Performance Trials is available free from county agricultural agents. The information also may be obtained by writing to the Department of Field Crops at N.C. State College.

Included in the Northeastern North Carolina testing area are Pitt and surrounding counties Atlas Wooten, R-4, Greenville, participated in the test in Pitt County.

Farmers 'Sold' On Soil Testing

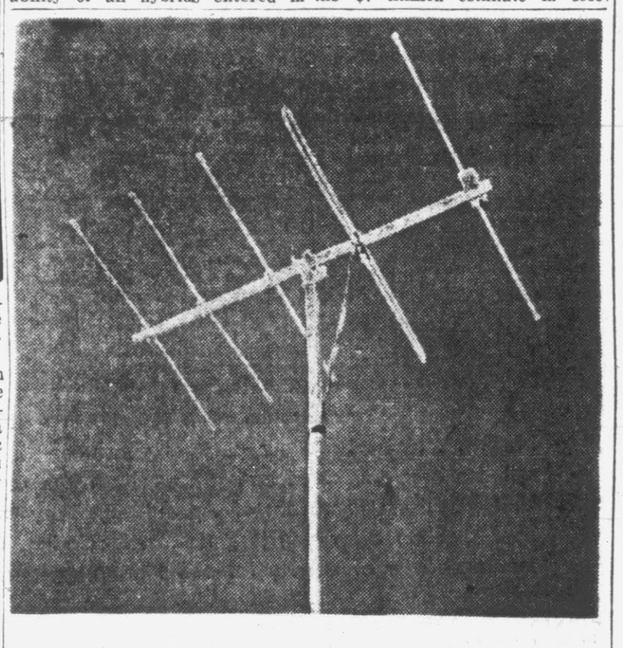

RALEIGH — Wake County farmers had a good year in 1960.

"Allotments aren't what they used to be: but farmers have become sold on soil testing," says W. C. Davenport, Wake Negro agent.

The practice has led to better fertilizers, seed and a closer watch on cultivation, insects, diseases. "Above all, the farmers are paying more attention to harvesting, grading and marketing of their crops," says Davenport.

The crop year helped many farmers to begin seeing daylight, says Davenport. "Their hopes are that the 1961 crop will help them to see more light," he adds.

The tobacco industry estimates total consumer expenditures on tobacco products in the U.S. during 1960 at $7.5 billion compared with the $7 million estimate in 1959.

Tobacco Associates Plan Annual Meeting March 7

RALEIGH—The annual meeting of Tobacco Associates Inc. will be held in the Sir Walter Hotel here Tuesday, March 7, it was announced today by the organization's Field Director Lacy F. Weeks of Raleigh.

Weeks said the highlights of the meeting will be the annual report of the president, J. B. Hutson of Washington, D. C. and a guest speaker—a top official from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's new administration—to be announced later.

Hutson's report will cover the progress of tobacco market development programs in foreign countries, activities of the European office which has been in operation in Brussels, Belgium since last June, and the current problems facing flue-cured exports.

The one-day meeting will also include the election of officers and a 24-member board of directors.

A.C. Edwards, Hookerton, board chairman, will preside.

In addition to Edwards, the following area persons are expected to attend the annual session:

William C Monk of Farmville representing leaf dealers; and Hudson H. Blount of Greenville, representing merchants.

Found 20,000 Lice On One Hen

More than 20,000 lice have been found on one hen.

Tom Morris, Extension poultry specialist, at N.C. State College, has figured out a bite schedule for 8,270 lice on a hen.

"This, of course, isn't typical," he says. "But a report from a cold climate described a lice count that turned up that many."

Here's the schedule:

If the 8,270 lice each feed once a day, the hen will feel a bit every 10½ seconds. At five feedings, there'll be a bite every two seconds. And if the lice are big eaters, and feed ten times a day, the hen will have a bite every second.

"If the hen spends all her time scratching for lice, when will she find time to scratch for a living?" queries Morris.

Morris advises poultrymen to check for lice on their hens, and to treat the birds accordingly

"Lice can cost the poultryman money in lowered egg production," he warns.

JUST LIKE HAVING YOUR OWN PERSONAL MESSENGER

So many things to get done...and so little time. How great it would be to hand over all your bill-paying to someone and say, "This time you make the trips!"

Well, that's exactly what a Wachovia checking account does for you. Saves you gasoline, bus fares, shoe leather (and hours of time), because you pay your bills near or far by mail, in sunshine or snow.

So dependable, too. Wachovia checks eliminate the risk of losing cash. And each canceled check comes back as proof you've paid.

Even if you pay only a few bills a month, Wachovia has exactly the right checking account for you.

In fact, there's a Wachovia checking account for everyone you know. That's why it's North Carolina's favorite way to pay!

Old Ledger Gave Up Old Money

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) —An old account ledger has been among the children's play things at the Donald Bolley home for several years.

The kids have mauled it, scrawled in it and torn out pages.

Recently, one of them ripped off the cover and out fell three $100 bills.

A coin dealer offered $120 each for an 1882 gold certificate and a 1903 bill. The third bill was an undated federal reserve note and will be cashed.

Pitt County Coronor E. W. Harvey said today an inquest into the death of James Ray Branch, 27 of Route 1, Ayden, who was killed January 21 when the truck he was driving collided with an Atlantic Coast Line Railroad engine in Ayden, will be held Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Ayden Court Room.

According to Harvey, the man died en route to Pitt Memorial Hospital of injuries received in the crash.

Harvey noted the man was thrown out of the truck and under the rear wheels of the vehicle by the force of the collision.

Draw Suspended Sentences In Theft Charges

Two local men were given suspended sentences this morning on charges of stealing hub caps and fender skirts from cars in a city parking lot on Evans Street last night.

The two, Dolfas A. Taylor, 29 and Meyhew B. Taylor, 37, of 206 Ridgeway St., were arrested about 8:25 p.m. at the City's Evans Street Parking lot allegedly as they were taking hub caps and fender skirts from a car belonging to George K. Price of Summerfield, N.C.

D. A. Taylor was also charged with damage to personal property.

Wasn't Around For Signing Out

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — William S. Agnew, 25, has served two terms in San Quentin prison for escape.

Last November, near the end of his second term which began in 1956, he was placed in custody of Marin County authorities as a material witness in a prison stabbing. He was to be freed today.

But Agnew wasn't around for the signing out ceremony. He and a fellow trustee stole a car Sunday from the county courthouse parking lot—and escaped.

Porpoise Count Down To Four

CHICAGO (AP) — Brookfield Zoo's planned porpoise population of six is down to four. Billy, smallest of the lot, died Sunday.

Billy's death was the second to result, so veterinarians believe, from the finny funsters' air voyage from Miami, Fla., to their new home at the zoo. Brain damage in transit was listed as a possible cause of death.

Six porpoises were shipped from Miami Friday, after being purchased for $1,000 apiece. One died en route.

The four survivors will participate in a special show at the zoo

Answered Phone Despite A Fire

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Reporter Bob Friedly of the New Orleans States-Item was making telephone calls to check on a fire. One number answered.

Hunters Almost Became Hunted

SPARTANBURG, S. C. (AP)—Rcral policemen Bill High and Wallace Snow, accompanied by a couple of citizens recruited as hatchet men, moved into the area of an illicit liquor still to break up the operation.

Beneficial Program For Students By Science Club

The Science Club of East Carolina College is carrying on during the current school year a program of activities aimed at benefiting students interested in both the biological and the physical sciences. Eighty-nine students are now participating in the work of the organization, which is sponsored by the college department of science.

Two meetings are scheduled for each month of the school year. Speakers include visiting scientists and faculty members and students at the college.

The Science Club with the college chapter of Chi Beta Phi, national honorary science fraternity, sponsors the publication twice a year of "The Science Journal." Contests include research reports by students and faculty members, book reviews, and news of activities in the science department of alumni members of the two organizations. Dr. Robert Haubrich, as faculty advisor assists the editoral staff in the preparation of materials.

Arrest Intruder In College Gym

A 22-year-old Ayden man was arrested early today after allegedly being caught in a dressing room at ECC's Gym, Campus Police reported.

Chief Johnnie Harrell said the man, Cecil Earl Hemby of 303 West Second St., Ayden, was charged with larceny of money from the lockers.

According to Harrell, Hemby was arrested by campus police as he was removing money from a locker in the dressing room, about 9 a.m.

Chief Harrell noted college officers have been investigating thefts of money from lockers at the gym and from the men's dormitories for some time. The chief noted Hemby "admitted all of the larceny cases at the gym" since about December 1.

Chief Harrell said the thefts amounted to about $200.

Greenville police said the man has also been charged with the theft of money from Rose High School on two occasions.

The thefts at the high school totaled about $11.55, they said.

But Rayburn said, "Five bills is just a couple of weeks' work. We've got a two-year session coming up, and I've got to look at the long haul.

"I don't know what bills are going to come up, but I think the newly elected President has a right to get his legislative program considered in the House.

"And I think that with a Rules Committee as composed now it couldn't be done. A committee divided 6-6 can't do business."

The Rayburn plan would add two Democrats and one Republican to the committee. The two new Democrats presumably could be counted on to vote with the administration. Bills thus could be freed for action by an 8-7 vote, even if the new Republican joined the conservative coalition.

Durham Merger Plan Is Defeated

DURHAM (AP)—Durham County voters have overwhelmingly rejected a proposed merger of city and county governments, the first such proposal ever put to a vote in North Carolina.

The vote on unification was 4,115 for and 14,355 against.

"The people in Durham were unified in opposing the thing," said C. Horton Poe Jr., Durham attorney and one of the leading opponents of unification.

One of the chief supporters of unification, R. W. Grabarek, city councilman and member of the City-County Charter Commission, commented, "I feel that we had a golden opportunity here, and I'm sorry we haven't taken advantage of it at this time."

The margin by which unification was beaten indicates that no such proposal will be forthcoming again soon. A new enabling act by the legislature, and a new charter would be needed before the proposal could be submitted to the voters again.

While the result doesn't rule out the possibility of unification being proposed elsewhere in the state, it presumably dampens any enthusiasm.

Officials in other cities and counties around the state were watching the election with keen interest.

The charter for unification was drawn up by a City-County Charter Commission, appointed under a 1959 General Assembly enabling act.

Under the charter, the city and county governments would have been merged under one governing board to be elected by all the voters in the county.

The proposal carried in only one of 36 precincts in city and county.

Non-Questioning Attitude Rapped

MOSCOW (AP) — Students at Soviet technical schools are so afraid they will lose their scholarships that they never question what their teachers say, Komsomol Pravda declared today.

The result is that no one ever speaks his mind, declared the Soviet youth newspaper.

The article headed "Incubator of Silent Men" came only two weeks after Premier Khrushchev dressed down agricultural leaders for shortcomings in production. The principal replies of the culprits were "You are right, Nikita Sergeiyevich."

Six Children Die As Fire Destroys Reidville House

REIDVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Six children died in a fire that destroyed their frame home near here today. Six other persons, including their mothers, escaped in sub-freezing temperature.

The victims, all Negroes, ranged in age from 2 to 14. Spartanburg County police listed them as Tommy, 14; Annie Ruth, 12; Linda, 8; Patricia, 6; Joyce, 5, and George McClintock, 2.

Admitted to the hospital were Odell, 14; John Henry, 13, and Bertie Ruth McClintock, 27. Treated but not admitted were Henry, 65, Clara, 30, and Roman McClintock, 12.

Bertie Ruth and Clara were the mothers of the nine children living in the small, five-room, pine lumber house which their grandfather, Henry, rented.

Bertie Ruth was in serious condition.

The 12 persons who occupied the house slept in four of its five rooms. The fire was believed to have started in a wood and coal heater in a storage room.

Clara McClintock discovered the blaze when she left her bed shortly before 1 a.m. to get a drink of water. She threw a bucket of water on the flames and sounded the alarm to the rest of the household.

By the time the Reidville Volunteer Fire Department arrived on the scene the fire had envelopd the house.

Four bodies were found in one bedroom and a fifth in another room. The last body was not recovered until shortly after dawn.

Grandfather Henry McClintock said he had tried to pull Tommy by the legs out of his bedroom window, but the intense heat drove him off.

Ten Traffic Accidents During Past Weekend For Greenville

Investigating officers, who reported over $2,100 damage and one personal injury in 10 traffic accidents in Greenville over the past weekend, said the majority of the mishaps were caused by icy streets.

Heaviest damage resulted from the collision of vehicles operated by Charles Edward Gray and George Thomas Whitehurst, addresses not given, at the intersection of First and Greene Sts. Saturday at 10:16 a.m.

Officers, who made no charges, said the mishap was caused by icy streets. They set damage to the Gray auto at $200 and estimated damage to the Whitehurst vehicle at $350.

Police reported an estimated $500 damage resulted to car being driven by David Edwin Bain, 19, of Fayetteville, when his vehicle went out of control on a hill on East Fifth St., near the intersection of Holly St., and struck a city light pole.

Damage to the pole was set at $30.

The collision, which was blamed on the ice and snow, was reported at 9:14 p.m. Friday, police said.

An estimated $200 damage was done to each of two cars which collided on 10th St., east of the intersection of Washington St., Saturday about 5:10 p.m., it was reported.

Drivers of the vehicles were identified as Curtis M. Ross, 48, of 2312 Deal Place, and Miss Sara L. Collins, 18, of 125 North Library St.

No charges were placed and no injuries reported.

At 8:40 a.m. Saturday, cars driven by Henry Clay Jones, 36, of Pinetops and O. J. Smith, 26, of 1309 Cotanche St. collided at the intersection of 10th and Cotanche Sts., causing an estimated $150 damage to the Jones car and about $125 damage to the Smith auto.

Investigators, who reported no charges were made, said the Jones vehicle was headed east on 10th while the Smith vehicle was traveling north on Cotanche when the collision occurred.

Kay Miller Jones, 43-year-old Negro of 1003 Taylor St., was charged with failure to yield the right of way following a collision at the intersection of Bonner's Lane and Clark St. yesterday at 11:50 a.m.

Driver of the second vehicle involved in the mishap was listed as Charles Ray Vandiford, 21, of Route 1, Greenville.

Damage to the Vandiford truck was set at $150 while damage to the Jones car was placed at $100.

The Jones car was traveling north on Clark St. at the time of the wreck, while the Vandiford truck was headed west on Bonner's Lane.

Damage, set by investigating police at $50, resulted to a car being driven by Edna Earl Brewington, Negro, of 1619 South Pitt St. when the vehicle struck a sign post at the intersection of Washington and 10th Sts. at 8:55 p.m. Saturday.

Damage to the sign post was estimated to be about $25.

The mishap was blamed on ice.

Ice was blamed as the cause of a collision between cars operated by Charles Adams Vincent 16, of 928 East 14th St., and Margaret Ellington Bradley, 20, address not given, Saturday at 5:48 p.m. at the intersection of 10th and Washington Sts.

Police, who said both vehicles were headed east on 10th St., placed damage to the Vincent auto at $30 and set damage to the Bradley car at $25.

No charges were placed when cars driven by William H. Campbell, 23, of 1101 Dickinson Ave., and Donald R. Joyner, 18, of 1803 East Third St., collided on Evans St., near the intersection of Third St., Saturday at 10:40 a.m.

Damage to the Campbell car was set at $10 while an estimated $30 damage resulted to the Joyner vehicle.

An estimated $10 damage was done to a car driven by Odell Luther Welborn, 30, of 615 Elm St., when it collided with a car driven by William Marvin Boyd, 34, of 1305 Glen Arthur Ave., Saturday at 11:15 a.m. at the intersection of Seventh and Cotanche Sts.

Damage to the Boyd auto was set at $15. No charges were placed.

Geraldene Atkinson, 36-year-old Negro of 208 Hudson St., received minor injuries last night when she was struck by a car driven by James W. Grimes, 58-year-old Negro of 1702 West Fourth St.

Officers, who quoted Grimes as saying he did not see the woman until it was too late to stop, said she received minor abrasions to her left thigh and was treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital for the injury.

The mishap occurred at the intersection of Fourth and Nash Sts. about 8:36 p.m., police reported. No charges were placed.
