Wheels Begin To Turn On City Bond Issue Projects

Ahoshkie Man Is Chosen Highway Board Chairman
RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Sanford today announced the appointment of Merrill Evans of Ahoshkie as chairman of the State Highway Commission succeeding J. Melville Broughton Jr. of Raleigh who resigned this week.

City Manager Leonard Bloxam today announced that the city will proceed with construction of a four-lane culvert for Greene Mill Run under Elm St.

Wheels would make an area of approximately 120 by 150 feet. A second lot at West Fifth and Davis St. measuring 100 by 128 feet has been considered, the mayor revealed.

Most of the rebels joined 366 of the ship's crew and the nearly 600 passengers in rushing ashore by tug Thursday after Galvao finally brought the ship into harbor under mounting pressure of threatened mutiny and riot aboard the liner.

Greenville Girl To Be Cast In ECC Playhouse Production

When the curtain rises on the Playhouse production of "Night Must Fall," a Greenville student, Dornning Jenkins, will be on stage in her first real character role. The play, a modern suspense drama by Emlyn Williams, is to be presented on Feb. 9-11 at 8 p. m. in the McGinnis auditorium on the East Carolina College campus.

Miss Jenkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Jenkins of 1046 East Rock Spring Road, is a senior whose college career has been highlighted by activity in college theater. But until "Night Must Fall" was cast, "Every role was just alike. I was the sexy socialite, a sweet young thing, or the like," Dornning recalls.

How is Miss Jenkins' role in "Night Must Fall" different? The greatest difference in doing Mrs. Bramson and past roles is in the age of this character. Mrs. Bramson is a 55-year-old whom Dornning calls "an old sourpuss." "This is the best chance I've ever had to determine whether I can change character completely, whether I can handle such a role," Dornning observes.

Theatersgoers will be interested in two aspects of the role, both of which have been great challenges to Miss Jenkins. One is the transformation effected by stage make-up. Once Dornning is on stage, none of her own youthful glamour is apparent. So thorough is the job that her hands are made up as carefully as her face. "They have to be the same age," she says. "Only the bags under my eyes will be my own."

The second intriguing aspect of Dornning's interpretation of Mrs. Bramson is the peculiar homework it has required. Mrs. Bramson is confined to a wheel-chair, which she maneuvers expertly. Dornning has been putting in daily "road work" on and off stage, so that, once the curtain goes up, she can handle the chair instinctively while she yells, and gripes, and complains to the members of the Bramson household.

So far Dornning has wrecked no scenery and she has run down no fellow cast member. Whether she knows her lines or not, she'll have the wheel-chair under control by curtain time.

Among the very genuine pleasures of working in "Night Must Fall," Dornning notes excellent direction under Dr. Corrine Rickett, "frankly the best I've ever had," and returning to the stage with Douglas Mitchell, also of Greenville, who was also her leading man in the summer Playhouse production of "See How They Run."

She has also worked before with Suzanne Trusdale of Alexandria, Va., who portrays Dora in the play. Both girls were in the 1959 Playhouse presentation of "The Diary of Ann Frank," after which Dornning won the Playhouse award for the best supporting role in her portrayal of Mrs. Van Dam.

Dornning's previous experience with the Playhouse includes appearances in "Aladdin," "The Moon Is Blue," "Annie, Get Your Gun," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Has she a favorite scene? "It's the one I do in 'Night Must Fall,' when I decide I might be murdered. It drains everything out of you. After that you might as well be dead." So says Dornning Jenkins, who looks forward to bringing to her audience her first really different role. At curtain time, Miss Jenkins will be a sickly, neurotic and elderly Mrs. Bramson.

Beauty Queen Harem Bound + Births +

BEIRUT — A statuesque Syrian beauty queen who may someday be the Queen of Sheba is about to veil her face and live in seclusion in the Kingdom of Yemen.

Once inside the medieval palace at Sana'a, the face that was officially judged the second most beautiful in the United Arab Republic can never be seen again by any man but her husband and brothers.

Miss Nawal Ramli, a dazzling brunette in Paris fashions, has married Prince Abdul Rahman, 25-year-old deputy foreign minister and brother of Yemen's absolute sovereign.

The young prince is considered a possible successor to the aging Iman Ahmed as ruler of the tiny Red Sea kingdom, which tradition claims is the Sheba of ancient times.

For the bride, the marriage will be a journey into the middle ages and the not-very-exotic realm of the Arabian Nights, with occasional trips to the outside world.

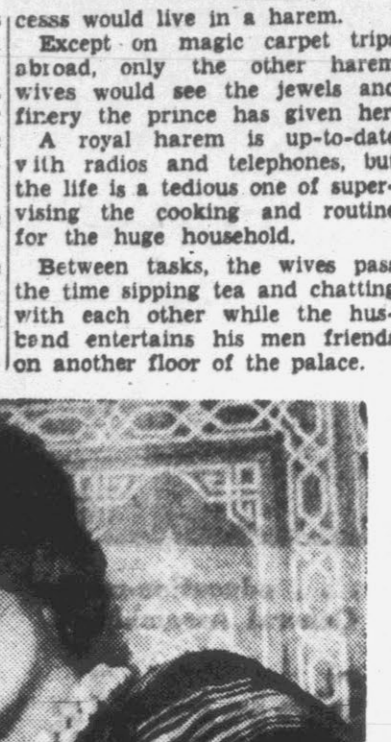

billowy, shapeless harem clothes is a figure that won a handful of beauty contests.

Princess Nawal stands almost five feet seven inches tall, her 36-23-36 inch measurements made her runner-up in the Uar's official beauty contest in 1959.

Like other Yemenite women, she will be at the mercy of her husband, who can divorce her as he did his last wife merely by announcing his wish three times. And he still can take three additional wives, meaning the princess would live in a harem.

Except on magic carpet trips abroad, only the other harem wives would see the jewels and finery the prince has given her. A royal harem is up-to-date with radios and telephones, but the life is a tedious one of supervising the cooking and routine for the huge household.

Between tasks, the wives pass the time sipping tea and chatting with each other while the husband entertains his men friends on another floor of the palace.

NEW QUEEN OF SHEBA? . . . Nawal Ramli struck a languorous pose here after winning a United Arab Republic beauty contest last year. Now her beauty may be veiled from public eye.

Winter Ways For Hair-Do's

During the winter, an occasional "extra" shampoo is beneficial to hair which has been flattened and dried-out by the constant pressure of hats and scarves.

A good set-preserving trick is not to put on a hat immediately after a shampoo and set. It is liable to distort the shape and style of your new coiffure before the hair gets a chance to "breathe" for an hour or two.

Proper Care For Pressure Canner

RALEIGH — How long has it been since your pressure canner was checked for accuracy? Just because it is only a few years old is no assurance that it is in perfect operating condition.

The president, Mrs. Lindsay Wilkerson, presided over a brief business meeting. The program was presented by Mrs. Sam Underwood, Jr., who spoke on the life and work of Dr. Frank Laubach. Mrs. Underwood told something of the simple but cultured background of this man who has devoted his life in an effort to free the mind of the oppressed and ignorant peoples of the world through his work in literacy. While he and his wife were serving as missionaries to the Moros of the Philippines, he developed a technique for teaching the natives to learn to read very quickly.

Miss Lola Pritchard, food conservation specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says to check the canner now during the winter months before you get ready to use it this summer. "There are several major parts of a pressure canner to care for," says Miss Pritchard. "The kettle should be washed with a mild detergent and dried after each use. Crumpled paper inside the kettle when storing will help absorb moisture and odors. The top should be wrapped in newspaper and inverted on the kettle. This will prevent damage to the gauge and other parts."

On the closure there is a gauge for recording pounds of pressure. This indicates the temperature inside the canner when the gauge is correct. For example — ten pounds pressure means a temperature of 240 degrees F. A safety valve on the top goes into action only if the temperature becomes dangerously high.

Some canners have a gasket to keep steam from leaking out around the cover. These are removable and replaceable when needed.

Miss Pritchard advises you to take your canner with all parts in place to a person who has special equipment for testing them. He will do the testing and suggest replacements that are needed. Take time now to have your pressure canner checked.

Dr. Laubach's success was almost a phenomenon and his new students were so thrilled over their achievement of learning to read that he was besieged by requests from tribes all over the Islands. As a means of reaching more and more people, he asked each one of his new learners to promise to teach what he had learned to another person. Now the slogan "Each one teach one" is known throughout the world.

He has worked out material for 270 languages in 92 countries. It is said that over 60 million people have been taught to read through his method. Dr. Laubach is convinced that literacy is the best method for evangelism and that it is our greatest weapon against Communism. Mrs. Underwood stated.

At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Buchanan invited her guests into the dining room where they were served a salad course and coffee. The dining room table was centered with a yellow and white arrangement of cut flowers.

You can add as much as 1 cup of grated cheddar cheese to 1 cup of white sauce to serve with cooked fish, hard-cooked eggs or cooked elbow macaroni.

Cancer Society Board Prepares '61 Crusade

The Board of Directors for the Pitt County Chapter of the American Cancer Society met last night to:

1. Name a chairman for the 1961 Cancer Crusade.
2. Adopt a $10,000 goal for the coming campaign.
3. Lay preliminary plans for an Eastern North Carolina Cancer Society meeting in Greenville later this month.
4. Elect seven new members to the local chapter's board of directors.

Chapter president Elbert Bennett announced to the board that Roscoe L. King, of Greenville, had agreed to serve as the 1961 Cancer Crusade chairman. Bennett also announced the Greenville Moose Lodge was undertaking sponsorship of the Cancer Crusade this year.

Adoption of the precedent-shattering campaign goal followed discussion of the preceding year's Crusade and agreement that Pitt County should raise its sights in 1961.

cancer, the better off they are going to be," he said.

Mrs. Ruel Tyson announced the February 21 Eastern North Carolina training session for Cancer Society personnel and the principal speaker would be John Henley of the National American Cancer Society staff, and working with the Trades and Industry Department. Healy, she said, would address three such sessions: one in the east, another in the piedmont, and in the western part of the state.

Seven new directors were elected to the board. They are Edwin M. Baldrer, Dr. Ed Clement, Merrill Bynum, S. L. Rowland, D. C. Schliez, Tommy Snowden and Marty Sullivan.

Mrs. C. L. Lupton briefly described the chapter's recently set-up Memorial Fund, programmed to accept and utilize special gifts from families and friends with a personal interest in combatting cancer. She cited progress in her goal of establishing representatives of the Memorial Fund in each community of the county.

Bennett described the Cancer Society as being "in business, to go out of business." He reported $124,320 raised by Tar Heels for cancer research last year and $257,873 returned to N. C. medical institutions by the American Cancer Society for cancer research in 1960. Forty per cent of funds raised by local units is used at home, he said. And where Crusade goals are being raised, outlays for administration and campaigns are decreasing. "Permitting an ever-increasing amount of money for research and education,"

Prospect Of Losing 1800 Jobs Faces Desperate City

By NATE POLOWETZKY

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP)—Men in heavy work clothes, their faces drawn with anxiety, discussed the news. Wives thought of the future, and saw little hope.

In club and cafe, in modest home or luxurious one, theme dominated all talk: The disaster. Everyone knew what that meant. The news that Borg-Warner Corp. is going to transfer its Norge Division, manufacturer of refrigerators and freezers, to Fort Smith, Ark., sometime early this summer.

That was the scene today in gloomy Muskegon as citizens girded for a last ditch effort—which nearly everyone discounted beforehand—to convince Norge to stay.

Judson Sayre, Borg-Warner president, said the company was moving to Arkansas because of "favorable business climate, expanding South and Southwest markets, anticipated growth in this general area, and a shifting of the center of population which will influence future consumer purchasing."

How are the people taking it? If the firm moves, "we have 1,800 more people out of work," said one man. "Where are they going to get new jobs? Some are old men and employers don't want old people. Others have never worked anywhere else and don't know anything else but working for Norge."

Said another: "I have a friend who has been with Norge for 27 or 30 years. He's been a foreman for at least 20 years.

"He used to be a bricklayer a long time ago and maybe he can do that work again, but I doubt it. Others have worked only in Norge—and don't know anything else."

The Norge decision to move, announced Wednesday, means that some 1,800 jobs will be eliminated in the Muskegon-Muskegon Heights area of northwest Lower Michigan, already plagued by high unemployment. According to latest figures, 6,500 persons are unemployed in the area. This is an 11.6 per cent unemployment rate, and compares to the national figure of 7 per cent.

The fall-off in employment has affected retail sales and the general economy of the area, which will be further depressed by the Norge move out of town.

In addition to eliminating jobs, the shift to Arkansas will mean an estimated loss of $10-million a year in payrolls; $20 million in Norge purchases of services and supplies; a loss of some $20,000 in property taxes, and some $120,000 more in other revenues.

TB Seal Sale Nears $10,000 Mark Here

The Pitt County Tuberculosis Association today reported the 1960 Christmas Seal Sale has netted through today $9,797.45.

Mrs. Milton V. Clarke, association executive director, announced the total today with the hope that "the $10,000 mark can be reached before we officially close the campaign."

A total of 10,000 letters were mailed from the association office before Christmas. There were around 4,000 replies, Mrs. Clarke said.

The executive director said the 1960 campaign brought a higher total than the Christmas Seal Sale a year ago.

Of the total contributed by Pitt County, 79 per cent will be retained by the county association to promote its four-phase program that includes health education, case-finding, research and rehabilitation.

The remaining 21 per cent will be forwarded to the N. C. TB Association and the National TB Association for maintenance of state and national research and other programs.

Mrs. Clarke expressed "sincere appreciation" to Pitt County citizens who contributed to the association's campaign.

Six Killed And About 150 Hurt In Maryland Train Derailment

BOWIE, Md. (AP)—A train derailed which turned a day at the race into a nightmare of death and suffering in snow-covered countryside is being investigated by Pennsylvania Railroad officials.

Six persons were killed and about 150 were injured Thursday when seven cars of a special 11-car train from Philadelphia left the rails while making a left turn from the main line onto a spur leading to Bowie race course.

About 300 passengers were on the train, three miles from the race track, when the quietness of the race track after a snowfall was shattered in a mass of twisted steel, broken glass and uprooted trees.

The double-unit diesel engine tumbled over on its right side. The seven derailed cars bounced along over cross ties or open ground, but did not topple over.

Second Parade In Festive Mobile

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Led by their traditional emblem float showing the Goddess of Love, the daughters of Venus tonight will present the second parade of the city's Mardi Gras season.

"What's cooking?" is the theme of the procession and the floats will fill out the menu with six delectable dishes.

Another women's mystic society, the Order of Polka Dots, entered the parade through the downtown section Thursday night with a 10-foot parade entitled "For Land's Sake."

After tonight's festivities, the next parade will be held Tuesday. Fourteen others are scheduled before Mardi Gras ends at midnight Tuesday, Feb. 14.

Asks Same Rule For Voters, Too

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP)—Since Nevada has six-week divorces, why not go a bit further and have six-week voters, says Assemblyman Don Crawford.

The Washoe County Democrat Wednesday introduced a measure which would set up the same residence requirements for the franchise as those for obtaining a divorce. Currently Nevada's constitution requires six months residence for voting eligibility.

Mark 150th Year For Lighthouse

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP)—Three lighthouse keepers toasted the health of their lighthouse—this Thursday.

The lighthouse is on Bell Rock, off the east coast of Scotland. It started work 150 years ago today and since then not a single north sea mariner has died on the rock. The lighthouse was designed by Robert Stevenson, engineer grandfather of writer Robert Louis Stevenson.

Erred In Tossing Eggs At Lawmen

JACKSON, Mich. (AP)—Six teenagers in a car threw eggs at a passing automobile on a highway near here, scoring several direct hits.

But it turned out their target was a State Police patrol car. The troopers gave chase, caught the youths and took them to the post here.

The youths were released with a reprimand—after washing the car.

Exchange Difficulty

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Eighty-two 10-centavo Mexican coins normally are worth about 65 cents. But O. W. Smith figures the man who stuffed them into the coin changer at his self-service laundry got about $20.50 for them.

Castro Fires 120 Judges In Sweeping Court Purge

HAVANA (AP)—Fidel Castro today fired 120 judges throughout Cuba in the second phase of a sweeping court purge aimed at removing all legal obstacles to his rule.

One supreme court justice, the president of six provincial courts of appeal, 26 appeals magistrates and 87 other judges came under the ax, which fell for the second time in two months.

The government acted under a cabinet decree issued Dec. 20 suspending for 45 days a law preventing dismissal of court officers. In the December purge 13 supreme court justices were ousted.

One of Castro's chief complaints against the courts has been that they often awarded owners of seized property too much compensation.

Antonio Nunez Jimenez, chief of Castro's agrarian reform program, warned as long as last spring that many judges would have to change their way of thinking or face the consequences.

The new dismissal decree, signed by Castro, President Osvaldo Dorticos and Justice Minister Alfredo Yabar, said the judges were thrown out to assure Cuba a more "revolutionary" application of justice.

The targets of the latest purge were accused of counterrevolutionary activity "under protection of their positions," and some of "manifestly immoral conduct."

Some were described as too old, others called inept.

It was believed some of the ousted judges already have fled the country or have sought asylum in foreign embassies, as some of the ousted supreme court justices did in December.

The court president, Emilio Mendez, flew to Argentina two days before the December decree, accusing Castro's regime of "totalitarian practices."

It was not known how big a percentage of the judiciary was lopped off in the latest purge. Nor was any mention made of replacements for those fired.

The December decree cut the time left 18 justices on the search and development of a nuclear powered rocket engine to be used in interplanetary missions. The proposals were invited by the Joint Nuclear Propulsion Office of the Atomic Energy Commission and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Democrats Prepare For The Future

Under the leadership of Gov. Terry Sanford and Democratic Chairman Bert Bennett it is apparent that the Democratic Party of North Carolina is to be reshaped into a political organization with considerably more discipline and greater cohesiveness than has been the case in the past.

Although the Democratic Party has dominated North Carolina politics for generations, its dominance has been more or less taken for granted by political leaders. In recent elections, however, growth of Republican Party strength has become a matter of concern for Democratic leaders. A passive attitude on the part of the Democratic Party, even with the wide margin of strength it now has, would afford Republicans an opportunity to gain considerably more influence if they did not gain control of state political affairs.

The hiring of a full-time, paid party executive secretary to coordinate more closely various party affairs and activities throughout the state is a move to build party strength from the precinct level up. It is a move to solidify party strength in non-election years in order that this strength may be brought to bear in election years.

It has also become evident that Gov. Sanford will work more closely with party organizations and officials on the local level in handing out appointments, shaping state policy and other matters than was the case with Gov. Hodges. Party discipline thus becomes more strict as local leaders are tied more closely to the state leadership both from the standpoint of giving advice and from the standpoint of receiving favors.

Whether these efforts on the part of the new Democratic leadership in the state will stem the tide of Republican growth in North Carolina remains to be seen. Both parties obviously are making more intensive long-range plans for party organization in the state than at any other time in recent history. Their efforts are certain to have an important bearing on future political make-up of North Carolina both within the two parties and also between the two parties.

Little Known Gov't Branch

RURAL REHAB—Reappointment of Dr. I.O. Schaub as a director, with recommendation that he be named president, of North Carolina Rural Rehabilitation Corporation brings to attention a right important but little publicized branch of State government. The agency was established in 1934 for the purpose indicated by its name—the rehabilitation of farms and farmers which had been almost destroyed by the great depression.

The Federal government allotted about a million and a quarter dollars to the State to be used for long-time low interest loans on farm lands, to save from foreclosure and to improve buildings and soil. Three years later the State agency transferred to the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture a lot of its assets for administering in trust although basic title to the mortgages, bonds and cash remained in the State of North Carolina. As much as ten years ago the State began negotiations for reclaiming the money and securities, but it was not until late 1959 that the transfer was effected.

The N.C. RRC got back about three quarters of a million dollars. The difference represented losses on loans made in the early years of operation. This approximately $750,000 consisted mainly of fully insured real estate and farm improvement loans, and a relatively small amount of cash.

This money can be used only for purposes agreed upon by the State agency and the Secretary of Agriculture. Presently that is limited to farm purchase and improvement loans. In the 1938 transfer Rural Rehab retained something like a quarter million dollars for its own purposes. Almost ever since then that money has been subject of controversy, several other State agencies seeking to get control of it. Dr. Schaub, who was one of the original board members, and Carey Parker, attorney and insurance retainer, who has been with the agency since its inception, led in successfully resisting such efforts.

STUDENT LOANS—These funds, the use of which is not restricted by the agreement with the Secretary of Agriculture, may be used for diverse purposes connected with improvement of conditions on the farms in North Carolina. That includes loans to boys and girls taking courses in agriculture and home economics. Under that program Rural Rehab is now adding a dozen or so boys in the Agriculture Institute at State College.

State College has a lot of loan funds, available only to students taking courses leading to a degree. That eliminates the two-year institute courses. Rural Rehab picks up there and offers loans to these students up to a present maximum of $1-000 a year. The agency also can lend money to county boards of education to provide facilities for vocational agriculture and home economics classes.

CONTROL—Originally control of the N.C. Rural Rehabilitation Corporation was vested in a self-perpetuating board and was recognized as an arm of the Deal Emergency Relief Administration. The 1953 General Assembly—one of several times the law was amended—fixed the board of directors at nine members, four ex-officio and five appointed by the Governor for staggered 3-year terms.

The ex-officio members are the Commissioner of Agriculture, the Director of Agriculture Extension at State College, the Director of Vocational Education in the State Department of Public Instruction, and the State Director of the Federal Farm Home Administration. Appointed members are Dr. I.O. Schaub, Raleigh; J.J. Hamlin Jr., Ruthfordton; Fred E. Harris, Balliet; W.P. Morris, Jackson, and Dudley Bagley, Moxock. The board elects its own chairman. Dr. Schaub has served in that capacity for several years and is expected to be re-elected at the annual meeting on February 21.

HIGH COURT—The spring term of the N.C. Supreme Court will convene next Monday, with arguments to begin Tuesday on appeals from the first, second, 29th and 30th districts. All told there are 18 cases slated for this first week, only two non-capital criminal; 16 for the following week. The 1960 fall term, which adjourned Friday, was one of the heaviest in history. Early docketing indicates the upcoming spring term may beat that record.

DIFFERENCE—There's a heck of a lot of difference between actual and simulated military operations. Last week several scheduled reproductions (?) of Confederate war battles were postponed on account of inclement weather. When the original battles were fought weather was an advantage or a handicap to one or the other opposing armies, but the battle could not be postponed just because somebody might get cold feet—or a cold in the head. Two or three years ago your reporter was invited to go on a simulated air raid engineered by the US Air Force. The jaunt was canceled because of inclement weather. In response to query the commanding officer said that in actual wartime combat every person and every plane is expendable. Voting citizens and taxpayers would not condone, he said, the useless expenditure of men and planes just for a show.

Of course that makes sense. But question remains whether this knuckling to weather gives any accurate portrayal of what the fighting boys have to go through.

Another Forward Step With New Bookmobile

Within a few weeks another bookmobile will begin making rounds in Pitt County serving Negroes in the rural areas.

It is, we think, another forward step toward affording the people of the county, young and old, opportunities to have the source of vast stores of knowledge at their finger tips.

This new bookmobile has been purchased in a joint undertaking by county funds and by individual subscriptions provided by both White and Negro citizens in communities throughout the county. Both in concept, and in the service it will provide, it is in a very true sense a county-wide undertaking in Pitt.

Since the first bookmobile began operation in Pitt County several years ago literally thousands of books have been borrowed by persons who may never have borrowed them had this special service not been available. Some of these books, to be sure, were returned without been read. But others, without doubt, were read by several people each time they were borrowed.

Adding another bookmobile in the county will mean that a greater number of our citizens will be exposed to the benefits which are to be gained by tapping the stores of information contained in bound volumes. Many of our county's citizens who have not read a book in years may be encouraged to read one or two books a year because of the easier access to them provided by this new bookmobile. Others probably will become more avid readers than they are at present, returning books and borrowing new ones each time the bookmobile comes around.

Pitt County citizens as a whole can take justifiable pride in the fact that this new bookmobile will soon be put into operation in our county. It will open new horizons for many people through books. It is another brick that has been set in place in building a better Pitt County.

Moderate Plan Of Action Seen

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy has said enough now to indicate he intends to follow a moderate course and that the keynote to his presidency will be action and change—but not drastic change.

There are points on which he disagrees with the policies of his predecessor President Eisenhower. And these are apt to get more attention than the points on which he agrees.

But there are plenty of points of agreement between him and Eisenhower, as Kennedy disclosed further at his second news conference Wednesday.

Some of the fields in which he does not see eye to eye with Eisenhower may have profound importance to the people affected.

Still, in one field after another, instead of proposing something completely new, he simply wants to go a step beyond where Eisenhower was willing to go.

For instance, Kennedy favored a medical care plan for the aged. So does Eisenhower. But Kennedy wants to tie it into Social Security. Eisenhower was unwilling to go that far.

Some of Kennedy's statements Wednesday illustrate strong differences with Eisenhower.

He opened his news conference with the announcement he was reversing Eisenhower's critical cut in the number of servicemen's dependents allowed to go overseas with them. This affected the morale of the armed forces.

But it was part of Eisenhower's effort to reduce the flow of American gold abroad.

Kennedy also announced he had ordered, in an attempt to encourage increased home-building, a reduction from 5 1/2 to 5 per cent in insured loans by the Federal Housing Administration.

These were definite reversals of Eisenhower policy. But in one field after another Kennedy showed agreement with Eisenhower thinking. He even went out of his way at times to note he was following Eisenhower policy. Some examples:

Asked why he had cracked down on belligerent speeches by high military officers, Kennedy said this was to avoid conflict with administration policy which has been non-belligerent. He pointed out Eisenhower had done the same.

Eisenhower was opposed to a tax cut to overcome the business slump. Kennedy said he is, too, at least at this time.

Eisenhower in his budget message to Congress last month—seeking new revenues to balance the budget—asked Congress to vote an increase in postal rates and the tax on highway and aviation gasoline.

Kennedy said he will do the same. In fact, he said he would ask for a change in only a few items in Eisenhower's budget.

When it was suggested to him that his State of the Union message to Congress last week was critical of Eisenhower "military policy and judgment," Kennedy said:

He is waiting, perhaps until the end of February, for his own aides to give him a report on America's military strength. And he added:

Until then "I would not attempt to make any criticism or suggest that we are going to have to change the plans made by President Eisenhower."

Nor has he backed away from any commitments made by Eisenhower in the foreign field. Asked his position on defending Berlin against Communist pressure, which Eisenhower was pledged to do, Kennedy said:

"My view... is the same as the previous administration. There is no change in our view on Berlin."

Strength For Today

HOW DO YOU RATE? What does it mean to be up-to-date?

Certain politicians and scientists who have given the impression that they were looking backwards rather than forwards have been described as persons who were dragged screaming into the twentieth century. There is a disposition in all of us when we confront a new and novel idea to dig our heels into the ground and declare petulantly that we will not budge.

To keep up-to-date does not mean to accept every new thing, but it does mean to examine every new thing. One out of every ten new ideas constitute a real advance in thinking. Perhaps one out of five.

Perhaps half the new ideas we confront constitute advancement over old ideas.

The percentage does not matter much as does our attitude. Are we willing to pick up every new thing, examine it, judge it impartially, and give it an honest appraisal? If we are, then we are up-to-date. Half the people who breezily announce that they are up-to-date, ahead of their age, are nothing but superficial thinkers who consider everything new an improvement over everything old. This type of "liberal" is a millstone about humanity's neck. He is his own worst enemy.

Your disposition to give every idea a fair chance to prove its worth indicates whether you are up-to-date or behind-the-times.

Report To Shareholders

If this bit needs a reason, you might call it an informal report to the shareholders. Such reports have been infrequent over the past few years on the USO (United Service Organizations), but that does not mean it has faded away nor out of business.

Matter of fact, the USO observed its twentieth birthday this week.

There was no cake, no candles, no cheers.

The USO was a big operation during wartime. Top-notch singers, actors, magicians, dancers, comedians and musicians toured the world with USO to lift the spirits of servicemen.

Thousands of people outside the entertainment field joined in the giving of small services, like making coffee and doughnut counters, soft-drink centers, information booths, and any number of homeown inspirations designed to entertain or make easier the visit of uniformed personnel.

You might be surprised to know the USO is still functioning in a big way. More than 200 clubs are operating in the United States near large training centers and the big cities.

Servicemen find USO clubs in faraway places, like Korea, Japan, Okinawa, Guam, Turkey, Greece, the Canal Zone, Puerto Rico, Casablanca, France, Italy to name a few.

And entertainers still make the rounds of overseas posts, though the "big names" are now rare. Bob Hope is one of those who has not forgotten. Anyway, troupes are giving more than 2,000 performances annually to GI audiences. Those traveling entertainers are all dedicated people. They have to be.

I never did see one of the stellar attractions USO put on the road during World War II, but watched one of the lesser troupes give a show for a small audience of perhaps a hundred GIs. The applause they received would have warmed the heart of an established prima donna at the Met.

To most of us the need for the USO today seems relatively small; the many millions of men and boys who once were far from home are now represented by "a few million". (Need I remind there are scores overseas with families and friends here in Pitt County?)

The USO is still important to many of them.

On December 12, seven troupes left for the Pacific, Alaskan, European and Caribbean areas; in January two more units departed, one for the Pacific and the other for Europe. This month, three units are leaving for Europe, the Pacific and the Northeast. Size of the troupe runs from three persons to as many as fifteen. Their tours last from a month to three months.

Calling your attention to the USO isn't something remote and unrelated to us at home, for each of us who contributed to the United Fund was also contributing something to morale-building for those from home who are now overseas or a long way from home.

"The USO is proof to them that somebody back home does give a damn," says Lt. General Lewis B. Hershey, Director of Selective Service.

Aside from that, it seems an appropriate time (their 20th anniversary) to call attention to the shareholders to the continuous effort of a lot of very unselfish people.

Agreed?

Other Editors Saying Khrushchev's Warning

(Henderson Dispatch)

Khrushchev is again throwing his weight around—as if indeed he had ever stopped doing it. He is in many ways following the pattern adopted by Hitler in Germany before and during World War II. Just as Hitler, years before he reached the height of his power, gave the world a blueprint of his strategy for attempting to achieve world conquest, so also is the Kremlin ruler.

In a speech in Moscow last month, Khrushchev bluntly warned that world war will be lost upon the nations if the West attempts to resist Communist world domination.

The West, of course, is not going to roll over and play dead each time he speaks. That means that one of two things will happen. Either he will retreat from the stand he has taken, or war will follow.

Very likely there is a degree of bluff in what the dictator says. But no one knows when he is bluffing and when he is in earnest. That's what makes war such a realistic possibility.

Should the West give in to all Khrushchev's demands it would amount to submission and surrender. Free men are not made of such stuff. Rather they are inclined to call his hand, whatever the cost.

Khrushchev said it does not seem that war will be necessary for the Reds to acquire world domination. He plainly stated that the free nations will be "prevented" from making war by the establishment and growth of "peace fronts", including pacifists of all shades of political convictions. He said further that the policy of peaceful coexistence will facilitate Communist party activities, making it a simpler matter to combat aggressive war blocs and foreign military bases.

With some intimation and a your reporter several times suggested that the directory service be restored on a pay basis. One way would be to issue a stamp, say of 17-cent denomination, for directory service. When the sender was not sure of an address, he would put such a stamp on the envelope, and the receiving post office would make an effort to find the addressee.

Another way would be to authorize the marking of mail "directory service requested," and if this service were necessary the addressee would be called upon to pay an extra charge, or the extra charge could be levied back on the sender.

The former Postmaster General, Arthur E. Summerfield, did not get the message and nothing was done.

The abolition of the directory service had two consequences: There were no more of those amazing stories about how post office employees located addresses with only the scantiest of clues. These constituted some of degree of encouragement from President Kennedy. Khrushchev is virtually inviting himself back to the United States for the United Nations Security Council in March. At that time the two Mr. K's may meet for the first time. Khrushchev will proceed with his accustomed domineering attitude, probably breathing out his threats in an effort to appease and assent to the Communist line. But by standing firm, Kennedy will not make matters any the worse. At the most, it can only hasten whatever of a showdown there may be. So that nothing is to be gained by retreat.

Kennedy has explained to Americans that the day of sacrifice and austerity may come upon them, maybe sooner than a complacent populace realizes. What it all adds up to is the absolute must that the United States, and its allies, be ready to defend themselves and to return blow for blow, if it shall come to that, which may God forbid.

Khrushchev has given a blueprint of his program for all the world to see and read. Hitler did just that in the early thirties, but no one paid serious heed to his words, and hence free peoples were forced to undergo the privations that were essential in preservation of their liberties. We may be near to another similar experience at the hands of this latter day braggart.

President Kennedy has spoken in all seriousness about what the future may hold in store. We shall ignore his admonitions only at our peril. We must at all costs stand for our own rights and for justice for ourselves and for all nations. Short of that, free people everywhere could become a slave people as those in the satellite countries already are.

Postal Directory Service Urged

By ELMER ROESSNER

The new brain behind the Postmaster General's desk, James E. Day, might consider the restoration of the directory service.

The directory service used to be a unit in every post office that took letters with incomplete addresses and added sufficient information to get them delivered.

In the old days, a letter addressed to the Jones Co., Fort Wayne, Ind., went to the directory service in Fort Wayne, directories and phone books were consulted, and the street address added. But a letter so addressed today bounces back to the sender.

The directory service was abolished to save money. This was a fruitcake idea to begin with, because it probably costs as much to send a letter back to the sender as it does to find the local address of the addressee.

TWO PROPOSALS During the Republican regime, the warmest and best publicity the department got the year round.

And an incalculable amount of sales are being lost every day because prospective customers don't know complete business addresses.

TEMPORARY SOLUTION Every week I get letters asking how the writers can get in touch with companies they want to do business with. Letters they have sent without street addresses have been returned.

Until we can get the directory service back into the directory service business, here are some ways to find street addresses for out-of-town firms:

1. Look up the company at local telephone company offices where out-of-town directories are kept on file. The street address will be given, although often in gibberish abbreviations.

2. Consult out-of-town phone books in the hotels, railroad and bus stations, and at large public telephone service stations.

3. Consult trade directories in

Terms To Be Defined

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Conservatives are persons who believe that the progress of mankind must be within the margins of historic memory. Conservatives regard Liberals, in this century, as persons whose judgment permits them to run wild, to take unscrupulous actions upon impulses. A Reactionary, on the other hand, is a person who resists change as adamantly as a Liberal welcomes change. The Conservative achieves more than the Liberal because his thinking is within national traditional margins. The Reactionary is destructive because he ignores all new factors in a situation; he lives in the past as though nothing has happened since some date which he fixed in his mind. In politics such a person may accept the period of Mark Hanna as the most suitable for the United States or in morals, the era of Cotton Mather as preferable. He very often rejects statistical data as not affecting his point of view. He insists that he possesses an unbreakable code of life. Nevertheless, he does not wear a Prince Albert coat of the 1890's or a stock of the early 1900's nor does his wife wear her hair a la Brunnhilde in a thick-long braid wound around her skull.

The Reactionary is unable to adjust his fashion, but cannot adjust to change. He believes in genealogy as a guide to character despite all the investigations that have been done in the psychology of inherited characteristics. The Conservative, like the Liberal, looks at all that comes up, but he screens current data through the sieve of his personal experience, whereas the Liberal too often accepts the new as virtuous because it is new and different.

One says that a doctor is conservative who waits until something is proven about the side effects of a remedy. A doctor who is not conservative reads the attractive catalogue and prescribes fashion on his patients. The reactionary doctor says it is all bunk because it was not taught in his day in college. Some persons stop learning anything, except by experience, the day they get a cap and gown.

The Conservative in economics has an enormous respect for the hardness of money, recognizing that nations which permitted their currencies to go soft and stay soft too long collapse politically and disappear from history. People, of course, do not disappear; only nations are conquered and absorbed. Nevertheless, there are strong men among every people who survive every adventure in history and revive their national traditions.

The Reactionary believes that some peoples are superior to others. The Conservative accepts superiority only on the basis of achievement, of character, of personality. He respects a political radical such as Einstein for his accomplishments in physics. The Reactionary is liable to say that Einstein's politics sounded nutty to him, ignoring all else. The Liberal is liable to accept Einstein's political views because he was so great a physicist.

Similarly the Reactionary says that Bertrand Russell is an immoral person because of his unorthodox views on marriage, ignoring the fact that Russell's decision is liable to say that Einstein's politics sounded nutty to him, ignoring all else. The Liberal is liable to accept Einstein's political views because he was so great a physicist.

Perhaps all this is too diagrammatic but it is substantial. The Reactionary is liable to say that Einstein's politics sounded nutty to him, ignoring all else. The Liberal is liable to accept Einstein's political views because he was so great a physicist.

Appropriated Mop For Nests

CINCINNATI (AP)—Three years ago Mrs. Maude Rankin hung up a mop on a back porch nail to dry but she never got to use it again. A couple of robins picked the scrubbing end of the mop as a place to build a nest and raise a family. They kept coming back each year. How does she clean her floors now? "I get down on my hands and knees and scrub," she said. "Gets cleaner that way, anyway."

THE FERCUSSION AFFAIR

CHAPTER 18
You're Johnny - on - the spot, aren't you?" Colonel Ferguson said to me as we drove away from the accident scene.

"I happened to be listening to the local police calls," I said, "and got the first report of your accident. Do you have a doctor in town?"

"I never go to doctors," He emitted a sort of snuffling neigh through his damaged nose. "Look here, I need a drink. Isn't there someplace we can go for a drink?"

"If you say so," I took him to a bar and grill on the edge of the lower town. The noon-hour crowd had thinned down to a few tables of men drinking their lunches. I hustled Ferguson to the rear of the establishment and suggested he wash his face.

He came out of the men's room looking a little better, and ordered a corned-beef sandwich. When the waiter was out of hearing, he pushed his battered face across the table toward me. His eyes were bleak. "What sort of man are you? Can I trust you?"

"You haven't simply been hanging around hoping that some of my money will rub off on you?" It was an insulting question, but I didn't let it insult me. I was willing to put up with a good deal for the sake of candor.

"It's a natural human hope, isn't it? Money isn't an overriding motive with me. As you may have noticed."

"Yes. You've talked to me straight from the shoulder. I'd like to feel I can do the same with you." His voice altered. "I have to talk to someone."

"Shoot. In my profession you learn to listen, and you learn to forget."

The waiter brought his drink. Ferguson sucked at it greedily and set the glass down with a rap. "I want to engage your professional services, Mr. Gunnarson. That will insure your forgetting, won't it? Confidential relationship, and all that."

"I take it seriously." "I don't mean to be offensive. I realize I have been offensive, when this matter came up between us. I apologize." He was trying to be quiet and charming. I preferred him loud and natural.

"No apology needed. You've been under quite a strain. But we're not getting anywhere."

"We have if we've reached an agreement. Will you be my legal adviser in this matter?" "I'll be glad to. So long as it doesn't interfere with my representing my other client. Other clients."

"How could that be?" "We don't need to go into details. I have a client in the county jail who was involved with Larry Gaines. Innocently involved, like your wife."

His eyes winced. "And like your wife," I added, "she's suffering out the consequences."

Ferguson took a deep, awning breath. "I saw Gaines today. It's why I lost my head. I threw discretion to the winds and tried to run him down. Heaven only knows what will happen now."

"Have you delivered the money?" "Yes. It's when I saw him. I was instructed to procure a cardboard carton and place the money in it, then leave the carton on the front seat of my car, with the door unlocked. I parked the car where they told me to, on Ocean Boulevard near the foot of the pier, and left it standing there with the carton of money in it. Then I was supposed to walk out to the end of the wharf. It's a distance of a couple of hundred yards."

"I know the place. My wife and I often go there."

"Then you probably remember that there's a public telescope on the pier. I couldn't resist dropping a dime in the slot and training the thing on my car. It's how I happened to see them."

"Then?" "Him. I meant to say him. Gaines. He pulled up beside my car, got out and retrieved the carton, and away he went. If I had had a deer rifle with me I could have plugged him. I wish I had."

"What kind of a car was he driving?" "A fairly new car, green in color. I don't know what make exactly. I'm not familiar with the cheaper makes. At any rate it was Gaines who got out and picked up the money. And I saw red. I sprinted the length of the pier and chased him in my car. You know the result."

He gingerly touched his swelling nose with his fingertips. "You don't lie well, Colonel. Who was with Gaines in the car?"

"No one." "But he wouldn't meet my eyes. His gaze roved around the room and fastened on an elk head high on the opposite wall above the bar. The waiter brought my sandwich. Ferguson ordered another rye."

I ate mechanically. My mind was racing, fitting together pieces of fact. The picture was far from complete, but its outlines were forming.

"Was your wife in the car with Gaines?" His head hung as if his neck had been broken. "She was driving."

"Are you certain of the identification?" "Positive."

His second drink arrived. He drank it down like water. Remembering the previous night at the Foothill Club, I persuaded him not to order a third. "We have some more talking to do, Ferguson. We don't have to do it here."

"I like it here." His gaze repeated its circuit of the room. "I'm trying to get some idea of you and your situation," I said. "I can't very well advise you in the dark. Would you object to some more personal questions, about your wife and your relationship?"

"I don't object. In fact, it may help to clarify my own thinking." He paused, then said in a deeper voice: "She's the only person I've ever really loved. Except one. And I didn't love her enough. The other girl had nothing to do with Holly, except that Holly reminded me of her."

"Tell me about the other girl." "There's no point in going into the subject of her, not at this late date. She was a girl I picked up in Boston twenty-five years ago, when I was at Harvard Business School. For a while I planned to marry her, and then I decided not to. Perhaps I should have. He stared down into his empty glass, twisting and turning it like a crystal ball. "Holly seemed like a reincarnation of that girl in Boston."

"He fell silent. He seemed to have forgotten that I was sitting across from him."

"So you arranged to meet Holly," I prompted him. "Yes. It was like being given a second chance at youth."

"Obviously, you made the most of your chances."

"Yes. We got along from the start, a perfectly straight-forward, companionable way. And he didn't know who I was. I was simply a fellow she met at a party who had a few business interests. That was the beauty of it. She didn't know I had money until we'd been seeing each other for several days." Ferguson spoke of his money as if it was a communicable disease.

"Are you certain of that?" "Quite certain." He nodded emphatically, as though he had to reassure himself. "I'd been going through the motions for twenty-five years, piling up money and acquiring property. Suddenly Holly was the reason for it, the meaning of it all. She understood when I told her these things. We went on long walks together in the mountains. I poured out my heart to her, and she understood. She said that she loved me, and would share my life."

Shock and whisky were working in him like truth serum. There was no trace of irony in his voice; only the tragic irony of the circumstances. He had founded his brief marriage on a dream and was trying to convince himself that the dream was real.

"And share your money, too?" I said. "Holly didn't marry me for money," he insisted doggedly.

"Any woman can be a fool when she's infatuated," Gunnarson observes, as the story continues tomorrow. "I should never have talked her into marrying me," Ferguson confides.

Had Hamburgers And No Takers

CARNEY, Md. (AP) - As the bus packed with schoolchildren pulled up to a rural restaurant, the cook put 60 patties of ground beef on the grill - so the hamburgers would be ready to serve when the boys and girls placed their orders.

Then somebody remembered it was Friday. Then somebody else learned the youngsters were from a Roman Catholic school.

Then - as the ground beef sizzled - the orders came in. Tuna sandwiches mostly. Hamburgers? Not a single one.

CHRISTENINGS

MANASQUAN, N. J. (AP) - Bill Loughran is in business to help Sunday sailors who pound their dinghies into driftwood at christening time with heavy-duty bottles of champagne.

Loughran makes "christening" bottles that contain a fizzy water, embellished with appropriate ribbons and easily breakable.

"Any woman can be a fool when she's infatuated," Gunnarson observes, as the story continues tomorrow. "I should never have talked her into marrying me," Ferguson confides.

Unemployment Is Their Main Topic

By NATE POLOWETZKY
JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP)—After 15 minutes in Johnstown, the conversation turns to unemployment as a matter of course.

"Brother, it's rough here," said the bellboy at the hotel. "The men ain't working at the mills. And those that are, are working only part time. I tell you it's pretty tough."

Said a waitress at a nearby restaurant: "You know, even a couple of years ago, you had to wait in line to get served here during lunch or dinner. Now there are tables anytime you want them. The men are on relief or living off their unemployment payments. I hope it gets better pretty soon."

The Johnstown area, nestled in the West Pennsylvania mountains, is a "depressed" section and has been for seven straight years. This means its unemployment rate during that time has not been lower than six per cent of the labor force.

Its present level stands at about 17 per cent, compared to the national figure of about seven per cent.

Like other communities in depressed areas, Johnstown's economic health rested on a narrow base—steel and coal mining in its case.

Then came the employment decline in both industries caused by a general nationwide economic downturn, automation and technological advances which permanently eliminated tens of thousands of jobs, loss of markets, some of them for good, to other materials—gas and oil in the coal industry; plastics, aluminum, ferrous concrete and glass, in the steel industry.

Plant obsolescence and exhaustion of natural resources also added to unemployment.

As of last December there were 15,800 persons unemployed in the two county (Cambria and Somerset) Johnstown labor market, a 16.9 per cent unemployment rate. From a 31,000 job peak for the two counties almost 30 years ago, mining employment had dropped to 5,800 in mid-December, 1960, while at least 8,000 men lost their jobs in the basic metals industry, predominantly steel, between July 1957 and mid-December, 1960, when 14,000 men were employed.

The nationwide employment picture for steel is also bleak. Some 150,000 men—a 30 per cent rate—are estimated idle in the steel industry, and, by conservative estimates, from 45,000-50,000 of them are in the basic steel industry in Pennsylvania.

as good a position as any area in the state to attract new industries."

Diversification has already begun in the area. About 5,000 persons, mostly women, are employed in new apparel and needles trades industries.

"But what we need," the Chamber of Commerce official said, "is new 'male' industries. That's where you get your big payrolls. And we have some very fine prospects."

Better highways to make the area more accessible to new industries is also vital, city leaders say. To create industrial sites, 18 acres of a blighted residential area are being torn down and other sites will ultimately become available.

"But perhaps the most important thing that has come out of our depression," said one observer, "is an awareness among the youth—those who remain here—that they have to get more and better education, learn skills, to prepare for new jobs in new industries in the future rather than just aim for work in the mills."

Some of these youngsters attend night classes at Johnstown College, an extension of the University of Pittsburgh. Many of them come from families whose income for years had been derived from the mills.

A recitation of their backgrounds sums up the present situation here.

Said one youth: "My father and three uncles all worked in the mills. They were laid off almost a year ago and haven't worked since."

Said another: "My father and his two brothers have been out of work for about seven months."

Still another: "There's terrible times in the steel mills. My father used to work in the mills. But he's disabled now. If he weren't he'd probably be out of work, too."

And one more: "My father has a grocery store in the mill area. He used to do a lot of business making lunches, you know, cold meat sandwiches for lunch pals and such things. Now there's very little business. He's just able to hold on."

Actor Cameron Mitchell freed to earn money

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Actor Cameron Mitchell is free to go back to work today as the star of a television series being filmed in Florida.

The TV and movie actor was released from jail Thursday when attorneys for his former wife, Johanna, withdrew papers for a writ under which Mitchell was held for six days.

His ex-wife claimed he was delinquent in alimony payments.

Before his release it was stipulated that $450 from each of his weekly $2,500 pay checks will go to his ex-wife.

Cliff Enger of Beverly Hills, Calif., an attorney for Filmaster Inc., which is making the TV series "The Beachcomber" starring Mitchell, said the actor has said all along he wants to support his four children but had not been given an opportunity to work and raise the money.

Mitchell's former wife, the daughter of Canadian meat packer Fred Mendel, lives in Pacific Palisades, Calif., with the children.

Homes Lost To Chilean Volcano

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—Calbuco volcano erupted Thursday causing more than 200 families to lose their homes in a flood of lava sliding down the side of the mountain.

The volcano, about 1,200 miles south of this capital, was one of 11 which erupted during last May's devastating earthquakes. Many animals were trapped in the flood of lava, but it was not known if any humans perished.

TIC-TAG-TOW . . . was the prize-winning photograph entered by Reflector photographer Stuart Savage in the annual N.C. Press Association competition for 1960. The judge commented that it was "a well presented pattern shot of a 'weather news' item that combined ingenuity and excellent composition." The picture previously appeared in The Daily Reflector.

Everett . . .

(Continued from page one) 1960 official census. Rep. Everett pointed out the issue of reapportionment "lies within the discretion of the legislature." He cited the 1950 example when, he said, the official census indicated a shuffle in N.C. representation but reapportionment was not undertaken by the General Assembly.

"No Change" "I hope there will be no change this time," Rep. Everett said, "but there will be terrific pressure brought to affect reapportionment."

On the redistricting issue, the Bethel legislator declined to align himself with any plan as yet.

"Many plans have been proposed and at present I'm waiting to see what develops before committing myself," he said.

Turning from what have been referred to as the major issues, Rep. Everett singled out the compulsory automobile liability insurance law that expires this year as an issue slated for considerable attention this session.

"There will be a great deal of pressure exerted for extension of the law," he predicted.

Favors Measure "I definitely favor retaining the financial responsibility legislation and, therefore, will vote to extend the law," he said, but added: "However, there are certain technical changes that could be made to improve the effectiveness of the law."

He cited as an example a revision to allow a person's automobile registration "to go with the person rather than the automobile." He said such a change would prevent persons from operating uninsured motor vehicles "as many do today" by making partial payments toward total purchase cost and allowing the auto dealers to retain the vehicles' titles.

The compulsory insurance act was sponsored in the 1957 General Assembly by Walter B. Jones of this precinct, who declined to seek the Pitt House seat while he campaigned for a berth in the U.S. Congress last spring.

Court Reform Rep. Everett said of the state's court system: "I believe there will be some sort of court reform bill enacted by this legislature, probably as it affects all courts below the Superior Court level."

He said, "This is where the need is the greatest. We need a uniform inferior court system and a uniform system of court costs throughout North Carolina."

"The justice-of-the-peace system will probably be changed to some uniform system of salaried magistrates."

"I think it goes without saying that the present fee system in the justice-of-the-peace courts places the integrity of that court in a bad light."

"Since more court business is handled by the justice-of-the-peace courts than by any other branch of our system, it tends to color our entire judicial system."

"I am strongly in favor of doing everything possible to modernize our court system and to expedite judicial processes."

Rep. Everett said the package submitted to the 1959 legislature failed because of its broad scope and because its advocates were not prepared to compromise.

He said the 1959 bill "was aimed at supervision of the judges throughout our judicial system and integration of the entire system."

He added he would favor legislation aimed again in those directions.

Public Opinion The Bethel attorney stressed the need for expressions of opinion by his constituents. "I will be happy to have expressions of feelings from the people on any matter that comes before the legislature."

He said he plans to travel from his home here to Raleigh each Monday afternoon during the session and return to Bethel each Friday afternoon. He "cordially" invited interested Pitt Countyans to express themselves.

Turning to the State Highway Commission, Rep. Everett showed his "interest in some changes whereby we will have a system of highway autonomy."

He continued: "The way it is now if you want to discuss roads or highways with somebody, you have to go to Raleigh."

"By some method, the Highway Commission should be brought closer to the people." He suggested a proposal which would result in expanding the commission's membership to include more commissioners from more geographic areas may "help to solve the problem."

Peiping Pledges Laos Rebels Aid TOKYO (AP) — Communist China pledged today to aid what it called the lawful Laotian government of ousted neutralist Premier Souvanna Phouma, if he asks for it.

The pledge, made by Red China Foreign Minister Chen Yi, did not spell out what kind of aid would be offered. Chen Yi said that if Phouma asks for assistance, Peiping "will certainly give it."

Councilmen authorized City Attorney R. B. Lee to ask for a local law from the State Legislature giving the council authority to exempt volunteer firemen and rescue squad members from purchasing city license tags.

The volunteer firemen and rescue squad members have been issued special tags through the years but the council was told last night that this is not technically legal.

Roy Hardee and Fire Chief George Gardner appeared in behalf of the proposal.

A group of citizens attended last night's session concerning the smoke problem from the city dump.

At the beginning of the meeting Mayor West told the audience that it had been brought to his attention that a group was there for that purpose.

He explained that the matter was not on the agenda and asked that they request the city manager to schedule it for the next meeting.

Councilmen took no action on a proposed parking lot on the Moye property across Evans St. from Sheppard Memorial Library.

They took no action on a request for issuance of a taxi franchise to Charles Gladson, Chief of Police S. G. Gibbs told them that Gladson's franchise had been revoked through error when it was intended to revoke only his driving permit. The council revoked the franchise after a court conviction for Gladson, Gibbs said.

Fallout Shelter Plans Described

The only protection against radioactive fallout in case of atomic attack is "to be someplace else" or "to be in a shelter designed to stop this gamma radiation and protect you."

This was the advice given to Jaycees last night by Russell C. Nicholson, administration assistant to Gen. Edward Griffin, head of North Carolina's Civil Defense.

"We expect relatively little area to be free from fallout," Nicholson told the Jaycees. "Consequently the best bet is a shelter."

He described an adequate shelter as having walls and top with three feet of earth or 20 inches of concrete. A simple blower type air filter should be installed and there should be food, water supply and basic toilet facilities. Plans should be made for a stay of approximately two weeks in such a shelter, Nicholson told the Jaycees.

The CD official was introduced by J. H. Rose, Pitt's Civil Defense director.

Jaycee president George Coffman said Charles Clark is serving as chairman of the club's Operation Survival Committee. The committee plans to meet with the county's Civil Defense Council in the near future.

Plans are being made for the club to construct a family fallout shelter for public display. Application has also been made through Rep. Herbert Bonner for funds to construct a fallout shelter to be used as a permanent Civil Defense Headquarters.

Gold Prices Fall To Near Normal

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices fell in the London free market today to the lowest point since last October. Dealers said the winter gold rush sparked by concern over U. S. reserves is definitely over.

The price was fixed this morning at $35.28 3/4 an ounce. The official U. S.-pegged price is $35 an ounce.

During the winter speculation, the London price had risen as high as $40.

Dealers said President Kennedy's stand against dollar devaluation, backed up by similar public statements from New York Stock Exchange circles, had generally cooled the market.
