Attend Furniture Forum And Clinic

Mrs. Vera Hathaway and Mr. Bob Russ of Quinn, Miller and Company have just returned from Drexel and High Point, N. C. where they attended a special three-day sales clinic and Furniture Forum held by Drexel Furniture Company.

The Forum is directed by Howard Hodgman, Sales Promotion Manager for Drexel, and is a short course to acquaint furniture sales people with every phase of furniture from styling to manufacturing. In addition to tours of the Drexel case goods and upholstery plants, where they saw furniture manufactured from the raw material to the finished piece of furniture, there were lectures given by Drexel experts on lumber, veneers, wood finishing, hand decorating, styling, advertising and other phases of the manufacture and selling of furniture. A special film presentation, given by Mr. Hodgman, tells the story and romance of fine furniture from the style and decorating angle.

Drexel's new 40,000 square foot showroom, where the complete line is displayed in attractive and well-decorated areas, made a perfect background as a classroom for these lectures.

This sales training Forum was especially planned to aid stores and sales people to have more "know-how" and background on furniture manufacturing and style to better sell their customers. Quinn, Miller and Company feels this has been most beneficial to their sales people in giving them additional knowledge of furniture and decorating.

On completion of the Forum, the group received diplomas for having attended and completed the course.—(Adv.)

Dr. Batton Is Pickwick Speaker

The Pickwick Book Club was entertained Tuesday with a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Frank H. Longino on Forest Hills Drive. The home was decorated with spring flowers centering the dining table and auxiliary tables.

Following the luncheon, Mrs. Longino welcomed guests, Mrs. Craven Hughes, Mrs. Ed Tipton, and guest speaker for the afternoon, Dr. James W. Batton, member of the Education Dept. at East Carolina College.

In a talk on "Problems of the Space Age," Dr. Batton enlightened the group on why America was not No. 1 in space. The problems, according to Dr. Batton, are so much more complicated than the general public realizes.

Having taught the Astronauts to recognize the many constellations and stars in the galaxy, Dr. Batton was highly qualified to explain exactly how the first American space exploitation will take place. The typical Astronaut has an IQ of 124-128 and will be between 34 and 41 years of age. The first flight will spend 270 minutes in the air.

Dr. Batton explained the disaster of an atomic explosion and stated that peaceful co-existence is the only opportunity for many scientific endeavors in the field of medicine. Cancer tissues may be sent to space to be exposed to cosmic radiation to experiment for a cure. The possibility of life on other planets will also be further explored through space travel.

In closing, Dr. Batton said that all must recognize a correlation of science and religion. Probing into space will bring about a greater respect for organic detail of existence.

Mrs. Harry Allen, president, conducted a short business meeting and the slate of officers for the coming year were read by the nominating committee. Officers elected were: president, Mrs. Louis Boyd Jr.; vice-president, Mrs. Moulton B. Massey Jr.; secretary, Mrs. Sam White III; treasurer, Mrs. Ed Monroe.

Following the business, books were distributed and the meeting adjourned.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

Recently the magazines and papers have run a good deal on the fine art of faking fine art.

This subject flared up not long ago in New York when the Metropolitan Museum discovered that three of its prized statues of Etruscan warriors are a good deal less than genuine.

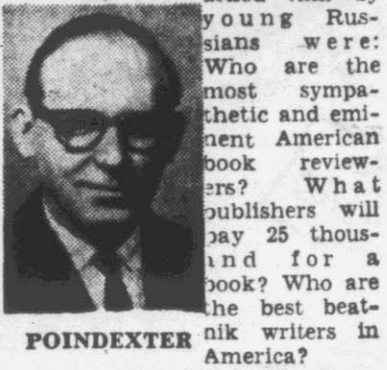

Currently, the British Museum is exhibiting some of its most spectacular finds to such large crowds that the guards have had to be reinforced to protect the fakes from thieves — a rather strange situation.

One of the most interesting pieces of bogus art in the British Museum display is a Christian altarpiece inscribed "Anno XXII." Come to think of it 22 A.D. is a bit early for Christian art.

The Official Mind
A recent story from France deals with a French-speaking American engineer there on a government mission. Seems that he made the mistake of admitting to a job analyst that he spent some of his time speaking French as part of his work. As a result, he was very nearly downgraded four ranks and reclassified as "interpreter."

Russian Dreams
The Russian mind is difficult to fathom in more ways than one. Erskine Caldwell, the famous American writer, reports that on a recent trip to Russia the question most frequently asked him by

POINDEXTER
Putting these together, do we come out with a composite picture of the young Russian writing aspirant as being desirous of becoming a beatnik author who makes at least 25 grand per manuscript in America and then is favorably reviewed by an eminent critic? As much of a dreamer as Karl Marx was, he never suffered from fantasies like these.

Peale Bros.
A book called "Live Longer and Better," embodying what an ad in the New York Times calls "the power of positive dieting," has come out under the name of Dr. Robert C. Peale. Naturally, this Peale is the brother of Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, author of "The Power of Positive Thinking."

Lincoln On Madison Avenue
According to "Publishers' Weekly," a book called "The New America," soon to be published by Karl Meyer, will contain a chapter on "That Image in the White House." In it, Meyer attempts to rate the Presidents by the standards of Madison Avenue "public relations" experts.

By these standards a President must be "homey in manner, robust in health, of modest means (apparently), heroically handsome, experienced, moderate, and piously Protestant."

Here is the way Lincoln measures up: "Odd-ball views on religion, an almost total lack of experience, rumors of illegitimacy, scarecrow appearance, melancholy disposition, an unfortunate ribald streak, and waris — all these add up to what the PR boys call a big nothing."

"Atlas"
A brand-new magazine has joined the flock of American journals. Called "Atlas," it will consist exclusively of reprints from foreign periodicals, the purpose being to give Americans the chance to evaluate world opinion for themselves. A commendable idea, and very handsomely realized in the first issue. The format is excellent, the illustrations interesting.

Though some of the articles are of limited interest, there is a good report on Red China by a Japanese industrialist who visited there, a discussion of atomic warfare by a Russian major general, and an analysis of Castroism in Latin America from "Le Monde" in Paris. All are grim from the standpoint of America's success in winning friends and influencing people.

There is humor too, the best example being the report of a British journalist about his experiences as a spelling expert on the Arab-run "Khartoum Times" in the Sudan. He was hired after the government threatened to close down the sheet because it greeted Pandit Nehru with a headline reading "Welcome to Bandit Nehru." It seems that the Arab word distinction between "p" and "b" means very little.

Art Center
At the Greenville Art Center there is an exhibit of work in various media by members of the Art Department of the College. This will last through April 25.

And on Wednesday, April 19, Dr. Bruce Carter of the Department will give a talk and demonstration at the Center on "Graphic Arts." The time will be 8:00 p.m.

Eisenhowers End California Stay

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—Dwight and Mamie Eisenhower are to end their sojourn in the sun here today.

They say they plan to return next winter.

The ex-President and his wife came here from their Gettysburg, Pa., farm last Feb. 8-when the East was clogged with snow and midday temperatures here were in the high 70s.

Maximum readings are now ranging into the low 90s here. They are to go to San Bernardino, 60 miles away, by auto, and then board a train for Gettysburg.

Spotted Robber, He's Sorry now

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—A Little Rock man is sorry he spotted the hitchhiker who attempted to rob him two years ago.

Linwood Busick told police he spotted the man on a downtown street Wednesday and confronted him.

The man socked Busick, breaking his nose and knocking out two teeth.

A passerby drove Busick to a hospital in Busick's car—and then drove off with the car.

Way Cleared For New Highway Commission

RALEIGH (AP)—The legislature's Joint Finance Committee howled with laughter Thursday at a Raleigh housewife's bared her monthly household budget in protesting a proposed sales tax on food.

Mrs. W. A. Daniels brought the House down when she told the committee "I allot my husband $25 a month. That's all he gets and if that's not enough, that's tough."

"I'm just a housewife, that's all," she said. "I'm representing me."

Taking a piece of chalk, Mrs. Daniels detailed on a blackboard how her husband's $670 a month check is spent. She said, "We can't afford to keep up with the Joneses."

Her plea apparently touched some legislative hearts. She earned an invitation from Rep. James Vogler of Mecklenburg to a free dinner for herself, her husband and four children.

Mrs. Daniels and three other citizens were the first members of the public to appear before the Finance Committee in hearings on pending tax proposals.

Mrs. Daniels said the top item on her list of bills was $150 for food. She made no bones about it when she said she didn't think it should be taxed.

"I have opened to you what many would consider personal, and it was personal to me. But, there are a lot of people like me in this state," she remarked.

Later, a committee member remarked: "Gee whiz, if she can't make it on $670 a month, what about the really poor folks."

Wires Challenge To Birch Leader

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Methodist Bishop Gerald Kennedy Thursday wired this challenge to Robert Welch, head of the right-wing John Birch Society: "Get specific or else admit that you really do not know what you are talking about."

The Protestant clergyman was referring to Welch's charge in a Los Angeles speech Tuesday that there are 7,000 Communists or Communist sympathizers among the Protestant clergy.

Kennedy said in a telegram to Welch: "The Methodist Church will act at once if evidence is forthcoming, the accused will be brought to trial. If guilty, he will be dismissed from our ministry."

"Believe me, I am most anxious to have you come forth with any information you may have as I believe you will do if you are sincere."

Legislators Howl At Bared Budget

RALEIGH (AP)—The General Assembly has cleared the way for Gov. Sanford to reorganize the State Highway Commission, effective July 1.

Legislation to replace the present seven-member commission with a 19-member body was enacted into law Thursday by the Senate. The bill sailed through both houses with ease.

Under the act, the chairman will serve fulltime. Sanford pledged during his campaigning to expand the commission in order to bring it closer to the people.

Meanwhile, a Republican proposal to redistrict the Senate was introduced in the House by Rep. William Osteen of Guilford, Republican leader.

The bill, signed by all 15 House Republicans, would make changes in line with population shifts reflected by the 1960 Census. Under the measure, populous Mecklenburg County would get three senators, Wake, Cumberland, Guilford and Forsyth two each, and Wayne, Robeson, Durham, Alamance and Rowan one each. The remaining 34 Senate seats would be divided in district of two or more counties.

Several bills were introduced in the Senate to carry out recommendations of the State Board of Elections. One bill would provide state aid to counties in purchasing voting machines.

Other measures would: Give a runner-up candidate only five days in which to call for a runoff primary; require college students to vote in counties of their parents' residence, unless they intend to make their permanent home in the county where the college is located.

"These greater resources," Howard said, "will give added assurance of our ability to handle financial requirements of every kind and size. They will also enable us to provide the expanding banking services required to support continued economic growth and to attract new business and industry to North Carolina."

Bank Merger Is Given Approval

Shareowners of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company and the First National Bank of Thomasville, in separate meetings yesterday approved a previously announced proposal for the two banks to merge.

R. W. Howard, Senior Vice President, said they approved the consolidation on the basis of an exchange of four shares of Wachovia stock for each five of First National stock held at the time of merger. This exchange is based on an appraisal of the book value of shares in each bank.

The merger is subject to the approval of state and federal bank supervisors. It will add approximately $13,000,000 to Wachovia's resources and will increase the bank's capital funds to more than $56,000,000.

"These greater resources," Howard said, "will give added assurance of our ability to handle financial requirements of every kind and size. They will also enable us to provide the expanding banking services required to support continued economic growth and to attract new business and industry to North Carolina."

Superintendent Thurston Wynne and his staff of officers and teachers invite everyone to attend Sunday school regularly. If you are not attending somewhere, a cordial invitation is extended to join with a fine group at Red Oak Christian Church each Sunday at 9:45 a.m.

The Rev. Howard James will preach at the 11 o'clock morning worship on "Beyond the Sunset." The Sanctuary Choir anthem will be "He Can Turn the Tide."

Flowers will be provided by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Simmons. A Cradle Roll Department and a Nursery Class are both provided during Sunday school and church.

Sanctuary Choir rehearsal will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. Boy Scout Troop 398 will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Members of the Troop participated in the Pre-Camporee held near the WCTC radio tower last weekend.

The Red Oak C.M.F. will attend the Hookerton District C.M.F. at Gordon Street Christian Church, Kinston, on Thursday, April 20, at 7:00 p.m. Thurston Wynne of Red Oak Church is the District C.M.F. president.

Plans are being made for Red Oak to be represented at the annual State Convention to be held in Durham April 25-27. Several have already pre-registered.

GOING HOLLYWOOD

What's it take to turn out the kind of color movies that are fun to watch? That favorite movie-land phrase says it: light's camera! action! With these three ingredients, your shows can have real professional snap, even without a cast of thousands.

The camera and the lights are handsomely and inexpensively boxed in the Brownie 8 Movie Camera Kit, $2.7. The camera's the lowest-priced movie camera in all Kodak history, but it scores high on features:

A sharp f2.7 lens, pre-focused to take sharp movies of any subject from a few feet away to infinity. An easy-to-set exposure dial. Enclosed telescopic viewfinder. A footage meter that automatically resets when you start a new roll of budget-priced 8mm Kodachrome film.

Lights in the kit are two powerful 300-watt reflector flood lamps in the Brownie 8 Movie Light. The light fastens conveniently into the top of the camera for ideal over-the-lens illumination indoors.

Best of all, the whole outfit's only $34.75.

Action? That's up to you. You don't need to write a Hollywood screenplay, but if you take five minutes to plan a sequence before you shoot, it'll make a big difference in the kind of applause your shows'll rate.

No going broke to go Hollywood like this. Drop in—soon.

Space Feat Raised Soviet Image

The first man in space, as the world knows by now, was a Soviet, not an American.

It was another whopping success for the Soviets in the space race and one which brought to Moscow congratulations from many including the President of the United States. Regardless of personal feeling, the significance of this latest Soviet space achievement cannot be underestimated.

Manned space flight has become a reality. It opens the door for deeper probes by manned vehicles into the universe and it obviously gives the Soviets a broader lead in space development compared with the United States.

Certainly importance must be attached to the fact that the United States has launched and still has in orbit around the earth many more space vehicles than the Soviets. Apparently the American vehicles are considerably more refined and scientifically farther advanced than those put up by the Soviets. But it remains a fact that the Soviets have come up first with the major break-through in space achievements. They put the first vehicle in orbit, they made the first successful moon shot, and now they have sent the first man into space. In spite of the fact that the United States may be ahead in the development of scientific instruments for space study, there is no question about the Soviet superiority in the development of huge engines to power much larger space vehicles than the United States has been able to use.

It should also be recognized that this latest man-in-space achievement of the Soviets will have an impact on the relative standing of the Soviet Union and the United States in the minds of many people throughout the world. It cannot help but place the United States in second place in the space race, and by association it may likewise relegate the United States to second place in the individual mind in many other fields.

Surely the Soviet success in manned space flight will bring about in the United States renewed demands for greater space progress to put us abreast or ahead of the Soviets in every aspect of this relatively new field. There will be the inclination to place blame here and there for failure of the United States to reach the goal first. Such criticism, without sound foundation, will not help the United States to overcome its deficit.

On the other hand, it appears obvious that the United States should carefully and calmly analyze its space program, its methods and its goals in an effort to remove stumbling blocks and inefficiency which may be retarding development. It is important that the United States make every reasonable effort to recoup the losses it has suffered in the space race. Otherwise it may find itself in the position of suffering other losses in other fields that at the moment may appear far removed from the space race.

Another Opportunity Of Voter-Registration

Registration books of the city of Greenville will be open again Saturday at the city hall to afford local citizens the opportunity to register for the forthcoming municipal election.

Saturday will mark the second of three Saturdays in which voters will be allowed to register for the election. It is important that every citizen eligible to vote get his name on the registration books. Otherwise he will not be allowed to cast a ballot in the election. It is also important that persons who previously have registered for municipal elections check to make sure they are properly registered.

The city's registration books have been altered from the old ward system into alphabetical order since the last registration period and it is possible that a name could have inadvertently been "lost" during the transfer. Unless a person checks on his registration before April 22, it will be too late to be eligible to vote in the forthcoming election.

Residency requirement for registering for municipal elections in Greenville state that a person must have been a resident of North Carolina for a period of one year and a resident of the city of Greenville for 30 days prior to the election.

The registration books will be open at the city hall Saturday from 9 a.m. until sunset.

It is the responsibility of local citizens to participate in the election of local officials. It is also the responsibility of the individual citizen to make sure he is properly registered in order that he may participate in the election.

Situation Calls For Soft Pedal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has avoided shrill notes ever since his show of toughness last month when he indicated this country would act if the Communists didn't stop trying to gobble up Laos.

He used a soft-pedal again Wednesday. This may displease those who want him to get tougher with Russia. But the fact is he's up against a tough situation and he is a realist.

Since last month, when he called on the Soviet-backed Reds in Laos to agree to a cease-fire, he's been waiting for the Russians, who pull the strings, to halt the Communist rebel attacks on the American-backed Laotian government.

Two days ago a State Department spokesman said the United States now is concerned about a step-up in Soviet arms deliveries to the rebels and about any further delay in a cease-fire.

This was tougher than Kennedy wanted to sound. At his news conference Wednesday he threw cold water on it. He said there hasn't been a marked increase in Soviet supplies and expressed hope for a cease-fire answer this week.

There are some reasons that can explain Kennedy's non-belligerent attitude:

In the first place, the United States is not quite an innocent party in Laos. In a fashion it has been doing on one side what the Russians have been doing on the other.

In a land where a majority of the people reportedly are neutral and apathetic about who wins, this country has been backing and supplying the right-wing government.

Russia has been doing the same for the Communist-led rebels trying to overthrow the government. The rest of the world knows this and the United States has made no secret of it.

If the United States persuaded its Southeast Asian allies to go in and fight the rebels—perhaps with direct American participation in some form—Red China and North Viet Nam Communists next door might move in.

This could become another Korea, but under even worse conditions because of the jungle-mountain terrain. In short, the United States might well wind up embroiled in Asia.

This could have two effects, neither of them good for the

Concerned As To States' Control

By LYNN NISBET

BREAK THROUGH — Majority of the members of the General Assembly apparently are reluctant to make it easier for citizens to vote for a President of the United States than to vote for a Governor or a sheriff. They fiddled around with the 23rd amendment providing for residents of the District of Columbia to vote for presidential electors until enough other states ratified the amendment to make North Carolina action pointless.

Questions asked at the joint meeting of House and Senate committees on constitutional amendments about the proposal to reduce residence requirements for voting for only presidential electors in North Carolina from one year to 30 days indicated serious opposition to that idea. The bill is sponsored by the state Board of Elections and is in line with similar legislation already enacted in a number of states and pending in others.

What the group of legislators for whom Rep. John Kerr of Warren and Roger Kiser of Scotland are more or less spokesmen fear is that this is a break-through on the traditional idea that the States should control elections. They fear the next step will be full voting privileges for DC residents and 30-day newcomers, and that before long the Federal government will displace all State control over voting rights.

The logical starting place for such Federal control is the Presidency, because the President and Vice President are the only candidates voted for in the nation at large. However, it is not too long a step from there to the idea that since members of the Congress enact laws for all the states, the Federal government should have more supervision over election.

CREEPING — The historic fact is that there has been a consistent trend in recent years to more and more Federal intervention and control in all situations affecting the rights of citizens. The original concept of the United States was that it represented a union of sovereign States, each of which retained primary control over its citizens and ceded authority only in matters affecting all of the members of the Union. Lately the concept has changed to the point that the Federal government, both administrative and judicial branches, have assumed the right to dictate policies of State governments with respect to many day by day activities of citizens which have no connection with conditions in other states.

The original concept was that a citizen of North Carolina was ex-officio a citizen of the United States solely by reason of his North Carolina affiliation. The modern concept is that everybody in North Carolina is a citizen of any State solely by reason of his residence or citizenship in the whole realm of the United States.

There are plausible arguments for both ideas. Currently the national concept is dominant. In 1920 North Carolina declined to ratify the woman suffrage amendment, but enough States ratified to put woman suffrage in effect at every voting precinct in the United States.

In 1933 North Carolina voted against repeal of the 18th amendment which outlawed alcoholic liquor in the whole country. Enough other states voted for repeal and the effect was to legalize alcoholic beverage sales in North Carolina—and every other state—subject to certain legislative restrictions.

ONE PRECINCT—Fact is, the trend is away from precinct registration and State unit voting and toward the idea of the right of any and every citizen to vote anywhere for officers within the jurisdictional area of the voter.

That would mean a North Carolinian finding himself in Oregon on election day could vote there for a President and Vice President, not for state or local officers. A citizen of Currituck finding himself in Cherokee on election day could vote for President and Governor and other State officials, but not for district or county candidates—and so on.

The mechanics to effectuate that process would require a certificate of registration showing that the citizen did have a right to vote for all the officials within the ballwicket where he found himself on election day. The card or certificate could be punched showing that the holder had voted once and therefore could not vote again anywhere else. This plan, of course, would void the present control plurality votes in one State for President giving the entire vote to one candidate. It would not materially affect results in any other election, except for the presidential electors, where nationwide popular majorities sometimes are not controlling, total popular votes are effective without regard to county or precinct pluralities.

The trend definitely is toward popular election of Presidents as well as all other elective officials. That means larger influence of big states. And the North Carolina legislators are fighting to retain the degree of influence the state now has, just as the smaller counties in the state are striving to hold the control of State government.

Necessity Of History

"American Negro Art" by Cedric Dover reveals the necessity of history.

To understand the events of today, one is greatly aided by knowing the events of the past, which made today possible. This book, fully illustrated, is what the title says it is: a book, documented, of American Negro Art, full of the history and many Negro artists, sculptors, potters and muralists.

It begins with the Negro people themselves and colonial America, where the Negroes were instrumental in building houses and keeping them. Where they made household items and even became apprentices at skilled trades.

They made leather goods and pottery. They decorated their goods attractively, and then they used the arts—like their songs—to tell their story, of the way they lived.

Some of the first Negro artists were encouraged by wealthier Negroes to paint portraits. It may be surprising to learn that some of these wealthier Negroes

But the painting has an impact, as does the entire book. It reveals a history and provides food for thought.

Strength For Today

ALL IN LOVE

Much of the evil done in life is the result of thoughtlessness. There are people who plan evil. There are weak people who fall into evil ways. There are ignorant people who drift into wrongdoing. But most of our wrongdoing comes as the result of thoughtlessness. We just cannot put ourselves in the place of others and see what it means to them to have us think and do certain things.

Injured feelings are often the result of self-pity. The person who is always having his feelings or hers hurt is a weak and abnormal person. Bur hurt feelings can also be genuine. Sometimes without realizing it we hurt the feelings of our loved ones, and usually it is because we are thoughtless. We wish them nothing but good. We love them. But once in a while we say something or do something which stabs them to depths which we do not even know exist.

So watch your tongue. Be careful about your pen and typewriter. Watch what you say to a neighbor. In discussing a friend with another friend, give the person under discussion the full charitable.

The mind and soul have tender areas which can easily be wounded. Let the touch be light. Let the judgement be charitable. Let all be done in love.

In preoccupation with the condition of the nation's colleges and their ability to absorb and adequately instruct all who are qualified to enter, there has been almost no mention of high school graduates who do not pursue formal education beyond that point simply because they would be unable to cope with the greater academic demands of college instruction.

Each year one million boys and girls go on to college training, but almost twice that number do not. Among those who terminate their schooling with high school or before are the uncounted thousands who could qualify for college work if they were able to afford it or if they desired to continue their education. But what of the great majority of the 1.7 million high school graduates who do not go to college because they lack the necessary abilities?

Has emphasis upon a college degree as a requisite to a successful life become an obsession with many people? John Gardner, president of Carnegie Corporation, contends it has. It is notable that this huge philanthropic organization which has given so much to improve opportunities for higher education does not look upon this route as the

The Blades-And-Shavers Dispute

By ELMER ROESSNER

The scrap between the makers of blades and of electric shavers is getting sharper.

It's no wonder. Despite the spread of beatnikism, most American males shave six or seven times a week and spend millions on accessories.

A few weeks ago the electric shaver people were whooping up a report in a medical journal that machine shaving was much better than the old blade trick, especially for people with skin ailments.

Since then the medical journal has been bombarded with letters from dermatologists, physicians and statisticians, and sciaps and a few Gillette stockholders, attacking the conclusions. The skin specialists hold that the later and hot water required for a blade job far outweigh the doubtful advantages of an electric job.

The solution, of course, is obvious. That is for every electric shaver manufacturer to bring out blades as well, and for every blade company to produce its own 110-volt job. Then all

Another survey by the Association reveals that although most savings bank depositors save for a "rainy day," most people think saving for a specific thing—like a vacation or an easy chair for Pop—is a lot more fun.

No Way To Cut Corners

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Copyright, 191, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

One of the current angers of our people is the income tax, which unquestionably takes too much of each individual's earnings. Only the very rich and the well-served by lawyers and accountants can afford to engage in what are called tax avoidances. However, everybody tries to chisel, which has the moral effect of making us a nation of thieves.

What precisely is to be done about it? We spend $45,000,000,000 on war alone; we spend about $5,000,000,000 a year on veterans' pensions, hospitalization and other welfare costs; we have an interest charge of about $9,000,000,000 a year. Then there are all the other costs of government. It has been suggested that we drop the income tax and try some other form of taxation. But who is in favor of dropping the costs of government that he wants supported? For instance, the Department of Defense is abolishing obsolete air fields. Don't abolish anything in my district, no matter how useless!

Now along come those who call our monetary system "a swindle." For instance, a correspondent in the State of Washington has this to say: "I am having a hard time trying to convince our intellectual ignoramus how dangerous they are to our free institutions which they so vociferously pretend to be for. The Communists do not have to do very much to undermine any nation's economy which is based upon the swindling nature of its money system."

In the first place, the public and private debt are different. Much of the private debt in this country has to do with installment buying which is a method of paying for a commodity while using it. For instance, a man buys a car on time. He uses that car while he is paying for it. If he has to postpone buying a car until he has the cash in his pocket, he might not have the use of that car for 18 months or two years. In a word, installment buying is an ingenious device which makes it possible to live on a higher standard of life, perhaps on annual income while being paid weekly. It also creates more work, stimulates manufacturing and sales. Homes purchased on mortgages are economically sounder than paying rent. The mortgage is, of course, a debt but translate it into rent and the end result is that the home is owned whereas after paying rent, one still has nothing of his own.

These kinds of debts are very different from the public debt. Public debt involves the sale of bonds by the government to pay expenses which cannot be met by taxes. Our enormous current debt of about $286,000,000,000 is a product of five specific episodes; World War I, the Depression of 1929 to 1933, World War II, the Korean War and the Cold War.

It is possible to argue that all these events were historical errors. The wars, however, did occur and cost lives and money. The expended lives are buried and we shed a tear over them. The cost of the money continues on.

It is possible to reduce the debt by an automatic device; that is, to devalue the dollar; to make it worth say 10 cents. By that means we make the bonds worth one tenth of the value we paid for them. This has been done by governments in history. We used to have a currency that was "not worth a continental." I wonder if our friend in Washington would like the United States to print so much paper money that our dollar is worth 10 cents or nothing. We could pay off our debt overnight by this means.

Or there is a simpler way: Congress can pass an act repudiating the debt. We owe nothing to anybody in any form of currency. Those who bought the bonds can go chase themselves. Foreigners and foreign banks that hold United States securities could then go into bankruptcy and our friend in the State of Washington could shout, "Three Cheers!"

No! No economic short-cuts are possible. We have assumed these obligations for our own (Continued on Page 5)

Carter To Speak On Printmaking

"Printmaking as a Fine Art" will be the topic of an address by Dr. Bruce Carter, associate professor in the East Carolina College Art Department on Wednesday, April 19, at 8 p.m. Dr. Carter, member of the department for the past three years, teaches graphic arts courses, including woodcutting, lithography, etching, metal and wood engraving, as well as art education courses.

A group of his prints, two woodcuts and two lithographs, are being shown now as a part of the E. C. C. Art Faculty Exhibit at the Greenville Art Center. Three of these, "The Patriots," "The Martyr" and "The Martyr's Child" deal with the Resistance Movement in Norway during the second world war, a subject which Dr. Carter plans to explore further on location.

He received the first purchase prize in prints in a university exhibition in 1958 while completing requirements for a doctorate degree at Penn State University. Since coming to East Carolina College, his work has been accepted for the years 1959 and 1960 in the North Carolina Artists Exhibition at Raleigh.

Before entering the graduate school at Penn State, the speaker studied at the Albright Art School of Buffalo, N. Y., and received the B.S. degree at the State University of New York, also at Buffalo. He is a native of Palmyra, N. Y.

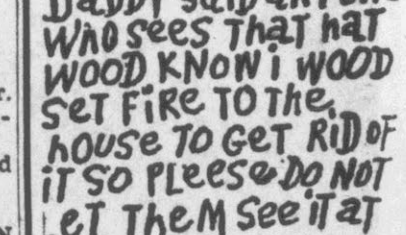

The talk on Wednesday is the first of two scheduled for April at the center. On April 25, Rev. John Drake, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, will speak on "Sign and Symbols in Christian Art."

Court Decides Competence Monday In Trying Nazi

JERUSALEM (AP) — Adolf Eichmann's defense attorney said today he would demand that the West German government "protect" the former Gestapo colonel from the judgment of Israel's right to judge Eichmann on charges of having a major part in the mass murder of Jews under Hitler, defense counsel Robert Servatius declared. "Eichmann has a claim against the German state to protect him. If the state remains impassive, he can sue the state and he will do that." Servatius warned the special Israeli court trying Eichmann that "intervention is still possible" by West Germany in the case. The chief defense counsel made the statement as he heatedly contended that Eichmann should be tried by a German court. He asserted that appropriate German courts and laws are available to handle the case and denied that Eichmann came freely to Israel to stand trial. Servatius' announcement came after he and Israeli Atty. Gen. Gideon Hausner made their concluding arguments on the right of the Israeli court to try Eichmann with the prosecutor refuting the defense challenge. The fifth session of the trial lasted only an hour and 45 minutes and then recessed over the weekend. Supreme Justice Moshe Landau, who is presiding over the special court of three Israeli judges, announced that his decision—on whether it is competent to try Eichmann—would be delivered Monday. Eichmann, wartime chief of the Jewish affairs section of the Nazi Gestapo, is charged with responsibility in the death of six million Jews during World War II and other crimes. But then he said: "Intervention is still possible and may still arise at any stage of this trial. The accused has a claim for protection and for intervention from his country." Justice Landau broke in to ask, "Is he a German citizen?" "Yes," Servatius replied. "Not an Austrian?" the president continued.

"No," Servatius answered. "His father gave up his Austrian citizenship." Servatius then demanded that the two employees of the Israeli airline, El Al, be brought to court to testify about the circumstances of Eichmann's removal from Argentina to Israel. They are Yehudi (Jack) Shimon, chief of operations and Zvi Tohar, who allegedly piloted the plane. The court has placed both men on notice that they may be summoned to the hearings. "The prime minister (David Ben-Gurion) told the Knesset (Parliament) that Eichmann was arrested by members of the security forces of the state," Hysner said. Judge Benjamin Halevy broke in to say, however, "the security forces revealed the place where

Four officers of the Greenville lodge accompanied the delegation going to Goldsboro. They were: Junior Governor Charles McAndrew, Prelate Frank Fuller, Treasurer A. A. Carrigan, and Secretary E. M. Baldree. Others attending, who rank high in the Southeast's Moose organization were: N.C. Director William Moon of Winston-Salem; Regional Director Frank Ray of Savannah; Past Grand North Moose Dudley Wedmeyer of Clearwater, Fla.; and Charles Brice, State Director for Virginia. Crooks, a Wisconsin attorney, addressed the initiates, reminding them they had become part of an organization with well over a million members... an organization that would care for their children should their own lives be cut short. He explained the part Mooseheart and Moosehaven play in the ideals and lives of members of the fraternity. Candidates for enrollment from the Greenville lodge included the following: Jack W. Barnes, Edgar C. Lucas, W. N. Jackson Jr., D. E. Harding.

Representatives and initiates of four lodges gathered here last night to honor Clayton J. Crooks, Supreme Governor, Loyal Order of Moose in his five-state Southern tour. The occasion also marked the 43rd anniversary of Goldsboro Lodge No. 661. Crooks has been touring Moose lodges in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina. He is scheduled to visit Richmond, Va. Saturday and Sunday. Greenville Lodge 885 was represented at the affair with a delegation of 32 members and 23 candidates for the special enrollment ceremonial. Prior to Crooks' Southern tour he was quoted as saying "I am looking forward to visiting the most outstanding area in the Moose domain. I want to find out what makes you fellows tick so well." In Goldsboro, he praised the extent of civic affairs activities he had encountered, and remarked that "I am astonished so many lodges are actively participating in sponsorship of the annual Cancer Crusade."

THE HAUNTED STARS

by EDMOND HAMILTON

From the novel published by Torquell Books; © 1960 by Edmond Hamilton; Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Mentally Robert Fairlie lived in a world apart from most men. He was so devoted to and immersed in his abstract scientific studies that he paid little attention to what was affecting his neighbors in New England in the year 1966. Even the tremendous excitement of others in rival landings of United States and Russian astronauts on the moon, and the resultant heightening of tension between the two earthly powers, had not touched him. Thus he did not attach special significance to the sudden summons that came to him from Washington to assist with his vast knowledge of philology, a new project of the Smithsonian Institution. Only when he was met at Washington Airport, hastened to an Air Force jet, and told he was being rushed to Morrow, a rocket base in New Mexico, was he stirred out of his indifference to what was happening around him. At Morrow Base he learned that space had been conquered long ago by races who had once populated the armed Gassendi, a crater on the moon. Fairlie and three other linguists were drawn into the project to decipher the writing found on Gassendi.

CHAPTER 6

Glenn DeWitt looked intently at Bob Fairlie and said, "One thing the Ur-men did before evacuating Gassendi was to remove any machines that had escaped damage when the base was shattered. Nothing was left that an enemy might turn to his own use — then."

"But now?" asked Fairlie, knowing that it was expected of him.

"Now an enemy—our enemy—could learn a whole new technology from the wreckage in that base, the machines, the generators, the ships—starships, Fairlie, not just little rockets that have all they can do to jump across the tiny crack that separates us from the moon. I just want you to think about that, turn it over in your mind, picture a fleet of ships with somebody else's flag on them, a hostile flag, heading out from Earth. Out from Earth, out from the Solar System, clear out."

His hand made a curving gesture in the air and something about it, coupled with the strange look that had come into DeWitt's eyes and the odd quiet tone of his voice, hit Fairlie with a tremendous impact. For a second the prosaic laboratory was gone and he saw the ships, the vast dark, mighty shadows against the stars, heading out.

"Out," he asked, "to where?"

In that same remote and quiet voice DeWitt answered, "It must have occurred to you that the Ur-men came to our Solar System from somewhere."

"Oh no," Fairlie said. He laughed. "But of course that's impossible. Not their coming, I mean, but our going—anybody going—that far. Not now, at least. Not for many years."

DeWitt turned to Fairlie and smiled. "That depends on you."

He turned away and Fairlie watched him walk across the narrow room to the rack and take from it one of the silvery balls. "I told you I didn't want any more tapes this time," Fairlie said angrily.

DeWitt's voice was perfectly casual when he answered. "This isn't a message recording. Purely an entertainment piece. They left behind a lot of non-essential stuff like that—probably the most important records went with them. I just thought you might like to hear this. Give you a little different slant on the Ur-men, their aesthetic rather than their warlike and-or mechanical side."

The tiny ball began to turn on its slender pin.

A sound came into the laboratory, the feather-edge of a clear wind blowing across the stars. It came out of infinity, very sweet and distant, and you could hear it coming closer and it was almost more than you could bear, this clear whistling soaring and falling with such joyous purity, and what kind of an instrument made it, anyway—an organ-pipe, a flute, a harp? No, none of these. Something strange, something never played on Earth, and yet there were echoes.

The tears sprang to his eyes and the sound swooped down the whole long curve of the galaxy in a beautiful descending trill and then passed on, receding into the infinity from which it came.

Before it was quite lost, the woman began to sing.

She called to the wandering star-wind and it answered her from far off. She called again and it came to her with a leap and a trill clear back across the galaxy, and Fairlie thought that anything even a wind, would come to the calling of that voice.

It was round and full, produced with such ease that the tone was like warm silver, never pinched or strained, never shrill. The voice and the wind began to talk to each other—without words, but there was no need of words. The pattern of sound was simple, almost antique, but indescribably beautiful. Then the call-and-response became more complex and before the listening ear was aware of the change other voices had joined in, on the side of the wind—instrumental voices of such strangeness that Fairlie could not even guess how the sounds were produced.

He listened and in his mind's eye he could see the woman—not clearly, but he knew that she was beautiful—standing on a high place singing and tell about her a beat and whirl and flash of wings, now dark, now shining, as the clustered stars swooped down and sang around her.

The silence when it was all over was a shock to Fairlie's ears.

"Effective, isn't it?" DeWitt said, and the ball stopped turning. "Remarkably human voice, too—just like the man's. Their vocal equipment couldn't have been too different from ours. Well, I still have a session with Speer ahead of me." He commenced deftly to pack up the alien recorder and the rack of silver balls. "Think over what we've been talking about, Fairlie. Call me when you're ready for more tapes. And let me know immediately if you come up with anything."

He was gone before Fairlie could wrench his stupefied brain back into its proper channel. And long after the door closed Fairlie was still thinking about the woman on the mountain-top singing to the stars.

He did not get much work done the rest of the day. He did not sleep very well that night, nor the night after that, and when he did he saw visions of such strangeness that he started up from them wide-awake and sweating. He began to work with a new intensity, harder than he had ever worked in his life before, but there was little joy in it.

He saw very little of the others, and when he did see them he thought that they too were laboring under the same fear, the same urgent hunger as himself. Oddly in those first weeks, nobody mentioned any of the terrifying implications that DeWitt had brought up to Fairlie and so presumably to the others as well. Fairlie wanted to talk about these things desperately, but whenever he tried he knew he could not because he had not yet really accepted them himself.

The ships will go out. Somebody's ships, theirs or ours. The stars are waiting, and it depends on you.

And time went on. Fairlie and Speer carried out their phonematic analyses independently. At the same time Bo-ly, were working on a glossematic analysis of the written Ur-speech, glossemes being the smallest unit of significant meaning just as the phonemes were the smallest unit of meaningful sound. There was not, of course, any discussion between them about how their separate jobs were progressing.

Fairlie made his graphs and marked out his probable phonemes and checked and compared and did it all over again, knowing all the time that if his findings did not check with Speer's, or if the glossematic analysis failed to show any results, the labor was all for nothing.

There were many times when he thought that that would be a good thing and prayed for it to happen.

There were other times when he was sick with apprehension that the secret of the Ur-men would remain locked away forever in incomprehensible speech and undecipherable writing.

These were the times when he listened to the singing of the Ur-woman. He did this more and more often, and it was increasingly difficult to make himself understand that the singer had been dead for thirty thousand years. The voice was there, alive and ringing, and it called to him.

Panelists Talk Hobbies At Elmhurst PTA Meeting

Four panel members discussed their hobbies in nature study of astronomy at the Elmhurst P.T.A.'s meeting last night, held with a record attendance in the Elmhurst School auditorium.

Dr. Harry Billica was introduced as panel moderator for the program, "Astronomy and Nature Study for the Family."

Mrs. Craven Hughes discussed her interest in collecting, sorting and mounting sea shells. She told the audience that she became fascinated with various types of sea shells "after being forced to study this subject to keep up with my children's inquiries."

"Birds" was the topic selected by Mrs. Ruth Billica, who now observes 40 to 60 different species of birds in her own yard during one day. Her family has set up feeding stations in order to help the study of migrating and witnessing the many transients that stop off for refreshments.

Ted Ashworth led the discussion from the ground into outer space, in explaining how he used his powerful telescope to observe the heavenly bodies. Even without the aid of a telescope, Ashworth stated that there is much for all ages to enjoy in learning to recognize these "outer space" bodies and to predict their direction of movement in relation to the earth.

Author of "Developmental Science Series," Dr. A. D. Bond of East Carolina College made a few comments on the joy of families' collecting not only dead specimens of reptiles and insects to be mounted, but also of raising live ones. One can observe various stages of development through actual observation, he said.

A question and answer period was directed by Dr. Billica following the program.

Aerial Rescue For Crewman Of Sunken Tugboat

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — A Coast Guard helicopter today rescued one of two crewmen aboard the Tugboat Fisher 15 which capsized and sank near the mouth of North River in Albemarle Sound.

Coast Guard aircraft were dispatched today after receiving a call from Ed Green, an Elizabeth City private pilot, who reported seeing a man waving to his airplane from a fishing camp.

The man, who was taken to the Elizabeth City Coast Guard hospital for treatment of minor shock, was identified as John M. Creef, 49, of Mann's Harbor.

However, neither the tugboat nor the other crewman, Granberry Dowdy of Manteo were spotted.

A Coast Guard spokesman said Creef left the stricken vessel Thursday morning when it capsized in rough water and swam to shore. Creef reported that Dowdy remained aboard the vessel.

Redevelopment Data Is Prepared

Redevelopment commissioners yesterday made plans for distributing various brochures and pamphlets in support of urban redevelopment - public housing prior to the May 2 referendum.

Included are plans for distributing printed information to civic clubs and mailing of pamphlets to box holders throughout the city.

The commission agreed to refer Attorney Milton C. Williamson to the appropriate public statutes for answers to a list of questions. Williamson, who is associated with a group opposing urban renewal and public housing, had submitted the list of questions to Executive Director William Cochran.

"Some of the questions go into minute detail and would probably require two or three days work," Cavendish said. He expressed the opinion that the executive director should not be required to spend much time preparing the answers.

However, he instructed Cochran to cite the proper codes to Williamson which would answer the various questions.

Commissioners agreed to requisition an additional $5,990 in federal funds for continued operation of the Redevelopment Commission. This brings to $16,878 the amount requisitioned so far.

Approval of $1,200 payment to the firm of Godwin and Bell for surveys done in connection with Shore Drive Redevelopment area planning was given.

Bonn To Join In Global Program

BONN, Germany (AP)—West Germany has decided tentatively to provide about 2.5 billion marks ($625 million) a year in aid to underdeveloped countries, informed sources reported today.

The figure is roughly in line with the U.S. recommendation that the more advanced Western nations devote about one per cent of their gross national product annually to development aid. West Germany's gross national product came to 270 billion marks ($67.5 billion) in 1960.

The informed sources said the government's intention will be made public in Parliament April 21 in answer to questions on development aid raised earlier by the opposition Socialists.

West Germany presented a billion-dollar development aid program last November when Robert B. Anderson, then U.S. secretary of the Treasury, came to Bonn seeking help for the U.S. aid burden. But the billion dollars was to be spent over an indefinite period, and the United States kept urging a change in plans.
