Cuban Delegate's Death Delayed Debate On Congo

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko reopens the explosive Congo question before the U.N. General Assembly today after an overnight delay because of the death of a Cuban delegate. Manuel Bisbe, 55, Cuba's permanent representative at the United Nations, collapsed outside the General Assembly hall Monday and died of a heart attack just before the Congo debate was to open. The assembly adjourned after observing a minute of silence. In launching the new Congo debate, Gromyko was expected to attack the decision of Congo President Joseph Kasavubu and other anti-Communist Congolese leaders to abolish the federal government in favor of a confederation of semi-independent states. The Soviet Union already has assailed the plan as a plot by Belgium to dismember the Congo and preserve Belgium's colonial control. Delegates feared a bitter Congo debate, rehashing all the old charges and counter charges, would set the tone for a long and stormy session. The United States and other Western nations had felt it would be better to delay discussing the

West Will Be Entry For Mayor

Will Seek Re-Election; Anxious To See City Take Forward Steps

Mayor S. Eugene West announced today that he would be a candidate for re-election in May 2 municipal election. The mayor said he would pay his filing fee at the city clerk's office today or tomorrow. "During the last few years, Greenville has taken a progressive trend," Mayor West said in announcing his candidacy. Several important programs are in the process of being started and some should be completed in the next few years. "I would like to see our street paving program successfully carried through. I am especially interested in seeing that the

Air Force Charges Three Officers With Neglect Of Duty In Texas Tower Toll

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR. WASHINGTON (AP)—The Air Force has charged three officers with neglect of duty in connection with the deaths of 28 men Jan. 15 when a Texas Tower radar station tumbled into the Atlantic during a howling gale. The Air Defense Command, in an announcement released Monday by the Defense Department said the charges were made as a result of a preliminary investigation. The accused officers: Col. William A. Banks, who was acting commander of the Boston Air Defense Sector at Stewart Air Force Base, Newburgh, N.Y., charged with culpable negligence and dereliction of duty. Maj. William A. Sheppard, commander of the 466th Support Squadron at Otis AFB, Mass., charged with dereliction of duty. Maj. Reginald L. Stark, acting commander of the squadron "during the critical period prior to the loss of the tower," charged with dereliction of duty. The Air Force said the charges were based on the way the men performed their duties immediately prior to the disaster" off the New Jersey coast. The 466th Squadron had direct responsibility for the tower, which was part of the coastal radar screen system to detect hostile aircraft. It was located about 85 miles southeast of New York. The tower nicknamed "old shaky" by its occupants, disappeared from the radar screens at 7:33 p.m. EST Jan. 15. That is accepted as the approximate time of the collapse. There were no survivors. One of the controversies about the disaster is whether the tower could have been evacuated before it toppled into the ocean. It had been damaged by a series of hurricanes and was scheduled to be shut down for repairs Feb. 1. After the Air Force announcement, Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Preparedness subcommittee, lauded the Air Force for diligence in its investigation but said his committee still planned a separate inquiry. In Boston, the Air Force said

Col. John O. Green, staff judge advocate of the 6th Air Division, has been named as the investigating officer for the final investigation, expected to take about one month. Under the procedure, both Green and the accused men will be allowed to question witnesses. The three officers also will be allowed to offer evidence in their behalf. Green will make his report to Lt. Gen. Robert M. Lee of the Air Defense Command, Colorado Springs, Colo. None of the three accused men had any immediate comment on the charges. A spokesman for the 26th Air Division, Syracuse, N.Y., said Banks was relieved of his command when the charges were filed. He said this was routine procedure. Banks had been stationed at Stewart AFB for about a year. Pentagon records show Banks was born in Raleigh, W. Va., but listed no permanent home address. Sheppard's home address is Cambridge, Ohio. Stark's home is Plattsburgh, N.Y.

To Get Help

Sanford Rejects 'Spread-Out' Of School Program Over Four Years

'Mistake To Compromise Now,' Says Governor; Urgent Needs Involved

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Sanford has rejected a suggestion that he might consider spreading the cost of his $106 million dollar school improvement program over four years instead of two. He told his news conference Monday "it would be a great mistake to compromise now when we are on the verge of developing something that will be significant not only in the state but in America as well."

Sanford declared his program covers "the most urgent needs of the schools. We must face the hard statistics that show we are on the bottom of the list in percentage of effort to improve the schools in recent years. It would be a serious mistake not to adopt the total program."

He indicated he wants to avoid any possibility of a fight in the legislature that might impede enactment of his school program. Sanford told newsmen he had written to North Carolina congressmen pledging that he would spend any federal aid-to-education money for a school construction program and not for teacher pay. The governor said he had heard "from a great many people" regarding clemency for union leader Royd Payton and other textile workers union men convicted of conspiracy in connection with the Henderson cotton mill strike. "I will do my best," he commented, "to see that their cases get periodic review and fair treatment."

Governor Avers School Program Worth Sacrifice

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Gov. Sanford appealed Monday night to North Carolinians to back his school improvement program which he said "is worth almost any temporary sacrifice." "We will pay the price only if you want to pay the price," Sanford declared in a statewide radio address. He spoke at an education rally at Goldsboro High School. A question and answer session followed his talk. Sanford has proposed a tax increase on whisky and removal of exemptions, including food and drugs, from the 3 per cent sales tax to finance his $106 million school program. The governor told the audience he doesn't like the thought of a tax on food, "but everything we do must be measured by a proper sense of values."

Jumped In Well To Rescue Sister

TROY, Mich. (AP)—"I wasn't afraid. I learned how to swim in the Girl Scouts," said Diane Koldziej, 12, telling how she jumped into an open well to save her 2-year-old sister from drowning. Diane said she and her sister Carol were playing near their home when she looked up to see Carol fall into a well, four feet in diameter. "I just jumped in," said Diane. "I wouldn't have cared if I got killed, as long as Carol was all right." In water eight feet from the top of the well, Diane held Carol's head above water and screamed for help. "The water was cold and way over my head," Carol said. Charles Steele, 20, a neighbor, hearing Diane's cries, pulled the two to safety. Neither child was injured. It happened on Sunday. It didn't become generally known until Monday, Diane seemed to object to being made a heroine. "I was supposed to look after Carol," she said. "And that's what I did. Now everybody's making a big fuss over me."

Nuclear Test Ban Talks Resuming

GENEVA (AP)—The Big Three nuclear test ban talks resume today with the United States and Britain ready to offer a new package plan for a quick treaty. The Soviets indicated they are standing pat on their old proposals for the time being. The Western powers were reported sticking firmly to their demand for inspections and controls to guard against sneak tests, the big stumbling block in the 2 1/2 years of negotiations. But informants said the West would offer some modifications of previous positions without backing down on what it considers basic principles. For the Kennedy administration, the negotiations provide the first test of the Soviet government's often-expressed desire for better relations between Washington and Moscow. Hanging over the negotiations was the ominous knowledge that more and more nations are approaching a point of nuclear know-how permitting them to produce nuclear weapons. Coming back to the conference table after a three-month recess, each side put the onus of agreement on the other. Britain's chief delegate, Minister of State David Ormsby-Gore, spoke of "a very real chance to agree upon a treaty in a matter of weeks" but added, "Everything very much depends, of course, upon the attitude of the Soviet Union." Soviet Delegate Semyon Tsarapkin told newsmen. "We have made all our proposals." He placed the responsibility for agreement on the West. The Soviet news agency Tass, noting preparatory conferences in Washington, said "optimists (including us) would like to hope the purpose of their efforts was to facilitate agreement" to end nuclear explosions. But the agency added: "Hardly conducive to such an outcome of the talks is the position of those Western circles and periodicals which are again demanding unilateral concessions from the Soviet Union, although they are aware of the fact that in the past the Soviet side has repeatedly met the Western powers on any questions involved in drafting a test ban treaty."

American delegate Arthur H. Dean, a veteran of negotiating with the Communists, and the British are united on the new western plan. The talks were recessed in December at the West's request to give the Kennedy administration a chance to appraise the situation. The big deadline between the rival powers at that time was over inspections of suspicious explosions. The Soviets were adamant in refusing to open the borders of the Soviet Union to foreign inspectors more than three times a year. The Western powers wanted a minimum of 20 inspections.

Explosive Laos Situation Studied By Kennedy, Aides

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy and several of his top advisers discuss the explosive situation in strife-torn Laos at a White House conference today, the second such session in two days. At Monday's secret meeting, attention was reported focused on the intention of the administration to display a firm stance to the Soviet Union on the grave crisis in Laos. The administration, a highly placed source said, was taking an increasingly grave view of conditions in the Southeast Asian kingdom. Monday's top-bracket meeting brought together such officials as Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Undersecretary of State Chester Bowles, Adm. Arleigh Burke, chief of naval operations, and J. Graham Parsons, the State Department's top expert on the Far East who has been named ambassador to Sweden. Sitting in 100, officials said, were Kennedy's own top advisers on national security matters, McGeorge Bundy and his deputy, Walt W. Rostow. The same group meets again today with Secretary of State Dean Rusk in attendance. Rusk was in California Monday to speak at Founders Day ceremonies of the University of California at Berkeley. The United States views with concern the Communist arms build-up in Laos. It was reported last week that the United States was considering giving more military aid to the U.S.-backed royal government of Laos. The United States, however, was reported reluctant to do so because of the danger of being drawn into a sustained build-up of both sides that could lead to a Korea-like situation. Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko restated in detail the U.S. and Soviet positions during an extraordinary five-hour conference at the State Department last Saturday. The United States was reported to have passed the word at the meeting that a settlement of the Laotian crisis was essential to any solid improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Clues May Help Identify Corpse Outside Kinston

KINSTON, N.C. (AP)—A torn out - of - state driver's license and a slip of paper are the clues by which police are trying to identify the badly decomposed body of a man found near here Monday. Coroner Raymond Jarman said the man had been dead over a year, but he could not determine the cause of death. A billfold on the body, near N.C. 55 about a mile south of here, contained the driver's license with the name "Norman Lee" and the address "317 Forest St., Wilmington" on it. The rest of the name and address had been torn away. A slip of paper bore the address "206 Holly St."

Over 40,000 New Jobs In Plants

RALEIGH (AP)—The Employment Security Commission said today more than 40,000 Tar Heels secured jobs in new manufacturing plants located within the state during the period from 1955 through 1960. The commission's Bureau of Research and Statistics stressed that the figure related only to new plants, not expansions of plants already in operation before 1955. The bureau said a preliminary report on a study measuring the employment effects of new plants, along with plant closings, indicated North Carolina gained approximately 850 new manufacturing plants in the five-year, 1955-60 period. Of the 850 new plants, 120 failed to make a go of it and had ceased operations by the end of 1959. For the most part, the bureau said, they were small companies which together employed only about 1,700 persons at their maximum job levels. Of more significance, the report went on, was the loss of about 10,600 jobs in some 275 manufacturing plants in operation prior to 1955, but which closed permanently during the study period. The commission said the study, which has been in progress for about 1 1/2 years, will be completed soon, and final data released.

More Equality

RALEIGH (AP)—House Judiciary Two Committee struck a blow for equal rights for women today when it approved a bill that makes women equally liable with men to arrest in civil cases. The bill, already passed by the Senate, would strike from the law books language, dating back to the days of chivalry, that prohibits arrest of women in civil actions and forbids the arrest of anyone on Sunday in civil cases. "The ladies want equality," said Rep. Roland Braswell of Wayne as he moved for a favorable report on the bill. After the committee had voted, Mrs. Tressie P. Fletcher, lawmaker from Alexander, said she wanted to correct Braswell's statement. "They have equality," she said.

Trailer-Truck Crashes Into Car, 4 Are Injured

GRIFTON—Two teen-aged girls from Kinston and two Camp Lejeune Marines were injured last night when a trailer-truck crashed into their car about one mile south of here on N.C. 11 in Lenoir County. Highway Patrolman B. A. Baker of LaGrange identified the occupants of the car as Ronald Pack and Rodney C. Followell, both of Camp Lejeune. Miss Annie Mae Carter, 16, of 6-G Simond Bright Apartments and Peggy Sue Grady, 17, of 18-D Simon Bright Apartments, Kinston. He noted the driver of the car had not been determined because both Marines had been moved to the Naval Hospital at Camp Lejeune. Driver of the truck was listed as Charles Wesley Smith, 38, of 800 Parrot Ave., Kinston. According to Baker, the Marines' car apparently had suffered a flat tire and the vehicle was either in the process of stopping or had already stopped, with two wheels on the shoulder of the road, at the time of the collision. The patrolman noted both vehicles were headed south. The truck met a north-bound car, the headlights of which blinded Smith. The right front of the truck struck the left rear of the car. The force of the impact knocked the car 150 feet and demolished it, Baker reported. Miss Carter, Baker said, was treated at Lenoir County Memorial Hospital and released, while Miss Grady was transferred to Duke Hospital in Durham, in critical condition. She suffered a compound fracture of a leg and head injuries. One of the Marines reportedly received a fractured back in the collision. Patrolman Baker said He added Smith was not injured. Investigation into the collision is continuing, Baker explained. The wreck occurred about 9:30 p.m.

Airlift Underway For Anti-Reds

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Nine planes bringing several hundred anti-Communist Chinese soldiers and their families from the Burma-Thailand frontier have landed so far in southern Formosa, authorities reports said. The Nationalist Chinese irregulars have been operating in the north Burma jungles since the Communists took over the China mainland 11 years ago. The airlift is expected to bring out some 5,000 Chinese.

Ready To Meet Any Contingency

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—The commander of U.S. forces in the Pacific area, Adm. Harry D. Felt, said today his forces are ready to meet "all kinds of contingencies" in Laos or any other part of the area within a matter of days. Felt said he considered the situation in Laos critical but added that he did not believe the present rebel drive toward Vientiane posed a serious threat. The admiral came here for a meeting of Southeast Asia Treaty Organization military advisers.

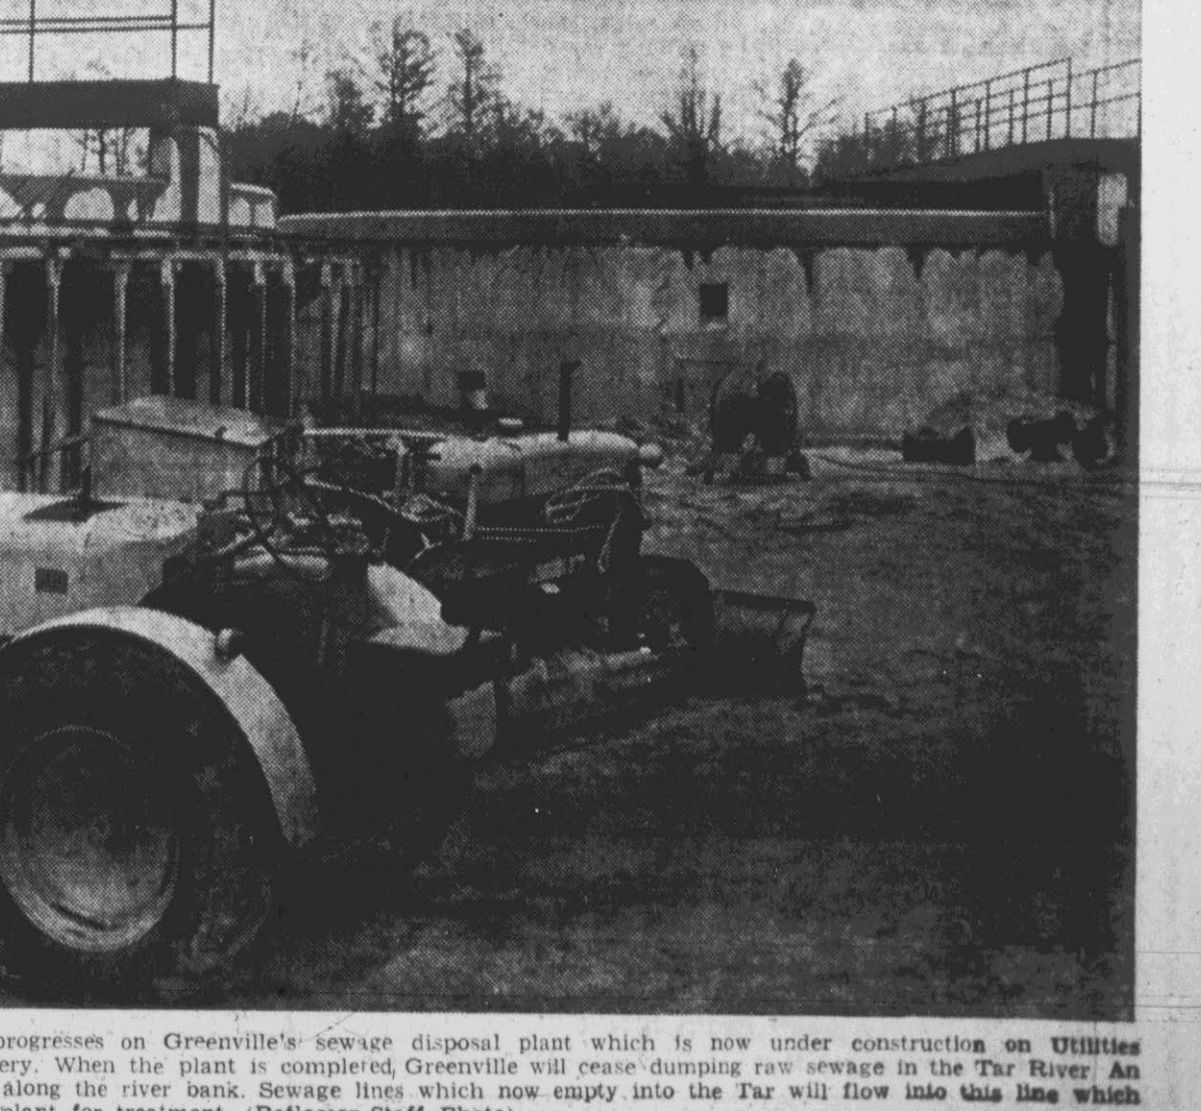

One Engine And 16 Feet Of Wing Gone; B47 Safe

PERU, Ind. (AP)—An explosion tore one engine and 16 feet of wing off a six-engine B47 Stratofortress bomber during a refueling exercise Monday night, but both the bomber and its tanker made it safely back to Bunker Hill Air Force Base. The Air Force sent searching parties to southwestern Indiana to hunt for the missing engine. No determination of the cause of the explosion can be made until it is found, the Air Force said. The tanker was linked by fuel line to the bomber at the time of the explosion, but it was not damaged. Maj. John A. Kinzer, information officer, said the tanker continued its refueling training flight and returned without incident. It carried a crew of four. Capt. John W. Schwartz, 30, Miami, Ariz., brought the bomber home with the assistance of Capt. Edwin L. Waldo, 37, Chicago, his copilot. Bunker Hill is 60 miles north of Indianapolis.

Bank Robbed

MARION, N.C. (AP)—A short man carrying a black pistol robbed the Marion Bank and Trust Co. at 12:15 p.m. and escaped with an undetermined amount of money. The FBI said the unmasked white man, wearing a hat pulled down low, forced a teller to hand over the money at gunpoint, then fled. The FBI said no one saw the man as he escaped on rain-slicked streets. There were few other customers in the bank.

Sewage Disposal Plant Progress Made

SEWAGE PLANT—Work progresses on Greenville's sewage disposal plant which is now under construction on Utilities property behind Greenwood Cemetery. When the plant is completed, Greenville will cease dumping raw sewage in the Tar River. An interceptor line is now being built along the river bank. Sewage lines which now empty into the Tar will flow into this line which will carry the raw sewage to the plant for treatment. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Easter Lily Tag Day Sales Set For Saturday

Greenville Jay-C-Ettes with Mrs. Carlton Taylor, chairman will direct the Easter Lily Tag Day Saturday as the second phase of a fund-raising campaign to aid handicapped children and adults in this area. Business District Sales will be conducted by members of the Jay-C-Ettes and the Marion Bartlett Chapter of Future Nurses Club.

The Pitt County Society for Crippled Children and Adults, which sponsors the Pitt County Orthopedic Clinic, raises its funds through the annual sale of Easter Seals and Lily Tags. Co-sponsor of the local clinic are the Lions Club, which has charge of the Easter Seal mail campaign, and the Jay-C-Ettes.

The Orthopedic Clinic, held every fourth Friday each month, is financed mainly by the crippled Children's division of the State Board of Health. Voluntary contributions provide orthopedic shoes, braces, walkers, summer camperships, hospital transportation and X-rays.

The local clinic actually provides diagnosis, treatment, corrective surgery and necessary appliances for the crippled child and adult. The term "crippled" includes those with deformities of many kinds such as cleft palates, epilepsy, muscular dystrophy, cerebral palsy. More than 100 patients have been registered at the clinic in one day. In connection with the orthopedic clinic, a speech and hearing clinic has been in operation in Pitt County for the past two years. This clinic has the services of a trained speech therapist.

Red Oak Circle Has Meeting

In a setting of early spring flowers at the attractive new home of Mrs. Ada Vaughn, 10 members and three visitors enjoyed the March meeting of the Nancy Manning Circle of Red Oak Christian Church.

Mrs. Manning presided. Mrs. Ethel Allen gave the treasurer's report. Mrs. Leota Tyson gave the Service report, and Mrs. Agnes Settle presented the topic for the evening, drawing on many of her experiences during 33 years of service with the women of the Christian denomination and her extensive travels, including a trip around the world a few years ago.

Mrs. Margie Allen had the devotions.

It was voted to pay $58 on the building fund and to try to raise $100 for the same purpose between now and June 30th. It was noted that all dues to date had been paid. About 50 church calls and sick visits were reported.

Mrs. Tyson entertained with accordion music.

A salad, punch, cake with decorations carrying out the Easter idea were served by the hostess.

Mlle Labaume Speaks To Club

Mrs. W. M. Scales Jr. was hostess to the Cosmos Book Club recently at her home in Drexelbrook. Arrangements of jonquills, flowering quince, and flowering peach were placed throughout her home. Assisted by Mrs. Vance Harrington, Mrs. Richard Gaylor Jr. and Mrs. George Garrett Jr., the hostess served a dessert course and coffee to the members present and guests, Mrs. Wally Howard and Mademoiselle Katherine Labaume.

Mlle. Labaume, an Exchange Student at East Carolina College, spoke to the club about her native country, France, with particular emphasis on Paris. Mlle. Labaume compared the customs of her country and ours and inserted many personal observations. She is a business major and French assistant in the Foreign Language department at East Carolina. The educational systems of the two countries are very different. In France, they have five years of grammar school and seven years of high school with certain compulsory subjects, among which is seven years of one foreign language, which is usually English, and four years of a second foreign language, three years of chemistry, and one year of philosophy.

At the University, which is state-supported, one may study to be a teacher, lawyer, or doctor, and may meet classes only when one so desires. The only requisite for credit is that an examination be passed in June.

There are four business schools in Paris—three for boys, and one for girls—and it is extremely difficult to get into, because only one of four applicants are registered, she said.

In further contrasting the two countries, Mlle. Labaume pointed out that the life of the students or young people in Paris is not so social as it is here. Home life is different also; women over here have more leisure time, mainly due to the fact that they have more mechanical appliances than the French housewife.

When Mlle. Labaume finishes her year of college, she expects someday to become an administrator or executive in the business world.

Members of the club signed letters to be mailed to state legislators, in which they stated they wanted to go on record as being in favor of raising the educational standards in North Carolina.

Practice Parking Facility Is Opened To Public's Use

PRACTICE PARALLEL PARKING SPACE project, of Moose, looked over by Bynum and Grady. Now completed, the facility is available to use of general public.

A "regulation" parallel-parking space, identical to that used in drivers' examination tests, has been set up for general use at the Greenville Moose Lodge parking lot. It is open to the public.

Swinging Toward Communist Plan

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — A member of Prince Boun Oum's Laotian Cabinet indicated today that the pro-Western regime is swinging toward acceptance of the 14-nation conference urged by the Communists to work for peace in the war-torn Indochinese kingdom.

not for practice, then for the ordinary. He has been with the State Highway Patrol for 8 years, and at present is District Supervisor of License and Theft Enforcement Division, which covers 30 eastern counties.

In reporting completion of the project last night, he urged all who would to make use of it.

General construction of the parking facility was under direction of Leroy Hardy, a maintenance man with the State Highway Patrol. G. A. Taylor performed the painting chores.

James Grady, supervisor of the Drivers License Examiners for Troop A, called the project a "real asset because so many people are turned down by our examiners because they cannot parallel park."

Bynum's interest in good driving practices runs deeper than ordinary. He has been with the State Highway Patrol for 8 years, and at present is District Supervisor of License and Theft Enforcement Division, which covers 30 eastern counties.

Bynum noted there was only one such parallel parking space available for practice, and that was at the State Highway Patrol office. "That practice parking space has always been plenty of activity; if

Eyeglasses Are Status Symbol

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP)—Millions of Nigerians never use a tooth brush but keep their teeth white with pieces of dried stick sold in small stores. They chew and bite the end of the stick until it is shredded almost like tooth brush bristles. Then they scrub their teeth with the shredded end-up and down, sideways and between the teeth.

This scrubbing generally starts soon after they get out of bed in the morning. The process goes on as they walk to work, on their bicycles, in buses.

A campaign has now started to stop the practice, which some Nigerians consider "to primitive and unhygienic for a 1961 Nigeria which got its independence last year."

As another sign of civilization, opticians' shops are springing up all over Nigeria to satisfy a craze for spectacles. Peddlers often sell glasses that have only plain glass or no glass at all.

"Nigerians are using eyeglasses as other people use tiptops or earrings," one optician said. "The fancier the frames, the more they are in fashion. Some quite frankly insist on plain glass because they really don't need glasses for their sight."

The craze has spread to school children and junior clerks. They go for highly colored frames with heavy ornamentation, particularly those studded with imitation jewels.

One peddler admits to having made as much as $300 profit in one month. That's big money for any Nigerian.

Hand Grenades Earned Privacy

VITRY-CHATILLON, France (AP) — A young French paratrooper found a new way to get some privacy with his girl friend in a busy park on a sunny Sunday afternoon. He tossed some practice grenades.

Jacques Ducanda, 21, in full uniform, was strolling with his girl. Annoyed by occasional passersby, he wrenched a couple of grenades from his belt and tossed them at the nearest walkers, slightly wounding one and frightening away the others.

Arrested a short time later, he told police: "I just wanted to be alone."

FOUND 32 YEARS LATER BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A wedding band found in his yard by Rusty Brown bore the inscription A.E. Dougherty. The Doughertys were located and Monday they told Brown it was lost 32 years ago when the Doughertys lived in the house now occupied by the Browns.

Clark Gable's Widow Will Pick Baby's Name Today

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Clark Gable's widow, surrounded by congratulatory telegrams and flowers, decides today on a name for the actor's 8-pound son born Monday.

Both were described as thriving at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital, where Gable, 69, died last Nov. 16 of a heart attack.

Kay Spreckels Gable has narrowed her choice of a name to two, her sister, Mrs. Gordon Nesher, said, as "too much of a handicap for a little kid to bear."

The baby was born at 7:48 a.m. by Caesarean, section with Mrs. Gable, under spinal anesthesia, watching the delivery in the reception of a surgery light fixture.

Mrs. Gable was given a sedative and returned to her fourth-floor corner room two floors above the room where Gable died.

She awoke twice during the afternoon when a nurse brought her the child, the first of Gable's five marriages.

One of the friends said: "She's so delighted with the little darling, he's so precious, so unbelievably beautiful for a new baby. He has black, curly hair, twinkling eyes and a peaches and cream skin. He's just a lamb chop, as bright as a dollar."

Asserts Americans Not Linked To Spy Gear

LONDON (AP) — The mystery man of the British naval spy trial told the court today that spy equipment found in a suburban bungalow had no connection with the Americans who lived in the house.

Gordon A. Lonsdale, accused by the government of being the contact man for a Soviet spy ring, took full blame for a radio transmitter that could be beamed to Moscow, a cigarette lighter with secret compartments, photographic equipment with microdots used in espionage and some fake passports.

The house where Scotland Yard found the assorted paraphernalia was occupied by Peter Kroger, 50, and his wife, Helen, 47, identified by the FBI as American citizens named Morris and Lola Cohen. The Americans are codefendants.

Lonsdale said they were innocent of any connection with the suspect items.

Lonsdale made his seven-minute statement in the Old Bailey courtroom. The Krogers followed Lonsdale with statements claiming innocence.

Lonsdale made no mention of the other two defendants: Henry F. Houghton, 55, a British naval clerk, and his girl friend, Ethel

E. Gee, 46, a fellow employe at the Portland naval base.

Houghton and Miss Gee admitted they gave Lonsdale papers relating to Britain's undersea warfare preparations and films of drawings of the top secret atomic submarine Dreadnought.

Govm't Won Its 4-Bit Conviction At A High Price

CHICAGO (AP) — The federal government won a four-bit conviction Monday that cost an estimated $750 to $2,000 to prosecute. The defendant drew a sentence of one hour and government attorneys drew a reprimand.

The case involved William Wallace, 34, an unemployed laborer, who was arrested Feb. 28 after he tried to put two phony quarters into a juke box.

Wallace testified in his five-hour trial in U.S. District Court that the day of his arrest he had cashed a $90 relief check, made a round of taverns and probably picked up the quarters without realizing they were bogus.

The jury found him guilty of possessing 50 cents in counterfeit money.

Judge Michael L. Igoe said "I personally don't understand why such a case was presented to the grand jury," then sentenced Wallace to "one hour in the custody of the U.S. marshal."

Court observers estimated the cost of prosecuting Wallace — including his indictment, incarceration and trial — ranged between $750 and $2,000.

Registration At School Tonight

Pre-school registration will be held at Elmhurst School tonight at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium. Parents are requested to attend without their children, and have been asked to bring children's birth certificates and records of immunization. The purpose of the registration is to register children who will be six years of age on or before Oct. 16.

Other pre-school registrations are scheduled to take place as follows: March 28 at Third Street, Wahl-Coates and Agnes Fullilove Schools; April 11 at Fleming Street School; and April 12 at South Greenville School.

VACATION THREAT

FITCHBURG, Mass. (AP)—Fitchburg school children will have a shorter summer vacation this year unless there is an end to loss of classroom hours because of false bomb reports. School Supt. Robert H. McCann announced Monday that for each day lost because of such scares, a day will be added to the school year.

Reporter Talks At HD Meeting

Mrs. Patsy Moore, general assignments reporter for the Daily Reflector, was featured speaker for the morning session of the March County Council Home Demonstration meeting, held at Simpson Community Building.

She discussed procedures for the newspaper. Mrs. Wilbur Worthington, county public relations chairman, introduced Mrs. Moore.

Earlier, Mrs. Ichabod Allen gave the National Citizenship Conference report. During the business session, members discussed the summer recreational meeting, the Christmas bazaar, the 22nd District Meeting and National Home Demonstration Week.

Mrs. Albert Bell presided at the meeting. Others taking part in the program included Mrs. Allen, who gave the devotional; Mrs. Alton Gardner, secretary, who read the minutes and roll call; and Mrs. Karl Hardee, treasurer, who gave her report.

Following a luncheon served for members in the community building, Mrs. Obed Castellone presented the report of the National Home Demonstration Council.

Justice And Reform Equally Slow

If the wheels of justice grind slowly, North Carolina's efforts to reform its courts system has moved equally as slowly as the state has pondered the question of how to revamp its judicial system.

Although considerable public attention has been focused on this problem in the past three years, study pointing toward the need for reorganization and streamlining the system of courts dates back many more years. In this, as in every other important question, the legislature holds men of divided opinion as to how best to bring about the reforms that are needed.

Two years ago, because the opposing sides on the question of court reform could not be brought together, the matter was left hanging after the legislature adjourned. This year, the legislature still is divided on the question. Unless a positive and effective compromise can be reached between the two groups the 1961 General Assembly may adjourn without taking a step to revamp the system of courts in the state.

It is apparent, we think, that the greatest need in the state's court system is a uniform organization of lower courts. As it is now, there are hundreds of individual lower courts with varying degrees of jurisdiction, without direct supervision by the judiciary branch of the state government and governed only by the individual legislative acts which brought them into being.

To further complicate this problem, the number grows each time the legislature meets as more individual communities send up their own local bills for the creation of their courts. For the most part they are accorded the same reception that other local bills receive: if the representatives from the particular area involved give their approval, the bills are written into law and the new courts created.

It is essential to the development of an orderly system of courts in the state—particularly at the lower level—that the legislature this year take positive action on a realistic approach to court reform. Already this step has been delayed too long by the elected representatives in Raleigh.

Although education, reapportionment and redistricting, and new sources of revenue have dominated the legislators attention and will continue to do so for some time, it is also important to the people of the state that the legislature resolve the matter of court reform.

Need Ground Rules On Using Economic Help

President Kennedy's program to provide more U.S. aid to developing countries in the form of economic rather than military assistance provides a positive approach to basic problems which face many emerging nations.

Proposed stipulations that recipients of the aid take positive steps to bring about reforms to assure that air from the United States will be shared by poor masses also reflect a positive attitude on the part of the administration.

It is important, nevertheless, that the United States not put itself in the position of dictating domestic policies to the emerging nations the aid is designed to help. To be sure, there are many underdeveloped nations in which it would appear to us that social reforms such as plugging tax loopholes, redistributing farm land, making credit easier for small farmers and businessmen and other similar measures would be most helpful. Judging conditions in other nations by those in our own leads us to suggest they adopt our methods in seeking solutions to their problems.

To suggest such reforms is one thing, but for this country to specify how recipients of its aid shall carry out such reforms is quite another. Programs and approaches which have proved successful in the United States in recent decades may not be at all practical in underdeveloped nations of Africa, Latin America or some other section of the globe.

Each of the nations has individual problems which are altogether different from those faced by the United States. And each nation has its own problems which differ from those of other underdeveloped nations. For the United States to dictate detailed domestic policy to nations who could benefit by its aid would be a mistake both for the United States and for recipients of the aid.

While the United States may need to specify broad ground-rules for use of its economic aid to emerging nations, the administration should carefully guard against imposing specific domestic policies upon recipients of that aid. Both the United States and the nations who received American aid would be the losers in the long run if we try to solve the economic problems of every emerging nation by U.S. standards.

New President Asserting Self

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has been in office long enough, two months today, to show some basic differences, sharp or subtle, between his administration and President Eisenhower's.

Kennedy has begun his presidency with far greater vigor and more detailed knowledge of government and its problems than Eisenhower displayed in his early period.

In one way the two are similar — both are moderates — although that just about ends the similarity.

While Eisenhower was willing to go along with some changes — such as medical care for the aged, federal aid to education, or increasing the minimum wage — he seemed to want to keep changes to a minimum.

He would not, for instance, ever agree to boosting the minimum wage to $1.25 an hour, or other State agency, to handle one exhibit. Another is the provision to allow the battleship to "borrow" from the State contingency and emergency fund enough money to get the battleship project underway.

Eisenhower, true to his Army training, liked the chain of command system which lets subordinates argue details and differences and then bring him their decision for a yes or no.

Kennedy is a brain-picker, far more accessible than Eisenhower — he takes part in staff conferences, quizzes all he can, likes arguments and, having heard them, decides. Eisenhower, with small liking for politics, had an impractical political concept of the president's role in dealing with Congress. He liked to hand Congress his programs and then stand back.

Kennedy, with 14 years in Congress, knows better. He and his aides get up to their necks in trying to line up votes in the Capitol for their programs.

The need for such direct action is apparent enough while Kennedy so far has been successful in getting what he wants it has been by chillingly close vote.

Kennedy has an alertness in his job which Eisenhower didn't show. Where Eisenhower hardly ever read newspapers, except on Sundays, Kennedy reads them in bunches every day. This is part of his desire to know as much as he can about events, public thinking, and details of the problems he has to handle.

The new President seems determined to assert himself both as boss and spokesman for his administration.

The late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was, in effect, American foreign policy through the years he served in the Eisenhower administration. He made the big statements, including some provocative, some harsh, some bombastic.

Judging from the way Dean Rusk now operates as secretary of state, Dulles would have been less heard from if Kennedy had been president in his time.

Rusk acts like a foreign affairs technician, quietly behind the scenes with friend and foe, leaving it to Kennedy to make the big speeches and announce the big decisions.

People high in the administration say the government is more relaxed now — a quicker and easier communication among the agencies and between the agencies and the White House.

The big unknown about Kennedy is in foreign affairs. He doesn't needlessly irritate the Russians. But he doesn't coddle them either. The mystery is in his programs and his long-range thinking.

How far will he go to keep Laos from falling to communism? How far will he go in wanting an end to colonialism, even if it means alienating or offending allies?

His program of aid for Latin America, while it sounds big and noble, is still so vague that its full implications cannot be understood until he says and does more about it.

Quote . . .

"Abraham Lincoln is credited with saying the nation cannot survive, half free and half slave. Now comes the question never known in the self-sufficient days of Lincoln: 'Can a nation survive with half or more of its people demanding more and more freedom until the working and paying half?'" — Hately (Idaho) Times.

Strange Roommates

By ALVIN TAYLOR

More Than 'Skin Deep'

That the modern young woman is sharp thinker was indicated by the answers which six finalists gave in last week's Miss Greenville contest.

Not a one of the lovely finalists faltered in answering the three questions — one of a political nature, the second purely personal and the third on fashions.

Their perceptive answers perhaps proved that our system of education is not turning out such a bad product after all.

For the first question Master of Ceremonies Bob Ray referred to Pres. Kennedy's inaugural address in which he said, "And so, my fellow Americans:

ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you can do for your country."

Ray asked each contestant—none of whom had heard the others prior to giving her own answer—what she felt she could do.

"I can be a good mother and housewife because that is what I want to do most," Jolinda Brewer, who was to be first runner-up said. "Also I can be a good citizen because that's part of being a good housewife."

LaVerne Blackley, later named Miss Greenville, said, "We can get out and work for better men and women to represent us in foreign countries."

Julaine Cannon, second runner-up, answered, "I think I can do something for my country by setting an example as a young lady, by having good morals, being a good Christian girl and by following all the rules of society."

Gail Walser said, "I plan to become a teacher and in that profession I feel I can start younger people on the right foot by teaching the things that are right."

Patsy Jones replied to the question, "The best thing I know I can do for my country is to uphold myself and keep myself a shining example that other people might follow me."

Barbara Graham said, "As a young citizen of the United States I feel I can better the United States by learning foreign affairs and trying to understand government real clearly."

Next each of the finalists was asked, "If she were married to an astronaut would she encourage or discourage him?"

"I think if I had him on earth, why I'd just keep him here," was Miss Graham's reply.

Miss Blackley said, "I would encourage him in that it would help our country."

Miss Walser's reply was, "If he thought that this was what he wanted to do and he would never be happy in anything else, why I would be willing to let him go."

Miss Jones said, "If I were married to a man of that type, I would discourage him. I would have married him because I loved him and I would want him with me."

Answered Miss Cannon, "If he had definitely decided to go to the moon, I think I would encourage him and stand by him."

"And Miss Brewer's reply was, "I don't believe I would discourage him if that was what he really wanted to do. I'd give him all my love and devotion and pray to God that he'd return back safely."

Finally, the contestants were asked their opinions of the shorter skirts of new spring fashions.

"It's up to the individual and I like mine below my knees," Miss Blackley replied.

Miss Walser said, "I think it's all right to a certain extent but let's hope they don't get too short."

"It depends entirely upon the individual girl," answered Miss Jones. "If she has pretty knees I think she might let them show a little. If not she should keep them covered."

Miss Graham said, "I don't think knees are very pretty but I think the styles are becoming. I don't like the longer styles at all."

Not So Much 'Fight'

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
It was a very wet Monday night and I was looking for a fight. These days, it is not so easy to find a fight as most everybody is either lackadaisical or polite. I could have gone to Miami to see the Paterson-Hansson fight but I had decided against that and it was now too late.

So I thought that maybe I could see the fight between Ed Sullivan and Jack Paar. Well, they called that off. According to Ed Sullivan, Jack Paar wanted to change the rules in the middle of the fight; according to Jack Paar, Ed Sullivan is a liar and sue me.

That sounded like comedy. It sounded like Anna Held bathing in milk to attract attention. But then these fellows do not need to attract attention. Everybody knows them. Millions listen to them. Jack Paar is on every night; Ed Sullivan goes on every Sunday night. They do not need the publicity of a fight.

Still and all, two fellows, in the month of March, just before St. Patrick's Day, want to fight each other who will say them nay. But the way to fight is with fists or swords or guns, not with words.

This particular battle establishes the significance of television. Here are two rather simple and obscure personalities, probably pleasant enough, if one knows them well, who interest millions of people of all ages. Their fans take a direct, personal concern in their affairs. Their fans watch their personal affairs closely; their relations with their wives and children.

So they want to fight. What is the issue? It would seem that Sullivan who runs a vaudeville show on television pays his stars up to $7500 a performance. These same stars, for some reason, are willing to work for Paar for his standard price of $320 a performance. Sullivan naturally feels that he is being robbed and that anyone who works for Paar for $320 will only get $320 from Sullivan. Paar's view is that anyone who does not wish to work for him does not have to. So there!

But this is not much of a fight. After all, actors and such work where their managers tell them to. The reason, usually, that they go on these omnibus shows is that they are out of work—at liberty—it is called. Generally, the managers at such a time will do anything to keep a comedian's name before the public, because nobody can be forgotten faster than a comedian who does not have a chance to be comical. It is like a defeated politician who needs a platform to make himself heard.

Without such a platform, the politician or the actor becomes as dead as a muttoned herring. So the actor's manager gets him on one of these television vaudeville shows where he performs between commercials and sometimes regains his reputation. New ones would really have a tough time if these vaudeville shows did not give them a "break." Many of them would have to work for a living for a long time before they got a chance to show the world how wonderful they are.

Back when I was a boy, there was a place on the Bowery called Miner's and many a great star started there, singing a song, jiggling through some steps, reciting something memorized. On 14th Street, in New York, next to Tammany Hall and around the corner from the distinguished Academy of Music, was Tony Pastor's—a vaudeville place where many youngsters started great careers. Vaudeville was the training school of the theatre, just as Burlesque was a bridge between the amateur and professional.

Nothing like that exists today. Instead of television, there are few vaudeville shows. The most distinguished of these performances is that of Ed Sullivan who pays fabulous prices to performers and who has managed to keep his show going for, I believe, 13 years which is a long time for anything on television. Jack Paar's show is different. Whereas Sullivan is a mere master of ceremonies, Paar is the chief performer on his show. In fact, he is the big cheese. His performers give him background support. Sometimes, they are humorous; sometimes they are unbelievably mediocre. But it must be admitted that several of those who appeared on Paar's show, became stars in their own right.

Alas, there was no fight!

Political Aura Hard To Escape

By LYNN NISBET

POLITICS — A good deal has been said and written about the influence of politics on the selection of an advertising agency to handle the State account. It would be very strange if politics did not enter into such negotiations, because it is utterly impossible to separate politics from government. And if political influences entered the picture this year it is not a new thing. Nor does it have the significance that some news stories would attempt to give it.

When the State advertising was first set up in 1937 there was not an agency in North Carolina capable of handling it. The choice of an out-of-state agency then was influenced by politics. Among several applicants an Atlanta was chosen over several "Yankee" firms, largely because it was Southern — an element of politics.

Eastman-Scott of Atlanta did a good job for ten years, but with approach of the 1948 gubernatorial race when members on the C&D board who were supporting Charlie Johnson, Kerr, error disliked the Eastman-Scott representative, they succeeded in getting the account transferred to Ayer & Gillett of Charlotte — which had gotten in position to handle it.

The 1948 election did not turn out like the Johnson partisans had hoped, and the C&D board appointed by Governor Kerr switched the account to Bennett Advertising Agency of High Point. Then came another time for awarding the job of handling State advertising, and the C&D board appointed by Governors Umstead and Hodges switched again to Ayer & Gillett. Last week another selection had to be made and the responsible committees of the C&D board chose again Bennett Advertising — which had expanded to maintain full time offices in High Point, Charlotte and Raleigh.

SECONDARY — It is on the record that the Bennett agency handled publicity for Terry Sanford during his two primary campaigns and was much in evidence during the Democratic general election campaign. That record naturally did not count against the agency in the decision made by the C&D folks last week.

There is no evidence that it was the controlling factor. Nine firms in and out of the state made presentations, and it was obvious that choice lay between Ayer & Gillett and Bennett, on basis of what they showed they could do for the State of North Carolina. The evidence was so nearly equal that those responsible for making the decision wanted some help. They would have been very grateful for a nod from the southwest corner of the Capitol. They didn't get it. In contrast with other times when the administration, incumbent or prospective, obviously sought to put on pressure, there was no word last week from the Governor's office. Politics, per se, was a secondary issue in the decision reached by the committee.

What if there had been suggestion or pressure? The selection of an agency to handle the State advertising account is very much like the selection of a man to head a department of the government. With one major difference: The department head usually is paid directly by the State out of tax collected moneys. The advertising agency derives most of its pay from commissions collected from advertising media — newspapers, magazines, radio stations, etc. In that respect the advertising and public relations firms are different from other State employed persons or agencies. They are agents both of the State and of the media through which they channel publicity.

BATTLESHIP — The bill introduced last week by Sen Lunsford Crew of Halifax setting up an official U.S.S. North Carolina Battleship commission is a departure from usual procedure with respect to historical and scenic exhibits.

When it became apparent last year that the famous battleship would be junked unless the State of North Carolina could provide for preserving it, Governor Hodges appointed a temporary and largely unofficial committee to work out details of bringing the famous vessel back to its home state. Governor Sanford continued the informal committee, which had no real official standing and no authority.

The bill introduced by Senator Crew would constitute an official commission with authority to act in the name of the State, to accept and solicit funds and to bring the famed ship back to North Carolina and maintain it as a permanent memorial to veterans of World War II, as well as an attraction for people interested in history and travel.

There are several unusual features in the Crew bill. One is to set up the special commission, entirely apart from any other State agency, to handle one exhibit. Another is the provision to allow the battleship to "borrow" from the State contingency and emergency fund enough money to get the battleship project underway.

Other Editors Saying The $1 Men

(The Tulsa Tribune)

Are there some men and women whose work is only worth $1 an hour, or is everybody worth at least $1.15 — or $1.25? This is a question the new Congress will soon be considering. Raising the minimum wage to $1.25 was one of the chief planks in John Kennedy's platform.

Behind this move are the "liberals" and the labor leaders. The "liberals" argue that in this day of increased use of labor-saving machinery anybody who is paid less than $1.25 an hour is probably being exploited. The labor leaders argue that for even with skilled labor there is a customary differential above minimum wages, and with higher wages all along the line.

Opponents complain that the value of a lot of labor is not greater than $1 — an hour and to enforce a higher minimum will merely mean either increased prices or large layoffs among the unskilled labor that the minimum wage law is supposed to help.

There will also be an argument over how far to extend minimum wage provision. The present law, which covers about 25 million workers, exempts all firms that are purely local in character, and employs in the kind of work where it is difficult for the employer to know or control the exact number of hours worked. Mr. Kennedy last session authored a bill that failed, but that would have extended minimum wage provisions to presently exempt retail and service businesses. This is estimated would include another 75 million workers.

The first minimum wage law was passed in 1938 to cover, as President Roosevelt put it, "workers who toil in factories." It set 25 cents an hour. In 1945 the minimum went up to 40 cents, in 1949 to 75 cents, and in 1959 to $1.

A number of employers object strenuously to the $1.25 proposal. They assert that this will force them to cut their payrolls, particularly as regards young people just learning the business or older part-time workers now supplementing pension checks. A study recently released by the U.S. Department of Labor reported that after the minimum was raised to $1 "there were significant declines in employment in most of the low-wage industries surveyed." The Department said that if the 1956 wage had been set during a recession "its adverse effects upon employment might have been much greater."

Because minimum wages in much of the world are so cheap a great deal of labor does drudgery that machines could do painlessly. There is an advantage to setting minimum wages up to a point where the lowest grade of human toil becomes uneconomic and employers are compelled to install machine processes where output is speeded. But there are still people who need wages who by reason of inexperience, stupidity, laziness, ignorance or lack of vigor, cannot contribute more than one dollar's worth of productive labor an hour.

To force these people onto permanent relief in order to jack up the entire wagescale of an already-high-cost country should require careful thought. We hope Congress is thinking.

business are merely advancement of peaks. Some of the sales made in the last two weeks of March are the sales that would be made in the first two weeks of April if Easter were later. It's safe to predict that sales in the weeks of April 3 and 10 will be frightfully below those in corresponding weeks a year ago simply because those were pre-Easter weeks in 1960 and will be the post-Easter weeks this year.

In another way, early Easter this year will have lasting effects. The economy seems to be ready to rise again and the early Easter may provide just the yeast it needs.

Total retail sales in February, as we noticed at the time, were behind a year ago. The Department of Commerce advanced estimates put them at $15.1 billion, compared with $15.8 billion a year earlier.

MORE EATING, DRINKING — The food group and the eating-and-drinking-places group show ed gains in February, which was curious since food prices were reported to have declined. The other groups all showed declines. Most of them were minor, except for the automotive group, where sales dropped from $3.1 billion a year ago to $2.7 billion in February, 1961. That's a lot of money; it's a lot of jobs.

On the other hand, department store sales, as compiled by the Federal Reserve, are showing considerable strength partly, of course, due to the early Easter. In the week ended February 25, sales were 11 per cent above a year ago, and in the week ended March 4, they were 26 per cent up.

In that week there were some spectacular gains. Some: Suburban Boston, up 109 per cent; Jacksonville, Fla., up 84 per cent; Quincy, Mass., up 83 per cent; Lancaster, Pa., up 83 per cent; Cambridge, Mass., 73 per cent; Boston, 68 per cent; Baltimore, 49 per cent; Atlanta, 58 per cent; Tulsa, 41 per cent, and Lincoln, Neb., 36 per cent. Only downtown Miami, Duluth-Superior, Dallas and downtown Los Angeles showed declines.

Note that some of the gains may be because of local weather conditions.

Telephones Will Be Going More Intense Training Electronic In The Future Of Negroes Suggested

By EDWARD S. KITCH

MORRIS, Ill. (AP) — A photographic memory plate is the key feature of a new electronic central telephone office that may well be the automatic communication system of tomorrow.

A pilot exchange, six years in development at a cost of more than $25 million, currently is in operation at the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. plant in Morris.

It'll be ready for expansion in 1965.

Says R. W. Ketchledge of Bell Telephone Laboratories:

"The advantages of the electronic approach stem largely from the high speeds, performing complex operations in micro-seconds instead of hundredths or even tenths of seconds required by mechanical relays.

"Thus by using electronics, we do things thousands of times faster — so much faster that we can do them in entirely new ways." The new system resembles human activity in several ways. Electronic "eyes and ears" scan the system, waiting for people to pick up their phones and dial.

Calls are routed by sending current through a maze of transistors, diodes and tubes, which provide the switching element.

Among the new services: By dialing two numbers, home extension phones can be used as intercommunications systems.

Frequently dialed numbers also can be called by dialing only two numbers instead of seven.

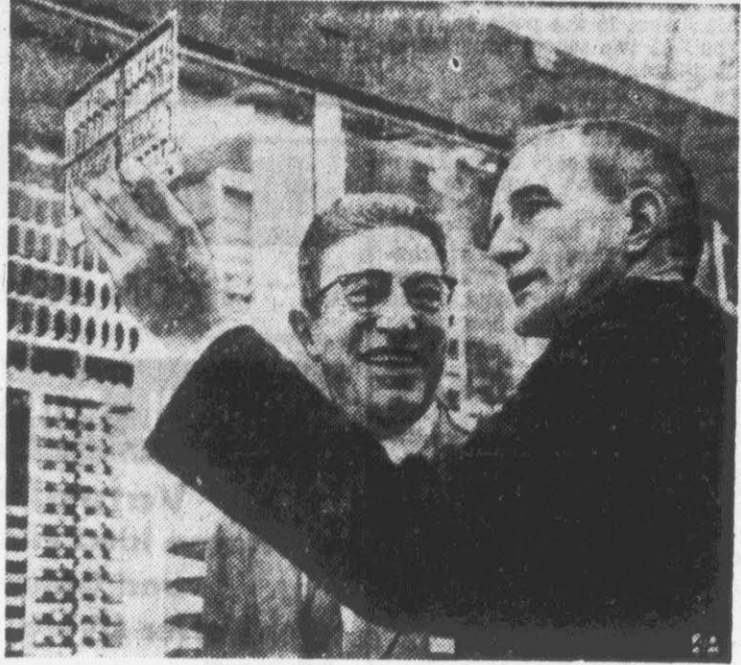

Incoming calls can be routed to a second phone when the first line is busy.

If you want to visit a friend's home for the evening, you can dial a code that automatically transfers your calls to your friend's number.

The key to the system is a "brain" that serves as common control. As electronic note pads — barrier grid tubes — record numbers and other information, the "brain" tells the machine what to do at every stage of the call. The "brain center" is a photographic plate, called a "flying spot store." Tiny dots and clear spots form signal groupings. The memory plate is composed of twenty squares of photographic film two inches square. The composition makes up 2 1/2 million "bits" of information that can be read in a fraction of a second.

Scientists used a television-like tube to read out the thousands of tiny dots on the film. For each position of the spot of light, 67 different items of information can be read out. The electronic brain directs the closing of switches by firing neon-filled tubes to show an orange light. The light closes copper circuits inside the tube.

Speaks Tonight At Art Center

Wesley V. Crawley, assistant professor of art at East Carolina College, will speak on "Sculpture in the Garden" tonight at 8 p.m. at the Greenville Art Center.

The talk will deal with sources of garden sculpture and will be illustrated by slides and materials adaptable to such sculpture.

Crawley, a native of Ohio, holds the Bachelor and Master of Fine Arts degrees from the University of Oregon. He served as an instructor in sculpture and art education at the University for several years before joining the E.C.C. faculty in 1959. Crawley now teaches sculpture and design at the college. The public is cordially invited to attend. A special invitation is issued to garden club members.

BALTIMORE (AP)—"Have you seen this lion?" asked the advertisement in the Baltimore Sun today.

The ad included a photograph and description of the lion. Actually, the "lion" is a sculpture taken from an art gallery here a year ago.

The gallery is seeking its return anonymously through the mail or by deposit at any public library.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson is reported studying a recommendation for intensified training of Negroes to lessen racial job discrimination.

As chairman of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunities, Johnson has received reports indicating that lack of skills in engineering, chemistry, physics and biology are contributing to a higher rate of unemployment among Negroes than among whites.

He also has been told that union rules which disqualify many Negroes from membership are increasing the number of Negro jobless.

When Johnson was named to head the committee early this month, President Kennedy clothed it with authority to impose stiff penalties on contractors for racial

Police Officer Flubbed It, Too

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mercer G. Brown, 36, was arrested Feb. 17 on a drunken driving charge because, in a closed eyes test, he couldn't touch the tip of his nose with his forefinger.

In municipal court Monday, his attorney asked the arresting officer, Larry Schultze, to show the jury how a sober man should have done.

Schultze closed his eyes, extended his right arm and finger and swung it toward his nose. He missed.

The jury found Brown innocent.

Lawmakers Okay Giving To Young

DENVER (AP) — Colorado's state senators came to the aid of the younger generation Monday, with unanimous approval to a bill allowing barbers to give candy and chewing gum to youngsters when they get haircuts.

The Senate specified that the candy, or gum, must be in a clean wrapper. The bill would overrule the State Barber Board which held last fall barbers must quit giving the candy and gum for sanitary reasons.

or religious discrimination on government projects. The Johnson committee also took over the duties of the old Government Employees' Committee.

The vice president was reported to have insisted that enforcement operations be placed under Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg, named as vice chairman of the group. Goldberg may pass the primary responsibility along to Jerry R. Holleman, assistant secretary and former labor union official.

Such complaints such as that made Monday by Clarence Mitchell of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) will be channeled to the Labor Department for review and action.

Mitchell charged in a telegram to Johnson that South Carolina plants holding government contracts are discriminating against Negroes in hiring workers.

Johnson apparently has reserved for himself and members of the parent committee the broad field of policy-making.

One of the factors brought to the vice president's attention is that most Negroes with the opportunity to gain a higher education go into medicine or dentistry. He has been told that it is essential that educational work be done in Negro communities to convince parents that their children should enter other fields which offer greater chance for advancement.

The committee also has run into the difficulty that many skilled crafts are handed down from father and son. Negroes encounter barriers, for instance, when they seek the apprenticeship training necessary to become a journeyman carpenter.

To counter these economic factors, Johnson is thinking in terms of a training program aimed directly at lifting the skills of Negro workers.

The committee has been told that Negro unemployment is disproportionate to that of whites in many areas. It has learned that

Apathy, Ignorance And Taxes Hurt School Financing

Editor's Note—Financing America's public school system has become an increasingly costly and complex task. How is the man in the middle—the local taxpayer—bearing up? This is the first of three articles on some major factors in school financing as Congress considers federal aid.

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer
There are three main threats to every school bond issue, every school tax levy placed on the ballot in this country: apathy, ignorance, and resistance to taxes. Of course there are many other reasons why school bonds and taxes are voted down. School administrators may get grabby with public money. They may ask for facilities that aren't really needed. They may go overboard on luxurious frills. But time after time, where the need seems urgent and the cause legitimate, it is apathy, ignorance, and resistance to taxes that defeat school bond issues at the polls, frighten some school boards into postponing requests for needed funds, or asking for much less than they really need. The extent to which these factors operate was shown in a newsman's survey in St. Louis, Mo., and Parma, Ohio—one a city where a bond issue was defeated recently, the other where it passed on a second try.

The problems these communities face are typical of the problems confronting school boards, administrators and taxpayers almost everywhere. Most large cities have, like St. Louis, school buildings erected many years ago and sadly antiquated. Most also have their slums, where the tax return is lowest but the educational needs greatest. Suburbs like Parma face similar problems across the nation—young families with lots of children, but little if any industry to ease the tax burden on the homeowner.

Details differ from city to city, but the basic question remains the same—where are they to get money for their schools? Let's look at the three factors in some specific cases. Apathy: Last May, 6.7 per cent of the registered voters in St. Louis, Mo., went to the polls and voted "no" on two school bond issues totaling $29.5 million. The "no" turnout was one registered voter out of 15, but it was enough to defeat the bond issues because 82.2 per cent of the registered voters didn't bother to vote that day.

Sanford's Quality Education Plan Has Made An Impact On N.C. Public

By RICHARD C. BAYER
RALEIGH (AP) — Not since 1904, when Gov. Charles B. Aycock pleaded for universal education through a public school system, have North Carolinians been asked to face the problems of an educational revolution.

Aycock traveled the political circuit talking to rich and poor about his concepts of knowledge and opportunity and out of it all grew a modern public school system. Now, half a century after the "educational governor" stumped the state, Gov. Terry Sanford has asked the people to shoulder a heavier burden for better schools by supporting an $83 million dollar program.

How the lawmakers react to the governor's request depends a good deal upon how much the people really want improved schools and how much they make their sentiments known. Spokesmen for the United Forces for Education say the state is behind the proposals and, indeed, will demand better public schools.

In a recent poll taken by The Associated Press in 10 North Carolina cities, Wilmington, Lenoir, High Point, Charlotte, Asheville, Goldsboro, Shelby, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Burlington, this question was asked: "Gov. Sanford's $83 million quality education program would reduce the size of classroom loads, provide 1,400 more teachers and raise teacher pay by 21 per cent. Are you for or against this program? Any comment?"

Forty-eight persons — 35 men and 13 women — of various occupations and ages were interviewed. Thirty-three have unequivocal backing to the program, 10 were for school improvements, but had some reservations about Sanford's program. Five said they were against the program. "We owe it to our children to get the best teaching attainable," said Kenneth C. Womble, 32, a Winston-Salem purchasing department employe. "I'm for the program. I think the best investment a taxpayer can make is in teachers for the future."

he was for Sanford's program but added this theory on modern schooling. "The teachers should be given more freedom with discipline to get more from the student." Richard A. Shew, 56, a Wilmington real estate man, branded the United Forces' pressure for better schools as "unfair and unjust" and said that non-essentials should be stripped from schooling before additional money is spent.

good to make improvement, and this is not being critical of the present job — they're doing the best they can — but this is a tremendous step." Shelby housewife, Mrs. William F. Legrand said she favored putting teachers on a merit pay system instead of giving across-the-board raises. A 25-year-old Pikeville agriculture teacher, Herman Crook, said he thought improved facilities are needed more than a salary raise, then added, "But I'm not married and don't need much money."

Resistance to taxes: A man living on a pension in Parma, Ohio, said, "I know we need new schools. But I can't afford to pay higher taxes. I'm being taxed to death. If my income went up, I'd be willing to have my taxes raised for the schools. But I can't pay any more out of what I'm getting now." It is against this background that the question of federal aid to education is now being fought out again in Congress.

Is aid necessary? Each side is marshaling facts and figures. Proponents cite statistics compiled by the U.S. Office of Education? As of last fall, public school enrollment was at a record high of 36.3 million pupils... there was a shortage of 142,100 classrooms... there were about 685,000 pupils on curtailed or half-day sessions... altogether there were 1,868,000 pupils in excess of normal classroom capacity.

Others quote the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: "The classroom shortage is largely a paper emergency. States and communities for the most part have been and are building an adequate number of classrooms to accommodate the nation's school-age population." The National Education Association (NEA), representing 700,000 professional educators, says there is a shortage of 135,000 teachers. The chamber of commerce says, "For some time it has been clear that the teacher shortage is diminishing except in particular subject matter areas in secondary education." The chamber says the teacher shortage is easing because of higher teachers' salaries, and that in recent years teachers' salaries have risen more, proportionately, than the wages of all employed people.

But the one man most concerned—the homeowner on a fixed salary or pension, worried about the education of his children or grandchildren, fighting the battle of inflation, scratching to pay his taxes—what does he think. Parma had voted down a $3-million bond issue and a school tax levy last May, although it approved both of them the second time around in November. The people of St. Louis, three times in a period of nine months, voted down a badly needed $29.5 million school bond issue.

John R. Dover of Shelby, president of a textile corporation, had his reservations. "This program looks like a tremendous undertaking for the state. It's quite a questionable item. It would be

Found Bootleg In His House
William Mercer, 38-year-old Negro of 811-B Bancroft Ave., was arrested by Pitt County ABC officers and Pitt County Sheriff's deputies Saturday afternoon when officers allegedly found one-half gallon of non-tax-paid whiskey in his house.

Investigators said Mercer was charged with possessing the whiskey for the purpose of sale, and placed him under a $200 bond for trial in City Records Court, April 3. Taking part in the arrest were ABC officers J. M. Ward, H. B. Lilley and Walter Taylor, and Deputy Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Holiday Schedule

The schedule for Easter holidays in the Greenville City Schools will be changed slightly this year since one day, April 5, will be used as a make up day. Superintendent of Schools J. H. Rose said today.

Easter holidays will begin on Good Friday, March 31, at noon. Students will resume classes on Wednesday, April 5 and will attend classes on Saturday, April 8.

The April 5 and April 8 dates have been approved as the two make up days, lost due to bad weather conditions during the winter, Rose said.

Ordinarily the Greenville students have the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday following Easter as part of their annual holiday.

Flames Damaged Sandwich Stand

"Moderate to heavy damage," according to fire officials, resulted to Hardee's Hamburger drive-in at the intersection of 14th and Charles Sts. just after midnight when a fire started in the ceiling of the business.

Firemen, noting a call to the fire was received at 12:10 a.m. today, reported the blaze originated in the ceiling and said it was caused by grease in the exhaust system of the drive-in. Firemen said fire units had been called to the scene at 8:40 p.m. yesterday when grease in the fireplace caught fire. They reported the blaze was out when they arrived.

Firemen said it took about 15 minutes to extinguish the midnight blaze. Fire units were sent to Ina's Florist at the intersection of N.C. 11-U.S. 13 and old N.C. 11 when a fire started in the woods behind the business.

Firemen reported the cause of the fire was unknown. They said the fire was reported at 2:20 p.m. Fire units were sent to 209 South Elm St. at 12:50 p.m. when a grass lot caught fire. No damage was reported by the Fire Department.

Fire units were also sent to 402 Evans St. at 1:25 p.m. to wash down gas which had leaked from a parked car on the street. No fire resulted, firemen noted.

Utilities Commission Policies Under Attack

RALEIGH (AP) — A state Utilities Commission sharply criticized both the commission and utility companies Monday for policies which he said cost customers millions of dollars annually.

Thomas R. Eller told the Raleigh Sertoma Club the Utilities Commission "is a long way from being a true representative of the general public." He called for appointment of a "public defender" as a "watchdog" for the public in all utility matters.

The utilities, he said, don't want to be troubled by taking advantage of liberalized federal tax laws that could lead to a $15 million annual savings in utility costs.

"It seems," Eller commented, "that utility management is inclined to take the view that since it can receive no benefit by taking accelerated depreciation and since the ratepayer is to bear the expense anyway, there is no reason to go to the extra difficulty of time and trouble in claiming it."

"The companies and the commission are joint responsible for this unnecessary and wasteful use of the ratepayers' money."

He said only Virginia Electric and Power Co., which has most of its operations in Virginia, uses the liberalized depreciation method for tax purposes.

Eller called the utility regulatory system in North Carolina "archaic" and "near chaotic." He said utilities laws need "unification and modernization," and that the state should abandon the concept of basing a company's rate of return on the "fair value" of the company's property.

He recommended a "cost of service" study as a fairer base for fixing rates.

Former Diplomat In Insurance Firm

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A former Cuban diplomat, now a bus boy at Lake Tahoe, Nev., is going to work for a Kansas City insurance firm.

Rodrigo Parajon resigned last January as the Cuban consul-general in San Francisco. He said he was convinced the Castro regime was dominated by Communists.

A short time later he went to work as a bus boy at a casino restaurant-theater. An Associated Press story about the Cuban lawyer with degrees from Cuban and Spanish colleges attracted the attention of W. D. Grant, president of the Business Men's Assurance Co. He telephoned Parajon with a job offer.

Parajon, who has a wife and 5-year-old daughter, earns $10 a night and tips as a bus boy. His salary with BMA, starting April 15, was not disclosed.

William Talman Gets Children

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor William Talman, the district attorney on the Perry Mason television show, has won custody of his two children.

Talman, 44, told a judge Monday that his ex-wife, actress Barbara Reed, 41, had voluntarily given them to him and gone to Mexico.

Miss Reed was granted custody of Barbara, 8, and William III, 6, when she got a divorce last August. The couple married in 1952.

Talman was dropped from the TV show for nine months after his arrest a year ago during a raid on a party in a Hollywood apartment. Narcotics charges resulting from the raid were later dismissed.

Piracy still flourishes in the China Sea. The pirates operate in motorized, armor-plated junks.

Large Delegation At State HD Meeting

A large delegation from Pitt County will attend the annual state meeting of Home Demonstration Clubs to be held Wednesday at 10 a.m. at Memorial Auditorium in Raleigh. Mrs. Amelia Capehart, Negro home economics agent, said today.

Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, newly inaugurated president of A. & T. College, Greensboro, will be guest speaker for the morning session. Highlighting the afternoon session will be reports of the year's achievements and business of the organization.

Mrs. Capehart and Miss Gracie M. Cheek, assistant home economics agent, will accompany the delegation.

Those attending from Pitt County include:

Locked 2 Hours In Refrigerator

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Two young brothers spent two chilly hours in a locked refrigerator Monday, but settled a burning question.

Teddy Ross, 5, and brother Timothy, 4, were playing in the basement when the door of a refrigerator used to store meat swung shut on them. Their parents and police conducted a two-hour search of the house and neighborhood which ended happily when the father opened the refrigerator door to investigate banging noises.

Exclaimed Teddy: "The light really does go out when the door goes shut."

Police said Teddy, by trying to pry the door open with a sheaf, broke the rubber gasket seal, that permitted air to enter and probably saved their lives.

Struggle In Peru Between Democracy And Dictators

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A struggle between democracy and dictatorship is going on in much of South America. Decisive battles in this struggle can be won or lost in Peru.

Some signs are hopeful. Among others, U. S. business representatives indicate rising confidence that Peru's conservative-minded government can check the combined drive of Castroism and communism.

There are several big ifs. The if of self-reform at the top of Peru's social-economic ladder is not the least of these.

Prime Minister Pedro Beltran has attacked forcefully some of Peru's major problems and has impressed many a North American. As a result, there are strong indications that U. S. investments, now at about $800-million mark, will be stepped up.

One source reports the climate for investment seems better in Peru than in most other American countries, despite pressure from the left and the weight of many a social and economic problem yet to be attacked.

There is stormy weather ahead in Peru's politics. If the government rides it out, constitutional forces will have won an important battle. But win or lose, more than Peru's future alone is at stake.

Beltran is a former ambassador to the United States, publisher of the influential newspaper La Prensa, an economist, banker and member of an old land-owning family. He has filled his Cabinet with young, dedicated men without any apparent axes of their own to grind. Their goal is political and economic stability and stimulated production.

If they fail, Peru may revert to the sort of military dictatorship it had in 1948-56, or it may be driven far to the political left. One way or the other, the cause of political sanity in Latin America would feel the impact.

Beltran adopted unpopular measures, made them stick, created confidence in his government. He froze wages but not prices; eliminated certain subsidies to producers, allowed a rise in oil prices which had been among the world's lowest, called a halt to indiscriminate borrowing, headed the nation toward a free economy. The sol, Peru's currency, is strong. Prices are high but stable. Exports are up.

The Communist-Castroist combine plotted against all this.

After documentary proof was provided of the Communist-Castroist plotting, Beltran last December threw out Cuba's diplomats and agents, broke relations with Havana, and crippled the extremists' operation.

All this had its effect elsewhere on the continent as a demonstration that despite the Cuban revolution's influence, Fidel Castro's interference could be met with drastic countermeasures.

But Peru still has a long road to travel.

Not the least of its problems is strong resistance at the top levels of Peruvian society toward needed reforms. This resistance in itself has contributed to agitation among groups in which Castroism and communism are most influential, including intellectuals and students.

Much social legislation has gone into Peru's law books, but the population is a vast distance away from its minimum needs.

Paradoxically, Peru is rich. It has a large amount of national capital available for development of industry, which must accompany agricultural and other reforms if the reforms are to succeed at all.

Peru's own capitalists, however, seem intent upon superprofits without risk. Much of the capital which might go into economic growth is sunk into real estate speculation. Much goes out of the country for investment elsewhere.

U. S. companies in Peru plow back a good portion of their profits into investment. As elsewhere in Latin America, U. S. employers pay the highest wages, afford best working conditions.

A trend is noticeable now, also, toward U. S. companies assimilating themselves into Peru's national life. Some are incorporating as Peruvian companies, thus contributing to harmony. The alternative, some seem to reason, might be losing everything to a wave of revolution-born anti-Yankeeism.

Peru's problems are a dreary repetition of the old story in much of the continent: widespread poverty amidst riches, feudal habits of land ownership, lack of accommodation with the mid-20th century among the wealthy class.

Half of Peru's population of about 12 million is made up of Indians, 90 per cent of them illiterate, many unable even to speak Spanish, the national language. They do not participate much in the country's political life.

When constitutional government came in 1956 after the fall of Gen. Manuel Odría's dictatorship, only 13 per cent of the population voted in presidential elections. More than half that vote was in Lima.

New elections are coming up in 1962 for a president to succeed aristocratic Manuel Prado, 70. They will be held against a background of widespread fever for agrarian reform and for an attack on Peru's housing and other economic problems. The realization of these problems reaches the lowest economic level in the country.

And with the approach of the elections comes a test of the conservative sector's willingness to face facts.

To attack the housing and road problems the United States has offered $53 million in credits for specific projects. The United States has asked for a list of such projects.

There are signs the government is timid about it. The list might step on some Peruvian capitalist toes. But in the absence of the list, no money is advanced. And Peru's ruling politicians are using precious time in making up their minds.

Office Workers Could Feel Machines' Impact

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—The specter of giant pushbutton machines crowding people out of the nation's offices is troubling the dreams of many men and women clerical workers.

One congressman predicts machines will do away with four million office jobs within five years. He is Rep. Elmer J. Holland, D-Pa., member of a Pittsburgh Steelworkers Union.

Not so, say the makers of the complex office gadgets. Despite its first disturbing impact, mechanization always has meant more jobs in the long run.

The ranks of white collar workers have swelled by 28 per cent in the last 10 years. As for clerical workers alone, the Department of Commerce puts their number at 9,798,000 in 1960, up 1,431,000 since 1955. This growth has continued even while many of their blue collar cousins have been losing their jobs—with the mechanized factory getting some of the blame.

But the electronic revolution is spreading fast in the office. And when the big data processing machines come in, some jobs go out. That's what some white collar workers are seeing—and others fearing.

The things they fear will be concentrated display next month at the business equipment exposition in the New York Coliseum.

Three and a half acres will be crowded with all the tools of office mechanization — the basic typewriters and adding machines, the by-now familiar tabulating and punched paper tape equipment, and the latest full-scale electronic data processing systems.

What will further inroads of these machines do to clerical jobs?

Some will be eliminated, just as the advent of the typewriter doomed the worker whose clear handwriting was used for all business correspondence. But a whole new set of jobs sprang up—typist, plant production worker, salesman and, of course, serviceman.

A bigger impact on business growth in general was that the speeding up of correspondence made companies able to handle greater business volume. And this generated new jobs.

"The electronic computer's impact on business today is not too different, relatively speaking, from that of the typewriter years ago," says Joseph W. Barker, This former dean of the Columbia University faculty of engineering is now executive vice president of the Office Equipment Manufacturers Institute, sponsors of the upcoming exposition.

"Both eliminated some job categories. Both opened up new ones. Both were created to solve a fundamental business problem," he said.

"Each requires skilled human operators and each must have properly prepared input data and distribution of output."

Barker admits that mechanization has cost office jobs in the last five years. But he says that while unemployment among the clerical labor force has risen 1.2 per cent, the total employed is up 17 per cent. This is because new jobs have opened up much faster than old ones have been shelved.

So when it comes to eliminating jobs, Barker insists it's: "Job categories, yes — people, no."

Seniors Again Take Top Honors In Competition

By Nadine Garriss
BELVOIR — Belvoir-Falkland High School's Senior Class for the second consecutive time took top honors in interclass scholastic and "housekeeping" competition.

The seniors drew top awards Thursday in an assembly here of grades seven through 12. One award went to the seniors for maintaining the neatest room in the high school since the last previous awards day.

It took first place in the academic achievement division also with class scholastic average of 82.7 per cent.

Student of the Month award went to sophomore Waylon Whitely.

On hand at Thursday's assembly to make the awards presentations was the Rev. Jesse Parks, pastor of the Fountain and Falkland Presbyterian Churches.

Following the presentations, Rev. Parks introduced the Rev. Russell Buffaloe, pastor of the Millner Presbyterian Church in Raleigh, who was engaged in services at Falkland.

Prior to Rev. Buffaloe's address to the student body, special recognition was given BFHS honor students.

Included on the honor roll were Seniors Carolyn Harris and Frances Edwards and sophomores Waylon Whitley and Beverly Gaynor.

On the Principal's List were Seniors Joan Harris, Clayton Mayo, Phyllis Nichols and Betty Harrell; sophomores Melba Everette, Paul Bright and Sue Pierce; and freshmen Levi Gladson, Dwight Eastwood, Andrea Wooten and Charlie Tyer.

Rev. Buffaloe spoke to the group on "Using Your Talents." To conclude the program, several students imitated members of the BFHS faculty in connection with Teacher Appreciation Day observed Friday.

The assembly's student devotion was presented by Nadine Garriss and Principal E.N. Warren introduced Rev. Parks following a musical selection—"Thanks Be To God"—by the Junior Glee Club.

At a recent dance sponsored by the Future Teacher of America, Roy Smith and Carolyn Harris were crowned as "Mr. and Mrs. Belvoir-Falkland of 1961."

The duo was elected by popular vote of the student body.

Proceeds from the dance will go into a scholarship fund for a member of this year's graduating class and for a banquet for the group. Mrs. Ann Ruth Cozart is PTA advisor.

The finishing touches are being applied by the Junior Class to the major project of the year—the annual Junior-Senior Banquet.

Set for April 7 at the Greenville Country Club, the theme chosen for the affair is "Moonlight and Roses."

Juliet Is Suspended And Doesn't Like It

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Where-for art thou, Juliet?

"I'm on suspension," said Miss Prowse, who doesn't like it a bit. But if she had it to do over again, she'd do it all over again.

Certain teen-agers might suspect the actress-dancer has lost her marbles in rejecting a movie with Elvis Presley. She has nothing against Elvis. Matter of fact, she sometimes dates him, as well as another singer named F. Sinatra.

"And appearing in 'G.I. Blues' with Elvis did more for my career than anything, even 'Can-Can,'" said the gal who burst to fame with the latter film. "All of my fan mail is the result of 'G.I. Blues'; it gave me a big and important audience."

Then why did she turn down "Blue Hawaii" with E.P.? Principle is principle, she said.

"It all started with two requests," she explained. "First, I wanted my own makeup man on the picture. I have a face that is difficult to make up; I wanted someone who knew me."

"Second, I wanted to take my secretary along. If they would pay her fare, I would pay her salary. I wanted a companion. I didn't know anyone else in the company except Elvis, and he's always surrounded by a dozen buddies."

The answer of producer Hal Wallis was no on both counts. Juliet asked if she could make a screen test with his makeup man. After much protest, this was granted. Juliet thought the test was okay.

"But then I took another look at the script," she said. "The part had no character. I was only one of three girls in Elvis's life, and one 16-year-old had a more interesting part than mine."

So she tendered her regrets. This started a chain reaction of stacks blowing from Paramount to 20th Century-Fox, where Juliet is under contract.

"Naturally Fox was mad because they wouldn't be making their profit on my loanout," she said.

It's not so much that she doesn't like working at her relatively modest salary while the studio collects nicely on loanouts. She earns $10,000 per TV show but doesn't see it, she says. Being under contract to 20th-Century-Fox she gets nothing additional for outside appearances. What hurts most is lack of studio backing up.

"You'd think they'd realize if a new player is in enough poor pictures her career will go out the window," Juliet said. "They seem only concerned with getting their money out of me."

In the interests of fair play, producer Wallis was offered equal time.

While reluctant to enter controversy, he said this: "Miss Prowse received her copy of the 'Blue Hawaii' script on Feb. 23. Since that time, she has come in for makeup tests, wardrobe and wig fittings as recently as two weeks ago. It is difficult to understand why she did this and why so much time and effort should be expended before she reached her decision."

Twentieth Century-Fox's comment: "We do not wish to comment."

Credit Card Cheats Given Special House Attention

RALEIGH (AP)—The House received legislation Monday night designed to clamp down on persons who use phony credit cards to cheat merchants and hotels.

Persons who used such phony cards would be guilty of a misdemeanor under a bill introduced by Rep. Irvin Bellk of Mecklenburg.

Eugene Brooks of Durham and Ike F. Andrews of Chatham. A provision in the bill would make it illegal to attempt to cheat a telephone company on long distance tolls by using such devices as pre-arranged codes through the caller and person being called.

The two offenses would be punishable in the discretion of the court—up to two years in prison. Meanwhile, legislation was introduced in the House aimed at simplifying procedures of getting patients into mental hospitals. The two bills were offered by Reps. John Umstead of Orange and C. Wayland Spruill of Bertie, longtime supporters of the state mental hospitals.

The measures would meet any complaint, Umstead said, that degraded people had to spend a night or two in jail because they could not immediately be admitted to a hospital. Where necessary, the bills would bypass the authority of Superior Court clerks to commit persons, Umstead explained.

A provision in one bill would provide that any person needing mental care may be admitted to a mental hospital at any time with a notarized certificate by two physicians, unrelated to him. An inebriated person needing hospital care could also be admitted to a state hospital on such a certificate.

Dallas Negroes Call For Boycott

Tourists Now Roam Grim Old Slave Island

Cases Heard In City Police Court

The following cases were tried in Municipal Recorder's Court by Judge Charles H. Whebe on March 17.

GORÉE ISLAND, Senegal (AP) takes visitors around. A grim dungeon on this sleepy, dust-covered island served as one of Africa's first links with the New World.

Thousands of black slaves from the African mainland, two miles away, passed through Goree's "transit camp," which is shown to tourists today as "Maison des Esclaves."

The trade was part of the triangular exchange between Africa, America and Europe, which eventually brought alcohol, firearms and textiles to the dark continent.

For more than two centuries, expanding colonial powers fought bitterly for strategically located Goree. The tiny island (900 by 300 yards) changed hands 10 times after its discovery by Portuguese adventurers in the 15th Century.

Once Naval Base The French tricolor finally settled over it in 1802. In 1818, with the definite abolition of the slave trade, the island became a naval base charged with repression of slave traffic.

Former Brooklyn GI Believes More Opportunity In Britain

KING'S LYNN, England (AP)—Robert Walter, 20, who once called Brooklyn home, thinks there is more opportunity for the little man in Britain than in the United States.

That's why he has set himself up as a one-man window cleaning firm in this Norfolk town.

After two years as an airman at the USAF base at nearby Souththorpe, he returned to the United States last summer to look for a job.

His English wife, Judy, a 20-year-old brunette window dresser, and their 8-month-old son, Robert, were to have joined him later.

But, Walter explains:

"I like to work on my own. And back home it's very hard to go into business without capital. They don't want little people over there. Big concerns control so many things."

So he came back to his mother-in-law's home in King's Lynn.

After a day canvassing the town for customers he decided there was a future in window cleaning.

"We had 10 pounds one shilling

($28.14) in the bank," Walter explains. "So we drew out 10 pounds ($28) of it.

Two ladders cost me 8 pounds ($22.40), a wash leather 12 shillings 6 pence ($1.75), a bucket 7 shillings 6 pence ($1.05) and dusters six shillings (84 cents)."

In his first week he collected 45 customers — and 6 pounds ($16.80) at four pence (4 1/2 cents) for each ordinary-sized window.

"I'm going to stick at it until I can afford to buy a motor van instead of having to use a barrow," he says. "What I'm after are a few contracts with businesses, then I'll start earning real money."

Says his wife:

"I'm all for Robert's window cleaning. Especially when he cleans ours."

Senior Appointed 2nd Lieutenant

Kenneth Linear Stalls of Rt. 1, Washington, N. C., has been accepted for appointment as a commissioned officer in the U. S. Army Reserve, with the rank of second lieutenant. The appointment, recognizing his excellent record in service and his potentialities for command, became effective March 17.

Now a senior at East Carolina College, Lt. Stalls has been a member of the 851st Replacement Company of the USAR in Washington since 1959 and has served as Platoon Sergeant with the rank of Sergeant First Class under the command of Capt. John H. Brookshire of Greenville and Washington.

Lt. Stalls, serving with the U.S. Army from 1953 to 1956, was on duty in Austria, Italy and Germany. He held the rank of master sergeant.

Bergman Great Despite A Soapsudsy TV Story Line

By CYNTHIA LOWRY AP-TV-Radio Writer NEW YORK (AP) — Ingrid Bergman made her annual appearance on our television screens Monday night. She portrayed a turn-of-the-century Helen Trent seeking the dramatic answer to the question, "Can a middle-aged widow find romance in Monte Carlo?"

It was a rough evening for the viewers, because most of the time Miss Bergman was having her troubles on one channel, Bing Crosby and Maurice Chevalier were holding a jolly songfest on another. The viewer saw both programs, one at a preview, but it must have been a difficult decision in many a home.

The tale, told in a long flashback, concerned a newly widowed woman — Miss Bergman — con- valescing from her grief at Monte Carlo. At the roulette tables in the casino she spots a tense young man as he loses his last franc. For reasons not quite clear, she follows him out into one of those terrible TV rainstorms. In an effort to keep him from shooting himself, she drags him off to a small hotel.

Both Crosby (who seems to get slimmer in each successive show) and Chevalier (who looks younger each year) were in top form. They rambled through everything from "Once in Love with Amy" to "September Song," with very little extraneous dialogue between numbers. Carol Lawrence was around to add an exciting dance number. It was a pleasant, unpretentious and tuneful hour.

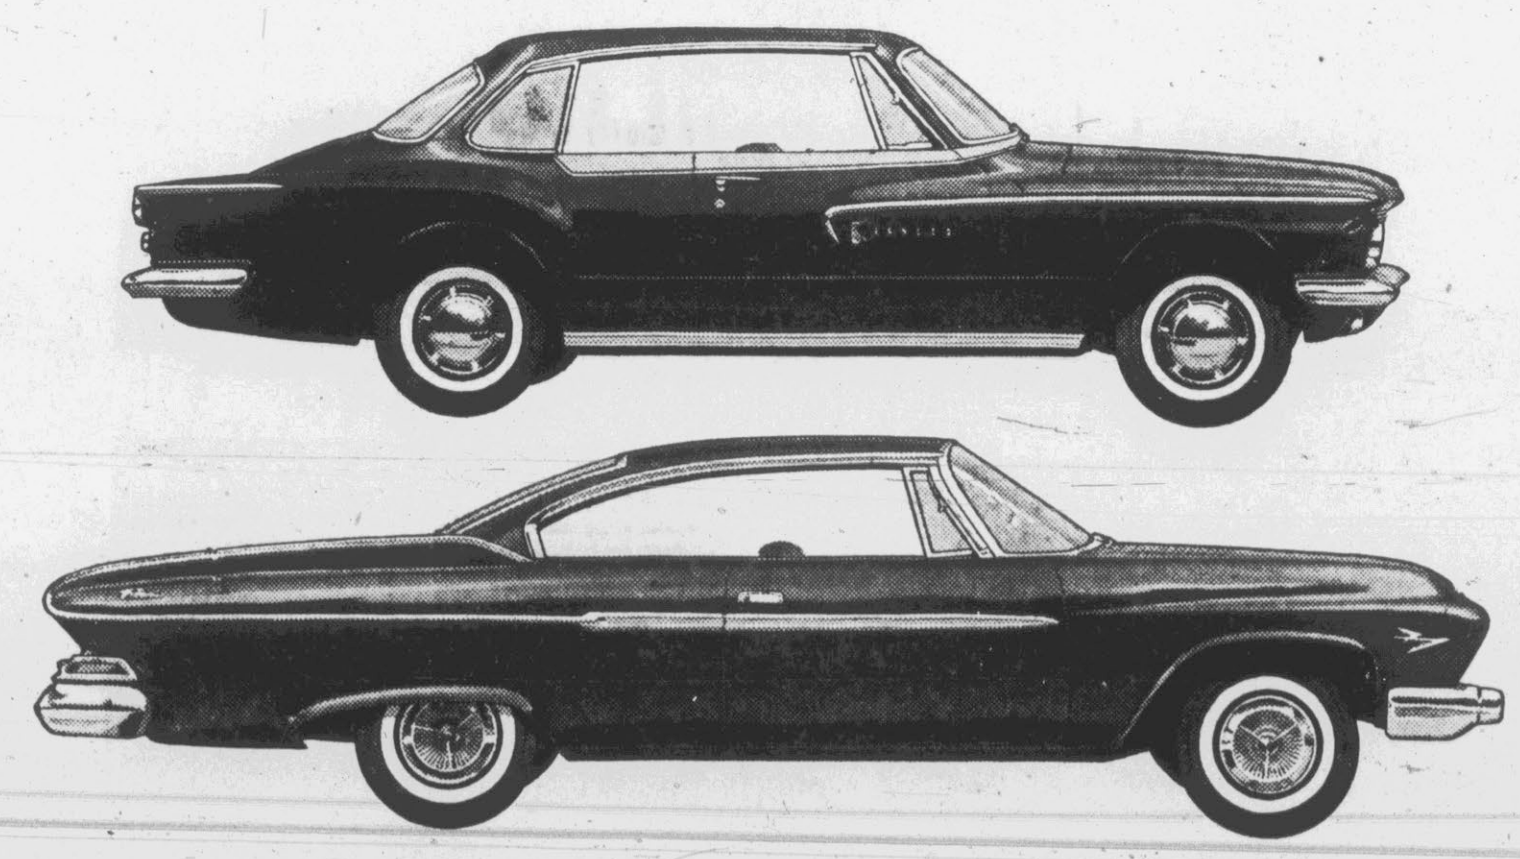

National Honor In Rural Safety

RALEIGH — A Four Oaks Four-H'er has won a national citation for his work in rural safety. Charles Davis was selected for the Citation for Meritorious Service to Safety by the National Conference for Farm Safety an organization sponsored by the National Safety Council. The award cites his "exceptional service to safety, especially in the field of rural traffic."

HOW TO TELL A DODGE FROM A DODGE Identifying a Dodge has become a problem. Because now there are two. Compact Dodge Lancer. Full-size Dodge Dart. There is an obvious difference. Size, inside and out. Dart, the lower picture, is the larger. But otherwise they are very much alike. Both have a unitized, rust-proofed body. A superb ride called Torsion-Aire. A battery-saving alternator. And both have optional three-speed push-button automatic transmissions. Another difference is price. Dart, the full-size Dodge, is priced model for model with Ford and Chevrolet. THEIR GOAL: SAFER FLYING

The electronic brain is being geared to give planes the green light to safety.

The Federal Aviation Agency, which regulates and supervises the nation's air control facilities, is working to eliminate the human element almost entirely and turn traffic control over to complex computers, and it is spending 200 million dollars a year to develop an all-weather, electronically controlled system. Devices for the new system are already being developed and tested at FAA's experimental center at Atlantic City, N. J.

A new three-dimensional radar apparatus is another project in the works. The 3-D radar, unlike present radar that shows only distance and bearing, will also show altitude. It will enable the air-traffic-control operator to know at a glance whether the planes are at the same altitude and in danger of collision.

Meanwhile, from the FAA's Aeronautical Center at Will Rogers Field in Oklahoma City, where the FAA conducts its only training school for air traffic control operators, a plane loaded with electronic equipment flies out regularly, back and forth across the U. S., to check on the efficiency of the navigational aids on the nation's airways. It covers the entire network every 90 days.

At the school, about 1,000 men each year take introductory training or refresher courses in installing and maintaining navigational aids.

Some Progress On Suspended Animation Seen

By FRANK CAREY
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—A Minnesota scientist today reported development of a technique he said might open the way towards the goal of transplanting entire organs from one person to another.

Dr. Claude R. Hitchcock of Minneapolis General Hospital said he and fellow researchers had successfully removed a kidney or lung from baboons and dogs, kept them alive outside the body for periods up to 24 hours, then re-planted them in the same animals and found that normal function quickly resulted.

He told a seminar of science writers sponsored by the American Cancer Society that the technique—featuring quick cooling of the organs to an ice-cold state and freeing them entirely of blood—might help science in its attempts to change the characteristics of cells within organs of an animal—and eventually of a human—so that such an organ would not be rejected when transplanted into another, living subject.

Up to now such transplants can be made only between identical twins, and so far only with kidneys.

In a separate interview, he said that in "the far future," with the aid of his allied techniques, it might be possible to take an organ, such as the liver, from the body of a person killed in an accident, alter its cellular characteristics, store it in a refrigerator, and then transplant it into the body of a person whose own organ was diseased.

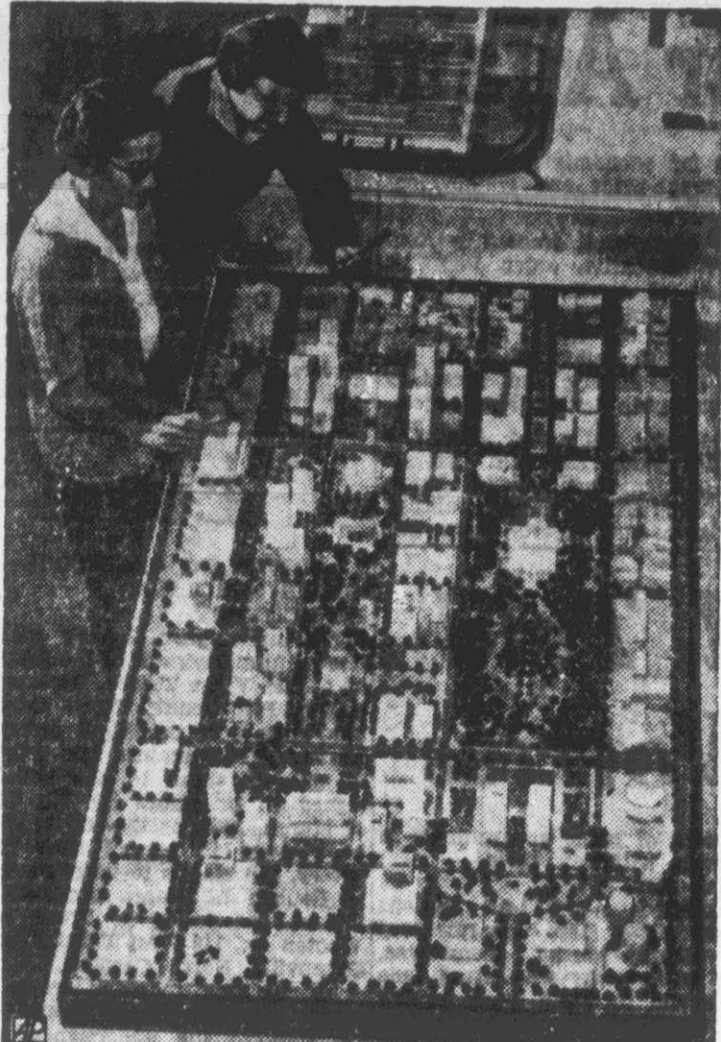

"The Russians," he said, "have already had success with stored blood taken from cadavers."

Up to now, he declared, all attempts to alter the cellular character of animal organs so as to allow transplants have been beset by these drawbacks:

1. Most have been made with the organ still inside the original animal's body so that chemical and other manipulations of the organ have been limited.

2. While some previous experiments have featured actual removal of an organ from an animal, and treatment of its outside the animal's body, such methods have been relatively complex and most of them have caused such changes that when the organ was returned to the animal's own body, he quickly died.

The key value of the new method, he said, lies in the fact that a "state of suspended animation" is achieved in the organ within 60 seconds by perfusing it with an ice-cold mixture of dextran, plus novocaine to prevent constriction of arteries. The mixture also serves to flush out all

LONG SHOT . . . Leila Johnston and Virginia Green work on model of completed Sacramento Civic Redevelopment project.

She Works In Her Own Lilliputian World

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—"It was slim pickings at the start, but we have all the business we can handle now."

Slender, brown haired Virginia Green was telling of Architectural Models, Inc., a one-woman venture, which today is doubling its business volume annually.

For four lean years Virginia, a former San Francisco school teacher turned sculptor, tried to convince architects that she could make precise scale models that would help their clients visualize how building and development projects actually would look.

The idea caught on. Today these scale models bring her little firm thousands of dollars apiece. The business now extends across the nation and into the new states of Hawaii and Alaska.

They have become "the largest scale model manufacturer in the West and one of the two biggest in the country."

Models Valuable
Virginia started making scale models eight years ago at home. Three years later Leila Johnston, a former school teacher from Washington state, joined her as a partner. This year, with business mounting steadily, they incorporated.

"Leila and I had gotten our master of fine arts degrees at the University of Oregon in 1947, majoring in sculpture," Virginia says. "After graduation, I tried to do garden and architectural sculpture. Then I met some architects who suggested there was a promising field in scale modeling of architectural projects. So I tried it."

The hard part was instilling confidence in architects.

Actually, scale models are highly valuable to architects. They enable people to see just how a project will look; visualize the interior space and even room furnishings.

Many Projects Finished
Virginia and Leila recently flew to Honolulu to study personally the multi-million dollar Ala Moana Reef project, on which they have just finished a scale model, complete with palm trees, hotels, public beaches and dazzling tropical blue waters.

The 72 x 42 inch model is costing the state of Hawaii several thousand dollars, but all who see it will know just how the beautiful project will look when completed.

The firm recently finished models for the University of Alaska; the University of California, which is planning a big new campus at Santa Cruz; the Pacific Development Plan at Sacramento, involving parks and areas near the state capitol; the Golden Gate redevelopment, which conceives turning San Francisco's rundown produce district into a spanking new apartment tower and business district along the Embarcadero, and numerous big business buildings.

Creighton University at Omaha, Neb., had them do a model visualizing its master plan for expansion in the coming years. And finishing touches are being put on another model for Stanford, the growing Palo Alto university.

Two Years Ahead
All of these models are built exactly to scale, buildings usually 1-8 to 1-16 inch to the foot and, in big sprawling developments, scaling 1 inch to 50 or 100 feet.

"We usually are two years ahead of actual construction," Miss Green says.

"It takes about two years to train a competent model maker."

"We haven't tried to expand too fast, mainly because of the requirement for carefully trained personnel. If we weren't careful, our models would turn out messy and we would be in trouble. So we aren't pushing it."

Right now, their big shop on an obscure sidestreet in the San Francisco industrial area is just about filled to capacity with machine tools, paint departments and all the rest of the intricate gear required to make their realistic models, including the forests of trees they use in landscaping.

The shop is their all-consuming interest, for neither Miss Green nor Miss Johnston is married and, with business the way it is, about every waking hour is tied up on the job.

New Officers Named By Student Library Club

Vickie Lee Morgan of Elizabeth City, Junior at East Carolina, will serve as president of the Student Library Club at the college during the 1961-1962 term. She succeeds Mary Beth Nichols of Rt. 1, Sims.

Miss Morgan is a graduate of Central High School, At East Carolina she is specializing in English and library science. She is past vice-president of the Library Club.

The Library Club at East Carolina, a departmental organization, is composed of majors and minors in the field of library science. Its purpose is to encourage interest in books and libraries. The club holds monthly meetings and includes among its activities each year programs for Book Week and for High School Day at the college and sponsorship of visits to the campus by speakers prominent in the fields of writing and publishing.

Serving with Miss Morgan as Library Club officers during 1961-1962 are Mary Ruth Soot of Durham, vice president; Ronnie A. Cooper of Elizabeth City, secretary-treasurer; and Fay Rofmeistu of Raleigh, reporter; Marquette Crenshaw and Emily S. Boyce, members of the department of library science at the college, are co-advisors for the group.

Other members include the following from Pitt County: Marjha Hart of Grifton.

Management, Labor Again Sought On Team

By NORMAN WALKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy plans to put top representatives of American management and labor to work today helping him solve one of the nation's most pressing problems.

Kennedy called members of his 21-man advisory committee on labor-management policy to the White House for briefings from him and a half dozen mainstays in his administration.

The President has made it clear he wants members of the advisory group to put aside partisan views and approach a wide array of national problems from the standpoint of what's best for the country as a whole.

On that basis, the President has said he will ask the group to consider means for licking many problems other than traditional labor-management differences.

Topics which the White House said would be considered in the closed-door talks today include industrial relations problems in defense industries, the international balance of payments situation, America's competitive position abroad, the administration program for economic growth along with wage-price and employment problems.

The committee, created by Kennedy's executive order Feb. 16, consists of seven representatives each of management and organized labor, five public members and Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg and Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges.

Goldberg, designated chairman for this year, has said that on one problem—maintaining America's competitive position abroad and increasing exports—labor and management both have a heavy stake and can find a common ground.

Due to address the advisory group beside the President, are Goldberg and Hodges, Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Treasury Douglas Dillon, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, and Walter W. Heller, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

Kennedy was reminded at his news conference last week that prior attempts at getting labor and management together on mutual problems generally had been colossal flops. He said he hoped this one would prove more successful and enduring.

"I am hopeful that we can encourage a public interest philosophy among all the groups which will provide progress," he said.

MEMBERS OF CUB SCOUT PACK 200, sponsored by the Greenville Moose Lodge, are shown with their Den Mothers and Cubmaster on Sunday's outing. Pack 200 was driven to Rocky Mount for a train ride from there to Wilson. While in Rocky Mount they were given a tour of the ACL station and facilities. Den Mothers Mrs. Cleve Vincent, Mrs. John Langley, Mrs. Olin Bridges, Mrs. Forrest Mills, and Cubmaster C. O. Stephens accompanied the Pack on the excursion.

Diplomats Abroad Told Forget Domestic Worries

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk has told U. S. diplomats around the world not to worry too much about domestic U. S. politics.

American politics, Rusk said, are a problem for President Kennedy and his top aides, while "our business is foreign policy."

Rusk outlined his views to top State Department officers in a private speech a month ago. The department sent copies to U. S. envoys abroad and also made them available to newsmen.

While the support of American public opinion is important for foreign policy, Rusk said, "we do not want policy officers below the level of presidential appointees to concern themselves too much with problems of domestic politics in recommending foreign policy action."

"It is the business of the presidential leadership and his appointees in the department to consider the domestic political aspects of a problem," he said.

"Mr. Truman (former President Harry S. Truman) emphasized this point by saying, 'You fellows in the Department of State don't know much about domestic politics.'"

"This is an important consideration. If we sit here reading editorials and looking at public opinion polls and other reports that cross our desks, we should realize that this is raw, undigested opinion expressed in the absence of leadership."

"What the American people will do turns in large degree of their leadership. We cannot test public opinion until the President and the leaders of the country have gone to the public to explain what is required and have asked them for support for the necessary action."

Rusk headed for Washington today following a speech at Founders Day ceremonies at the University of Carolina.

Rusk used the occasion to give renewed emphasis to a previous U. S. policy: He saw a need for "a permanent United Nations force, specifically trained and equipped, held in readiness for immediate use."

The foreign policy chief said the desirability of a permanent stand-by U. N. force has been demonstrated by the experience in the Congo where U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold has been hampered by troubles in getting nations to supply troops and by decisions of home governments to suddenly withdraw them.

Rusk also suggested smaller nations should enter into disarmament agreements among themselves, both to do away with arms race waste and to avoid being sucked into the big power arms contest. He particularly mentioned Latin American countries.

Described big power arms control as "an imperative goal" which must be pursued without yielding to cynicism or despair over past failures to reach agreement.

Accused the Communists of reaching for domination throughout the newly developing areas of the world, and warned against underestimating "the formidable contest in which we shall be engaged in the decade of the 60s."

Panel Discusses Schools Abroad

Analysis of American and European education, with emphasis on the elementary school, was the subject of a panel discussion at the Wahl-Coates School P.T.A. meeting Thursday night.

Dr. George Pasti, member of the East Carolina College faculty, served as moderator.

Miss Hazel Copeland, fourth grade teacher at Wahl-Coates School, spoke on the American school system, using Wahl-Coates as an example. Dr. Henry Wanderman of the E.C.C. foreign language department, described life in the schools of Austria and Switzerland, where he was educated.

Dr. George Cook, of the English Department at E. C. C., compared schools, clothes, customs and patterns of American and German students. He spent two years in Germany as lecturer on American literature and culture.

Rev. John Drake led the devotional prior to the meeting.

Drinking Party Causes 3 Deaths, Another Very Ill

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A five-day drinking party — wine, canned heat, moonshine whisky, gin and paragon—ended Monday night in the deaths of two women and a man and the critical illness of another woman.

Two more men went to a hospital for examination.

Coroner W. M. Summerville scheduled autopsies for today to determine the cause of death. He declined to speculate whether the party had gotten hold of some poisonous moonshine whisky, samples of which have been found in this area recently and which contained lead salts.

All the victims are Negroes. Susie Jones, 56, and Janie Pugh, 32, were dead on arrival at a hospital when ambulances took them there about 45 minutes apart.

John Thornton, 29, died about four hours later, shortly before midnight, in a hospital.

Early today, Irene Bradley, 38, was reported to be in critical condition at Mercy Hospital.

Lt. O. A. Crenshaw, head of the Charlotte Police Detective Bureau, said that the other two men, Wilbert Cantrell, 37, and Jack Byes, 49, reported the drinking party began last Thursday. He said that when the group awoke Monday and started to drink again they were unable to keep the fluid on their stomachs. They started drinking paragon then, Cantrell and Byes told officers.

Cantrell and Byes said they had not participated throughout the party, but had drunk some with the others at one point.

Rocking Chair Gives Comfort To Kennedy

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

WASHINGTON (AP) — That rocking chair in President Kennedy's office has been one of his most treasured possessions for more than five years.

Dr. Janet Travell, the White House physician, is glad he likes it so much. She is convinced that rocking in a good high-backed chair is a fine way to relax.

"Such a chair," said the doctor, "provides gentle, constant exercise and helps prevent muscular fatigue."

A reporter went to Dr. Travell after noticing Kennedy using the rocker during a recent conference with Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

The reporter asked if the rocker had been prescribed by Dr. Travell because of the trouble the President has had with his back — an ailment which she first treated in 1955.

Kennedy first hurt his back as a youth. The injury was severely aggravated when the PT boat he commanded as a Navy lieutenant during World War II was sliced in half by a Japanese destroyer.

Dr. Travell replied she had not prescribed the rocker, but that Kennedy has it because he saw one just like it in her New York office when he first came to her for help in 1955.

"He found it exceedingly comfortable and at his request I ordered one just like it for his Senate office," the doctor related.

The high-backed wooden rocker originally had a light finish, but it was stained a mahogany shade

1,500 Chicks Go To 4-H Members

Quality chicks of the Parmenter Red variety—1,500 of them—have been distributed among 15 Pitt County Negro 4-H Club members under the county's six-year-old Poultry Chain program.

Negro County Agricultural Agent James M. Goode and assistant agent W.G. Barnes said each of the 15 recipients were given 100 of the chicks.

Goode pointed out: "It is the responsibility of each 4-H'er participating in the chain to use recommended practices in growing the chicks to the pullet stage in five and one-half months."

Each of the club members receiving the chicks, Goode continued, will return 12 of the pullets to the county agent's office in September.

The returned pullets will be entered in a county poultry show and sale. Proceeds from the sale will be used to purchase chicks for continuation of the Poultry Chain in 1962 for other Pitt 4-H'ers.

Receiving chicks this year were: Lillian Gatlin, Phyllis Gatlin and Billy Thompson, all of Grimesland; John Moore Jr., Jimmie Jones, Deloris Council, William Sheppard and Hazel Evans, all of Greenville; Donald Gorham and Curtis Pulley of Falkland; Alice F. Chapman, Loretta Pittman and Helen Chapman of Griffton; and Kelley Bruce Mills and Marvin Carmon of Winterville.

The Poultry Chain is sponsored by the Greenville Chamber of Commerce and the Pitt County Farm Bureau.

Consider Depot Sites For Polaris

HONOLULU (AP) — Pearl Harbor and several West Coast sites are being considered by the Navy for a multimillion-dollar assembly depot for the Polaris missile.

Twelve of the nuclear-powered Polaris submarines are to join the Pacific Fleet by 1965. A submarine base spokesman here said the projected assembly depot would operate in a similar manner to the Atlantic Naval Weapons Annex near Charleston, S.C.

On Sit-In Issue Court Will Rule

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court will decide next fall the constitutional issues raised by racial sit-in demonstrations.

The high tribunal yesterday granted a hearing to 17 Negro students who got prison sentences for such demonstrations at white lunch counters in Baton Rouge, La.

The court's crowded docket will prevent hearing sit-in arguments in the present term which ends in June. However, the three appeals filed by the Negroes probably will be scheduled early in the court's new term that begins Oct. 2. Three hours of argument will be heard.

The cases of the students will be the first to be heard by the court since the start of sit-in demonstrations aimed at ending racial segregation at public lunch counters.

The students said in their appeals that rights guaranteed by the equal protection and due process of law clauses of the U.S. Constitution were denied them when they were arrested at lunch counters in a drug store, a variety store and a bus station in Baton Rouge.

Each was sentenced to four months imprisonment with the stipulation that three months of the sentence could be suspended by payment of $100 fine by each.

In a brief order, the high court again rejected efforts to prevent or delay integration in public schools in Louisiana.

Another appeal to be heard next fall was filed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from a decision by the Virginia Supreme Court. The state court said NAACP engaged in unlawful solicitation of legal business in Virginia. The high tribunal yesterday granted NAACP the hearing on its appeal.

Judge To Decide If Enough Paid In Tax Case

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—A federal judge will be asked today to decide if State Sen. Ralph Gasque has paid up enough or should go to jail too in a federal income tax case.

The 3:30 p.m. hearing was called by Judge Ashlon H. Williams at the request of Dist. Atty. Welch Morrisette of Columbia on whether Gasque should have been ordered to jail two weeks ago.

In the meantime, the Marion County senator has paid up a $5,000 fine and $42,746 in back 1955, 1956, and 1957 federal income taxes and penalties.

He pleaded no defense when his case was called 3 1/2 months ago and was given 90 days in which to pay up or go to jail for two weeks. At the end of the 90 days two weeks ago, Williams granted a 90-day extension.

Morrisette immediately obtained a hearing on whether the judge could thus alter the sentence. It was set for a week ago but was postponed until today.

The Mexican yam is important to pharmaceutical firms. It is a source of diosgenin, which yields cortisone as well as other hormones and steroids used in treating rheumatic diseases and some forms of cancer.

WASHINGTON (AP)— The Supreme Court will decide next fall the constitutional issues raised by racial sit-in demonstrations.

The high tribunal yesterday granted a hearing to 17 Negro students who got prison sentences for such demonstrations at white lunch counters in Baton Rouge, La.

The court's crowded docket will prevent hearing sit-in arguments in the present term which ends in June. However, the three appeals filed by the Negroes probably will be scheduled early in the court's new term that begins Oct. 2. Three hours of argument will be heard.

The cases of the students will be the first to be heard by the court since the start of sit-in demonstrations aimed at ending racial segregation at public lunch counters.

The students said in their appeals that rights guaranteed by the equal protection and due process of law clauses of the U.S. Constitution were denied them when they were arrested at lunch counters in a drug store, a variety store and a bus station in Baton Rouge.

Each was sentenced to four months imprisonment with the stipulation that three months of the sentence could be suspended by payment of $100 fine by each.

In a brief order, the high court again rejected efforts to prevent or delay integration in public schools in Louisiana.

Another appeal to be heard next fall was filed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from a decision by the Virginia Supreme Court. The state court said NAACP engaged in unlawful solicitation of legal business in Virginia. The high tribunal yesterday granted NAACP the hearing on its appeal.

Import Problem Evidence Cited

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—An official of the J. P. Stevens & Co. said today a week-long shutdown of 4,000 looms in the firm's synthetics division is "further evidence of the seriousness of the import problem."

The company announced Monday that 4,000 looms will be shutdown the week of April 3 because of "depressed prices and in order to avoid accumulation of any inventory."

Spell Out Church Stand In Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Poland's Roman Catholic bishops reportedly have drafted a pastoral letter spelling out the Church position in its current struggle with the country's Communist rulers.

Church sources said the letter probably will be read from all pulpits on Easter—two weeks before the April 16 elections.

Stefan Cardinal Wyszyński, the Catholic primate, has already set the tone the letter is expected to take in denouncing the red rulers as "Caesars."

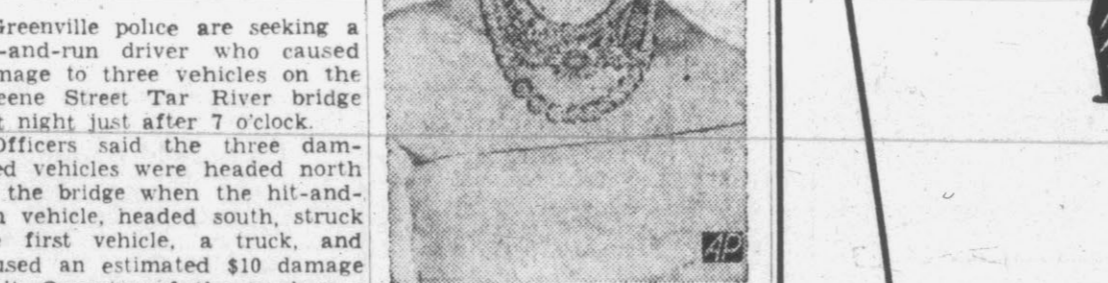

Hit-And-Run Car Driver Is Hunted

Greenville police are seeking a hit-and-run driver who caused damage to three vehicles on the Greene Street Tar River bridge last night just after 7 o'clock.

Officers said the three damaged vehicles were headed north on the bridge when the hit-and-run vehicle, headed south, struck the first vehicle, a truck, and caused an estimated $10 damage to it. Operator of the truck was identified as John C. Baker, 30, of 1523 Broad St.

The second vehicle, a car being driven by L. H. Migell, 27, Route 5, Greenville, was damaged when it was forced into the bridge curbing. Officers estimated damage to it to be about $50.

The third vehicle damaged was struck by the hit-and-run car and damage to it was set at $15. Driver was listed as William Eugene Stokes, 38, of 511-B Church St.

Charter And Ladies Night Held By Greenville Lions

The Greenville Lions Club held its Twenty-second Annual Charter and Ladies Night last night at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. Wallace I. West, Wilmington, N. C., International Director, was the speaker.

President Harry Allen Jr. welcomed the official guests of District 31, H. Lion International. These included: Carmi Winters, District Governor, Goldsboro; Rom Weber, Zone Chairman, Farmville; and their wives.

The Lions Taittister, Charles Horne, served as Master of Ceremonies. Carmi Winters spoke briefly of the history of the Greenville Lions Club, paying special tribute to four of the charter members of the club. These were Tyson Bilbro, B. A. Johnston, George Brown, and George Wilkerson.

Whenever the future is concerned, West told of the beloved Helen Keller speaking, through her companion, to a Lions Convention. "To hear her express appreciation for what Lions has done worldwide, and to be called the Champions of the Blind and Angels of Mercy brought to my mind the teachings of Jesus. Both called out for us to be friends of man," West remarked.

Cherry Point Jet Pilot Is Killed

BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP)—A Marine jet fighter pilot, Capt. Vincent A. Ustach, 29, of New Britain, Conn., died in the crash of his plane here yesterday.

The plane was coming in for a landing when it went down in a marsh 500 yards south of the Beaufort Marine Air Station field. Cause of the crash has not been determined.

Ustach, who was stationed at Cherry Point, N.C., was undergoing familiarization training here. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Ustach, reside at 53 Miller St., New Britain.

Judging Begins For Junior Miss

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Preliminary judging begins tonight in the fourth annual American Junior Miss pageant with 51 pretty high school seniors hoping for the title.

The girls will be divided into three divisions for judging in talent, formal evening wear and sports wear. Each will switch to a new division Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Final judging will be Friday night. In addition to preliminary competition, the judges will take account character, personality, poise, citizenship, high school activities and personal ambitions.

The girls paraded in a long motorcade through downtown Mobile last night. For the first time, all states have contestants, plus one from the District of Columbia.

Leading the parade was 1960's America's Junior Miss—Maureen Sullivan of West Haven, Conn.

The inaugural winner in 1958, Miss Phyllis Ann Whitenac of Bluefield, W. Va., will arrive Wednesday.

The winner will receive a $6,000 college scholarship. Scholarships of $4,000, $2,000 and two for $1,000 each will go to the four runners-up.
