Lawmaker Discusses Measure

REP. WOOTEN . . . reviews long court reform bill to go before General Assembly soon.

Wooten Reviews Sweeping Court Reform Proposal

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer

Rep. Frank M. Wooten yesterday unfolded a sweeping court reform proposal that he predicted will have enough support to become law during the General Assembly that convenes in Raleigh Wednesday.

In an interview here Rep. Wooten explained measures of the multi-page proposal that would, if enacted into law, abolish the justice-of-the-peace system and replace recorder's and municipal courts.

The Greenville attorney, who will be making his third consecutive trip to the biennial lawmaking sessions, said the proposed bill is "almost the same" as the court reform package of Sen. J. Spencer Bell of Mecklenburg County in 1959. Wooten said Bell again would be recognized sponsor of the proposal.

Uniform System Rep. Wooten explained: "The bill provides for uniform costs and procedures in a new system of district courts and magistrates."

The district courts, he said, would replace the present system of county recorder's courts across the state. The bill would provide the district courts be established within each of the state's judicial districts with at least one judge within each county.

Rep. Wooten said the proposed measure would provide state maintenance of the district courts and that the state, under the bill, would pay the salaries of magistrates who would replace the justice-of-the-peace and the old "fee system."

The bill provides that the district courts could be established on a rotating basis, holding court in various county towns on specific days of the week. The state would pay the salaries of full-time judges, solicitors, clerks, and clerical assistants.

Rep. Wooten forecast opposition to the bill from the state's small towns "which are now making money through the inferior courts." Under the proposed reform, he said, all costs and fees would be forwarded to a district court headquarters provided for in the bill. Fines would be retained by the respective county school funds, he said.

Target Date Within the long bill, a measure stipulates that the entire program be effective not later than Jan. 1, 1971. Rep. Wooten pointed out the intention of the bill's authors is to affect a "gradual updating of the court system that we have needed for some time."

In the face of widespread predictions earlier that a general "hands off" policy would be followed regarding the state's system of Superior Courts, Rep. Wooten said the proposed bill would affect improvement of Superior Court efficiency. The bill, he said, proposes establishment of a headquarters for each Superior Court judge within his home district.

A permanent office, he said, would make the Superior Court judge more available and convenient for special proceedings that require his presence or signature. The traditional system of rotating the judges among the various districts would be unmoored, the Pitt representative pointed out.

Numerous specifications for the proposed reform would be left to the discretion of the General Assembly, Rep. Wooten said. Among these are jurisdiction and power of district courts and magistrates; determination of districts for the proposed district system; and the number of magistrates necessary.

Popular Support Rep. Wooten, a member of the N. C. Bar Association's steering committee on court reform, predicted the broad measure would have the approval of this General Assembly.

"There seems to be a whole lot of public opinion in favor of it," he said and pointed out: "Last session, Sen. Bell's bill passed the Senate but failed to come through the house."

He said the 1959 proposal "got hung in the committee and never had a final vote in the House." His support of the proposal, however, is not unqualified. Wooten pointed out the bill includes two measures he would not favor. He indicated the bill's strong advocates have already agreed to compromise by eliminating some

Brazilians Return Seized Cruise Ship To Its Owners Two Snowstorms Join Forces And Hit New England

RECIFE, Brazil (AP) — The Brazilian government turned the travel-stained Santa Maria back to Portugal today. Capt. Henrique Galvao's seagoing revolutionaries, now beached, protested that Brazil had welched on an agreement with the swashbuckling skipper.

A rebel spokesman at the police barracks—where Galvao now is quartered hoping to take up asylum in Brazil—told newsmen: "We are shocked and taken by surprise at the attitude of the Brazilian government, since it signed a document with us guaranteeing that the Santa Maria would stay under the Brazilian flag."

The spokesman was incensed that the ship is going back to "the dictator Salazar." He referred to Portuguese Premier Antonio Salazar, whom Galvao has vowed to oppose from land now that his floating revolution has been yanked from under him. Portugal's government, however, is but an intermediary. It is turning the vessel back to the owners, the Colonial Navigation Co.

Galvao and 21 rebels were quartered in the police barracks. The rebels were unsure of their future plans, although they have been promised political asylum in Brazil. Their main trouble is lack of money, but they plan to start a fund-raising campaign as soon as they can gain freedom.

There was a general atmosphere of astonishment among officials here at the realization that only about 30 rebels were aboard the ship yet they managed to keep more than a thousand passengers and crewmen in check for 12 days and nights. The band was originally reported to number 70.

A strange quiet settled over this tropical port after days of excitement and high sea drama. Navy men and correspondents who chased the ship through the south Atlantic prepared to leave.

Agents of the owners of the $16.6 million vessel, her stack blighted with soot and her air conditioning out of order, planned to head the ship from the harbor pool to the dock so passengers could retrieve their luggage.

The Santa Maria's sister ship, also owned by Colonial Navigation Co., headed for Recife to take on whatever passengers want to travel back to Europe. The Vera Cruz has been on her regular run to Brazilian ports.

For the Santa Maria's American passengers, the problems of getting home are more complicated. Some of them have cars in the Santa Maria's holds. The vehicles probably will have to go all the way back to Lisbon before reaching the United States.

Galvao went on the air shortly after setting foot on Brazilian soil and told a radio-TV audience that seizure of the 610-foot Santa Maria with 600 captive passengers and 388 crewmen was only the beginning of his campaign to oust the Salazar regime.

Later he told newsmen he still claimed rights to the Santa Maria. "We accepted asylum without renouncing our rights to the ship," he declared.

The statement appeared to carry little meaning, however. After Galvao yielded the Santa Maria to Brazil, President Janio Quadros quickly handed the vessel over to the Portuguese government. In turning the ship directly over to Portugal, Quadros avoided any jurisdictional dispute between the Brazilian Navy and the vessel's owners.

The ship's owners, meanwhile, sought to hale Galvao into court. They directed the liner's regular captain, Mario Simoes Maia, to file a complaint in a Brazilian court charging Galvao with homicide, robbery, depriving passengers of their liberty and damage to the multimillion-dollar ship. Maria was slain when the rebels seized the vessel in the Caribbean Jan. 22.

The Brazilian court must decide whether to accept the complaint. The 40-odd Americans stranded here after 12 days of captivity aboard the Santa Maria broke into cheers when they heard that Galvao had surrendered the ship. That meant they could get their baggage off and make plans to go home.

While the Americans resided at the homes of U.S. residents in Recife, the ship owners were authorized by Lisbon headquarters to pay them ship or plane fare to Florida. That was the Americans' destination before the liner was commandeered. Capt. Simoes Maia had said earlier that the band numbered 60 or so, but that only about 20 were Portuguese and they included five crewmen who defected to the rebel cause.

"The rest were Spaniards, Venezuelans and Cubans," he declared. Some had recently come from Russia, having been trained in Russian brigades. They had been in Cuba with Fidel Castro. The rebel chief, 65, had little choice but to yield up the Santa Maria—with fewer than 30 supporters aboard the deserted ship, fuel and water almost gone and with Portuguese warships keeping vigil in the Atlantic should he try to make a run for it.

Galvao, in accepting Brazil's offer of asylum, said his future plans were a military secret. It was believed he will leave soon for the industrial center of Sao Paulo where Gen. Humberto Delgado, leader of Portuguese exiles in Brazil, resides.

U.S. Sounds Out Chances For New Congo Program

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States is quietly sounding out U.N. delegations on a sweeping program to end the Congo crisis, informed sources said today.

While not yet firm policy, informants said, the U.S. plan includes: 1. Freeing the Congo from big-power interference. 2. Forming a government with broader support than that held by President Joseph Kasavubu. 3. Disarming all Congolese troops. 4. Releasing all political prisoners.

Chief U.S. delegate Adlai Stevenson would have to win the Soviet Union's agreement to stay out of the Congo's affairs. The disarmament proposal would need U.N. backing.

The rest of the program would depend upon the bitterly feuding Congolese politicians themselves. Stevenson seems to put high priority on exclusion of big-power interference and low priority on freeing political prisoners, the informants said.

Stevenson probably will take up all the ideas with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin with the suggestion they become the U.N. program for the Congo, the informants said.

But the new U.S. administration's Congo policy apparently still is under study in Washington, they said, and Stevenson probably is just trying out the ideas on his colleagues. Diplomatic sources said Stevenson seems to feel that if such a program received broad support from the Security Council, Secre-

NEW YORK (AP)—A blizzard of snow and widely scattered storms that joined forces slammed into New England today, leaving near-paralysis in its wake and threatening additional havoc.

The storms merged in the New York State area Friday night after one had swept in from the Ohio Valley and the other had wallowed up from the East coast.

They left as much as two feet of snow at widely scattered points, shutting down airports, snarling traffic and generally disrupting transportation.

Poor visibility caused the collision Friday night of the passenger liner Nassau and the freighter Brott outside New York Harbor. Both vessels, outward bound returned to their moorings in the harbor.

There were no injuries and only slight damage was reported. In northern Utah, an all-out search was ordered for a light plane carrying a Maryland executive who took off from Salt Lake City and headed north into a snow storm.

The pilot was William D. Kelley Jr., technical director of the Allegany Instrument Co. of Cumberland, Md. Forecasters said as much as a foot could be expected today as far north as southern Maine as the blizzard moves northward, it reached Boston at dawn and swept onward.

The violence of this storm, plus another which hit the upper Texas Panhandle, moderate storms in the Northwest and icy conditions throughout the country claimed at least 38 lives in the past 24 hours.

The blizzard had wind-whipped more than 10 inches over the New York City Metropolitan Area early today and occasionally heavy snow remained in the forecast for the area.

Subfreezing temperatures accompanied the storm and in New York City it marked the 16th day

Sun Returns To Most Of North Carolina Today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The sun was back over most of North Carolina today but the Weather Bureau said Friday's harvest of ice, still holding its own on the ground, would prevent any rapid warming over most of the state.

While the storm blew cold over inland areas, the coast was blessed with warm easterly breezes Friday afternoon. A high of 52 was recorded at Elizabeth City and 51 at Cherry Point.

The state forecast is for mostly fair weather Sunday. But there are indications of a new development over the Southern Rockies that might bring more cloudy weather Monday.

Temperatures in the mountain regions, where the storm hit hardest, are expected to dip to 10 to 15 tonight and clear weather is forecast. Highs should be around 30 today and Sunday.

In the Piedmont, lows tonight will be from 16 to 22, Sunday, estimated highs are 35 to 42 with fair weather.

The Weather Bureau says highs in the east tomorrow should be from 38 to 45. Forecasted low temperatures for tonight are 18 in the northern inland section to near 20s along the coast. Near Asheville there was still an inch of snow on the ground today but roads were clear except for icy spots.

The Highway Patrol says U.S. 41 across the mountains was open today to vehicles with chains. Chains were also advised for travel on all Ashe County roads and rural McDowell County roads.

Little Hope For People Caught In Rubble-Slide

MOULIN-SOUS-FLERON, Belgium (AP) — Exhausted rescue workers held little hope today for at least 13 persons—and perhaps as many as 30—trapped beneath tons of rubble that swept through this hamlet Friday.

Three bodies, one that of a 7-month-old baby, were seen beneath the avalanche of cinders outside a power station that buried four houses, damaged several and swept trucks before it.

Rescuers wielding picks and shovels attacked the rubble with renewed vigor when noises were reported coming from one buried house. But then Interior Minister Rene Lefebvre, who had rushed to the scene, said there was little hope for the missing.

"This rubble is so thin," he said, "that it must have penetrated everywhere." The 300-foot-high rubble heap, weakened by heavy rains, collapsed with terrifying speed and crashed through the town. One witness said it traveled "faster than a man running."

The avalanche, about 2,460 feet long, and 32 feet high ran its course of destruction in a matter of minutes. Many children were playing in the streets. Housewives were working in their homes. One man sitting in the back of a truck ran when he saw the avalanche. His two companions were buried.

Refugee Aid WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has stepped in with a broad scale program to feed, clothe and help find jobs and educational opportunities for refugees from Fidel Castro's Cuba.

President Kennedy said Friday $4 million from mutual security funds will be provided to keep the aid program rolling until the end of the current fiscal year June 30.

The relief program will be directed by Secretary of Welfare Abraham A. Ribicoff. It will combine direct federal assistance with help for voluntary aid groups.

"I hope that these measures will be understood as an immediate expression of the firm desire of the people of the United States to be of tangible assistance to the refugees until such time as better circumstances enable them to return to their permanent homes," the President said in a statement.

Ribicoff announced the new program to White House newsmen after meeting with the president.

Widow Dies As Car Rams Home

JACKSONVILLE — A widow was killed here last night as an automobile crashed through her home and into the living room where she sat, Onslow County Sheriff Thomas J. Marshall said today.

The tragic accident occurred as an automobile allegedly driven by Elvin Paul Jones, Negro, of Rt. 1, Maysville, left the Belgrade-Swanboro Highway near White Oak School and went through Mrs. Jennie Stroud's yard and living room, the sheriff reported.

The automobile stopped in the living room of the home. Marshall stated that Jones has been charged with manslaughter and is lodged in the Onslow County Jail. No bond has been set yet, Sheriff Marshall said.

Deputies E. S. Smith and James Marshburn worked with the Highway Patrol in the investigation, Sheriff Marshall said.

SMALLPOX EPIDEMIC AKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A small pox epidemic in central Java has killed 143 persons, the Indonesian news agency Pia reported today.

Press Institute Ends Today

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—The North Carolina Press Association's annual institute was to close today after a breakfast honoring past presidents and a business session.

One of the high points of the three-day institute came Friday when wire service reporters Reiman (Pat) Morin of the Associated Press and Merriman Smith of United Press International addressed the newsmen.

Weimar Jones of Franklin, a past press association president himself, was to address the breakfast today. His topic was "A tribute to our journalism school."

Editor and Publisher Ashley B. Futrell of the Washington (N.C.) Daily News was to preside over the business session. Morin and Smith said they do not look for a speed up in racial integration under the Kennedy administration. Morin said he expects no rapid developments, even though President Kennedy's forces are committed to advances in ending segregation.

Chief Fired GRIMESLAND — Police Chief Jessie Mack Bunting reported this afternoon the Town Board of Aldermen fired him at 1 p.m. today.

Bunting told the Daily Reflector by phone four of the town's five aldermen told him his services had been discontinued. The fifth, R. Fred Elks, was reported out of town.

Bunting's firing had been forecast earlier this week by Mayor W. Leslie Elks. The chief had arrested three men—two of them relatives of the mayor—last Saturday afternoon. All men were convicted this week on public drunkenness charges.

Guinea Armed By Iron Curtain

CONAKRY, Guinea (AP)—Iron Curtain countries have completely equipped the 2,900-man Guinea army, but it's a question just how effective President Sekou Toure's soldiers could be.

Guinean officials are secretive about their new army but insist "it is not an aggressive instrument."

Most of the armament has come from Czechoslovakia. Guineans argue that they accepted it only when the United States turned down their request for arms in 1960.

Puzzled Over Soviet Silence

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. officials were puzzled today over Moscow's failure so far to answer President Kennedy's request for postponement of the Geneva talks on the atomic test ban.

Kennedy, who wants to pause and review the disarmament scene before charting his new administration's course, asked the Soviets for a delay as one of his early official acts. He announced it at his first news conference Jan. 25.

The Geneva parley, which has been going on since November 1958, has been in recess since Dec. 5. It was scheduled to resume Feb. 7. Kennedy asked for a postponement until March 21.

NEW YORK (AP) — A Negro minister, fighting extradition to South Carolina, was attacked outside Queens County Courthouse Friday by two white men he said threatened to lynch him.

Screams by the pastor's wife drew a crowd and the men fled. The Rev. Walter M. Cavers, 51, said one of his assailants told him "if you be quiet we won't kill you here. We're going to lynch you."

Cavers, who has been active in integration work, said a second man chimed in: "Don't kill him here. We'll kill him as soon as we get him out of here."

Lumumba Troops Ask Cease-Fire

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Congolese forces loyal to ex-Premier Patrice Lumumba appealed for a cease-fire after suffering heavy casualties bringing an end to fighting with U. N. Nigerian troops at Kindu, a U. N. spokesman reported today.

One Nigerian officer was killed and four of his men are missing in the clash that grew out of a brawl with drunken Congolese soldiers.

It broke out Thursday night when Congolese troops opened fire on a party of Nigerians at Kindu, a town in Lumumbist-controlled Kivu Province.

The Nigerians returned the fire and killed six Congolese troops. Fighting broke out again the next morning when Congolese troops ambushed a Nigerian detachment and killed the Nigerian officer.

The 200 Nigerians then withdrew to their headquarters under the command of a British officer and were besieged by more than 1,500 Congolese troops for the rest of the day.

The Congolese poured mortar fire into the complex of buildings making up the headquarters but the United Nations said there were no further Nigerian casualties.

The U. N. spokesman said the Congolese suffered "heavy casualties" but was unable to give details of dead or wounded. Around 5 p. m. Friday the Congolese asked for a cease-fire which was immediately arranged, the spokesman said.

Space Chimp Apparently Has Unpleasant Memories

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Space chimp Ham flies back to his training base at Holloman Air Force Base, N.M., today for extensive examination which could determine whether man is ready to make a short rocket ride into space.

Officials are reasonably certain after a preliminary examination that human could have survived the 156-mile-high trip that Ham took in a Project Mercury space capsule on Tuesday.

The cheerful chimp came through the experience in apparently excellent condition. But medical men want to observe him over a long period of time to see if there are any late effects. Ham showed up at a press conference Friday and seemed to enjoy himself. He played patty cake, playfully chewed on the finger of a handler, and alternately smiled and grimaced at the newsmen.

But when two veterinarians tried to place him in a couch like the one he rode into space, he screamed, balked and clung to his handler. This indicated that perhaps he has some unpleasant memories about the trip which he connects with the couch.

A study of data showed Ham's heartbeat accelerated slightly on two two-second occasions during his 16½-minute flight at 5,800 miles an hour—once at maximum acceleration of the Redstone rocket and again when extreme reentry stresses buffeted the capsule. Otherwise Ham's body functions were normal.

Cavers was bruised but not seriously injured. The two men, plus a man at the wheel of a station wagon, drove off when the crowd gathered.

Friday night, police issued an alarm for the arrest of Harvey William Maners of Rock Hill, S.C., on charges of felonious assault and attempted kidnapping. Authorities said Maners was the registered owner of the station wagon identified by Cavers.

The minister, who held a pastorate in Charlotte, N.C., was involved in a fatal auto accident on March 18, 1958, in York, S.C. His car struck and killed William S. Dickson, 33, a white man. Cavers was sentenced to 18 months for vehicular homicide. While free in $5,000 bail pending Feb. 23

Rose High Events

By CRAIG WORTHINGTON
A mass meeting of the UCYM tomorrow night at the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church will conclude this year's observance of Youth Week. Each person who attends has been asked to bring sandwiches. Drinks will be furnished at the church.

In keeping with the theme for the week—Into All the World Go the Gospel—UCYMs will present a short play called "The Waves." Ruth Clark has been directing this production.

Louis Jones, vice president, has served this year as chairman of Youth Week. Aiding him have been the other officers: Myrtle Moon Bilbro, president; Jean Crawford, secretary; and John Lanche, treasurer; and the advisers for the group: Miss Sally Davis and the Reverend Carlton F. Hirsch.

Meetings thus far this week have been very successful. More than 250 people attended the banquet last Sunday night to hear the Reverend and Mrs. Kenneth Jones tell of their experiences in the Congo as missionaries. A large group also was on hand for the breakfast Wednesday morning which was preceded by a short service.

PTA Meeting
Svend Eric Plum, Rose High's exchange student from Copenhagen, Denmark, was featured at the PTA meeting Thursday night in the high school cafeteria.

Several Rose High students also presented musical numbers for the program. A clarinet quartet, including Jan Coward, Judy Batcher, Wanda Smith, and Lane Ferris, played Cole Porter's "In the Still of the Night."

Jake Gaskins, student of Miss Eva Hodges, played another of his original piano compositions. Jake presented his first, "Metropolitan Midnight," at an assembly earlier this year. Craig Worthington sang Gershwin's "I Got Plenty of Nothin'."

Mrs. Earl Beach, high school choral director, accompanied this solo. Ed Waldrop, chairman of the program committee, introduced Eric to the group. He explained the part of the American Field Service in bringing Eric to America.

Eric told the group that over a year ago his mother pointed out to him a newspaper article concerning foreign exchange students. After several applications and many interviews, many of them in English, Eric learned in July that he would come to Greenville to live with the Smileys and attend Rose High.

The Smileys wrote me a very nice letter which gave me a fine impression of them, of Greenville, and of America," he stated.

Eric explained Denmark's political structure and gave a general description of the geographic and economic structure of the country. He explained the Danish school system, which is compulsory for both boys and girls from the ages of 7-14. The structure of their school system is somewhat similar to that in America.

From other foreign exchange students, Eric learned much about the clothes and customs of the American people. He also learned much about Greenville before he came, so that he was not a complete stranger here.

After spending his first week at Rest Haven, Eric was ready to begin his new school year in America. He recalled that "it took him quite a while to realize that he was finally in America."

At first he was slightly nervous and had some trouble in understanding his classmates and in remembering their names and faces. Soon, however, he was able to hold his own with all of his new friends.

Dating was also something new for him. In Denmark the boys and girls begin dating in couples only after they reach college age.

"I had to learn how to date," he said. When asked after the program how one learns to date, he practically broke up the meeting by observing, "Well, Scott has had quite an experience in dating."

Eric still is not completely used to the commercials which interrupt television at all hours. Television in Denmark is not run commercially at all here.

Eric chose to subject this year which he believed would help him best to understand the American way of life. He is very enthusiastic about football, which Denmark does not have. He believes that sports make people work very hard and is happy to be on the Rose High wrestling squad.

In closing, Eric thanked all of those who had helped to bring him to America. He said that when he got home he would spend many hours in telling of America and that he "wouldn't give a million for my experiences."

Eric then answered many questions which members of the audience asked.

Orren E. Dowd, Rose High principal, then introduced Dr. and Mrs. Smiley and George S. McRorie, senior English instructor who is serving as counselor for Eric this year.

Dr. Grover Everett, president, adjourned the meeting with thanks to those who had helped with the foreign student program, especially Mrs. Hubert Bryant, who served as chairman.

Report Cards
According to word from the administration, Rose High students will receive report cards for the third six-week period Monday afternoon.

These report cards are doubly important because they include the grades made on the mid-term examinations, the third marking period grades, and the average in each subject for the first semester.

The office and faculty requests that the report cards be signed and returned the following day.

Personals
Leigh Tenley Ayers of Charlotte is improving at Presbyterian Hospital after an emergency operation Monday. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Alice Ayers.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Bowen and daughter Cynthia are making their home in Greenville following Mr. Bowen's discharge from service. They will reside at 109 Paris Ave. Miss Bowen is the former Patricia Coward of Greenville.

Mrs. J. G. Riddick is a patient in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Lerman Porter underwent surgery Friday morning in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Judge A Book By Its Cover Cleanliness
Do your children soil and tear their book covers soon after school starts? It's worthwhile to spend a few pennies more on durable, washable plastic covers which last for several years.

Although they can be wiped often with a well-lathered sponge, occasionally these book covers need a real bath. Immerse them in soap or detergent suds, using a brush on difficult spots. To clean those hard-to-reach corners and folds inside the flaps, use a bottle brush—or an orange stick or toothpick wrapped with cotton.

Moose Buffet
The menu for Sunday's buffet at the Greenville Moose Lodge will consist of barbecued chicken, country style steak, brunswick stew, creamed potatoes, french fried potatoes, corn, slaw, celery hearts, pickles, olives, pickle relish, rolls, french bread, butter, Jello, coconut cream pudding, milk and coffee. There will be movies for the children.

Masonic Notice
Greenville Lodge No. 284, A.F.&A.M., will have a stated communication Monday, Feb. 6, at 7:30 p.m. Supper will be served at 6:30 p.m. All Master Meetings are cordially invited.

Homemaking Program Offered By ECC Club

The Home Economics Club of East Carolina College is carrying on during the current school year a program of activities aimed at benefiting students interested in the science and art of homemaking. One-hundred thirty-one students are now participating in the work of the organization, which is sponsored by the college department of home economics.

One meeting is scheduled for each month of the school year. Speakers include faculty members, visiting home economists, townspeople, and students at the college.

The International Scholarship Fund of the American Home Economics Association, which is used to bring women from other countries to the United States for study in colleges and universities, has been a beneficiary of the Christmas sale sponsored by the college Home Economics Club for the past several years. A Korean Orphanage, through arrangements with CARE, was also aided by the East Carolina home economics students.

Other members include the following from Pitt County: Eva Jean Elks, Grimesland; Carolyn Gaskins, Greenville; Dorothy Anne Groet, Grifton; June Hadcock, Grimesland; Camilla Henderson, Greenville; Marlene Mewborn, Farmville; and Barbara Pollard, Greenville.

It's as important to adhere to the daily bath habit during the cold months as during the sizzling summer. That's because overheated rooms and heavy clothing combine to make you as "warm" and perspire-y in January as in July.

Co-Hostesses Entertain Club

Mrs. Charles Horne, Sr. and Mrs. H. G. Porter were hostesses to the members of the Round Table Book Club at a luncheon Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Horne. They were assisted in serving by Mrs. Charles Horne, Jr.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. D. L. Moore, Mrs. Robert Fountain, 1st vice president, presided over a short business session. She introduced and welcomed Mrs. John Fleming, former member of the Club, as a special guest.

The program for the afternoon was given by Mrs. Porter, who chose as her subject "The Monastery of St. Bernard of Sacramenia."

This monastery was originally built in Spain in the year 1141. It was the first Spanish monastery and for many years it served the Cistercian Order of Monks, being named for Bernard, a dedicated Monk of the Order. Ninety-nine years to bring to completion, Mrs. Porter stated.

In 1835, it was confiscated by the Spanish government and sold to a farmer. His use of it for his farm needs saved it from oblivion. It was forgotten until an agent of William Randolph Hearst, American publisher, found it and recognized it as one of the finest examples in existence of Romanesque and early Gothic architecture, and one of the great art treasures of the world.

Mrs. Porter said after Mr. Hearst's death in 1951 the Monastery was purchased by two Cincinnati, Ohio business men, E. Raymond Moss and William Edsermott. They chartered a freighter and shipped the stones to Port Everglades, Fla., where it was completely restored to its original beauty, at a cost of $1,500,000.

Today it stands on 20 acres of land just north of Miami, Fla.

Bill Cochran Talks To Club
Mrs. Badger Clark and Mrs. Ford McGowan were hostesses to members and guests of the Delphinian Book Club at the home of Mrs. Badger Clark.

The tables were appointed with grapes and fall flowers. As guests and members arrived they were served tomato juice cocktails after which they found their places at individual tables. A three course luncheon was served.

Mrs. Bob Messner, vice president, conducted a short business meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. Jack Minges. After the business session, Mrs. Messner turned the program over to Mr. Bill Cochran who talked on "Urban Renewal and Public Housing."

Books were exchanged and the meeting was adjourned.

More Realistic Approach In Order

When a person is sentenced to 643 years plus life imprisonment for a series of crimes, and under such sentences is eligible for parole in about 16 years, there is a strong indication that at some point our sense of justice has gotten somewhat off balance.

Perhaps you read recently that such an incident occurred in Houston, Texas. After a series of crimes a 19-year-old was sentenced to six 99-year terms, two 12-year terms, one 10-year term and a life term in prison. All except the life term were to be served at the same time, and under that arrangement under the Texas law, the criminal would be eligible for parole in approximately 16 years.

Frankly, we thought at first the "16" was a typographical error. Surely a man who had committed crimes which justified such unusually heavy sentences would not normally be expected to be eligible for parole in 16 years. So we asked the Associated Press to check back with Houston where the story originated. And the AP, with its usual promptness and efficiency in running down details, notified us later in the day that the original story was correct.

There was no typographical error. The man will be eligible for parole in 16 years.

Conceivably, a similar situation could occur in North Carolina. A check with the Paroles Board in Raleigh brought forth the information that under the law the board may consider a prisoner for parole after he has served 10 years of a life sentence. Since, in theory at least, life imprisonment is the longest term for which a person can be sentenced, the board could parole any prisoner after 10 years, unless there were consecutive sentences involved. In the case of two life sentences, one following the other, it might be 20 years before a person was eligible for parole consideration.

It seems a little ridiculous to sentence a man to 500 or 600 years in prison, plus life, if under a paroles system he would be eligible to be released from prison in 10 to 15 years. Would it not be more logical to give him a more realistic sentence, or else adopt a more realistic paroles pattern to apply to such cases?

While the Texas case is obviously extreme with respect to the sentences, it is likely that a number of other states similar sentences under similar circumstances would result in a persons' being eligible for parole in about the same length of time.

Research Again Takes Limelight

By LYNN NISBET

RESEARCH—When Governor Hodges remarked at a news conference four or five years ago that "research is the handmaiden of industry," Ed Rankin, then his secretary, injected the comment that "research is itself a great industry." Formal dedication of the Chemstrand Research Center in the Research Triangle Park proved the accuracy of Rankin's observation.

The multi-million dollar center is the most modern and one of the largest of hundreds of buildings and laboratories devoted entirely to research. Figures are not at hand, if indeed they have been compiled, as to total capital investment and number of persons employed in these research centers. The dollars can be counted in hundreds of millions and the employees by tens of thousands. Research is big business.

Participating in the dedication ceremonies at Chemstrand Center were Edward A. O'Neal Jr., president of the corporation; Governor Terry Sanford, Secretary of Commerce and former Governor Luther Hodges, with Dr. Paul M. Gross, professor of chemistry at Duke and president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, making the principal address.

He titled his speech "The Fifth Estate Comes to North Carolina." He told the story about Edmund Burke's famous speech in which he noted the three "estates" in Parliament—the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the common people—and said that in the reports' gallery "there sits a fourth estate, more important by far than they all." Then he quoted Arthur D. Little as identifying scientists as the "fifth estate" in these words:

"This Fifth Estate is composed of those having the simplicity to wonder, the ability to question, the power to generalize, and the capacity to apply. It is, in short, the company of thinkers, workers, expounders and practitioners upon which the world is absolutely dependent for the preservation and advancement of that organized knowledge which we call 'science.'"

He traced the progress in science during the past few years, especially in the South, but warned against a trend toward a "species of industrial or technological colonization of a region backward in its overall development."

(A member of the Chemstrand staff wondered if Dr. Gross realized the significance of his fifth estate reference. This Center is the fifth "estate" of Chemstrand. The others are at Decatur, Ala.; Greenwood, S. C.; Pensacola, Fla., all manufacturing plants; and the main administrative offices in New York.)

SANFORD—Governor Sanford endeared himself to the audience when he cut out most of his prepared speech and spoke less than five minutes off the cuff. But he got his full speech made, just the same. President O'Neal traced the development of research and Dr. Gross adequately emphasized the Sanford theme of education as the basis of all progress.

HODGES—Secretary Hodges was in his element. He interspersed serious comment with humor and wise cracks. Such as confessing that he probably got his job because his son is at Harvard. And the little story about getting all 18 public relations folks assigned to the various agencies in the Department of Commerce together for the first time—and introducing them to each other. Since emphasis is on research, high in basketball, he suggested a basketball research program.

MAGIC—Almost 20 years ago your reporter visited Fontana Dam when the great TVA structure was just getting started. The approach was over miles of narrow crooked mountain roads winding through the primeval forests of the Great Smoky Mountains. Jeeps were not common then, but a jeep was only a vehicle suited for the roads. Then all at once through an opening in the trees the dam construction project came into view. Giant cranes and trucks and concrete mixers and dozens of men building the highest dam in Eastern America. It was uncanny, but that it is true is attested by the completed dam and the sprawling Fontana lake.

Something of the same kind of feeling occurs as one approaches the Chemstrand Research Center and the Hanes Memorial Building, housing the Research Institute, half a mile or so away. From Raleigh or Durham or Chapel Hill, the points of the triangle, there are several miles of ordinary highways, running through scrubby forests across land of no great productive value. Then short stretches of brand new highways, looking almost like bleeding incisions on the peaceful countryside. And then—

Smack jab in your face a multi-million dollar building, as modern as the dream of a Hollywood futurist artist, looking as fragile as an egg shell, but actually as sturdy as the old granite capitol building. And inside, the most modern equipment, conceived in the minds of scientists who were charged with the travail of countless failures before desired results were obtained. And these are not end results, because the purpose of the whole business is to assure further progress in civilization.

Cannot Ignore Sombre Facets Of Their Deed

"Sound effects" of the past two weeks fortunately included no "splash" as some honest seaman walked the plank into the sun-kissed Caribbean. But statements by the skipper of the Santa Maria indicate danger to life and limb were ever-present aboard ship while "rebel" Henrique Galvao was in control.

According to the captain, a minority of the Galvao gang was Portuguese . . . the rest being of other nationalities (including Cuban, if there is special significance attachable). Should this be born out, the revolutionary label proclaimed by Galvao should undergo a close inquiry.

Nor should the fact a ship's officer was slain by guns of the adventurers be forgotten in the epilogue yet to be written. That was as coldblooded a deed as any by a pirate of old. It was also indicative of intent to kill others who might resist.

Any form of asylum granted the self-styled rebels cannot include the ignoring more sombre facets of their deed. A previous observation in these columns, that the seizure of the Santa Maria represented a very shortsighted deed, is now confirmed.

The hostage passengers proved to be more of a liability than an asset. The possession of a ship with literally no place to go, was no prize. The feat of seizing a Portuguese ship failed to rally support anywhere, least of all in Portugal. The daring act of seizure left a dark cloud over the whole band involved. The futures of the participants are not what you might call secure.

If this was the best that opponents of Portugal's iron man could come up with, he should be able to look forward to retiring when and if he pleases. His present foes just don't have what it takes.

Fine Steps, If They Work Out

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy, as part of his bang-bang action to get his new administration moving fast, has taken two steps which will be fine—if they work.

He has set up a task-force to pull together policies and programs on Latin America. And, as he disclosed in his economic message Thursday, he will create a 21-man labor-management group with a broad field to work in.

The task of this latter group, he said, will advise the President on actions that may be taken by:

- Labor, management and the public which will promote free and responsible collective bargaining, industrial peace, sound wage policies, sound price policies and stability, a high standard of living, increased productivity, and America's competitive position in world markets.

The government is to be a full partner in all this with Labor Secretary Arthur Goldberg and Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges rotating the chairmanship between them yearly.

It sounds good, but the problem lies in getting the labor and management representatives to agree on very much. They've had trouble agreeing in the past. The public will also be represented.

During the presidential campaign Kennedy set up task forces to consider dilemmas facing him if he became president and recommendations to solve them.

One of these was headed by Adolf A. Berle, Jr., a Franklin D. Roosevelt brain-truster who served in the government from 1933 to 1948 and is a specialist on Latin America. Kennedy made public a number of his task forces' reports in other fields. He has not released the one from the Berle group on Latin America, perhaps because of too dismal a picture of conditions there.

Berle will head the new task force, which has these members:

- Theodore C. Achilles, counselor of the State Department; Thomas C. Mann, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs; William Bundy, deputy assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs; and Lincoln Gordon, an economic professor at Harvard.

During the campaign Kennedy complained that "dozens of U.S. agencies" are involved in this government's various efforts in the Latin-American field and indicated they needed pulling together, plus new programs.

He recalls the roles of the youthful leaders of 60 years ago—the older real-war leaders as "mummies." The turn of the century brought a turn of North Carolina's fortunes. The state began to develop a new industrial and agricultural vitality which killed North Carolina's old nickname, "The Rip Van Winkle State."

But Dr. Poe is right when he adds a postscript to his hopes for the sixties: "I sometimes fear that the lure of big salaries in great corporations is constantly attracting young men of great gifts when more of them should put these gifts at the service of statesmanship, education, the ministry, medicine and philanthropy."

What does this say about our civilization? Sixty years ago the best of our talent was being channeled where service above self was the motto. Today far too much of our best talent concludes that a life of private ease is preferable to a life of service to the ideas and institutions which make our civilization great.

It is better to live a rich life than to die a rich man," Dr. Poe recalls. How many Tar Heels are remembering that?

Gone with the wind (or with something else):

Publisher of The Daily Reflector carefully placed a thermometer outside the building yesterday to record the falling degrees.

Few minutes later, staff member walked outside to ascertain how much the mercury was falling . . .

And some passerby had already relieved the newspaper of the responsibility of further maintenance and care of the thermometer.

We presume most readers are familiar with a "Save the Bluebird" campaign which was promoted about a year ago, and during which we gave instructions for building birdhouses for bluebirds (so the bluebirds would be saved).

It seems a little late for this time, but for perhaps the next time this will be a forewarning: there are persons in Greenville interested in all birds' welfare, and who persistently remind us to remind others to please feed the birds when it ices and snows.

The city pretty well provides for the sea gulls at the city dump (in more blunt terms) but no one provides too well for the little wrens and Sparrows who have been futilely pecking at frozen pyracanthia berries these past days.

Another thing about the ice and snow. The day before the weatherman forecasts that ice or sleet or snow may come, ladies of Greenville descend upon the grocery stores in droves. Loudly proclaiming that they had better get provisions before they and their families are snowed in. (We know because we were doing the same thing.) As if it ever really snows that much here.

Changing the subject, Henry Howard will never again take a picture of a prize-winning photographer (Stuart Savage), at least not with two women reporters standing by to help arrange poses, pick strings off suits, make people smile, hold up shoulders, arrange shoes in the right position; with an end result of general disorder, complete uneasiness and a feeling of being persecuted, insecure and substandard. We are naturally referring to the men involved, certainly not the women.

Adlai Stevenson, Ambassador to the United Nations, said: "I would hope very much that we could achieve peaceful relations and restore harmony and security to the world, and that, of course, would include China. This is not an expression of policy or details as to how that is to be achieved. It is an expression of general hope. Our mission here is the peace and security of the world and China is a large part of the world."

Pierre Salinger, the President's press secretary, said: "Mr. Stevenson's expressing his own personal views."

The President, in his State of the Union Address, said: "Our greatest challenge is still the world that lies beyond the cold war — but the first great obstacle is still our relations with the Soviet Union and Communist China. We must never be lulled into believing that either power has yielded its ambitions for world domination — ambitions which they forcefully restated only a short time ago. On the contrary, our task is to convince them that aggression and subversion will not be profitable routes to pursue those ends."

Policy On The Kremlin

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

After Camp David, the relations between the United States and Soviet Russia deteriorated. This was largely due to troubles within the Soviet Universal State in which the voice of Red China rose to a challenging roar. Mao Tse-tung publicly announced his antagonism to Khrushchev's revisionism — that is, his retreat from the Leninist concept that capitalism must be destroyed by war and that the United States must be the principal and immediate target.

Khrushchev insisted that Communist success could be achieved by various ingenuities, without war. His doctrine may be described as "Let you and him fight." Thus, Soviet Russia took whatever advantage it could of the American economy on the Gold Market; it organized the Cuban Revolution and attempted to establish a pro-Castro propaganda in every Latin-American country and created disturbances in Japan.

Khrushchev made two salient errors: He violated decent manners at the Paris Summit Conference and sorely offended the people of the United States by his violent attacks upon President Eisenhower and by the boorishness of his conduct in the United Nations.

The Kennedy Administration has made a variety of statements on the Russian situation. In his inaugural address, President Kennedy said:

" . . . to those nations who would make themselves our adversary, we offer not a pledge but a request: that both sides begin anew the quest for peace, before the dark powers of destruction unleashed by science engulf all humanity in planned or accidental self-destruction. "We dare not tempt them with weakness. For only when our arms are sufficient beyond doubt can we be certain beyond doubt that they will never be employed."

Adlai Stevenson, Ambassador to the United Nations, said: "I would hope very much that we could achieve peaceful relations and restore harmony and security to the world, and that, of course, would include China. This is not an expression of policy or details as to how that is to be achieved. It is an expression of general hope. The biggest stumbling block is the Kennedy pledge that "this Administration will not distort the value of the dollar in any fashion." To many Congressmen, the lowering of the interest rate, or the use of deficit spending to subsidize housing, might mean more inflation, which would distort the value of the dollar.

So Congress may go slow in pushing through a housing program. Furthermore, Mr. Kennedy's nomination of Albert F. Weaver to be head of the housing program may slow things even further because Mr. Weaver is an official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, an organization not very popular with certain Congressmen.

Prediction: Nevertheless, Congress will do something to stimulate housing construction. It may be considerably less than asked but enough to support many new construction enterprises.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

A MEANING FOR ALL AGES
The Book of Revelation is a much abused and misused section of the Bible. People either over-emphasize its teachings or neglect them. Those who over-emphasize them keep looking up into heaven—expecting a new world to descend upon them shortly. Those who neglect the teachings of the Book of Revelation fail to appreciate the glory and triumph which God has promised the faithful.

This ancient book came out of a great ordeal. It was addressed to churches and persons who had passed through inconceivable tribulations. They had been set upon and persecuted in ways about which we moderns know nothing. The underlying message of the book is that God has the last word. In the end, He and his kingdom of love will triumph. And love is not a weak sentimental matter. Love is God's nature in action. It is God's purposes being fulfilled. It is a power so great that the powers which modern science has released in its atomic experiments are like the striking of a match or the popping of a firecracker as compared with the almighty power of the God of love pressing on to the triumph of his will.

The destiny which the human race confronts is a destiny of hope. God has made us for triumph, not for defeat. "Eye had not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Boom In Construction Shapes Up

By ELMER ROESSNER

If you are planning to go into business, consider the construction field. It looks as if it may be the boomiest field over the next four years.

President Kennedy's State of the Union Message put heavy stress on both housing and plant construction. Early in the message he promised to offer legislation "to stimulate housing and construction...to offer tax incentives for sound plant investment."

Later on he declared: "We will do what must be done. Our cities are being engulfed in squalor. Twelve long years after Congress declared our goal to be a decent home and a suitable environment for every American family, we still have 25,000,000 Americans living in substandard housing. A new housing program under a new Housing and Urban Affairs Department will be needed this year."

SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION WORK

"Our classrooms contain 2,000,000 more children than they properly have room for..."

This segment of the message appears to reflect the Samuelson report, a report by a Kennedy task force headed by Professor Paul A. Samuelson, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

It dealt with many phases of the economy, but placed great stress on the need to stimulate housing construction. The report said that, unlike the recessions of 1954 and 1958, home building has not responded to easier mortgage credit.

However, it went on, there is "the need for housing a few years from now when the wartime babies move into the house-buying bracket."

The report recommended that mortgage rates (now 5 1/2 per cent—said—more—might—be brought down to say, 4 1/2 per cent interest."

HOW MUCH HOUSING?

Neither the Kennedy message nor the Samuelson report set a target number of new housing units. There were approximately 1,275,000 units started last year, compared with 1,531,300 in 1959, the "second highest" in history, topped only in 1950.

But if the Administration succeeds in increasing the number of units started, it will surely aim to top the best year of the Eisenhower Administration, which would mean beating that 1,531,300 figure.

That's a lot of work and profiting for builders, for the furniture industry and for lots of other industries. It would mean more jobs for workers, more new developments, more miles of streets and conduits, yes, and even more jobs for cops and firemen. And on top of that, there will be all the other construction work promised by the Administration.

But there's a big "if." All this will take place if Congress goes along with the Kennedy pro-

Atlantic Christian Cops 62-61 Win In Final Seconds

The time was Wednesday afternoon, February 1, 1961. East Carolina basketball coach Earl Smith, beaming over the newly-acquired second place rating of his club, issued a stiff and sincere warning. "Watch out for Atlantic Christian. This is the team I'm worried about right now."

Friday night, February 3, an invading Atlantic Christian quint, unruffled by a setback the previous night, sailed to an early lead, smothered a spectacular East Carolina second half comeback, and walked off the court with a 62-61 upset of the North State's second place team.

The victory for seventh-place ACC marked the third time in two weeks that the league's second place club fell to the giant-killers of Wilson. Appalachian received the sting twice. Fighting the battle of its life, East Carolina rallied following intermission and stormed from a 12-point deficit to go ahead on several occasions.

But the brilliant comeback was nullified when Jack Boyd, the North State's top scorer, hit on a two-handed set shot with just seven seconds remaining, giving ACC the final margin of 62-61.

Trailing for the largest portion of the game, the Pirates went ahead 61-60 with only 34 seconds left, on a field goal by Don Smith.

The Bulldogs, boasting a sensational outside shooting attack, waited until the final seconds before getting away a shot, but Boyd sank his 30-footer without touching the rim.

East Carolina called for time out but lost the ball out of bounds before getting away a last desperation shot.

Both teams displayed a tense atmosphere in the early minutes of the game and after 10 minutes of play it was tied at 8-8.

The Bulldogs, missing their first seven shots from the charity line, caught fire when Dick Knox hit on a long-jumper some fire into the Bucs, hitting on two straight field goals to cut the gap to 22-16. Boyd, Knox, and Bobby Atkinson fired in goals just before the half-time buzzer to give ACC a 28-16 lead—its biggest of the game.

East Carolina lost little time in whittling the lead after in-the big gunner heading the comeback.

A jump shot by the Kingston junior and another two-pointer on a fast break closed the margin to 31-28 after three minutes of the final half.

Jerry Fritz led a charge that sent ACC back into a 10-point lead, 40-30.

Field goals by Lewis and Benny Bowes plus a free toss by Lacy West narrowed the spread to 41-39 with 10:38 showing.

One minute later Bill Otte hit a field goal, tying it at 45-45, and Don Smith, held scoreless until the final ten minutes, made good a jump shot and the Pirates were in front for the first time.

Another basket by Otte gave EC its biggest bulge but it was short-lived when Fritz made good a three-point play and Dale Fillingame tipped in a two-pointer. Otte made good on one of two free throws and it was tied 50-50. ACC jumped back in front on Boyd's field goal and led until the final minute when Smith put EC ahead by one, 61-60.

EC's dramatic shot climaxed the thriller and all but killed

ACC's chance of the North State title.

Fast Carolina remained in a second place tie on the strength of a 9-4 record.

Boyd was held below his league-leading average of 20 points per game but his 18 was high for both teams. Bill Otte netted 15 for ECC.

Dale Fillingame, a 6-8 sophomore, pulled in 11 rebounds, most of these coming in the first half, to help pace the ACC victory.

East Carolina could muster only five of 30 field goal attempts in the first half but finished the night with a 35.2 shooting per cent.

ACC, banking on its outside game, hit 26 of 60 from the floor for 43.3 per cent.

Manhattan Track Coach Predicts Record Two-Mile

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Manhattan track coach George Eastment, never one to sound an optimistic note when he can't think of something gloomy, predicted today his two-mile relay team would break 7:30 indoors.

Now this is no mean feat. It's akin to breaking the four-minute mile on boards.

But Friday night in the Millrose games in Madison Square Garden, Eastment's quartet whipped to a 7:32.8 clocking, breaking the 19-year-old indoor record of 7:33.9 set by Seton Hall on a faster nine-lap track.

Indoor standards are not recognized by the international federation.

"I knew we could break the record," said the happy Eastment. "But believe it or not, I wasn't sure we could win the race. With Holy Cross and Villanova in it, I figured that any of the top teams might break the record."

Many coaches have said down through the years (and their predictions stood up until Friday night) that the Seton Hall record never would be broken unless someone found a nine-lap track again. The Garden's track, along with most of the standard indoor tracks in the country, measures 11 laps to mile and those extra turns can hurt a team trying for a record.

"Matter of fact," said East-

ment, who helped coach the U.S. Olympic team last year, "I thought we might break it back in 1938 when Tom Murphy (a good half-miler) was anchoring the team. As it was, we couldn't do any better than 7:36.1."

Eastment kept the quartet—John Corry, Kye Courtney, Larry St. Clair and Art Evans out of the individual events to concentrate on the relay and it paid off. Corry was clocked in 1:55.1, Courtney in 1:54.2, St. Clair in 1:51.8, and Evans in 1:51.7.

Holy Cross was second, about 25 yards back, and Villanova third.

Otherwise, the best performances were turned in by 22-year-old Dave Jones of Eastern Michigan, who tied the American indoor 60-yard hurdles record in 7.2 seconds and Wilma Rudolph of Tennessee A&I State, the triple Olympic gold medal winner, who equalled her own women's indoor 60-yard American mark of 6.9.

Milt Campbell and Jones were the only athletes to hit 7 flat for the 60 hurdles before Friday night. So Jones became the first number runner ever to do it twice.

Miss Rudolph set her 6.9 standard two weeks ago in Los Angeles. She tied it twice, in both the semifinals and finals.

Istvan Rozsavolgyi, running his second indoor race since stepping off the plane from Hungary less than a week ago, won the mile in 4:06, beating out Ernie Culliffe of Stanford.

John Thomas cleared 7 feet in the high jump—his 57th seven-footer—but couldn't get over 7-2.

Other winners included Jerry Siebert of California in the half-mile (1:51.9), Jim Wedderburn, of New York University in the 600 (1:12.2), Henry Wadsworth of Florida in the pole vault (15-4) Frank Budd of Villanova in the 60-yard dash (6.2), Al Lawrence of Houston in the 2-mile (8:52.8) and Ralph Boston of Tennessee State in the broad jump (25-9).

Al Mengert Lead Golfers By Stroke In Palm Springs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—Al Mengert might find the last two rounds of the Palm Springs Golf Classic about as delightful as Ingemar Johansson found his last two rounds with Floyd Patterson.

But whatever happens, it's a real tribute to the 31-year-old professional that he got this far.

Although his tournament appearances have been infrequent and rarely rewarding, Mengert was a stroke ahead of his nearest rival today going into the fourth round of this $50,000, 90-hole event.

But that nearest rival was a good one — Bob Rosburg. And so were some of the others joined in the close pursuit.

Mengert, one-time amateur star from Spokane, Wash., and more recently from Phoenix, Ariz., took the lead Thursday with a stunning 6-under-par 65 at Thunderbird Country Club, Friday, playing at Bermuda-Dunes, he got off to a brilliant start with a 32 on the front nine, then polished off the back nine in par 36 and came in with a 4-under-par 68. His 54-hole score of 201 was 14 under par.

Rosburg, playing on the same course, also checked in with a 68 for a three-day total of 202.

Ken Venturi, who shot a 67 at Bermuda Dunes, was another stroke back at 203, and distance driver George Bayer, who got a 69 at Bermuda, was next at 204.

Four players — Bill Casper Jr., Paul Harney, Jay Hebert and Billy Maxwell — were tied at 206.

Arnold Palmer, who came on with a flourish on the last day and won this event last year, was tied at 207 with Art Wall Jr. and Bob Harris.

The 127 pros in the field are playing on a different course each of the first four days. The 60 who survive the fourth-round cut will play it out Sunday on still another course, Tamarisk Country Club.

Mengert has never won a tournament on the PGA tour but he took the Metropolitan (New York) Open and the Arizona Open last year.

Mengert said he was upset early in the round Friday after discovering he had misplaced a money clip that was his souvenir from the Metropolitan Open. Also upsetting was the fact that the missing clip enclosed $200.

Mengert had just taken his second shot on the 14th, stopping about 5 feet from the cup, when his wife came by to tell him the clip had been found in the clubhouse dining room.

"I was so relieved," he said, "that I missed the putt."

Duke Seeks Revenge Over Tar Heels In Top ACC Battle Tonight

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Second-ranked St. Bonaventure got its revenge against third-ranked Bradley Thursday night in New York. Now it's fourth-ranked Duke's turn against fifth-rated North Carolina in the Saturday feature of a showdown week in college basketball.

The Blue Devils of Duke and the Tar-Heels of North Carolina play at Durham, N.C. tonight in a rematch of the final of December's Dixie Classic, won by North Carolina 76-71.

That loss is the only blot in 16 games this season for Duke and one that probably will have to be avenged if Coach Vic Bubas' club is to join St. Bonaventure as the chief national challenger to top-ranked Ohio State.

Another victory for North Carolina could catapult the Tar Heels into the same challenging position — about the only consolation left for a team that has been placed on NCAA probation and is ineligible for post-season competition.

The Dixie Classic victory is part of a 12-game winning streak North Carolina (14-2) has fashioned since splitting its first four games of the season. Besides national ranking, also at stake is the regular season lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference—result of which determines merely the seedings for the post-season ACC tournament. Each is 7-0 in conference play.

Top-ranked Ohio State takes its 20-game winning streak to Ann Arbor for an afternoon Big Ten test with sub-par Michigan, and three other members of the top 10 are scheduled.

Sixth-ranked Iowa (12-2) challenges Cincinnati (15-3) and the Bearcats' 10-game unbeaten string in a Chicago Stadium doubleheader that also matches Detroit with Chicago Loyola. Eighth ranked Southern California, 78-63 victor Friday night over Big Five foe UCLA, plays the Uclians again, and 10th-ranked Kansas State resumes Big Eight conference tussling at Oklahoma.

LaSalle and St. Joseph's (Pa.) battle for the Middle Atlantic Conference lead, Mississippi State's Southeastern Conference leaders entertain LSU, Dayton is at Memphis State, and New York University meets Syracuse at Utica, N.Y., before the national television cameras, in other noteworthy games.

Southern Cal's victory was the Trojans' eighth straight and fifth without a loss in the league. The Trojans opened a big lead over UCLA and Stanford (both 2-2) as the latter was trounced 71-47 by Washington. John Rudometkoff, 10th among the nation's major college scorers, led the Southern Cal attack with 27 points, 20 in the second half.

In the first of a two-night test between two tournament-conscious independents, Oregon (11-5) defeated Oregon State (12-5) in overtime, 58-55. Leon Hayes scored three free throws in the waning minutes of the overtime to give Oregon its sixth straight victory.

Louisville (17-3) and Indiana (10-3), another pair of independents with post-season ideas scored easy victories, while Maine gained a share of the Yankee Conference lead with Connecticut.

Seventh-ranked Louisville, winding up a three-game swing through the deep South, laced Loyola of New Orleans 75-58 on 67 per cent field goal shooting and 23 points by John Turner.

Niagara, with slump-ridden Al Butler leading a second-half surge stopped Holy Cross (10-4), another tournament-hopeful 86-73. Butler totaled 18, with 15 coming in the second half, although Kennedy Glenn topped the winners with 20.

Maine (14-1) ran its Yankee record to 5-1, the same as defending champ Connecticut, with a 78-75 victory over Massachusetts. The loser broke away from a 73-73 tie in the last 45 seconds.

In the night's big upset, Stetson knocked off Miami, Fla. 76-68.

Clemson defeated Virginia 89-81 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game, and The Citadel stopped George Washington 89-72 in the South.

Santa Clara (13-6) remained unbeaten in the West Coast Athletic Conference with its third victory, 43-40 over Pepperdine. Los Angeles Loyola kept its WCAA title hopes alive with a 54-45 victory over San Jose.

U.S. Proposes Change In Lawn Tennis Tournaments

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The United States is ready to propose to the International Lawn Tennis Federation that each country be permitted to make its own decision on the open tournament problem.

For instance, if the United States wants to hold an open, okay. If Australia and England, for instance, are against it, they not only don't have to hold such an event but can forbid their players to participate in the U.S. tournament.

This is the watershed-down stand on the pressing open question which swept through the executive committee Friday night and today goes before the general meeting of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association.

George Barnes, USLTA president, says he thinks the latest idea has some chance of meeting ILTF approval.

"The suggestion last year that a few of the bigger tennis nations be permitted to try open tournaments on an experimental basis failed because it irritated the many smaller nations," Barnes said. "This new plan is more subtle — and has a much better chance."

Another part of the U.S. proposal is that a special committee work out a tournament policy in the next 90 days. This policy would be ready for submission to the international meeting.

A pattern for open competition was presented by Barnes Friday night in his annual president's message.

This is what the president calls a "quasi-open" in which amateur and professional tournaments are played concurrently — and separately — with champions and rankings determined in each division.

Then the four finalists or eight finalists or eight semifinalists of the two tournaments square off in a super-duper playoff which will be sold to the television producers for a fat sum.

Gophers Voted Top Comeback

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Is moving from last to first in the Big Ten football standings a greater comeback feat than regaining the world heavyweight boxing championship?

The nation's sports writers and broadcasters say it is on their ballots in the annual Associated Press year-end poll.

By a clear margin in the voting, the experts named Minnesota's 1960 football comeback as the greatest comeback of the year, surpassing Floyd Patterson's feat of knocking out his 1959 conqueror, Ingemar Johansson and regaining the heavyweight title.

Patterson's comeback was unique. No fighter before him ever had lost the heavyweight crown and won it back. But it's doubtful that any football team had accomplished such a complete turnaround as Minnesota's.

In 1959 the Gophers lost 7 of 9 games, winning only once in Big Ten competition. Coach Murray Warmath was hanged in effigy and old grads talked about buying up the remainder of his contract and getting a new coach.

Last season Minnesota was beaten only once in nine season games, tied Iowa for the conference title and was acclaimed as national champion in The Associated Press poll. Losing the Rose Bowl game dimmed the season's lustre only a little and Warmath was picked by his colleagues as coach of the year.

In the year-end voting, 52 of 137 writers and broadcasters listed Minnesota's comeback as No. 1 while 37 put Patterson first. On the basis of 3-2-1 scoring for first, second and third place votes, Minnesota drew 224 points and Patterson 185.

Techmen Seek Win Over Lowly Spiders

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Virginia Tech tries to improve its diminishing chances for a No. 1 finish in Southern Conference basketball tonight by winning a game on the road something it hasn't done for more than a month.

Opportunity knocks for the Techmen, 6-2 in conference play, as they meet lowly Richmond (3-7) at the Richmond Arena court where the conference's championship tournament comes off March 2-4.

Not since Jan. 3, when they scored at The Citadel, 73-63, have the Techmen won away from Blacksburg. While continuing to win at home, they've lost consecutively on the road to Alabama, to conference foes William and Mary and West Virginia, and to Wake Forest.

Tech needs a victory tonight not only to gain a little ground on league-leading West-Virginia (9-1) but to stay ahead of The Citadel, third-place Cadets (7-3), who are doggedly hanging in the battle for

Clemson Slugs Virginia 89-81

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duke entertains North Carolina tonight, hoping to avenge the 76-71 loss to the Tar Heels in the Dixie Classic title game.

The showdown between the Blue Devils ranked fourth in the nation and North Carolina, ranked fifth, is the feature game of an attractive Atlantic Coast Conference card that also has Maryland at Wake Forest and Virginia at South Carolina tonight.

North Carolina State faced West Virginia today at Charleston, W. Va., in a regionally televised game.

Clemson slugged Virginia 89-81 in a conference game Friday night.

Tonight's Duke-North Carolina battle at Durham, a 9,000-seat sellout for weeks, also will be televised by several stations in the Carolinas.

Each team takes a 7-0 conference record into the game. North Carolina has a 14-2 over-all record, and Duke is 15-1.

The loser stands a good chance of skidding to third place in the ACC standings.

Wake Forest takes an 8-1 conference mark into the game with Maryland. A victory by the Deacons would give them a 9-1 record and second place in the ACC.

These top three teams, however, will have more shots at one another before the season ends. Duke and Wake Forest collide twice. Wake Forest and North Carolina have a 2-0 tie game scheduled, and Duke and North Carolina play again on Feb. 25, the last day of the season.

Three Clemson players scored more than 20 points as the Tigers rolled to their highest total of the season.

The Tigers were paced by Chippy Patterson with 25. Tom Mahaffey scored 24 and Earl Maxwell 21. Ron Miller paced Virginia with 21.

Clemson remains in sixth place in the conference with a 2-6 record, and the Tigers are 7-12 overall. Virginia is 1-9 in the ACC and 2-16 in all games.

Foursome Title At Stake Today

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Willie Turnesa and Mrs. John Piton match strokes today with William Hyndman and Barbara Williams for the National Mixed Foursome title.

Turnesa, oldtime golfer from White Plains, N.Y., and his partner from Hamilton, Ohio, had little trouble defeating former amateur champion Dick Chapman of Palm Beach and Mary Ann Downey of Baltimore in a semifinal Friday.

The winners were 3-up at the turn and closed out the match on the 17th hole after their opponents narrowed the gap.

Hyndman, a former Walker Cup team member from Philadelphia and Miss Williams of Richmond, Calif., lost a 2-up midway advantage to Dr. William Graves and Jean Dubbin when the Miami Beach pair caught up on the 15th hole. Hyndman-Williams took No. 16 with a bogey but lost No. 17 on shots into the rough and a trap. On 18, Hyndman's 40-foot chip shot gave Miss Williams a 4-foot putt which she canned for a winning par.

the regular-season title.

Tonight's only other conference bout finds Furman (4-5) entertaining George Washington (2-4). Carrening West Virginia, 14-3 overall, bids for its 15th victory in a game today at Charleston, W.Va., against N.C. State. Other non-conference action sends Georgetown to William and Mary and Pfeiffer to Davidson. W&M is 9-7 over-all, Davidson 5-10.

VMI's scheduled conference date at The Citadel tonight was postponed to Feb. 13 because of heavy snow.

The Citadel kept the pressure on second-place Virginia Tech by clipping George Washington 89-72 in Friday night's only game. It was the third straight conference setback for the once mighty Colonials.

Gary Daniels, bidding to replace William and Mary's Jeff Cohen as the conference's top scorer, scored 22 points to pace The Citadel to victory. Jon Feldman topped GW with 19.

Two Women Hospitalized As Result Of Wreck Here

Two persons were hospitalized and about $750 damage done as the result of a two-vehicle collision north of the Tar River Bridge on N.C. 11-U.S. 13 last night about 6:45 p.m., local police reported today.

Investigators said two, 60-year-old ladies, Mrs. Lela Bullock and Mrs. Williamston were injured when a car, driven by Mrs. Bullock's son, Rufus Bullock 33, of Route 12, Robersonville, was involved in a collision with a truck.

The operator of the truck was identified as Raymond Earl Coghill, 33 of Route 5, Greenville.

Police said the mishap occurred when the truck skidded into the path of the Bullock auto. The Bullock car was headed South on N.C. 11 and the Coghill truck was traveling North, officers noted. They quoted Coghill as saying a car in front of him stopped, and when he put on brakes, his truck skidded into the path of the Bullock auto. Investigators said Coghill estimated the speed of his truck at 40 miles per hour, while Bullock said his car was traveling about 45 miles per hour when the collision occurred. Police reported Mrs. Bullock suffered fractured ribs, bruises and a concussion from the collision while the second woman received bruises and a concussion.

No charges were made following investigation of the mishap. Damage to the Bullock car was set at $500 while damage to the truck was placed at $250.

An estimated $300 damage resulted to a car operated by Ivey Ray Langley, 19 of Route 2, Greenville, police said, when it was struck by a hit and run driver on Dickinson Ave. near the intersection of Mumford Road, about 7:37 p.m. yesterday.

Police, noting Langley gave a description of the hit and run car, said a heavily damaged vehicle answering the description Langley gave was located near Guy Smith Stadium sometime later last night.

The auto found by police was registered to Ernest Hugh Brannon 21 of Route 1, Greenville. Investigators said Brannon, who could not be located last night, came to the police station today, admitted he was the operator of the vehicle and was charged with hit and run driving.

No one was injured in the collision, police said.

Ruben E. Moore of Route 2, Rocky Mount was charged with failure to yield the right of way yesterday following a collision at the intersection of Fifth and Cotanche Sts. at 12:30 p.m.

Investigating officers listed the driver of the second vehicle as Rebecca G. Cobb of 613 East 10th St.

Damage to the Cobb car was placed at $30 while damage to the Moore vehicle was said to be $100.

When war came in 1941, Miss Wong retired from film and the theatrical work and devoted all her time to United China Relief and USO activities.

Her retirement lasted 17 years, except for occasional television assignments. "Portrait in Black," her last feature film, was made a year ago and is now being shown.

Miss Wong was considered equally adept as the femme fatale or in sympathetic roles.

She was born in Los Angeles Jan. 3, 1907 and had maintained a home in Santa Monica for many years. She had never married.

Her Hollywood pictures included "Old San Francisco," "Across to Singapore," "Forty Winks," "Toll of the Sea," and "Chinatown Charlie," "Daughter of the Dragon," and "Shanghai Express."

Movie audiences were charmed by her graceful movements as well as her striking beauty. Her figure was dainty in the Oriental tradition, and the high-necked, jeweled gowns she favored showed it to advantage.

After her Hollywood debut, Miss Wong spent three years working in British and German films. She returned to the United States under contract to Paramount Pictures and made such well-remembered pictures as "Daughter of the Dragon" and "Shanghai Express."

Her British pictures included "A Study in Scarlet" and "Tiger Bay," in 1933.

She made "Elery Queen's Penthouse Mystery" in 1941, and thereafter her movie work was sporadic.

She was to make "Flower Drum Song" in the near future.

A brother, Richard Wong, also of Santa Monica, survives.

Actress Anna May Wong Dies In Night

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Anna May Wong, whose delicate, Chinese beauty graced movie screens for more than three decades, is dead. She died of a heart attack Friday night at the age of 54.

Although American-born, she was a full-blooded Chinese and was among the first to bring the charm of the Orient to American movie theaters.

Her first starring role was opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "Thief of Baghdad" in 1924. Soon afterward she went to England and played opposite Laurence Olivier on the stage in "Circle of Chalk."

Film assignments in Berlin followed.

By the early 1930s, when she returned to the United States under contract to Paramount, she was one of Hollywood's busiest actresses. It was during this era that she made a lengthy personal appearance tour of Europe, visiting all the important capitals.

In 1936 she went to China for the first time, remaining there a year.

When war came in 1941, Miss Wong retired from film and the theatrical work and devoted all her time to United China Relief and USO activities.

Her retirement lasted 17 years, except for occasional television assignments. "Portrait in Black," her last feature film, was made a year ago and is now being shown.

Supports Education

Turning to the school enrichment program adopted by the Sanford administration, Rep. Wooten said: "We certainly do need to be more competitive with our educational system."

"We certainly should decide, and now, whether or not we're going to improve it. We are now at a critical point."

He said the "educational system on the whole must look at itself in regards to quality of its service."

While admitting a general all-round boost of teacher pay is warranted, the Pitt representative cautioned: "The educational system on the whole must look at itself in regards to quality of its service rendered."

"For example: One teacher may be earning her present salary—and more. Another may be receiving the same salary and may not be doing the work to earn it at all. Some are underpaid while some are overpaid."

Rep. Wooten called for re-evaluation of the state's schools "in the light of needs in the foreseeable future now being illustrated by unemployment in the state's industrial areas."

He said automation has entered the picture "and men are losing jobs because machines can do the job faster and better." He added, "Industry is producing more than when men were doing the work."

He recommended: "Perhaps our schools should concentrate on scientific training for men to operate and maintain our mechanical world."

He emphasized, "Our people should be trained in the schools to make beneficial use of their leisure time as the average working day grows shorter and shorter."

Acknowledging the revenue picture for the proposed $106 million, two-year school enrichment program is incomplete, the Pitt representative said additional revenue sources will likely have to be found.

He said he would favor some form of additional taxation, if necessary, that would be an "overall tax, not an additional levy on any single group or industry."

Other Needs

Rep. Wooten pointed out additional finances may be needed in other areas. He cited a "growing need" for more members of the State Highway Patrol "since their working day has been cut from 24 to eight hours."

He cited the most controversial issues facing the General Assembly as the redistricting and reapportionment problems. He said he feels the General Assembly should take advantage of its bicameral system by incorporating the principles of representation based upon geographic area and population. He cited no specific proposals for the redistricting that have been indicated within the state into 11 instead of 12 congressional districts, he said, will probably result in the elimination of the first district. The 14-county district is the smallest, population-wise, in the state.

Rep. Wooten emphasized he "will be keeping an eye out for appropriations for the needs at East Carolina College" as the state's budget is announced.

Diver And ACL Official Inspect Trestle Condition

CHECKING RAILROAD BRIDGE . . . today were Pace, Logan and Wright. The bridge is shown in the background.

An Atlantic Coast Line Railroad official and a diver were making an inspection of the Atlantic Coast Line trestle over the Tar River here today.

According to B.L. Wright, Superintendent of Metal Bridges for the ACL, of Rocky Mount, there has been an "apparent movement" in the bridge. The movement was learned about when the bridge was inspected about four months ago, he said, adding there has been "no movement since that time."

He emphasized the bridge is safe for travel and said the movement of the bridge would not affect passage of trains over the structure.

He noted, however, if any further movement occurs in the bridge, corrective action will be taken. The inspection this morning was to determine condition of the structure's foundation.

Twenty-five-year-old Gary Pace of Jacksonville, Fla., a diver for the Logan Diving and Salvage Co. of Jacksonville, made the inspection dives this morning. Pace, who said he has been diving for about four years, is originally from Hendersonville, N. C.

Sam Logan, of Logan Diving and Salvage Co., who was supervising the diving operations here, said Pace was using a shallow-water diving rig today.

He noted that his business, which is seasonal, employs from two to 11 divers. The firm accepts jobs all over the world. At the present time it is working on a job in Columbia, South America.

Wright said the diving firm has been conducting diving operations for ACL for about 12 years.

Thaw Permits Geese To Feed

KNOTTS ISLAND, N.C. (AP)—Ice on the marshes softened enough Friday to permit snow geese to feed on the roots of the marsh plants.

The snow geese have been going hungry, and many have been dying of starvation, because of ice covering the marshes recently.

The snow geese so far have refused to feed on grain put out for them.

A steady drizzle fell Friday, softening the ice and giving the geese a temporary reprieve.

Waterfowl biologists found 16 more dead snow geese Friday in the same area where 56 were found dead Thursday.

sia. International politics played on the personal level of Soviet diplomacy is a matter of give and take. No high principles are involved in tactics; the strategy of Soviet Russia is permanently fixed upon the goal of world conquest.

This then is what faces the President. He can become soft in the hope of ending the Cold War or he can adopt a wait and look-see policy. If Khrushchev, however, comes to the United States in March or April to attend the United Nations, it will be impossible for Kennedy to refuse to see him if an interview is requested.

Bethel Rotary Told Cotton-Use Is Rising

BETHEL—Cotton consumption in apparel uses has grown by 1,700,000 bales, or 63 percent since 1947, the Bethel Rotary Club was told by Bud Lindler, field representative of the National Cotton Council, at a recent meeting.

Cotton industry investments in research and promotion are paying big dividends in the form of lowered costs, improved products and expanded markets, he stated. Increased cotton consumption in apparel uses "proves beyond any shadow of doubt that product improvement research and sales promotion have paid off for cotton," Lindler said.

Citing examples of how costs have been lowered, the council representative pointed to labor requirements which are down some 61 man-hours per bale from 10 years ago. Better farming practices have meant record yields. "Research has also given cotton many greatly improved products," Lindler said.

"The industry's newest approach to research is through direct grants by the National Cotton Council," he continued. "These have been spread over such important projects as control of the pink bollworm and boll weevil, reduction of boll shed, further improvements in wash and wear fabrics, and to making cottonseed meal a better livestock and poultry feed. These grants, totaling $284,000, have harnessed $1,547,000 in research from others," Lindler said.

Council sales promotion programs were listed under four categories: the Maid of Cotton; Little Miss Cotton and fashion designer award programs; advertising in trade and consumer publications; publicity support through special picture and story services to newspapers, films for television and tapes for radio stations; and retail merchandising events such as National Cotton Week and training classes for sales clerks.

A major part of the promotional effort is devoted to apparel items. Lindler explained, since this market represents nearly half of cotton's domestic total and is the most responsive to promotion.

Approximately one-third of the cotton production is consumed by foreign markets.

Program chairman Tom Taylor presented the speaker to Rotarians meeting here this week. President Nury E. Manning presided. Ronald Riddick gave the invocation.

Physical Fitness Still An Important National Aim

By JOHNNY HUDSON
Reflector Sports Editor

"Intelligence and skill can only function at the peak of their capacity when the body is healthy and strong. Hardy spirits and tough minds usually inhabit sound bodies."

The paragraph above, in a nutshell, describes the philosophy of the early Greeks. Physical Education received a role of eminence in the training of their youth.

The term Physical Education although broadened in past decades, is not new in our high schools and colleges. It dates back to the Egyptians, Babylonians, Hebrews, and Persians.

Turning back the pages of history, we find physical fitness playing an important part in all our great world powers, including the United States.

Reports of recent years tell us our physical education programs aren't meeting the needs of our youth, or this is the era of "the soft American."

Statistics and reports flow in daily announcing the decline of the physical strength and ability of young Americans. The first indication of decline came with the onset of the Korean War. The second came when figures were released showing almost one of every two young Americans was being rejected by Selective Service as mentally, morally or physically unfit.

Topping this was a report of tests given children in this and other countries, revealing results of 15-years of research.

The results were startling. Despite our high standard of living, good food and medicine, home playgrounds and emphasis on athletics, our youth lagged far behind in the physical fitness tests. President John Kennedy labels his new administration the "new frontier". In his outlined plan of operation, he calls for a "stepped-up program for the physical fitness of our youth."

The cry of past years has been for the assembly-line production of scientists and mathematicians.

But our leaders and the public have fallen back into line, realizing the need to consider other fields and above all, maintain the health and physical fitness of our country.

Our past president, Dwight D. Eisenhower, helped cut a path for increased attention toward physical education.

Kennedy has followed up his campaign promises of making the public aware of physical education by setting down four proposals:

First: "We must establish a White House Committee on Health and Fitness to formulate and carry out a program to improve the physical condition of the nation."

Second: "The physical fitness of our youth should be made the direct responsibility of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. This department should develop research into the development of a physical fitness program for the nation's public schools."

Third: "The governor of each state will be invited to attend an annual National Youth Fitness Congress. This congress will examine the progress which has been made in physical fitness during the preceding year, exchange suggestions for improving existing programs and provide opportunity to encourage the states to implement the program."

Fourth: "The President and all departments of government must make it clearly understood that the promotion of sports participation and physical fitness is a basic and continuing policy of the United States."

On the local front, progress in the area of physical education on the high school and college levels has been in the working stage for several years.

"It was like stepping from darkness into day," says Bo Farley, Rose High Physical Education Director, of the moving from the old high school to the present one.

In the old building, according to Farley, classroom space was limited and this cramped the P.E. program considerably. The new school has a fine physical plan with the facilities to provide a well-rounded physical education program.

Farley, who teaches five classes of physical education, estimates 400 boys and girls enrolled in physical education this year at Rose High.

Only one year of P.E. is required by the state but students at some schools, including Greenville, are allowed to take an extra year as an elective.

In an informal survey among the students, Farley has observed that high school students, with the exception of those competing on athletic teams, are involved only slightly in vigorous activities outside of physical education classes.

Farley expects the high school program to spread to a four-year required course in years to come.

Switching back to the local situation, he noted that girls didn't have the chance to take physical education in the old building but they are getting full attention now. A full-time woman teacher conducts the girls' activities.

At East Carolina College, Dr. N. M. Jorgensen is pleased with the progress being made in the department itself and the majors comprising it.

He recalls 1947 when he joined the ECC department with only four staff members and a handful of majors.

The physical education department is currently second only to the business department in majors, with 320.

There are now 17 full-time staff members and two graduate assistants. Jorgensen emphasized that the department had four Ph.D.'s.

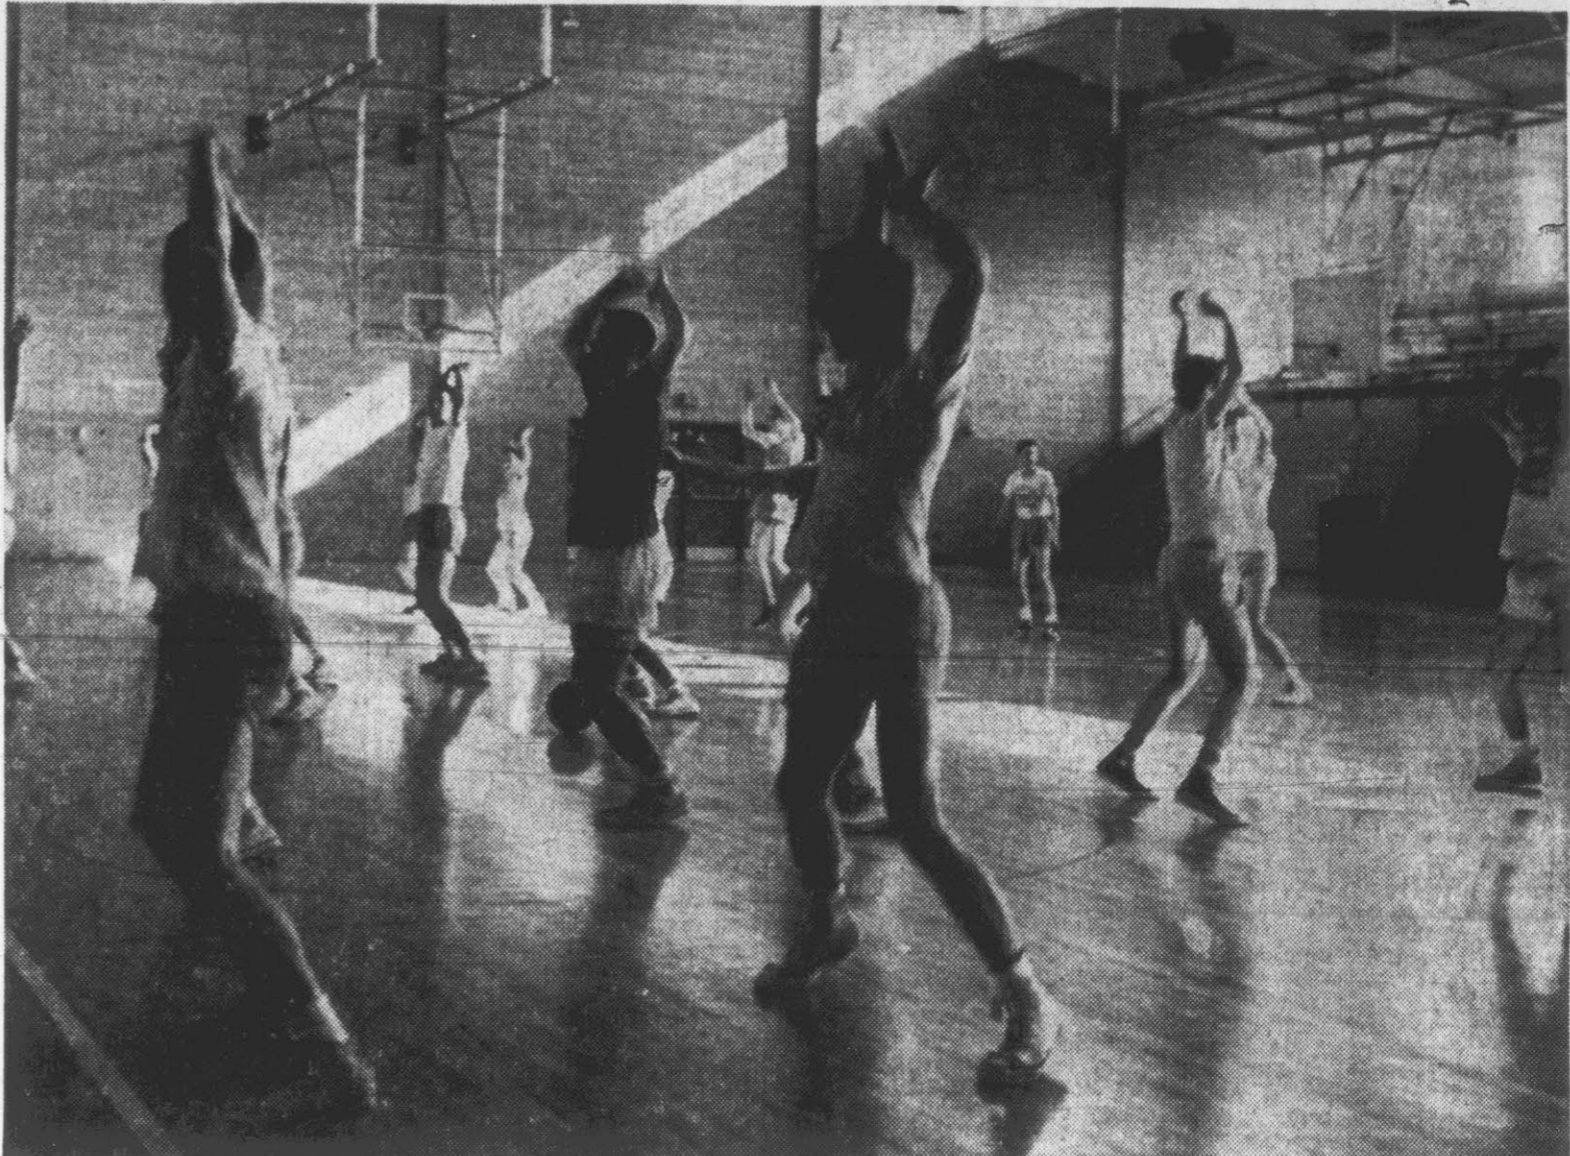

"In this area of the state we have found that high schools now have a professional man working with physical education where untrained teachers were handling it earlier.

There is also more emphasis on the physical development of our students and new gyms are going up everywhere. I think it is a good sign of development," stated Jorgensen.

Majors in this field, he pointed out are having little trouble finding positions. "We place all that we graduate but it is true that other states recruit many of our graduates."

Other members of the college physical education staff are in accord with Jorgensen on the development of the program on the local level.

Yet, these dedicated people in the profession are still aware of a score of problems which remain unsolved. They, too, are concerned with the physical fitness of our country and "the soft American".

ROSE HIGH BOYS . . . take warm-up exercise before indulging in other activities. This is one of five physical education classes conducted by Coach Bo Farley at the local high school.

CLASSWORK INVOLVED . . . in physical education. As many picture, the classes aren't always spent in the gym or outdoors. Three classes a week are usually in the gym with two being held in the classroom

Where Land Is Wrapped In Cold --- Beauty Sleeps

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

In this month, the second of the year, we find the sun in the sign of Aquarius. The days are a bit longer, but the journey of the season still far until the start of spring. All outdoors belongs to the cold.

The soggy damp leaves are tied to the ground by the hand of frost. Branches, snapped by burdens of ice, hang twisted on the trees. The floor of the pine woods is covered with straw while the Beech still hoards its dry dead leaves.

It is sleep time of the growing things: the Maple, the Oak, the Dogwood, and the Tulip tree. By the stream, the fern slumbers, and in the deep of the woods, the violet waits.

Water freezes in the low places of the woods and fields, and in the ditches that run across the land. And when the sun is strong enough to break the crust, they come to drink—the feathered ones, the furry ones—those that live in the tree and those that live in the ground. The hunter and the hunted come to drink, and search out food in the frozen broom grasses and among the stalks of the stubbled fields.

And the day passes and as the afternoon dies, the cold tightens down. The blue smoke flows upward into the cold air, and rides off on a whip of wind.

The moss hung trees, along the river bank, can no longer find their images in the blurring mirrors of the waters. The sun goes down behind the woods, sharp branches of the trees, etched against the dull orange sky. Night flows in quietly, filling the air with its darkness.

The wind sings. You can hear it in the tops of trees, hunting at the windows and running around the corners of houses.

Sometimes . . . when morning comes, the world is white, still, and silent as only a snowy morning can be. The sun looks down. Its brightness on the snow blinds the eye. A touch of wind stirs the whiteness on a branch, and it falls to the ground like diamonds—blue with a touch of gold.

The sparrow on the fence looks in vain for food. A beady eyed squirrel on an oak looks in wonder at its first snow.

The land is wrapped in cold. Each tree, each shrub holds in buds of leaf and flower all that spring has to offer. For beneath the snow and frozen ground, "beauty sleeps in the root's white core."

"WATER FREEZES IN LOW PLACES" . . . moss hung trees, along the river bank, can no longer find their images.

"ALL OUTDOORS BELONGS TO THE COLD" . . . the floor of the pine woods is covered with straw. (Reflector Photos by Stuart Savage)

Some 80,000 Auto Workers Will Be Idled By Temporary Production Cut

DETROIT (AP) — Some 80,000 auto workers across the nation will be idled as a result of production cuts ordered by auto makers to bring output into line with swollen stocks of unsold 1961 model cars.

American Motors Corp. ordered a layoff of 20,000 workers in Wisconsin plants next week. In addition, Ward's Automotive Reports said Ford will lay off 13,500 assembly line workers next week at Dearborn, Kansas City and St. Louis.

The trade paper said Ford would lay off men at engine facories in Cleveland and Lima, Ohio. However, a Ford spokesman in Cleveland said he understood a one-week layoff at Cleveland plants scheduled next week has been postponed.

In Michigan, where unemployment was estimated at 320,000 as of Jan. 15, an increase of 80,000 since a month earlier, General Motors said it would idle about 33,000 workers beginning Feb. 13. GM said it also planned layoffs of 12,000 more outside Michigan for a total of 45,000 workers laid off.

A total of 13,100 workers will be laid off at Buick assembly and the Fisher Body plants, both at Flint, Pontiac said it will lay off 12,000 men Feb. 13 at its Pontiac and Fisher Body plants in Pontiac.

GM will lay off another 8,800 at Oldsmobile in Lansing, including Fisher body, and still another 12,000 at six plants of Buick, Oldsmobile and Pontiac in Wilmington, Del., Atlanta, Ga., Kansas City, Mo., Arlington, Texas, Linden, N.J. and Los Angeles.

Ward's latest report showed that the car industry's inventory of unsold new cars totaled 1,025,000 as of Jan. 20. The trade paper said the industry had cut its February production plans to 400,000 cars as against the previously scheduled 454,000. Last year in February the industry produced more than 650,000 cars.

A Chrysler spokesman said Chrysler's only current layoff was at St. Louis where its plant was down in a snow storm. There will be a one-day layoff at Los Angeles next week, he said. Ford said it will lay off 1,460 employees at its Claycomo plant in suburban Kansas City starting Monday. The plant makes Comets and Falcons.

At Gary, Ind., the Budd Co. plant, which produces Rambler bodies, announced a shutdown next week, idling 1,500 workers.

U.S. Business Is Attracted By Boom In West Germany

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — West Germany is a growing magnet for American business — unless the Kennedy administration restricts them — U.S. firms are expected to open more and more subsidiary operations here in 1961.

One new U.S. firm has put down roots here every three weeks during the past two years, according to the American Chamber of Commerce in Germany. "If the recession at home gets tougher," said influential American businessmen here, "there's only one thing many American companies can do to save their necks — get to Germany as fast as possible and into a market that's really expanding."

Whether the Kennedy administration will allow this trend to go on is the big question, and the recent flood of American capital to Europe probably will be held back for some months until Washington makes up its mind.

The establishment of operations in Europe by big American companies has been partly responsible for the drain on U.S. gold reserves.

The scope of this drain is indicated by Germany's giant Mannesmann Holding Corporation which reports that in 1960, one half of all private U.S. investments made abroad were made in Europe and that Americans contributed 30 per cent of the total capital invested by foreigners in the common market area.

From 1955-59, 33.6 per cent of the $8.3 billion invested by Americans in the common market went to West Germany where they employed about half a million German workers at wages averaging 50 cents an hour.

So far the United States has acquired a third of all foreign-owned company share capital in Germany, and is the chief foreign shareholder in the Federal Republic, followed by Britain and the Netherlands.

In the past few years, 20 per cent of the annual American investments in Germany came from direct transfers from the United States, about 25 per cent from U.S. funds raised abroad, and 55 per cent from income earned in Germany and reinvested, officials of the American Chamber of Commerce in Germany report.

Many American firms with German subsidiaries are connected with the petroleum business, such as the Cologne branch of the Atlantic Refining Co. of Philadelphia, or with motors, such as Ford's Cologne branch or the General Motors Opel subsidiary in Rueselsheim.

A healthy share are associated with the wants of a gadget-conscious society — National Cash Register, the Addressograph-Multigraph Corp. of Cleveland; Remington Rand in Frankfurt, the Container Corp. of America in Hamburg, Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. turning out abrasives in Duesseldorf.

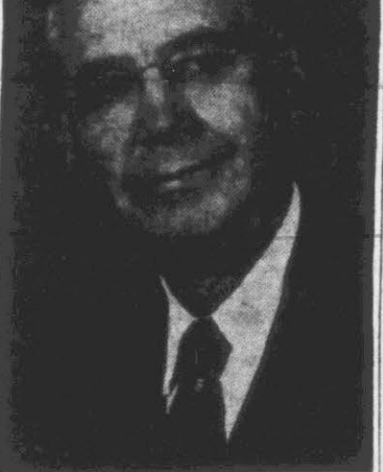

Hundreds of others are small outfits making and selling everything from shoe polish and tanning equipment to cosmetics and brass screws.

Some of the businessmen associated with all these American firms say their low production costs allow them not only to sell in Europe, but to compete in Asian, African and South American markets now partially or totally closed to higher priced U.S. made goods.

Report Increased Church Pressure

VATICAN CITY (AP) — L'Osservatore Romano said Friday Soviet authorities have stepped up measures against the Roman Catholic Church in Lithuania.

The Vatican newspaper said recent actions against the church by Communist authorities included the confinement of Msgr. Julius Steponovicius, titular bishop of Antiarado and spiritual leader of Lithuanian Roman Catholics in Panevezys and Vilna.

Fisherman Hooks Boy In The Bay

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Four-year-old Allen Calarino fell off a dock into Biscayne Bay Friday.

Philip Davis, fishing nearby made an accurate cast, hooked the youngster, reeled him in and gave him artificial respiration. Allen is in good condition at a hospital.

Commented Davis: "Thank goodness this one didn't get away."

Ignored Weather To See A Movie

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy disregarded seven inches of snow, sleet and freezing rain Friday night and took in a movie.

He slipped into the downtown (Warners) theater almost unnoticed, but when he emerged shortly before midnight two news photographers were waiting.

A White House limousine quickly whisked him away.

Snow fell on the capital most of the day. It was raining intermittently when the President left.

Promotion Urged For Rail Passenger Service

RALEIGH (AP) — Passenger service between Greensboro and Goldsboro, nearly discontinued by Southern Railway, may now be the subject of an intense promotion campaign.

In upholding a Utilities Commission order forbidding Southern from ending the service, the State Supreme Court Friday suggested that both the firm and the City of Durham boost the train route.

In the opinion written by Associate Justice William H. Bobbitt, the court said that before Southern asks to discontinue the service again, "it would seem appropriate that it first take all reasonable steps to publicize and improve the service rendered by these trains."

To the City of Durham, which would have been without passenger train service had Southern won the case, Bobbitt said, "It would seem appropriate for those who contend public convenience and necessity require the continued operation thereof to make and promote greater use thereof."

Durham interests were active in the fight against Southern's attempt to abandon passenger service on Trains 13 and 16 over the 128-mile Greensboro - Goldsboro route. The state joined Durham in the protest.

Southern contended it was losing money on the trains and public demand was lacking. Durham argued that Southern had done nothing to promote the trains.

The opinion was one of three which were handed down Friday involving Utilities Commission orders.

The court rejected an appeal by Virginia Electric and Power Co. and held that state revenue officials acted properly in assessing the big firm an additional $50,243 in income taxes for 1953.

The court also overturned a Utilities Commission order and decided that bus firms may make charter trips outside their franchise areas if the trips originate in the area.

The Supreme Court said VEPCO failed to show that the tax was excessive or illegally levied. The dispute occurred when the firm asked permission to use a separate accounting method of figuring its North Carolina income.

The bus case dated back to 1956. A number of firms filed a complaint at that time against Safety Transit Co. of Rocky Mount, saying the firm had been actively soliciting and handling charter trips outside its area.

The Utilities Commission told the company to halt such activities. The Supreme Court said it found nothing in state law to support the commission's decision.

The high court, for the second time in two opinion days, ruled that North Carolina's trespass law is valid. It upheld the conviction in Wake Superior Court of two Negroes arrested during a sit-in demonstration at a Raleigh variety store lunch counter.

On Jan. 20 the high court affirmed trespass convictions for several persons in Durham and one in Monroe.

School Menu

Lunchroom menus for the coming week as announced by the supervisor of city school cafeterias are as follows:

Monday — beef pan pie with vegetables, mustard greens, pickle relish, cornbread and butter, chilled peach half, milk;

Tuesday — hot dog with chili and onions, cole slaw, buttered green peas and carrots, apple sauce and date cake, milk;

Wednesday — roast turkey with dressing and giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, string beans, sliced beets, homemade roll and butter, cookies, milk;

Thursday — vegetable turkey soup and crackers, one-half ham salad and one-half peanut butter and date sandwich, apple cobbler with these strip, milk;

Friday — fish stick, scalloped potatoes, cabbage, carrot and ralphin salad, bran muffin and butter, lemon pie, milk.

Commented Davis: "Thank goodness this one didn't get away."

Ignored Weather To See A Movie

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy disregarded seven inches of snow, sleet and freezing rain Friday night and took in a movie.

He slipped into the downtown (Warners) theater almost unnoticed, but when he emerged shortly before midnight two news photographers were waiting.

A White House limousine quickly whisked him away.

Snow fell on the capital most of the day. It was raining intermittently when the President left.

THE FERGUSON AFFAIR

CHAPTER 19

"Remember that my wife was a successful actress, with a future," Colonel Ferguson told me. "It's true her studio had her tied up in a low-salaried contract, but she could have done much better if she'd stayed in Hollywood. Her agent told me she was bound to become a great star. But the fact is, she wasn't interested in money or in stardom. She wanted to improve herself, become a cultivated woman. That was the project we had in mind when we came here. We planned to learn together, read good books, study music and other worthwhile things."

"He looked around the shabby restaurant as if he had somehow fallen into a trap.

"Was your wife studying music seriously?" I asked.

"He nodded. 'She has a voice, you know,' he said. 'I was a teacher for her. Also a speech teacher. She wasn't happy about the way she spoke, her use of English. I'm no great grammarian myself, but I was always having to correct her.'

"All these lessons she was taking — were they her idea or yours?"

"They were her idea, originally. I went along with it because I loved her, because I felt grateful to her."

"Grateful for what?"

"For marrying me." He seemed surprised by my lack of understanding. "I'm not a handsome man, and I'm not young. I suppose I can hardly blame her for running out on me."

"It's possible she hasn't. Gaines may have been pointing a gun at her today."

"No. I saw him get out of the car to pick up the ransom. She sat behind the wheel and waited for him."

"Then he may have some other hold on her. How long has she known him?"

"Just since we've come here. 'You're sure?'"

"He shook his head. 'I can't be sure!'"

"Do you know much about her background? Where she came from, what sort of girlhood she had?"

"She had a difficult girlhood. I don't know where or how."

"Have you met her parents?"

"No. I'm not even aware that they exist. She's never told me her real name. She married me under her stage name."

"Did she tell you that?"

"Her agent did, Michael Spaire. I met him last fall, when I was breaking her studio contract. His agency has her under a long-term contract — which I couldn't break."

"Would you object if I talked to Spaire?"

"You mustn't tell him what's happened." Ferguson's voice was almost plaintive. "Whether or not she deserves it, we have to protect Holly. If I could just get her out of this frightful mess she's landed herself in—"

"I don't see much hope of that. There is one thing you could do which we haven't discussed. I know of some good private detectives in Los Angeles."

"No! I'm not going in for that sort of thing."

Ferguson struck the table with his fist. His glass jumped and rattled against my plate. Fresh blood began to run from his nose. I stood up and got him out of there.

"I'm taking you to a doctor," I said in the car. "You must know some local doctor. If not, you get one in the emergency ward of the hospital."

"I don't go to doctors. The best doctors killed my mother." His voice was strained and high. Perhaps he heard himself, because he added in a calmer tone: "Holly visited the Buena-vista Clinic once or twice."

"Is a good place. Who was her doctor?"

"Chap by the name of Trench."

"Are you sure?"

"Quite certain, yes." He gave me a questioning look. "Is this Trench quack of some sort?"

"Hardly. He's my wife's doctor. He's the best obstetrician in town. 'Is your wife going to—' Then he caught the rest of the implications, and didn't finish the sentence."

"Yes," I said, "she is. Is yours?"

"I don't know. We never spoke of it."

"There seemed to be a number of things they hadn't spoken of."

I made a few phone calls, then waited in my car for Ferguson while he was being treated in the clinic.

When he came out, I leaned across to open the car door.

"How's your nose?"

"My nose is the least of my worries," he said as he got in. "I spoke to that Dr. Trench of yours."

"What did he say?"

"My wife is over two months pregnant. It's probably Gaines' child she's carrying."

"Did Trench say that?"

"Naturally I didn't ask him. But it's obvious. No wonder she decided to run away with him. No wonder they needed money. Now they have it. He grinned fiercely at nothing in particular. "Why didn't she simply ask me for the money? I'd have given it to her."

"Would you?"

He opened his hands and looked down into them. "I might have killed her. When I went after them today, I intended to kill them both. Then I saw that truck ahead coming into the intersection. I had the idea, for a split second, that I would kill myself. My reflexes wouldn't let me."

I said: "I have an appointment with Michael Spaire at three o'clock. Do you want me to drop you at home? It's more or less on the way. You can make your accident report later."

"Yes. I'd better get home, in case they try to get in touch."

I set the car in motion and turned down Main Street toward the highway. "Do you have any idea where they've gone?"

"No, and I don't want you getting ideas. I have no desire to see them tracked down. Is that understood? I want nothing done to either of them."

"That may be hard to manage."

He didn't seem to hear me. He was in conflict with himself, wrestling with the obscure guilt he felt. "I blame myself, you see, almost as much as I blame her. I should never have talked her into marrying me. She belonged to another generation, she needed younger blood. I was a dreaming fool even to imagine I had anything to offer to a young, beautiful woman."

"Your attitude is very unselfish, Ferguson. I'm not so sure it's wise."

"That's a private matter, between me and my conscience."

"It isn't wholly private. Gaines is a known criminal, wanted by the police. I said in response to his hot and wounded look: 'No, I haven't broken your confidence and gone to the police. Gaines is wanted on other charges, but glory for one. If your wife is taken with him, there'll be hell to pay all round. And what you want isn't going to affect the outcome much.'

"I know I can't assume responsibility for what happens to her. His generosity had limits after all, which made me believe in it more. I simply refuse to have anything to do with hunting down myself."

"That needs more thought, perhaps. Your wife may be more innocent than you assume. Gaines seems to be a con artist, one of those people who can talk his way out of trees. He may have sold her some fantastic story—"

"Holly is not a fool."

"Any woman can be, when she's infatuated."

(To Be Continued Monday)

Ass'n Will Hear Now 'Uncle Miltie' Guest Speaker Is In Oscar Running

Garland A. Hendricks, of the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary at Wake Forest, will speak to members of the Greenville Ministerial Association Monday at 10:00 a.m. His topic: "Church - Community Development and Director of Field Work, at the Seminary."

He will meet with the publicity committee of the Baptist Student Union and publicity committee.

Hollywood (AP) — Who would have expected to find television's Uncle Miltie a contender for an Academy Award nomination?

But as ballots go out this weekend for the annual Oscar sweepstakes, Milton Berle, who played himself in "Let's Make Love" is among candidates for the best supporting actor nomination.

It would be refreshing to see Milton win—if for no other reason than that he promises to give the first honest acceptance speech in Oscar history.

"If I get the Oscar," he promises, "I will say that I thank no one but myself. I did it all, folks."

The critics put Milton in the Oscar race. Bosley Crowther of the New York Times was ecstatic about Berle playing Berle.

Crowther said Berle stole the show without much effort from Marilyn Monroe and Yves Montand. The Times' writer devoted three-fourths of his review to Milton who only was on screen 11 minutes.

This has been Uncle Miltie's year. NBC-TV put him on "Jackpot Bowling" when it had a miserable rating of .08.

"Other comics thought it a comedown for a star comic to go on a sports show. I didn't. Now it's a combination sports-comedy show."

And the rating is a fat 29.

Milton's insult comedy stole the Gary Cooper testimonial dinner—headquarters in New York City.

One-hundred scholarships, including payment for meals and rooms, and partial rebate for transportation, have been awarded to student newspaper men across the United States. For the third straight year, an East Carolinian editor has been the recipient of one of these awards and will participate in the program.

Milton's irreverence knows no bounds. When President Kennedy showed up at Frank Sinatra's party for the cast of the gala—a good 12 hours or more after the swearing-in, Milton greeted the new President thus:

"And they said your term wouldn't last."

PROF. G. A. HENDRICKS

of any other interested groups at the Baptist Center at 3:30 p. m. Monday, and will speak to the BSU Forum at 5:15 on a missions theme.

With a background of teaching and pastoring, Prof. Hendricks was honored as Rural Minister of the Year by Progressive Farmer in 1949. He has served as chaplain of the N.C. State Grange since 1947, and about a year ago was member of a team sent to India by the National Grange.

Opening Chapter House Feb. 19

Members of the Theta Chi social fraternity at East Carolina College will formally open their new chapter house Sunday, Feb. 19. Kenneth P. Trogon of Cumberland, vice president of the Epiphany Iota Chapter, has announced that members of the group will welcome to the residence on East Fourth Street in Greenville a large number of guests from the campus, the city, and elsewhere.

The two-story structure was purchased last August and has since been reconitioned for the fraternity members. The "open house" will mark completion of the remodeling.

Among visitors to the house will be parents of fraternity members, members of other fraternities on the campus, and the faculty and administrative officers of East Carolina College.

Power Of Secret Police Declining

OSLO, Norway (AP)—There are still 100 secret police officers in all Soviet embassies abroad but they are no longer necessarily all powerful, the chairman of a Russian emigrant society said Thursday night.

Vladimir D. Poremsky of the National Alliance of Russian Solidarists (NTS) told reporters some Soviet ambassadors refuse to be dominated by the secret police officers. "In Stalin's time they were all powerful," he said.

Origin Unknown, But Celebrated

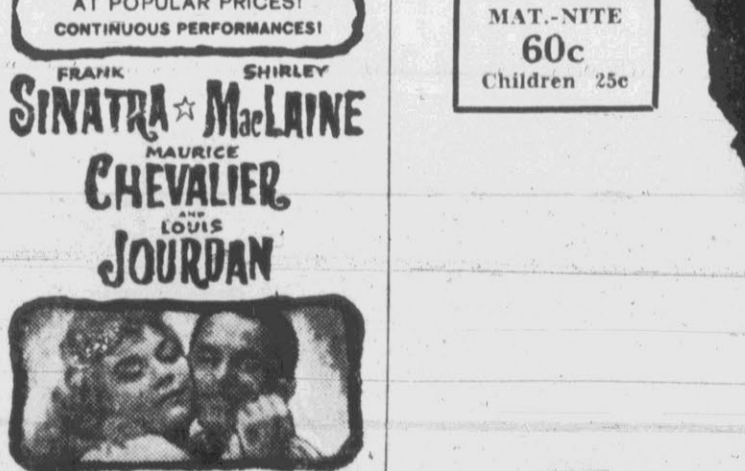

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP)—Members of the Diligent Hose Co.-auxiliary of Jim Thorpe celebrated their anniversary Friday, but no one knows when the group was founded.

"We celebrated the anniversary of our founding with a dinner," a spokesman said. "No one here seems to know how long we have been organized."

Newspaper files show the group celebrated its 27th anniversary in 1949, 1954 and 1955.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

One of the most widely and cleverly publicized literary events in a long time is the production of the New English Bible at Oxford and Cambridge University Presses in England next month.

We wonder whether it is coincidental or by design that this event occurs exactly 350 years after the appearance of the great King James Version — also published at Oxford and Cambridge — in 1611.

Unlike the King James Bible, which depended heavily upon earlier translations, and the Revised Standard Bible, which was influenced by the King James Bible, this new version has cut itself completely loose from all earlier translations.

Instead, the translators have depended only upon the original sources and upon their own sense of style. Their aims are to make the wording simple (for the man in the street) and fresh (for the reader so familiar with the language of the King James Bible that he has stopped paying attention to its meaning).

We predict that this project will be a smash hit — in copies sold, at any rate. Probably in creating theological controversy too.

"The Child Buyer"

One of the books on the fall list which we have just got around to reading is John Hersey's "The Child Buyer."

It deals with the investigation by a state legislative committee into the efforts of an agent of a giant corporation to buy a child genius from his parents. The story, as Hersey develops it, becomes a stout stick (quite wooden) with which to beat what he considers stupidities in education, government, and society at large.

Mainly Hersey seems to be reacting against regimentation in schools and elsewhere: the infallible "battery of tests," the buying and conditioning of free-thinkers by industry, the general suspicion of originality by officialdom.

Though "The Child Buyer" is not a very good book as a work of art, much of its satire is well directed. The only characters who are treated at all sympathetically are Dr. Gozart, an old teacher who simply loves to talk about what she knows, and Barry Rudd, the child, who is blessed with intelligence and curiosity, though he looks bad on the "peet group" scale.

It seems that when the onlooker of educational theory is peeled down to its nub this is about what it amounts to — brains and interest (sometimes known as I.Q. and motivation). It is welcome to be reminded by Hersey of this obvious fact which so often gets obscured.

This reminds us of the present racket in the machinery of American education. How much of it, we wonder, is harmonious with these fundamentals. Where, for example, is the present style of mountains of routine home work getting the alert child who would rather be reading through Dickens or the encyclopedia? On the other hand... (And so the argument goes, with most of us pretty thoroughly confused.)

To Attend Press Session In N.Y.

Thomas Jackson of Godwin, N.C., student at East Carolina College, has been awarded a scholarship to the Third Annual student editors' conference on international affairs in New York City February 10-13.

The event is co-sponsored by the Overseas Press Club of America and the United States National Student Association. It is expected to draw over 150 students to OPEC headquarters in New York City.

One-hundred scholarships, including payment for meals and rooms, and partial rebate for transportation, have been awarded to student newspaper men across the United States. For the third straight year, an East Carolinian editor has been the recipient of one of these awards and will participate in the program.

Origin Unknown, But Celebrated

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP)—Members of the Diligent Hose Co.-auxiliary of Jim Thorpe celebrated their anniversary Friday, but no one knows when the group was founded.

"We celebrated the anniversary of our founding with a dinner," a spokesman said. "No one here seems to know how long we have been organized."

Newspaper files show the group celebrated its 27th anniversary in 1949, 1954 and 1955.

About 150 million clay flower pots are produced each year in the United States.

Power Of Secret Police Declining

OSLO, Norway (AP)—There are still 100 secret police officers in all Soviet embassies abroad but they are no longer necessarily all powerful, the chairman of a Russian emigrant society said Thursday night.

Vladimir D. Poremsky of the National Alliance of Russian Solidarists (NTS) told reporters some Soviet ambassadors refuse to be dominated by the secret police officers. "In Stalin's time they were all powerful," he said.
