Gardening Today Calendar Of Events Mix Banishes Cake-Making Chores

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

If you are going to plant azaleas this spring, you should be getting your planting site ready. Azaleas like soil with a pH of between 5 and 6. While they require plenty of moisture, they resent wet feet and will tell you so in yellow leaves, puny appearance and finally by dying out completely.

They look good massed in a bed or as face down plants in the foundation planting. If you use them in the foundation planting, dig the hole at least 12 inches in diameter wider than plant ball. Plant them with a mixture of 1/2 peat moss and good soil. Work dirt down around plant with your fingers, firming it as you go. Azaleas have shallow fibrous roots and should not be planted too deeply—never any deeper than they grow in nursery and best about one inch higher than surrounding soil level. This should allow for normal settling.

Azaleas show at their best massed in a shrub border or bed by themselves. In preparing a bed for azaleas, spread 4 inches of damp peat moss over entire area to be planted. Spade this in to a depth of 12 inches. Then work entire area with a hoe fork, mixing peat thoroughly in with soil. This soil should be in such a condition that you can plant azaleas with your bare hands.

Azaleas will grow in full sun, but like semi-shade. If shade is too deep, plants get spindly and have but a few flowers.

They will grow in northern or western exposures. Choose well drained sites where the wind doesn't sweep through.

Azaleas also make interesting hedges—either the large leaf type or the small leaf types can be used as such. While the use of azaleas as a hedge may be limited because of exposure or some like reason, they do all right as a hedge along a walk on the north side of a building or house. Try a small hedge of Hinodigri in such a place. When they have finished blooming, take your hedge shears and trim them as you would any other hedge—then keep rampart growth in line with hand snips. The result should be a neat colorful addition to your landscape scheme.

Azaleas should be fed when they finish blooming or when new growth starts. Use three fourths of a pound of 8-8-8 or azalea and camellia fertilizer for each 100 square feet of bed. Continue monthly until July 15; don't feed after July 15.

Azaleas don't require much pruning. Cut out diseased and dead wood and keep long shoots snipped if in early spring. Don't prune after July 15. If you do, your flowers may be few.

Water in season when rainfall is scarce. Syringe down foliage in real hot, dry weather—may prove beneficial.

While there are proven designs as to how to place azaleas, it is a good plant for the gardener to try out his own ideas. Remember, no matter how good the design is, bad planting will tell, and not in a quiet voice either. It will be loud enough to be heard around your garden. Preparation, proper planting, proper care make happy plants—so use all three when you go in for azaleas.

Mix Banishes Cake-Making Chores

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
How upsidedown cakes have changed! The cook who first invented them, years ago, started with a layer of sugar, butter and fruit. Then she had to prepare cake batter from scratch to pour over the fruit arrangement.

Not these days! Now the real work of making the dessert may be vanished: cake mix may be used to fine advantage for the batter.

The latest version of the upsidedown cake tried in our kitchen boasts an interesting flavor combination—canned apricots plus a new fudge-flavored cake mix that includes coconut. Baked in a large rectangular pan, the dessert may be used for a party.

We think this recipe makes a delightfully honey dessert. But one plea: serve it warm, even if you have to reheat it, and accompany it with whipped cream.

UPS-Y-DAISY CAKE

1 cup firmly-packed dark brown sugar
1 can (1 pound, 14 ounces) unpeeled apricot halves
1/2 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 package (1 1/2 pound, 3 ounces) fudge coconut cake mix
1 1/4 cups water
2 eggs
Spread sugar evenly over the bottom of a baking pan (13 by 9 by 2 inches). Drain apricots—there will be about 24. Sprinkle 2 tablespoons of the apricot syrup over the sugar. (Reserve remaining syrup for some other use.) Arrange apricot halves, cut side down, on the sugar layer. Sprinkle with walnuts; dot with butter. Add water and eggs to cake mix in a mixing bowl; beat with medium speed of electric mixer (or vigorously with a spoon) for 3 minutes—until smooth and creamy. Place cake in pan on wire rack for 5 minutes; invert on serving platter; let stand 1 minute before removing pan. Serve warm with whipped cream.

Mrs. Heller Is Speaker

Mrs. Richard Heller was the speaker when the Elmhurst Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. O. C. Noble.

Mrs. Heller spoke on "The Basic Rules of Flower Arrangement." She stated that arranging flowers for a show and for the home are entirely different. We are getting away from formal designs in flower arranging and showing more interest in arrangements that are pleasing and graceful.

Mrs. Phil Goodson Jr., president, announced that the club entered six exhibits in the Lake-wood Pines Garden Club Flower Show. For these the club received an award of distinction, two ribbons, and an honorable mention. The club went on record as being in favor of having the litterbug laws enforced in Greenville. The state convention will be held in Durham April 25-26.

Mrs. Noble and Mrs. S. W. Paul served refreshments to the members and their guests, Mrs. C. E. Gregory, Mrs. Tracy Hooper, Mrs. Graham Leggett, and Mrs. Paul Jackson.

Mr. Stanford will show slides of the Samuel H. Kress Art Collection. Mrs. Spain urged that all members be present and that visitors be invited.

Combines Marriage With Career

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Alva Myrdal doesn't believe a good marriage depends on your spending every minute with your husband. Or even every month.

"Not when you consider the life-span these days," she says. Happily-married Mrs. Myrdal is her own case in point.

She's an attractive, blue-eyed, ash blonde mother of three grown children and wife of Gunnar Myrdal, internationally known economist now teaching in Stockholm. She's also one of the world's top women diplomats: Sweden's ambassador to India.

With a good piece of the world separating them, she still manages to see a lot of her husband. He spends winters with her in New Delhi and she visits him occasionally at Oxford or Stockholm—wherever he's teaching.

Less commuting was required here she became ambassador 5 1/2 years ago. Then he was in Geneva heading the U.N.'s Economic Commission and she was in Paris directing UNESCO's department of social sciences.

They should be together again soon. She's giving up her ambassador's job the first of April to work in Stockholm on special assignment for Sweden's foreign office.

Right now she's in the United States as one of 30 women from 21 countries participating in a five-day international conference at Vassar College that highlights the girl's school centennial celebration.

Combining pleasure with business, she'll visit her older daughter, Sissela Bok, who's married to a professor at Harvard.

"Children marrying into foreign countries is one of the penalties we must pay for living abroad so much," she smiles. "Penalty, of course, only in the sense we don't see them too often."

Her other children are Jan, 30, who's written seven novels and a recent book on Afghanistan, and a younger daughter, Kay, married to a German researcher.

"Jan married in the middle of her social work course. Then, after having a baby, she completed the course," she says approvingly.

"I personally think every girl should be trained before she marries."

Outfit To Be Top Secret

NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. John F. Kennedy returns to Washington today with suitcases that might as well be marked: "Do not open until Easter."

The President's wife concluded a shopping tour of New York Wednesday. But she, her press secretary in Washington and even the people she bought from classified her purchases top secret.

Even normally talkative designer Oleg Cassini, who had been talking in the Hotel Carlyle, wouldn't say a thing because, he explained, "She asked me not to."

In Washington, the First Lady's press secretary, Miss Pamela Turnure, said the Easter outfit Mrs. Kennedy will wear will depend largely on the weather.

The Kennedys plan to spend Easter in Palm Beach, Fla., where the typical spring Easter outfit might not be too comfortable.

In addition to shopping for clothes, the First Lady visited art museums and curio shops during her stay in the city and went to the ballet with the United Nations ambassador, Adlai E. Stevenson.

Not Since The Days Of Aycock

In many ways, Gov. Sanford has done more campaigning for his office and his program than any other governor of North Carolina in recent history.

In office less than three months and with three campaigns behind him, Gov. Sanford now has launched his fourth campaign to gain acceptance of the program he has proposed for public schools of the state.

A year ago, Gov. Sanford was engaged in a four-way campaign for the Democratic nomination for the office he now holds. After the first primary in May there was the pitched battle between Gov. Sanford and I. Beverly Lake in the second primary to see whose name would go on the ticket. Then came the general election which brought surprising activity on behalf of the Republican gubernatorial nominee and another vigorous campaign was waged for the state's top office by Sanford.

In each case his campaign was pegged to his proposed program for enriching public education in North Carolina. In each case the issue became a primary focal point of the campaign. And in each of the three times the voters went to the polls, Sanford came off with the largest number of votes.

In the past few weeks Gov. Sanford has spelled out in terms of new tax sources where the state may obtain the funds which all along he said would be necessary to implement the school improvement program he advocated. And at the time he made his recommendations, he likewise called on the legislature to submit to the voters of the state next fall the proposition of obtaining the necessary revenue from the sources he recommended. Such a vote, of course would be merely a straw vote, but it would indicate again whether the program he advocated—both school improvement and revenue sources—is acceptable to the people of the state.

This fourth campaign of Gov. Sanford within a year already has begun. His schedule for the next few weeks indicates his time will be split between his duties in Raleigh and the campaign trail, seeking public support to encourage legislators to enact the proposals he has made.

Not since the days of Charles B. Aycock has any governor of North Carolina taken the message of public education directly to the people with the vigor and persistence of Terry Sanford. And so far at least the acid test of the ballot box has shown public sentiment on Sanford's side.

An Omission In Public Records

By LYNN NISBET

RECORDS GAP—A very serious omission in the records of the General Assembly is the failure to preserve minutes of committee meetings. It is common knowledge that the most important work of any legislative body is done in committee rooms. Pending bills are discussed more fully and fully there than on the floors of the House or Senate. Private citizens can appear before committees and express their views, but are precluded by basic rules from speaking before the formal sessions of the Congress or the General Assembly.

Committees of the Congress keep detail records of their meetings, including transcript of testimony by witnesses. It is understood that a number of states have this policy. These transcripts are available to any member to help him determine how he will vote. In most instances they are printed and are available to any citizen upon request, so that the citizen may better understand why his representative voted as he did. These committee hearing records also are valuable in aiding the Supreme Court to decide, as frequently it is called upon to do, on the "intent" of the legislative body when the language may not be too clear.

ON RECORD — Both the House and the Senate keep daily journals which accurately record the bills introduced, listed by title, and by whom. The journals further show committee reports on these bills, and if substitute bills are offered that fact is noted. The journals note amendments offered and adopted on the floor, but they do not preserve any information about discussion in committee rooms, amendments adopted or defeated there—except as they affect the final version of the bill.

In addition to the journals there are two other permanent records of the General Assembly. There is a book which shows what bills every member introduced or signed, and what happened to each bill—what committee it went to, when reported and whether favorable or otherwise, when ratified or killed.

Then the most controlling document of all is the Session Laws of 1961—or whatever Legislature is involved. The journals note only the text of the final act adopted and ratified as law. Nothing about the amendments offered or discussion for and against them.

In other words, the three permanent records of activity of members of the North Carolina General Assembly show only three facts, sometimes of minor importance: Who introduced or signed what bill; which committee handled it; and the final form in which it became law.

Not a word anywhere about what was said for or against it in committee or in open session of the House or Senate; not a word about why it was thought to be needed or not; nothing but bare facts about introduction and passage.

Temporary—Every committee of the House and Senate has a clerk. About half of them have regularly assigned full-time clerks who faithfully record the "minutes" of the committee meetings. Even these clerks and secretaries do not take shorthand notes on what members say when offering amendments and discussing the bill. Inadequate as this record of committee meetings is, the record is only temporary. When the Legislature adjourns, all these committee files are regarded as past history. They either go into the trash can, or the committee chairman or secretary keeps them for future personal use.

The Institute of Government which does a magnificent job of analyzing bills when introduced, and often gives full treatment to committee substitutes, seldom says anything more about amendments than that the bill was amended.

The only permanent (?) record of legislative committee activity is to be found in the files on newspapers, and even the papers and reporters do not claim these to be "official."

ROLL CALLS—Another failure in accurate records is found in the Journal record of roll call votes. Many times on local bills and some statewide measures of relative unimportance, there is used what is called the short roll call. That is, the full roll of the membership is called once or twice and thereafter the presiding officer announces that "without objection the short roll call will be used." The reading clerk then intones three or four names, there is a shout of "ayes"—and every member who answered the first full roll call is recorded as voting.

One result of this practice that members sometimes hardly know what they are voting on and when later controversy arises they deny having voted to such and such bill. Then the journal is pulled on them—and the courts have ruled that you cannot go behind the journal.

The new State House and Legislative Building provides for electronic mechanical voting so that there will be a recorded gap, but until committee proceedings are recorded and preserved there will remain woeful lack of full record of legislative doings.

If Eller Is Right, Changes Are In Order

State Utilities Commissioner Thomas R. Eller, in calling for revision of state utilities laws, has pointed a finger at the state body of which he is a member with the assertion that policies of the Commission and utilities companies cost customers millions of dollars annually.

The assertions by Eller should not be ignored by the Commission itself, the state's present administration or by the legislature. If, as Eller has declared, the utility regulatory system of North Carolina is "archaic" and "near chaotic", major steps should be taken as quickly as possible to alter the situation.

According to Eller utility rates are based primarily on the supposition that the company receive a "fair return" on the "fair value" of its property. In the place of this, which should be abandoned, he said, the Utilities Commission should use a "cost of service" study as a fairer basis for fixing rates.

Eller's assertion that utilities companies, by taking advantage of liberalized tax laws, could pass on some $15 million savings in utilities costs annually, deserves consideration by state officials.

The State Utilities Commission is charged with the responsibility of seeing that rates charged by companies operating under its jurisdiction are fair both to the companies and to the consumers of services these companies supply. If the present regulatory system is unfair to either the consumers or the companies because it is "archaic" or "near chaotic" the system should be modernized. If the policies of the Commission and utilities companies, as Eller asserts, lead to wasteful practices, the policies should be revised.

Since these assertions have been brought to public attention by a member of the State Utilities Commission, the problems pointed to should receive careful consideration not only by the Commission, but by other state officials as well.

Seeks Attention On Public Weal

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—The labor-management conference President Kennedy put in motion Tuesday at least begins under happier conditions than the same kind of conference President Harry Truman called in 1945.

That was an unpredictable time of great pressures. Compared with that—although Kennedy says this is a critical period—his conference starts work in a moment of comparative calm.

The Truman conference, after the end of World War II, met when labor feared one thing—big unemployment—and wanted another—big wage boosts. Besides labor itself was split.

The wartime needs of the country had kept industry and employment at a peak. But with the Japanese surrender and industry's switch to peacetime production, labor could foresee millions out of jobs.

Labor, whose wages were held down during the war, also wanted to jump ahead fast. Strikes were starting. The AFL and CIO were then antagonists, not part of one organization as they are now.

The CIO wanted the conference to agree on a wage policy. The AFL, the coal miners and the employers argued that wages should be settled by individual employers and unions.

It was a conference which got nowhere.

Last year President Eisenhower tried to get a labor-management conference established without any representatives of the public on it. This one met a few times and got lost in arguments.

Kennedy, with his 21-man conference, has gone further by including representatives of the public alongside top leaders of business and labor.

There are no big strikes threatening. There is no impending crisis. The big labor organizations, now merged except for the miners, are not feuding.

So the pressures are not so intense as those which sat on the shoulders of Truman's conference. But still there are pressures of another kind which, if not explosive, are just as real.

The country is in a recession and unemployment is the highest in more than 20 years.

Kennedy doesn't want any price-wage push that would put the country deeper into inflation or that would hurt American trade in competition with other countries.

At a recent news conference Kennedy said that labor and management had a tremendous common stake in keeping American goods competitive in foreign markets.

Otherwise, he said, "we are going to find ourselves in serious economic trouble."

In short, Kennedy is relying on this conference to persuade employers and labor unions to forget some of their differences in the national interest and cooperate to help lick some of the nation's biggest problems.

Adults Have To Scramble

By PATRICIA MOORE

Science fairs produce more than surprises in the ingenuity and creativity of science students.

They have some adults scrambling to take care of them. We visited the Pitt County Elementary Science Fair, currently on exhibit in the Tucker Building. Mrs. Edna Earle Baker, a supervisor in the county school system, was guiding us and explaining the complexities. Her daughter Beth Ward was assisting, especially in explaining the complexities.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Baker was setting up lighting systems and feeding biddies and other assorted animals gathered for the fair. That's what we meant about the surprises. We might add that we didn't linger long at the snake collection, in spite of the fact that they were dead and bottled.

A story about the Greenville Art Center appears on the front of the "Calendar of Art Events" for March. The circular is published by the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh. The contributing author about the Greenville gallery is, appropriately, Mrs. Rachel M. Moore, director of the local center and active in state art circles.

Other Editors Saying Keeping Local Control

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

While many educators are tempted by the offer of funds held out by the federal government for the nation's public school systems, there is nevertheless an inherent weakness built into such an aid scheme. A leading educator has sounded the alert to the danger of a nationalized curriculum. Now there are some who will laugh at such warnings. But experience has shown that with federal aid comes strings. It will remain to be seen what form the strings take in the matter of federal aid to education.

Dr. Hollis Caswell, president of Teachers College, Columbia University, sees a current threat to the rights of local schools and parents to voice what is best for children in their communities. The proposal for a single national agency for planning educational programs has been made by some educators and laymen who mistakenly think they are boosting progress in the public school systems by such uniformity.

Their argument has been that a common national purpose can best be served by centralized planning. But what common national purpose? And can such a purpose—whatever it is—best serve the individual and peculiar needs of each separate community? Uniformity and conformity is fine for the armed forces personnel, not for teachers, students and parents, all of whom think differently and have varied philosophies.

To this trend toward uniformity and mass approaches, Dr. Caswell is strongly opposed. And with good reason. He sets in such a massive hierarchy the similarity in Russia's state school structure. The current emphasis on foreign languages and science, for example, might lead to imposing courses that do not always fit the needs of every locality. The urge for "hard academics" might crowd out music and art.

Our present decentralized educational system is one of the greatest safeguards against tyranny. No person or clique or foundation or association can easily gain control of all American education under the present setup. But a national commission on the curriculum would give certain groups an implement for vigorous pressure on projects many individual communities would consider ill-advised.

This danger would be especially great if it were a special body appointed by the President on a self-perpetuating basis. Being responsible to nobody, it would be fair game for all who wished to control the schools.

The curriculum of American schools in the past has depended substantially on the initiative and experimentation of local systems for improvements. The results has been widely diverse practice. Common national goals can receive needed emphasis without centralizing control.

People who are now making decisions for their own children will in the long run make wiser choices than a group of "experts" in a national curriculum or laboratory. The American people have already, unwittingly or otherwise, given up far too many of their individual and state rights. Let's not carry it so far as to include our educational systems. That would be the final step toward the creation of a vast state government, the headquarters of which would be in Washington, and with ultimate control over the minds of our children.

Trade Affects Us All

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Copyright 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Every week, mail comes from some industry or some press agent dealing with the subject of imports. The concern is very profound. Certain American industries are convinced that they are being squeezed out of the American market by cheaper imported products. American workers are frightened.

Before World War I, when a free market existed, it was possible to fight unfair competition. Today, when governments determine the wages, hours of work, taxes, indirectly the prices of raw materials and subsidize enterprises in various devices, the markets of the world are no longer free and the danger to labor in a high-wage country is that jobs will be wiped out. This is one cause for increased unemployment.

The storage battery manufacturers, who are in direct competition with Japanese, find that some Japanese batteries are sold at a lower price in the United States than in Japan.

The Dry Battery Section of the National Electrical Manufacturers Association consists of seven companies which employ 8,000 Americans and have an annual payroll of $35,000,000. This is not a very large number of workers, but they are widely scattered over the United States and their loss of employment would seriously affect many communities.

The transistorized radio set has grown increasingly popular in the United States. Young people carry transistor radios with them to sports, games and even to musical events. The transistorized radio has become acceptable very rapidly. Having come into the market only in 1957, three years later, in 1960, the transistor portable radios sold against tube radios at the ratio of seven to one. Japanese manufacturers entered the American market immediately and can afford to underbid American manufacturers because of cheaper wages, lower taxes and government subsidies in Japan.

According to the American industry, American manufacturers make in 1957 three types of radio batteries, this constituting a complete line. Their publicity says:

"... However, three transistor types, No. 1015, No. 216 and No. 226, make up over 50 per cent of total radio battery sales. The Japanese export to the U.S. only the most popular types."

The industry figures show for 1959, 1960, 1961, as follows:

U. S. Production	5,800,000
EST 12,000,000
Japanese Imports	3,350,000
EST 16,146,000

The basis for competition between American and Japanese radios is that the average American worker in this industry receives $2 an hour whereas a Japanese worker receives the equivalent of 30 cents an hour. Japanese No. 216 batteries cost in New York about 15 cents; American No. 216 batteries sold to distributors for about 70 cents. The argument that the American battery is superior and will last longer is not particularly pertinent as this is a price rather than a quality matter.

This is one instance of an American industry being pushed to the wall by foreign competition protected by political considerations. The United States is Japan's best market. It is to the military and political interests of the United States that Japan should be oriented our way. Japan's alternative is to become economically a producer for the Red China market. For Japan this would mean ultimate absorption in the Soviet Union. State, as Japan cannot stand alone. For the United States, the loss of Japan as a principal ally could be disastrous in Asia. The Japanese have to import not only raw materials but food. Their country being only about 20 percent arable, they have no alternative but to manufacture for export and they must have a market where there is no political opposition to them.

This is the dilemma that faces both Japan and the United States. Japan's principal market is the United States, but everything that Japan exports to the United States in any quantity

Protection Against Squeeze-Out

By ELMER ROESSNER

How the "squeeze-out" works and how partners and minority stockholders can protect themselves against it is the fascinating subject of a new leaflet by the Small Business Administration. In an indirect way, it also tells how to get rid of an unwanted associate owner.

While many squeeze-outs result from the avarice and grabs for power by unscrupulous participants in a business, many are the natural result of disagreements, or efforts to dislodge inactive or tail-dragging participants, the SBA leaflet says.

Freeze-out techniques examples cited are:

Withholding dividends: Insiders refuse to pay out dividends until smaller shareholders sell out. In combination with this, minority stockholders are often fired from the jobs.

Changing the corporate structure: In many states, if a minority shareholder will not sell out at a low price, the majority stockholders can set up a new corporation, then merge the old company with it, giving nonvoting stock to the original stockholders.

Issuing additional stock: In many states, insiders can issue additional stock to themselves at less than real value, thus reducing the minority's share of the company and increasing their own.

Siphoning off earnings: Various contractual arrangements can enable the majority to divert all profits to themselves, such as by leasing their property to the corporation at high rental, or setting up new companies to contract for profitable parts of the business, such as sales, licensing, etc.

Miscellaneous tricks: One officer-stockholder may refuse to sign checks for the other's salary. Majority shareholders may operate money-losing segments of the business to provide high-paid jobs for themselves. Majority stockholders, in certain circumstances, may cancel shares of minority holders. The majority may set up a competing business and divert most profitable accounts to it. Or it may siphon off profits as salaries and fees to itself.

HOW TO AVOID IT

The leaflet suggests many preventive measures, the most important of which is to have a good lawyer at the formation of the company.

This may lead to a written agreement among all stockholders at the start, in which it is agreed that designated shareholders shall be directors and occupy key jobs; that key employees and their salaries are not to be changed without unanimous consent; that dividends be paid when the surplus reaches certain levels; that shareholders cannot transfer shares without first offering them to other shareholders, and that disputes are to be settled by arbitration.

Another useful arrangement is to provide that if one shareholder dies, the others shall purchase his interest; that minority stockholders be given long-term employment contracts, and that charters and by-laws give minority shareholders veto over company decisions.

The leaflet is based on a study of squeeze-outs made by Duke University and financed by the SBA. He study was by F. Hodges O'Neal and Jordan Derogood. The leaflet is free from field offices of the Small Business Administration, or from the SBA, Washington 25, D.C. The full report will be published by Duke University Press, Durham, N.C., later this year.

SHORT BUSINESS NOTES OF MINOR SIGNIFICANCE

Because of unfavorable weather, Europe's wheat crop this year is expected to be less than expected. Fourteen low-cost government publications on woodworking are now available; for the list, ask the GPO, Washington 25, D.C.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

A new type of motorized 35mm camera was unveiled at the annual photographic trade show in Philadelphia. For the first time, a cartridge of compressed carbon dioxide provides the power to advance the film and cock the shutter in the new Graphic 35 Jet. Other features of the camera are a unique pushbutton method of focusing and a visual flash guide system that automatically calculates exposures for flash photography through a matching color code.

The cartridges of compressed gas are similar to the types which charge soda water but must be chemically pure and free from rust and dirt. They will be packaged in sets of twos for Graflex, each of which power the camera through approximately eight rolls of 20-exposure film. Pictures can be taken singly or in sequence with automatic film transport and shutter-tensioning between each shot at a rate of about three shots per second. However, a normal manual-advance lever is also provided to advance the film and re-cock the shutter should the camera run out of gas.

A cartridge is inserted in the camera just as a battery might be, but its compartment is tightly sealed with a finely threaded cap to hold the thousand-ponds-per-square-inch pressure power.

The focusing feature of the Graphic 35 Jet is also unusual. The lens remains stationary and the film focal plane is shifted forward and back for image focus. Focusing is accomplished by pressing the forefingers of each hand on the focusing levers. These are arranged like a see-saw on each side of the lens; press one in and the other goes proportionately out. The 50mm f2 lens will focus from three feet to infinity.

The camera uses a color matching system to eliminate exposure calculations in shooting flash pictures. It is necessary first to set the guide number which is determined by the type of film and flash being used and the shutter speed. This arranges a set of colors around the diaphragm settings. When the subject is in focus, the distance is shown not only in feet but as a spot of color. By matching the colors, the lens diaphragm is automatically set for proper exposure.

It is interesting to note that this camera has an international flavor. It was designed by Americans, built in Japan, incorporates a light meter made in Germany and shows a red flag in the viewfinder to warn when the last exposure is in position.

Speaking of light meters from Germany, the unusually sensitive Gossen-Lunax made its American debut in Philadelphia, five months after its premiere at the Photokina in Cologne. It is said to be 256 times or eight full lens stops more responsive than conventional photoelectric meters.

Summer TV Viewing Has Time Filled With Re-Runs

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
NEW YORK (AP)—If you wonder what television's summer viewing will be like the answer is one word: re-runs.

Out of the 100-odd prime-time TV programs on the three major is manufactured in the United States. If we close the American market to Japanese manufactures, we force the Japanese to go over to Red China. If we permit our markets to be flooded by lower-priced Japanese goods, we throw American labor out of work.

This is a very difficult problem that cannot be solved by oratory or by wild statements. The pressure of American labor protection is becoming increasingly great. Instead of the industrialists demanding protection, they solve their problem by moving their plants abroad where wages and taxes are low.

They, in effect, export jobs. On the other hand, the labor unions are beginning to demand protection. The pressure can become a major political issue and therefore, requires more than casual thought.

networks, more than 60 will mark time during the hot weather months with repeats of winter shows. Even the Ed Sullivan Show which used to boast about its year-round new shows will serve up eight re-runs.

NBC's schedule still contains some holes, including Perry Como's replacement.

Most of NBC's new shows will come on Friday nights—"Whispering Smith," an action series with Audie Murphy, a return of "The Lawless Years," police-action series, and "Preview Playhouse," a collection of pilot films that failed to sell.

CBS also has some empty spots to fill, but will give us a Wayne and Shuster situation-comedy, "Holiday Lodge" during Jack Benny's vacation; "Brenner," a police-action series which had a brief run once before.

The network will also repeat Playhouse 90 shows of other years on Tuesday nights during warm weather.

Just about the only new material scheduled for ABC is old old movies on its "Silents Please" series, which bows in this week.

Shirley Booth made one of her too rare TV appearances Wednesday night in a little drama custom tailored to her talent. It was

CBS' Steel Hour and was called "Welcome Home"

Miss Booth played Jenny, who had run the house and raised the children of the Austin family for years. The children had grown and left, and now the parents wanted to sell the big house and travel.

Jenny is faced with being set adrift with a pension and no one to take care of.

It was a gentle wisp of a story and sad with Miss Booth's acting magic. She had some very expert help, too, from a fine cast including William Hansen, who played an irascible but staunch handyman.

It was a sentimental and delightful hour and even had a happy ending.

CLAIMS CONSPIRACY

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP)—President Luis Somoza said Wednesday Communists based on the north coast of Honduras and Costa Rica, and supported by the Castro Cuban government, are preparing for a subversive movement against Nicaragua. "We are ready to resist this new conspiracy," the president said, "and it is certain to fail as previous ones have."

Church To Dedicate New Organ Sunday

Hooker Memorial Church will dedicate the new organ Sunday at 7:30 p.m. The organ was presented to the congregation by Mrs. Travis E. Hooker in memory of her late husband.

At this service Richard Van Sciver will present an organ recital.

A reception honoring Mrs. Hooker will follow in the church lounge. The public is invited.

Van Sciver, a native of New York City, is organist and director of music at Christ Church (Episcopal) in Charlotte. After studies at the Juillard School of Music and at Columbia University in New York, he was an instructor in music and music education at Teachers College for several months before coming to North Carolina, some 13 years ago.

He was organist-director at Memorial Methodist Church, Thomasville, and later at St. Peter's Church and First Methodist Church, Charlotte, before going to his present position at Christ Church.

Sunday evening's organ recital will consist of:

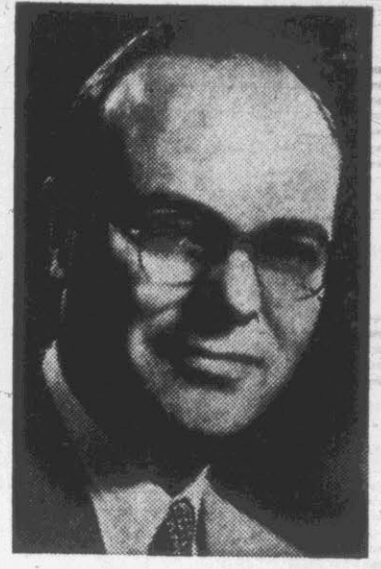

Prelude and Fugue in D Minor (Bach);

Arioso—"Be Thou But Near" (Bach);

March, from the Occasional Oratorio by Handel;

Evening Song (Schumann); Gavotta (Padre Martini); Cantabile (Franck);

A quarter-century ago, the average doctor saw about 21 people a day. He spent a lot of time with each patient, but there was little he could do except hope that nature would cure the ailment. Today, the doctor sees about 26 people a day. He spends less time with each patient—but he does a lot more than he was able to do 25 years ago. Chief reason: Today's doctor can command a vast array of potent new drugs to help him in his job of curing disease. That's why we say . . .

to help the royal Laotian army. This conclusion was drawn from a check of military sources here today as concern deepened over the apparently deteriorating situation in the mountainous kingdom where pro-Communist rebels are advancing toward the capital of Vientiane.

Against the Pathet Lao rebels—estimated to number between 8,000 and 10,000—a force of 4,000 disciplined, well armed men could be decisive if used to bolster the 29,000-man royal Laotian army. However, the danger some U.S. officials see is that such intervention might evoke a similar re-

Sanford To Talk At Tarboro Meet

RALEIGH—Governor Terry Sanford will speak at an industrial development conference to be held at Tarboro on April 5. This is the first of a series of six similar meetings to cover the entire State under the sponsorship of the Department of Conservation and Development's Commerce and Industry Division.

Details of the series are being handled by the Conservation Department under the supervision of Hargrove Bowles, Jr., Director. The conferences will be conducted in the various sections of the State and will include all of the 100 counties.

The Tarboro conference will begin at 10:30 a.m. in the Tarboro High School auditorium and will adjourn at 4 p.m. Governor Sanford will address the group at a "Dutch" luncheon at 1:00 p.m. Individuals who are interested in the development of their area from the following 21 counties are invited to Tarboro: Currituck, Camden, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Chowan, Gates, Hertford, Nash, Bertie, Northampton, Halifax, Edgecombe, Martin, Washington, Tyrrell, Dare, Hyde, Beaufort, Pitt, Greene, and Wilson.

Programs of each of the meetings will be built around community preparedness for industrial development and the handling of prospects. Dates and places for the other conferences will be announced later.

thinly spread and it is short on airlift and sealift. U.S. officials said Wednesday there was no serious thought, as of then, of direct American military intervention.

Pentagon spokesmen said U.S. forces had not been placed on any special readiness basis. Not all U.S. officials were pessimistic—some said they still believe the royal Laotian army, whose will and readiness to fight has been brought into question, can hold the major cities even if the pro-Red Pathet Lao take more of the countryside.

There was some speculation that the eight-nation SEATO alliance, or some of its members, might decide on a joint move in Laos unless the situation were stabilized.

Besides the United States, SEATO members are Britain, France, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, the Philippines and Pakistan. Meeting in Bangkok, SEATO military advisers declared Wednesday there is a need for continued military planning "to resist and repel Communist aggression" in the light of developments in Laos.

While Laos is not a member of SEATO, the embattled jungle kingdom comes under its protection.

In the past, Britain, France and New Zealand have shown reluctance to consider plunging into the Laos situation with military force. Pakistan, the Philippines and Thailand—which has a long common border with Laos—have been outspokenly for a firm stand to save the kingdom from being swallowed by the Communists.

If direct military intervention should be ordered, the most readily available troops would be a 1,500-man U.S. Marine battalion landing team afloat with the 7th Fleet in Far Eastern waters, and a 2,500-man Commonwealth brigade made up of British, Australian and New Zealand soldiers, based in Malaya.

The Marines and the Commonwealth brigade are trained and ready for the sort of operations they would face in Laos, with its heavy jungle cover.

The Marine force is equipped with helicopters and the Commonwealth brigade has available to it propeller-driven transport plane suited to the small airports in Laos.

Also, a reinforced Army battle group of some 2,000 airborne troops on Okinawa could be airlifted the nearly 2,000 miles to Laos, perhaps by way of South Viet Nam or Thailand.

Several hundred of these Army men are special troops trained to penetrate enemy lines and organize guerrilla warfare.

The French have an estimated 500 men in Laos, some on duty as instructors and some based at a French-built airfield near Vientiane. Sources said they could be used in combat.

Pakistan, Philippine and Thai sources declined to spell out how many troops their governments might contribute. It was indicated the Philippines might send support units, such as medical detachments, engineers and the like.

One Pakistani recalled that his nation in the past had offered troops for use in Laos, if needed, and said, "We've been ready for a long time."

A Thai said "I am confident we could go there (to Laos) immediately," if the call came.

Getting into Laos is something of a problem, and once there the job of supporting a force could be staggering.

Laos is a landlocked country roughly the size of Idaho. Seaborne forces and supplies could be landed in South Viet Nam on the east or Thailand on the west.

It has virtually no roads and only five important airfields—and one of these fields is in country the Pathet Lao recently have taken.

A single base, the one the French built near Vientiane, provides landing space enough to accommodate four engine transports.

In this mountainous and jungle-covered land there are only two somewhat clear areas suitable for airdrops and paratroop landings—and one of these is the Communist-held Plaine des Jarres. The other is the Plateau de Bolovens, but this is 500 miles to the south and of little use in the present situation.

The main railroad from Bangkok to Vientiane is a single track narrow gauge line that halts at the Mekong River. Cargo must be unloaded there and ferried across to Vientiane.

Some airfields in South Viet Nam and Thailand have been improved and can handle jet craft. The 7th Fleet normally includes three attack carriers with bombers and fighters that can range inland. It also generally has a carrier adapted for Marine landing operations, with some 30 helicopters, and another carrier geared for antissubmarine warfare but usable to mount helicopter operations.

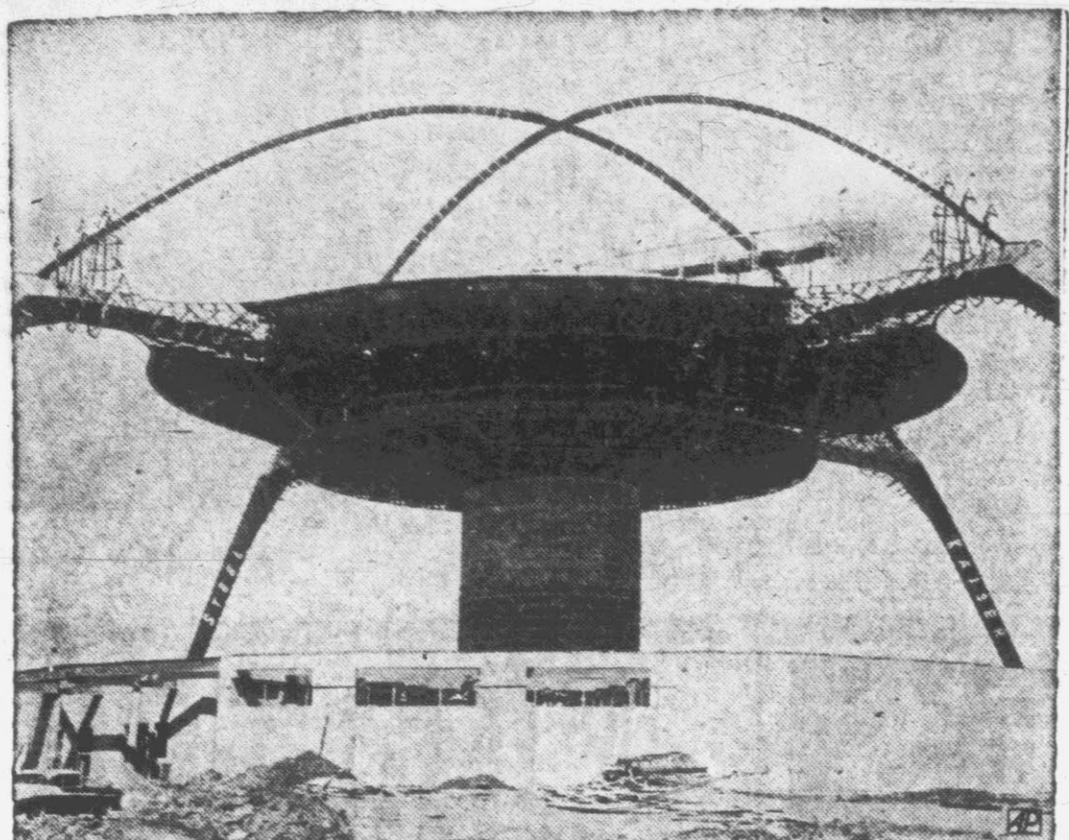

It could be reinforced by elements of the 1st Fleet along the West Coast.

The British and Australians maintain bomber and fighter squadrons to back up the Commonwealth brigade in Malaya.

Further away, the United States has stationed a below strength Marine division and a supporting air wing on Okinawa while the Army has two divisions and a short range missile command in Korea.

It seems hardly likely the Army divisions in Korea would be drawn on for duty elsewhere while a Communist threat continues to loom to the north. The divisions in Korea have been partly filled with native soldiers, but these are gradually being replaced by Americans.

An infantry division—minus the airborne battle group on Okinawa—and a brigade of Marines are stationed in Hawaii.

Britain's Big Spy Case Setting Off Political Storm

Two Cuban Exile Groups Unite To Unseat Castro

NEW YORK (AP)—The leader of two major Cuban exile groups pledges that the overthrow of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro will end firing squads and bring free elections within 18 months.

Jose Miro Cardona, 59, a lawyer who served six weeks as premier at the start of the Castro regime, Wednesday announced formation of a new "revolutionary council," with himself as co-director-general.

The council consists of representatives of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, regarded as middle-of-the-road and favoring free enterprise, and the Revolutionary Movement of the People, considered left-wing but anti-Communist.

Cardona told a news conference the aim of the council is to "overthrow the Communist tyranny which enslaves the people of Cuba and to reestablish moral peace and harmony among all Cubans."

He gave no date for any invasion of the island but said: "The arms which we have, and the arms which we will have, will become known when Castro feels their impact." Cardona also called for aid from all exiled Cubans, including other revolutionary groups, "from Canada to Patagonia."

In Havana, Castro termed Cardona's movement "a government of puppets," and said "Cuba must remain alert" against "a group of mercenaries."

The Revolutionary Movement of the People is led by Manuel Ray, former Cuban minister of public works, while the Democratic Revolutionary Front is headed by Manuel Antonio de Varona. Both were present at Wednesday's session with newsmen.

De Varona said Cuba is being "infiltrated daily" by men and supplies, adding: "We have the forces necessary to overthrow Castro."

Cardona's program calls for a return to private investment and free enterprise in Cuba. The Communist party would be outlawed and traditional relations with "democratic countries" would be renewed. Also, members of Castro's armed forces who take part in an uprising would be retained in military service and promoted.

The new council plans to designate itself as "the government of Cuba in arms" rather than a government in exile.

If the council called itself a government in exile, it would violate U.S. law, which prohibits establishing a provisional government in this country without official consent. State Department press officer Lincoln White said Wednesday in Washington: "No such consent has been asked or given."

Cardona told newsmen the revolutionary effort received no financial or moral support from the U.S. government. Financial aid, he said, was coming from Cubans everywhere in amounts "from pennies upward."

Scouts To Hunt Old Posters

MANISTEE, Mich. (AP)—"Operation Facelift," sponsored by the Manistee County Boy Scout Council, offers political candidates a chance to redeem campaign posters—at 25 to 50 cents each.

Teams of scouts will roam county roads in a cleanup operation April 8 to remove campaign posters put up before election. Candidates then will be asked to redeem the posters at a charge of 50 cents for winners and 25 cents for losers.

Money thus collected will finance a week at summer camp for the Manistee council's scouts.

being detected. Conviction Wednesday of a Soviet master spy, an American couple and two British lovers stealing royal navy secrets still left missing links in the case England's lord chief justice called "a thriller."

Strange Radio Moscow transmissions on a secret wavelength 10 days after the five were caught led security officials to believe that other Soviet spies at large in Britain were being alerted to change their call signs and codes.

Lord Carrington, first lord of the admiralty, ordered a worldwide overhaul of the British navy's security system and announced a board of inquiry would be set up to investigate gaps already disclosed.

British newspapers lashed the security services for "unbelievable slackness." Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express raised the question of "how much vital information had reached the Russians through the flagrant folly and incompetence of naval intelligence" before the spy ring was cracked. There were fears here of the impact on joint British-American military and diplomatic planning.

The United States banned sharing atomic secrets in 1950 after Klaus Fuchs was caught giving the Soviets secrets credited with advancing construction of the first Soviet atomic bomb 3 to 10 years.

The disappearance behind the iron curtain of British diplomats Guy Burgess and Donald MacLean and of atomic scientist Bruno Pontecorvo added to American mistrust of British security.

The British navy said the secrets passed to the Soviets by the five spies convicted Wednesday had "marked value," including details of the atomic submarine Dreadnought, built with the help of U.S. blueprints. But Prime Minister Harold Macmillan understood to have written President Kennedy that no U.S. naval or atomic secrets were compromised by the spy ring.

Chief Justice Sir Hubert Lister Parker underscored the seriousness of the spying, however, by imposing sentences of from 15 to 25 years when the normal maximum was expected to bring closer cooperation between the Western allies in keeping tabs on suspicious persons.

Gordon Arnold Lonsdale, 37, who got 25 years as the "directing force" of the ring, claimed to be a Canadian and represented himself sometimes as an American but Scotland Yard said he actually was a Soviet citizen.

The American couple — Morris Cohen, 50, alias Kroger, and his wife Helen, 27—who were given 20 years, have associated with Communists since the Spanish Civil War.

Scotland Yard indicated in court they were connected with the cases of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, Americans electrocuted in 1950 for stealing U.S. atomic secrets for Moscow, and Col. Rudolf Abel, Soviet master spy arrested in 1957 and now serving 30 years in a U.S. prison.

Yet for nearly 10 years the Cohens-Krogers traveled around the world — to Canada, Tokyo, Singapore, Vienna, London, New Zealand and possibly back and forth through the iron curtain—without being suspected.

They showed up in England in 1954 with New Zealand passports. Forged Canadian passports were also found in their home near a U.S. air base.

New Zealand Prime Minister Keith Holyoake has ordered an investigation of how they obtained New Zealand passports. Canada is investigating how the forged Canadian passports carried the actual dates and numbers of other passports issued to two Canadians who have been cleared of any connection with the case.

The two Britons who stole the naval secrets from the research station where they worked and gave them to Lonsdale—Harry F. Houghton, 55, and his mistress, Ethel Gee, 46—each got 15 year sentences. Houghton claimed he was forced into spying by threats, and Miss Gee testified she was misled and got involved through her love for Houghton. The judge said money was her aim.

Appeals Judge Guessed Wrong

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—When Claude N. Hicks was convicted last month of conspiring to violate federal liquor laws, U.S. Dist. Judge Albert L. Reeves refused to free him on appeal bond.

The prosecutor said Hicks had a long record of bootlegging activities and probably would be at it again if freed on bond.

But an appeals judge reversed the ruling, and Hicks was released under bond.

Federal and state agents arrested Hicks Wednesday at the site of an illegal still and charged him with violating federal liquor laws.

U.S. Commissioner T. V. Cashin released Hicks on $500 bond on the new charge.

Lasted Because Of Right Girl

EVART, Mich. (AP)—Seventy years ago Friday Jesse Bartholomew and Grace Osmer got married. A circuit preacher walked five miles and rowed across the Muskegon River to officiate.

Friday, Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew will stand in the same corner of the same living room where they were married. They'll be greeting guests at an open house.

Also on hand will be their son and daughter, five grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Jesse, 93, said the years seemed to have slipped by in a hurry.

Looking at his 87-year-old wife he remarked: "I guess it's because I married the right girl."

Safeguards For All In This Tornado Season

Safeguards you may take against loss of life and property from tornadoes were suggested today by the American Red Cross in a communication to F. Richard Atkinson, Chairman of the Pitt County Chapter.

"While tornado disasters occur throughout the year, the next few months are considered the period of greatest danger," Robert C. Edson, national director of Red Cross Disaster Services, said. Edson said tornadoes last year killed 42 persons and injured 703. They also destroyed or damaged over 6,750 homes and 3,100 other buildings. Eighty-four Red Cross chapters participated in relief operations following these disasters.

"Although the Weather Bureau is carrying on an extensive research program into the causes of tornadoes, there is nothing yet that can be done to prevent these disasters," Mr. Edson said.

But the Red Cross and the Weather Bureau suggest the following preparedness steps as a means of lessening loss of life, personal injury and property damage:

1. The safest place is a storm cellar, cave or an underground excavation with an air outlet.
2. In open country—Move at right angles to the tornado's path. Tornadoes usually move ahead at about 25 to 40 miles per hour. If there is no time to escape, lie flat in the nearest depression, such as a ditch or ravine.
3. In city or town—Get off the streets, preferably into a steel or otherwise reinforced building. Stay away from windows!
4. In homes—The southwest corner of the basement usually offers greater safety, particularly in frame houses. Open north and east windows to equalize pressure. If time permits, turn off electrical equipment and fuel lines. If there is no basement, lie down in the nearest ditch or depression.
5. In schools or other buildings—Seek shelter in basement or stand against wall on lower floor. Stay out of gyms or auditoriums with large, unsupported roofs.
6. In factories or plants—On receipt of tornado alert, post lookout to warn of storm's approach. Shut off electricity and fuel lines. Move workers to section of building offering greatest protection.

Non-Farm Jobs Drop Over N.C.

RALEIGH — Nonagricultural employment dropped 6,900 in North Carolina last month, registering the largest February decrease since 1958, the State Department of Labor reported today.

State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane said the month's employment decline was caused by a combination of seasonal job decreases in lumber, tobacco, construction and retail trade and further production cutbacks in most manufacturing industries due to a slowdown in orders.

Crane said a total of 1,165,100 Tar Heel workers were on the job in February—a decrease of 6,900 from January and 7,700 below February, 1960.

Factory employment totaling 485,800 last month was down 4,400 from January and 15,900 below the level of February, 1960, he said.

Nonmanufacturing jobs fell 2,500 to a total of 679,300 in February but were 8,200 higher than in February of last year, Crane stated.

Scottish Rite Meeting April 7

GRIFTON—The Scottish Rite organization of Grifton has announced that a supper and area meeting will be held here on Friday, April 7.

A. D. Wall, president, said the meeting would begin at 7:30 in the Masonic Hall.

Maritime experts estimate that every ship now afloat in the world could be anchored in San Francisco Bay with room to spare.

Thanks to science, the products that go into our homes get better with each passing year. Yet somehow, few of us think of wallpaper as one of the items in this category. The paper that was on the walls of grandma's home seems very much like the wallpaper we see today.

Actually, there have been many changes in wallpaper in the last 10 to 15 years. One of the most important is the addition of a chemical known as melamine to the pulp. This chemical gives the paper added strength, so that when wet paste is applied to it, or prepasted paper is dunked in water, the paper can be handled easily without tearing.

printing, where the color is applied thickly to give a three-dimensional effect. Simulated textures, such as bamboo, brick or wood, all have been improved by the use of this raised printing. You see it, too, in formal designs such as damasks.

There is a great difference in color range in today's wallpapers and those of yesterday. Advances have been made in color pigments that make them opaque, so that other colors will not show through. This makes for much truer colors.

Most wallpapers formerly used wheat flour as an adhesive. Now, however, cellulose pastes are easier to mix and less likely to stain the pattern side of the paper.

Also, there are pastes which are insect-repellent and mildew-repellent, of special interest to those who live in tropical or semi-tropical areas.

Advances have been made in the field of hygienically treated wallpaper to make it bacteria and germ resistant. This is particularly important when wallpaper is used in hospitals, but is also important in the home, especially in the nursery and bathroom.

Talk, Talk, Talk About Rise Of A 'Bull Market'

By SAM DAWSON
 NEW YORK (AP)—Here we go again. That is, we will if you believe all the talk about another bull market being born, or confirmed, or definitely gathering strength in Wall Street.

Stock prices in general have been rising since early fall. They've had periods of stagnation, sometimes of decline after bad news, but the general trend has been upward.

Much of the public has been confused by the wide variety of explanations and expert counseling. Enough traders have been optimistic, however, to keep prices rising—if only on hopes of better times, or fears of more inflation.

And much of the public has been fascinated. Heavy trading shows that the public has been in the market. Usually it has been buying special favorites a ride in turn. And always there's been talk, talk, talk about market prospects, about chances for a quick killing.

Now the long, slow rising trend of prices has been confirmed to the satisfaction of the followers of the Dow theory. This is because the Dow Jones index of railroad stock prices has broken through a level where previously it had been turned back. The industrial index already had pierced its former resistance level. According to the theorists, from now on the course should be upward—but definitely. They officially dub it a bull market.

The chartists and their followers may be fewer in recent years than in their heyday before the 1929 stock market crash. But by acting in concert they often influence the market, if only temporarily.

And some observers in Wall Street think this is what has been happening this week. According to this view, followers of the Dow theory climbed aboard the bandwagon Tuesday as the rail index suddenly spurred toward the resistance point after lagging most of March.

"Many who don't follow the Dow theory still respect its influence and climbed aboard too for the ride. All this helped send the rails higher on a day when the industrial were faltering.

Critics of the charts, and of the various indexes themselves, point out that they are only general at best. Individual stocks don't necessarily go the same way. Often stocks of whole industries buck the trend.

You may own the lucky leaders. But you may find that the stocks you own just don't seem to have heard about the rising indexes, or about a bull market either, for that matter.

This could account for much of the large volume of selling in recent weeks among the odd lot holders—those buying or selling fewer stocks than the 100 shares that constitute a round lot. These odd-lot sellers could be getting out of old holdings that disappoint them by holding aloof from the bull market. They could be lured by the currently more glamorous stocks, or they may be still shopping around.

Public enthusiasm can feed the newly acclaimed bull market. Any marked shift in public confidence in the future of the economy or in the ability of stocks in general to keep on rising indefinitely could change the scene quickly. The cliché attributed to J. P. Morgan that the only sure thing is that stock prices will fluctuate is still popular. It's a cliché because it is often repeated. But that could be because it's true.

Bud Abbott Has Begun Comeback

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD (AP)—When Bud Abbott stepped before the camera this week, he marked several milestones.

It was the first time he had done a single. It was the first time he played a dramatic role. It also was the first time he returned to Universal Studios since the days he and the late Lou Costello lorded it as the comedy kings of movies.

Bud was back at Universal (now Revue) to play a hard-bitten agent of a night club comic (Lee Marvin) in "The Joke's On Me," which will appear on G.E. Theater April 16. I watched as director Ida Lupino put the actors through their paces.

"I'm not nervous," Abbott said later. "It does seem a little strange not working with the little guy. But what the heck—acting is acting, whether you're doing 'Who's on First?' or a dramatic scene. I think I can handle it."

Bud's confidence may also stem from the conquest of another hurdle. This month he made his return to the comedy business, working with a new partner, Candy Candido. They opened to excellent returns at the Holiday House in Pittsburgh.

"That was the biggest challenge of all—to see, after 24 years of working with Lou, if I could make another man funny," said Bud.

"I found out I could. I put Candy through a lot of our old routines—yes, even 'Who's on First?' You know something? It was just as funny as before. Candy did some of his own routines, too; he wasn't just imitating Lou.

"Believe me, it was a real thrill to read those headlines: 'New comedy team is born.' Bud's manager is now talking about dates for the team in Philadelphia and Boston, and there's mention of a TV series. For the first time since his tax troubles laid him low, Bud is excited about the future.

"Fields such as photography, communications, aviation and electronics, are but a few fields offered today," added the

Street-Widening In Second Stage

AYDEN — Local workmen are beginning the second stage of widening Veterans Street and are in the process of moving water meters on the west side of the street. Town Manager Cleveland Paylor said yesterday.

Telephone crews have finished moving the telephone poles on the west side. Five feet will be added to the west side, in the same manner that five feet were added to the east side of the street recently.

Completion of the project is expected to facilitate flow of traffic on the much-travelled road.

Paylor said that work on the new perimeter road is about half completed. The road has not been officially named as yet.

Opinion-Sampling Shows Most N.C. Voters Favor Changes In The Courts

EDITORS NOTE: This is the last of a three-part series on results of an Associated Press poll several North Carolina cities concerning questions which confront the General Assembly and the public. It deals with proposed court reforms.

By RICHARD C. BAYER

RALEIGH (AP) — For the second time in two state legislative sessions, court reform bills have been offered. A battle is brewing between those who want a uniform court system and those who are fighting a delaying action. Advocates of a uniform system of lower courts point to a almost 57 varieties of local judicial systems making up a patchwork of recorder's Courts, mayors' courts, traffic courts and courts of justices of the peace.

Counting recorder's courts alone in North Carolina, they say there are scores of varying jurisdictions and cost schedules.

A bill prepared after a long and comprehensive study of the judicial problem by the North Carolina Bar Association was soundly beaten in the 1959 General Assembly. That first attempt at reform was led by State Sen. J. Spencer Bell of Mecklenburg County who has again taken up the challenge to push through a court reform

Laos is known as the "land of a million elephants," but the animals are seldom seen in Luang Prabang, the royal capital.

Opposition to the "Bell Plan" is led by Sen. Lindsay Warren of Beaufort County, who skillfully engineered the downfall of the 1959 reform. Warren, who served as a New Deal congressman, has made clear a deep-seated distrust of delegated power and says, "I stand for the legislative branch of government."

The Bar Association's proposals would delegate to the Supreme Court the duty of administering and policing a uniform system of courts below the Superior Court level, leaving the General Assembly the right of veto over the Supreme Court.

An opposition proposal by Warren calls for the creation of recorder level courts where local governments allow it. There is no time limit and no proposal for control.

Meanwhile, the voters have listened to proposals and counter proposals and may be somewhat befuddled by a rather complicated question.

In a poll taken by The Associated Press in 10 cities, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Burlington, Lenoir, Goldsboro, Shelby, High Point, Charlotte, Asheville and Wilmington, 48 persons were asked this question:

"Critics say North Carolina now has a hodgepodge system of courts below the Superior Court level, with procedures and courts varying from county to county and from city to city. Do you favor legislative proposals to make these lower courts uniform? Do you feel the reform bill should include justice of the peace courts?"

Of the 48 persons (35 men and 13 women) 41 said they were for uniformity of lower courts, seven had no comment. Twenty-nine specified the reform bill should include justices of the peace and three were against changes in the Jaycee system. Sixteen had no comment.

Lloyd J. Kolb, 51, an Asheville contractor said he favored reform and added, "Justice of the peace

Set Fellowship Breakfast Date

Alumni of East Carolina College will hold their Annual Fellowship Breakfast Saturday, March 25, in Asheville, during the Convention of the North Carolina Education Association there. Ppresident Leo W. Jenkins of the college will be principal speaker.

The event will take place in the Gold Room of the Battery Park Hotel at 7:45 a.m.

President of the East Carolina Alumni Association Z. W. Frozelle of Kenansville has announced that a large number of students, alumni, and faculty members are expected to attend the breakfast. The early hour will allow time for all NCEA delegates to attend the opening session of the Convention Saturday morning, he said.

courts have more leeway in levying fines than any other court. Hence there is more leeway for possible corruption in office. If one court is to be reformed, let them all be reformed."

A Burlington real estate man, Elroy Fonville Jr., 40, said, "I definitely am in favor of some type of reform but I cannot say what, as I am not versed enough on the subject."

The Rev. Robert H. Stamey, a High Point Methodist minister said, "Justice cannot survive when every court is different. I have found that one can expect a better brand of justice in the city courts in North Carolina than if they live in rural areas."

Mrs. Eddie Mazingo, a 58-year-old Goldsboro housewife said, "I don't know too much about the courts, but they should be fair to everyone."

Richard Shew, 56, a Wilmington real estate man, who once served as a Superior Court clerk, said, "I feel that the operation of our lower courts should be left on a local level since each community has its own unique conditions. Since the lawyers of the state are officers of the courts, the hodgepodge condition of the courts has been brought about by unscrupulous attorneys themselves."

A Charlotte barber shop owner, Paul Colson, 59, had this to say, "I don't know anything about courts and would rather not know anything about them."

Cotton Hazard Was Worth $600

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A Hartford woman was awarded $600 for injuries received after she bit into a piece of cotton.

The victim said there was a piece of cotton in a doughnut she bought at a local bakery. She claimed that when she took a bite of the doughnut, the cotton lodged in her throat causing her to choke and fall down, injuring her back and shoulders.

Fraternity Puts Stress On Foreign Languages

Twenty students at East Carolina College are participating in the activities of Sigma Pi Alpha, national honorary foreign languages fraternity. Each of these members has completed twenty hours of work and established a high academic record in the college department of foreign languages.

The objectives of the fraternity are to learn more about geography, people, life, history, customs, industries, and cultures of foreign countries; to stimulate interest in the subjects; and to help bring about a better understanding through knowledge between foreign countries and the United States.

The twelve foreign students now enrolled at East Carolina are invited to attend the meetings of Sigma Pi Alpha.

Officers of the fraternity for the present school year are:

Cynthia Parker, Rt. 1, Stokes, president; Nell Marcom, Raleigh, vice president; Catherine Claire Pippin, Rt. 2, Zebulon secretary;

Michael C. Wilkinson, Belhaven, treasurer; Ann Peaden, Greenville, social chairman; and Patricia Elliott, Hertford, reporter.

Mrs. Marguerite A. Perry, faculty member of the department of Foreign Language at the college, advises the group.

Other members included the following from Pitt County: Walker L. Allen, Julia Anthony and Jasper L. Jones, Jr., all of Greenville.

In addition to his tournament victories, Smith was a member of the Carolinas Captain's Putter team which met the Virginia amateurs in two annual matches. He was also a member of the Carolinas Amateur team which played the Carolinas pros for the Carolinas Cup at Sedgfield Country Club here in the fall.

The Gastonia star won his first big tournament title in Greensboro, copping the Carolinas Junior in 1949. After graduating at The Citadel, he won the Azalea Amateur tournament in Charleston, S.C. EC Plays Today

East Carolina coach Jim Mallory informed The Daily Reflector this morning that today's Springfield-East Carolina baseball game will be played providing no more rain. "If it rains," said Mallory, "we will play a doubleheader on Friday afternoon." Starting time for the afternoon game is 3:00.

Phantoms Open Season Against Elizabeth City

Greenville's baseball team opens the first of an abbreviated schedule tomorrow afternoon at Elizabeth City.

The Phantoms, who play only seven conference games, will open the season with a mixture of seasoned veterans and yearlings. Billy James, at third base, and Kroglie Andersen, at shortstop, were regulars last season. Hard-hitting Romye Brock will be working behind the plate for Coach Bo Farley. Rodney Knowles, a lanky freshman, will break into the lineup at first base. Others that may get a crack at a starting position in the opener are Kenny Joyner, Leon Williams, Ed Smoot, and Jack Foley.

Seven Competing In State Matches

Coach Jerry Warren will carry seven Rose High wrestlers to the state championship tomorrow in High Point. Sammy Pugh and Don Joyner were both Eastern North Carolina champions in the division and will lead the club.

Placing second in the regionals at Goldsboro was Dalton Owens. Others to earn a berth in the state match with third place finishes were Gary Monroe, Ronnie Williams and Van Harris. The matches will take place Friday and Saturday.

It's Tee Time For Golfers

A Women's Invitational Golf tournament scheduled at the Greenville Golf Course the last Friday in April may mushroom into something real big before it's all over.

Harriett White, a Tennessee native who has held a monopoly on the women's club title since moving here, has spearheaded the work in bringing the first such affair to Greenville and Eastern North Carolina. White is hopeful that the tournament will not only grow in Greenville but will help promote the same type of tournament in other towns. "This would give us the opportunity to play other courses in this section," declared White.

Current plans call for a one-day 18 hole medal play tournament. According to White, 140 golfers have already signed up and the number is expected to reach 200 before the deadline.

The field will be divided into various flights with prizes being awarded the winner of each. An entry fee which includes lunch and a cocktail party is being charged in order to cover expenses.

Johnson Praises Ayden Greens

E. F. Johnson, president of the nine-hole Ayden course, considers the greens there "as nice as any in Eastern North Carolina." The greens have No. 328 grass which is the same as on the Greenville greens.

The Ayden club, which was opened last winter, now has 107 active members. Bruce Manning serves as manager of the course.

Other officers elected with Johnson were Corey Stokes, vice-president; S. F. Peterson, secretary; and Bill Stroud, treasurer.

Plans are now being worked up for the second club tournament. David Manning, a young Ayden farmer, was the first champion and will be defending his title.

Grifton To Hold Tournament

Grifton plans to sponsor a President's Cup tournament the middle of April. This will be the first tournament of the year for the Grifton course and will be open for club members only.

The tournament will be 36 holes of medal play. The course is only nine holes but the tee position is moved on the second nine holes, making it a tougher course.

Tom Owens, who is chairman of the greens committee, reports that the club now has 60 active members. At a recent meeting, the following officers were elected: Ed Reaves, president; Cecil Lilley, vice president; and Ed Sutton, secretary-treasurer.

Ward's Game Takes Big Dip

Harvie Ward, the two-time National Amateur champion from Tarboro who is now an auto salesman in San Francisco, no longer has the golf game for major competition. He was recently blasted from San Francisco amateur in the first round for the second year in a row. Some say the one-year suspension he served for violation of the rules of amateur status took the spark out of him. Others feel he has simply put business before golf. Yet, he was one of the finest amateurs in the world when at his peak.

Record Number For Local Course

CHIP SHOTS . . . Sammy Manning scored a hole-in-one on the Ayden course last Sunday. Manning's ace came on the 192 yard 8th hole, using a three wood. It was the second hole-in-one scored on the Ayden course since its construction. . . Greenville Pro Harold Thomas can attest to the fact that there are more golfers this year. Two Sundays ago, according to Thomas, 162 golfers trekked the local course. This was a record number for the course. . . East Carolina College's golf team opens its schedule today against William & Mary. The Bucs have two capable golfers in Archie Clark Jr. and Don Conley. . . Clark, son of a Fayetteville pro, is one of 18 amateurs entered in the Azalea Invitational tournament in Wilmington the end of this month. Also entered is Larry Beck of Kinston and Claude King, former ECC grid and golf standout, of Virginia Beach. . . Farmville is the only other club besides Greenville with a Pro. Sammy Kee runs the Farmville operation. . . The Eastern Carolina Golf Association, of which Simon Moye of Greenville is president, will open its schedule April 5. Greenville plays at Kinston in the opener. . .

Newberry's Short On All-American

By TED MEIER AP Basketball Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Two 6-stringbeans, George Fisher of Wittenberg's NCAA small college champions and Charles Hardnett of Grambling's NAIA champions, today the 1961 All-American announced today by The Associated Press.

Also named to the first team, selected on the basis of votes from nearly 100 sportswriters and radio-TV broadcasters, were Don Jacobsen of South Dakota State, Tom (Skip) Chappelle of Maine and Bob Mahland of Williams. Ron Galbreath of Westminster (Pa.), Stan Kernan of McNeese, Zelmo Beatty of Prairie View, Carl Ritter of Southeast Missouri and John O'Reilly of Mt. St. Mary's were picked as a second team.

Rounding out a 15-man squad, Wayne Monson of Northern Michigan, Dick Veries of Georgetown (Ky.), Porter Meriwether of Tennessee State, Marvin Bachmeier of North Dakota State and Carl Short of Newberry were named as a third team.

High Hopes For Utah Redskins

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Jack Gardner, a hard and persistent campaigner for basketball championships, has hopes this is the year his University of Utah Redskins will win the National Collegiate crown.

Chappelle, at 64 the smallest of the first team, was the leading scorer in the Yankee Conference. The junior from Old Town, Maine, led Maine to a second place conference finish.

The top-ranked, undefeated Ohio State Buckeyes (26-0) and St. Joseph's of Philadelphia (24-4) tangle in the semifinal opener. The championship will be decided Saturday night.

"We've had what appeared to be stronger clubs at the start of the season," Gardner said, "but these kids have worked harder and better as a unit and have shown more desire and improvement than any team I've coached."

This is Gardner's fifth NCAA tournament team in eight seasons at Utah. None of the other four entries got past the second round.

Hogan Calls Press Conference On Cage Fixes

NEW YORK (AP) — District Attorney Frank S. Hogan of Manhattan has no idea how long the current probe into college basketball fixing will continue, or how many players might be involved.

"There may or may not be more," Hogan said Wednesday in announcing at a press conference that evidence would be presented to a grand jury starting April 4.

Two gamblers were arrested last Friday by investigators from his office on charges of bribing two Seton Hall University players and one from the University of Connecticut.

Hogan called the press conference after returning from Arizona where he has been attending a prosecutors' convention.

During his absence his office indicated other colleges may have been implicated, but Hogan declined to give additional information.

At the same time he said, "We have no information to warrant an investigation" of professional basketball, or professional or college football.

Rookies Hold Key To Senator's First Year

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer
POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The management of the new Washington Senators are no fools. Aware that enemy batters are lurking in wait for their puerile pitchers, they pushed out the fences in Griffith Stadium.

The additional footage, 38 in left field, 35 in left center and 12 in dead center, is bound to be of some help. It doesn't figure to do much harm to the Washington hitters who, at first glance, are not likely to knock down any fences.

Mickey Vernon, the freshman manager, isn't overly worried about the size of the park. He is more concerned with finding a presentable lineup for opening day. Other than his opening battery of pitcher Dick Donovan and catcher Pete Daley, and perhaps his left fielder, Gene Woodling, Vernon has no idea who will be on the field when President Kennedy throws out the first ball to open the 1961 American League season in the nation's capital April 10.

"I'm still kind of feeling my way," said the former star first baseman of the old Senators. "The boys are all willing workers and enthused about the new setup. It still feels a little strange to have to give orders to fellows I've played with for years."

Vernon has a fairly good idea what veterans like Woodling, Daley, Dale Long, Billy Klaus, Tom Sturdivant and Dave Sisler can do, so he is keeping a closer eye on the flock of kids in camp. Most impressive so far have been Bud Zipfel, a first baseman; Harry Bright, a third baseman; Joe Hicks, an outfielder; and Joe McClain, a right-handed pitcher.

The infield currently shapes up as Long at first base, Bob Johnson or Johnny Scaife at second, Coot Veal at shortstop and Bright at third. Zipfel, the hitting surprise of the camp, has an outside chance to win the regular first base berth.

Vernon plans to keep five of his six outfielders. He leans toward center fielder Willie Tasby and right fielder Marty Keogh as Woodling's running mates. However, Hicks, 303 at San Diego last year, and Jim King, 287 at Toronto, are very much in the running. Charles Hinton, who socked 20 homers and batted .369 at Stockton, may be sent down for more seasoning.

Vernon is set behind the plate with Daley, Gene Green and Dutch Dotterer.

"We're hurting for pitching," admitted Vernon. "After Donovan, it's impossible for me to name another starter."

Detroit Has New Approach

By DAVE DILES
Associated Press Sports Writer
LAKELAND, Fla. (AP)—The Detroit Tigers may be shaking their "fat cats" reputation, but their new business-like approach to baseball may not be enough to lift them out of sixth place.

For Manager Bob Scheffing, the 1961 season will be one of trial, and he hopes, not too many errors. Veterans call this training camp the best organized and most spirited in years. But the former Chicago Cubs manager needs more than an improved attitude to pump new life into the Tigers.

For years the Tigers have been rapped as the most contented group of second division players in baseball.

Scheffing is forced to attempt the latest rejuvenation with untried rookies. There are 20 players on the 36-man roster who were not listed on the Spring roster of 1960.

A winter trade brought center fielder Bill Bruton and Scheffing has moved Al Kaline back to his old right field spot and put slugger Rocky Colavito in left.

The manager came to camp with two major problems — his infield and the catching.

Dick Brown is the number one catcher. At 26, he is trying for a regular job with his third team. The manager says his infield "could be our most pleasant surprise or our biggest disappointment." The key figures are third baseman Steve Boros and second baseman Jake Wood, who have only seven years of minor league apprenticeship between them.

The best competition in camp is at first base where Larry Osborn, the American Association's triple-crown winner of 1960, is trying to unseat Norm Cash, who was the best hitter among Tiger regulars last year.

Pitching has been Detroit's strong suit in recent seasons and field.

The Tigers have younger and stronger arms for second line pitching. Jim Bunning, Frank Lary, and Don Mossi form the nucleus for the staff.

Early outlook on the Tigers: pitching good, hitting fair, fielding adequate, bench stronger — with the chances for moving up from sixth place depending almost entirely on the performance of the team gets from its young in-

Cleveland Browns Change Hands Again

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—The Cleveland Browns have changed hands again, but the old master who has been the field general since the professional football club was organized in 1946—Coach Paul Brown—still is running the team.

Arthur B. Modell of New York, 36, a television and advertising executive who is the top executive in the new organization, and R. J. (Rudy) Schaefer, 60, New York brewery company president, have agreed to give Brown a free rein. They also gave him an eight-year contract.

"I retain control over those things I consider essential to the operation of the team," Brown said at a news conference Wednesday.

Modell, who became chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said reports that about $4 million was involved in the transaction were substantially correct.

Brown remains as general manager and vice president of the National Football League club. Modell said Brown will decide any questions about player personnel and field operation.

"I am assuming the responsibility for such things as finances, admissions to the league, promotion and that type of thing," Modell said.

Brown, who retains a small amount of stock, has an option to buy more.

Dave R. Jones continues as president and Robert H. Gries continues as vice president and treasurer—each having a substantial minority interest in the club; Schaefer will be a vice president; William C. MacMillan, an investment banker, and John A. Wells, Modell's attorney, also have been named directors.

The transaction is the largest in professional football history. The stock soared from $1,000 a share to over $25,000 a share in the deal finalized Wednesday.

Azalea Golfers In For Surprise

WILMINGTON—Golf's touring professionals who will be here for next week's $12,000 Azalea Invitational tournament from March 31 through April 2, are in for a pleasant surprise.

They will be playing on the Cape Fear Country Club course which has undergone extensive improvements, and will be in the best condition in the 12 previous years of tournament play.

This is the opinion of veteran Golf Professional Hampton Auld, who is host pro for the Azalea Invitational and the $2,500 program which precedes the big tournament on March 30.

Since last year's tournament, Auld has installed a complete irrigation system, renovated the greens with No. 328 grass, and added two large lakes which affect play on Nos. 14 and 15. No. 14 has been strengthened as par 4 hole.

"Unless we get a bad break from the weather," Auld said, "the course will be in excellent condition."

Auld and his crew have done everything possible to bring the 18-hole, par 72 course up to its peak of perfection for championship competition. It will still provide a tough test of golfing skill, but participants will have the advantage of playing on beautifully conditioned fairways and greens.

Auld rates the course highly in comparison with others on the winter tour. "Last year I said the Cape Fear course was as good, or better, than 50 percent of the courses on the winter tour," Auld grinned, "but this year I can safely say that it is as good, or better than 75 percent of the courses on the winter tour."

When he looks at his long, rolling acreage with its lush green greens, Auld says the view is satisfying.

That is the same reaction he anticipates from the tournament troupe. "They may not all like their scores," he said, "but I believe they will be pleased with the course."

Dayton Favorite In NIT Semis Tonight

The opener pits Dayton against St. Louis. Holy Cross and Providence meet in the Madison Square Garden windup. The two winners will meet for the title Saturday following the third place playoff between the losers.

Dayton, the only survivor of the four seeded teams in the 12-team field, was lucky to get past Temple's small, pesky quintet in the quarter-finals Tuesday night. The Flyers, towering over their opponents from Philadelphia, over-

Carpenter Turns Down Brave Deal

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP)—Bob Carpenter, owner of the Philadelphia Phillies, today turned down an offer by Milwaukee to trade pitcher Jim Owens for Braves' shortstop Johnny Logan and first baseman Frank Torre.

Carpenter was informed by a reporter that Braves' General Manager John McHale had said in Bradenton, Fla., that he and Phillies' General Manager John Quinn had agreed tentatively to the deal and were awaiting final approval from Carpenter.

When asked what action he would take, carpenter, without hesitation, said from his Wilmington, Del. home:

"I would not accept it. I have heard it (the trade) discussed." Carpenter said the Braves know that he would not accept such a deal.

"There must be some mistake," he added.

Patton Favored In Amateur Event

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Billy Joe Patton of Morganton, N.C., was favored to take the Azaleas Amateur golf invitational tournament which opened here today.

Some 180 linksmen from the Carolinas entered the 72-hole event at the Charleston Country Club.

Last year's winner, Dale Morey of Morganton, did not return to defend his title.

Citadel Signs Prep Halfback

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—The Citadel announced today that halfback James Parker from Kings Mountain, N.C. High School has signed an athletic scholarship agreement with the state military college.

Eddie Teague, head football coach at The Citadel, said "Parker was an outstanding high school back. He has high college potential."

Parker plans to major in physical education and to play football and baseball.

Player, Palmer Top Money List

Figures released Tuesday by the Professional Golfers Association gave the 26-year-old shooter a $2,900 edge in winnings over Arnold Palmer, last year's leader from Ligonier, Pa.

Trailing Palmer $18,700 in winnings are Doug Sanders, Ojai, Calif., $14,100; Bob Goaly, Crystal River, Fla., $12,200; and Bill Maxwell, Oceanside, Calif., $12,100.

ALABAMA FARMER HARVESTS 60 BUSHELS PER ACRE MORE WITH HEPTACHLOR! Roy Snellgrove of Gordon, Alabama, had poor stands of corn because his fields were infested with corn billbugs. Using 2 lbs. of actual Heptachlor per acre he treated 30 acres and left a similar control plot untreated. Result: the 30 acres treated with Heptachlor yielded 100 bushels per acre. The untreated plot yielded only 40 bushels per acre. Says Snellgrove, "Now I plan to use Heptachlor on all my corn acreage!"

NORTH CAROLINIAN BOOSTS CORN INCOME $36.75 PER ACRE USING HEPTACHLOR! Dennis W. Simmons of Fairfield, North Carolina, treated part of his corn land with Heptachlor. Another portion of the same field was planted without Heptachlor. By actual plant count, the Heptachlor treated area produced a 38% better stand. Southern corn rootworms, wire worms, and billbugs were effectively controlled. The untreated area yielded 50 bushels per acre; the Heptachlor treated acreage: 85 bushels per acre for an increased yield of 35 bushels per acre!

PAUL HORGAN'S A DISTANT TRUMPET GREAT HISTORICAL NOVEL

CHAPTER 23 Three days later at sundown, Matthew Hazard, approaching Mexico, came to the execution of his orders: to find the massed Chiricahua Apaches, to estimate their number, their temper, and the direction of their travel, to avoid a fight, and to return to Fort Delivery within six days in any case.

dust detach itself from the main mass of the Indians. It stirred itself forward toward the two soldiers. Here was a clue as to the temper of the Indians, for having sighted the two calvarymen at an incredible distance, a dozen Chiricahuas were coming in pursuit.

ing shots, and again the airy exhaust of arrows stinging the air beside him. Soon the ground lifted under them in a long slope covered with tall, dry grass. They were suddenly at the edge of the shadow; they plunged into it. Behind them the moon shone in the dry golden grass. By contrast the shadow was dense and engulfing.

They saw a towering cloud of dust in the golden distance. Joe indicated the height of the dust cloud, and sprinkled with his fingers to indicate that the number of the distant band was great.

With Joe Dummy slightly in the lead, Matthew bent over his horse's laboring neck. They rode eastward into the rapidly deepening twilight. Ahead of them the full moon began to rise, whitest silver in the ashy blue of twilight. In the last fade of daylight behind them, they saw that their pursuers still came, and they knew they must run for cover wherever they could find it.

Joe led the gallop in a long oblique change of direction for a quarter hour. Then Matthew heard Joe dismount and dismounted himself. Leading their horses they walked far along the base of the mesa.

He lighted it. White Horn stared at his commander. He could not believe that he was not to be abandoned. He saw Matthew remove a spur and thrust one long blunt rowel into the heart of coals. Matthew blew and fanned; he nursed every scrap that would burn. Presently he was astonished to see the scout slide forward toward the fire. From a pouch at his waist White Horn took with the finger tips of one hand a fine yellow dust. Uttering sacred words deep in his throat he released a plume in all six sacred directions: north, south, east, west, up and down. He than made a puff of the powder over Matthew's head and then another over his own. Then in signs he explained.

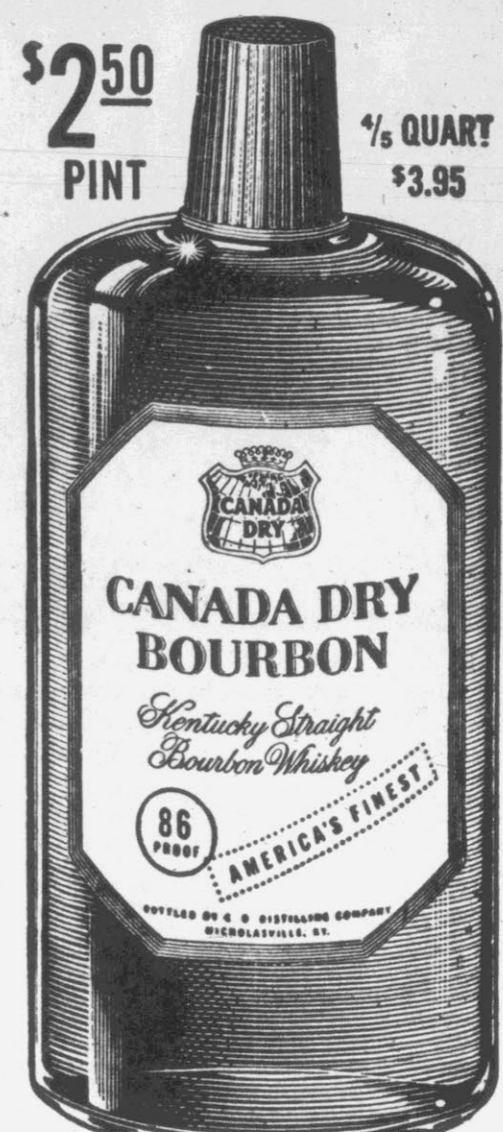

In his own time and among his own people, years before he had come to the Army, he had been a chief and a doctor, with powers. The yellow dust was pollen of tule, or cattail. It was used thus in an act of prayer. "Eki!" concluded White Horn, in a sudden, constricted, explosive sound, like a sharp breaking of a dried branch. It was a sound meant to startle supernatural powers into paying attention and hearing a prayer.

Fire Trucks Now In Varying Colors

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Twenty-five years ago most fire trucks were red but the trend recently has been to varied colors so that emergency vehicles will stand out from the many red trucks on the street, says a Sea-Grave Corp. engineer. But if you want a red truck, you can still get one—in 25 shades from bright red to dark maroon.

Joe replied with a whistle of breath to indicate agreement. He held up some charred mesquite roots left by earlier visitors. He shut off his whistle and then let it go again, but now in a blast of breath through clenched teeth with lips skinned back like an animal in fury or pain. "Joe, what's that?" asked Matthew. Joe Dummy bent forward in a kind of convulsion. Matthew went to him and turned him around. He saw, in silhouette, how Joe held up an arrow.

Dawn brings news of what happened to Joe Dummy. Continue the story tomorrow.

Appreciation Extended To Reflector Officers

A resolution of appreciation was presented to officers of The Daily Reflector, Inc., yesterday afternoon at Sheppard Memorial Library "in token of their support" and for a gift of microfilm. Mrs. Helen Hicks Moseley, chairman of the Board of Trustees of Sheppard Memorial Library, presented the framed resolution to D. J. Whichard, publisher; David J. Whichard, editor; and Jack Whichard, business manager. The resolution stated that "In no area of community life have they evidenced their support more strikingly than in the devotion and support of the Sheppard Memorial Library which they have extended in so many different ways." It continued, Sheppard Memorial Library is deeply indebted for making available microfilm copies of back issues of the Daily Reflector and other related material. The microfilm included the weekly, "Eastern Reflector" from Jan. 26, 1882-Aug. 5, 1910; the weekly,

"Carolina Home and Farm and Eastern Reflector" from Aug. 12, 1910-Dec. 23, 1910 and Jan. 5, 1912-Dec. 27, 1912; and "Daily Reflector" from Dec. 10, 1894. The officers presented microfilm of issues of the Daily Reflector from its beginning until June 1951. The library has established itself on a subscription basis for the microfilm of the newspaper from that date on. Miss Elizabeth Copeland, librarian, noted that D. J. Whichard had also loaned the library a ser-

Fourteen Polling Places In County For Saturday's Cattle Referendum

Fourteen polling places will be open to Pitt County cattlemen voting Saturday in the Cattle Referendum called for and promoted by the N. C. Cattlemen's Association. A favorable two-thirds majority vote Saturday would mean that North Carolina cattle growers will continue to assess themselves to the tune of 10 cents per head for all cattle for slaughter that brings $20 or more per head. All farmers who sell cattle for slaughter, including all persons who receive income from the sale of such cattle, are eligible voters in Saturday's referendum. The 10-cent per head assessment, if the referendum receives a favorable vote, will be effective from April 1, 1961 until March 31, 1964.

Financed by the referendum money is a state office for the N. C. Cattlemen's Association and an executive secretary-fieldman who heads the association's promotion program. If approved, the referendum will provide that buyers of cattle for slaughter must collect the 10 cents per head but the seller may ask for a refund of the assessment by writing directly to the association's office (Box 2954, Raleigh) within 30 days from the date of sale.

The association's treasurer is required to publish an annual statement of the amount received and disbursed. Voters in Saturday's referendum will be permitted to vote at the polling place that is most convenient. A list of voters will be kept at each polling place to avoid duplicate voting.

Soft Drink Tax Plans Rapped

Greenville soft drink bottler Frank Hill Monday attacked proposed legislation that would levy state tax on soft drinks.

Speaking to the weekly meeting of the Greenville Optimist Club, Hill termed a tax of the soft drink industry as unsound, punitive and unfair.

He predicted, "Added taxes on soft drinks would force a lot of us (bottling firms) out of business."

He pointed out only two states—South Carolina and Virginia—now have special taxes on soft drinks. Thirty-eight states, he said, have tried the soft drink levy.

Hill, a member of the board of directors of the N. C. Bottlers Association, spoke favorably of Gov. Sanford's school enrichment program and said he favored the across-the-board lifting of sales tax exemptions.

A soft drink tax, Hill said, "is not justified in any way." Optimist M. E. "Red" Cavendish introduced Hill as the evening's speaker. Vice-President Tom Money presided in the absence of club President Walter Whitehurst.

Police Keep Tight Silence In Kidnap-Death Of 10-Year-Old

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (AP)—Police maintained a tight silence today on the progress of their hunt for the kidnaper who roped 10-year-old Tommy McNevin to a tree by the neck and left him to die in the snow. The biggest question mark hung over Tommy's scoutmaster, Warren Williamson, 41, a church elder and father of a son and daughter, who committed suicide Tuesday night after claiming the kidnaper had designated him to deliver the $25,000 ransom demanded. Police refused to divulge the contents of Williamson's suicide note. But Crown Attorney (prosecutor) John Pringle said he had not believed Williamson's story of the ransom notes when he told it to him Tuesday and doesn't believe it now. Tommy, son of a former alderman and creamery owner, left home Monday afternoon to play hockey and was not seen again alive. His body was found Wednesday. Coroner Dr. J. Russell Scott said the boy died from exposure sometime Monday night. Bark on the tree was worn where Tommy had struggled to free himself.

Two sets of footprints—a man's and a boy's—led to the tree and the body, and police said they indicated the child walked trustingly to his death. There was a cut on Tommy's head and a deep cut on his thumb, which Scott took as an indication he had tried to ward off a blow, perhaps from his own hockey stick.

Tommy's father, Daniel McNevin, received an anonymous telephone call Monday night saying his son had been kidnaped and demanding $25,000 ransom.

Williamson, a partner in a paper towel firm, came to the McNevin home Tuesday morning and said he had found a note in his car naming him go-between.

McNevin got the money but also informed police, who questioned Williamson twice Tuesday. That night Williamson's family heard a shot and found his body in the basement of their home. He had fired a shotgun into his chest.

St. Louis Found Big Rathole, Shoveling In Dollars

EDITOR'S NOTE — "Somehow we have to get our message across," says the superintendent of schools in St. Louis. The message: more money needed. But the city's voters turned thumbs down all last year. This is the last of three articles on school financing problems.

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer

Home In Middle Of Village Street

HAMDEN, Ohio (AP)—Charles Mills has discovered that his house is in the middle of a village street. Fortunately, the street is laid out on paper rather than through his living room.

Mills made the discovery when he hired a surveyor to locate his property line so he could build a fence. The street apparently was planned in 1907, but never built.

Coyotes, deer, quail and rattlesnakes are increasing in Texas.

and is busy shoveling dollars into it.

In March, in May, and again in November last year, the voters turned down a $24.3-million bond issue to build new schools and modernize some of the old ones. They also rejected, three times, a $5.2-million bond issue for school fire protection.

Because the bonds weren't passed, and the schools can't be built, the school system this year is chartering 70 buses to transport 3,600 pupils from their home neighborhoods to schools up to nine miles away.

The buses are costing the city $195,000 this school year, plus $40,000 in overtime pay for teachers who supervise the bus rides. This is $233,000 for the 1960-61 school year.

No one seriously argues here that the new schools aren't needed; six elementary schools are at double their normal capacity; 2,000 elementary school pupils are attending classes in high school buildings; 525 elementary pupils are being taught in rented church quarters; some classrooms have as many as 60 pupils.

Then why did the bond issues fail? Apathy, ignorance, and resistance to taxes were major factors. But in St. Louis it was something more.

It was distrust of the St. Louis School Board, rocked by scandal and hint of scandal. A racial problem apparently was involved also.

Perhaps most of all, it was a state law requiring that school bond issues must be approved by a two-thirds majority. "We can get 60 per cent," one leading citizen declared, "but that last 6 per cent comes mighty hard."

A school building commissioner, appointed by the school board, was removed from office by a circuit court on charges of gross misconduct in office. Several board members have resigned amid charges they used school board labor and materials on their own homes.

The voters are well aware of this state of affairs. One board member himself said that, under the circumstances, the people of St. Louis would be justified in turning down the bond issues.

Said one home owner: "Of course I voted against the school bonds. Why should I vote money into the hands of those people?"

Familiar Smell To Trained Nose

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—The smell from a house in a residential section puzzled some folks but it didn't fool the trained noses of Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division agents.

They found the house vacant except for the basement, which contained a 150-gallon still fired by gas routed around the meter and twenty 50-gallon fermenter barrels.

The absent bootleggers had been pouring the mash down drains into the city sewers but the smell was more difficult to handle

St. Louis has a population of about 750,000, a drop of more than 100,000 since the 1950 census.

Much of the loss can be attributed to the flight to the suburbs, which many American cities are experiencing.

By that same 1950-1960 decade, the average daily attendance in the St. Louis public schools rose from 80,626 to 90,581. Much of this increase has been in Negro pupils, who now make up about 45 per cent of the school population.

Many of St. Louis' problems can be traced directly to the slum clearance project in Mill Creek, a section in the near-downtown area. Negroes from Mill Creek moved en masse to North St. Louis, which had been a predominantly white neighborhood. There weren't enough schools to handle the influx of pupils, and it is these children who now are being taken by buses to other parts of the city.

"It's up north where they need the schools," said a housewife in conservative South St. Louis. "We don't need them down here. And if those colored folks think we're going to carry them on our backs, they've got another think coming."

In all three St. Louis elections the school bond issues carried by what, in suburban Parma, Ohio, would have been a comfortable majority. In February the vote was 62,236 for and 35,772 against (63.5 per cent approval). In May it was 35,826 for and 21,453 against (62.5 per cent approval). In November, it was 85,565 for and 64,755 against (59.6 per cent approval).

But in St. Louis, where it takes 66.6 per cent approval, these are recorded as just three consecutive defeats for the school bonds.

But apathy played a big part, too.

In March, the "no" votes of 11.1 per cent of the registered voters were enough to defeat the bonds.

In May, it took only 8.7 per cent of the registered voters to block their passage.

In November, the "no" votes of 18.6 of the registered voters were decisive.

As in Parma, there was no organized opposition to the school bonds. Both metropolitan newspapers urged their passage, although both papers had serious reservations about the school board. Catholic and Lutheran church officials supported the bond issues wholeheartedly. PTA groups worked hard for them.

It was stressed that the bond issues would not be expensive. The average cost to home-owners: about $5 to $6 a year in increased property taxes.

"I voted against them," a white collar worker said. "I'll vote against them every time they come up. It means an increase in our taxes, and I can't afford it."

"Look, here are my tax bills. In 1949 my property tax was $43.52; now it's $106.12. That's more than a 100 per cent increase. How much do they want, anyway?"

A housewife said, "our property tax is high enough right now. Those people at city hall are just trying to stuff something down our throats. I don't trust them."

On April 4, St. Louis will hold a school board election. Shortly after that, the school bonds will almost certainly be put up to the voters again.

"We have to keep trying," said Philip J. Hickey, superintendent of instruction for the St. Louis schools. "We just have to. Things are going to get worse as we go along."

"Our transportation costs will be much higher next year. We expect at least 2,000 new pupils, perhaps more, next fall. We can't keep those elementary pupils in high school buildings, the high schools themselves need the room."

"Nearly half our schools are more than 50 years old. Some of them go back almost to Civil War days. Some of them are fire traps."

"We'll just have to try again. Somehow, somehow, we've got to get our message across."

Minister Terms Three Fields Of Equal Importance

REV. W. J. HADDEN, JR. . . . Eighth Street Christian Church

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Preaching, pastoral work, and church administration, the three fields of work a minister is most concerned with, each have their "own unique importance" according to the Rev. William J. Hadden, Jr., pastor of the Eighth Street Christian Church here.

The Rev. Mr. Hadden, a native of Maple Shade, New Jersey, attended high school at Moorestown, N. J., then attended Lynchburg College and Vanderbilt University, where he graduated in 1946.

Immediately following graduation from college, the minister was commissioned a Chaplain in the Navy and served in that capacity for a short time.

After being released from the service the Rev. Mr. Hadden went to Winchester, Va. where he was a pastor for three years, then moved to Clarksville, Tenn. where he was the pastor of the First Christian Church there for 10 years. He came to Greenville in March of 1959.

Each of the three fields of work for a minister are "of equal importance" in its own way, according to the Minister.

In speaking of the preaching minister, the Rev. Mr. Hadden said it is "a tremendous challenge today to present the different phases of Christian life to families . . . God's love in Christ to the congregation. This is done through the preaching ministry," he noted.

In pastoral work, he explained, a pastor through counseling can help persons gain faith, which can give purpose to all life and can help give answers to the basic problems of life. The Rev. Mr. Hadden noted much of his time is spent counseling, listening and helping with family problems, emotional problems and preparing young people for marriage.

The pastor, noting "administration is seemingly the most unrewarding" of the three major fields, in many ways. "Basically the way the modern church carries out its functions and reaches the needs of the people "is through administration duties which include meetings of committees and organizations within the church.

Of the three fields of work, Rev. Hadden explained he gained more pleasure from pastoral counseling. He noted, "I feel a minister has a unique privilege", explaining a minister "can counsel with the complete family." They are a part of the congregation and he "has a repair with them which is a definite advantage. In this "modern mechanical age we tend to forget human elements. We need a close relationship, especially in time of need."

Included in his administrative duties now is much work connected with the Church's building program.

The Rev. Mr. Hadden explained the Church "is in the midst of committing itself" in a pledge campaign to raise $150,000 to be used in building a new church sanctuary and education building. Cost of the new structures will be about $400,000. The Rev. Mr. Hadden noted the site for the new church has not been secured but several locations are being considered. He noted that

PROTECT YOUR TOBACCO CROP!

KILL WIREWORMS and other soil insects with HEPTACHLOR INSECTICIDE

This field was treated with Heptachlor three weeks before tobacco was set. Very little resetting necessary. Photo taken early June.

Same field of tobacco in July. No plants stunted by wireworms. This crop will give good yield of top quality tobacco.

Wireworm damage causes considerable resetting. It also causes stunting of many plants. This results in a low yield of poor quality tobacco. Heptachlor kills wireworms, and protects your valuable crop. Heptachlor also kills cutworms, white fringed beetle larvae, Japanese beetle larvae, mole crickets, seed corn maggots, billbugs, tobacco webworms, green June beetles, and many other soil insects.

WHEN TO APPLY—For best results, Heptachlor should be applied to tobacco 30 days before tobacco is set. This early application will allow for better distribution of insecticide in the soil. If weather conditions prevent earlier application, Heptachlor can be applied right before planting, but the results generally are not as satisfactory. Apply 2 pounds actual Heptachlor per acre broadcast. Application should not be made until the land has been plowed. Disc into the soil immediately after application.

HOW TO APPLY—Heptachlor is available as a liquid, dust, or granular. It can be purchased to suit the particular equipment you have on your farm. Large acreage can be treated with a tractor mounted duster or lime sower. Small acreage can be treated easily with a hand-operated cyclone seeder.

Gladding went on to say that regardless of their temporary employment, all released female employees with a year or more of service will receive termination pay according to Du Pont's usual policy of a week's pay for each year worked.

Railroads Issue Urgent Plea; Warn Industry On Brink Of Major Crisis

WASHINGTON — The nation's railroads this week issued an urgent plea to Congress and the Administration to head off a major crisis in the industry.

The Board of Directors of the Association of American Railroads, speaking for the industry,

Uniforms For All Ohio Sheriffs

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — All sheriffs and their deputies in Ohio's 88 counties now are required by law to have uniformly marked automobiles and wear standard uniforms.

Cruisers have black bottoms and white tops, with an 18-inch, 5-pointed stars on the front doors.

Uniforms are black shirts, grey trousers with black stripe, grey ties, blouses and hats, and black overcoats, shoes and socks. Plain clothes and unmarked cars can be used on secret investigations, however.

The Buckeye State Sheriffs' Association says it believes Ohio is the first state to require such uniformity by law.

incorporated the appeal for action in a formally adopted statement called a "Magna Carta for Transportation." At the same time, they announced the industry's determination to make an all-out effort to remedy long-standing public policy inequities in transportation.

The railroad legislative goals were summed up by the industry's chief executives in an appeal for Congress and the governing authorities, these asked for:

- Freedom from discriminatory regulation.
- Freedom from discriminatory taxation.
- Freedom from subsidized competition.
- Freedom to provide a diversified transportation service.

Declaring that "our industry is in jeopardy to the detriment of the national interest," the statement added:

"A major cause of this condition lies in unequal government treatment compared with other forms of transportation — in over-regulation, subsidization of competition and inequitable tax policies which discriminate against railroads."

These conditions, the railroads said, have had the following results:

- Thousands of jobs in the railroad and related industries have been lost and more thousands are in jeopardy.
- The public has been denied the kind of fast low-cost transportation a dynamic economy demands.
- The nation's defense capability has been weakened to an alarming degree.
- "The national interest cries for an end to such distressful conditions," the statement declared.
- Pointing out that correction is a matter of "legislative determination and can be corrected only by legislative action," the railroad presidents emphasized:
- "Railroaders seek no favors or special privileges. They seek only equality of treatment for all forms of transportation — the traditional American concept of fair play."
- The industry's adoption of the Magna Carta for Transportation was made public by A.A.R. President Daniel P. Loomis who said that "unequal government transport policies have opened up a transport gap that can prove as dangerous to America as the alleged missile gap."

"While all general carriers are in trouble," he went on, "railroads are among the worst off, suffering intensely from diverted traffic, under-used plant, subsistence level earnings and heavy unemployment."

"The cumulative drag on the whole nation from these losses totals into the billions of dollars," he declared.

Loomis said that railroads "are tired of being the punching bag of destructive government policies" and are determined to obtain equal treatment.

Seeing that a strong and growing nation needs great railroads, the A.A.R. president concluded that "the Magna Carta for Transportation provides the way to more jobs, better service and a strengthened defense in this time of national peril."

Animals Have 'Super Senses'

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Some tropical fish can distinguish between glass rods whose diameters differ by only two millimeters, a "brainstorming" session of aeronautical engineers and scientists was told.

They also learned that rattlesnakes have a tiny infrared sensor between nostril and eye that is sensitive to a temperature change as small as .001 degree.

The "brainstorming" at Ryan Aeronautical Co. had to do with whether such natural supersenses could be applied or copied or otherwise made use of in the aircraft-missile industry.

Emergency On The Turnpike

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — State Trooper M.E. Tinsley, answering a radio call, found a young man pacing up and down beside the Richmond - Petersburg turnpike.

His car was out of gas and a baby had just been born in the car. Tinsley, having just aided a remaining quart into the car and the young man drove on to a Richmond hospital.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market beat a grudging retreat early this afternoon under the combined weight of the tense foreign situation and the expected technical reaction to the long march upward.

The Associated Press' 60-stock average by noon had declined 2.10 to 243.60 with industrials down 3.00, rails down 1.90 and utilities down 0.40.

Brokers, who had more or less expected some sort of brief reaction, attributed it to several factors. For one thing, it was said, Dow Jones' closely watched average of 30 industrials in recent days has climbed close to its record high of 685.47. At this level, many traders are selling.

The issue's Laotian situation, plus the fact that President Kennedy delayed his press conference statement until 6 p. m., strengthened Wall Street's inclination to stand aside from trading.

Declines ran from fractions to a dollar for the most part, although a few wide movers exceeded that range. Prices held around midday and scattered issues remained an 1/8 off.

The Dow industrial average at noon was off 4.84 at 674.54.

Freedoms Award

W. O. Moore, president of the Kiwanis Club of Greenville, announced today that Kiwanis International has won its 10th top award in the annual Freedoms Foundation citizenship contest.

The honor, specified as the Distinguished Service Award, came to Kiwanis in February and was presented at the annual Freedoms Foundation Awards ceremony at Valley Forge. The award was made for Kiwanis' Citizenship Quotient project which encouraged citizens to determine the extent and kind of the individual citizenship activity and to take steps to correct any deficiencies noted.

New Lunchroom Officially Opens

AYDEN — The South Ayden lunchroom was officially opened Monday, when parents and other visitors were present. D.H. Conley, county schools superintendent, was also present.

Mr. Sabre Reid, area supervisor of lunchrooms, was a special guest. Parents had been invited to eat lunch at the opening of the cafeteria, at which more than 200 plate lunches were served. A total amount exceeding $180 was reported on the project of equipping the school lunchroom at the most recent South Ayden P. T. A. meeting. This project was the outgrowth of the P.T.A. supper held in February.

The tree holds between 55 and 60 eggs which have been prepared and decorated in assorted designs and colors. Members of the East Carolina Art Society, with Mrs. Donald Peterson in charge, prepared the tree.

Materials used in decorating included tempera paint, onion skin (a natural dye), oil paint and Easter egg dye. Some even are decorated with a metallic paint.

The custom of decorating eggs for Easter is about 250 years old, though trimming a tree with brightly colored eggs is a more recent idea. It appears to have originated among the Pennsylvania

An Easter egg tree, similar to one which has been displayed at the Junior Museum of the Metropolitan Museum of Art since 1948, is now on display at the Greenville Art Center.

The tree holds between 55 and 60 eggs which have been prepared and decorated in assorted designs and colors. Members of the East Carolina Art Society, with Mrs. Donald Peterson in charge, prepared the tree.

Materials used in decorating included tempera paint, onion skin (a natural dye), oil paint and Easter egg dye. Some even are decorated with a metallic paint.

District Lions Governor Speaks

BETHEL — Carmi Winters, District Governor, 31-H from New Bern, addressed the Bethel Lions Club on "Lionism" at their recent meeting.

He told that the purpose of a good Lion should be and what members are expected to do to accomplish this purpose. He suggested that an important part of a member's will could be the leaving of his eyes to the "Eye Bank for Restoring Sight, Inc."

He told members that this is managed through the Lion's Club.

Winters was introduced by L. G. Manning, president of the Bethel Club, who presided at the meeting. Several out-of-town visitors were present for the meeting, representing New Bern, Rocky Mount and Goldsboro.

Manning welcomed guests and Gordon Weeks, deputy district governor of Goldsboro, made a response and invited those present to meet in Goldsboro Thursday at 7:15.
