shot of his Redstone rocket—were a major step for the U. S. man in space program, aimed at putting a man in orbit before the year is out.

made no mention of his attempting to control his spaceship Vostok. If the Soviet Union was reluctant to credit the feat, Shepard's hometown of Derry, N. H., was not.

Shepard will have to wait until his trip to Washington to be reunited with his parents and his wife. While the parents were tensely watching their son's exploit on television at Derry, Shepard's wife, Louise, and their two children watched on TV, too, at their Virginia Beach, Va., home.

They explain that Shepard, a former Navy test pilot, looks at his rocket flight with the same eyes in which he sees test of high performance aircraft. Perhaps that explains Shepard's calm voice back from space saying: "What a beautiful sight."

"We have a long way to go in the field of space," said Kennedy. "We are behind, but we are working hard and we are going to increase our efforts."

aboard, carrying him some four miles to the aircraft carrier Lake Champlain. Less than 3 1/2 hours after the launching, Shepard was at Grand Bahama Island, flown there by Navy planes.

the flight was apparently during the encountering of the forces that crushed Shepard back into his seat during reentry—forces 11 times as powerful as gravity.

Collins Speaks To Book Club

Mr. Jay Collins, graduate student at East Carolina College, was guest speaker for the Sappho Book Club when it met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Enul Willis with Mrs. Francis Worsley assisting hostess.

After a three-course luncheon, Mr. Collins gave a talk on "Extra Sensory Perception." He commented that we use only a small part of our brain. Interested persons experimenting with E.S.P. are hoping in some way to connect it with our sub-conscious mind and make use of the dormant part of our brain.

The main idea, he stated further, is that E.S.P. is a tool or method that is being sought out with the hope that it can be used to an advantage, especially in the treatment of psychiatric patients. Mrs. L. E. Ward, president, conducted a routine business session. She read the new committees for 1961-62.

Books were distributed and the meeting was adjourned.

Largely Resigned To Tax Increase

North Carolina's General Assembly already has resolved many major issues which confronted it at the outset of the current session, but among those major problems yet to be solved is one which confronts every session. It is the problem of money.

Most citizens of the state, and most members of the General Assembly, we believe, are resigned to the fact that there must be some tax increases—or at least new revenue sources—for the state during the coming biennium in order for North Carolina to move forward at the pace it desired. How much new revenue will be required depends, of course, upon what the General Assembly approves in the way of spending plans for the next two years, and what it estimates the revenue from existing levies to be.

Two years ago the legislature went along with the proposal of Gov. Hodges to use a non-recurring windfall of revenue from the withholding tax plan to meet operating expenses. In doing this, the necessity to seek out other new sources of revenue was avoided. Such a course is, of course, not open to the 1961 General Assembly, and even if it were, we believe the majority of the citizens of the state would be opposed to it.

While neither the citizens of the state nor members of the General Assembly want any tax increases above that which is necessary for the desired rate of progress for the state, it is important that the legislature not over estimate revenues from existing tax levies in order to shave the requirements of new tax levies.

Latest reports on the state's revenue for the current fiscal year show that for the first 10 months collections are well in line with estimates made by the General Assembly two years ago. On the basis of these figures, it is also indicated that those who projected estimated revenues for the coming biennium, when preparing the budget for General Assembly consideration, put their estimates about as high as sound reasoning would permit.

In view of this the 1961 General Assembly should not yield to the temptation to use unreasonably high estimates of revenues from existing tax sources to remove—on paper, at least—the need for additional revenue sources to carry out the state programs that are finally adopted. Whatever spending program the legislators approve, they have the responsibility to the people to adopt a tax program which will provide sufficient revenue to balance expenditures.

Steam-Rolled Report On Bill

By LYNN NISBET
WAGES — The eastern farm group took control of a short-member committee Thursday and steam-rolled an unfavorable report on the bill extending coverage of the minimum wage law, a bill which Governor Sanford had publicly endorsed. Its effect would be to extend the State 75 cent hourly minimum wage to all employees of business places with three or more workers. The present law covers only those working in places with more than five employees.

The scene was the committee room in the Labor Building where the House committee on manufacturing and labor was meeting, Chairman Joe Watkins of Granville presiding. The meeting had been scheduled for 10:30, and at exactly that time Rep. Ashley Murphy of Pender insisted on starting, despite the fact that about half the members had not time to get there from committee meetings. As other members of the committee were called to order, Murphy got the floor and said the bill had been fully discussed and every member knew about it, so he moved an unfavorable report. Rep. Danny Courtney of Caldwell offered a substitute motion for a favorable report. Rep. Hugh Johnson of Duplin quickly moved that Courtney's motion "do lie upon the table." That motion is not debatable, and it carried by substantial margin on a voice vote.

Meantime, committee members were coming in, most of them not knowing just what was going on. Several came in after the standing count vote of 16 to 9 had been recorded for an unfavorable report on the bill. That accounted for 25 of the 38 members of the committee.

Both sides—those who favored the bill and those who opposed it—had prepared minority reports, just in case, and in less than three minutes the minority report had sufficient signatures to get it reported to the House.

STRATEGY—When the committee report was read, Rep. John Kennedy of Mecklenburg moved that the minority report go on the calendar for consideration next Thursday, May 11. That motion prevailed, and the big argument will come then. The vote may be close, but opponents of the extension of coverage concede that if the original bill gets on the floor for a full House vote it is very likely to be adopted. If it isn't, the failure will count as a major defeat for the Sanford administration.

There is evidence that "hoss-trading" on redistricting and tax bills may have as much influence on the final minimum wage vote as will the prestige of the Governor's office.

RE-DISTRICTING—Although it had been known for months before the 1961 General Assembly convened that the apportionment of members of the Legislature and re-districting for seats in the Congress would be major issues, very little real progress can be reported after three months.

The bill calling for automatic reallocation of members of the House of Representatives after census bogged down in controversy over the meaning of the word "enumeration" in the bill—which is the same term used in the United States Constitution since 1789 and in the North Carolina Constitution since 1835. There has never been any question that it meant the count of people in the census as ordered by Congress every ten years. When some members expressed fear that the word "enumeration" might include the count of sheep or automobiles, the committee voted to defer vote on the bill until next week.

CONGRESS—Of far more serious import to the state at large, though perhaps no more to certain counties, is the problem of aligning congressional districts to provide for 11 Representatives instead of 12 in the Congress. If the state is not redistricted before next year's election, all 11 congressmen will have to be elected at large—meaning that every voter in all of North Carolina will have a voice in selecting a district. Unanimous opinion of the committee was that this would be "bad." The committee did not show much disposition to get together and work out a districting bill. Rep. Leonard Lloyd of Graham very frankly stated he approached the matter from a selfish and partisan viewpoint.

Rep. John Kerr of Warren raised the question about the juggling of his district under the proposed bills. Rep. Pat Taylor of Anson said he thought the question ought to be approached from the angle of what is best for the whole state. Rep. Roger Jackson of Hertford reminded that the pay-time for legislators is running short, and he urged more frequent meetings and fuller discussion of the problem, including joint sessions with the Senate Committee.

All of which means that very little real progress has been made toward solving the redistricting problem during three months of the session.

And John Sanders, assistant director of the Institute of Government, who has done most of the research and map-making for the committees, said he was thinking about putting a sign on his door advising that "Custom gerrymandering is provided here."

Accomplished--With World Looking On

The United States' first spaceman has successfully completed his assigned flight and while the accomplishment does not match the Soviet's manned orbit of last month, the feat does put the United States back into the space race.

Significance must also be attached to the fact that the United States did not conduct its first manned space flight secretly, but provided live radio and television coverage of the test both in this country and abroad. This factor was evidence of the confidence of American scientists and officials in the success of the test and likewise indicated to the world that the United States was ready to openly allow the world to know of its success, or failure in the test if that had been the case.

Such an attitude on the part of the United States is bound to make an impression in other nations when contrasted with the tight security which surrounded the first manned space flight announced by the Soviets.

Friday's accomplishment marks a new high point in the efforts of the United States to advance in its space program. It opens the way for further and more complicated manned space probes and it puts the United States within striking distance of the Soviets in this young space age. At the same time it offers a new challenge to this nation to accelerate the pace of its space program, eliminating costly delays in planning and development in order that greater accomplishments can be achieved in the future.

Although the manned space flight successfully conducted by the United States this week does not overshadow that of the Soviets, it is of tremendous importance to this nation as well as to the world.

Rusk Continues Fairly Unknown

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — How does Secretary of State Dean Rusk look after his first 3½ months in office?

He's still pretty much an unknown quantity because he's not very talkative, he's not dramatic, and he lets President Kennedy make the big pronouncements.

That's a switch. The late, controversial John Foster Dulles — secretary of state through most of the Eisenhower administration — was just the opposite.

He had a lot to say, was dramatic, and seemed to make foreign policy for President Eisenhower.

Rusk has had four news conferences since Jan. 20, just as many as Dulles in the same length of time. But that's no basis for comparison.

Rusk and Dulles took office under different circumstances. When Dulles became secretary of state the situation was: The United States was at war in Korea; Sen. Joseph McCarthy was still making the State Department his No. 1 punching bag in his anti-Communist project; and this country was still the No. 1 military power.

This was the situation confronting Rusk. Russia was now the military equal if not the superior of the United States; the influence of communism around the world had vastly increased; and as a result Rusk had to be less belligerent and flamboyant than Dulles.

But the pressures on Dulles were more visible.

By necessity, he had to take actions and positions on both Korea and McCarthy almost daily. This alone would have kept him more in the public eye and provided more insight into him than Rusk's position.

When Dulles was different. With President Eisenhower, reluctant to get into controversies affecting foreign policy, now it's Kennedy who takes them, not Rusk.

It may turn out that Rusk is the most mature and best-balanced of Kennedy's advisors, although neither Rusk, nor Kennedy nor anyone else looked good in this government's approval of the Cuban invasion which turned into disaster.

In short, compared with Dulles, Rusk looks gray. But coloration doesn't necessarily involve judgment. And any decision on Rusk's judgment will require more evidence than is publicly available now.

The public would be in a much better position to appraise Rusk if the Kennedy administration was ever willing to reveal just what role Rusk played in the Cuban decision.

Strength For Today

COMPANY IN THE HOUSE
"It's good for us to have company occasionally," a friend of mine remarked to his wife, looking around their living room as they awaited the guests. "It makes us get everything cleaned up."
It is good for all of us to have company in our lives — to have our actions, words, and thoughts exposed to other people. Living alone, cut off from others, is very dangerous. From time to time, we have all known occasional odd figures who lived by themselves and made only rare appearances in public, queer and strange in their clothing and behavior.
But eccentricity is not the only

Different From Most

This last election night in The Reflector newsroom was different from most.

For one thing, there was no compiling of votes as precincts or wards reported in.

The system of having all voters cast their ballots at one place did away with our usual tabulating chairs and machines and worried expressions. Too, the installing of a public address system and communications with the out-of-doors tallying board wasn't necessary this time around.

Something else was missing: That was the familiar anticipatory waiting for wards or precincts to report.

By the very nature of things, a community's wards are identified in the political mind as distinctive insofar as the makeup of its voting citizens are concerned.

For instance, the First Ward may be privately considered to be more likely to vote a certain way than Fourth Ward. But this is never certain, so speculation runs rife in the hours of waiting: for the final outcome may well hinge on the degree political units voted "right" or "wrong." The tensions can become very high.

All this was missing Tuesday night because after the first couple hundred votes were counted we had a fair cross-section of voting opinion.

Not even the most avid ear-to-grounder will go so far out of his everlovin' mind as to work up a case of nerves over how the A-D box is going to go as compared with E-J.

The writer couldn't help but feel some would-be habitués of smoke-filled rooms looked on Tuesday's balloting system as cutting the ground out from under the most enjoyed features of election night. I remember one low-keyed, wistful voice Tuesday night saying "I sure hope they don't do it this way again."

Answering the telephone to either take returns or report them to inquirers proved to be an easy way of spending the evening though hoarseness did begin to settle in about midnight.

By the time the counting ended in the early Wednesday hours, there were recurrent thoughts of how easy and quickly the process would have been handled with voting machines.

Staying up 'til 3:00 a.m. in the middle of the week can be wearing.

Still, it's done New Year's Eve (sometimes), and on Mortgage-Burning Eve (a rare occasion) so why not election nights? They're pretty well dispersed... not much danger of their falling into a rut, either.

Lack Of Desire To Win

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

There is no use going into a fight unless the intention is to win. To lose is to strengthen the enemy. The only reason why Soviet Russia has defeated the United States in Korea, Cuba, Laos, as we shall lose in other parts of the world, is that the Russians are intent and aggressive whereas the United States prefers to retreat, to abnegate, to avoid direct action, to talk, talk, talk until the vapor of words fills the air.

All this talk of doing nothing about Cuba is childish because if the United States does not do something about Cuba, the Russians, using Cuba as a fortress, will do something about the United States. The logic which produced our defeat in Korea, is the same logic which produced our defeat in Cuba. The same men who brought about our defeat in Korea are bringing on our defeat in Cuba.

The argument runs that if we protect the United States in Cuba, Soviet Russia will seize Berlin. In fact, Khrushchev said so. The answer to that can only be, "seize and be damned." Those who are afraid are already dead. When a nation shudders at the thought of war, it is already in the process of being conquered.

This is the basis of Soviet strategy against the United States. It is to defeat us step by step without war and to isolate us. In Laos, the British confused us by the proposition that they would act as brokers to effectuate a truce. Meanwhile, the Red Chinese-directed Laotian rebels steadily moved forward. The game is nearly over but the truce is still in the making. Perhaps, we shall get around to a truce when the Red Chinese invade into Cambodia and Thailand. Shall we retreat from there, too?

If we have neither the courage nor the technique to defend our word, why don't we quit altogether? The Russians will isolate us in a year or two unless we choose a place to fight them and stop this process. It is our isolation that is the target. The Russians and Red Chinese are not wasting time with petty conversations either at the United Nations or any other conference. While they make speeches, they also march forward.

Their argument is: "You want to talk, so talk. We have plenty of delegates to send to meetings. Let them talk. It counts for nothing but you Westerners are so bogged down in a swamp of words that you talk because it gives you pleasure, like a debating society in college. You talk to each other and you talk to us. But we are very busy men."

"With us, it is different. We are attention to business. Our business is your business. It does not matter. We have men for talking and men for acting. If we have a man who jumps on a horse and rides furiously until he comes to a ditch; then he turns around and goes back slowly — if we have such a man, like some of our colleagues were, we send them far away. We do not need those who dare not take the next inevitable step. We get rid of them."

"The West objects that Khrushchev said, 'We will bury you.' So, he talked too much! So what! You are burying yourself by being afraid. And the more afraid you are, the more we will say, 'Boo!'"

And it is all a correct position. Our President has chosen as his advisers those who advised President Roosevelt and President Truman. The results of their period of political activity have thus far been disastrous. During his campaign, President Kennedy said that we had reached a low prestige. He would raise our prestige, but many of those whom he chose to help him raise our prestige were among those who helped lower our prestige.

President John F. Kennedy is nobody's fool. Sooner or later, he will weary of the supercilious advice which he receives from those who are always proved to be wrong by the course of events. He will ask himself why the course of events proves them to be wrong. He will then set up his own policy without the counsellors of defeat. When he does, the United States will again go forward. It will not go forward by retreating.

Other Editors Saying Urban Renewal & Housing

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
Greenville Tuesday narrowly approved in a straw vote a plan for possible urban renewal and public housing in that city.

A strong contingent of Greenville citizens contended that local enterprise could rise to the problem and solve sub-standard housing problems. Others felt the community should take advantage of federal aid to eradicate slums and halt neighborhood deterioration.

Regardless of the outcome of that particular issue, it is evident that the matter of sub-standard housing does frequently arise from community to community around the country and will continue to do so.

Rocky Mount established public housing projects here in recent years and has discussed the possibility of urban renewal in the near future.

Propaganda files from both camps whenever this issue arises. Whether the issue ever arises depends upon how well private enterprise solves the problem of inadequate housing before it gets to the point that the threat of federal aid is applied.

All probably would agree they prefer not to have to seek federal aid if the problem can be solved without it. So, one incentive to rental property owners — particularly those who take unfair advantage of their position — has aroused considerable excitement and enthusiasm among authorities throughout the country. It might bring eventual relief in the problem.

A whole lot of people apparently have suddenly discovered a connection between low taxes on slums and their perpetuation.

Our national magazine declared last year that a slum landlord has so little incentive to improve his property that often only the federal government can afford to build new middle-income housing on slum sites. Poor people pay too-high rents in slum properties where the up-keep is now because no improvements are made. The city government light taxes because it is slum property. The federal government gives him a tax write-off on income tax for "depreciation" as the property falls in worse and worse condition.

After he gets maximum depreciation, he then can sell out to someone else, who then goes through the process again until 100 per cent depreciation is reached on the price he paid for the property.

In many such cases, slum properties are gold mines! Arthur Rubloff, a Chicago builder, wrote in Look Magazine that "The very same joy that spend billions to eradicate slum blight with one hand are rewarding the slum landlord with the other."

One author in another magazine said, "The federal government, with fancy words about eradicating slums and helping the poor, pours billions into the cities for building and rebuilding. The nation's taxpayers pay the cost."

If the property owners — as an incentive — are hit where it hurts they will do something about their slum properties. Perhaps governments could find a better approach to slum eradication by putting heavier taxes on slum land and lighter taxes on good buildings to discourage slum profiteers.

Variety Of Business Bulletins

By ELMER ROESSNER
Here are business bulletins that are (1) significant, (2) profit-indicating, (3) interesting and (4) just amusing:

If you've muddled your income tax report again, remember that no matter what happens, the government won't seize $250 worth of tools and books you need in your business; ordinary clothing, school books; up to $500 worth of fuel, provision, furniture and personal effects if you are the head of a household; your unemployment checks; and wax castings, an art form used by Beaufort Cellini, is now used by Austenal Co., Dover, N.J., to make parts for gas turbine engines. A survey shows that ginger ale is more popular than club soda as a mixer. The Oklahoma Supreme Court has declared that state's "fair trade" act unconstitutional. Eggs washed in cater containing iron spoil faster. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has discovered... The typical magazine last year had profits of only 3.3 per cent of revenue... A bill increasing taxes on stock option plans has been proposed by Senator Albert Gore (D. Tenn.).

Communist China's meat exports are decreasing. Imported cars took 10.2 per cent of the U.S. market in 1959 and 7.6 per cent in 1960... Ah, compact! A home for the aged that cares for old people at less than cost is exempt from Federal income taxes... Trampolines are a generic word, not a trademark. A Federal Court in Des Moines has ruled... WHERE THERE'S SMOKE... Sales of cigarettes in Japan have risen about 50 per cent since 1958... About 20 million pounds of meat are now en route from New Zealand to American ports... Of wives interviewed in a national survey, 42 per cent said husbands cooked. Federal excise now bear on 800 products, transactions and services. Galvanized steel constituted 8 pounds in the typical auto in 1954 but is more than 100 pounds of today's auto... The United States is buying more boneless beef from Ireland... By storing oil in tanks in marshy ground and other waste areas, oil companies can free valuable acreage now occupied by tanks, says David M. Greer, consulting engineer. ECONOMIC TURN The 350th anniversary of tobacco will be celebrated in Jamestown next year. It was in 1612 that the first crop was harvested there, saving the British colony from bankruptcy. Members and wives of the North Carolina state legislature were feted by the Hanes hosiery mills as a gesture of appreciation of the state's favorable tax policy toward industry... Sixty-nine rest areas will be established along Pennsylvania's section of the new Federal highway system. The first automatic bowling alley has been opened in Japan. The world's crop of hazel nuts is small this year, Hazel... This year's Soviet Russia's wheat crop is the lowest since 1955... In five years, all shopping centers and discount houses will be open every night and all day Sundays and holidays, predicts Richard L. Nelson, president of Real Estate Research Corp., Chicago. IRS OFF-ON CABARETS The Internal Revenue Service has thrown a scoop of Federal cement into a neat tax loophole. As nightclubs know, the cabaret tax applies when there is entertainment with the food and refreshments. But some cabarets have hit upon this procedure: They submit bills for meals without tax before the floor show, charge tax on refreshments served during entertainment, and present no-tax bills for drinks thereafter. Although the Court of Appeals upheld one cabaret using this system, the IRS refuses to go along and says (in Rev. Rul. 61-61) charge cabaret taxes all along or sue.

MISENHEIMER — Pfeiffer College, the newest member of the North State Conference, handed East Carolina's baseball nine its first league setback yesterday on the latter's diamond to avenge an earlier loss to the Pirates. The Falcons' outscored East Carolina 9-8 in a real thriller that went right down to the wire.

The Pirates fought back from a 6-0 deficit in the fifth inning to knot the count. The Bucs scored one in the fourth and added five more in the fifth to tie the score.

In a brilliant role, East Carolina pushed across two more runs in the seventh to take an 8-6 lead, but the Pfeiffer team refused to bow to the blow of the Pirates, and struck back with three runs of their own in their half of the seventh, enough for the winning margin.

Winning pitcher, Dick Pine, who had faced the Pirates in their first encounter, gave up nine hits and issued five free passes. Four of the Pirates' hits went for extra bases. Nathan Greene was slapped with his first loss in collegiate baseball, bringing his record to 3-1 this season. The strong right-hander had trouble getting the Pfeiffer batters to keep his pitches inside the park. Greene gave up three home runs in the nine inning affair, though as Pirate Coach Jim Mallory put it, "He had real good stuff on the ball, but every time he threw a high one they knocked it out of the park." Dan Rouse, a sophomore right-hander, relieved Greene in the eighth, and managed to limit the Falcons to two hits and no runs in that frame.

A walk, a single, a fielder's choice and a sacrifice fly gave the Bucs one run in the fourth, and five more in the fifth tied the score.

In the fifth, the Bucs scored five runs off three hits, including a bases loaded triple by first sacker Jim Martin.

Falcon, Homer Brawley, was the big hitter for the winners, blasting two home runs in three trips to the plate, and accounting for three rbi's. His four baggers were back to back, in the first and third innings.

Catcher, Vince Hoch also clobbered another four bagger for Pfeiffer in the third with two mates aboard. It was the third inning that the Falcons pushed across five big runs.

The Pirates host Catawba's Indians tonight in another North State battle to be played on the Guy Smith Stadium field at 8:00 p.m. Mallory is expected to send his mound ace, Larry Crayton to toe the rubber in the nine inning affair. Crayton is the best in the Pirate camp, sporting a 6-1 record this season.

It is expected that the Indians will send their best, Horace Medford to the mound against the Bucs. It was the tall right-hander who handed the defending North State Champs their only two conference losses last season, however, the Pirates handed Medford his first college loss in sixteen starts earlier this season at Salisbury by a 19-5 score.

The Greenville Phantoms rolled over Kinston 6-1 here yesterday in an afternoon baseball game at Guy Smith Stadium.

Joyner and James started the Phantoms toward the win in the first inning when they each scored a run for Greenville. They were followed closely by Anderson and Hardee with two runs in the second inning to bring the Phantoms to a 4-0 lead.

Unable to answer the Phantom challenge, the Kinston club trailed without scoring a run until the sixth inning when Greenville again scored. This time Joyner and James repeated their first inning performance and came home for the Phantoms.

With Greenville leading 6-0 Kinston opened the last inning by scoring one run, their only one in the game. King made the rounds for the single Red Devil run.

Denny Hardee pitched the entire game for Greenville, allowing the Red Devils to get only six hits, and giving them three walks. The Kinston club did not get over one hit per inning from Hardee.

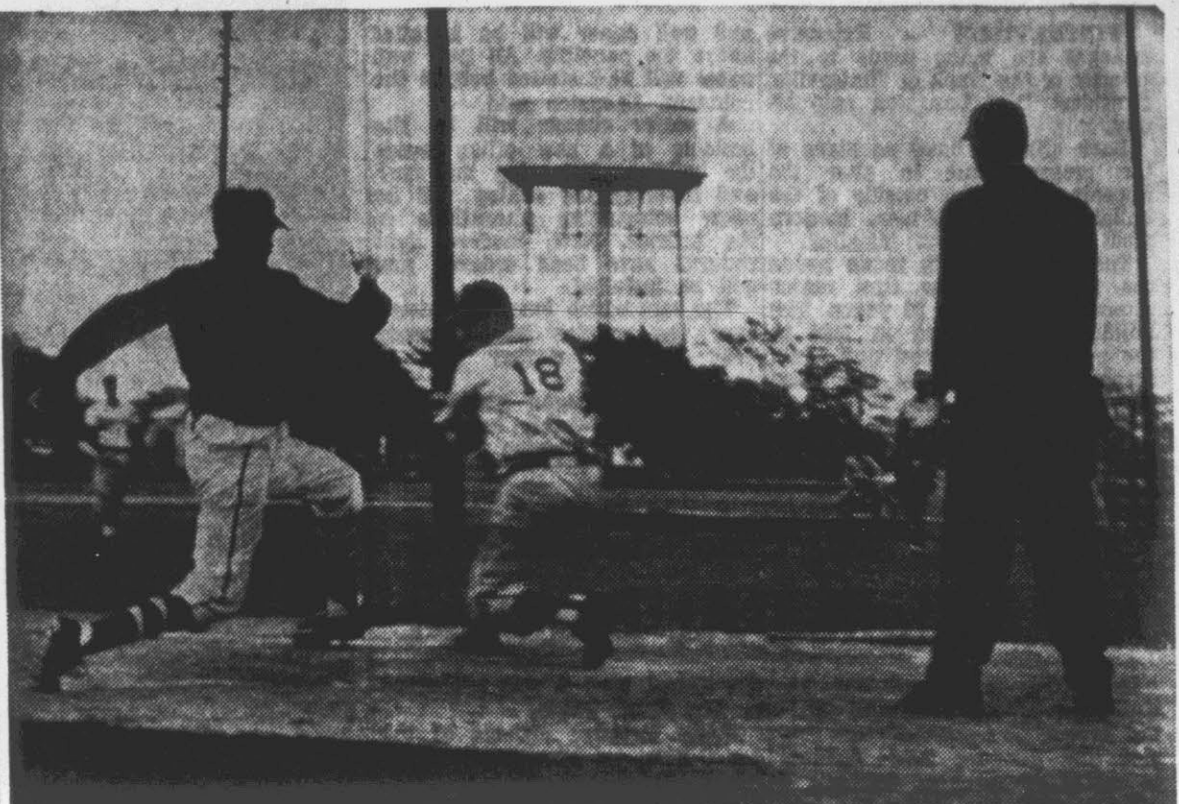

Sutton took the mound for Kinston until the fifth inning when he was replaced by Biddle. The Phantoms made a fast double play against Kinston in the third inning, firing the ball from Leon Williamson to Billy Williamson to James for an out.

Yesterday's victory brings the Greenville club to a 5-2 conference standing and leaves them with two games to play this season.

The Phantoms will meet Elizabeth City here Tuesday afternoon and will travel to Kinston for a final game Thursday night.

UN-SAFE GAS CURERS

Don't Burn Up Your Profits

Reports have come in from Wilson, Greene and Pitt Counties that 10 Barns Burned by one make of gas curer during the 1960 curing season that were equipped with old fashion gas curers using 9 to 16 burner units with small heatspreaders. Names and addresses of farmers who lost the barns are available and there are many more barns that were burned that have not been reported in the above counties.

Any Gas Curer that has no Automatic Safety Shut-off at the burner or means for relighting the burner can not be classed as a safe gas curer.

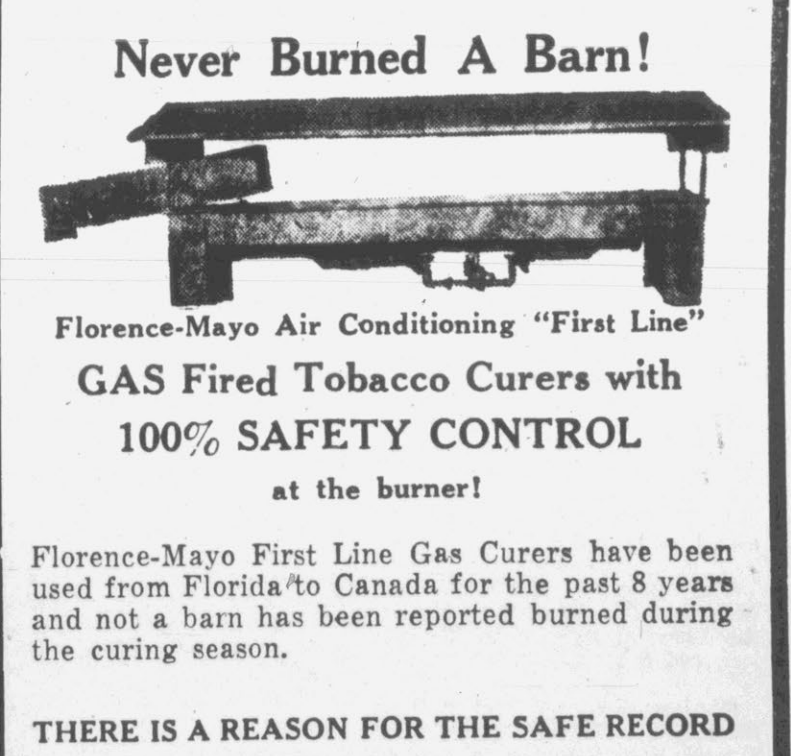

A number of operators have been seriously burned by flash fires who were using such curers. Reports have come in from various sections of the Tobacco Belts that gas curers of the above type have a high fire loss record.

Curing cost with old fashion gas curers using 9 to 16 burner units is from $30 to $60 per barn from reports.

Tobacco farmers are losing over $300,000 annually by barn fires caused by the one make and type of curer described above.

- Engineered for more economical operation.

In the past 25 years there has never been a farmer burned by a flash fire who was using a Florence-Mayo Curer.

Interior Alterations In The Bank Of Winterville

WINTERVILLE — Extensive changes are being made to the interior of the Bank of Winterville, President Don Langston said today.

Bank officials have no plans at the present time to alter the appearance of the outside of the building, though a new, modern front door has been installed.

The changes being made inside the bank mark the first major alterations in some 35 years. The building was erected in 1922 at the corner of Railroad and Main Streets, and stands at the same spot of its origin.

Some of the changes include walnut paneling in the front lobby, and wall paper will be installed above the paneling. All new wall paper will be installed behind the counters, Langston said.

A major change will be the building of a new office inside the building. Enlarging the vault and lowering the ceiling will be other outstanding alterations in the interior. New, modern light fixtures have been ordered and will be installed.

The bars which formerly existed over the counter have already been removed, further sign of change.

Renovations began about April 26 and will probably be finished about May 17, Langston concluded.

Banker Opines Soviet Outsaving United States

"Russia is not outspending the United States, but rather out-saving us," a North Carolina banker told members of the Society for Advancement of Management at East Carolina College here this week.

Lewis R. Holding, president of the First Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Smithfield, addressed the group of students and faculty members of the college school of Business Friday at the regular monthly meeting of the organization in the Rawl building. His topic was "Opportunities in Banking."

"The United States is running short on investment funds for industry," he stated, "whereas Russians are saving a good portion of their income and reinvesting. This allows their financial system to turn these savings into capital for production," he said.

Willoughby D. Ferebee of New Bern, president of the organization, presided at the meeting.

Small Places, But Big Enough To Own A Name

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

As you drive around the country side on these spring days, you often wonder about the small places you happen upon.

Mostly they consist of a few huddles of houses, a store or two, a filling station, and sometimes a church or school—little intervals along the asphalt, flanked by plowed fields, hollowed out of the woods, by a swamp or in shouting distance of the river.

Places never big enough to be a town but big enough to own a name. In most cases named for people who lived nearby.

Sometimes the name seems out of place, one that was drawn out of a hat or born by a slip of the tongue.

You drive on to Simpson and down over Juniper Branch to Galloway Crossroads. And then you turn and go across to Hams Cross Road and to Black Jack.

You ask Mr. W. G. Spencer, who owns a store there, how the place got its name. He says that he heard it was because the oak tree that bore the name Black Jack grew in that area.

Mr. Spencer has lived down that way since 1928. As you leave this small village, you remember that the Civil War touched this part of the county back on December 30, 1863.

The Yankees burned a church at Black Jack. Their reason for doing such a deed was that the church was used as shelter for Southern soldiers ("Kings Pitt County Sketches").

As you drive along through the land where man and machines are busy getting ready for planting, little "whirlywinds" pick up handfuls of dust and dance across the fields.

Some say these are spirits that get lonely and return to see a familiar face. Others say the spirits return to check on things—to see if everything is going on as it should.

The color of the land changes sometimes—red, sometimes gray, but mostly black and rich looking.

And then you see in the middle of a field, where the plow lines end, a group of stones. Some white with a new look and others stained dark by rains, winds and time—a silent part of the land—the last gathering place for some of those that lived on the land and worked the fields.

You come to Calico, down country, where route 102 crosses the New Bern Road. No one you ask can rightly say how the place got the name of Calico.

"Don't know," always been called Calico or Calico Hill and I've been living here fifty years or more."

"Been here only a few years and wouldn't know. They had a bar here one time a post office, too."

As you leave Calico for Clayroot, the things that stand out most in your mind's eye was a glimpse of two outdoor necessities marked "His" and "Hers."

From Clayroot, you go on through Gardnersville, Coville, Helen Crossroads, Venters and on to Haddock Crossroads where the Yankees came twice on raids back in the 1860's.

You keep away from Winterville, for you are hunting for the small places. You pass Cannon's Crossroads and get on 13 and work over to Frog Level. Here is a place with a name that offers many possibilities but you draw another blank.

You work on over to Bell Arthur and keeping to the side roads, pass over Pineola Branch and finally reach California.

You could have gone on through Kings and Duprees Crossroads and up across Kitten Creek to Sharp Point but instead you go to Toddy.

Then you turn around and head for Greenville, on across the Tar River and to Pactolus and up through the county to Stokes.

The spring day is getting ready to call it quits and so are you. And the most you have gotten for your travels and inquiries is the fact that you received no clear cut answer to your question, "How did this place get its name?"

Perhaps you didn't ask the right people. And all the soft drinks and moon pies you had to eat in an attempt to get into conversation with someone in a store or filling station hadn't gained you a thing but a queasy feeling in your stomach.

The only names you are sure sure of are Toddy and Pactolus and you found that information in a book.

"Seems like long ago a store at the locality was quite famous for peddling alcoholic drinks. When a fellow was asked where he was headed he often would reply: 'I am going down to get me a toddy.'"

(Sharps New Geography of N.C.) Pactolus was named by a Greek school teacher by the name of Lincoln. This was back in 1810. He found the land fertile and it reminded him of the lands around the river Pactolus in Asia Minor.

(Sharps New Geography of N.C.) So after all—what's in a name? X Crossroads with its huddle of houses, its store or filling station, its church or school, its burying place, would still be X Crossroads or would it?

Seek Schools For Mentally Retarded

By AURORA DOLLEY Reflector Bureau Ass'n Afternoon Dailies

RALEIGH—Mentally retarded children — and there are an estimated 30,000 of them in North Carolina — would be assured that they, too, would receive "quality education," according to legislation being studied by a joint Senate and House Education Committee.

A bill introduced in the Senate by five of the members would provide for instruction for mentally handicapped children who are deemed educable.

Under the measure, local boards of education would be authorized to survey needs, establish training programs for these children, and request allotments of specially trained teachers and additional funds for financing the program.

Teachers and funds would be furnished by the State Board of Education.

Allotments for the special program for the youngsters whose mental ability is below normal would exceed allotments for regular public instruction, according to the bill.

Legislators discussing the proposed program were told that approximately 3 per cent of the total population falls in the group whose intelligence quotient score is 50-70, and that at present most of these children are now in public school classes.

New Bern Pup Toured Reflector

Members of Mrs. Norma Newby's fourth grade from Jasper School of Rt. 2, New Bern, toured The Daily Reflector Plant on Friday.

The students were Kenneth Adams, Tommy Arnold, Patricia Broadway, Phyllis Cox, Gene Daniels, Ellen Daugherty, Rosemond Hodnett, Faye Gray, Earl Dail, Jimmy Jack Kilpatrick, Gary Weathington, Jerry Lee Weathington, Jerry Turnage, Ronnie Riggs, Johnnie Dawson, Frances Taylor, Joyce Taylor and Tommy Price.

Mrs. Joel Adams and Mrs. James Dawson, parents, accompanied the group.

Other points of the trip to Greenville included the Greenville Utilities Commission, television station, East Carolina College, a local dairy, bottling plant the fire department and the police station.

CONDEMN INVASION CAIRO (AP)—Foreign ministers of the Casa Blanca African Charter States condemned Friday night any armed intervention in Cuba.

The ministers represented Ghana, the United Arab Republic, Guinea, Mali and Morocco.

who are placed in regular classes, the lawmakers were told, become frustrated, bored, and are prone to develop serious emotional problems.

These same children, when placed in small groups with similar children, provided instruction at graduated levels, can become self-supporting when adults, according to information given the senators and representatives.

Arguments favoring the bill included a statement that providing special education for mentally handicapped children was "real education" being geared to the ability of the child.

Senators introducing the bill include: J.C. Eagles Jr. of Wilson, Ralph Scott of Alamance, James Strickland of Buncombe, Clarence Stone of Rockingham, Jennings King of Scotland, and Adam Whitley of Johnston.

After nearly two hours of discussion, the legislators decided to postpone till the next committee meeting a final decision on the bill.

Fellowships For Two Instructors

Two Pitt County high school instructors have been awarded fellowships by the Newspaper Fund for journalism study.

Mrs. Lucy M. Worsley, a teacher at Junius High School, is scheduled to use her fellowship to participate in a special seminar at the University of Georgia.

James M. Ferrell, Farmville High School journalism instructor, is planning to attend a special seminar session at the University of Missouri.

The fellowships are two of 477 granted teachers who teach journalism or advise high school publications. They were extended under the terms of a gift from The Wall Street Journal.

Don Carter, executive director of The Newspaper Fund, said the recipients were selected on the basis of their previous contributions to journalism education and their potential for future service in this field.

All 50 states are represented among this year's fellowship winners. The grants are part of a program designed to bring more talented young people into journalism.

"Through encouraging and honoring the high school teacher with journalism responsibilities," Carter said, "the Fund believes it will improve the quality of high school journalism and stimulate more talented students toward newspaper careers."

Ferrell is a resident of Lucama. Mrs. Worsley lives on W. Purvis St. in Robersonville.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

In addition to the Fine Arts Festival Greenville would choose this week for a municipal election and referendum, and the College would stage a World Affairs Institute.

Therefore many of us are groggy from a surfeit of activity. But now it's all over, and we can get set for NEXT week.

Music It will begin, as usual, on Sunday, but this time with two concerts. One is the Spring Concert (an optimistic title) of the College Varsity Band at 4:00. This will be outdoors near the Music Building and will feature popular classics.

Also in the afternoon, at 3:30, Allison Moss and Martha Bradner will present a program of songs at the Greenville Art Center under the sponsorship of the Greenville Music Club.

"Antigone" Still, that is not the end of the embarrassment of riches in store for us. On May 10, 11, 12, at 8:00, McGinnis, the College Playhouse will present Jean Anouilh's modern version of Sophocles' "Antigone."

This play, in its original form, at any rate, is one of the gems of the classical repertoire. In addition, Anouilh's modernization, first done in Nazi-occupied France, is considered a brilliant adaptation of the theme of the Greek master to the French predicament at the time, since the main conflict in the play deals with the perennial problem—ultimately insoluble—of the demands of the state in opposition to those of personal conscience.

"Antigone" is indeed a worthy replacement for Shakespeare, whom the Playhouse generally present this time of the year. Highly recommended.

Opportunity In Africa As for the World Affairs Institute, an annual event at the College, it dealt this year with contemporary Africa. At the risk of great oversimplification, one might summarize the African situation from the standpoint of the US as Risks, Responsibilities, Opportunities. And this takes in all of us, even our corporations, for whose capital and techniques young Africa is begging. Establishing a good American-operated textile plant in Nigeria might not only be an act of patriotism but also a real contribution to the struggle against Communism. All this and a decent prospect of profits too!

Regional Culture At the Fine Arts luncheon last Saturday there were some good things said and some sobering questions raised about culture in our region by the seven speakers.

Some of the most significant remarks were those of Ovid Pierce: "Are we creating a life for our region which does not impoverish the human spirit? Can the youth of eastern Carolina find here the range, the freedom, the encouragement from us to become all that there is within them to become? It is the everlasting loss of the land itself if its youth is driven from home. . . ."

"It is possible to ride through town after town in the eastern part of the State and to see evidence of nothing except mediocrity of taste and poverty of spirit. Let each of us seek in his own area the presence of something more, in our architecture, our schools, our monuments, our roadside landscaping itself. . . ."

"I hope that the time has come (and there is evidence that it is on the way) that we are ready in eastern North Carolina to give the creative artist his place, to applaud and encourage the youth in their first hesitant reach for distant goals, and to cherish among us, wherever it may be, any real nobility of mind."

The fact that these remarks were made by a recognized eastern Carolina writer, on the campus of an emerging eastern Carolina college, at a gathering sponsored by two vital Greenville cultural societies is evidence enough to us that this section is indeed on the way. . . .

Etc. According to the Times, Frost has been visiting Israel, where he has created a sensation second only to that of the Eichmann trial. Here is Frost on Sandburg, in a talk to some students in Jerusalem: "Carl poems about the People. Yes, writes poems about the People. Yes, I write poems about the People. Yes—and No."

"Publisher's Weekly" reports there is a sign in the Boston Public Library which says, "Only Low Conversation Permitted." And in an Illinois library there is this: "No Friendly Conversation Allowed with the Librarian"

NO SURPRISE BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP) — It wasn't really surprising when Mrs. Octavio Maldonado gave birth to triplets. She previously had two sets of twins. The couple has 4 children in all.

Mrs. Mildred Barnhardt of Henderson, Junior business major at East Carolina is shown presenting to President Leo W. Jenkins of the college a $50 check to be added to the fund now being raised to build an interdenominational chapel on the campus. The sum is a gift from the Phi Beta Lambda Chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America, of which Mrs. Barnhardt is treasurer. Craig Lynn Barnhardt (center), three-year-old daughter of Mrs. Barnhardt, was an interested observer at the presentation. The campus FBLA chapter is an organization of approximately 200 students of business. (ECC News Bureau Photo by Rufus Freeman)

READY!
Newspaper Advertising Readers Are Ready To Buy!

Newspaper readers are attracted to your advertising because it interests them. They are more apt to be live, "ready-to-buy" prospects than is the case with readers and viewers of other advertising media. Live prospects are easier to sell. They actually shop the newspaper ads—they want to be sold, and are looking for information to help make a buying decision. Take housewives, for example—research* proves that 75% of them check the ads in the daily newspaper before making their main shopping trips of the week. It's that kind of readiness on the part of newspaper readers that can mean ready sales for you!

THE HAUNTED STARS

EDMOND HAMILTON

Thrayn's face was long when he returned to the men from Earth. He spoke directly to Fairlie: "They will not have you enter the city. They say you must go back to your starship and leave." "And if we don't?" "They did not say. But there is fear and there is anger."

Fairlie translated. DeWitt stood silent for a moment. Then he said, "We won't try to force our way in there—we'll camp here and wait. They'll get used to us soon, and get over their superstitious nervousness."

When Thrayn heard that decision he did not look too happy. He said, "I think you had better keep good watch." He turned and went away into the dark.

DeWitt brusquely told the others. He concluded, "I'll set watches. No guns—I have a couple but I'm not going to have some trigger-happy fool blowing things. Smith, you get me Thompson on the radio."

Later, DeWitt came over to where Fairlie sat with Raab and Winstedt. "You talked with Thrayn on the way here today," he said. "I want everything he said."

"I've already told you," Fairlie protested.

"You've summarized," said DeWitt. "That's not enough. I want every detail."

Fairlie tried to piece together the fragmentary facts that he had learned from Thrayn.

The Vanryn, he had learned, had come far down the scale since the days when they had conquered space. Now that long-past glory was a mere racial legend to them. Their forefathers, said the legend, had desired the stars in the sky. They had built cunning ships and machines, and they had flown to the distant stars, and landed upon strange worlds, some of them larger than Ryn. They had been lords of all the skies until, somewhere far out between the stars, they had met the Lorn.

The Lorn were dark and shadow-wrapped and powerful. They had fought the Vanryn star-lords and had beaten them, again and again. They had forced them back to Ryn, and on a day of terror never to be forgotten they had smitten and destroyed the cunning ships of the Vanryn, and had warned the Vanryn never to leave their world again.

For a long time, the Vanryn had hated that restriction. But after a while, they had come to change their ideas. They saw that their attempts to conquer the stars, their clever ships and machines, had all been wicked folly. It was themselves that they must conquer. They must cease their obsessions with material things and cultivate the spirit. They must discover how to live happily and simply, and not concern themselves with foolish and crass scientific vanities.

"It's hard to believe any intelligent people would adopt such a viewpoint," said Winstedt.

Raab dissented. "It's not hard to believe at all. They were a proud people, they met the Lorn, they were defeated. So they did what most people do—they rationalized their defeat. They didn't want to conquer space after all, they said, they turned their back on it purposely."

Fairlie thought that Raab had the right of it. A whole triumphant race and culture had, after shattering defeat, turned its face around and denied all its former values. And with the passing of time, what was only rationalization at first had become true, and what they had said they were going to do, they were doing.

"Except for Thrayn," put in DeWitt when he said that. "He at least, still has a spark of the old Vanryn vision. He can help us, if the others won't."

"Help us do what?" Fairlie said.

"I told you what he said, that there are no machines, no secrets, down in that city, that all that was long ago. And all the more ancient places like the Hall of Suns are just ruins and—"

He stopped. The sudden stiffening of DeWitt told him of the blunder he had made, in mentioning the one name he hadn't meant to mention.

"The Hall of Suns?" said DeWitt softly. "What's that? You didn't mention that before, Fairlie."

"Some old ruins that Thrayn spoke of that he'd seen—that's all I know," said Fairlie.

"The Hall of Suns," DeWitt repeated, as though the name was music in his ears. "It's a fine name, isn't it? A fine ringing name, that sounds like the old Vanryn. We'll have to find out more about that. What exactly did he say?"

Fairlie tried to remember. "I have seen the Hall of Suns. I have dreamed of the ships of old—"

"Ah," said DeWitt. "I think we're on the right track after all. That down there—the valley toward the valley—may not be anything. But Thrayn is the key to something." He bent forward and his voice was suddenly fierce. "The next time we see him you tell him we want to know more about that Hall of Suns, Fairlie. And no more little slips of memory."

Fairlie's bristles went up. "Or what? Maybe, you'll threaten to kill me too, is that it? And then you'll talk to the Vanryn for you?"

DeWitt said grimly. "Maybe no interpreter would be better than one who's against me."

"Do we have to bicker between ourselves?" interrupted Winstedt. "Haven't we got trouble enough? I mean, do we have any idea what the people down there are going to do?"

DeWitt laughed, and got to his feet. "Worried about your tender skin, Winstedt?"

"I'm not afraid," said Winstedt angrily. "I just wish I knew what was going to happen tomorrow."

Fairlie wished that, too. He lay in his damp, chill sleeping bag and looked up at the lofty dark tree branches and the yellow-glowing night sky, and could not sleep for a long time.

He awoke to find his face wet from a light drizzle. It was dawn, and the men were stretching and yawning.

Fairlie looked down in the valley. The tree-sheltered city was silent and without activity. The light rain stopped, but the clouds did not lift. And as the day wore on, the city below remained silent and lifeless.

"They're staying indoors," said DeWitt. "Talking, probably, about us. All right, let them talk. We can wait till they get used to the idea of us."

They waited. They sat around the track on the ridge, and did not go near the city, and none of the people of the city came near them.

The hours went by, and the ochre-colored twilight came on, and still not a thing had happened. DeWitt went to talk with Thomson by means of the radio in one of the tracks, and Fairlie looked down into the valley.

DeWitt's voice called them together a few minutes later. His face a white blur in the gathering darkness, he spoke brusquely. "Everything's okay at the ship, Thomson says, except one thing, Christensen died this afternoon."

Motorist Wasn't Going To Tell

PUNTA GORDA, Fla. (AP)—"S-T-O-P" the police officer spelled to an arrant motorist. "Now tell me, what does that spell," he said pointing to a stop sign at a street intersection. "Well," replied the woman, "if you don't know, I'm certainly not going to tell you." She posted a $5 bond for failure to stop at an intersection.
