Congress Asked Push Polaris, Minuteman Arsenal

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy asked Congress today for a boost of nearly $2 billion in the nation's defense program primarily to beef up Polaris missile submarine and Minuteman missile projects.

Underlying the revisions requested by the President was the position of the United States "as a power which will never strike first."

The increase for the Polaris program — more submarines, a speedup in rocket range, more men for crews — would raise the overall program by $1.3 billion.

The use of some of those missiles. He recommended eliminating from the budget money to mount three squadrons of Minutemen on railroad cars, but said development work on that part of the program would continue.

Miss Odin Is Cosmos Speaker

Mrs. J. B. Kittrell Jr. was hostess to the Cosmos Book Club recently. An arrangement of gladioli graced the piano with hyacinths and other spring flowers being centered upon the dining room table.

The following were welcomed as guests for the occasion: Mrs. R. M. Gaines, Mrs. J. B. Kittrell Sr., Mrs. C. D. Smith, and Misses Sarah Kirkpatrick, Mary Thomas Smith, Sally Odin, and Nancy Rawls.

Mrs. R. M. Gaines and Mrs. J. B. Kittrell Sr. assisted the hostess in serving assorted sandwiches, sweets and hot, spiced apple juice. As an added touch, colorful Easter eggs were placed on the plates.

Miss Sally Odin, who teaches the third grade in Washington, N. C., and who formerly taught first grade in Anchorage, Alaska, last year, was guest speaker for the day.

Miss Odin shared her experiences in Alaska by colored slides which she had taken, and by personal observations.

Houses in Alaska are mostly of wood, but more and more cement blocks are being used. Transportation is mainly by plane, most of which are privately owned, and with the changing seasons, skis will replace pontoons or wheels.

One slide showed that of a cabbage grown in the Matanuska Valley. Its circumference was so great, two girls with their hands joined together could barely encompass it.

With The Farm Women

By MAIDRED MORRIS

SCHOLARSHIPS OFFERED IN LENOIR—Home Demonstration Club women in Lenoir County present a scholarship each year to some deserving boy or girl in the county. The Mayme Whitfield West college scholarship is sponsored by all county clubs.

Miss Marie Peniel, home economics agent, says there are now three students in college on the scholarships. The women are busy conducting various projects as a means of providing finances for this annual $500 grant. Mrs. S. G. Parker and Mrs. Robert E. Lee have recently been appointed to serve as co-chairman for the county in sponsoring suppers with proceeds going to the scholarship fund.

SPICE AND HERB COOKERY—Have you ever had an "herb exchange" in your county? Recently, Home Demonstration Club members became interested in using herbs to give added flavor to their everyday meals.

According to Mrs. Laura B. Wright, home economics agent in Scotland County, a stuffed ham-burger pie which contained two new spices was served to club members. Now the county gardening leader is urging members to grow herbs in their gardens so they can have an herb exchange.

DRAPERY CONSTRUCTION WORKSHOP—"It seemed like a drapery factory assembly line," said Mrs. Ann Brock, home economics agent, when Miss Charlotte Womble, home furnishing specialist, conducted a drapery workshop for 24 Home Demonstration Club women in Jones County. "By the end of the day, 11 pairs of draperies had been made and will be hung in the new Jones County Health Center."

VITAMIN "C" FOODS PLANTED—Have you bought your vegetable garden seed yet? Miss Isabelle Buckley, home economics agent, says the Rockingham County Home Demonstration Club women are checking their garden seed with the list of vitamin C foods that can be home-grown so their families will not be vitamin C deficient this year.

The women found they could raise several vitamin C foods in their garden such as collards, cabbage, kale, mustard greens, broccoli, tomatoes, green peppers, parsley, strawberries, and cantaloupe. QUICK AND EASY MEALS. Home food supply leaders recently stressed making casseroles and one-dish meals using canned and frozen food and left-overs.

Another Call For A United Effort

The need for the communities and counties of Eastern North Carolina to put aside jealousies and local prejudices and pull together for the overall development of the entire area has been pointed up again by veteran editor Henry Belk of the Goldsboro News-Argus.

Belk proposes that the counties of this area join together in forming an Eastern North Carolina Planning Association patterned after an organization formed by a number of counties in the Western section of North Carolina, created under legislative act.

The suggestion is sound and it should be implemented during the current session of the General Assembly.

There are many counties and communities in Eastern Carolina which have their own groups working for the economic development of their particular areas. For the most part, however, each of these groups carries on its own work without close coordination on area-wide undertakings which could prove beneficial to Eastern Carolina as a whole.

Certainly these individual organizations play a major role in the economic development of the individual counties and communities, and no area-wide organization could replace them. Yet, if their work could be more closely coordinated from the area viewpoint, the development potential for the area as a whole could be greatly enhanced.

Problems such as transportation, agricultural diversification, the creation of home-grown industry, the availability of a considerable pool of surplus labor are common to practically all the counties and communities in this part of the state. By closer cooperation between the individual counties and communities these problems might be solved more quickly on an area basis than with each little group seeking its own individual solution.

By projecting long-range development planning on a regional basis, Eastern North Carolina can better compete with other sections of the state, and the area as a whole as well as its individual counties and communities will receive the benefits of such work.

Perhaps This Will Be Year For 'Home Rule'

Every two years the matter of giving more autonomy to local governments in North Carolina comes up during the legislative session, and each time the legislature adjourns without taking any significant strides toward cutting the apron strings that tie local governments to Raleigh.

This year it is to be hoped that the final outcome will be different. This year, perhaps, the legislature will take a positive step toward allowing local governments to handle local administrative affairs to a larger degree without awaiting approval of the General Assembly.

Such a move would enable local governing boards to do a better job in administering local affairs, and at the same time it would eliminate the necessity of the legislature's handling literally hundreds of bills pertaining to only one county each session.

Under the general statutes of the state, boards of County Commissioners have many powers, it is true. But it is true that on many occasions County Commissioners find they do not have the authority to make decisions on matters pertaining solely to the administration of local government. Therefore they have to wait until the legislature convenes, send up a local bill for consideration and hope that the legislature will authorize the necessary action. This works a serious handicap upon elected officials whose responsibility it is to administer local government. It also divides the legislator's time between local governmental problems and matters of state-wide importance which the legislature must resolve.

In the interest of better government both at the local level and on the state level in North Carolina, the legislature should grant greater autonomy to local governments in handling local affairs.

Neutral Laos Is Not A 'Victory'

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States doesn't figure to win in Laos. A cease fire and neutralization of the country is about the best the United States can hope for. Even that has its gloomy side.

No wonder President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan flew to Key West Monday to talk over the situation. No wonder, either, that while they made stern talk, it was careful.

In the first place, the rainy season soon will begin in Laos. It will last until November, turning the few and poor roads into swamps. Any troops sent in would have slow going. There is no railroad.

It's a land of mountains and jungles, no place for big armies. Guerrilla war would be more like it, with help from air. But Russia could send in supplies by air, just as it's doing now. So is the United States.

Further, there is great apathy among the gentle Laotians. To complicate it even more, the Laotians are split into tribes. Among them many reportedly have scant feelings of nationalism.

Those who want the country neutral between the West and communism outnumber those who support the Red-led Pathet Lao in the north and right-wing American-backed forces in the south.

While American allies in Southeast Asia might supply most of the ground forces sent into Laos — if that became necessary — this country would have to do most of the supplying.

Except by air, that would be tough, long-way-around supplying. For this country to use nuclear weapons to win in Laos seems out of the question if it tried, it's highly questionable it could win.

The Russians, backing the rebels, would appear to be the eternal values we have built up by the kind of life we live. A life characterized by kindness will give us a most favorable balance in the world beyond. If however, we live a life of bitterness and jealousy, backbiting and hate, this will appear as a minus item and may indeed put us seriously in default spiritually.

What we call treasure on earth is only a sign or representation of certain values which we can use here and now. There are other values. We can begin accumulating them in this world. They go on for eternity.

Undoubtedly there will be people of huge treasures in the world beyond, but they will be spiritual treasure, earned not inherited, eternal not transitory.

It would seem that the treasures of heaven are internal rather than external treasures. They do not consist of precious metal or gems, big bank accounts or broad acres. Heaven-

A Tethered Blue Eagle

The retired U.S. Navy jet warplane put out to pasture at Elm Street Park is in a sad way.

Things have happened to that veteran guardian of our skyways that no enemy could do.

This once-proud blue eagle, whose nature it was to hurtle in scant minutes further than the eye could see, is chained to the ground and indignity after indignity heaped upon it.

A thousand - and - one initials and names have been scratched in its paint; more thousands of scuffs and scratches mar its clipped wings and fuselage where youngsters have clambered, scraped and walked. The canopy is gone; so is the nose-piece.

Little servicing-hatches built into the plane's body have been wrenched off or bent so they can no longer close. Last Sunday, what looked like torn out parts were lying on the ground nearby.

Make-believe pilots jostle one another for a chance to sit in the cockpit, and once there slam the rudder from side to side, and the elevators up and down, with such vigor the airframe shudders.

Where jet engines once nestled in the wings on either side of the fuselage, greater wounds are to be seen. These could not have been wrought by bare hands, they suggest a lusty pounding with brick or cement block. The metal is torn and bent, and pounded into disfigurement.

Elsewhere, the body bears other wounds not made by bullets, shell fragments nor rockets — more like holes from a well-thrown brick.

Still, she stands there, a tethered thing made for flight and glory. The familiar insignia of a white star reminds one of her destiny.

Crouched low, wings extended, tail up, at a distance she is a thing of strength and beauty. Parents who bring (and send) children to the park often stroll over to inspect the old plane. Some bring cameras. It's pretty obvious that briefly they picture in the mind's eye this plane in other days: soaring up, and up, and up. Seen close-up that vision doesn't last.

But they do examine where once engines were emplaced, where guns were mounted, where a wing camera was tucked. They marvel at intricacies of wiring and tubing that remain; they marvel at the vast amount of detailed planning and workmanship that went into its building; at the economizing of space. They know today's jets are even more complicated and wondrous in design and power. It helps equate the millions of dollars those planes cost with the value received.

This retired jet was placed in the local park to give the youngsters a "treat".

I have no doubt hundreds upon hundreds of kids were thrilled by seeing it; further thrilled by clambering over it, and imaginations raced skyward.

Some of them presumably will go on from that dream to reality. So, it's fair to say the one-time Naval warplane has fulfilled a peacetime assignment.

On seeing her wounds one is tempted to raise the question "How many times must a tethered eagle die?"

But that comes close to really outrageous sentimentality . . . doesn't it?

Other Editors Saying Plan As One Region

(Goldsboro News-Argus) For a quarter of a century this writer has been urging the necessity of Eastern North Carolina cities and counties cooperating to sell their region. We have insisted that fighting between cities, that jealousies and local prejudices handicap the whole area.

The need is now greater than ever before. Such a move is made particularly timely by the direction of Governor Sanford that North Carolina shall give every aid and assistance possible to President Kennedy's program for aid to distressed areas. The Governor already has assigned two excellently trained men to represent the state as the Congress implements the Kennedy program.

The low income counties of North Carolina's mountains beyond Asheville already are in nomination for help from any program. This results from the Appalachian region study and council formed to aid the area a long while ago. The Asheville Citizen in a widely copied editorial has given the picture. Berea College with a Ford Foundation grant made a study on prospects for the Appalachian country, including a number of Western North Carolina counties.

The Western North Carolina Planning Association, created under Legislative act can speak with authority for our mountain counties.

The East has its areas which are as isolated and undeveloped as our Far Western section. We have a tremendous surplus of labor. Some estimate this as high as 150,000. The whole region produces vast riches of resources, but the region manufactures or processes such a minor fraction of its raw materials.

We make the tobacco and ship it to the Piedmont for manufacture. We grow the peanuts but ship them to Virginia to be made into peanut butter, oil, candy and other products. We have vast areas of quick-growing forests but we in the East are of minor importance in furnishing the lumber. We have the truck crops but no freeze or drying or curing plants to speak of.

Eastern North Carolina should act now to correct this lack. We need an Eastern North Carolina Planning Association modeled after that of Western North Carolina. We need a cooperative working out of regional development by cities and counties.

We could with prompt action get this in the present General Assembly and pull together as one in the national program now shaping.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
HEAVENLY TREASURE
Jesus spoke of laying up treasures in heaven. (Matt. 6:20; Luke 18:22). What is heavenly treasure? Certainly it is not comparable with earthly treasure. Here we live in a physical world. The world beyond is what we term "spiritual." It may be just as real as this world in which we live — and probably it is — but it certainly must be different from this world. What is treasure here is not treasure there.

It would seem that the treasures of heaven are internal rather than external treasures. They do not consist of precious metal or gems, big bank accounts or broad acres. Heaven-

Settlements will probably be similar to those with the Big Three auto makers. There are a few more medium-size negotiations scheduled, and scores of smaller ones, but the ones listed above will probably set the pattern for all the rest. In general, labor wages won't go up much but labor costs will, and the difference if the United States can afford to forego its strategic bases in Portugal.

Relatively Peaceful Labor Year

By ELMER ROESSNER
This may be the most peaceful year in labor negotiations since the war.

A major reason is the current recession. The dip in business is not generating fear in organized labor. The specter of unemployment is not compelling leaders to accept what they can get.

But the cause of much of the unemployment, automation, is causing labor strategists to review policies. They are recognizing the fact that automation will eliminate thousands of jobs a month for years to come. The obvious conclusion is that security is becoming more important than wage increases.

Labor demands will be made just as vigorously this year as in other recent years. There will be less emphasis on pay increases and more on unemployment benefits, pensions and severance pay. Several unions are working on formulas to provide for workers dislocated by the introduction of automatic processes.

BIG WAGE ARGUMENT LOST
A minor reason for this situation is the fact that the cost of living index has faltered. In the past, the persistent rises constituted an unanswerable argument for pay increases. Since costs of living were steadily going up, workers had the alternative of getting more pay or living less.

THE RUBBER STRETCH
Contract talks with the big rubber companies come up in April, May and June, but since auto sales have been below expectations, demands for higher wages will be modified for security programs.

The powiest powwow of the year will be the Auto Workers negotiations in August with Ford, General Motors and Chrysler. Since the auto industry seems to be emerging from its sales slump right now, it may be expected that business will be brisk this summer. The extent of the briskness will undoubtedly have some effect on union tempers. But even if auto sales exceed expectations, union leaders will probably play for security harder than for pay hikes.

It is not generally known that automation has eliminated more jobs in the auto industry than in almost any other.

Armour and Swift will also have August negotiations. In September, the Auto Workers will take on American Motors and International Harvester.

KENNEDYS DECLINE TO PEDDLE MERCHANDISE
Names and likenesses of the President and Mrs. Kennedy may not be used in advertising without White House permission and, if that is granted, it will be only for government-sponsored fund drives. For permission, write to Pierre Salinger, White House, Washington, D.C.

However, models looking like Mrs. Kennedy may be used as long as there is no attempt to imply the First Lady is being shown. These look-alike models are now getting from five to ten times their regular fees to pose for fashion pictures.

Time Element Is Major Factor

By LYNN NISBET
TIMING—The time element is important in legislation and there is frequent conflict of time limitations in the early stages of the legislative process. Things must be done and the later idea of postponing the convening date of the General Assembly.

The constitution provides for appointment of members of the State Board of Education before April 1, and confirmation of these appointments by joint session of the two branches of the Legislature. Terms of Gerald Cowan of Asheville, Dallas Herring of Rose Hill, and Guy Phillips of Chapel Hill expire this year. The constitution requires that Governor Sanford reappoint or name replacements for these men this week and that the General Assembly confirm the appointments before Saturday.

The Governor has publicly announced his intention to reappoint Herring, but has made no commitment as to the other two upcoming vacancies on the board.

The General Statutes provide for appointment by the Legislature of members of county boards of education before the first Monday in April. And the statutes also require that budgets for operation of the public school system, budgets by the State Board of Education, and all county and city administrative units, shall be prepared before July 1. These April 1 and July 1 deadlines were fixed many years ago, when the General Assembly convened early in January for a constitutional 60-day session. The time limits appear to be almost absurd in view of the current convening date of the Legislature in February, and the chance that the appropriations and revenue bills might not be ratified until very close to July 1.

UNCERTAIN—The exact time at which new laws become effective has long been in dispute. A great many of the bills introduced provide that this act shall be in full force and effect from and after its ratification. The act is ratified when the presiding officers of the Senate and House affix their signatures. Sometimes one signs first, sometimes the other. That ritual is usually performed within a few minutes after the house or senate meets, or shortly after the noon hour. Therefore, some acts performed by citizens might be entirely legal in the morning and a violation of the new law that afternoon. In most instances there has been no general public notice of the ratification.

"QUALITY JUSTICE"—Governor Sanford has made legislators and others so acutely conscious of "quality education" they are carrying the quality idea into other areas. Rep. W. C. Harris of Wake was pleading the other day for his bill to improve the administration of the courts so as to guarantee justice of the "highest quality".

He was reminded that there are degrees in mercy and in education and in many other areas, but there can be no degree in justice. It is either just, or it isn't. Harris insisted he was talking about the quality of administration — and none can question that there is wide diversity in that field as well as in opinions about what should be done to correct the situation.

Shape Of The Future

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The final result of World War II will be the destruction of the great empires of the 18th and 19th centuries—the Dutch, French, British and Portuguese Empires—and the establishment of four new Empires: the Soviet Universal State, the Marxist-Sinic Empire, the Moslem Empire and the Marxist Latin American Confederation. This is the trend in the year 1961.

That Portugal is placed in this grouping may surprise those who do not realize that Portugal, the first of the explorers, retained a number of colonies and that whereas Portugal lost its greatest colony, Brazil, the ties between the two countries have held firm.

Portugal's colonial empire developed as a result of the great explorations under Prince Henry the Navigator (1394-1460). The Portuguese Empire started in 1415 when Ceuta was taken from the Moors, thus establishing a European foothold on the mainland of Africa. In 1463, the Portuguese captured Casablanca and in 1471, Tangier. Thus, Portugal became an African power.

To go back to Henry the Navigator, who was partly English on his mother's side, he was general of the Order of Christ, a wealthy crusading order. He diverted its funds and its enthusiasms to science and exploration. His work was monumental. The discovery of the Azores brought Portugal farther west in the Atlantic. By the Treaty of Alcacovas (1480) Portugal came into possession of West Africa, Guinea, and the islands of the Atlantic Ocean.

The Portuguese, throughout the 15th century, continued to explore the West African coast and move up the rivers which they encountered. Portugal became rich because of these discoveries and sent out land expeditions as well, hoping to find a land route to Ethiopia and to India by which they could by-pass the rapidly rising Moslems.

It was Vasco da Gama (1469) who finally moved on to India, taking advantage of the prior knowledge of other Portuguese explorers. He rounded the Cape of Good Hope and sailed on toward the Malabar Coast of India. He was followed in 1500 by Cabral who sailed with 12 ships to establish trade between Portugal and the East. In 1537, they took the island of Macao, near Hongkong, and Canton, establishing a trading center with China which still flourishes to this day.

In 1500, Cabral sailed to India by way of the Cape Verde Islands. He landed in Brazil where he stayed 10 days but took possession of the country. The Portuguese held Brazil until 1822 when it became independent. Brazil remained spiritually related to Portugal, the language of which continues to be spoken in that country.

The Portuguese acquired Goa in India which became the center of their activities in that part of the world. Whereas the British and the French have been forced out of India, the Portuguese remain in possession of Goa which they have refused to give up.

The Portuguese have never regarded their African and Asiatic holdings as colonies. They have called them Overseas Provinces. The Portuguese intermarried with the natives and lived comfortably among them. There has been no revolt against the Portuguese in Macao or Goa but in Angola, in Africa, such a revolt is being stirred up.

Portugal has no intention of giving up any of its territory anywhere. Just as Cuba has been spreading its particular form of Marxism throughout Latin America, so the Left Wing Congolese are moving into Angola to drive the Portuguese out. It is part of a universal conspiracy to take over all the weak spots of the Earth in the interest of Marxism.

Portugal will fight back. It will fight for Timor, Macao, Goa, Angola, for every small island it possesses. Its weapon will be to retire from the United Nations which means that it will withdraw from the Western defensive union, leaving the United States without important bases. If the United States can afford to forego its strategic bases in Portugal.

Dr. Finch, Carole Tregoff Found 'Guilty'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The state will ask death in its gas chamber for Dr. R. Bernard Finch and his mistress, Carole Tregoff, convicted of murdering his socialite wife with a bullet in the back.

A third jury, agreeing with two others had deadlocked, returned its verdict late Monday.

Finch, 43, handsome, tennis-loving surgeon, guilty of the first degree murder of pretty, popular Barbara Jean Finch, 35, outside their West Covina home July 18, 1959.

Carole, 24, auburn-haired, once a shapely model, who became Finch's receptionist and then his paramour, guilty of second-degree murder.

Both guilty of conspiracy to commit murder.

"Conspiracy to commit murder is punishable by death in California," said Deputy Dist. Atty. Clifford Crall. "We will ask the death penalty for both defendants." Finch, hands clasped, took his own verdict coolly. When he heard Carole's his face reddened and tears welled in his eyes. He reached past an attorney and patted her shoulder. She was sobbing.

As they were led out of the courtroom, the lovers embraced tearfully and tenderly. They stood clasped together briefly. Then Carole, head down, shoulders shaking with sobs, followed a woman sheriff's deputy back to jail a few floors above. Under California law the same jury of 10 men and 2 women will now decree the penalty. Superior Court Judge David Coleman told them to return for this purpose next Monday.

First-degree murder is punishable by life imprisonment or death, second-degree by five years to life.

The jury had deliberated a little over 21 hours since last Thursday morning. The end of the three-month trial —59 working days in court—came with dramatic swiftness before about 80 intent spectators, in a drab, eighth-floor courtroom in the 35-year-old Hall of Justice.

Co-prosecutor Crall said: "This restores my faith in the jury system. This (the guilty verdict) should have happened in the first trial."

Maxwell S. Keith, young attorney who took over Finch's defense for the third trial, said: "We are definitely going to appeal. I am disappointed and surprised over the verdict." Carole's attorney, Donald S. Bringgold, refused to comment.

The verdict climaxes a case that attracted worldwide attention since "Bunny" Finch, as friends called her, was found dead on a next-door lawn.

Prosecutors claimed the then wealthy surgeon and his mistress cold-bloodedly killed Mrs. Finch so they could marry without a costly divorce settlement. Finch testified the shooting was an accident.

Republicans Prepare A Determined Fight To Cut Spending By President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Capitol Hill Republicans geared today for a determined fight to cut domestic and foreign aid spending in President Kennedy's revised budget.

But Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois conceded that his party will be at a disadvantage in challenging the new defense requests Kennedy lays before Congress today.

Dirksen said in an interview that Republicans are "determined to scrutinize every item, both domestic and foreign" in the Kennedy version of estimated spending for the year beginning July 1.

"Where we feel that any item is too high, we are going to try to scale it down," he said. "That goes for mutual security requests, as well as for domestic programs. But as laymen, it is going to be difficult for us to challenge what the military experts say is needed for defense."

Dirksen said he doesn't think the Republicans will set any overall figure for proposed budget cuts. He said it will be a piecemeal project, with attacks on individual items as they come along.

Budget Director David E. Bell told the Senate-House Economic Committee Monday that a $2.1-billion deficit is in sight for the fiscal year beginning July 1 instead of the surplus former President Dwight D. Eisenhower estimated in January.

The effectiveness of Republican moves to cut spending enough to balance the budget apparently will depend on how much conservative Democratic strength they can enlist.

They got no help in what amounted to a sham battle Monday over what the Republicans called an administration effort to pad the budget for the last fiscal year of Eisenhower's term to the benefit of Kennedy's first full year, beginning July 1.

Sen. Styles Bridges, R-N.H., led an effort to strike from a catch-all money bill a $1 billion item to repay the Commodity Credit Corporation for the costs of the farm price support program.

Bridges said the CCC didn't need the money now. He contended it was put into the measure to include it in the current fiscal year and to give Kennedy that much more leeway in trying to balance next year's domestic budget.

Bridges lost on a 50-31 roll call vote that strictly followed party lines. He was defeated 53-29 in a subsequent effort to strike from the measure $1.4 billion he said won't be spent till next year for disposal of surplus farm products abroad.

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., said the funds Bridges tried to strike out are going to be spent in any event.

"Let's go ahead and hold our noses and pay it today," Russell said.

However, the Democrats finally agreed to cut $149 million out of CCC funds.

Baptists Adopt College Goals

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—North Carolina Baptists will be asked to support a $45 million expansion program for their seven colleges in North Carolina.

A special committee, meeting here Monday, adopted the program and will recommend it to a special session of the Baptist State Convention in Greensboro May 4.

The program would allocate: $10 million to Wake Forest College; $7 million to Meredith; $6 million each to Mars Hill and Campbell junior colleges; $5 million each to Chowan, Gardner-Webb and Wingate; and $1 million for Baptist Student Union facilities at non-Baptist colleges.

In addition, other goals would be to advance Mars Hill and Campbell from junior colleges to four-year colleges; to resume and enlarge Wake Forest's graduate studies program; to increase Meredith's enrollment from 700 to 1,200; and to double the enrollments of Chowan, Gardner-Webb and Wingate junior colleges.

The committee report recommends that the fund campaign for the college expansion be of three to 10 years duration. It suggests that a goal of $30 million be set for the first three years of the campaign and the remaining $15 million be raised during the next seven years.

Hold Services At Jarvis Memorial

Holy Week services are in progress at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church and will be continued through Easter night, excepting Friday and Saturday.

Rev. H. M. McLamb, minister of the church, is conducting the services. His theme for Tuesday night is "The Name of Jesus." Special music will be provided by the Chorister Choir, with Mrs. Paul Toll as organist and Dr. Carl Hjortsvang directing. The public is invited.

The Rev. Mr. McLamb reports a high attendance at Sunday School and Church on Sunday morning and the reception of 30 new members.

Ask Riders Show Subway Chivalry

NEW YORK (AP)—The City Transit Authority reached back to the Middle Ages Monday for an idea to improve a 20th century institution—the subways.

The authority began erecting posters asking male riders to display a little chivalry and give their seats to women.

"Be a knight for day," the posters say to the users of a transportation system acknowledged to have a high shove and push content.

Demand Action On South Africa

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—Ghana and the United Arab Republic Monday joined in demanding that U. N. members cut diplomatic and trade ties Monday with South Africa unless that nation changes its racial segregation policies.

"South Africa is a sick and sham society today," Ambassador Alex Quaison-Sackey of Ghana told the assembly's special political committee. "We must restore it to health."

He said that unless South Africa reverses its segregation policies the United Nations should call on all nations to break diplomatic relations with Johannesburg, close their ports to vessels flying the South African flag, and refuse to buy any South African goods.

Rafik Asha, the U.A.R. delegate, said Ghana's proposals represented the minimum measures the United Nations could adopt.

Violent Weather Over Middle West Clearing

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Winds diminished and skies cleared in most of the Midwest today but more rain dampened soggy areas in the South in the wake of Monday's violent weather.

Flood conditions appeared worsening in sections of Iowa and Wisconsin. Hundreds of persons have been forced from their homes by overflows of rivers and streams. Tornadoes, thunderstorms, hail and gale-force winds battered wide areas of the South and Midwest Monday and Monday night, causing extensive property damage.

Tornadoes struck in Texas and Louisiana and winds up to 100 m.p.h. lashed northern Illinois. Tornado winds, heavy rain and hail pounded the Arkansas-Louisiana-Texas region. Two persons were killed in a tornado which destroyed five homes in the hamlet of Appleby, in east Texas. A twister struck the northern part of Shreveport, La., damaging one home, while huge hailstones damaged 75 small airplanes at the city's airport.

The strong winds which lashed Illinois and other Midwest states caused heavy property damage and scores of injuries. One death and 19 injuries were reported in Illinois, where the wind was clocked at 100 m.p.h. in Joliet. The gust toppled the wind instruments from the Weather Bureau's station at the airport.

In Iowa, the worst flood in history threatened Waterloo as the rampaging Cedar River appeared headed for a record crest of 21.5 feet. Volunteers worked through the night stacking more than 100,000 sandbags in threatened areas and helping to move families from low residential areas in the city of 65,000.

In nearby Evansdale and Cedar Falls, many families also left their homes and other northern Iowa cities fought the flood waters. About 40 per cent of Charles City (population, 9,964), was under water from the flooding Cedar River and more than 800 persons have fled their homes.

In Wisconsin, Gov. Gaylord Nelson declared a state of emergency in Crawford and Vernon counties in the southwest part of the state. The flooding Kickapoo River has driven hundreds of residents from their homes.

Rivers and streams also caused flooding in parts of Minnesota. Dynamite was used to break ice jams and save bridges over streams along the north shore running into Lake Superior. Officials termed the flooding the worst in 10 years in the sparsely settled section. The flooding Knife River washed out a short section of the Duluth, Missabe & Iron Range Railway tracks near Two Harbors.

More showers and thundershowers were indicated in the southern Plains and eastward through the Gulf states into the south Atlantic Coast states.

Rain fell during the night in wide areas of California and northeastward through the plateau and Rocky Mountain region into the Plains and across the upper Mississippi Valley and Great Lakes region.

Cooler weather spread into the central Plains, the northern half of the Mississippi Valley and headed eastward through the Great Lakes region, the Ohio Valley and into the middle and north Atlantic Coast states.

Ayden Man Convicted On Bad Check Charges

MOREHEAD CITY—An Ayden man identified as Thurman Alton Stocks was convicted in county recorder's court here last week on two charges of issuing worthless checks in connection with an alleged car swindle deal.

Stocks was sentenced to four years in jail after being found guilty on two counts of issuing worthless checks. On two other charges of cheating and defrauding and false pretense, the court found probable cause and bound him over to the next term of superior court.

Sheriff's deputies here said Stocks purchased a 1961 Comet from Hardesty Motors recently paying for the car with a worthless $2,200 check drawn on an Ayden bank. Officers said Stocks, accompanied by J. A. Floars, a used car dealer in Goldsboro, then went to Raleigh to obtain a title for the automobile. However, the title was denied when it was learned that Stocks did not have liability insurance.

Stocks then turned the car over to Floars, officers said, and Floars obtained the title and license on his liability coverage. Floars testified in court that he paid Stocks $1,900 for the car, which later was taken to Darlington, S. C. and sold on an auto market officers said.

Floars was named co-defendant on each of the charges, but all charges against him were dismissed. Stocks gave notice of appeal of his jail sentence. He was being held without bond in the county jail last week.

Almost Overdid 'Consideration'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The youngsters in the Ward Robinson family respect their parents' comfort, but they overdid it.

While the parents were sleeping, Joe, 8, and Liz, 10, were playing church with candles.

They suddenly called to an older sister and asked: "Do you think we ought to wake mother and daddy and tell them the house is on fire?"

It took the frantic efforts of all the Robinsons to beat out the blaze in the draperies.

CALLS OFF VISIT

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga (AP)—Katanga President Moise Tshombe called off a visit to Liberia Monday and flew back home. He had reached Brazzaville, in the former French Congo, when he received word from Liberia's President William V. S. Tubman that a visit just now would be "inopportune."

Class Boycott Planned Today At Bowling Green State Univ.

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP) — A classroom boycott was planned today at Bowling Green State University after two nights of student demonstrations.

Some 2,000 students, after running wild through this city's downtown area Monday night, took the suggestion of a minister that a more sedate demonstration be held to protest their grievances against university policy.

The Rev. James Trautwein, pastor of St. John's Episcopal church here, suggested to students before a roaring campus bonfire that they could pursue one of three courses of action:

Stay in their rooms and refuse to attend classes.

Attend classes but refuse to answer when spoken to.

Go home.

The students compromised on a voice vote to sit outside the classroom buildings today but refuse to enter. Easter vacations begins Wednesday.

Student spokesmen said there should be no effort to stop any student who wishes to attend class. The university has some 6,000 students.

A university spokesman said the students would have to take their chances on being allowed to retake examinations if they miss classes.

The Rev. Mr. Trautwein, expressing sympathy with the students, said he and another minister, the Rev. William L. Powers, had been authorized by the university to accept grievances from students. He told the students to list them and he would present them to authorities.

The grievances centered on university regulations which the students consider too strict. One rule, for instance, bans drinking on or off campus, even beer.

The students also don't like what they say is a ban on couplings holding hands on campus, demonstrations Monday night and Sunday night.

In both incidents, students crossed back and forth over U. S. highways, blocking traffic. State highway patrolmen dispersed them.

Monday night the student twice ran six blocks into the center of town. They lined the sidewalks six deep on both sides of two city blocks. Newsmen estimated their number at 2,000.

Court To Decide Disputed Land

BURGAW, N.C. (AP) — The question of who owns disputed land in Pender County will be determined by the civil courts.

This was decided Monday when state attorneys signed an agreement under which charges against 36 Wilmington men would be dropped. The warrants charged trespassing and cutting timber on the state's Holly Shelter Wildlife Refuge in Pender.

Attorneys for the defendants agreed to abandon court actions brought by five other men against C. A. Manning Jr., manager of the refuge. The five sued Manning for about $65,000 in damages for false arrest and malicious prosecution after charges against them were dropped in Pender Superior Court. The five men had been charged last April with timber cutting and trespassing at Holly Shelter.

Duke, Carolina Lose; WF Winner

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Atlantic Coast Conference baseball teams broke even—won two, lost two—in games against non-conference opponents Monday. Today, the ACC losers, and one of the winners, get another crack at the same opponents. Duke is at Florida State, Wake Forest is host to Colby, North Carolina is host to Connecticut and Maryland is host to Dartmouth today. Wake Forest defeated Colby 6-1 Monday, while Duke bowed to Florida State 10-6 and North Carolina lost to Connecticut 6-2. Virginia defeated Rhode Island 5-3. One big inning for the opposition was the downfall of both Duke and North Carolina. Florida State scored eight runs in the seventh inning to break up what had been a pitchers' duel and rout Duke in the opening game of the Florida State Invitational Tournament. (North Carolina, Western Michigan and Florida will join the tourney later.) Duke's Don Altman and Florida State's Ray McShane had pitched a 2-2 game until the Seminoles' big seventh when five singles, three errors and a walk broke the game apart, Duke out-hit Florida State, 11 to 8, with...

Vejar Hangs Up Gloves, Enters Public Work

By ED CORRIGAN Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK (AP)—After 117 fights spanning 11 years, Chico Vejar hung up his gloves today to become a public relations expert "because I'm a proud man." "The road for me now would be all down hill," said the 29-year-old middleweight from Stamford, Conn. "I'm no longer thinking like a fighter. I have the savvy, the know-how, but I lack the fire." Vejar never did get close to the middleweight title he aimed for over the years. When he started fighting as a pro, he was a student of dramatic arts at New York University. After a couple of years, he quit school to concentrate on fighting. He wound up his career Monday night at St. Nicholas Arena with a unanimous 10-round decision over Willie Greaves of Edmond, Okla. It was close. "I should have done better, but I didn't," said Vejar, who shows the marks of his 93 victories, 20 losses and four draws. "But that's the end. If I had looked like a million dollars, I wouldn't continue." "I'm completely finished. I don't even want to be a manager or a trainer." Vejar is going with the Cerebral Palsy Foundation as a public relations man. He donated part of his purse to the organization. It's closer to his heart than the money he'll make out of it. His 2-year-old son has cerebral palsy. Chico was an actor to the end. Before the fight, he blew a kiss to the crowd and afterward he made a speech. "I want to thank you for being so kind to me," he told the spectators. "Boxing has been good to me." Greaves? "Sentiment won for him," snorted Willie.

Blue Devil leftfielder getting three of them. The second inning was the disaster time for North Carolina. Four hits, a walk and an error resulted in four runs for Connecticut, enough for the victory. Sophomore Larry Jenkins, the first of three Tar Heel pitchers, was the loser. Both of North Carolina's runs were driven in by Paul Swink, one with a double and one with a single. Wake Forest's Bob Plemmons on the mound for seven scoreless innings, limited Colby to four scattered hits in pitching the Demon Deacons to victory, supported by Jay Franklin's triple and two-run homer. Franklin's triple set up Wake Forest's first run. The visitors from Maine scored their only run in the ninth inning, with the aid of two Wake Forest errors.

ECC Golfers Win In Tri-Match

WILSON — East Carolina College's golf team finished atop in a tri-match of North State Conference teams here yesterday afternoon, defeating Elon and Atlantic Christian. The Pirate linkmen took the measure over AC 13-5 and edged Elon 11-7. Archie Clark, ECC freshman, was medalist in the match with a one under par 71. Don Conley, North State champion, fired a 74. Bill Guthrie, with an 83, and Winkle Kasey, with 76, were the other Pirate golfers in the tri-match. AC defeated Elon 9 1/2 to 8 1/2.

Baylor, Lakers Take Series Lead

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The fiery Los Angeles Lakers—thanks to uncananny Elgin Baylor—have the St. Louis Hawks down 3-2 in the Western finals for the second straight year, but they vow "we won't let 'em up this time." The Lakers—to a man—remembered they lost the series after taking a 3-2 lead by winning the fifth game at St. Louis 120-113 last season. They made it clear they were determined to take it all this time, after winning the fifth game Monday night 121-112. "We're going to win it in six this time," said Baylor, whose 47 points and great all-around game killed the Hawks. The Hawks won the sixth game on the Laker court last year by 21 points, then clinched the Western playoff title of the National Basketball Association in the seventh game at home. St. Louis will be without 6-foot-9 Clyde Lovellette, a great outside shooter who's had a tough series, but is always a big threat, in Wednesday night's game. Big Clyde suffered a twisted lower spine and may have a slipped disc. He is out for the season. Harry Craft, Chicago Cub coach, broke into organized ball with Monessen, Pa., in 1935.

New Bern's Bellamy Top Draft Choice

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG Associated Press Sports Writer ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—The field of senior college talent—chiefly in super-tall players—was supposed to be leanest in years at the annual National Basketball Association draft, but most coaches and owners came away smiling. Indiana's 6-foot-11 Olympic player, Walt Bellamy, was the No. 1 choice, and St. Bonaventure's 6-foot-5 Tom Stith, a treetop offensive player, was the second choice, as expected. Then the NBA owners started reaching into the services, the amateur ranks and the Eastern League, for some talented players who won't be under the pressure of their press clippings when they try to crack the NBA next season. Only 12 rookies made it this season. It was obvious these "sleeper" picks were bringing the smiles Monday. Chicago, the NBA's ninth and newest club, chose Bellamy and was given the first five choices plus the last one in the second round. Coach Jim Pollard seemed pleased over his picks—four of them 6-6 or over. The downtrodden New York Knickerbockers, with the worst win-loss record in the NBA, picked Stith, tagged "the closest to Elgin Baylor I've seen" by Knicks President Ned Irish. But the Knicks first five choices included not one man over 6-foot-5, despite Irish's earlier statements that his club needed a giant in the worst way. Irish once threatened to pull the Knicks out of the NBA unless given a chance at Bellamy. Some friction seems certain to develop between the NBA and the new American Basketball League, although NBA President Maurice Podoloff insists owners in both leagues have assured him there won't be. Syracuse was happy with its first four picks—all little-publicized players in the 6-6 to 6-7 category and headed by Ben Warley.

ex-Tennessee A&I, who played last season with Cleveland in the amateur National Basketball League. But Cleveland picked the same day as the NBA draft to turn professional and move into the new ABL. This might knock out the Nats No. 1 choice, Bellamy, who's been drafted by the Chicago entry in the ABL. Cincinnati, drafting third after Chicago and New York, picked Larry Siegfried, 6-4 of Ohio State. This opened the way for Detroit to draft Ray Scott, 6-9 and '235, veteran of three seasons in the pro Eastern League with Allentown, Pa. St. Louis surprised with 6-1 Cleo Hill, a 26-point scorer from Winston-Salem, N. C. College, as its top choice, with Ron Horn, a 6-7 all-Army player who was a freshman at Indiana, with Bellamy, the No. 2 pick. NBA champion Boston went for backline help, taking 6-3 Gary Phillips of Houston and 6-2 Al Butler of Niagara. Philadelphia's top pick was rugged 6-7 Tom Meschery of St. Mary's, Calif. Los Angeles chose Wayne Yates, 6-8 of Memphis State as No. 1.

Girlwatching Is Top Sport

Surveys, depending on whose you've read, purport hunting as the number one sport... or softball... or fishing... or baseball. But these surveys are drenched behind the ears. Know what it is—it's girlwatching. Saturday, cheerleaders from here and yonder of Eastern North Carolina (the Northeastern Conference) dispersed in the Rose High gymnasium like a flock of quail for their annual shooting (excuse me—cheering) get-together. For some reason, which we haven't figured out yet, this word-monger was picked to participate as a judge to help decide the winning team.

Little Publicity, But Many Fans

Now after watching these veterans of voice talent operate for two hours and observing the crowd (mostly of the male sex) they drew, I'm ready to declare this a sport and feel duty-bound in attacking the situation. This sport has remained in the shadows because of lack of publicity. Yet, it is a sport unchallenged by weather conditions and requires no costly equipment in its basic stages. Physical condition doesn't matter, except the spectator should have limber neck muscles and quick eyeballs. Prepared not to miss a "first" (for me) in the sports field, I showed up Saturday bright-eyed and oozing with enthusiams.

No Behind-the-Scene Story Allowed

Once inside, I assumed my role of a reporter but was confronted with unexpected problems. A contest official appeared startled when I presented this request: "Could I secure a dressing room press pass?" "A dressing room press pass?" "Sure, for the story behind the story. How the players feel about the outcome... why one didn't win and the other did... tears, pathos, and human-interest." I tried to explain that after facing Bones McKinny on a losing night, I was prepared to tackle a harmless group of teen-agers. Needless to say, my plea was in vain and the story behind the story never developed.

Coaching Tactics Differ From Case

Thus, a pre-contest story was my only choice. First approach was toward a dark-haired doll who was practicing gestures and mouthing silent works with several other girls. "How do you feel about this one—think you can take it?" Actually, the pencil had already scribbled the expected answer: "We're in good shape and should win in a breeze..." But the answer came: "We will do our best but all the other girls are good too." Another—a pert little blond this time—offered the same defeatist attitude and the immediate thought was that there must be coaching differences offered by Everett Case and these cheerleading coaches. Our next step was to confront a coach on these new techniques. And the coach turned out to be quite a looker herself, with only a few more days on the calendar than the contestants. "Hi coach, ready for the tough grind ahead." "No grinds are allowed" she snapped back and then in a warmer tone (after noticing my judges iden-

Season Awards Go To Deacons

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—Wake Forest basketball Coach Horace (Bones) McKinney and star Len Chappell received coach-and-player-of-the-year awards Monday night with tributes to their Atlantic Coast Conference champion team. Chris Cramer of Charlottesville, Va., presented the awards on behalf of the Atlantic Coast Sports-writers Association, of which he is president, at a "recognition banquet" for the Demon Deacons. McKinney accepted the coaching award on behalf of "the ball club and coaches (Charlie) Bryant and (Jack) Murdock." Chappell accepted the player award by saying, "I wish Mr. Cramer had 13 plaques, one for each member of our team. I couldn't have won this without the teamwork of a fine group of players."

St. Louis May Be Team To Watch In Senior Loop

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals have emerged as a dark horse in the National League pennant race.

Solly Hemus, starting his third season as manager of the Redbirds, thinks his club can win it all provided it gets the breaks. He feels his team compares favorably to the defending champion Pittsburgh Pirates and the rest.

The Cardinals were a dismal seventh in 1959 and last spring were rated second division. They made a surprisingly strong run for the pennant, finishing third, nine games behind the Pirates.

"We have strong pitching and pretty good power," said Hemus, "but I would like more defense in our outfield."

Hemus listed his big five pitchers as Ernie Broglio, Larry Jackson, Curt Simmons, Ray Sadecki and Bob Miller, with Lindy McDaniel once again heading the bullpen.

Broglio was a sophomore sensation last year, winning 21 and losing 9 to lead the Cardinal staff. Jackson had an 18-13 mark. Simmons, former Philadelphia star, had a 7-4 record for half a season. The 26-year-old Sadecki was 9-9 in his rookie season, and Miller, only 22, was 4-3 after recovering from an injury.

Relief expert McDaniel appeared in 65 games, won 12 and saved 20 others. He lost only 4 and posted an amazing 2.09 earned run average.

Next to the pitching, St. Louis' strongest department is the infield, comprised of Kenny Boyer—the best third baseman in the league, according to Hemus—who walloped 32 homers while batting .304; Julian Javier, a slick-fielding second baseman; Daryl Spencer, long ball hitter shortstop; and first baseman Bill White, the steadiest hitter on the club. Red Schoendienst and Alex Grammas are the reserves.

Hemus will platoon Stan Musial and Bob Nieman in left field, Walt Moryn and Joe Cunningham in right. He has three center fielders—Curt Flood, Don Landrum and Don Taussig. He might have to go with all seven, as well as with three catchers—Hal Smith, Casawatski and Gene Oliver.

Card's Jackson Suffers Jaw Fracture

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer
There was a subdued atmosphere at the St. Louis baseball camp today as huddled groups quietly discussed the freak accident that sent Cardinal right-hander Larry Jackson to the hospital with a fractured jaw.

The durable 29-year-old hurler, who led the National League in innings pitched while compiling an 18-13 record for the Cards last year, was struck by a bat fragment during Monday's 11-2 exhibition loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Duke Snider was batting in the sixth inning when the most serious accident of the exhibition season stunned the Cards. Snider, who had previously tagged Jackson for a homer and double, rapped one back to the box as the bat splintered.

One of the fragments hit Jackson in the face while he was fielding the grounder. He was rushed to a hospital where X-rays revealed the fracture. He will be lost to the club for an indefinite period.

Elsewhere, fine pitching performances were turned in by Milwaukee's Lew Burdette and Warren Spahn as they combined to five-hit the Chicago White Sox 1-0, and Chicago Cub southpaw Dick Ellsworth, who went the distance in a 7-4 triumph over San Francisco.

In other games, Minnesota out-sunged Baltimore 12-9, Cincinnati belted Detroit 11-9, the Los Angeles Angels defeated Cleveland 9-7, the Tigers' B Team edged Washington 6-5 in 10 innings and Kansas City beat New York 5-2 in 10 innings.

Snider drove in five runs against the Cards as the Dodgers laced Jackson and reliever Lindy McDaniel for 14 hits en route to their seventh straight win. Don Drysdale was effective for Los Angeles, allowing seven hits and two unearned runs in a seven-inning stint.

Spahn drove in the game's only run against the White Sox with a single in the seventh after a walk to Felix Mantilla and Roy McMillan's sacrifice. The winning blow came off Bob Shaw after Herb Score had checked the Braves on three hits for six innings.

Two errors gave the Cubs four unearned runs, including two of the winning tallies in a three-run seventh inning rally against the Giants. That was enough for Ellsworth, who gave up 12 hits as he joined teammate Jack Curtis as a nine-inning performer.

Jose Valdivielso collected four RBI with a homer and double, while pitcher Tom McAvoy and Dan Dobbek also contributed homers to the Twins' 13-hit attack against the Orioles. Marv Breeding, Jerry Adair and Dave Philley connected for Baltimore.

Vada Pinson's two-run homer in the eighth clinched it for the Reds, who shelled Tiger pitching for 14 hits. Home runs by Bob Cerv, Steve Bilko and Del Rice powered the Angels to their win over the Indians, who got circuit shots from Tito Francona and Don Dillard.

The Tigers B squad won it in the 10th when pitcher Gordon Seyfried worked the Senators' Dick Sisler for a walk with the bases loaded. Norm Siebern's base-loaded single gave the A's the clincher against the Yankees in their extra-inning contest.

Pitchers Set Target For Cincy's Pinson?

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

TAMPA (AP)—"I don't know whether pitchers were throwing at me more last season," Vada Pinson of the Cincinnati Reds said today, "but I do know I got hit more."

"I got hit five times last year," added the young outfielder, a dangerous guy with a bat. "And it was Dodger pitchers who got me four of the times. The other time was against the Giants."

The knock-down habit of Los Angeles pitchers when it came to Pinson was no surprise. Not after his home plate collision with Roger Craig that put the Dodger right hander on the sidelines with a broken collar bone early in the season.

"Craig was standing right on the plate," said Pinson. "He never should have been there. Hodges (first baseman) should have been there."

"They had me in a run down, chased me all the way back to third, but I got away. Then Gilliam (third baseman) ran me all the way to the plate. I was just a couple of feet away when I felt the ball whiz past my ear to Craig. I couldn't stop and I could not keep from hitting him. I could have got hurt, too."

"The next night I expected they'd throw at me. Stan Williams hit me on the arm, but I wasn't real sure they were throwing at me until Ed Roebuck came in. You know Roebuck, he pitches down here, around the knees, sinkers."

"His first pitch to me was behind my head. So was the second one. Then I was sure," said Pinson, laughing.

"But it's all part of the game," he added. "Everybody's up here to make money. And pitchers. They think you're taking money from them. So some make their money the rough way and some play it the way it was meant to be played. They make their money what you might call the 'good' way."

"Some pitchers figure they've got to show you that they're the general out there. The guy at bat is just a private."

Pinson, a slight speedster who has power, shrugs off the thought of retaliation, such as dragging a bunt down the first base line and crashing the pitcher when he comes over to field the ball. "I think of doing it sometimes. And there are times I'd really like to. But I don't."

"The best way is to hit a home run," said Pinson, flashing a grin. "and then laugh all the way around."

Instead of analyzing such items as a bone-crushing tackle, a sharp-breaking curve (referring to baseball), or soft-touch jump shot, we dealt with such unpredictable factors as pep, co-ordination, originality, appearance, and voice.

All in all, it was an enjoyable task and I did my best in the voting . . . which is all anyone can do under such precarious conditions with pretty girls involved.

New Point System In Saturday Race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—A 100-mile race at Greenville, S. C., Saturday will mark the debut of a new point system devised by the National Association of Stock Car Racing (NASCAR) to encourage drivers to compete at shorter tracks as well as the bigger speedways.

Bill France, NASCAR president, announced Monday that winners of events offering $4,000-$6,000 basic prize money will get 400 points toward the national championship, but 16 less for each succeeding finish. Previously, such events offered only 200 points to the winner.

In races where the basic prize money is $7,000 to $10,000, the winner will earn 500 points, with 50 more points offered for each additional $1,000.

France said, "If interest drops at the smaller tracks there will be limited development of new drivers, mechanics, car owners and fans."

The new system also will be in effect for 100 mile events at Hillsboro, N. C., April 2 and at Winston-Salem, N. C., April 3.

PAUL HORGAN'S GREAT HISTORICAL NOVEL A DISTANT TRUMPET

CHAPTER 27 Under the sunrise at twenty minutes before six the company rode out to the hunt.

After the storms and doubts of the day before, everybody worked to maintain high spirits.

Jessica Prescott glanced at her now and then. Kitty's face was fagged, and she tossed her head thoughtfully.

He kept a sharp eye for the land ahead. But even so, he was pleased by the spectacle.

He heard galloping to the rear and turned. He saw Kitty riding fast off to the right in pursuit of Garibaldi, who had strayed.

"Mainwaring," called the colonel, "go after her and bring her back and make her stay close up with the rest of us."

In a few minutes, Kitty was returned to the cavalcade and the colonel rode back to speak to her.

"We'll ride into that one. It is the widest and easiest." He led the way.

The gully made slow open bends. Vision went far. Once rising to the general level of the desert at the far end of the gully, they could circle the whole depression and make their way home, rabbit or no rabbit.

After they had come a quarter of a mile up the gully the colonel heard an eager panting and sniffing along the ground beside his horse.

"Mainwaring," shouted the colonel, "where's your wife?"

Everybody turned to stare in all directions. How had she vanished? They told each other that they must have been watching so intently ahead up the gully that they did not notice it as she fell away behind them.

"Oh, thunder and damnation!" called Colonel Prescott. "We've got to find her," and he turned the column about toward the entrance of the gully.

trance of the gully. Surely they would see her as they came around each of the slow winding curves of the dry course.

"You don't suppose she returned to the fort by herself?" he asked. "How in damnation should I know?" snapped the colonel.

"Yes," said the colonel. "I'm sorry Matt, you take Jessica and Laura back to the most, and return as fast as you can with Joe Dummy and four enlisted men."

They searched the finger gullies, one by one, dividing the assignments, and found no trace.

They were. They moved off toward their home lights at a trot in close order. When they reached the west gate they were told that Kitty's mount had come in riderless just about sundown.

In the white overhead the sun's light seemed universal, and as the noon passed, and the afternoon, it became more difficult than ever for an inexperienced person to tell directions.

"What will we do if night comes and we haven't found her?"

asked Teddy. "We will ride in for the night. We can't search in darkness. But perhaps we'll have a signal by then."

The great dome over them filled with twilight as the veiled sun went under. They all turned toward the fort to watch for a rocket.

If Kitty were really lost in the desert, now, after so long a day, only chance could bring her safely home.

The lights of the fort began to glow tiny and clear far away. Hoping for the rise of a rocket, they held their mounts still, and straining all senses to know if they were aware of the little sounds of the desert in its general nocturnal calm.

"Come on, Ted," he said at last. "We'll have to go in. It's pitch dark."

They moved off toward their home lights at a trot in close order. When they reached the west gate they were told that Kitty's mount had come in riderless just about sundown.

Is Kitty dead or alive? The search for the answer goes on tomorrow.

Health And Sick Care Costs Keep Going Up

By SAM DAWSON AP Business News Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — It costs more all the time to be sick.

People demand more medical and hospital care—and pay for it. This segment of the cost of living index has made the fastest growth in the last decade.

There is an expanding market for intercom equipment, record-keeping systems and motorized push-button beds that can be operated by the patient.

Remington Rand estimates its medical instrumentation sales will double by 1965. Dictograph Products sees a rise of 150 per cent for internal communications equipment sales to hospitals and doctors within four years.

Many hospitals are installing individual intercoms to let a patient talk directly to a nursing station. Many are turning to methods of using grouping patient care under one nurse.

In one New York hospital, a nurse can check the temperature, heart rates and respirations of 17 patients without leaving her desk-console.

Health and medical gadgets are quite an industry—and costly.

cell also reports this product in use for stretcher pads, respirator protection, arm boards and posturing devices. For nursing care of patients with limited grasp latex foam sheeting one-half to one inch thick is strapped around eating utensils, toothbrushes, combs, pens and pencils.

American Seating Co., now expanding into hospital room furniture, expects this market to become its second largest, after school equipment by 1963.

Carrier Corporation says that 13 per cent of the nation's hospitals are air-conditioned today. It predicts 40 per cent will be by the end of the decade.

Automation is making giant strides in hospitals as well as in factories and offices.

Fort Lauderdale Police Kept Busy

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Police laboriously booked a big, new batch of college boys today while city fathers pondered how to head off more mob revelry by thousands of student vacationists.

An estimated 3,000 to 5,000 beer-drinking, hooting collegians kept the entire Fort Lauderdale police department on the jump Monday night.

Officers collared more than 100 young people and said they would charge them with disturbing the peace and public intoxication.

No violence or injuries were reported in contrast with Sunday night's riot when beer cans and rocks were hurled at police. But the college boys and some girls swarmed through the beach district tying up traffic and chanting demands for beer, the National Guard and access to Jade Beach.

Jade Beach, unlighted, has been closed at night to the Easter vacationists from colleges mostly in the North and Midwest. City officials threatened earlier to call out the National Guard if Sunday's riot was repeated.

Mayor Edward Johns said after viewing Monday night's turmoil with police, "I don't want to see another night like this. We will have to take some kind of action."

Fort Lauderdale since the 1930s has been an increasingly popular resort for college students on an Easter break from classes. This year more than 25,000 already have checked in, roaming the beaches and making the rounds of bars and hamburger stands.

When newsmen asked why the young people were engaging in the demonstration, the reply was, "Just for the sake of a rumble—something to do."

Voting Machine Study Requested By Election Body

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Board of Elections wants the legislature to study the question of whether the state should help counties in the purchase of voting machines. This was one of six proposals which the board decided Monday to recommend to Gov. Sanford and the General Assembly. A bill was introduced in the 1959 legislature which would have allowed the state to share with counties the cost of purchasing voting machines. It met defeat. "We urge the present General Assembly," the board said, "to again consider this question as the need is great in the state for the use of voting machines."

The board recommended that when a new registration is held in a county, the registration books be opened a week earlier than usual. This would give an extra week for voters to get their names on the new registration books. The board proposed a constitutional amendment to permit prior to a presidential election to vote for president and vice president if they have resided in the state for 30 days. Under present law, a person must be a resident of the state for a year and of his precinct for 30 days, to be eligible. Other proposals include: That time given a candidate in a state or district race to decide whether he will call a runoff primary be reduced from five to three days. That the law be changed to permit any county to install the loose-leaf system of keeping registration books with the approval of its county commissioners. That the law be clarified to make certain that college students who do not intend to make the place where they are attending school their permanent residence shall be considered residents "of that county or state of their parents or other relatives for the purpose of voting."

Centennial Celebration Display Draws Crowds

By AURORA DOLLEY

RALEIGH — Just to put you in the mood, nostalgic strains of "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen" greet you as you approach the rooms housing the new Confederate display at the Dept. of Archives and History. "When This Cruel War Is Over" reads the title of a song published in Columbia, S. C. and on exhibit at one of the entrances to the Hall of History's Centennial Celebration collection. There's plenty here to interest you, as the unusually large crowds — nearly a thousand visitors last Sunday — can vouch for. Whether you're interested in the sentimental side of war, the blood-and-thunder shivers, or the cool calculations of some historians, there's guaranteed satisfaction in store for prospective sight-seers. One lady visitor is reported as being close to tears, impressed by the poverty of Civil War conditions, and was heard lamenting the fact that the South "didn't have a Marshall Plan."

Another emotional visitor, overwrought with indignation at the sight of some of the trinkets carved by Confederate prisoners in Union camps now being exhibited against white sand in the showcases, protested the "desecration" of our Southern heritage, with these objects "lying in the dirt." Largest and perhaps one of the most spectacular items now being seen is the first piece collected, the battered smokestack from the Albemarle. The smokestack, sole remaining piece of the iron-clad ram, is unbelievably riddled by shots of Union gunboats. As with all of the exhibits, notes of historical details are placed alongside the smokestack for the more curious viewers. Knives, still razor sharp, lie in general Home.

cases of English medical tools brought through the blockade to Southern units. Baggy pants on the uniforms of both the officers and enlisted Confederate soldiers attest to the realism of the display. Authentic, too, is the shirt of a Union soldier being worn by the Confederate fighter who had no shirt of his own. Called by Union soldiers the "rifle loaded on Sunday and shot all week", the Spencer repeating rifle, with which Lincoln a noble own expense outfitted two Union companies, draws a lot of attention. Another rifle included in the large rifle collection is one described as being the rifle that drew the first blood of the War Between the States in Baltimore on April 19, 1861, when a Massachusetts 19 year old soldier was fatally wounded. "Tell my father I died with my face to the enemy" reads a note penned by a mortally wounded colonel and addressed to his major. The effective arrangements in the showcases are enhanced by lighting and colorful backgrounds, all of which is the handiwork of Carlos Naumer, sets designer for the Museum.

Dental Meeting In Stormy Start

ATLANTA (AP) — A southeastern dental meeting got off to a stormy start with Negro dentists picketing outside the session and a speaker challenging Mayor William B. Hartsfield's stand against fluoridation. Eight Negro dentists paraded for two hours outside Municipal Auditorium Monday while about 1,500 white persons were inside listening to speeches at the Thomas P. Hinman Meeting. The pickets carried a sign asking, "Must men of science be colorblind?" No incidents were reported and no arrests made. One of the pickets, Dr. Henry W. Robinson of Atlanta, president of the North Georgia Dental Society, a Negro group, said, "This is our method of demonstrating to the men here present our plight as scientists, dentists and gentlemen of color." Meanwhile, Dr. Lon Morrey of Chicago, executive director of the American Dental Association, declared "people in high places" for continuing to deprive Atlanta children of what he described as the benefits of fluoridation. He called Atlanta's failure to fluoridate public drinking water a "public health lag." Atlanta's Mayor Hartsfield replied, "I don't care what Morrey said about fluoridation backing. Outstanding scientists all over the world have warned of the possibilities of danger to adults and have warned against mass fluoridation of water supplies."

Mrs. Tucker said that finished floors are practical for farm homes and need not be expensive, as many families rent a floor sander and do their own floors. She gave suggestions which would help keep floors in good condition with little effort, whether they are pine or hardwood, linoleum, asphalt or rubber tile and displayed many cleaning utensils and waxes.

Mrs. Ella Pate, president, reported on the March County Council and announced that the district meeting would be held at Southwood in Lenoir County April 6. # Payroll Snatch Attempt Foiled

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A Palmetto Shipping Co. clerk was attacked by two Negro men today as he carried in excess of $6,000 from the bank to his office to pay longshoremen.

Police reported, however, all of the payroll but $7 was recovered.

Fred Bolchoz and Mrs. Sarah Dismuth were about two doors from their office when one of the Negroes grabbed Bolchoz around the neck.

The clerk told police he yelled for Mrs. Dismuth to run to the office. She said she screamed that Bolchoz was being robbed and three co-workers ran from the office to pursue the bandits.

John Rogers, Tommy Fosberry and James Anderson chased the Negroes across a street, through an alley and into the backyard of a home.

Rogers wrested the money bag from one of the Negroes and hit him over the head with the bag. Another of the trio hit the robber in the stomach. But the pursuers then lost sight of the Negroes.

The three men who gave chase said the Negroes scaled several high walls and fences in making their escape.

One of the bandits struck Bolchoz, but his injury did not require hospitalization.
