Congo Govm't Gives UN 6-Hour Deadline To Oust Lumumba Troops In City Winter Brings Floods, Winds, Rain And Snow Into Deep South

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Pro-Lumumba forces took over the city of Leopoldville—some 500 miles from Leopoldville—and the Congolese central government today gave the United Nations six hours to clear them out.

Officials of the Leopoldville government, Consolide Vice Premier Jean Bolikango delivered an ultimatum to U. N. headquarters saying that if the U. N. forces did not act against the intruders within six hours the Congolese forces would take measures of their own.

U. N. spokesman said, Mjoko was taken in as a "house guest" of a civilian U. N. administrator. The Lumumbists took over joint duties in the town and at the airport with the local troops.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Floodwaters continued to rise in central Alabama and Mississippi today as winter dealt another severe blow to the Deep South.

The weather bureau forecast high water displaced thousands in four Southern states. Tornadoes and damaging winds brought more woe to at least three others.

The Atlanta, Ga., area was deluged with 5-67 inches of rain within 24 hours. The body of Mike Smith, 18, was recovered from a flooded creek into which he drove from a washed out road near Buford, 25 miles northeast of Atlanta.

Probe To Stress U.S. Retaliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Styles Bridges, R-N.H., said today a Senate watchdog probe of this country's expanding missile program will focus on "second strike" potential.

"to determine the reliability and survivability of the family of missile systems in all three military departments." That would appear to require some measure of the possible enemy capability of attacking U. S. missile systems and bases.

Tar River Crest Due March 1

The U.S. Weather Bureau at the Raleigh-Durham Airport in Raleigh notified The Daily Reflector today that the Tar River is rising due to heavy rains last night upstream and is expected to reach a crest at Greenville near 16 feet about March 1.

The level today was 13.6 feet and still rising, according to a report from Joe Stoneham at the Greenville Utilities Plant. The river has been rising continuously all week, due to heavy rains in the area.

However, no threat is seen for this immediate area. The averaging level for the river is about three to six feet.

Bids Received On City's Big Street Program

Bids on Greenville's $325,000 bond-issue street improvement project were received yesterday from seven contractors at 2 p.m. in the City Council room.

The weather bureau forecast high water displaced thousands in four Southern states. Tornadoes and damaging winds brought more woe to at least three others.

The weather bureau forecast high water displaced thousands in four Southern states. Tornadoes and damaging winds brought more woe to at least three others.

Both Bridges and Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., said the investigating group hopes to steer clear of the hot political dispute about whether or not there is a missile gap, with the Soviet Union ahead in this field.

Stennis said the group wants "to determine the reliability and survivability of the family of missile systems in all three military departments."

The weatherman had issued a severe weather warning earlier today for the lower part of North Carolina, with the possibility of one or two tornadoes. The alert, until 11 a.m. today, was for the possibility of severe thunderstorms with hail and damaging winds and one or two tornadoes.

By tomorrow, however, cooler weather and clearing is expected, with relief from the rainy spell. Temperatures today ranged from 62 at 4 a.m. to 68 at 8 a.m. Friday's temperatures reached a high of 73 degrees, with a low of 51, Stoneham said.

Winds were a bit gusty today, reaching 25 to 35 miles per hour at high points here.

Other contractors and bids were: S. M. Cozart Construction Co. of Wilson, $299,938.74; J. S. Hill Construction Co. of Washington, $300,120.08; T. A. Loving Co. of Goldsboro, $309,928.63; Eastern Construction Co. of Greenville, $35,361.70 (sidewalks only).

Another contractor, Talman Construction Co. of Wilmington, submitted a bid considered by officials as being the highest of the group because of a high unit cost. A total figure from the Wilmington firm was not tabulated.

Eastern Construction Co. did not bid on the paving, excavation and curb and gutter parts of the project. Its bid covered sidewalk installation only.

French Gird For Algerian Blows

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP)—The French army was braced for action today as 20,000 rebels massed on Algeria's east and west borders for what may be a show of strength on the eve of possible peace talks.

Both the French army high command and the civilian administration in Algeria live in tense expectation of negotiations that could spell an end to the 6½ year old conflict.

Without mentioning names, he declared: "In fact a well-known principle of imperial policy proclaimed at the beginning of the 20th century by U. S. President Theodore Roosevelt—the phrase about talking softly but with a big stick in the hand."

"It is not without purpose that some statesmen in the West even now are developing the theme of the big stick in their public pronouncements."

In charge of the canvass are Mrs. J. Hampton Thomas and Mrs. W. I. Wooten, with some 15 team captains working with them.

City Manager L. P. Bloxam said today an analysis of all the bids will be made before the council's next regular meeting March 9. At the council meeting, the bids submitted yesterday will be considered and accepted or rejected.

Highly placed officials here say there is a danger that talks between France and the rebel government—ever if set up—might drag on as long as six months. They fear failure to establish peace soon could have a dangerous effect on the Moslem population who want quick results.

TV Westerns Are Liked By Japanese

By BOB THOMAS.
TOKYO (AP)—Edd Byrnes runs a comb through his golden locks and makes a crack to Roger Smith. But instead of hep Hollywood chatter, it comes out Japanese.

This is a shock to the American visitor, but it is old stuff to Japanese TV fans. American shows draw big audiences among home viewers; a recent survey showed 19 U. S. programs in the top 20 ratings. Steadily rising in popularity, especially with the younger crowd, is "77 Sunset Strip."

Westerns are a special favorite with Japanese audiences. Among them: "Wagon Train," "Laramie," "Annie Oakley," "Rawhide," "Rifleman," "Bonanza," "Strangely, the No. 1 show in the states, "Gunsmoke," is not as well liked here.

Nearly all of the filmed series are dubbed in Japanese. Exceptions are a few comedy shows, including "I Love Lucy." The reason is that the humor doesn't translate easily and has to be explained by titles.

American shows can be extremely popular in Japan, but not all of them are sure-fire. "Private Secretary" was a flop because the Japanese couldn't conceive the idea of an aggressive working woman like the one Ann Sothern played.

"Dragnet" never caught on, perhaps because the Japanese did not dig the Jack Webb style of underplaying. Yet "Highway Patrol" is a big hit here. Reason: U. S. is a less hit here. Reason: U. S. subtlety and more action.

Japanese were disappointed in the June Allison Show because she acted only as hostess in many of the dramas. They figure if an actress has her name on the program, she should appear in it. TV critics tell me it would be well to peddle oriental-type shows here. Such a series as "Hong Kong" would be laughed off the air because of Hollywood's conception of what the Far East is like.

Actually, less than half of the American product is suitable for offering here, and fewer than that can be chosen. The government restricts imported shows to 5 hours per channel each week. The limit may be raised soon, and all restrictions may vanish if Japan achieves free trade by 1962, as planned.

ASK-SEEK KNOCK

Everyone knows that success comes not to those who merely desire it, but to those who achieve it through long, hard work.

It is odd then, that in the spiritual area of life some people should expect blessings to come for the asking.

Those who really understand PRAYER know that it's more than mere asking. It is seeking. It is the hungry search for truth and moral enlightenment... digging for spiritual gold in the hills of life.

But PRAYER is something more even than seeking. It is knocking... meeting life's obstacles bravely... waiting with patient determination until closed doors open... entering portals that the more timid pass by.

We wouldn't really need churches if spiritual growth came for the asking. But we do need churches to help us seek the treasures of God. And through our churches, with the united strength of millions of Christians, we knock on the portals of the more abundant life—and there find it.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH
The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Southeastern Flower And Garden Show In Raleigh

RALEIGH — The first Southeastern Flower and Garden Show opened here Friday in the State Fair Arena with the word from Lieutenant Governor Cloyd Phillips that it "marked a new and important cultural as well as horticultural event in North Carolina and the Southeast."

The state official planted a commemorative tree and Mrs. J. B. A. Daughtridge of Rocky Mount, president of the 1,200 federated garden clubs in North Carolina, cut a chain of roses to admit the first of an expected 75,000 people to the show.

A group of 25 professionally designed and planted gardens spread over the large arena floor to comprise 10,560 square feet of growing and blooming beauty and the show's central attraction. For weeks flowering shrubs have been carefully guarded in temperature controlled greenhouses to push them along to the peak of blooming beauty in time for the show — regardless of the natural season for the appearance of blossoms. Large trees were encased in huge plastic bags, with carefully control hot air pumped in on them to induce early leafing, so the trees that tower above the gardens would be in full leaf.

In addition to the 25 "Gardens for Living", four Arena lobbies house special shows being staged by the North Carolina Orchid Society, the North Carolina Camellia Society, the North Carolina Commercial Flower Growers Association, the North Carolina Association of Nurserymen, and the North Carolina State Florist Association, as well as the North Carolina Federation of Garden Clubs.

The show will run through Tuesday, Feb. 28, opening Sunday at 2 p.m. and on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday at 11 a.m. Closing will be at 10 p.m. each day.

The 25 principal gardens present a complete range of growing and floral activities, from the coast to the mountains, and include every type and kind of garden from apartment and rooftop gardens to swimming pool and patio installations. Other principal displays include a kitchen and herb garden, a children's play area, an azalea-camellia garden, a coastal garden and mountain garden, a sculpture garden, a Japanese garden, an outdoor barbecue and dining area, a rose garden, a shrub garden, and a ground covers garden.

This marks the first time a flower show of this size and scope has been staged in the Southeast and before opening for its first year it had already become a decided "tourist attraction" as well as a focal gathering point for garden and flower lovers.

All About Town With Anne Keziah

Wedding bells are in the air again with the announcement of the forthcoming nuptials of Betsy Karsnak and Lee Stokes.

The couple met at a party in the home of mutual friends in Greensboro while Betsy was attending Woman's College and found they had many things in common, which led to a romance. Lee gave Betsy her ring in July, and they will be married in May in Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

Betsy is a Woman's College graduate, and is now a graduate student at Carolina on a Ford Foundation Fellowship. At present she is student teaching in the Winston-Salem city schools.

Duke graduate and Delta Tau Delta member, Lee received his M.B.A. from the University of Michigan and is a member of Beta Alpha Psi, honorary accounting fraternity. He is associated with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Company, Certified Public Accountants of Greensboro.

A former Winterville girl, Betty Jean Harrington, now working in Raleigh with an insurance company, will be married in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Greenville, on April 1 to Austin Lee Hoffman of Frederick, Md.

Chief sponsor of the Kappa Alpha's Old South Ball to be held in Richmond, Va. will be Greenville's Mildred Coleman. The annual fraternity affair will be held in the John Marshall Hotel, April 7-9.

Mildred's escort will be Michael Lewis of Winter Haven, Fla., who is overall chairman of the Ball. He is a senior at Duke University. Mildred and Mickey will participate in the figure.

Mildred plans to wear a gown of white embroidered organza with a white horsehair picture hat. To this she will add an antique heirloom locket.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Coleman of 208 Pineview Drive are her parents. Mildred is a sophomore at Woman's College.

Mayor and Mrs. S. Eugene West returned this week from a 10-day trip to Florida. While in Fort Lauderdale, they visited Mrs. West's brother and sister-in-law. The four of them continued together to the Keys and other interesting points enroute. The Wests also toured central Florida and the Gulf Coast. In Clearwater, they called on former Greenville residents Dr. and Mrs. P. W. Picklesimer and Miss Frances Lamb, who now make their home in Clearwater. The Picklesimers are retired and Frances Lamb is teaching in the Junior High School in Clearwater.

Greenville businessmen J. T. Marston Jr. and W. M. (Booger) Scales left Wednesday night on a skiing holiday in Canada as guests of Ken Phillips of Washington, N. C., formerly of Greenville. The trio flew from New York to Montreal where they were overnight guests at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal. From there they planned to go to a ski lodge owned by Ken Phillips' brother Don Munford. Incidentally, Ken's brother is manager of the Queen Elizabeth Hotel. They plan to return home Monday.

The Clio Book Club, named for the Muse of History, was formed in Greenville in March 1937.

Mrs. H. L. Rivers was instrumental in the organization of the club, and has remained with the group as an honorary member. The first president of the club was Mrs. Jack Spain, who at present is an associate member, as most of her time is spent in Washington, D. C.

The object of the Clio Book Club from the time of its founding has been to promote an increased interest in literature. This has been accomplished by the exchange of a varied selection of books each year and through programs planned with an emphasis on literature.

Club members have participated in the annual Fine Arts Festival Luncheon each year, assisted with fund raising campaigns for civic good, and are interested in the cultural growth and development of our community.

Charter members who are still active members of the club are Mrs. W. S. Bost, Miss Agnes Pulllove, Miss Jane Hadley, Mrs. F. B. Haar, Mrs. Luther Moore, Mrs. Dink James, Mrs. Clara Moye Shackell, and Mrs. Jesse R. Moye II.

HOME DECORATING TODAY

By MRS. R. W. DAVENPORT
DECORATING TIP TO BENEDICTS

After a lovely, companionable female, his books and his pipe, the bachelor's best friend is a carpet or rug. "Oh, yeah?" he may say. Well, let's list some reasons for this statement:

A rug or carpet can readily provide the color and design theme for the rest of his furnishings. It's easier to keep clean.

Carpet is one of the best "noise-swallowers" available for keeping a room or home quiet. For his own peace—and that of his neighbors. Carpet offers unlimited seating capacity. When entertaining, what bachelor hasn't found himself short of chairs. A rug or carpet provides guests with the whole floor to sit on with comfort.

Let's face it, carpet is still a status symbol. For the up-and-coming bachelor, there's nothing like a rug to let his friends, neighbors and business associates know he's arrived.

What's more, luxurious, comfortable, practical and beautifully designed rugs that present the "he man" look can be bought well, with the average bachelor's budget. It can be purchased on credit, too.

For these reasons and many more, carpet is the bachelor's real "buddy." Of course, it won't replace a beautiful, charming, intelligent, gracious and understanding wife, but what will?

Shop the Home Furniture Store for the carpet—not the wife.

It Would Appear The Only Answer

It shouldn't be surprising if there is some unfavorable reaction in Pitt County to the decision of the trustees of Pitt Memorial Hospital to increase by approximately 10 per cent the rates and fees charged patients at the county-owned facility.

We feel certain, nevertheless, that the trustees of the hospital were as reluctant to see the fees rise as were the other people of the county.

In considering the matter, one must not overlook a number of things which probably influenced the trustees in arriving at their decision.

During the almost four years since the rate of charges of the hospital were last increased, costs have risen for the hospital just as they have for most other businesses and institutions. It is only reasonable to expect, also that the expansion program now nearing completion at the hospital will make the facility more costly to operate.

And while the hospital is not a money-making facility, it is the responsibility of the trustees to keep the annual operating deficit of the hospital within reasonable bounds.

During the past few years, some $25,000 of county tax funds annually have gone to defraying the operating deficit of the hospital.

These funds, of course, come from the special tax that has been levied by the county each year since 1948 for the sole purpose of being used to off-set the hospital's operating deficit. In the current fiscal year this levy is three and one-half cents per $100 property valuation, and represents an increase of one cent over the levy of the two previous years.

With the prospects of an increase deficit for the hospital this year, the trustees faced a choice of either increasing the rates as they have done, or passing along to the county government a larger than normal hospital operating deficit in the years ahead. If the trustees had chosen the latter, the county in all probability would have had to increase the levy that is used to off-set the hospital deficit.

We would suppose that along with other considerations, the hospital trustees have evaluated the services being rendered by the hospital, and means of improving these services in order to provide even better medical care for the people of Pitt County.

Certainly the people of the county would much prefer that the hospital trustees take this approach even if it means a slight increase in charges, rather than holding rates where they are and risking a decline in the calibre of medical care that can be provided by the hospital.

Compulsory Insurance Need Will Continue

If legislative sentiment toward North Carolina's compulsory auto liability insurance law can be judged by statements made so far by members of the General Assembly, the law will not be allowed to die during this session of the legislature.

Signs now point not only to a continuation of the statute, but also to strengthening the requirements to afford greater protection for those who use the highways.

Although the state's Farm Bureau organization has gone on record calling for repeal of the law, and many insurance companies are fighting the legislation, Rep. Bunn Frink of Brunswick county has introduced a measure which would increase the amount of insurance a vehicle owner is required to carry under the compulsory liability law. Furthermore he has asserted he thinks the General Assembly will approve his bill to increase the required amount of insurance.

Since the law has been in effect, it has afforded greater protection for those who have suffered injuries or property damage in motor vehicle accidents than was the case before the law went on the books. It has proved its worth many times over to the people of North Carolina.

It would be wise for the legislature to consider revisions in the law on the basis of experience from the time it has been in effect, but certainly from the standpoint of the general welfare of the people of North Carolina, there is no justification for flatly repealing the legislation without providing something better in its place. The legislature is considering such revisions already, and likely more legislation will be introduced later in the session pertaining to this law.

The need for a compulsory liability insurance law will continue in North Carolina. The legislators should see that adequate legislation is provided to fill this need and that adequate protection against loss is provided for the people who use the highways of the state.

Forget Guesses On R.M. Nixon

By JAMES MARLOW WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless you like applause, forget the guesses about Richard M. Nixon's presidential intentions.

What the highly ambitious former vice president does depends on how he figures his chances. He has another three years to examine them.

Now he probably doesn't know himself whether he'll try again. Too many things can happen by 1964 to change his mind, one way or the other.

One thing is sure: Unless the Democrats make a total mess of it, he will never be able to run again under circumstances as favorable for him as those of 1960.

There were so favorable they looked ideal: Eight years in the public mind as vice president, overwhelming Republican endorsement, and the help and blessing of the highly popular President Eisenhower.

If he couldn't win with all that going for him, and he didn't, both he and his party will have to think hard before he puts on his track suit again.

His silence since November was normal. He would have been blamed for bad taste if he had sounded off before President Kennedy even got started.

Nixon is expected to join a West Coast law firm. He may start making speeches in a few months. That would be normal, too.

As the Republicans' presidential candidate in 1960, he is titular head of the party and will be expected to talk out until the 1964 campaign.

But his standing in the party seems to be uncertain that even his role as titular head has been challenged. Not by Eisenhower, he says that's Nixon's right position.

But New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has already called Nixon leader of the party in name only. He has declared for a "collective leadership."

Buzzard's Roost Is Gone

Cities and portions of cities have a way of holding on to quaint old names and using them for slogans. Thus Philadelphia is known as "The City of Brotherly Love."

In North Carolina Charlotte is "The Queen City" Winston-Salem is "The Twin City" Wilmington is "The Port City" and Greensboro is "The Gate City."

And in each of the cities there are no doubt sections which have promotional names of their own such as Raleigh's "Cameron Village."

And this leads us to our subject for today. Some of Greenville's choicest business property is perched right on top of a section whose old name the merchants are probably just as happy to see forgotten.

I'm speaking of the section of Greenville which was once known by the stirring name of "Buzard's Roost." A little research places its center in the vicinity of Fifth and Cotanche Sts., a point now surrounded by some of Greenville's higher type stores. Its boundaries depend on the particular era the individuals happen to recall.

Whatever its boundaries were, Buzard's Roost was quite a place in its day. And its day seems to have lasted until sometime between the turn of the century and World War I.

Policeman J.L. Whichard recalls it as the lively stable district back in the time when the horse was the main means of transportation. Others recollect that the town's saloons lined Cotanche St. when open bars were strictly legal.

But Herbert Elks, a 76-year-old retired tobacco buyer who came to Greenville in 1913, told me how the area got its name.

He said that back in those early days Greenville came to an end in the Cotanche St. area. Beyond that there were dead pine trees standing in the area now occupied by the Junior High School, dwellings and assorted buildings. Buzzards used to roost in these dead trees.

The boys in Doghead used to set their dogs loose in the roosting area and scare the buzzards away, Elks recalls.

As everyone knows Doghead was and is located in the Carolina Grill area at Dickinson Ave. and Ninth Sts. Again this area's boundaries depend on who's doing the talking.

Well, over the years Buzard's Roost has seen considerable change. The lively stables, with the exception of one, gradually disappeared as the auto came on the scene and people went out many years ago. In their places modern stores arose and Fifth St. built up out in front of the college to become a fashionable residential district.

Buzard's Roost as a name got lost over the years and today the average man wouldn't know what you were talking about if you dusted off the name. But in a bygone era it proved to be a suitable name.

Review Of Gold History

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The organization of the Federal Reserve System was momentous in American economic history. The currency problem had bedeviled the United States since the founding of the nation. There were times when there was no system at all—local banks were issuing currency and sometimes money became so tight that 125 per cent was paid for call money. From time to time banks failed and the depositors lost all that was put into them.

In 1906, when the country was moving toward a financial panic, Jacob H. Schiff, one of the most brilliant minds ever to come to Wall Street, warned that unless the currency of the country were reformed, a panic of major dimensions would ensue. The Panic of 1907 duly arrived and it was a dilly. It started with the run on the Knickerbocker Trust Company in New York. When a run on a bank of good repute starts, anxiety appears throughout the country. This was a currency panic; the banks simply did not have enough money on hand to meet the demands of their customers. It was during this panic that J. P. Morgan asserted his leadership in American finance; he, in effect, ordered the banks to obey his dictum and pulled the country through.

From that moment on, it became obvious that the currency of this country would have to be systematized. In 1913, the Federal Reserve System was organized, and all banks were, one might say, in a mutual self-protective association. However, the Federal Reserve System can only function to absolute advantage if the economy of the country is sound and its currency secure.

The Federal Reserve Bank, in effect, amounts to a centralization of reserves. Over the regional Federal Reserve Banks is a Federal Reserve Board. Every national bank must, and state trust companies may contribute to the capital of the Federal Reserve Bank in its district. The Federal Reserve System is not a central bank in the European sense, but it serves to mobilize and control credit and it can put a brake upon a political treasury which might stimulate inflation.

Since its organization in 1913, this country has gone through two major wars, a depression in depth, a continuing military and economic military expensive operation called the Cold War, a faulty gold policy since 1933—and its currency has thus far survived every attack although at this moment, as in the period between 1929-1934, it is in serious peril.

The London Economic Conference of the League of Nations was called in 1933. Its agenda said: "In the field of monetary and credit policy, the objective must be the restoration of an effective international monetary standard to which the countries which have abandoned the gold standard can wisely adhere. Each government must, of course, provide effectual safeguards against such a restoration of the gold standard leading to a fresh breakdown..."

Assembly Plans Further Jaunts

By LYNN NISBET

JAUNTS — The current General Assembly has accepted invitations to hold formal legislative sessions at Greensboro on February 28 and Winston-Salem on April 19. Invitations are pending or contemplated for visits to other points throughout the state, most of them not calling for sessions of record for the journal.

This will be the first time in 170 years that more than one day of the General Assembly has been held outside of Raleigh. Before the state capital was permanently based in Raleigh in 1792, the Legislature met at various points in the state. Since 1793 every General Assembly has convened and held most of its meetings in Raleigh. From 1793 until 1937 no daily meeting of record had been held by the Legislature out of Raleigh.

By authority of a joint resolution a legislative day was held at Edenton in 1937. Two years later, the 1939 assembly held a record day meeting in Charlotte — farthest west of any meeting of the North Carolina General Assembly. The 1959 assembly also held an official one day session in Charlotte.

Meantime one-day official sessions of the General Assembly had been held at Chapel Hill and New Bern, including one in Tryon Palace two years ago. And there have been numerous jaunts when the Legislature made informal visits to Camp Lejeune, Cherry Point, Fort Bragg, Seymour — Johnson Air Force Base, and other points of interest, but which did not include official sessions for recording in the House Senate Journals.

CLOSE TO BASE — So far as your reporter can learn from check of records and interviews with old timers around the capitol, the only "official" meetings of the General Assembly held outside of Raleigh since 1793 has been one at Edenton, two at Charlotte, one each at Elizabeth City, Chapel Hill and two New Bern. The 1961 assembly already has accepted invitations for two out of town official one-day sessions.

There have been several invitations for unofficial jaunts of the legislative membership.

There are rumors that invitations may come later for the General Assembly to hold a record-day session at Asheville or some other point in the far west.

JUSTIFICATION — Question has been raised as to whether these visits of the Legislature can be justified. Majority opinion seems to favor them, for several reasons; although there is recognized hazard from some viewpoints.

Perhaps more important than giving citizens an opportunity to see the Legislature in session is the opportunity afforded legislators on these trips to see more of North Carolina, and to meet North Carolinians on their home grounds.

OTHERS — An invitation has been extended to the members of the Legislature to attend a forestry demonstration in the Sandhills on March 29. The affair is sponsored by the Seaboard Air Line railroad and a number of other firms interested in forestry. A special train will be operated between Raleigh and Southern Pines. This will not be a formal meeting of the assembly, but a demonstration in improved tree culture.

Almost certainly there will be other invitations for offside trips to industrial or historic places. Objection is sometimes raised to these "jaunts," but many legislators think they serve to relieve the tension that builds up toward the end of the session and that they really speed up work rather than retarding it.

Besides the out of town trips, there are numerous group parties staged at Raleigh. Plans are now in the making for such a party for the members from the northwestern part of the state, and also for representatives of counties along the coast.

Another Embezzlement Is Uncovered In Iowa

KNOXVILLE, Iowa (AP)—Examiners were at work today clearing up details of Iowa's third big bank embezzlement in two months.

The latest case to light Friday when Eldon L. Job, 59, president of the Community National Bank and Trust Co. of Knoxville, hanged himself, leaving an estimated half-million-dollar shortage that stunned this town of 7,817 in south central Iowa.

Job left a "dead man's confession" saying that he used the bank's money through forged notes to cover bad investments and to make donations around town.

Unlike the situation at Sheldon in northwest Iowa where a $2-million embezzlement closed the Sheldon National Bank, the Knoxville institution was covered by a $1-million fidelity bond which officials said more than took care of the shortage. Business at Community National went on as usual.

The Sheldon bank closed on Jan. 16 with the arrest of the assistant cashier, Burnice Geiger. She admitted the embezzlement and later was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

A note left by Job, in which he was said to have accounted for every penny of the shortage was made public by E. W. Morgan of Des Moines, a national bank examiner.

He said he could not disclose the amount at this time but Richard Darnell, assistant cashier of the bank, said it totaled more than $500,000. Some bank sources placed it as high as $700,000.

Auto Firms Plan For Seat Belts

DETROIT (AP)—The auto industry is going to make it easier for you to put seat belts in your car.

Starting with the 1962 models, all the major domestic manufacturers will install safety belt attachments in the front seats of all passenger autos. The anchors will be affixed to the autobody or sub-frame.

The companies said Friday that they will provide uniform attachments built to industry-wide specifications to provide buyers with an easy, economical method of attaching seat belts. Previous costs have run as high as $20 per belt because of the drilling and other labor costs. Now the buyer will have to pay additionally only for the belt. Belts alone cost as little as $3.50.

New York State Sen. Edward J. Speno visited the automakers here this week with a delegation from his state. Speno heads a legislative committee on motor vehicle safety in New York. He has introduced a law requiring that all autos sold in the state starting with the 1962 model year carry such attachment points.

Speno said research has proved that deaths can be reduced 50 per cent and serious injuries 60 per cent by using seat belts.

Ford has been offering seat belts as optional equipment since 1955, but has had few takers.

Speno said he hoped safety belts would receive much wider acceptance now that they will be much cheaper and easier to install.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, American Motors and Studebaker-Packard all said they will install the belt attachments as standard equipment.

Activity Increasing On Airports Scene

NEW YORK (AP)—The nation's airports were abuzz with increasing activity today as more of the big jets and propeller craft, stilled during a six-day walkout of flight engineers, got back into the air.

Six of the seven airlines crippled during the strike, the worst and costliest in American aviation history, were on normal or near-normal schedules today.

These were Pan American, American, Trans World, Eastern, National and Flying Tigers—airlines taking part in an agreement turned to work while a presidential commission searches for a remedy to the basic cause of the strike.

The seventh airline snarled in the unauthorized strike—Western—refused to join in the return-to-work plan and had only token service in effect.

Western fired its 130 flight engineers and plans eventually to replace them with pilots trained to handle their duties.

Western announced early today it was restoring some service to several mountain states by using supervisory personnel in place of the engineers. It is continuing 2-350 workers on furlough.

The six others began cranking-up operations Thursday night after President Kennedy personally announced an end to the strike which cost the affected airlines an estimated $40 million.

Many millions more were lost by vacation resorts and industries connected with air travel. Travel plans of an estimated 500,000 persons were knocked out during the walkout.

The complaint which prompted the engineers to walk off their jobs stemmed from a National Mediation Board decision that the Flight Engineers Union and the Air Line Pilots' Association at United Air Lines must vote for one union as a bargaining agent.

Finds Promise In Cancer Research

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Development of a promising new drug for cancer control was reported Friday by Dr. Van R. Potter, assistant director of the McCordell Laboratory of Cancer Research at the University of Wisconsin.

The drug, effective only in some types of cancer, has been tested on more than 600 patients with excellent results, he said in a speech to a symposium on fundamental cancer research at the University of Texas M. D. Anderson Hospital.

He said the drug interferes with certain chemical reactions involved in the reproduction of cancer cells and must be used throughout the life of the patient.

"I don't believe there is or will be a universal cure for cancer," Dr. Potter said.

Estimated $700 Damage In Wreck

An estimated $700 damage resulted last night when two cars collided at the intersection of 10th and Elm Sts.

Officers identified the drivers involved in the 9:55 p.m. collision as Donald Earl Lee, 16, of Route 5, Greenville, and Robert Lee Nichols, 40, of 1119 Overlook Dr.

According to investigators, the Lee car struck the rear of the Nichols vehicle, which was stopped for a traffic light, headed east on 10th St.

Officers quoted Lee as saying his shoes were wet, and when he attempted to apply his brakes, his foot slipped from the pedal and the collision occurred.

Damage to the Lee car was set at $400 while damage to the Nichols vehicle was estimated to be about $300.

600,000-Year-Old Crime Believed To Be Uncovered

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP)—The bones of a man and child who lived among saber-toothed tigers more than 600,000 years ago have been found in east Africa.

Reporting the discovery Friday, a British anthropologist said they were the oldest human bones ever uncovered. Also, the child's bones represent "the oldest crime ever to come to light," he said.

"Murder most foul," was the description Dr. L. S. B. Leakey gave to the pieces of the child's skull. Skull fracture lines and other evidence convinced the anthropologist that "the child was murdered with a blunt instrument."

Leakey, curator of the Coryndon Museum in Nairobi, Kenya, said the bones were found the past year in the Olduvai Gorge region of Tanganyika, a rich anthropological site.

The discovery means that the 600,000 year old "Nutcracker man" (zinzanthropus), whose bones Leakey discovered in 1959, is no longer the oldest human on record. "Nutcracker man" turned up in the same area as the new-found bones, but at a different level.

The latest discovery was credited by Leakey to his son, Jonathan, 19. "My son had found part of the jaw of a saber-toothed tiger," the scientist said, "and then, in searching for more tiger bones, we struck humans."

The research was partly financed by the National Geographic Society. Leakey told of the new find—and of still another—at a news conference Friday preceding a Society lecture.

He was even more enthusiastic over the additional discovery, the skull of "Chellean man," who came along much later than "Nutcracker man," but who represented "the first prehistoric creature ever accepted by science."

Leakey said tools and other artifacts of "Chellean man" were found more than 100 years ago, but bones that would indicate what he looked like remained buried in the sands of time. That is until last December, when Leakey discovered the first skull.

"We can't say for certain," he said, "but there's a very high probability that Chellean man was the stem from which modern man developed."

As to the earliest evidence of man's inhumanity to man, Leakey said: "I know enough about medicine to say that the nature of this fracture was such as would be caused by a blow on the head with a blunt instrument. I've never seen that type of fracture from an accidental fall."

The scientist said he could not estimate how much older the new-found humans are than "Nutcracker man," which the Society says had been listed by anthropologists as the earliest man known. Certain characteristics of the new-found bones, Leakey said, suggest they were from humans "possibly nearer to present-day man" than "Nutcracker," even though older-in-time.

There is not enough evidence to indicate if the oldest man walked erect, but where he lived was believed a haunt of saber-toothed tigers. These humans were scavengers, getting their meat from remnants left over by tigers after a kill. The meat was skinned with primitive tools.

The adult bones indicate "some teeth, bits of skull, a collar bone and possibly a piece of an arm." The bones of the child, whose age was estimated at 11, included "two bits of skull, a small piece of the occipital bone, a bone at the back of the skull, a collar bone, a large part of a foot, some parts of the hand, and the jaw."

Sound Alert For Polluted Oysters

RALEIGH (AP)—Local health officers have been asked to watch out for oysters suspended of coming from polluted beds near Pascaoula, Miss.

The State Board of Health spread the alarm Friday after it received word from the U.S. Public Health Service.

The federal agency said the suspected beds were closed Feb. 18 and recommended that sale of oysters from three Mississippi packers from shipments made before Feb. 18 "be halted on basis of suspected pollution."

The oysters would have one of these three symbols printed on the container: Miss 145, Miss 166 or Miss 125.

In fact, instead of Europe needing help because of the dollar gap, the United States needs assistance to hold its gold reserve.

Painstaking Inquiry By Plain Clothes Division

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer
Probably, to most people, when the words "police department" are mentioned, the first thing that comes to mind are the uniformed officers, who are seen walking the street or patrolling the city in a patrol car. Little thought is given to the men who wear business suits . . . the men of the plain clothes division.

These investigators, like the uniformed officers, perform a very vital task. To them falls the job of investigating a large number of the complaints registered with the local police department.

Much time and painstaking work, including scientific examinations, go into the investigations made by the detectives before many cases can be marked "closed" and the folder on the crime filed away in the department's files.

The Greenville Police Department's plain clothes division includes five men. Cpt. R. T. Rogerson heads the division, with detectives, Lt. H. F. Lawson, Clyde Stubbs and Jack Russell, and identification officer J. L. Kerr.

How are these officers called in to investigate a case? First, a complaint has to be made. Usually the complaint is received by telephone by the uniformed officer on the desk, although uniformed officers themselves may call in and report a suspicious situation that they think warrants investigating.

When a complaint is received three copies are made. One is retained by the uniformed force and is turned in with the daily work sheets of that shift. The two remaining copies are turned over to the plainclothes division and action begins on the case.

In the event the case is not disposed of during that four of duty, one of the complaints is filled out by the detectives, giving a synopsis of the progress made on the case, and turned in and placed with the daily work sheets. The remaining complaint is retained by the detectives until the case is disposed of.

First comes the preliminary investigation, and, if possible, the answers to the "five w's", who, what, where, when and why, are secured.

Next, in cases which call for such records, photos are made of the crime scene to record the locations of evidence and the appearance of the scene. The area is then dusted for fingerprints and if any are found, they are first photographed, then lifted, to be compared later with the prints of the suspect.

There is an endless stream of questioning. Everyone who has or might have some knowledge of the case is checked. In addition, persons who are known by the police department to have committed similar crimes are checked, and if it is thought necessary, are brought in for questioning.

In serious crimes, suspects are brought to the police department where they are "mugged" and fingerprinted.

QUESTIONING A SUSPECT . . . are detectives, Lt. Lawson, Cpt. Rogerson and Russell.

After this procedure, which very often takes hours and hours of painstaking work, the criminal is arrested.

The mere arrest of the criminal does not, however, end the department's work on the case.

An "M.O." file, containing pictures of the arrested man, his description and the type of crime, as well as his method of operation, is made up and placed in the records of the department. A fingerprint file and file jacket are also made up on the arrested man. The file jacket contains the person's picture and his criminal record.

In addition, an offense report is compiled on the case, and containing pictures of the crime scene and all rough notes taken during the investigation, among other things. This file includes the basic ingredients on which the state's case is based when the case is taken to court.

Finally, after the case is tried and disposed of in court, an incident card, giving all information relating to the case and its outcome in court, is typed up and placed in another permanent file.

Thus, another case is brought to an end. Another criminal, who infringed on the rights of a citizen, is brought to justice through the untiring effort of a modern police department.

Examination Marathon Is Ending

By HENRY HOWARD

Reflector Staff Writer
East Carolina College's quarterly examination marathon ends at noon today.

With its ending began the usual brief student vacation that allows the examiner to record and report results and the examined to "take a breather" after the long grind. As the last wave of students piled into autos at five minutes past noon, instructors counted a total of 362 final examinations completed. A total of 4,405 students participated.

What do the subjects of this intensive testing process think of it all? With what degree of seriousness do they regard the "time of reckoning" that so punctually marks the close of each quarter?

A limited and somewhat informal spot check of ECC's student ranks would seem to indicate the nearly 4,500 collegians may be divided into 10 main categories.

Division lines drawn, however, were found to be misleading since many students apparently possessed varying quantities of qualities of more than a single group. In fact the survey indicated some students seemed to have the characters of virtually ever category—depending upon the time of day, the student's mood, the next upcoming exam and other variables.

The survey was limited to only a sample of the student body. In fact, the surveyors reported the "whole deal was abandoned somewhat earlier than originally anticipated because of an extremely wide variation in student sentiment regarding final examinations."

Discovered and disclosed by the survey were the following general types:

THE GRADE HUNTER was described by the survey team as the character who could scarcely care less about the real value of his potentiality as an educated individual.

His prime objective was to cross the finish line with a high grade, regardless of whether any subject matter had been or ever would be retained. A prominent tool advocated by the "Grade Hunter" was night-before cramming.

HURDLERS were found to be a popular group who regarded each exam as the "last obstacle to get by" in hurdling a particular course.

Each course was considered by the Hurdler as a literal hurdle—not a stepping stone—to graduation. The main theme was "getting by" not "completing the course."

PERFECTIONISTS were not a common breed on campus. Several, however, were discovered who were intense in their study efforts. A real desire to learn as much as possible during the quarter was apparent.

The Perfectionist was found to be often slightly nervous from his fear of failing in the most minute detail to complete his examination to perfection. This urge toward perfection was apparently aimed at genuine self-satisfaction rather than high grade.

JUST-ENOUGHERS were not uncommon. Surveyors found a considerable number of the collegians who were quite content to study "just enough to pass that exam."

The Just-Enoughers, as a rule, considered many extra-curricular activities more important than his status in the scholastic ranks. On the academic side, he seemed permanently adhered to his contrived principle: "Guard against the cardinal mistake of wasted effort—anything above passing is wasted."

WORRIERS were comparatively sparse, but drew special attention from the survey team. Surveyors professed utter amazement at the high degree of anxiety discovered in many good students.

Generally considered quite proficient in his academic performance, the Worrier, who had generally outstudied everybody on the hall by several hours per exam, was gradually building himself into a nervous wreck as the moments before exam time ticked painstakingly by.

He was supposedly well-prepared, but had preconceived every calamity that could possibly arise inside the examination room. He sat there in a cold sweat as if he were awaiting the gravest of disasters.

THE AMBITIOUS type was described as being deeply engrossed in his studies. His concentration powers, stemming mostly from a genuine and definite purpose, amazed the surveyors, the report said.

He was not overly concerned with the immediate result from his labor, but with the far-reaching effect a job well-done in college could have on a future career. The surveyors admitted they were "quite impressed" with the "organized and efficient manner in which this type conducted his personal preparation for examination."

INTENT SCHOLARS, named by the survey, were found to be "definitely intrigued by each and every subject upon which an examination was upcoming." The Intent Scholars were seen as "possessing a genuine interest in the face value of a subject and its implications." This type was conspicuously unconcerned about results of examinations, taking satisfactory grades for granted.

A PLAYFUL element was discovered in many students. This group appeared at least mildly interested in "sending home good grades to the folks" and posting high enough grades "to stay in school."

The sober nature of this category, however, apparently ended with that. Beyond satisfying the persons "who really count—at school—and at home," this category of students was apparently inclined most to "sort of live it up," the survey reported.

INDIFFERENCE was another "noteworthy" characteristic observed by the survey team. This group, it said, "showed a most disturbing trait of apparent complete preoccupation with situations a million miles away from campus."

Another manifest characteristic or "symptom," the survey said, was the apparent feeling of being hopelessly "snowed under." It continued: "The thing about it is: they so willingly—almost eagerly—concede defeat to the looming examinations."

NON-CONFORMISTS were formed by the surveyors in various corners of the campus. This breed was apparently sufficiently interested in "quality education, of sorts," the survey said, "but its interests were against existing testing, instruction, grading and other systems. Some even objected to the width of campus sidewalks and would rather argue the subject than prepare for quarter's end examinations."

A summary attached to the "completed" survey explained the researchers decided to abandon their efforts shortly after discovery of the Non-Conformist.

A post-script said the captain of the research team had "abandoned all hopes of establishing definite divisions of the student body by characteristic since fragments of many characteristics were found to be present in an astonishing number of interviewees."

Conspicuous by their absence were any "recommendations growing from the survey."

The survey captain had scrawled across the bottom of the last page: "A new quarter begins Wednesday."

Fountain Of Lava Shot Up 100 Feet

HONOLULU (AP) — Halemau-neighborhood area in Hawaii National Park.

A string of a half dozen fountains spewed red hot lava up to 100 feet in the air after a chunk of a shelf along the inner wall of the pit dropped, leaving a gaping crevice about midway in the 500-foot-deep crater.

The collapsing shelf caused a rift which sent glowing, molten lava spurting through the jagged crust of old, solidified lava into the new crevice.

Kilauea volcano, about 4,000 feet above sea level on the slopes of Mauna Loa, is one of the largest active volcanoes today. Its last outburst was Feb. 19, 1960, when it wiped out small Kapoho village and caused about $5 million damage.

Volcano observatory official Rurt Loucks told The Associated Press Friday night that activity had ceased at 3:10 p.m.

"There's still quite a glow where fresh lava fell," he said, "and there's quite a flow back into the rift where the lava came from."

Loucks said seismographs in the area were still registering some activity.

"We're not writing it off until this stops," he said. "The eruption could come back."

Plans Announced For Rose High School Science Fair

By CRAIG WORTHINGTON

Rose High's Science Club has announced plans for this year's Science Fair. Each student taking biology, chemistry, or physics will enter a project in this annual affair.

Students will mount their projects Wednesday, March 15. Judging will be completed in time for those attending the PTA meeting March 16 to view the exhibits. Friday, March 17, will be an open day for students and parents to visit the fair.

This year there is to be only the Senior Division. Although freshmen physical science students are not required to submit a project, they may enter one in the Senior Division.

Judges, who are selected from outside the school, will award first, second, and third places in each of two classes — biological and physical. One honorable mention in each class will be awarded.

Winners in the local fair will be eligible to take their projects to the Northeastern District Science Fair at East Carolina College Friday, March 24.

President of the Science Club, Peter Hunt, has announced the following committees:

Decorations: Jimmy Eatman, chrmn.; Shaaron Bailey, Jimmy Blythe, Chappy Bradner, Peggy Briley, Barbara Brooks, Linda Davenport, Nell Davis, Melvin Root, and Louis Jones.

Duty: Tex Hooks, chrmn.; J.B. Surles, Dick Atkinson, Erky Duff, Steve Humbert, Mike Martin, David Mosier, Dalton Owens, and Arrangement: John Behr, chrmn.; Sara Webb, Emily Stancl, Esther Johnson, and Sylvia Edwards.

Electricity: Sonny Parkinson and Stanley Bowers, chrmn.; Sammy Mayo, and Tom Campbell.

Tables: Danny Smith, chrmn.; Ben White, Joe Waldrop, Phil Sheppard, Doug Stott, Scott Smiley, Richard Paul, Billy Hunnings, Ray Hooks, and Phil Savage.

Other Science Club officers include Mike Martin, vice-president; Sara Collier Webb, secretary; and Esther Johnson, treasurer. James D. Nicholson, science instructor, advises the club.

Azalea Festival Senior Alice Cannon has been selected by the high school student body to represent the school at the Azalea Festival in Wilmington April 6-9.

This 14th annual festival will usher in the spring season at a time when the Port City's million azaleas will be in full bloom. The festival will feature azalea gardens, parades, many glamorous stars and other celebrities, and entertainment designed for the entire family.

At a later date, the Queen of the festival and her court will be announced. Last year, famous movie star Linda Christian reigned over the festivities as Queen Azalea XIII.

National Guard Speakers Representatives Baker and Arthur from the local unit of the National Guard spoke to senior boys

Wednesday morning concerning fulfilling their military obligation in the Army National Guard.

For boys between the ages of 17 and 18, the Guard has this plan: six months of active duty training with the army, three years of service in one's hometown Guard unit, then 4 1/2 years in the Standby Reserve to complete one's entire military obligation. During the three years, summer training of 15 days is also required.

Anyone between 18 1/2 and 26 years may take the six months of active duty and then serve in their hometown unit for 3 1/2 years with fifteen days each summer in addition to the weekly meetings. This also would complete one's military obligation.

The speakers pointed out that the National Guard is indeed older than this country. For Colonial units such as these formed the bulk of American forces during the revolutionary war.

When someone joins the Guard and becomes a civilian-soldier or airman, he is eligible for training at government expense in many different technical schools. Lt. Arthur emphasized that when well-trained, one is able to render greater service to the country and to themselves.

Thousands Flooded Out Of Mississippi Homes

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP)—"I'm going back," the old man said as he stared blankly. "I can't swim, but I'm going back." Then he added sadly: "But I have nothing to go back to."

He was one of about 400 white victims of the rampaging Bonie and Leaf rivers which join at the northeastern corner of this city of 35,000. About 4,200 Negroes have been flooded out of their homes.

Some refugees had to be forced to move. J. B. Walters, who borrowed a motorboat to help evacu-some cases—reached the ceiling and ruined everything in the house.

White refugees were housed in the Community Center, the VFW home, in homes of friends and relatives. Negroes were taken to churches and schools. Separate infirmaries were set up for whites and Negroes and physicians were busy giving typhoid shots.

The Red Cross, Salvation Army, Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts, high school and college students and other volunteers pitched in to help. There was no color line in the emergency.

At the Rowan (Negro) High School, shelter for perhaps 1,000 Negroes, Ollie Mae Cole, the cafeteria manager, said white Girl Scouts and college students had helped to serve food.

"They are working in every capacity," she said. "I don't know what I could have done without them and the teachers from all different schools. Some young

First Church of Christ, Scientist

How the application of Christ Jesus' teaching to daily living brings increased blessings to mankind will be emphasized at Christian Science services Sunday.

Among the Scriptural selections to be read in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Christ Jesus" is the passage in which the Master states: "Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will shew you to whom he is like: he is like a man which built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock" (Luke 6:47, 48).

Correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include this (15:28-30): "Practice not profession, understanding not belief, gain the ear and right hand of omnipotence and they assuredly call down infinite blessings."

PAUL HORGAN'S GREAT HISTORICAL NOVEL A DISTANT TRUMPET

CHAPTER I In the late summer of '64 when school was barely begun, and bees were still above the clover in the meadows, and boys ran bare-foot, and women went every day to read the Army lists on the post-office door, the town of Fox Creek, Indiana, heard some rousing news.

Book Of Poems Will Be Published

Mrs. Maybell Roberson

ROBERSONVILLE — On Monday a book of poems and drawings by Mrs. Maybell Roberson, housewife, mother, poet and artist of Robersonville, will be published. The title of the book is "Windows of Life." The poems are lyrical in expression, each accompanied by a drawing by Mrs. Roberson. Though she has been actively interested in art most of her life and has authored poems for several years, Mrs. Roberson's book came about almost by accident. A friend suggested some time ago that she collect her poems for publication, and she decided not only to collect the poems, but to illustrate each one as well. The Exposition Press of New York after inquiry, accepted the work for publication. Originally Mrs. Roberson was an Everette of Everetts, North Carolina, though she moved to Robersonville at a very early age. There she has lived most of her life, marrying William Hugh Roberson of Robersonville. A graduate of Robersonville high school, she attended Davenport College in Lenoir, a college now nonexistent. It was there that she met her art instructor, Mary D. Ramsey. The next year, Mrs. Roberson attended Fairfax Hall in Virginia and then completed her education at Anderson College, Anderson, South Carolina, where Mrs. Ramsey had accepted teaching duties. She completed college in three years, with a major in art. She taught school for a few years in Robersonville, and then taught the fifth, sixth and seventh grades in a school about four miles from Robersonville. The same year in which she was married, 1928, Mrs. Roberson operated a gift shop with another resident of Robersonville. She also has worked as a milliner in her father's store in Robersonville, Barnhill Brothers. Mrs. Roberson has a studio in her home and has in the past taught painting. She became interested in writing poems three or four years ago, when a high school student asked her help in writing a poem for a school assignment. In Robersonville, she is a member of the local book club, garden club, Eastern Star and is a member of the First Christian Church. Her husband is engaged in farming and automobile interests. They have a daughter, Martha, and a son, Hugh, Jr.

Courts Reform Drive Off To Early Start This Year

By ROBERT A. WILLIS RALEIGH (AP) — The forces for court improvements, state-mated in the legislature two years ago, sounded the trumpets this week for a fresh drive toward enactment of their program. Rep. H. P. Taylor Jr. of Anson was joined by 16 other House Members in sponsoring a bill designed to give the state a unified system of courts by 1971. The bill, which would amend the state constitution, would provide for a "unified courts system" over which the State Supreme Court would have general administrative authority. The court system would include the Supreme Court, the present system of Superior Courts and a new system of district courts which would eventually replace the present piecemeal inferior court set-up — county courts, recorder's courts, municipal courts and the like. An appeals court would be set up later between Superior Courts and the Supreme Court. The bill, prepared by the legislative committee of the State Bar Association, is based on court legislation approved by legislative committees in 1959 but defeated on the House floor. If the General Assembly approves the measure, it must be submitted for the people for ratification since it amends the state constitution. Elsewhere, the Joint Appropriations and Joint Finance committees heard pleas for adding to the $1.5 billion budget proposed for the next biennium, and suggestions for raising the added millions conceded to be necessary. Gov. Sanford said he will address the assembly March 6 to outline his revenue proposals to finance his $70 million education program. The Joint Appropriations Committee held hearings for several state agencies and private organizations, which asked that a total of more than $4 million extra be set aside for them during the next biennium. The Joint Finance Committee received a list of possible tax sources and the amount that might be realized from them, including taxes on tobacco and soft drinks, and increases in the sales tax. Several "lawyers' bills" were introduced in the assembly by Reps. A. A. Zollicoffer of Vance and David M. Britt of Robeson and Sens. W. Lunsford of Halifax and John C. Kesler of Rowan. Among their proposed changes in the law were bills to allow solicitors to argue for the death sentence in a capital case and permit non-jury trial of uncontested divorce cases in Superior Courts. Revenue Commissioner William Johnson told the Joint Finance Committee the state might realize $8.2 million during fiscal 1961-63 from a two-cent tax per package of cigarettes; $1.3 million from a one-cent cigar tax; $10.5 million from a one-cent crown tax on soft drinks; $1 per gallon of syrup and fountain drinks, and one cent on each five-cent soft drink sale; $13.7 million from a one-half per cent increase in the sales tax; and $67 million by removing all sales tax exemptions. Biggest spending requests were made before the Appropriations Committee by the State Welfare Commission, which wanted $2.2 billion added to its $21 million budget; the State Library, $101,499 for the library itself and $1.3 million for state aid to public libraries; and the Oxford Orphanage, $96,500 more in grants.

Senior Has Exhibit In 'Kate Lewis Gallery'

A new senior exhibit by Alice Frost Smith of Garland, North Carolina, is currently hanging in the Kate Lewis Gallery of the Rawl Building, East Carolina College. Miss Smith, a painting major, has chosen one theme around which she has centered all her work. Variety in the techniques and symbolism almost denies the common motif which was the origin of all the works. An impressionistic treatment of two figures in a landscape is the first of a series of paintings, built around the theme, "Destitute." Two expressionistic canvases convey the feeling of the original idea rather than the visual image. The painting process and the demands created by the painting itself are of primary importance to Miss Smith. She says, "I am exhibiting not pictures of the visual real, but paintings of the unseen real, which are none the less true, honest, and real in feeling. My major interest is in the colors and the paint, not a boy, a man, a tree or a fence. They simply serve as the works and skeleton for the color and the paint." "In these paintings, I am not trying to imitate God's Nature, but simply to share something that I cannot say." Miss Smith is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie L. Smith, Jr., of Garland, North Carolina. She plans to teach art after graduation and continue her own personal development as a young painter. Her exhibit may be seen through the month of February.

Nine members attended the meeting Thursday.

Godfrey Leaving 'Candid Camera'

NEW YORK (AP)—Arthur Godfrey says he is bowing out as master of ceremonies of the CBS television show, "Candid Camera." There have been reports of disension between Godfrey and others connected with the Sunday night show, including the program's creator, Allen Funt. Godfrey, in a statement released Thursday night through CBS, said he wanted "to be free to do my own shows and am looking at several formats that have been proposed." Godfrey wished good luck to Funt and other associates on the show.

Double Trouble Mosquitoes 'Won'

DOUBLE TROUBLE, N.J. (AP)—Double trouble, toil and trouble, the mosquitoes won at Double Trouble. That was the story Thursday from the New Jersey Highway Authority, which announced that it is abandoning the Garden State Parkway's Double Trouble picnic area to the mosquitoes that breed in a nearby cranberry bog. Double Trouble, four miles south of Toms River, "just doesn't lend itself to a picnic area," said Carl J. Teegen, the highway authority's chief engineer. stood looking at everyone, and Matthew thought he looked sadly at him, because—Matthew suddenly jumped with a fearful thought. The President was almost gone away, believing that Matthew Hazard did not know who he was and didn't care! "No, there!" cried Matthew. He hit the air in a leap and began to run up the tracks after the special train under the smoky sun. He was determined to catch the train and make things right with the President. He put up his head and grieved harder. He thought he was gaining, but the clackety-clack of the wheels ahead of him went faster. Then he saw Mr. Lincoln lean out from under his rear-plateform canopy into the sunlight to help him. The President clapped his hands and Matthew flew. The President stomped his big right foot in time with running and Matthew puffed and romped. The engine blew and Matthew was ready to burst. The space widened between him and the last car. He was going to lose. He faltered. Mr. Lincoln suddenly put up his hand. "Wait!" he said. "I'll be under the roof, and yanked it hard many times. The train at once began to slow to a stop.
