Record State Budget Of Sanford Says Budget Proposals Nearly $1.5 Billion Put Inadequate In Educational Field Before Legislators Today

By NOEL YANCEY

RALEIGH (AP)—A record state budget of nearly $1.5 billion, calling for 10 per cent pay raises for teachers and most other public school personnel and a 3 per cent boost for other state workers, was presented to the General Assembly today.

The budget also is based on the general fund having a credit balance of more than $53 million at the end of this fiscal year. The proposed budget for the public school system calls for $442.5 million, an increase of nearly $51 million over the current biennium.

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Sanford told the General Assembly in effect today he expects to recommend tax increases to finance the big boost in school spending he wants.

The governor spoke as he presented the $1.5 billion budget for the next biennium. The budget "must be increased," particularly in support of public schools, he said.

commend to you specific measures for obtaining the additional revenue which my appropriation recommendations will require."

Sanford praised the budget, which calls for 10 per cent pay raises for school teachers and a 3 per cent raise for other state workers "as a forward looking document."

increased," said Sanford. Sanford pointed out that the proposed budget would increase a school spending for the biennium by $51 million to $442 million.

"You can readily see that the public schools have not been exactly neglected," he said, "but it has been deliberately left to us to initiate the bright promise of quality education which holds so much for the future of our people."

collections upward in order to meet any appropriations increases they may make.

He said that in view of the exceptionally good general fund revenue collections of this biennium... There may be a strong temptation in some quarters to argue that an 8 per cent general fund revenue increase (for the next biennium) is too conservative, and that additional appropriations can be provided for by the painless expedient of raising the revenue estimates.

"The Advisory Budget Commission does not, and I do not, and dare not share that hope," he declared. "I see no present justification for raising the Advisory Budget Commission's 8 per cent increase estimate. To take any other position would be dangerous and would border upon fiscal irresponsibility."

This was a broad hint to the lawmakers that if they increase the proposed appropriations figures they should boost taxes to raise the needed revenue.

Kennedy Urges Congress Approve Health Insurance Plan For The Aged

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy today urged Congress to approve a controversial health insurance program for 14.2 million Americans 65 or older.

It would be financed by an increase in Social Security taxes. In a special message to Congress dealing with the "harsh consequences" and sometimes crushing cost of ill health, Kennedy also recommended more federal spending to provide separately for:

An increase in community health services and facilities such as nursing homes, nursing aid and expansion of hospital research and development; training of more doctors and dentists through federal scholarships; a broader health care program for children and youth; more vocational rehabilitation training of the disabled; and expansion of medical research.

"The health of our nation," the President said, "is a key to its future—to its economic vitality, to the morale and efficiency of its citizens, to our success in achieving our own goals and demonstrating to others the benefits of a free society."

Termining it a matter of national concern, Kennedy said: "The dramatic results of new medicines and new methods—opening the way to a fuller and more useful life—are too often beyond the reach of those who need them most."

"Those among us who are over 65—16 million today in the United States—go to the hospital more often and stay longer than their younger neighbors," he added. "Their physical activity is limited by six times as much disability as the rest of the population. Their annual medical bill is twice that of persons under 65—but their annual income is only half as high."

The health insurance program Kennedy proposed for the aged—similar in principle to the one he tried unsuccessfully to put through Congress last year as a member of the Senate—would apply to 13.7 million over 65 who are under the Social Security program, and to about 500,000 under the Railroad Retirement pension program, administration officials said.

They said further the proposed increase in Social Security taxes, including bigger levies under the railroad program, would pay out about $1.1 billion in health insurance benefits in 1963, the first full year of operation.

As for the other health measures Kennedy recommended, the officials stressed that no firm cost estimates are yet available. But they calculate at this time that these programs will require about $56 million in new appropriations for the fiscal year starting July 1, and that about $21 million of this actually would be spent in those 12 months.

For the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, 1962, appropriations are figured at about $177 million and actual spending at about $53 million.

Some of the programs Kennedy advocated are on a 10-year basis, and the administration estimates the cost would continue to mount through the first four years, and then perhaps level off.

Kennedy did not go into any detail regarding price tags in his message. He has promised, however, that he will suggest ways of raising additional revenue in the case of all new spending programs which—of and by themselves—would knock out of balance the budget he inherited from the Eisenhower regime for the fiscal year commencing July 1.

Discussing health insurance for the aged, Kennedy told Congress: "This program would be financed by an increase in the Social Security contributions of one-quarter of one per cent each on employers and employees, and by an increase in the maximum earnings base from $4,800 a year to $5,000 which would amply cover the cost of all insurance benefits provided. The system would be self-supporting and would not place any burden on the general revenues."

This means that—apart from tax increases already scheduled over the next several years in the existing Social Security program—the tax would go from the current 3 per cent to 3 1/4 per cent. This would be paid by both workers and employers on the first $5,000 of wages, instead of the first $4,800 as at present.

Payment of health insurance benefits would start July 1, 1962. So it also means that in the case of workers earning at least $5,000 their tax increase for 1962 would be $6. In 1963 the increase would total $18.50. The hike would be smaller in 1962 because for that year the tax would continue at 3 per cent, the present rate, but would be on the first $5,000 of wages. The next year the tax rate would jump to 3 1/4 per cent.

The additional Social Security cost would be less in the case of workers earning less than $5,000 a year.

Prospects for the Kennedy health insurance program are regarded as somewhat brighter this year than last, but it still faces rough going.

Bookmobile Funds Drive Completed; Goal Is Surpassed

The countywide bookmobile drive was completed today, exceeding its goal by $620, it was reported by J. H. Rose, chairman of the bookmobile committee. The total raised was $8,020.

With announcement yesterday that the Bethel community had raised its quota of $700, including $200 given by the Bethel Town Board, the drive reached its successful conclusion.

Rose congratulated principals of Negro schools throughout the county, who spearheaded the drive. "They have done a tremendous job," he said. "They did all the work, and the people of their communities stood behind them," he added.

He pointed out that Greenville, though it will not be served by this bookmobile, raised a total of $2,405.90—far exceeding its original goal of $1,800. Principal W. H. Davenport, of Epps High School, headed the drive in Greenville.

It was the people of Greenville who raised money for the county's first bookmobile, and then presented it to the library for use throughout the county.

Every community participating in the drive to finance the $8,400 bookmobile reported success. Of the sum needed, $1,000 was already on hand, leaving $7,400 to be raised throughout the county.

The following communities and their chairmen participated: Greenville, Davenport, $2,405.90; Ayden, J. W. Ormond, $702.10; Farmville, F. H. Mebane, $1,200; Chicod, Miss Decie Pollard, $202; Stokes, Matthew Lewis, $300; Falkland, Gaston Monk, $250; Belvoir, Miss Mattie King, $250; Winterville, J. W. Maye, $610; Arthur, Farney M. Moore, $200; Grimesland, M. Q. Wyche, $300; Grifton, Herman R. Reaves, $300.

Report Nuclear Sub Data Stolen

LONDON (AP)—A witness testified today details of Britain's first nuclear submarine were among Royal Navy secrets stolen by five persons accused of spying for the Soviet Union.

The witness was Capt. George Symonds, director of the underwater weapons section of a naval research station at Portland. Symonds was shown photographs alleged by detectives to have been found in the possession of Gordon Lonsdale, one of the defendants, when he was arrested Jan. 7.

The officer said the photographs were of pages of a secret book giving particulars—many of them highly secret—of British war vessels, including the nuclear sub, Dreadnought.

The Dreadnought is powered with an atomic reactor based on U.S. Navy designs. The five defendants watched while a security agent showed some of the spy gadgets they allegedly used in their work.

Check Report Of Sub Off Coast

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Navy said today it was investigating the possibility that an unidentified submarine appeared off the eastern coast of the United States Wednesday.

At the Pentagon, the Navy said it had received a report to that effect, but would not identify the source of the report or pinpoint the position where the submarine might have been.

Air Force Gen. Laurence S. Kuter told a news conference at San Diego, Calif., Wednesday that an unidentified submarine was sighted only 40 miles off the big U.S. Naval Base at Norfolk, Va.

Kuter, who is the head of the North American Air Defense Command, said unknown submarines are operating off the American coasts almost daily.

Crowds Showed Up Early For Dollar Day Specials

300,000 DOLLAR DAY—Greenville merchants were holding their semi-annual Dollar Day today and the weatherman had cooperated rather well through noon. The sun was shining early this morning and though skies were overcast at noon no rain was in sight. Parking was free in the parking meter district today.

Farmville Board Clears Way On Line Extension

FARMVILLE—Farmville will go ahead with its plans to extend water and sewer lines to the site of the proposed Farmers Cooperative Exchange feed mill and storage facility, according to officials today.

Unanimous action of the Town Board of Commissioners at a mid-January meeting cleared the way for the extension outside the city limits requested by FCX.

Commissioner W. C. Wooten made the motion to extend the lines several hundred feet at the Jan. 16 session that saw no opposition to the idea. At the commissioners' regular February meeting Tuesday, Wooten offered a motion to rescind the board's January action.

His motion died without a second.

Mayor Charles S. Edwards told the Daily Reflector today he has always favored cooperation of the part of the town to help industries work out their problems in relocating or building new facilities.

He said he favored the town's cooperation "all the more in this instance because this (FCX) is a first-rate industry and the distance outside the corporate limits is short."

According to T. W. Willis of the Farmville Economic Council, FCX has asked the town to extend water and sewer lines westward down the Norfolk and Southern Railroad to a point on the east side of Fields St. FCX then plans to tie into the municipal system from its site across the street.

Willis predicted construction on the grain mill and storage facility will be underway around March 1.

Wooten said he introduced his motion Tuesday because he believed it a mistake for the town to extend its lines beyond the city limits.

Ask Continuing Pension Policy

RALEIGH (AP)—The General Assembly was asked today to continue a state policy of providing $3,000 annual pensions to widows of North Carolina governors.

The Advisory Budget Commission recommended spending $24,000 for the 1961-63 biennium for the stipends which go to four gubernatorial widows.

The $24,000 was budgeted for Mrs. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Mrs. J. Melville Broughton, Mrs. W. Kerr Scott and Mrs. William B. Umstead.

Librarian Voices 'Surprise' Over Stirred Up Fuss

EAST ORANGE, N.J. (AP)—"I'm surprised at the fuss that's been stirred up," said the mild-mannered librarian whose complaints about overdue books led to midnight raids on 14 homes in this suburban community. "I just wanted the books returned."

Harold L. Roth, director of the East Orange City Library, told his indignant fellow citizens Wednesday that arrests would continue until all scofflaws returned their overdue books.

The East Orange Public Library and its director entered the public limelight Monday night, when police staged a series of raids on the homes of patrons who had been ignoring Roth's pleas to return borrowed books.

Six persons unable to raise $100 bail each at that hour were confined overnight at city police headquarters.

Some of the community's citizens, irked at having to share a jail cell with a drunk and disorderly person, had sharp comments on the whole procedure.

New Building For Farmville Garment Factory Is Announced

FARMVILLE—Plans for a modern, 10,000-square-foot garment factory were announced here yesterday by Thomas Anderson, manager of the local North State Garment Co.

With April 1 set as a target date for completion, Anderson said the new building to be constructed near Marlboro would allow his operation's employment to grow from its present 64 to around 90. The exact location of the planned concrete block structure is on the east side of S. Main St. just south of the Pitt County Transportation Company's headquarters.

Anderson told the Daily Reflector today the owner of the property, W. A. Allen, will finance the building and then lease the facility to Anderson's company. Negotiations between Allen and Anderson had been underway for several weeks.

The new building, Anderson said, will help answer his space problem in the present operation in the quarters on W. Wilson St. formerly occupied by Duke Buick Co. He said additional space is "badly needed" by his firm.

Anderson organized the North State Garment Company, with the aid of other Farmvillians, about a year ago when the present operation that had established a pilot operation here collapsed. Anderson had come here to manage the parent company's Farmville venture.

The plant manager said the 25 additional employees will be made available by Jan. 1, 1962.

Wooten Vice-Chairman Of House Rules Committee

Rep. Frank M. Wooten—one of three Pitt County lawmakers in Raleigh—yesterday was named one of two vice-chairmen of the State House Rules Committee.

Wooten, in his third consecutive appearance as a member of the House, will serve with a second vice chairman, David Britt of Robeson, and 11 more members of the committee including Greene County's Rep. Herbert Hardy.

Both House and State Senate rules groups were named yesterday as the 1961 General Assembly organized itself and cleared the way for Gov. Sanford's budget message today.

Legislators lost little time in getting underway. The Senate approved three resolutions, one of which started the study machinery for congressional redistricting.

Home Conserves Ideal Spread

WINTER CONSERVE, made from crushed pineapple, dried apricots plus other goodies, makes a wonderful spread for toast or English muffins.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Newsfeatures Food Editor
One wintry day when you want to enjoy the cozy warmth of your kitchen, put up some conserve. No fresh fruits needed. With mainly pantryshelf products you can make half a dozen one-half pint jars of a sweet that is delectable. Spread this conserve on buttered toast, English muffins or rich baking-powder biscuits and have yourself some tea!

Or perk up this pineapple apricot conserve with a little spirit and use it as a filling for butter-sponge layer cake. Frost the cake with whipped cream sweetened with confectioners sugar and flavored with vanilla and the chances are it will find great favor with your family and guests. When we have served it, it's made a great hit. Because our tasters couldn't agree on which version of this conserve they liked best, we're giving you the basic recipe made with nuts and a variation with crystallized ginger added.

PINEAPPLE APRICOT CONSERVE
1 pound dried apricots
1 can (1 pound, 4 ounces) crushed pineapple
1 cup diced orange
3 1/2 cups sugar
2 1/2 cups water
1/2 teaspoon salt
3-4 cup coarsely chopped pecans or walnuts
Wash apricots in hot water; drain; cut in small pieces. Mix with remaining ingredients except nuts. (Add pineapple just as it comes from can with syrup.) Boil, stirring occasionally, until there is almost no free liquid when a spoonful of the mixture is placed on a saucer. Add nuts about 5 minutes before conserve has finished cooking. Pour boiling hot conserve to within about 1-8 inch of the top of sterilized half-pint jars; seal at once with home canning cap. Makes 6 jars.
Note: The nuts may be omitted and 4 ounces crystallized ginger added with the remaining ingredients. To make the 1 cup of diced orange needed, use 2 medium-sized oranges and peel before dicing pulp.

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN
The moss rose was a favorite in the 19th century, but it is not a dated plant and fits well in gardens of today. It is a form of the old cabbage rose and gets its name, MOSS ROSE because the roughened stems are "mossy". Include a few of these "old timers" in your rose list for spring.

ALFRED de DELMAS (1855) grows from 2 to 3 feet. The blooms are bluish pink to white and blooms quite a long time. The low compact plant is fine for the border.

COMTESSE de MURINAIS (1843) grows to 5 to 6 feet. Buds tinted rose, break out into shiny white blooms. This upright plant has blue green foliage with a tinge of bronze. It is considered one of the best of the Moss roses.

CRESTED MOSS (1827) is a 4 to 5 foot plant with bright clear pink blooms. This is a very fragrant rose.

GLOIRE des MOUSSEUX (1852) grows from 4 to 5 feet and has flesh pink rosy centered blooms. This fragrant rose is of compact growth with strong stems and large luxuriant foliage.

DEUIL de PAUL FONTAINE (1873) is a 3 to 4 feet plant with canes covered with red thorns and bristles. Its blooms are in the deepest tones of crimson-black, purple and brown red.

GABRIEL NOYELLE 4 to 5 feet in height. This yellow moss rose has a long season of bloom. The long pointed buds unfold into double flowers of orange salmon with yellow at base. It has a fine fragrance.

NUITS de YOUNG (1851) is a 4 to 5 foot plant with a tumbling sort of growth and velvet fragrant flowers.

MME LOUIS LEVBOQUE (1827) has large double cupped flowers of soft lilac pink. The blooms are large and fragrant.

WALDTRAUT NIELSEN grows to 10 feet and at times reaches up farther than this. It is a robust grower and one plant is said to be almost a rose garden in itself. Its large double clear pink flowers are intensely fragrant.

SALET (1854) is a 3 to 4 foot plant with fragrant flowers which are used in distillation of perfume. One writer has this to say about its fragrance: "The real odor of musk is found only in Salet—a perpetual Moss rose." The buds are pink and flowers have an appealing shade of coral.

Now is the time to get your order in for roses. The sooner you do, the better. More and more people are turning to gardening and the demand for good plants is on the increase. The above roses are listed in WILL TILLOTSON'S rose book, "ROSES OF YESTERDAY AND TODAY." It costs fifty cents and is well worth it. His address is WATSONVILLE, CALIF.

Community Club

The Busy Beavers 4-H Community Club met with their leaders, Mrs. Alton Moore Feb. 1, for the monthly meeting.

"What Do We Want From Life"

was the topic of the demonstration given by Mary Newton and Connie Killebrew. They said sportsmanship, personality, and manners were the three most important goals to strive for.

After the pledges to the flags, Connie Killebrew led in singing "Red River Valley". Patsy Cobb gave the devotional.

Johnnie Phillips, the president, presided over the meeting. During the business session, plans were made for the next meeting.

Ruth Ann Wooten and Patsy Cobb volunteered to do the demonstration for that meeting.

Mr. Ronnie Therrington, County 4-H leader, was a visitor. He discussed with John Moore and Johnnie Phillips plans for a Forage Crop demonstration to be given in the late spring.

Two new members, Patsy and Mary Cobb, were welcomed in the club. There were 12 members present.

Mrs. Moore served refreshments. Stork Show Hosts Honoring Mrs. Robert Bruce

NCOs Sponsor New Scout Troop

A new Boy Scout troop has been chartered and is being sponsored by the Non-Commissioned Officers Club of Battery "A" of the local N. C. National Guard unit. Troop 124—currently a three-patrol troop—was chartered Feb. 1 and held its first official meeting at the National Guard Armory on Evans St. Friday night.

Guardsmen announced the troop's organization this week in connection with the nation-wide celebration of the 51st anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America.

M-Sgt. Robert Smith of Battery "A" has been named scoutmaster. Capt. Charles E. Camp, battery commander, is institutional representative and Lt. William Harris and Sgt. Julian Pierre are committee chairman and secretary.

1st Sgt. Mayo E. Allen, S-Sgt. Thomas Butts and Lt. Bobby C. Harrington are patrol leaders. The new troop has scheduled its weekly meetings for 7:30 p.m. each Friday in the local armory. Guardsmen have urged interested boys between the ages of 11 and 14, and their parents, to contact officials of the new troop. Nearly 20 youngsters are already enrolled in Troop 124.

Guard spokesmen expressed pleasure at being able to sponsor this troop and allowing these boys to use the equipment we can make available through our program.

Report Sabotage Inside Red China

HONG KONG (AP) — Refugees arriving from Communist China say the twin specters of disease and sabotage stalk the land. Hunger, malnutrition and famine in some areas have undermined the people's health and morale, they say, and passive but crippling sabotage is setting in.

Responsible Western experts here still see no sign of a mass uprising or revolution in the making. They say the Chinese Communists have taken drastic measures to stave off disaster.

Apparently trying to give their underfed, overworked people a breather, the Peiping regime has abandoned in all but name the "great leap forward" campaign on which it had pinned its hopes of overtaking the West in industrial and agricultural production. Peiping also has started paying out large sums of precious foreign exchange—estimated at up to $200 million worth—to Australia and Canada for food for its hungry millions.

Refugees, streaming out of China in increasing numbers, paint a harrowing picture. The picture probably is colored by emotion, but the stories they tell are being repeated too often these days to be disregarded. The people of China are desperate, they say. Food has always been short under communism but never this short. And rations are being cut lower and lower. Some state granaries have been reported raided, others set afire.

Driver Charged After Collision

Greenville police charged William Hunt Waters, 36, of 2014 Sunset St. with making an improper left turn following the investigation of a collision at the intersection of Boyd Ave. and Spruce St. yesterday at 10:05 p.m. Police identified the driver of the second vehicle as Richard R. Damage to the White auto was placed at $50 while damage to the Gardner vehicle was set at $25. No injuries were reported in either of the wrecks.

Party In White House Proves Fascinating To Kennedy Child

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three-year-old Caroline Kennedy was fascinated by the scarlet-coated Marine Corps Band Wednesday night as she watched her parents give a big party at the White House.

The President's daughter sat on the stairs to listen and watch. And for a while, she was in full view of the gathering of Washington's diplomatic corps as she stood with her nurse in the main corridor.

It was President and Mrs. Kennedy's second major social event in the White House—a 5 to 7 p.m. diplomatic reception. But it was Caroline's first glimpse of a party in the huge home she has lived in for just five days. She obviously loved it.

And Mrs. Kennedy explained she'd rather have her daughter see the historic event first-hand "than tell her about it afterwards."

Caroline watched her father get the exciting musical honors—ruffles and flourishes and a rendition of "Hail to the Chief" as he made his entrance. And later she got a special song — "Old MacDonald had a farm."

The appearance of the President's little daughter in her white organdy party dress was just one of the warm, unexpected touches that greeted the foreign visitors.

The President and his wife, after shaking hands with 240 top diplomats and their wives, spent another 30 minutes chatting and visiting in the huge State Dining Room, where waiters served champagne and a buffet table was laden with canapes, sandwiches and pastries.

Mrs. Kennedy, in a pink brocade dress and jacket, spoke fluent French to many of the guests. There was an unexpected chance for ambassadors to have a word with the new President and many spoke earnestly with him.

Presidents in recent years have spent only 10 to 15 minutes mingling at such affairs, White House aides observed. Fires burned in the fireplaces, and though two in the East Room got smoky, they were a welcome sight on the snowy Washington evening.

For the first time, gift cancellara from the famous $100,000 Margaret Biddle gift collection were displayed with lighted candles on side tables.

There were lovely floral arrangements, including white orchids, carnations, African daisies and poppies.

Vice President and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson and Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Rusk joined the Kennedys in the receiving line in the Blue Room.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy and his wife formed a secondary team of greeters in the State Dining Room with other cabinet officers. The attorney general is the President's brother.

Mrs. Kennedy had some of the famous White House paintings rehung and the appearance of the full-length portrait of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge in a red velvet dress was a spectacular addition to the historic Red Room. Except for Martha Washington's famous painting in the East Room, no first ladies' portraits had been hanging in the formal state rooms.

The famous portrait of Abraham Lincoln by G.F.A. Healy was returned to a place over the dining room mantel.

Wires Crossed Early In Term

There are shades of the Eisenhower administration in the recent missile-gap or no-missile-gap controversy that has blossomed out in Washington . . . this time in the new Kennedy administration.

On Tuesday of this week there came the announcement that the new top command in the Pentagon had come to the tentative conclusion there is no gap between the U.S. missile strength and that of the Soviet Union. On Wednesday at his press conference, President Kennedy modified that tentative conclusion by saying no firm decision has been reached as to the relative position of the United States and the Soviet Union in missile strength.

Certainly the Pentagon announcement held forth a much more optimistic picture of the relative missile strength of this nation than did the inaugural address of the new President a few weeks ago. And certainly President Kennedy in his news conference Wednesday did not indicate that he subscribes to the tentative conclusions which the Pentagon announcement said have been reached.

The situation present in this incident is not greatly different from that which cropped up many times during the Eisenhower administration. At various times it was bomber strength, conventional weapons, missiles, space progress that brought conflicting statements from the President, top military officials and others in the government as to the relative position of the United States.

It was not expected that the Kennedy administration would run its course without such incident, but we are rather surprised that such a situation would make itself evident so early in the new administration.

Under the Eisenhower administration there was such a series of conflicting statements and opinions on our defensive strength that general confusion over the relative position of the United States prevailed in this nation.

President Kennedy should see that such a situation does not come about during his administration. This should not be accomplished by silencing opinions on these matters that differ from his own, but rather by carefully evaluating our position and making the results known to the people whether they are favorable or indifferent.

Council Moves Quickly On Improvements Task

Greenville's City Council is to be commended for moving swiftly to put to effective use the bond money for a variety of municipal improvements approved by local voters a few months ago.

It was only a couple of weeks ago that bids were taken on the $550,000 worth of bonds, and before the end of this month the city is to receive bids on a number of bond improvements including the far-reaching street improvement program. There will be a time lag between the time contracts are awarded and the projects are completed; but because of the manner in which the Council has moved, this time lag will be kept to a minimum.

The people of Greenville, who will be paying for the improvements through their tax dollars, will begin to receive benefits from these improvements much sooner than would have been the case if the governing board had moved slowly in getting around to calling for bids.

The street improvement program particularly will begin to pay two-fold dividends to citizens of the city. As each block of street is paved under the bond program, it will mean one less block of dirt street which will have to be maintained by the city. It will also mean that additional money will come into the new street paving revolving fund to be used for paving more streets, and thus cut further the mileage of dirt streets that have to be kept up. In addition to this, of course, the paved streets will afford greater convenience for local citizens by replacing dirt streets.

We trust the Council will continue to move as rapidly as possible in bringing about the improvements that are to be made with the bond issue funds. The items which the bond money will provide are urgently needed by Greenville, and the sooner they are provided, the sooner local citizens will begin enjoying their benefits.

Estimate Based On Twenty Days

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — How does President Kennedy look after less than three weeks in office?

If he follows the course of his first 20 days, you can expect this:

1. His is going to be a middle-of-the-road administration. It will be more liberal than conservative but it will shun extremes.

2. He will be an extremely active president. He already has poured out proposals to get the economy moving.

3. In foreign affairs he will be firm, non-belligerent, imaginative and human. He will try to do business quietly, without playing in the grandstand.

4. He will be very political-minded in dealing with Congress, unlike President Eisenhower who showed distaste for politics and kept hands off Congress.

5. He'll be the boss in his administration.

Perhaps the best example of his middle-road attitude is in his proposal to raise the minimum wage from $1 an hour to $1.25.

He could have suggested boosting it to $1.25 in one crack. That would have meant trouble with Congress, maybe no raise at all.

So he asked only for $1.15 this year—which is far as the Eisenhower administration would go—and $1.25 two years from now.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt's activity was limited to a wheel-chair. President Harry S. Truman got around in the usual, predictable way without mingling with people much. Dwight D. Eisenhower, except for golf, stayed rather alone in the White House. Kennedy has hopped all over Washington: to a late movie; to friends' homes for dinner or a party; to the State Department to sit in on conferences.

He has been firm with the Russians in foreign affairs—too firm, they think—but has said nothing deliberately to irritate them.

He has made it clear he wants to deal with them quietly, has offered to cooperate with them on earth and in space. But he isn't rushing toward them.

He and his aides are studying the problems—particularly disarmament and nuclear testing—in the hope of finding answers, perhaps new ones, as he said.

Self-interest will be involved in American foreign policy, but Kennedy hasn't used it as a flag.

Indications are that Kennedy will be the boss in his administration, even if he has to slap down some of his own people to prove it.

When his ambassador to the United Nations, Adlai E. Stevenson, guessed out loud Kennedy would be glad to meet with Premier Khrushchev if he comes here, the White House quickly, crisply said Stevenson talked for himself.

Kennedy is not delegating authority as Eisenhower did with his chief assistant, Sherman Adams. There is no White House job similar to Adams'.

Quote . . . "Scientists think there's life on Mars. If this is true, why doesn't it ask for foreign aids?" Chicago Tribune.

LOSING LIFE AND FINDING IT

An artist died recently whose life had been particularly significant to the young artists of his generation. Many of these young men now distinguished in their field look back to him, to his wise counsel, to his friendly spirit and sacrificial ways as chief factors in keeping up their morale and encouraging them in any success they have had.

When this man had passed sixty, a quite remarkable thing happened. He had always been a good artist, but suddenly in the early sixties his art blossomed out, matured, and took on a new, more significant dimension.

It was one of the clearest cases imaginable of a man who apparently giving so much of his time to others that he had insufficient time to develop himself was nevertheless growing within to such an extent that in his last years he became the artist everyone knew him fundamentally to be.

Jesus declared that, if we lose our lives we find them. He assured his contemporaries, and all who follow, that the surest way to ruin ones life is to give complete attention and let the rest of the world go by. He himself gave up everything and gained the world in the largest sense anyone in the stream of human history has gained it.

Hawthorne's story of the humble minister Ernest how came to resemble the great stone face is an example of how simplicity and service pour unsought treasures into human life.

Losing His Buttons

A Blue Garter Waiting

A lovely blue garter with a lace fringe and a frilly artificial flower, complete to pink center is waiting for some one at Steinbeck's.

This garter and an assortment of other items Franklin Steinbeck, operator of the store, keeps in a box labeled "Found in Formal's".

It is one of many items that he has found in tuxedos and other formal wear which he rents for weddings, dances and parties as a part of his men's wear business.

The garter was apparently the "something blue" which a blushing bride wore. It is to be hoped it came out of the groom's tux and not the best man's. There are other items of less interest in the box. Right now it holds a pair of suspenders, a cotton hankiechief, a cigarette lighter, a pair of earrings, a comb, lipstick, car keys and a case for a wedding ring.

Some wedding participant left directions for the event in the formal wear. The notes reminded him to be at the church one hour before the services. He was also reminded that ushers carry the groom's mother in and the bride's mother in at 4:30.

Occasionally billfolds are found in the pockets when clothing is returned to the store, Steinbeck says, but the owners usually show up within a day or two to reclaim more valuable items such as that. Once a billfold was found containing $40 and it was shortly returned to its owner.

Other more routine items such as silk handkerchiefs and hairbrushes are retrieved from the garment pockets.

But all of these, including the blue garter, are minor compared to one item which store employees found in a coat pocket once. It was the wedding ring.

"The groom had dropped it in the change pocket inside the coat-pocket," Steinbeck recalls. The slitting dropped at one point and the ring fell into this little crevice.

So when the ring exchanging portion of the ceremony came, the groom couldn't find the wedding band. The ceremony went on, however, the bride and groom spent a happy honeymoon and when they returned the groom called at Steinbeck's to see if they might possibly have found the ring.

They had. One of the store employees happened to feel it in the lining. It was returned to the groom who, ceremony now complete, presumably lived happily ever after.

"One coat came in with the receipt for the marriage license in the pocket," Steinbeck recalls. Some one later called and picked it up.

Strangely the collection of items is almost always found in formal wear used by wedding parties. The garments, rented for dances and other functions seldom yield personal things.

Steinbeck attributes this to the excitement of a wedding. "The groom usually changes clothes in a hurry and gets off on the honeymoon leaving things in the pockets," he says. Often the task of returning the tuxedo is left to the best man or a relative.

That blue garter, by the way, has been around for several months and no one has yet called for it. Steinbeck is beginning to doubt that a claimant will ever appear.

Public Forum

TO THE EDITOR:

There is an urban "disease" that is recognized as epidemic throughout the United States. Because population shifts are toward the cities, it is becoming a concern to more and more citizens. It is of such magnitude that the Republican Administration committed this country to an expenditure of nearly two billion dollars in the past eight years toward this problem. President Kennedy has promised much more help. He will establish a Department of Urban Affairs with a cabinet level director.

For want of a label this "disease" could be called Urbanitis. It involves directly the HEART—the heart of a city, its business district. Its symptoms are easily recognizable. The inner traffic arteries are hardened and circulation is poor. The city's geographic face has been hardy changed for a generation. "For Rent" signs are seen along its thoroughfare. Pockets of regeneration begin to appear as small shopping centers about its periphery, but inadequate to revitalize and stimulate the whole city. Merchants who lease buildings begin to wonder when the day will come they must decide to stay with the downtown or go to the outside shopping center.

Urbanitis begins to weaken the patient in other ways too. Her retail trade begins to show less proportionate gain than her neighboring cities of comparable size and beginning. Her lessening vitality begins to be revealed in her difficulty in securing industry and providing employment, as the low income of so many of her citizens reflect. And even though she may be in the heart of the sixteenth largest county in North Carolina, the largest tobacco producing county in North Carolina, and though 55 percent of her county's population live within five miles of her city limits, she receives only 50 percent of its retail trade.

The consulting specialists have examined our city thoroughly and they agree with the diagnosis. They agree that she is a fine city, and that she has kept the pace of expected growth with the help of "super vitamins" in the forms of East Carolina College and Federal tobacco allotment quotas. Her potential is as great, as any city in eastern North Carolina. But they also say that if something is not done for her "heart" (the business area) she can not expect to keep up to her expected growth of 1980 with 38,000 people. Her neighbors with their "Magic Mile" business areas, spacious streets, ample parking, river shore parks and parkways will be another story.

The treatment that has been recommended is "surgery" in the form of urban renewal. It sounds drastic and heroic but it is working in 577 cities. Equal that number are planning for it. It is not painless but, since this operation is under local authority, it can be done IN A MANNER, TO A DEGREE, AND AT SUCH A PACE AS WILL HURT THE LEAST AND HELP THE MOST. It has no precedent except faith in her (the city's) own people. President Eisenhower said "the Federal Government must continue to provide leadership in order to make our cities and communities better places in which to live, work, and raise our families, but without usurping rightful local authority, replacing individual responsibility or stifling private initiative".

The "operation" urban renewal can be curative. The business area can grow and expand in an orderly manner. More trade can be attracted, more money and increasing the flow of credit into the capital markets at declining long-term rates of interest to promote domestic recovery."

The President said that "these two objectives can be achieved concurrently, but only with close cooperation among all governmental agencies. As a result of measures already under way, there will be an increasing flow of funds at declining long-term rates to finance productive investments. (He did not detail these measures.) Measures to strengthen this country's ability to hold and attract internationally mobile liquid funds will be outlined in my subsequent message on the balance of payments."

CRUX OF PROBLEM

To understand the President's dilemma, let's consider the Imaginary Investment Fund, with $1 billion on hand, and interested in short-term investment. If short-term rates in the United States are low, the Fund will be inclined to invest the billion abroad. The billion would pass into the hands of the national banks of whatever countries invested in, and those banks could demand gold for those dollars.

But if short-term interest rates were shored up here, I.I.F. would invest in U.S. securities and so would foreign fundholders, resulting in the equivalent of a flow of gold into the U.S.

On the other hand, if I. I. F. were interested in long-term investments and the U.S. forced down interest rates on such things as 25-year mortgages, 10-year bonds and plant and equipment loans, again it would be interested in foreign investments.

However, with nationalization, confiscation and other foreign deprecation on American investments abroad, the foreign investments would require unusual guarantees or benefits.

Experience over the last 30 years show that the government can raise or reduce the interest rate through such actions as changing the Federal Reserve rediscount rate, by buying back government bonds whenever they fall below certain prices and by other steps.

But whether the government can reduce the interest rates on long-term loans and bolster rates on short-term loans at the same time remains to be seen. It is true that such low-high situations have existed at various times, but maintaining it for a long time would be either difficult, expensive or both.

Lenders usually want higher rates for longer loans. To persuade them to accept lower rates might involve government intervention. The government could pay differentials to keep long-term interest rates down, but this would mean taxpayers paying parts of the costs of new private homes, plant expansion and added local government services.

If the Kennedy Administration succeeds in lowering long-term interest rates without lessening short-term rates or without adding to the tax burden, it has qualified itself to attack the old puzzle of how to fit ten travelers into nine beds at the inn.

Quirks Of Fate Present

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

As I write this, the snow outside my window must be 15 inches or more. I had planned to go to the Metropolitan Opera to hear "Il Trovatore." However, the weather is not such as will bring me outdoors; instead I listen to Verdi's opera on the radio. This is one of a million examples of imponderables that occur in one's life, the sudden, the unusual, the bizarre, the surprising. Had this blizzard occurred last week, my daughter might have had a few days grace to cram for her examinations; had it started a few hours earlier, she would not have flown to Boston.

These imponderables affect everything and everybody. Recently a man threw up his hands in Jove-like disgust when I mentioned imponderables; yet the Christmas blizzard cost his firm several hundred thousand dollars. It is not only snow that comes at the wrong time; a word spoken by a politician out of order, a movie actress appearing in a new style, a rain during a political parade—a thousand and one unplanned, uncalculated little events can and do occur to change the course of events. Had Napoleon not dallied in Warsaw, he might not have had such a frightful time over his conquest of Russia. Had Charles Martel not defeated the Turks at Tours, Western Europe might have been Moslem. Had the Kaiser not helped Lenin to reach Petrograd, Germany today would not be divided in two. Has there been no Dreyfus Trial in France, in 1894, it is quite possible that there might not be an Israel in 1961.

The politician who believes that he can depend upon five-year plans or seven-year plans is as bally as Mao Tse-tung who did not expect a famine to bring his economic structure toppling. And yet, droughts, floods and famines have been perennial in China and have upset regimes before this. In fact, Herbert Hoover, when he was Taotai of the Yellow River, in a conversation with Li Hung-chang, prophesied the fall of the Manchu Empire because of the flooding of that river—but that is another matter.

Imponderables play an enormous part in politics. Catholicism defeated one candidate for the Presidency, but elected another. The Ku Klux Klan notwithstanding, the South, which was expected to vote for Nixon, voted for Kennedy. Robert A. Taft, who had devoted his entire life to the Republican Party, emerging as its leader, could not get the nomination for President despite his suitability. It went first to his Republican competitor, Thomas E. Dewey, and then to one who became a Republican for the occasion, Dwight D. Eisenhower. General Douglas MacArthur, who did everything according to the rules, was cashiered by President Truman who became Vice President by accident and was on hand to take the highest office when President Roosevelt died. By all calculations, Henry Wallace should have been nominated as Vice President but Roosevelt said to "Clear it with Sidney," meaning William F. Buckley, who preferred Harry Truman to James Byrnes.

Nobody planned it that way. Surely Harry Truman did not. Nor did Herbert Hoover, a mining engineer, when he worked in Manchuria, or the Urals, or in Australia expect to become President of the United States.

He never planned for that.

An imponderable is a state of affairs which comes into existence without known cause, like a sudden plague of locusts. The farmer whose crop is eaten had no expectancy of such a calamity. He did not move a muscle to bring on the locusts. But there they are and his crop is gone and he will vote for another Congressman because this one brought him hard luck.

The imponderables plague politicians and statesmen who suffer endlessly from things that unexpectedly happen to them. For instance, no Democrat, a year ago, would have believed it possible that Mayor Wagner of New York would get into so heavy a quarrel with Carmine De Sapio, the Tammany boss, that the Democrats would be

Greenville Art Center To Hold Open House Sunday

An open house will be held Sunday at the Greenville Art Center, from 2 until 5 p.m., honoring Mrs. Georgia P. Hearne and her students, it was announced today.

Miss Nettie Brogden will be hostess at the first Sunday opening at the center since last fall. The public has been invited to attend.

Mrs. Hearne, a well known portrait painter in Greenville, is exhibiting several portraits, all oils, in the current art center show. Her students, who include Greenville and Robersonville residents, are exhibiting primarily still life and landscape paintings.

The students include Miss Faye Jones, winner of two citations in a national high school exhibition in New York; Mrs. B. B. Sugg, Jr. and Mrs. Herbert White Lee, all of Greenville. From Robersonville, Mrs. Larry Barnhill, Mrs. H. H. Pope, Mrs. B. A. Rogers and Mrs. Reta Boone are featured.

All work is traditional and realistic. Portraits of Greenville subjects by Mrs. Hearne, which may be viewed at the Sunday open house, include "Judge Dunk James," "Bee Moss," "W. C. Craven," "Mr. Ficklen Arthur," "Mrs. Gus Forbes, Sr.," "Mrs. Frank Wilson," "Mr. Louis Gaylord, Sr.," "Mrs. Leon Redditt," "Mrs. Myra Ficklen" and "Mr. Herbert Waldrop."

Two of her subjects are from out-of-town.

The open house will afford an opportunity for many Greenville residents to view the three paintings recently given the center by a New York art patron, Mrs. April Akston.

The three are contemporary European pieces, including "Fantasy," an oil on cardboard by Reny Lohner, Austrian; "Still Life—Driftwood and Candle Snuffer," oil on masonite, by Claude Lepape, French; "Clowns at Rest," watercolor, by Fabrizio Clerici, Italian.

The paintings are hung in the front gallery at the center.

Valued at $1,450 they were given through the Hammer Galleries of New York. The only stipulation is that the local center show them for three years, at the expiration of which time, the paintings can be sold, if desired.

Reveal Marilyn In Medical Care

NEW YORK (AP)—Screen star Marilyn Monroe is under treatment for "an illness of undetermined origin," New York hospital said Wednesday night.

A hospital spokesman added that the blonde beauty's condition is satisfactory. She said she entered last Sunday but would give no details.

Miss Monroe divorced playwright Arthur Miller in Mexico two weeks ago. Neither was present when the decree was handed down on grounds of "incompatibility of character." They were married four years.

Last September the film star, while making her latest picture, "The Misfits," bowed out for a week to be treated at Hollywood Hospital. According to her doctor, she was suffering from exhaustion.

The New York Daily News said that Miss Monroe has been a patient for the past two months at the hospital's Payne Whitney Psychiatric Clinic—a part of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

The News also said her doctor reported she is making good progress from what the News describes as a "near collapse" that followed her breakup with Miller. The newspaper said the actress has been seen around town from time to time because she has the privilege of periodically leaving the hospital on a pass.

Censure Motion Loses In Vote

LONDON (AP)—A Labor party motion of censure over increased charges for socialized medical services was defeated Wednesday night in the House of Commons.

Labourites had attacked the Conservative government's plan to increase the doctor's prescription charge and to make higher charges to patients for such items as eye-glasses and false teeth.

Seven Alley Cats Are Now Wealthy

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Seven former alley cats are assured of $10,000 worth of care and treatment under the will of the late Mrs. W. K. Dunn.

The four male and three female cats now are permanent guests of the Atlanta Humane Society. Mrs. Dunn, who died Feb. 1 left $10,000 to the society with the stipulation that "if I possess any cats at the time of my death it is my desire that said society shall use any amount of this money for the care and upkeep of these cats as long as they live."

The seven cats were picked up at Mrs. Dunn's home Feb. 2 and taken to the society's animal shelter.

Bliss Lasted Less Than A Day

SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (AP)—Oil millionaire Robert M. Westbrook, 21, who says his wedded bliss lasted less than a day, is asking an annulment of his marriage to actress Judi Meredith, 24.

Westbrook's petition, filed in Superior Court Wednesday, said the couple married in Las Vegas, Nev., last Dec. 11 and parted the same day.

On the return flight to Los Angeles, Westbrook said, Miss Meredith informed him she had made a mistake and that she could not be a wife to him.

Westbrook is the grandson of the late Bessie A. Machris, who left him approximately half of her multimillion-dollar fortune when she died in 1955.

Tennessee Club Leading AP Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Tennessee State Tigers still are rated the nation's No. 1 small college basketball team in spite of two recent defeats. But Southern Illinois and Prairie View are creeping closer.

In this week's voting by the 8-man Associated Press panel of sports writers and broadcasters, Tennessee State drew only two votes for first place but accumulated enough points to retain first place on the list.

Carolina, Louisville, DePaul Fall On The Road In Major Basketball Upsets

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sixth-ranked North Carolina, and tournament-bound Louisville and DePaul went traveling—and tumbling—Wednesday night. The Tar Heels, losing their second in a row, were beaten 89-82 by a South Carolina team that had lost all eight of its previous Atlantic Coast Conference games. Tenth-ranked Louisville (17-4), attempting to celebrate its at-large berth in the NCAA tournament, was cuffed 80-74 by Eastern Kentucky. DePaul (12-5) went down by a whopping 87-64 to Marquette's Warriors only 24 hours after accepting a place in the National Invitation Tournament.

The three shockers featured a jam-packed Wednesday night college program that also saw fourth-ranked Bradley snap a three-game losing streak, 111-84 over Tampa and NIT-bound Providence (16-2) make Boston U. its ninth straight victim, 67-59.

U.S. Golfers Still Fight For Ryder Cup

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—United States golf professionals branded as slightly more than ridiculous today a British report that they are losing interest in the international Ryder Cup matches.

"Why," said Arnold Palmer, the game's biggest money winner last year, "our guys are out here fighting for Ryder Cup points every day so they can make the team and play in the matches."

"I play in a lot of tournaments otherwise would pass up just to get cup points."

Other pros, currently competing in the Phoenix open, expressed equal amazement at the suggestions of American disinterest and that the every-other-year matches between the U. S. and British teams be discontinued.

Writing in the London Evening News, Maurice Hart said, "The Americans couldn't care less if the matches are dropped." Hart was critical of the reported plan of the American team to arrive in Great Britain only two days in advance of the matches scheduled for Oct. 19-14.

Cmdr. Charles Roe, secretary of the British Professional Golfers' Association, said, "I honestly have no idea why the Americans are not allowing themselves longer practice at the Lytham and St. Anne's course before the matches."

There was speculation in London that the U.S. pros were unwilling to leave the tournament tour at home for a longer period of time.

Without trying to give a reason for the short visit, Palmer said, "I don't know why that should worry them if it doesn't worry our side. Two days is enough to get used to a course."

Ken Venturi asked, "How could there be a lack of interest on our part when we beat them every time? As for myself, I lose interest only when I lose. I know I'd sure like to make the Ryder Cup team. All the boys try to make it."

Julius Boros' reply to the British suggestion was, "I know I'm out here every day trying to earn a place on the team."

and Bobby Robinson triggered South Carolina from a 10-point deficit midway in the second half.

Western Kentucky (15-4), leading the chase for the Ohio Valley Conference berth in the NCAA tournament, whipped non-conference foe Xavier of Ohio, 68-61, and Ohio U. fattened its Mid-American conference lead, whipping Miami (Ohio) 91-75 while second place Toledo lost to Bowling Green 67-63.

Jack Foley scored 43 points as Holy Cross (12-4) bolstered its chances for an NIT berth, 106-95 over Dartmouth. Niagara's NIT hopes went up in a 74-52 rout of Syracuse. Stu Sherard's 22-points led Army (14-5) over Rider, 67-55 and Navy edged William & Mary 69-67.

Villanova scored a 108-77 rout of Canisius in a Palestra windup that opened with LaSalle's 67-62 squeaker over Gettysburg, and Tulsa handed Oklahoma City its third straight loss, 78-73. Bowdoin snapped Maine's 10-game win streak, 69-62 and VPI beat VMI 86-85.

To top off the hectic evening, Lehigh beat Lafayette for the first time since Jan. 29, 1944. Since that time Lafayette had beaten its arch rival 38 straight times. This time it was Lehigh 60, Lafayette 58, with Jack Palfi scoring 19 points for the winners.

Savitt Favored To Win Tennis Title

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Dick Savitt, semi-retired and partly ailing, is the favorite to win the national indoor tennis championships that starts a five-day run tonight.

The big New Yorker, runner-up the last two years to Alex Olmedo and Barry Mackay, respectively, is seeded No. 1 among the U. S. delegation, and takes on Bailey Brown of Bronxville, N. Y., in his first round match.

Savitt's right arm bothered him all last year and he played very little tennis. But it has been coming around. Ron Holmberg beat him in the final of the Buffalo indoor tournament, recently as whipped Vic Seizas in the Middle Atlantic indoor event.

"My arm is all right now," he said. "It shouldn't hamper me at all."

Savitt has won the tournament twice, in 1952 and 1958. If he wins this year, he will retire the trophy—no mean feat. No one has been able to win it three times in the past 25 years.

Don McNeill and Bill Talbert both won it twice, but Jack Kramer, Bobby Riggs and Pancho Gonzales have only one victory to their credit.

Behind Savitt on the U. S. list are Ron Holmberg of Brooklyn, who plays Evert Schneider of the Netherlands; Whitney Reed of Alameda, Calif., who opposes Robert Bruloot of Belgium, and Chris Crawford of Piedmont, Calif., who plays Sid Schwartz of Long Beach, N. Y.

Only Crawford might have trouble. The veteran Schwartz always has been a good indoor player, and, in fact, was runner-up for the title in 1948.

Orlando Sirola, who along with Nicola Pietrangeli clobbered the United States in the semifinal of the Davis Cup competition last year, is the No. 1 foreign seed. Then come Billy Knight of England, Rafael Osuna of Mexico and Pierre Darmon of France.

Charles Olken, a 225-pound sophomore shut putter from Cambridge, Mass., is the heaviest man on Harvard's indoor track team.

Industrial Detroit Feels Growing Unemployment Pinch

Editor's Note: Detroit is one of the hardest hit industrial areas in the nation. Predominantly automotive, responsible authorities see diversification as the big hope for improved conditions. Nate Plozewitzky, assistant general editor of The Associated Press, who is touring the depressed labor areas of the nation, tells of Detroit's fears and hopes in this article, first of a series of two.

Deaths Decline

Births remained about constant while deaths declined slightly during January in Pitt County according to statistics released this week by the county health department.

The department recorded a total of 149 births during the month—one less than the total posted during December. Deaths declined to 52 from December's total of 60.

Stillbirths in the county rose from two in December to five during January, the figures showed. The department recorded one death under one month and four under one year during January.

Illegitimate births declined slightly to a total of 20 from the 22 recorded in December. January cancer deaths recorded totaled seven.

Present Gift To Staff Member

In recognition of her work in the East Carolina College Union, Mrs. Yvonne Smith of Greenville has received an engraved silver tray from members of the College Union Student Board and committee groups of the organization.

Since 1958 Mrs. Smith has been assistant recreation supervisor and assistant to the director of College Union activities. She has submitted her resignation, effective at the end of this month.

Cynthia Mendenhall, director of recreation at the College Union, commenting on Mrs. Smith's work, stated that her interest and organizational ability have been of great value in preparing for publication of the annual Student Directory of the college and the monthly Campus Calendar of events and in planning social and recreational events.

Mrs. Smith is the wife of Lewis Earl Smith of Greenville, East Carolina senior who is scheduled to complete his work at the college at the end of the winter quarter February 25.

Mrs. Smith is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Ullsperger, 310 Linck Court, Green Bay, Wisconsin.

Cooley Proposes Partner In Post

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Harold Cooley, D-N.C., asked Wednesday that the Justice Department recommend nomination of his law partner, Hubert E. May of Nashville, N.C., to be U.S. district attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina.

Cooley noted that such jobs are the patronage of Sens. Sam Ervin and B. Everett Jordan, North Carolina Democrats, and that it is up to them whether May is recommended.

But Cooley said he had "a most satisfactory conference" with Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy, to whom he presented names of about 250 North Carolinians endorsing May for the job. Among these names, Cooley said, are those of State Chief Justice Maurice V. Eassey, superior court judges, bankers, farmers and many bar associations in the section May would serve.

Cooley told a newsman President Kennedy plans to ask U.S. district attorneys now in office to resign. Julian Gaskill of Goldsboro is the attorney now in the Eastern District.

May, 51, is solicitor of the 2nd Solicitorial District. Gov. Luther Hodges appointed him. May is a former Democratic chairman of Nash County.

Sens. Ervin and Jordan have said they will reach agreement on such appointments before making recommendations.

Out Of Hospital With No Limbs

CHICAGO (AP)—Young Jimmy Clark, a quadruple amputee, flashed a big smile Wednesday when he left a hospital under his own power.

Wearing his new artificial limbs the husky, 13-year-old boy quipped "Yeah, I got my discharge today. Honorable, I guess."

Jimmy, who lost his arms and legs last March 25 when he was struck by a railroad engine, got his new arms on Dec. 23, his 13th birthday, and got the legs just before Thanksgiving.

Officials at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, said Jimmy walks, feeds himself and writes well enough to do his school work. He plans to resume his 8th grade classes at a South Side parochial school.

feeling that this is a city doomed to die."

On that confident note, William B. Sloan, director-secretary of Detroit's Industrial and Commercial Development Committee, sums up his faith in the future of the great auto capital.

His job, basically, is to find ways of attracting new industries to Detroit and create new jobs in an area staggering under the burden of crushing unemployment and the prospect of more to come.

It is difficult to be confident. For tens of thousands of men and women the future is without hope. For them the permanent "lay-off" slip has already come and ahead is only hardship and suffering.

Day by day the rolls of unemployed grow and welfare lists increase as cars go unsold and auto firms lay off help in production shutdowns.

Already 153,500 persons are listed as unemployed in the Detroit area according to the latest count—which was outmoded—the moment it was compiled. Since then new layoffs—some of which will be permanent—have been announced.

An estimated 50,000 persons are already chronically unemployed—a conservative figure—probably never to see the inside of an auto plant again, permanent welfare cases.

"Many of these are unskilled, poorly educated people, who came or were brought here from the poorer sections of the South to work in the auto plants during the big boom seven or eight years ago," says one employment official.

"When their jobs were eliminated—for a variety of reasons—they were left behind. Many are now too poor to leave or have strong family ties keeping them here. Many feel 'why should we go back to picking cotton?' Many live on relief or the faint hope that sometime they may get their old jobs back—a faint, faint, almost nonexistent hope."

Automation; consolidation of auto firms; the relocation of new and more modern plants outside Detroit and Michigan, closer to new sources of new materials; changes in defense contracts; away from vehicles to missiles, have been some factors, among many, that has caused permanent employment in the auto industry and will cause more in the future here.

It is feared that even if times get better, as expected, there will not be enough re-employment to make an appreciable dent in the lists of the unemployed in Detroit.

And as the industry changes, others tied to it decline. Many foundries and stamping plants have shut down or reduced work forces. Mines supplying ore to steel plants servicing the industry have also been hurt.

Some 229,000 persons are now out of work in Michigan with the list growing daily.

The illness has spread to other businesses in Detroit.

Said an executive of a variety chain store, whose customers best reflect the worker-consumer: "Our business began to decline starting in May 1959 and is continuing to do so."

Said another spokesman for the same firm: "This decline in auto employment is reflected in our own job applications. Some years ago we were hiring people we knew we shouldn't have hired but had to because we couldn't get help. Now we are swamped with applications for all kinds of jobs from the lowest sales clerk to managers."

The solution to Detroit's future? Like so many other cities in the United States tied to a single, dominant industry, Detroit's planners are seeking diversification. "We want to build an umbrella over the automotive industry," says Sloan, whose committee is only one of several working on the problem.

"We'd rather have 1,000 firms employing 100 persons each in our diversification than one firm employing 100,000."

But he added rapidly: "If we got an industry employing 100,000 we wouldn't turn them down."

Sloan says new nonautomotive firms have already moved into

Detroit in recent years to join those that have always existed side by side with the great automobile industries in the area.

He said 13,700 new jobs have been gained in Detroit from Nov. 30, 1959 to Nov. 30, 1960 while 65,300 new jobs have been added throughout Michigan. Since Sept. 1, 1958, Sloan added, there have been 800 expansions of existing industries in the Detroit area.

Already under way or in the planning stage are dozens of re-development programs to clear blighted areas and to give a new and more attractive look to the city.

But Detroit is cramped by a lack of good industrial sites. Sloan is confident new industries will come into the city to rescue Detroit.

employed auto worker, especially the older one, sees little hope for himself, even in good times.

"If you are over 40 you are finished," says one out-of-work auto man.

"Sure," says another, "maybe there are jobs available and maybe there will be more in the future but they want experienced men, men say with 15 years in a skilled trade—but they still want you to be under 40."

The future may be dark but the auto worker still stays, even knowing he may never see the inside of a plant again. What keeps him here, creating what economists call an "immobility of labor?"

"Hope, son," said one sadly, "just hope."

The choir is under the direction of Dr. James Rawlings Sydnor, the Presbyterian School's professor of sacred music.

The choir members, who come from 25 colleges and universities and three countries, including England, Germany, and Colombia, South America, are required to "keep up" with their academic work throughout the tour.

THE FERGUSON AFFAIR

CHAPTER 23

"Get it through your head it's strictly legal," Salaman told Colonel Ferguson and me. "The lady owes me sixty-five grand. You'll find out if you make me go into court. But you don't want that."

"No," Ferguson said. "We don't want that."

"What did the money go for?" I asked.

Salaman flipped his hand palm upward, pointing the thumb at Ferguson. "Tell him."

Ferguson swallowed a bitter grin. It almost choked him. "Holly lost some money gambling shortly before we were married. She didn't have the cash to cover her losses. She borrowed from a finance company which is run by a Miami gambling corporation. Mr. Salaman is the major stockholder. The amount was less than fifty thousand, originally, but apparently the interest has mounted up."

"Interest and service charges. It's more than six months overdue. And it costs money to collect money. Now a man in your position, Colonel, I'd think you'd want to pay up."

I said: "Would this be blackmail, by any chance?"

Salaman looked hurt. "I'm sorry you used that word, Mister. If you're smart, though, you'll tell your boss to pay up. It wasn't just the tables the lady blew her money on."

Ferguson had turned to the window. He spoke with his face hidden, but I could see his ghostly reflection forcing out the words.

"Some of the money went for drugs, Gunnarson. If we can be here this man, she started gambling to procure money for drugs. She got in deeper and deeper."

"What drugs?"

Salaman shrugged his shoulders. "I wouldn't know. All I know is what I read in the papers. Like what it said in the columns about her and the life guard. This would make a nice splash in the papers."

Ferguson turned back to the room. He was as pale as his reflection. "What is this?"

"It sounds like blackmail to me," I said.

Salaman said: "The hell it is. Your boy here isn't too bright, pops. My advice to you is trade him in on another mousiepie but fast. You need a boy that's hep to the public-relations angles, that's what makes and breaks. I got a right to protect my legitimate interests."

"I understand that," Ferguson said with a dismal look at me. "I don't have the money on hand."

"Tomorrow will do. Tomorrow at the latest, I can't sit around in this burg while you make up your mind. I got to get back to some action. How about this time tomorrow?"

"What if I don't pay then?"

"Your little doll won't be making no more movies. Maybe horror movies." Salaman showed his teeth. They were bad.

Ferguson said in a thin and desperate voice: "You're holding her somewhere, aren't you? I'll gladly pay you if you give her back."

"Are you nuts?" Salaman swung around to face me. "Is this a nuthouse? Is the old guy nuts?"

"You haven't answered his question."

"Why should I? It don't make sense. If I had Holly, she'd be here doing the asking. On her knees."

"You implied you could put your hands on her."

"Sooner or later, sure. I can send out a private circular to all the gambling spots, all the major bookies. Sooner or later she'll turn up at one of them. But the longer I have to wait, the more it costs. And it ain't only money I mean, bear it in mind."

"My client and I want to discuss this in private."

"Sure you do," Salaman flung out his hand in a generous arc. "Discuss it all night if you want. Just come up with the right answer by tomorrow. And don't try to get in touch with me. I'll be in touch with you." He saluted us with two fingers and walked out. I heard the car go up the drive.

Ferguson broke the silence. "What am I going to do?"

"What do you want to do?"

"Pay them, I suppose."

"Do you have the money?"

"I can phone Montreal. It's not the money I'm concerned about." He added after another silence. "I don't know what sort of a woman I married."

"You didn't marry a saint, that's evident. Your wife is having her troubles. She was having them before she became your wife. Have you considered cutting your losses?"

"I don't follow, Gunnarson. I'm not feeling myself."

He sat down on a long chair, his head resting limply on the back.

"You're not responsible for her debts, unless you want to be."

"I can't let her down," he said weakly.

"She let you down."

"Perhaps. But I still care for her. I don't care about the money. Why is everything always put to me in terms of money?"

There was no answer to that question, except that he had money, and had used it to marry a woman half his age. The question was addressed to the ceiling.

"Damn it. I hate to give in to their dirty threats. But I'm going to pay them their dirty money."

"That may not be wise. It could lead to a long series of payments. It's possible, in fact, that you've paid them once already." He sat up blinking. "How?"

"The money you delivered to Gaines and your wife today—it may be the first installment and this is the second."

"You think that Salaman is behind the kidnapping?"

"It wasn't a kidnapping, Colonel. That seems to be clear by now. I keep getting further evidence that your wife conspired with Gaines to collect that money. She may have needed it to pay these gambling debts. Did she ever mention them to you?"

"No."

"Or ask you for large sums of money?"

"She didn't have to. I provided her with ample funds for her needs."

"Maybe she didn't think so. A drug habit, for instance, can be terribly expensive."

"You may think I'm a fool," he said, "but I simply cannot believe that she is an addict, or ever was. I've been living with her here for six months, and never noticed the slightest indication. He shook his head despondently. "I had no right to expect so much out of life. I tell you, it's judgment on me. I've had it coming to me all these years."

"Judgment for what?"

"My moral rottenness. Years ago I got a young girl pregnant, then I turned my back on her. When Holly turned her back on me, I was only getting my just deserts."

"That's not rational thinking."

"Is it not? My father used to say that the book of life is like a giant ledger. Her was right. Your good actions and your bad actions, your good luck, balance out. Everything comes back to you. The whole thing works like clockwork."

He made a downward gullotting gesture with the edge of his hand. "I threw that little girl in Boston out of my life, gave her a thousand dollars to shut her up. And when I did that, I condemned myself. Condemned myself to the hell of money, do you understand me? In my life—everything comes back to money. But I'm not made of money. I care for other things. I care for my wife, no matter what she's done to me."

"What do you think she's done to you?"

"She's defrauded and betrayed me. But I can forgive her, honestly. I owe it not only to her, I owe it to that little girl in Boston. You don't know me, Gunnarson. You don't know the depths of evil in me. But I have depths of forgiveness in me, too."

He had been taking a moral beating, and wasn't handling it well. I said: "We'll talk it over tomorrow. Before you make any final decisions, you'll want all the facts about your wife and her activities."

Gunnarson takes to digging skeletons out of closets. Continue the story to a climax tomorrow.

Newport Refuses Jazz Festival For This Year

NEWPORT, R. I. (AP)—There will be no Newport Jazz Festival this year, an event accompanied by wild disorder last year when teenagers unable to gain admission resorted to beer can throwing and other rowdiness. The stadium had been sold out. Many were arrested.

The City Council Wednesday night unanimously refused a permit for the event. An application was revived by Councilman Erich A. O'D. Taylor, who asked his fellows to reject it and they complied.

Taylor suggested the mayor appoint a committee to study the possibility of a city sponsored music festival.

Festival President Louis L. Lorillard said he would not concede the festival is out of favor, adding: "It is always possible to have city or town council with which you can work, and if so, it might come back."

Festival sponsors are suing the city for $750,000 damages.

AT OPEN HOUSE . . . Hoover Taft, member of the board of directors of the Pitt County unit, Miss Mattox, Dr. Walter H. Pott, past chairman of the Pitt Unit and Richard Atkinson, current Pitt County chairman, discuss work of the local chapter.

Miss Edna Mattox, assistant regional manager of the South-eastern Area for the American Red Cross, was entertained at an open house, Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. F. Richard Atkinson at their home.

Miss Mattox's main purpose in coming to eastern North Carolina was not only to visit the Pitt County Chapter of the American Red Cross, but also to attend a meeting of the Eastern North Carolina Coordinating Council, American Red Cross, to be held in Rocky Mount at the Rio Restaurant tonight at 6:30.

The council consists of 12 American Red Cross chapters from the 12 counties throughout eastern North Carolina, of which the Pitt chapter is one. The council acts as a coordinating agency for the dissemination and correlation of information and projects vital to the Red Cross throughout eastern North Carolina.

A number of Greenville citizens visited and met Miss Mattox at the open house. These citizens are all interested in the Red Cross and serve in various capacities on the local county chapter board.

Menshikov appeared to take the kidding remark with good grace and smilingly replied he might come around to look at the building — "from the outside."

Smith ReElected Capt. Of Local Rescue Squad

Jimmy Smith, III, re-elected Captain of the Greenville Fire Department's Rescue Unit last night, told Squad members "I believe our organization has made great progress, both in the acquiring of new equipment and in the training of our personnel . . . in the past 12 months."

Smith told the group in his report of the year's activities, "Classes which we have had in the past 12 months under the supervision of the Pitt County Medical Society and instructed primarily by doctors have been of great benefit . . . The fine training . . . in the past as well as the training which we received this year was very well evidenced by our team taking first place in the first competition at the state convention."

"And when the time came to go to Philadelphia," Smith said, "the merchants came to our rescue with more than enough funds to pay the way of the five-man team," which entered the International First Aid Contest, "where we made such a fine showing."

In addition to standing by for public meetings and teaching first aid classes, the squad helped with the March of Dimes road block and "assisted other rescue squads in this area when called upon", he stated.

In the way of equipment, the Squad Captain reported, "we have replaced our Chevrolet Station wagon with a more serviceable Corvair panel . . . and also obtained from Stafford Oldsmobile Co. a new GMC one-ton panel truck."

"The Pitt County Medical and Dental Society has donated to us a new jeep which is due shortly," Smith said, and added, "White Concrete Company has donated a set of short range walkie-talkie radios" to the unit.

"All of these things have been done by our group in addition to meeting our basic function which is the saving of life," he noted.

Concluding, Smith stated, "In the coming year there will be even more to be done, and even more to be acquired and even more training to be done and we will do it!"

Other officers elected at last night's meeting included Stuart Savage as first lieutenant; Robert Briley as second lieutenant; Roy Hardee as Secretary; and Dr. Sam White, II, as treasurer.

Savage replaced Bill Woolfolk while Briley succeeds Roger Page as second lieutenant. Hardee and White, were elected to the secretary and treasurer post, replacing Dr. Georgia V. Mills.
