Administration May Defer Civil Rights Action To Change Rules

Mansfield Says Easier Curb On Filibuster Would Have Priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy administration appears ready to postpone action on major civil rights bills in exchange for a rules revision in this session making it easier to curb Senate filibusters.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said today efforts to revise the rule requiring approval of two-thirds of those voting to limit Senate debate will precede action on an administration package of civil rights measures introduced Monday.

Mansfield made it clear that even before the rule change is brought up, he hopes to have most of President Kennedy's general legislative program out of the way.

"Otherwise," he said, "we might have a long, drawn-out struggle in the Senate that might endanger the unfinished aspects of the President's program."

Mansfield left little doubt that any real effort to enact the six bills offered in the Senate and House by Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., and Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., will have to wait until 1962.

The Democratic leader said he had no advance knowledge that the bills were going to be introduced by Clark and Celler, designated by Kennedy last fall to draft civil rights proposals for the administration.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said in a separate interview he plans to join with Mansfield in offering a measure to permit 60 per cent of the Senators voting to curb debate.

To get this passed in the face of a likely Southern filibuster, the leaders probably will have to bring in a cloture (debate limiting) petition. To halt a filibuster they would have to get support from two-thirds of those voting—67 if all 100 senators are recorded.

Dirksen said that while some Republicans may push for enactment of civil rights legislation in this session, from a practical standpoint he doubts little will be done except to extend the life of the expiring Civil Rights Commission.

Clark said he will ask for Senate action on some of his bills. But he conceded he isn't very hopeful of getting it.

Clark succeeded in getting two of his measures assigned to the Senate Labor Committee. These included a bill requiring "first step compliance" in school desegregation and another to set up a Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC).

Four other measures, including proposed constitutional amendments to abolish poll taxes and literacy tests for voting, went to the Senate Judiciary Committee. In this latter group, headed by Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., civil rights advocates have encountered many stumbling blocks in the past.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., said he was disappointed that no presidential message on civil rights accompanied the introduction of the bills.

Keating scoffed at the administration's contention that many problems in the field can be solved by executive action. He said only Congress could "give technical and financial assistance to desegregated school districts, authorize injunctive suits in school cases, set up an FEPC and provide an indefinite extension of the Civil Rights Commission."

Moscow Denies Space Secrecy

LONDON (AP)—Moscow radio said today that Soviet scientists, before Yuri A. Gagarin's space flight, had "made it quite clear that the Soviet Union was on the threshold of sending a manned space ship on its maiden voyage."

Stokes Building To House Post Office And Fire Dept.

STOKES—A new post office will be built here by the Carolina Township Fire Department, to house both the post office and the fire department, it was announced today.

Postmaster General J. Edward Day announced the plans to build the new, air conditioned post office in Stokes. "The new building," Day said, "will implement President Kennedy's program to stimulate the economy and at the same time carry out the Post Office Department's objective of more efficient postal service and improved working conditions for postal employees."

The post office will occupy 800 square feet of interior space and provide an outside loading platform as well as ample space for parking and truck maneuvering. "The Pitt Firemen's Association is proud of the expansion program which Stokes is making for its community and department," Roy Hardee, vice president of the association, said. "Several other departments have plans for new buildings in some sections. We are well pleased that the newest departments in Pitt County are making such great strides after setting up a rural community fire organization," Hardee commented.

Laos Rebels Refuse Deal With International Group

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Rebel officials refused to deal with members of the International Control Commission for Laos at an initial meeting at Hin Heup today, a Laotian military authority said. This further confused the outlook for the 14-nation conference on Laos due to open in Geneva Friday.

"The other side (the rebels) said they could not recognize the ICC," said Lt. Col. Udon Sananikone, spokesman of the royal government's military, delegation to the cease-fire talks. "They said they had no instructions."

Indian, Canadian and Polish military officers of the three-nation commission, which is seeking to certify the cease-fire proclaimed last Wednesday, declined comment on their return by helicopter from Hin Heup, the negotiating site 55 miles north of Vientiane. They said they would make their report to the commission's Indian chairman, Samar Sen.

The possibility that the Geneva conference might be postponed was raised by rebel objections to the arrival of the truce commission Monday. The United States, Britain and France have said they will not take part in the conference until the commission guarantees the armistice is in effect. Sananikone said representatives of the Communist Pathet Lao and neutralist Prince Souvanna Phouma even refused a letter from the ICC group in Vientiane to its ICC counterpart in rebel-held Xieng Khouang.

Taking Office

Greenville's new City Council will officially take office tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

The council and mayor will be sworn in at that time in ceremonies at City Hall.

Charles King, who defeated Mayor S. Eugene West in the recent election, will take office as the city's new mayor.

Although no major battles have been reported to indicate any all-out rebel offensive, there have been serious incidents.

The most serious is a Pathet Lao attack, with artillery, on Padong, key center for training and supply of fierce Miao Mountain tribesmen who are the best fighters the government has. Padong is a major guerrilla base located just 20 miles southwest of Xieng Khouang.

There have been other lesser incidents. The commission had asked to sit in on the lagging peace talks between Premier Prince Boun Oum's regime and the pro-Communist rebels in an effort to speed up a formal armistice.

Compulsory Inspection Is In Showdown Stage

RALEIGH (AP)—A House show-down was scheduled today on a bill calling for compulsory auto inspection — regarded as the top highway safety proposal sponsored this session by the Motor Vehicles Department.

The controversial measure was approved by the Senate earlier and recently won a favorable report by the House Roads and Highway Safety Committee.

It has received the strong endorsement of Gov. Sanford and was listed for top priority by Motor Vehicles Commissioner Ed Scheidt.

The House Monday night killed a bill which would give the Motor Vehicles Department regulatory authority over commercial drivers training schools.

Rep. Sneed High of Cumberland scolded the eulogy for the bill by saying, "It shouldn't matter to the department whether I get my driver training from a voodoo witch, my grandfather or my own son, so long as I can pass the licensing test."

Main objection to the 1947 proposal was the long, time-consuming lines motorists had to wait through in order to have their vehicles examined.

The 1961 measure attempted to overcome that by providing for a great deal more inspection stations.

The proposal is a legislative perennial which has met with bad fortune ever since the General Assembly enacted a compulsory inspection bill in 1947 and then repealed it in 1949 in the face of strong protests from Tar Heel drivers.

Hitler's Deputy Declared Alive

TEL AVIV Israel (AP)—Argentina's former ambassador to Israel today said Martin Bormann—Hitler's deputy whose fate has been a mystery since the war—was in Argentina when Adolf Eichmann was captured last year.

Dr. Gregorio Topolevsky, now retired from the Argentine foreign service, said in a Tel Aviv news conference that Bormann had been living under an alias and disappeared into Brazil when he heard of Eichmann's capture by Israeli agents in May 1960.

Topolevsky said that if Israel had requested Eichmann's extradition through official channels, he would have vanished "two hours later." Eichmann was spirited out of the country by Israeli agents.

The former ambassador said Dr. Joseph Mengele, Nazi physician at Auschwitz, who selected vast numbers of victims for the gas chamber, was also known by Argentine security services to be in that country.

Mengele also disappeared, Topolevsky said, when he heard authorities were looking for him.

Topolevsky also claimed there were several Nazi cells in Argentina, mainly in the south, and that they had transferred huge sums of money and gold from Switzerland.

Homage Is His, But Alan Shepard Looks To Future

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The shouting is over and the nation's homage is his, but astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr. isn't resting on his space laurels.

Shepard, America's first man in space, promised "we plan to press ahead with the best possible speed."

The next major mission is rocketing one of the seven astronauts into orbit around the earth.

The orbit flight is scheduled for sometime this year. But space agency chief James E. Webb cautioned: "If we are to have our spectacular successes—with even larger and ever more complex rockets, the early test flights unmanned of course, will involve some spectacular failures."

But the applause and accolades Monday were for a "spectacular success"—Navy Cmdr. Shepard's 115-mile voyage into space.

It was a day of pride and sentiment, tribute and humor for the calm man who—as one of his superiors put it—"really broke the ice for all of us."

He was decorated by the President, lauded by Congress, cheered by thousands as he was driven through the capital and probably as important as any of the honors to him—was kissed by his family.

Also, in a nationally televised news conference he gave a capsule view of his ride through space.

Last Friday morning, Shepard sat for more than four hours in the loneliness of his capsule before the rocket blasted off from Cape Canaveral for his 15-minute flight to glory.

Flanked on the news conference platform by his fellow astronauts and the leaders of the nation's space program, Shepard told his story with composure and wit.

As he unfolded the details of his flight in response to questions, Shepard repeatedly drew applause from newsmen—an unusual tribute.

The applause was not so much for the events of the flight, which he showed a tendency to under-dramatize, for his forthright way of answering queries. When he was asked if after he was picked to make the first ride into space he wished he was "in something else other than Project Mercury," Shepard replied: "That is the easiest question I have heard today. No."

Newsmen warned to his repeated references to what "we had done—that is, his six fellow astronauts and the hundreds of scientists and other workers who contributed to the man-in-space program.

About the only thing he declined to comment on was whether he found "any discrepancies" in what the Soviet Union's space man Yuri Gagarin reported he saw in his orbit around the earth.

Shepard said the American astronauts were so involved in their own flight plans that they didn't have time to study data on Gagarin's flight.

He described calmly—as if it were just another airplane flight, his space ride that entailed: Blasting off atop a rocket that generated a thundering 78,000-pound thrust, soaring up 115 miles in space at speeds of about 5,000 miles an hour, going through five minutes of weightlessness, followed by a seconds-long period when his body weighed about 1,760 pounds, re-entering the earth's atmosphere at a velocity high enough to cause the paint on the capsule to char and landing at sea at a point more than 300 miles from takeoff.

"Sure," he said, he had "some apprehension" before and during the flight. He knew there was always the possibility of failure in the launch, or a mishap at the end of flight.

But, while he sat for four hours in the capsule before lift-off, he had too many things to do to dwell on it.

The astronaut reported he found the two most critical phases of the flight — blastoff and reentry — smoother than he had anticipated.

He said the five-minute period of weightlessness was "quite a pleasant sensation," and during the time he had no difficulty in maneuvering the capsule and doing various other jobs.

He granted, though, that he did not experience "exhilaration" until the flight was over — and U.S. Marine helicopters were on the spot ready to pick him up.

Shepard flew back to Langley Field late Monday. He was to relax today at his Virginia Beach, Va. home.

As he left Washington he wore the NASA medal presented by President Kennedy. Congress was considering giving him the medal usually reserved for battlefield heroes — the Medal of Honor.

Larkins, Seawell, Craven Recommended To Federal Judgeships In N. Carolina

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three North Carolina lawyers — two of whom were candidates for governor last year — have been recommended for appointment as federal district judges.

They are John D. Larkins Jr., of Trenton, for the Eastern District; Malcolm B. Seawell of Chapel Hill, for the Middle District; and J. Braxton Craven Jr., of Morganton, for the Western District.

Larkins and Seawell were candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor and were eliminated in the first primary last year.

The recommendation that they be appointed was made Monday by U. S. Sens. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., and B. Everett Jordan, D-N.C. Congress recently authorized President Kennedy to appoint 73 additional federal judges, including three in North Carolina, one for each federal court district in the state.

The recommendation is the first step leading to actual appointment. The Justice Department will evaluate all recommendations sent to it by elective officials and bar associations and then suggest appointees to the President.

The President generally follows the department's recommendations.

The recommendation of Seawell for Middle District judge quickly came under fire from the Forsyth County Bar Association. Officials of the group sent telegrams of protest to Ervin and Jordan, saying that Seawell had never practiced law in the Middle District, but only in the Eastern District.

"There are many lawyers and judges practicing in the Middle District who are thoroughly qualified for the position," said the dissenting lawyers in their telegrams. They noted that Seawell now practices law in Raleigh, and recently moved his residence to Chapel Hill. Raleigh is in the Eastern District, and Chapel Hill in the Middle District.

Meanwhile, there was no indication of when the two senators would make a recommendation for a U. S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals judge's seat, expected to go to North Carolina.

The Charlotte Observer, however, said that State Sen. J. Spencer Bell of Mecklenburg County has been tapped for the post. The newspaper's report did not name a source. It said formal announcement is expected within two weeks. Bell declined comment on the report.

In making the recommendations Monday, Ervin and Jordan said, "All of these men have had outstanding careers in the legal profession and they have served the Democratic party and North Carolina in various public capacities with honor and distinction."

Seawell, 51, is a native of Lee County and was attorney general of North Carolina in 1958-1960, served a term as mayor of Lumberton and was solicitor of the 9th Solicitorial District from 1948 to 1955.

Larkins, 51-year-old former state senator, was chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee from 1958 to 1960 and was Democratic national committee member from 1958 to 1960.

Craven, 43, is a state Superior Court judge, was solicitor of Burke County Court and an assistant U.S. attorney for the Western District.

Tennessean Is Named 'Mother Of The Year'

NEW YORK (AP)—A Tennessee mother of six who has been foster mother if hundreds of dependent or delinquent children was named American Mother of 1961 today.

Prepare Cottage For Easy Living

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newfeatures Writer

If you are sprucing up a summer cottage or a weekend haven, don't let your desire to keep up with the permanent residents get the best of you.

A summer cottage should be a fun place where everyone can take it easy — and that includes the lady of the house.

"You can make the summer cottage a joy with economical foresight, however, by putting in it only what you can take out of it, unless you own it. What you put into it should be cheerful and easily maintained.

Few rented cottages ever look cozy for the reason that they lack the warmth of color. There must be an unwritten law among cottage landlords that summer cottages should be furnished in muddy brown, inky blue and very dusty pink to withstand summer traffic, that walls must be covered with art that rugs should look as if they'd been steam rolled with moldy Swiss cheese.

If you walk into one of those dreary vacationland set-ups, remedy the situation before the place gets the entire family afeelin' and afeelin'.

Strip windows of heavy draperies. Let in the light. Put up bright white or colorful sheets at the windows by sliding a curtain rod through hems or hanging them on curtain clips. If windows are better suited to cafe curtains, use pillow cases, opening the side seam. Hem and hang them on curtain clips.

What to do about a messy sofa? Drape a washable solid color or striped table cloth over it. Two may be required. Pin them in place behind the sofa and under the cushions.

If you own the place, summer furniture may be perked up with paint and new cushions. Rattan should be cleaned with mineral spirits to remove dirt, wax and polish. Sand lightly. If the original color is darker than the enamel to be applied, two coats will probably be necessary. Load the brush, flow on following the wood grain, and then, without reloading the brush, cross stroke. Follow the grain again with long, free strokes to insure even coverage.

SUMMER COTTAGE PICKUP—It's easy to maintain with washable furnishings. The white pillowcase curtains and white rug are kept bright white with dry chloride bleach.

Spraying is the best method for wicker furniture. The aerosol self-spraying enamels are fine, but are not meant for larger jobs. Before enameling wrought iron furniture, clean it, and sand away any traces of rust. Touch up bare metal spots with metal primer and spray or use a small brush to paint.

Leftover paint may be used on beat-up lighting fixtures and lamp bases. These should be cleaned first and coated with zinc-chromate to provide adhesion for enamel.

Corduroy or inexpensive cotton may be used for cushions. One summer cottage resident uses a yellow and white color scheme. She paints the wicker furniture white, uses yellow corduroy cushions, yellow cotton table cover with white ball fringe. White pillow cases are at the window and are kept white with dry chloride bleach.

Public Affairs Dept. Meets

The Public Affairs Department of the Woman's Club held their last meeting of the year, Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Bob Kittrell on the Farmville highway. The Club Collect, repeated in unison, was used to open the meeting. Final committee reports were given, followed by a discussion concerning the Arts Festival to be held the next day. This department was to be in charge of the Snack Bar on the Art Center grounds.

Mrs. James Bond, Chairman, announced that Mrs. C. T. Fleming Jr. had been elected Corresponding Secretary and that she, Mrs. Bond, had been elected Treasurer of the Woman's Club for the New Year beginning in June. They, along with other officers of the club, will be installed at the General Meeting to be held later in May. Mrs. Bond also informed the club that she had been appointed Junior Director of District 15 by the District President, Mrs. Emmett Burton.

A review of all activities of the department was given by the chairman for the benefit of new members and guest.

A committee was appointed to make plans for a June picnic for members and their families. Guests for the evening were Mrs. Joseph Miller, Mrs. Bob Balboni, and Mrs. Max Eggleston.

Mrs. Ed Bailey, as co-hostess, assisted Mrs. Kittrell in serving refreshments following adjournment.

Student Awards Day At ECC Is Slated Thursday

The East Carolina College Student Government Association will stage its annual Student Awards Day Thursday, May 11. Jayne C. Chandler of Rt. 4, Suffolk, Va., chairman, has announced. The event this year will take place for the first time in the college stadium and will be attended by the student body and the faculty. The ceremony will begin at 10 a. m.

Approximately 30 awards are to be presented, Miss Chandler said. These include awards to an outstanding student in each department of instruction, three awards for service in the Student Government Association and one for work on publications, and two fraternity and one sorority awards.

Seniors chosen as representatives of East Carolina in the 1961 edition of the national yearbook "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities— and Colleges" will receive special recognition.

The exercises Thursday morning will include a program of music by the college band, choir, and glee clubs. Participating also will be the AF ROTC Color Guard.

Dr. James Tucker, dean of student affairs, and James Speight of Kinston, ex-president of the Student Government Association, are assisting Miss Chandler in plans for the day.

Death Of Their Son Started Multiracial Family

WESTON, Vt. (AP)—"Why are we going to Troy today?" the child asked.

It was a tough question for Mrs. William R. Newhall of Weston to answer.

She thought a moment as she and her husband drove toward Troy, N. Y. She glanced at the four children—the two boys, one Korean, one Navajo, and the two girls, a Chippewa and a Negro. Then she replied: "Because some people seem to think we're an unusual family."

Mrs. Newhall related the fragment of dialogue the other day after a meeting of the board of directors of the Troy YMCA. The Newhalls were the guests of honor; Newhall had just been signed as a director of Camp Van Schoonhoven.

The Newhalls—she is a school teacher, he is a distributor of health foods and a farmer—plainly do not think their family is as unusual as other folk do.

"We took them all sight unseen," Newhall, a ruddy-faced, quick-smiling, lean man said of the children.

In the past five years the Newhalls have taken these children of different racial and cultural backgrounds into their home and adopted them.

"We have them made to order, so to speak," Newhall said of his pint-sized domestic United Nations.

The Newhall "mail order" family includes, Kim, 13, the Korean boy; Virgil, 13, the Navajo; Mona Lisa, 8, the Chippewa; and Linda Ann, 5, the Negro.

Together the Newhalls operate a nearly self-sufficient 30-acre farm at Weston, in the summer in winter—to save on tuition bills—they live in Springfield, Vt., where Mrs. Newhall teaches art in the school system. But no matter where they are, the Newhalls—all six—sing, work, paint and dance together.

The story of the origin of this multiracial family begins with a tragedy; the death of a son of the Newhalls. It hit hard.

"You can't have a family if you don't have children," Newhall said.

"We went to recognized adoption agencies," his wife said. "But we were told we were too old to adopt a child, and they told us we didn't have enough money. So when we heard that you could adopt Korean war orphans, we jumped at the chance."

Mrs. Newhall is 56.

Several months and a few hundred miles of red tape later, Kim, a frightened, hunger-weakened boy of 9 stepped off an airplane and into the hearts of the Newhalls.

"He was just skin and bones," Newhall recalls. "He had no coordination at all."

Today Kim is a good musician.

ECC Class Of 1961 Will Be Entertained On Friday

East Carolina College's Class of 1961 will begin their graduating festivities this week with a steak dinner for seniors and their guests Friday.

An informal social event, the dinner will take place at 6 p. m. in the South Dining Hall on the campus, Dempsey Williams of Fayetteville, senior class president, has announced. More than 500 class members and others are expected to attend.

President Leo W. Jenkins of East Carolina and Sam Bundy, principal of Farmville schools, will address the graduating class. President Jenkins will deliver an inspirational address. Mr. Bundy, well-known humorist, will entertain with remarks on some of the funny aspects of graduation.

Awards will be presented at the dinner to the Outstanding Senior and to two Outstanding Seniors from each department of instruction. The PHT (Put Hubby Through) degree will be conferred on wives of graduates.

Presentation of a gift to the college by the Class of 1961 will be a special event of the dinner.

Freighter Saved As Cargo Burns

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)—With flames visible from her burning cargo, the Japanese freighter Nikko Maru steamed into port Monday and Cape Town firemen removed the cargo and extinguished the blaze.

The 6,603-ton vessel, en route from West Africa to Japan, caught fire Sunday and turned on full steam to get here before the flames reached another portion of the cargo—phosphates. She carries a crew of 47.

Stole His $600 While Sleeping

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Bruce Wolfe reported to police Monday that someone stole $600 from the trunk of his car while he was asleep on the front seat.

He said the thief broke open the ventilator window, unlocked a back door, removed the back seat, reached into the trunk and took a bag containing $600 in $20 bills.

Flood Rescuer Just Dropped In

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—A Fort Knox soldier helping with flood rescue work spotted the C. A. Woosley family stranded on their porch Monday.

Sgt. William W. Heiden of Toledo, Ohio, came down by helicopter to the roof and dropped a hole in it.

"I just thought I'd drop in on you folks," he announced to the startled family.

Continued Losses In Investment?

Within a month the colleges and universities of the state will be pouring forth another class of graduates, many trained to take their places in classrooms of public schools anywhere in the nation.

The number of these 1961 graduates who will be teaching in classrooms in North Carolina when public schools open next fall will depend largely upon what the General Assembly does in the coming weeks to enrich the public school program of the state.

For years now Maryland, Virginia and numerous other states have been siphoning off young teacher graduates from North Carolina colleges because they were in a position to offer more to beginning teachers—and experienced ones as well—than North Carolina could. Although North Carolina has provided better working conditions in its public schools for teachers, although it has put into effect a couple of pay raises for teachers, the state still has not kept pace in the past decade with that other states have been doing to improve their own school systems. The result is that North Carolina, which trains many future teachers each year, has become a happy hunting ground for other states seeking well qualified young teachers to fill their classroom needs.

In the process North Carolina has lost a great deal more than countless teachers who could ably fill classroom positions throughout this state that have gone begging because young men and women entering the teaching profession each year received their basic education in the public schools of this state, financed by the taxpayers of North Carolina. Many of them also have received their higher education at state-supported institutions, which means that each in effect received the equivalent of a scholarship worth several hundred dollars each year, paid by the taxpayers of North Carolina.

Thus, in each of these new teachers who will graduate from colleges of the state in the next month, the state of North Carolina already has a considerable investment. Whether most of these new teachers begin their careers in North Carolina next fall or go to other states to teach will depend on what this state does to improve its teacher salaries and its public schools. On this factor also hinges the question of whether North Carolina will receive a return of the amount already invested in educating these new teachers, or whether that investment will be forfeited because the state declines to compete with other states for classroom teachers.

Speaking at East Carolina College two weeks ago Gov. Sanford asserted, "North Carolina has stopped expecting teachers to work for apples and yearbook dedications and we are going to do right by our teachers from this day forward." If, indeed, the state supports Gov. Sanford in fulfilling this pledge, we may rest assured that young Tar Heels entering the teaching profession will be happy and proud to teach in their home state. And we also may be assured that North Carolina in future years will be repaid many times over for whatever investment it makes in enriching the program of our public schools.

Special Session Seems Indicated

By LYNN NISBET
SPECIAL SESSION? — Developments of the past few days would seem to justify the prediction that there will be an extra special session of the 1961 General Assembly sometime in the fall of this year or very early in 1962. Several matters on which the State must take action depend upon action of the Congress, which probably will not be taken until after our Legislature adjourns.

Governor Sanford told newsmen last week that the question of a State bond issue for aid to counties in school buildings depends upon what the Congress does about Federal aid for schools. He is committed to the idea that any Federal aid money should be used for buildings, not for teacher salaries or other operating expenses. He says this does not interfere with his program for State appropriations to improve the schools in curriculum, teaching, etc. It is related only to the item of physical facilities. If the Congress acts on the Federal aid bill before adjournment of the 1961 regular session of the General Assembly, the bond issue can be authorized if needed, or appropriate legislation enacted to use the Federal funds for buildings.

RE-DISTRICTING — Faced with necessity for reducing the number of congressional districts from 12 to 11, members of the Legislature, especially those on the responsible committees, have been reluctant to act—hoping against hope that the Congress would enact a law increasing membership in the National House of Representatives so that a reduction in North Carolina's quota might not be necessary. In face of repeated warnings that any reasonable increase in total membership would not affect the North Carolina quota, several committees insist upon waiting to see what happens in Washington before starting action here.

The congressional redistricting problem now is very much like the court reform and constitutional revision bills two years ago. It was argued then by many friends of court reform that the issue should not be confused with petty jealousies and community rivalries inherent in a great deal of the general legislation, but should be held for consideration at a special session. Governor Hodges and other sponsors of the constitutional revision insisted upon action. Result was defeat for all their ideas.

Feeling ran high then and compromise was impossible. This year many of the same persons, continuing their interest in the same improvements, were willing to compromise—and a fairly good court bill was the result.

Unfortunately there is not the same time for compromise on redistricting. If the State does not enact a redistricting law, the Federal law moves in to say that all members of the North Carolina House of Representatives must be elected at large next year.

That prospect offers some very interesting developments. Even with the districts lined up with such and such counties in each district, there is not statutory or constitutional requirement that the representative elected from any district must be a resident of that area. The only requirement is that he or she must be a citizen of North Carolina.

So it is that unless a redistricting bill is enacted before the next election all eleven members of the National House of Representatives might be elected from Mecklenburg or Guilford—or even Currituck—county.

It would appear on the face of that condition that the small counties which are so insistent upon retaining their control may be inadvertently committing political suicide.

CONFUSED—Presently there are two redistricting bills in the House and one in the Senate. It is known that at least two other bills have been prepared for introduction in the Senate, and there are rumors of more plans for both branches. Each of these arrangements is entitled to more careful and thorough study than can be given in a few casual committee meetings at which other matters also are discussed. During the past three months the House committee has held three meetings, the Senate committee two, and there has been one joint session.

The House committee voted the other day to hold at least two meetings a week from here out—if they can be fitted in to the tight schedule for other committees. The trouble is that when the committee is composed of one member from each of the present 12 congressional districts, agrees upon district lines there is no assurance that the other Representatives and Senators from their districts will approve their decision.

It looks now like the redistricting problem might prolong this regular session for several weeks, unless agreement can be reached to defer action on this matter for an extra special session. A special session might not achieve the desired purpose unless there were further agreement that only redistricting would be considered.

Extra special sessions have a way of getting out of hand. The only one of record that adhered strictly to one purpose was that of 1916 when by the gentlemen's agreement nothing was considered except constitutional amendments affecting the operation of public schools.

By PATRICIA MOORE

Nothing Accomplished In Deferring Decision

As knotty as the problem of congressional redistricting may be for North Carolina and as difficult as the final decision may be, there seems little logic at this moment to trial balloons being sent up on a special legislative session to resolve the matter.

The General Assembly has before it several proposals concerning redistricting of the state to cut the number of congressional districts from 12 to 11. There is also before the General Assembly the clear-out regulations which stipulate that if congressional redistricting is not accomplished before the current congressional terms end, the state's 11 members of congress will be elected at-large in 1962. This is an alternative which few of the leaders want to see materialize.

Although some legislators already have begun talking about possible adjournment by June 15, and although there are many major issues yet to be resolved, it should not be necessary for the General Assembly to postpone the matter of congressional redistricting for a special session. The legislators knew before they convened in February that the matter of congressional redistricting was before them. Many studies of the problems involved in the redistricting were underway before the legislature convened and a few of them had been completed. Furthermore the individual private consideration to the matter of congressional redistricting.

Congressional redistricting will not be an easy matter to resolve, but it seems to us that it can best be resolved during this regular session of the General Assembly rather than putting the decision off and having a special session to take up the matter again.

No Specifying Of Those Sacrifices

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Since before his election, President Kennedy has been putting emphasis on the idea of sacrifice ahead for the American people.

After 3 1/2 months in office he hasn't requested the people to endure any hardships.

On the same day last week that he was asked to explain what sacrifices he had in mind, his administration indicated it was thinking of an income tax cut next year.

Last July 15, in his speech accepting the Democratic nomination, he said: "The new frontier of which I speak is not a set of promises—it is a set of challenges. It sums up not what I intend to offer the American people but what I intend to ask of them."

"It appeals to their pride, not their pocketbooks — it holds out the promise of more sacrifice instead of more security."

In his inaugural address Jan. 20 he said: "Let every nation know, whether it wish us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend or oppose any foe in order to assure the survival and success of liberty. This much we pledge — and more."

But this country, whether or not it would be wise to get involved in war on the Asian continent, has shown great hesitancy about moving into Laos to fight against the Communist Pathet Lao for the right-wing Laotian government the United States supports.

Later in his inaugural Kennedy said: "My fellow Americans, ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you can do for your country."

Rescuer Rescues Himself

"Tales from the Trunk" has yielded a most entertaining tale for today. It goes as follows: with the subtitle, Rescuer Rescues Self.

The captain of the rescue squad had a minor mission to perform, which entailed getting some things out of a car trunk. It happened that some of the things were in the very back of the car trunk.

Which necessitated the captain of the rescue squad's crawling into the car trunk.

The trunk selected this inopportune time to come smashing down and managed to lock itself. Naturally, the person was still inside, getting the tools he was after.

Readers will not be surprised to learn that the captain's first reactions were to bang and to call loudly, hoping for help. Help, however, did not come that day.

He tried again, the same methods of getting out of his predicament, banging on the car and calling, very loudly. But to no avail.

Finally he re-collected his thoughts and put his energies into another channel. He selected his tools, in the dark (rather we assume it was quite dark in the trunk, but we have never been in quite that situation). Then he began his task.

The details are obscure as to exactly what did what, but the rescue captain managed, after some 30 minutes, to use some kind of tools to unlock that trunk. And out from a locked car trunk he came crawling.

And there most certainly were some witnesses who saw him come out! Else, how would we have found out this episode of "Tales from the Trunk"?

The television companies have announced, at this time of the year, which programs have made the grade and which have not for the viewing season next year. We warn that this will not be as good as the story about the rescue above. Nevertheless, it will be told.

It seems that the very popular "Peter Gunn" is leaving the scene, as is "Wyatt Earp" and the veteran Groucho Marx show. The Shirley Temple show also is leaving the air, to name a few.

Other Editors Saying With Wind To Spare

(Charlotte Observer)
When court reform faltered, then fell, in the last days of 1959's General Assembly, Mecklenburg's Sen. J. Spencer Bell observed philosophically that court reform "is not a sport for the short-winded." He appeared resigned to a struggle that might drag out for years. Yet the wire suddenly loomed up and the General Assembly crossed it, passing a creditable court reform bill.

Court reform as now authorized must be passed as a constitutional amendment by the people in November) is not as sweeping as Sen. Bell and his friends wished. North Carolina is not to have any appeals court, inferior to the Supreme Court, which will remain its only appellate judiciary. Justices of the peace are not to be abolished outright, although their present vested interest in a "guilty" verdict is removed by the provision they're to be paid salaries instead of fees. And if the reform is approved, they will be appointed by Superior Court judges around the state rather than elected in county votes in which voters often don't know their names, let alone their qualifications. The Supreme Court is not to be in charge of the North Carolina court system, as the Bell bill of 1959 provided. It can make rules if the General Assembly delegates the power to do so; but the courts will be overseen by an administrative office similar to the office that oversees the federal courts. From this it will be seen that the "victory" of court reform was not without casualties. But it was still a victory in significant respects. The amendment will mean that North Carolina will have, at the county level, a uniform system of courts. She can move away from the present chaotic surplus of various kinds of local and county courts—and at the same time away from the shameful differences in cost, procedure, quality and swiftness that exist from town to town and county to county. These disparities can be swept up in a district system.

Let it be supposed that friends of court reform settled for a mere pittance, it should be remembered that any court reform, however sweeping, would be no means be the end—but only the beginning of a year-long drive to bring North Carolina justice in line with the need for uniformity. There will no doubt be need in the future to add to this change and also to adjust the blueprint to irreducible local circumstances and conditions. But now there can be a beginning.

When all is said and done, the most gratifying aspect of court reform passage lies in the submergence of conflict and grievances that kept the Bar Assn. forces of Sen. Bell and the legislative whigs of Sen. Lindsay Warren apart. Of course, even as the Senate suspended rules to pass the compromise bill quickly, Sen. Warren could not resist emphasizing that he had compromised from strength. His 36 satellite senators still stood with him, he claimed, and perhaps they did. But one begins to suspect that Sen. Bell and Rep. Taylor, who fought with-er, had had something to do with his decision to agree. It was, for instance, notable that Rep. John Kerr of Warren County—one of the Warren allies—had abandoned him week before last.

Why quibble over the compromise, however? In politics even one has a monopoly on right. Certainly that was true of the two factions in the court reform settlement. Compromise doesn't mean weakness. In fact it is a sign of vigor in the legislative system. Such a system rarely fails because men concede points and make settlements. It falls when legislators are too enthralled with their righteousness to concede and settle.

One hopeful note on hidden taxes is that there can't be many more places left to hide them." — Minonck (Ill.) News-Dispatch.

Quote...

"To a European, a Yankee is anyone from the United States; to a Southerner, a Yankee is anyone from the North; to a Northerner, a Yankee is anyone from New England; to a New Englander, a Yankee is anyone from Vermont; in Vermont, a Yankee is anyone who eats pie for breakfast." — La Grange (Ill.) Citizen.

Inherent Distortion In Figures

By ELMER ROESSNER
The inherent distortion of Federal unemployment statistics will be worsened this summer. The distortion is this: Unemployment statistics count the people who are unemployed and actively seeking work. What could be fairer than that? Well, for one thing, a little refinement in definition.

As it is now, because of automation, slack orders or changes in consumers' tastes, Joe J. Worker is laid off.

As it is now, because of automation, slack orders or changes in consumers' tastes, Joe J. Worker is laid off. He's looking for work. His wife, Jenny, who hasn't had a job since she quit the five-and-dime when the top price was a dime, decides to go back to work. Joe's children, Jonathan, 18, and Muriel, 16, think they ought to help out the family and register with the nearest employment agency.

Can't Forget Cuba

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

No matter what is done to quiet the discussion of the Cuban Placate, the discussion of Cuba will not die down. Wherever one goes, the discussion is about Cuba. There is a sense of shame. There is chagrin. There is hopelessness.

No nation is willing to accept such a defeat as the United States suffered in Cuba without doing something about it. That "something" might be going to war or it might be dismissing an official. But something must be done or there will be a popular explosion on the subject. The form of that explosion is unpredictable, but a wise politician like John Kennedy cannot afford to be caught in a storm.

One thing that could be done would be the publication of Khrushchev's letter to Kennedy which has influenced much thought on the subject of Cuba. This letter was announced but has not been published. According to many rumors and reports, Khrushchev made it clear beyond doubt that if the United States went into Cuba, Soviet Russia would take Berlin. This could be regarded as an ultimatum if we so chose.

Sooner or later, the United States will be forced to call Khrushchev's bluff. Shall we wait until Cuba takes Key West or Miami or shall we assume that Soviet Russia will only invade the entire Latin American continent in its conquests, leaving North America to its own devices? When an Empire starts rolling, it does not stop until it is stopped. That lesson no politician can afford to forget.

The British theory is that we can wait until Soviet Russia and Red China go to war and then we shall take advantage of the situation. But suppose Soviet Russia and Red China do not go to war or do not go to war for a century? What becomes of us during the long period of Empire-building? Do we sit on our hands and wait for something to happen?

It is true that the major effort of current diplomacy is to avoid a world war, particularly the possibility of a nuclear war. This seems to be the policy of Senator Fulbright as well as of important members of the State Department. President Kennedy has decided apparently to go along with this policy. But most Americans find it difficult to understand why we should be willing to send troops to Laos and not to Cuba. Surely, a place 90 miles from the United States is more significant than a place several thousand miles away.

In a word, if we cannot defend ourselves in the Western Hemisphere why defend ourselves in Asia or Africa? It is not impossible that there may be a sound reason for the position taken by the President and his advisors, but if there is a reason, why not tell the people what it is?

It is true that President Franklin D. Roosevelt was pulled blindly down the primrose path to war. But Roosevelt had an unusual hold over the American people and was the only President in our history to have been elected four times. He was able to convince even his opponents that his course was right and that he knew what he was doing. John Kennedy has not yet achieved such a affectionate following. He may do so. He may outdo Roosevelt in popular favor. But such an attitude does not exist now and the Cuban question is before us now. It will not die down. It cannot be avoided.

President Kennedy, like all politicians, even those in Communist countries, must have popularity as an aid to power. No man can be stronger than the support he has. When Mussolini's popularity wore thin, the Italians who had been saluting Il Duce, turned on him and killed him. Hitler committed suicide. Stalin was denounced by Khrushchev as a scoundrel after he was dead. And so it goes with all greatness.

To make even a four year term of a President noteworthy, John Kennedy must not be regarded as one who presides over a collection of quackling cooks who produce a poisonous broth. He must get rid of some of the cooks and get down to a realistic recognition of the frightful cost.

Damaging Storms Are Tapering Off

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS states. Gusty winds and heavy rain hit Laurel, Miss. The belt of thunderstorms and showers covered the southeast part of the middle Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley, parts of the Tennessee Valley, the central Gulf coast states and from Pennsylvania northward through New England.

The overflows from rain-fed rivers and streams in at least eight states left hundreds homeless, spilled over scores of major highways and secondary roads and across thousands of acres of farm lands. Rainfall in some parts of the spring storm belt since last Friday was more than a foot.

The floods, which have caused at least nine deaths, menaced areas in Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Indiana and Kansas.

The storm-related deaths totaled 33. The weekend storms and floods have caused millions of dollars damage to property and crops.

Most severe weather Monday and during the night was in a belt from eastern Ohio to western Tennessee. A tornado that struck near Memphis injured five persons and demolished or damaged several homes. Two twisters in eastern Ohio caused heavy property damage, but no injuries were reported.

Workers piled sandbags on soft levees along the surging rivers and streams. Volunteers and National Guardsmen helped in the sandbagging operations in some parts of Illinois. The overflows were reported from East St. Louis on the Mississippi across Illinois to the Wabash River on the Indiana border.

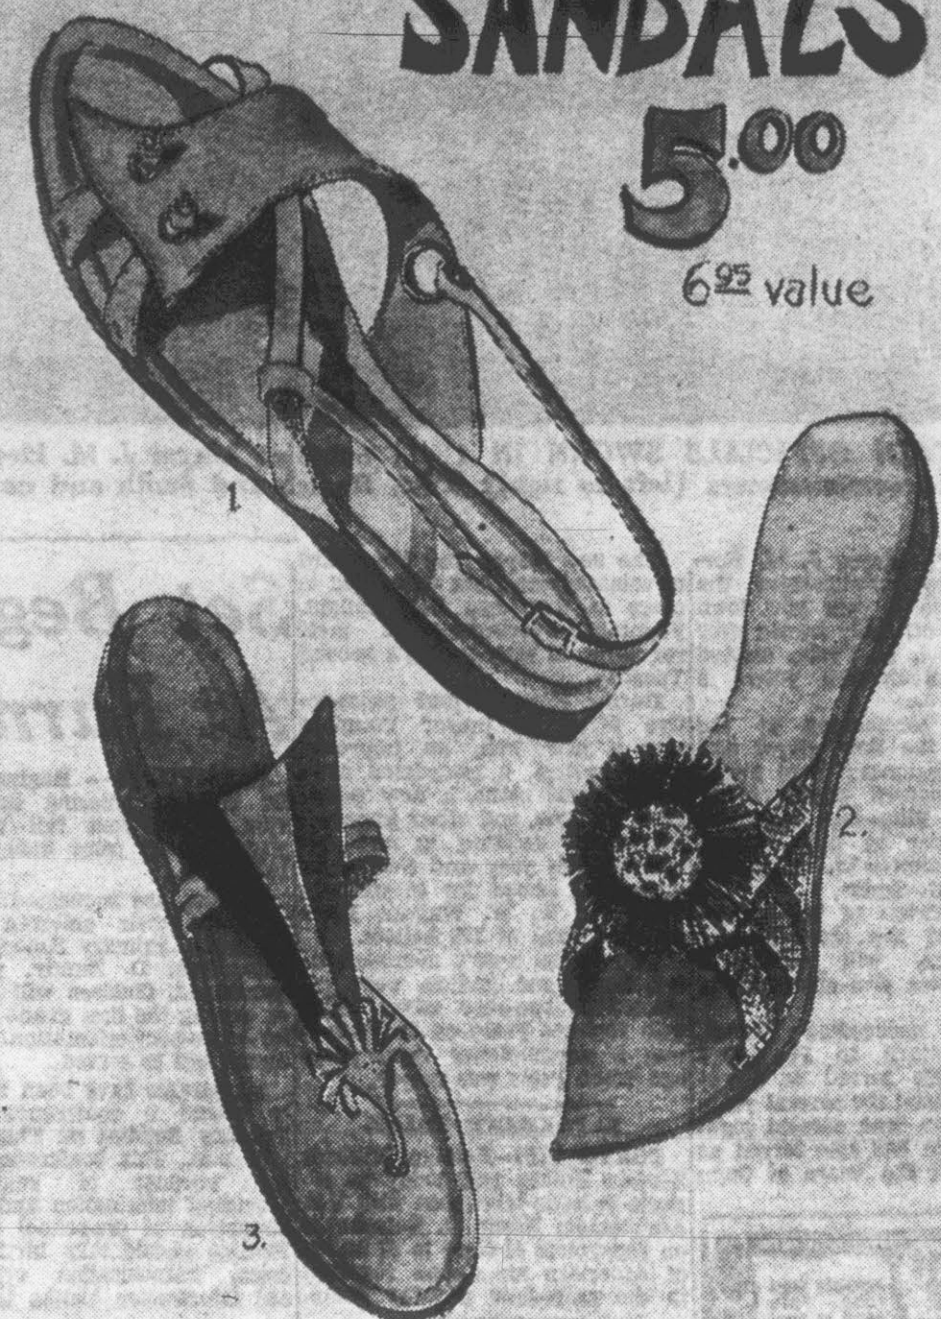

Thunderstorms and showers were reported across the eastern third of the country. Heavy rainfall and damaging winds pounded some areas from the Great Lakes region southward to the Gulf and eastward into the Atlantic Coast.

Late This Year Cleo, May Again Be Launched

By BOB THOMAS HOLLYWOOD (AP)—If all goes well, Cleopatra's barge will again be floating down the Nile late this year.

This would be about 2,000 years after it sailed with the original crew and exactly one year after it was supposed to bear the late-day Cleopatra, Elizabeth Taylor.

They're again preparing the delayed launching out at 20th Century-Fox, where no one seems daunted by the film's mishaps so far—the replacement of a director, the junking of the script, canceling of shooting after bad weather in England, Liz Taylor's near-fatal illness.

Least daunted is producer Walter Wanger, despite the loss of $5 million before the movie has been started.

Placed Third In Photo Contest

Roy Hardee, News Photographer for WNCN-TV, won third place in the feature division of the "Southern Photographer of the Year" contest held in conjunction with the Southern Short Course in Press Photography in Durham last week.

The third place feature prize was won by a three-minute motion picture "Project Mercury". The film pictured the recovery of a "Mercury Capsule" of the type used in last week's space flight, and featured the pilot and crew who recovered the space ship which carried astronaut Alan B. Shepard, Jr., on his history-making ride. The film was made at Camp Lejeune during a practice session.

Also attending the three-day short course from Greenville, was Stuart Savage of the Daily Reflector and Dr. Sam White, II.

Perhaps nothing would appease the American people more than a reorganization of the CIA and the State Department and the elimination of those who created confusion of policy. New Officials Of Fountain Sworn In Johnson Taking Offers Increased Economic Aid To South Viet Nam

FOUNTAIN—Mayor J. M. Horton yesterday administered the oath of office to four new town officials and officially turned over his post to J. L. Peele, elected mayor by Fountain's voters a week ago.

In brief ceremonies at the Town Hall, the new mayor and three commissioners were sworn in. Commissioners taking office were E. E. Ellis—last Tuesday's top vote-getter in the commissioners' election—W. C. Redick and Carter G. Smith.

Ellis, by virtue of his highest vote total of the three elected commissioners, will serve as mayor pro tem and chairman of the board.

Peele, in succeeding Horton, marks a return to Fountain's mayorship. He served as Fountain's top official for several years before Horton was elected eight years ago. He has also served as a member of the Board of Commissioners.

The new mayor and the board of commissioners are scheduled to meet at the town hall tonight. Fountain's commissioners meet regularly on each month's second Tuesday.

During Horton's four consecutive terms as mayor Fountain saw a new well, an improved water system, a remodeled sewage disposal plant, a new municipal building, and other improvements. He declined to seek reelection this year and Peele was unopposed except for 28 write-in votes for W. W. Walker. Peele polled a total of 132 ballots.

Two of the town's commissioners, Smith and Redick, were re-elected to two-year terms. Ellis, who replaces Peele on the board, was a commissioner eight years ago when Peele was mayor.

FARMVILLE — Beginners Day for children entering the Farmville School next fall will take place Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

Those who have not received information blanks may contact the school. All parents are urged to attend the Thursday meeting and to have their children present Friday morning. No physical examinations will be given at the school. Parents are asked to take children to the doctor of their choice.

Prolonged Study Of Roast Beef

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—For about five years now, Ohio State University has been conducting research with roast beef.

Home economists are trying to determine how various sizes of roast and cooking temperatures affect yield, tenderness, flavor and preparation time.

Miss LeVelle Wood, project leader, says the information will be important to restaurants, hospitals and other food service operations interested in using less expensive cuts of meat while maintaining good quality.

Uninvited Guest On Kitchen Stove

BOSTON (AP)—"Snakes alive!" exclaimed Suffolk University student Warren J. Dearden, Jr., when he walked into the kitchen of his apartment on Boston's Beacon Hill. Curled up on the stove was a three-foot boa constrictor.

Without stopping long enough to be sure what kind of snake it was, he dashed out to seek the aid of a traffic policeman. Agents for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals bagged the critter and identified it. Investigation showed a previous tenant, with unusual tastes, couldn't find his pet when he moved three months earlier.

The SPCA people said the snake apparently had gone into hibernation in a partition and came out when the weather warmed up. The society sent the snake to a zoo.

Tenement Fire Kills 5 Children

Wagerman, a member of the Canadian navy, suffered burns over 60 per cent of his body. His wife, Isabel, was less severely burned.

Pitt ASC Office Files Its Annual Report

By FAGALY and SHORTEN

The Pitt County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee has issued its annual report for 1960—a 35-page tabulation of ASC data for the year's programs.

Included in the report issued by Office Manager Wayne L. Wang are sections explaining the ASC chain of command, administrative budget, Agricultural Conservation Program, conservation reserve, reconstitution of farms, acreage allotments and marketing quotas, price support programs and performance.

The reports states a total fiscal 1959-60 budget of $121,236.44 was utilized by ASC to carry on its programs in Pitt County. Of the total $87,953 was allocated to Pitt by the state ASC office. Another $26,669.80 was collected from the county's farmers for premeasuring services and other ASC functions. The remaining $6,613.64 consisted of obligated funds brought from fiscal 1958-59.

Expenditures during the fiscal period showed $92,310.12 spent for office and field personnel. Another $8,953.42 was used for travel. Office supplies and equipment required another $8,093.38. Six more budget items ranged from $2,868.04 for refunds to $820 in unused funds.

The report said 17.3 per cent of the eligible ASC voters in Pitt County cast their ballots in the 1961 community committee election. A total of 852 of 4,931 voters participated.

ACP funds for the county, the report said, totaled $118,369 of a North Carolina total of $6.5 million.

The report said Pitt County's 1960 tobacco allotment totaled 25,172.41 acres on 2,719 farms. There was only one new farm to tobacco allotment approved in the county during the year.

Two farms were transferred out of Pitt County carrying a total allotment of 5.33 acres of tobacco from the county to Craven and Edgecombe Counties.

Indicated tobacco violations were reviewed and producers interviewed on 58 farms. Only three farms had the tobacco allotment reduced due to a violation of the Tobacco Marketing Quota regulations.

The penalty rate on excess tobacco for 1960 was 44 cents per pound. All farmers in Pitt chose not to harvest any excess tobacco. None of the discount varieties of tobacco were discovered in the county during 1960.

The report also outlined details of the ASC cotton, peanut and wheat allotment programs.

Actor Cyril Ritchard Lives In The 'Grand Manner' Offstage

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Few actors since the late John Barrymore have been able to live up to the grand manner offstage.

Cyril Ritchard is one.

"This idea of just being a Tom, Dick or Harry is all wrong," said the Australian-born star, now appearing on Broadway.

"The people in the theater should be a race apart. When they appear in public, which should be seldom, they should look as glamorous as they do on stage."

Ritchard made his most memorable hit in this country several years back in the role of Capt. Hook in "Peter Pan," in which he costarred with Mary Martin. But over a 44-year career on three continents he has won renown as a play and opera director as well as for his genius in musical comedy.

At 62, the tall actor looks 45. That can at least partly be attributed to his theory that life should be lived in the grand manner.

"I live in a small world of my own," he said, putting down his second luncheon martini and reaching for his sea food.

His "small world" includes his valet, Eddy Parr, an ex-British army cook; and two other servants in his city apartment. It also includes two more servants at his country place.

Describing his country place, Ritchard said:

"It's just a small hideaway—5½ acres—with a small lake and a small waterfall.

"Everything is lit up at night—even the trees—because, after all, I am theatrical.

"I have beavers and bird baths, and a deer comes in now and again for afternoon tea.

"All this helps keep me sane."

Ritchard keeps in shape by swimming and playing badminton but says his real hobby "is living—enjoying a sound life apart from the theater, although I'm not sure just what is sound."

"But I enjoy getting up in the morning. I like the days. I don't like parties after 1 a.m. They are boring.

"What else bores me? Well, self-appointed critics, smugness, successful businessmen—unless they're humble—people who are satisfied, and people who are hypertensive and lack control of themselves.

They can be helped, and I like to help."

Rolls Royce May Be On Way Out

LONDON (AP)—The Rolls-Royce, limousine of the truly opulent, may be on the way out.

The company that has built plush autos for kings, oil rich sheikhs, millionaires and film stars faced a financial crisis.

The trouble is caused by the recent British government law limiting to 2,000 pounds—$5,600—the income tax deduction for automobiles for company executives.

Lord Kindersley, chairman of Rolls-Royce, has warned the government that his company has been so hard hit by the tax law the firm's car division may have to cease production.

In less than three weeks since Chancellor of the Exchequer Selwyn Lloyd's budget proposal, the Rolls order book has shrunk by 75 per cent.

Rolls price tags range upward from 6,000 pounds—$16,800. The Crewe plant produces only 2,400 a year and about half of them go in export. In January the wait for a new Rolls was 12 months.

Since the budget the wait has dropped to four to five months and within eight weeks delivery is expected to be "immediate."

Lord Kindersley, who staunchly refuses to lower the standards of Rolls-Royce products to cut costs, has written to every member of Parliament appealing for a revision of the tax proposal which he claims is directed specifically at his company's luxury automobile.

Closing the group's car division would not affect the rest of the company's activities. The division last year accounted for 15 per cent of the firm's $280 million annual turnover.

Its closure, however, would mean no jobs for many of the firm's 5,600 highly skilled technicians and not even Queen Elizabeth would be able to buy a Rolls.

Want A Fire

Want to get rid of your house? Well, all you have to do is give it to the Pitt County Firemen's Association to burn.

Officers of the Association are looking for two old houses or barns to burn as part of a fire training course being conducted in the county next week.

The school, to start May 15 and run through the 22, will be taught by Greenville Fire Department Training officers, and is open to all fire departments in the county.

The buildings will be burned to give firefighters first hand experience in controlling fires.

If you have a building you wish destroyed, contact D. E. Perry of Bethel, president of the association or Roy Hardee of Greenville, vice president.

The officers emphasized that the building and site would be cleaned up after burning.

WASHINGTON (AP)—After 37 years in the House of Representatives, nearly half of them as Republican leader, Rep. Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts has chosen a new task for himself.

He operates a mobile, highly informal, completely voluntary school for freshmen congressmen, specializing in such subjects as when, and when not to speak, how to climb the political ladder, and how to get re-elected.

These are subjects Martin, 76, is well qualified to teach. As GOP leader and twice speaker of the House he has been in the thick of the legislative battles that have shaped modern America.

Martin's classroom is the House chamber during a regular legislative session. His pupils are the new Republican members.

The House, with 437 representatives of U. S. political, sectional, social and economic viewpoints, is a complex power structure with a high degree of sensitivity to outside pressures. It can prove baffling to newcomers.

Martin's method of instruction is to sit beside a new member, nod affably, and await any indication the neophyte is thirsting for knowledge. After a few minutes Martin will move on to another one.

"He never imposes himself," says one grateful pupil. "He waits until you ask him. It's a wonderful help to have someone you can go to with questions."

Rep. Joe Martin Operates 'School'

By JOHN BECKLER

WASHINGTON (AP)—After 37 years in the House of Representatives, nearly half of them as Republican leader, Rep. Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts has chosen a new task for himself.

He operates a mobile, highly informal, completely voluntary school for freshmen congressmen, specializing in such subjects as when, and when not to speak, how to climb the political ladder, and how to get re-elected.

These are subjects Martin, 76, is well qualified to teach. As GOP leader and twice speaker of the House he has been in the thick of the legislative battles that have shaped modern America.

Martin's method of instruction is to sit beside a new member, nod affably, and await any indication the neophyte is thirsting for knowledge. After a few minutes Martin will move on to another one.

"He never imposes himself," says one grateful pupil. "He waits until you ask him. It's a wonderful help to have someone you can go to with questions."

Upon request Martin will offer advice on how to vote on a particular bill, but usually his little lectures are concerned with the everyday chores of being a congressman.

One subject on which Martin is qualified to speak—but doesn't—is the loss of leadership. Two years ago he was deposed as GOP leader ("kicked out" is his description) in favor of Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana.

"That's one of the normal, expected hazards of political life," he shrugs.

But as an ex-leader, ousted after a bitter fight, Martin has little to do with Republican congressional activities. His attendance is still regular but his advice is no longer sought in the party councils.

Perhaps that explains why he devotes so much of his time to the new members and seems so peaceful and content as he wanders about on the Republican side of the chamber, stopping and talking for a few minutes to a respectful newcomer, then moving on.

"They like to have someone show an interest in them," he says. "They need someone to show them the ropes."

Workshop To Take Up Junior High Problems

Problems confronting the Junior High School will be discussed and analyzed at a workshop at East Carolina College July 12-14. Plans for the event are now being organized at the college under the direction of Dr. Douglas R. Jones of the department of education. The workshop will be the first dealing specifically with the Junior High School to be offered at East Carolina. Because of growing interest in this field of public education, it is expected that the workshop will meet with an enthusiastic response among teachers, school officials, and others. The workshop will carry three quarter hours of graduate credit, Dr. Jones has announced. Classes will meet from 9 a.m. to noon. Time will be available in the afternoon for help, if needed, on special problems suggested by those enrolled. The program will deal, according to plans, with such topics as organization and Administration of the Junior High School, the Junior High School Principal, the Junior High School Teacher, the Junior High School Curriculum and its Implementation, Auxiliary Services of the Junior High School, and Guidance and Counseling. Arrangements are now being made, Dr. Jones said, to bring to the campus for the event an authority with practical experience to direct the workshop and a group of junior high school principals to serve as leaders of discussions of problems selected by participants. The program and staff of the workshop will be announced in the near future, Dr. Jones stated. Further information may be obtained from Dr. Douglas R. Jones, Department of Education, East Carolina College.

Performers Act 'In Accordance'

BALTIMORE (AP)—The grand jury's liquor license committee, after touring the burlesque and strip-tease belt of downtown Baltimore, issued what might be called a two-part report. First, the 10-member committee told criminal court judges the shows apparently are in conformance with the law. Then the group added: "A goodly number of the performers carry out the words of a once famous song, 'Every Little Movement Has a Meaning All Its Own'."

Eisenhower To Argue Public Issues As Private Citizen

Fear And Repression Now Hold Sway In Cuba

EDITOR'S NOTE: What's the latest word from behind the "palm tree curtain" in Cuba? Richard Valeriani, National Broadcasting Company staffman, arrived in Miami Sunday in a plane-load of refugees from Havana. A former Associated Press reporter in Cuba, Valeriani here tells his story for AP readers.

By RICHARD VALERIANI
MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Three weeks after the short-lived anti-Castro invasion, fear and repression still rule Cuba.

Out of the chaos which now characterizes the sun-bathed island, only one pattern emerges clearly—the pattern of Communist dictatorship.

The Batista tyranny toppled more than two years ago by Fidel Castro has been replaced by a new tyranny, all the more fearful because of the haphazard manner in which it operates.

Havana today is in the hands of the military. All public buildings are sandbagged. Soldiers, teen-aged Young Rebels, militiamen and militiamen stand guard around the clock, their weapons slung carelessly about them.

Militiamen frisk all persons entering any public building. Women's handbags are searched minutely, down to tubes of lipstick. Visitors must open cigarette and match packs before entering hotels and other buildings.

How long this will go on is Castro's decision but anybody's guess. It appears that he will maintain the repressive measures instituted after the abortive invasion in order to retain the iron grip he now has on the country.

Castro's police machinery began spreading its reign of terror within a few hours after the announcement of the invasion April 17. Conservative estimates place the total at 50,000 arrested throughout the island, although news from the provinces is scant.

G-2 agents and militiamen, apparently working from prepared lists as well as from tips from government-organized spy committees in every neighborhood, began arresting "unreliables" indiscriminately.

The American press was a special target. Their offices were occupied and looted or both. Almost all the American correspondents were arrested or forced into hiding and refuge. AP staffer Robert Berrellez was arrested the afternoon of the invasion, held for more than two weeks by the G-2 and then transferred behind the grim walls of La Cabana prison, greatly overcrowded like the rest of the Cuban prisons.

Thousands of prisoners were herded into whatever facilities offered themselves—a baseball field and public school in Matanzas, the Sports Palace where Castro held his war crimes trials in Havana, the Blanquita Theater with a capacity of 6,500.

Prisoners later released reported intolerable conditions. They slept on floors or standing up when the makeshift jails were too crowded to lie down. They went without food for the first few days unless they could manage to send out for it.

News of the 29 executions during the three days of the invasion spread panic among the masses of prisoners.

It was intensified by the psychological torture inflicted by Castro guards who fired into the air or threatened to shoot prisoners when they complained.

The wave of arrests seemed to carry with it a license for looting and plundering. Cameras, tape recorders, radios, cars, money, and other valuables disappeared from private homes and offices in the confusion.

Churches offered no haven. Militiamen surrounded them, closed the doors and searched the worshippers inside.

The acting head of the Roman Catholic Church in Cuba, Monsignor Evelio Diaz, and the auxiliary bishop of Havana, Monsignor Eduardo Boza Masvidal, were arrested, held a few days and subsequently released.

The titular head of the church, Cardinal Arteaga, incapacitated by failing health, was accepted as a guest by the Argentine Embassy.

Three sources close to the church told me militiamen had entered the cloistered Santa Clara Convent and hauled off any valuables they could find, including nuns' rosaries.

The jailing of priests was common. The arrests spread even to diplomatic staffs, Cubans leaving the Spanish Embassy were arrested on the spot. Militiamen refused to permit milk and bread deliveries to the Venezuelan and Panamanian embassies. Castro agents broke into and looted apartments occupied by members of the Swiss and German embassies. The British Embassy's information officer was jailed.

The arrests have diminished considerably, and many of the prisoners are being released. But anyone who has ever uttered a doubtful word about the Castro regime walks in fear today.

The mass repression appears to have smashed the anti-Castro underground. Many were nabbed in the roundup. Many others took refuge in Latin-American embassies, which are bulging beyond capacity. The underground is depressed and demoralized—and yet angry.

Some underground members still free told me they were given orders not to move two days before the invasion. Arms were distributed. Activation never came.

Reliable sources estimate that up to 50,000 persons within Cuba were prepared to take up arms against Castro. They now ask each other in frustration, what happened?

Only one bomb has been heard in Havana in the last three weeks. They went off nightly before the invasion.

The victory over the invaders has given the Castro government a fresh impetus, an enthusiasm it has been lacking for months. The feeling is still general in Havana that direct U. S. intervention may come soon. The country remains on a war footing.

Castro boasted in a recent speech that the Americans will not be able to occupy the island "in 48 hours, nor 48 days nor 48 years."

But the anti-Castro Cubans are still looking to the United States for salvation, even though embittered by the invasion's spectacular failure.

Twenty arrests BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—Police sources reported Monday 20 persons suspected of supporting pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels in Laos have been arrested in Thailand's northeast border region.

The continent of Africa—home to a growing family of nations—is three times the size of the United States.

He announced his intention in an article in the Saturday Evening Post—the first he has written since leaving the White House Jan. 20.

He also disclosed that he was not sure he would not have sought a third term—if the Constitution had permitted and if he could have foreseen the Republican defeat in the presidential election.

Eisenhower said his decision to continue to play an active role in public affairs was reached as he and his wife were driving from Washington to their Gettysburg, Pa., farm after President Kennedy's inauguration.

"Suddenly, it seemed to me, this new life of mine, promised a new kind of personal adventure," he wrote.

He said he long had believed the long-term health and vigor of the nation's free government depended on the level of each citizen's interest in America's basic problems "and his readiness to discuss and argue with his fellows."

And, he continued, "I then and there determined to be a participant in such discussions and arguments as long as I might retain the strength and find the opportunity to do so."

Telling of the sights as well as his thoughts on the countryside journey, he said his wife and he were given a heart-warming welcome by students and nuns of St. Joseph College near Emmitsburg, Md.

"And so we approached the farm," he resumed. "But I was still thinking, what next? What, if anything, can I do to stir up the public interest in important public issues?"

"Before we arrived at our front door I reached one simple conclusion: 'There is little reason for me or anyone else to think and talk of or to live in the past, smugly hugging to himself memories of successes or futilely bewailing setbacks. The task is to use the past and its experiences to help us peer more clearly into the future and to do our best to make it better. 'This, in my own way, I shall try to do . . . I think it will be fun; I hope it will be useful.'"

Eisenhower left no doubt he was upset at the defeat of Vice President Richard M. Nixon for the presidency and that this conceivably could have changed his thinking about the hypothetical possibility of a third term.

He indicated that one of the questions most frequently asked of him is: "Had there been no 22nd Amendment (restricting a president to two terms), would you have been, again, a candidate for the presidency?"

Eisenhower noted that he had said publicly prior to the election that he thought more than two terms were neither wise nor desirable—even if there were no such amendment.

"These reasons were all the more persuasive to me," he said, "because of my conviction that in Dick Nixon the country had one of the ablest men in our history for the position. Moreover he was, I thought, the one best prepared for its duties and responsibilities."

"Because I had full confidence that he would be elected, I looked forward happily to turning over to him the desk in the president's office. Consequently, preceding the election, the answer was easy for me. 'But the election upset my calculations, reversed my expectations and exploded my plans and, if I could have foreseen this development, what would I have then said? I think I know—but how can I be absolutely sure? I do not see what more one can say than que sera, sera (what will be, will be).'

In light vein, Eisenhower told of some of the adjustments he has faced "now that I am a private citizen."

"I have now learned once more how to dial a telephone and how to drive a modern automobile, something I have not done for nearly 20 years," he said.

He said he suspected that in any new major national or international development he would instinctively send for a trusted adviser "already that period is passing."

A matter that is embarrassing to his friends, but not to him, he said, is how to address him as a former president.

Eisenhower said he was completely happy with "Mr." but that "in my case I rather suspect that the title 'general' will be tied to me, if for no other reason than that it was so long a part of my life and is a convenient form of address."

Airliner Safe In Foamy Landing

BALTIMORE (AP) — An Eastern Air Lines plane with 41 persons aboard landed safely on a foam-filled runway at Baltimore Friendship Airport early today after circling the field with landing gear trouble.

No one aboard the Lockheed Electra was injured. The landing was described by ground observers as "very smooth."

The front landing gear of the craft was jammed. Two tires blew out in the landing, but there apparently was no other damage.

J. W. Trammell, sales manager for Eastern at Baltimore, said the plane originally had been due at Washington at 11:15 p. m., on a flight from Philadelphia, but was diverted to Friendship because of the emergency.

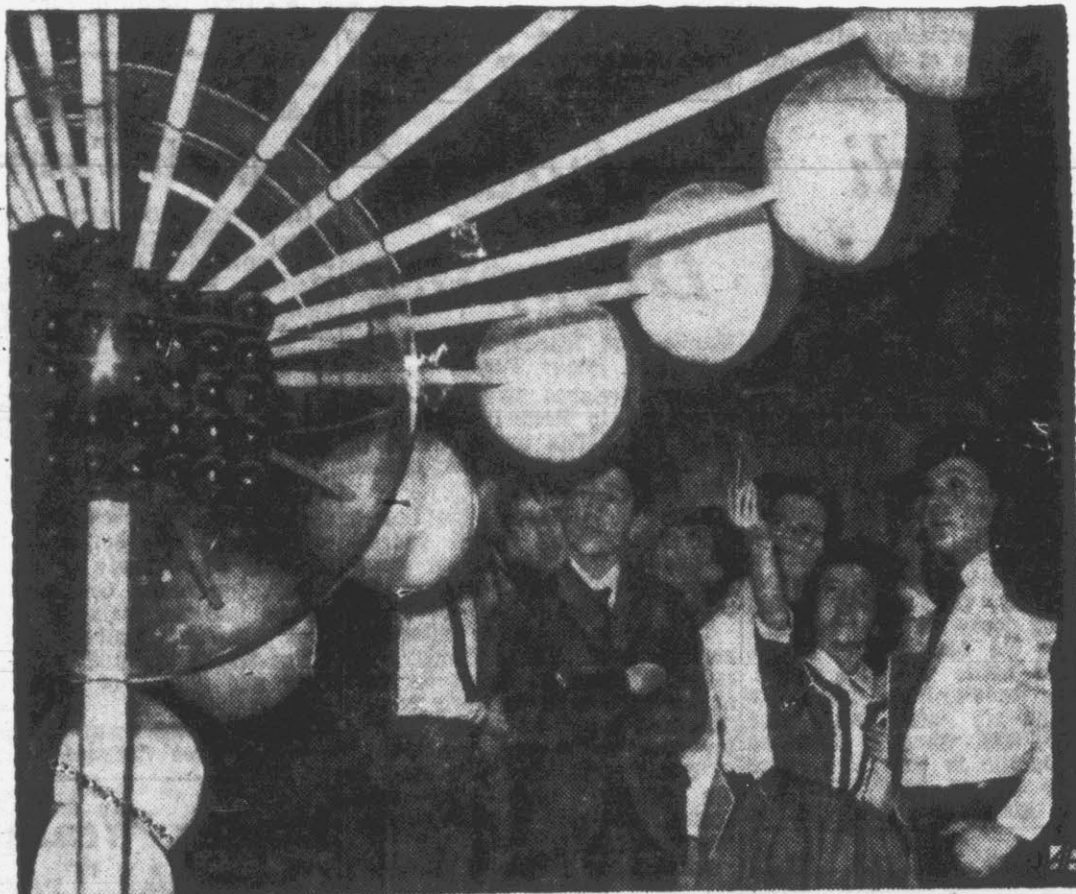

The plane carried 10 passengers and a crew of five. Eighteen police and fire emergency vehicles were standing by, including fire units from the airport and four nearby communities.

The plane, Eastern's night coach flight No. 537, landed safely on a second pass at the field at 1:40 a. m.

Trammell said the plane circled over Friendship for about 45 minutes, checking emergency procedures before heading in for the landing.

Gained Weight, Sues Hypnotist

LOS ANGELES (AP) — She didn't lose weight. The hypnotist didn't hypnotize her. So testified Celia Baca, 25, who received a $100 judgment Monday in Superior Court against professional hypnotist Isadore Cantor.

Mrs. Baca said she paid Cantor $100 on the representation that he would reduce her weight by hypnosis. But her weight rose from 150 to 176 pounds, she said. "She went to Mr. Cantor to lose weight and all she lost was her $100," Judge Walter C. Allen said. "She gets that back."

Auschwitz Survivor Tells Tiny Children Degraded

By THOMAS A. REEDY
 JERUSALEM (AP)—A French scientist who survived the Auschwitz death mill told the court today how the Nazis degraded tiny Jewish children in France before shipping them to the gas chambers.

Prof. Georges Wellers, director of the French National Medical Research Laboratory and a professor at the Sorbonne, mesmerized the court and audience with his account.

Wellers did not mention Eichmann's name, but the Israeli prosecution preceded the testimony with documents showing Eichmann's Berlin office organized the French camps as part of "the final solution of the Jewish problem."

As a medical man, Wellers could move about the Drancy camp in France. He said he saw 4,000 children—many as young as 2, 3, and 4 years old and their parents already at Auschwitz—abused and then deported to join their families only in death.

Wellers himself was shipped to Auschwitz on June 30, 1944. Six months later he was evacuated to Buchenwald because of the advance of the Soviet armies, and American troops liberated him there.

The witness said none of the adults at that time knew exactly what was happening to those deported to Auschwitz—but for the treatment of the children they all were certain the Jews of all ages were doomed.

Wellers said the deportations from France reached a peak in the summer of 1942, when the children were brought to Drancy and then shipped out. He added that altogether he saw between 40,000 and 50,000 Jews deported.

Civic Affairs Chairmen Plan Moose Activities

Newly-appointed co-chairmen of the Greenville Moose Lodge Civic Affairs Committee, Samuel Brooks and J. Robert Russ, last night invited suggestions and help in the coming year of public service activities.

"We're interested in new ideas and proposals," said Brooks "toward the broad field of community service".

Russ added the hope that with help of the lodge membership "our record of achievement in 1961-62 will favorably compare with other years". He called attention to the fact that the fraternal order's role in community affairs all over the nation has been marked by greater emphasis on civic service.

Projects for the coming year are now in the planning stage.

Enrollment ceremonies largely occupied Monday night's lodge business, eight new members being added to the ranks. They were: W. O. Jolly, Mike Hill, James C. Hillard, Robert A. Benjamin, Fleetwood B. Lilly, Jac' S. Harrington, James F. Davenport Jr., and John P. Carr. Hillard served as class representative.

Notice of the election of a 2-year trustee, to fill the seat of the late George Johnson, was made. The election will be held on May 22.

Secretary E. M. Baldree announced the lodge drill team and degree team had been invited to assist in the institution of a new Moose lodge in Elizabeth City on May 28. A bus will be chartered to provide transportation.

Other officers elected include: C. Frank Dall, first vice president; Jim Mallory, second vice president; Harry Douglass, third vice president; Marvin Buck, secretary-treasurer; Waitus Howell, assistant secretary-treasurer; Jim Gilliland, tail twister; Reginald Gray, Lion tamer.

New members of the board of directors are: H. L. Lewis, Charles Horne and Vernon Howell. They join Junius Grimes and Harry Allen on the board.

Lions were also reminded of the broom sale scheduled for next Monday night. The club has been divided into 17 teams which will canvass the residential areas that night. Lions will meet at 6 o'clock rather than the regular meeting time.

Round and flat brooms, whisk brooms and door mats will be offered for sale.

Jim Gilliland is project chairman.

CORE Traveler Arrested In N.C.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—A member of a bi-racial group traveling through the South to challenge segregation in transportation accommodations was arrested here Monday when he refused to leave a bus station barbershop.

Police said that Joe Perkins, 27, Negro, of New York City, an employee of the Congress on Racial Equality (CORE), refused three requests that he leave the barbershop.

He faces trial in Recorder's Court today on a trespass charge.

Another CORE traveler, the Rev. Elton Cox of High Point, said Perkins was CORE's field secretary in Louisville, Ky., and had entered the barbershop for a shoeshine.

The Rev. Mr. Cox said that the group of 12 had no difficulty, however, in getting service at the bus station restaurants here and in Greensboro.

According to the spokesman, the Washington-to-New Orleans journey is designed to test all facilities a traveler would encounter in bus transportation. The 16 persons, including three observers, leave here Wednesday for Rock Hill, S.C.

Business Notes

Qualifies for Sales Club
 W.P. Loftis of Greenville, district manager of Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Society, was notified today that he qualified for the Supersalesman Club in the recent "President J. Richard Sims Appreciation" membership campaign.

Loftis was one of 79 Woodmen field men in twenty-one states qualifying as Supersalesmen by writing more than $100,000 of life insurance protection during the special 61-day, nationwide campaign preceding the Society's 25 Head Camp (state) conventions held during March, April and May.

Attend Convention
 Southern Life Insurance Company announced the selection of the following members of the Greenville District and their wives for attendance at the Annual Leaders Convention in New Orleans, May 10-13, along with their standing with the Company for the year 1960.

Ranking in the top 15 percent with the Company were Staff Manager T. Whitehead and Agents C. J. Tetterton and H. S. Deans. Their leading records, along with knowledge and experience in the life insurance business enabled these men to capably perform many services for Southern Life's policyholders in this area.

There will be a larger number of Southern Life representatives and their wives attending the New Orleans Convention in May than for any previous Convention. An interesting feature of the Convention is that the entire group will travel via a special chartered train, starting from the Company's home office, located in Greensboro, North Carolina.

Attend Conference
 Mr. and Mrs. Bill Ellington have returned from Montreal, Canada where they attended the Allstate Insurance Companies' "Conference of Champions," an annual event in which the companies' top selling agents and their wives take part.

The conference helped mark the 30th anniversary of Allstate, a wholly owned subsidiary of Sears, Roebuck and Co.

Complete Course
 Fourteen men of this area completed a Life Underwriter Training Course last week at East Carolina college. The course was sponsored by the Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters.

Jake Hadley, an LUTC graduate, served as instructor and moderator for the course.

LUTC is a vocational sales training course, in two parts, each consisting of two and one-half hours per week for 26 weeks. The purpose of the course is to develop skill in life underwriting by study and class discussion of actual and typical cases reported from the field exactly as they happened. Text material was also included.

Underwriters completing the course include Billy Asby, Clarence Carowan, Dick Edwards, Noel Lee, Jr., Jake Morrow and David Roberson, members of Beaufort County Association, J. C. Gallup, of Lenoir County Association, and Floyd Cherry, Charles Forbes, Carl Kinlaw, Frank Strawn, William Stroud, Jack Wallace and J. D. Wilson Jr. of the Pitt County Association.

During the two-day program, Mr. and Mrs. Ellington participated in an active program of sales conferences. They were among the guests of honor at a banquet on May 3, 1961.

NEW WHOLESALER MANAGER
 FARMVILLE—Varina Wholesale has announced a new manager for its Farmville branch.

J. Floyd Daughtry Jr., a native of Princeton, has assumed his duties as head of the local store. He has recently completed one year of service in the company's training program.

Before joining Varina Wholesale, Daughtry was a Goldsboro farm machinery dealer for five years and was engaged in the household appliance business for six years in Princeton.

Daughtry is a Mason, a member of the Baptist Church and Lion International. He is married to the former Christine Byrd of Goldsboro and they have three children.

Planning Attend District Meet

At least two members of the Greenville Civic Club are planning to attend the annual North Carolina District Civitan Convention in High Point Friday and Saturday.

Civitan President Kenneth L. Quiggins and president-elect Herbert M. Wilkerson, who will take office here July 1, are the two local members who plan to attend the High Point meeting this weekend.

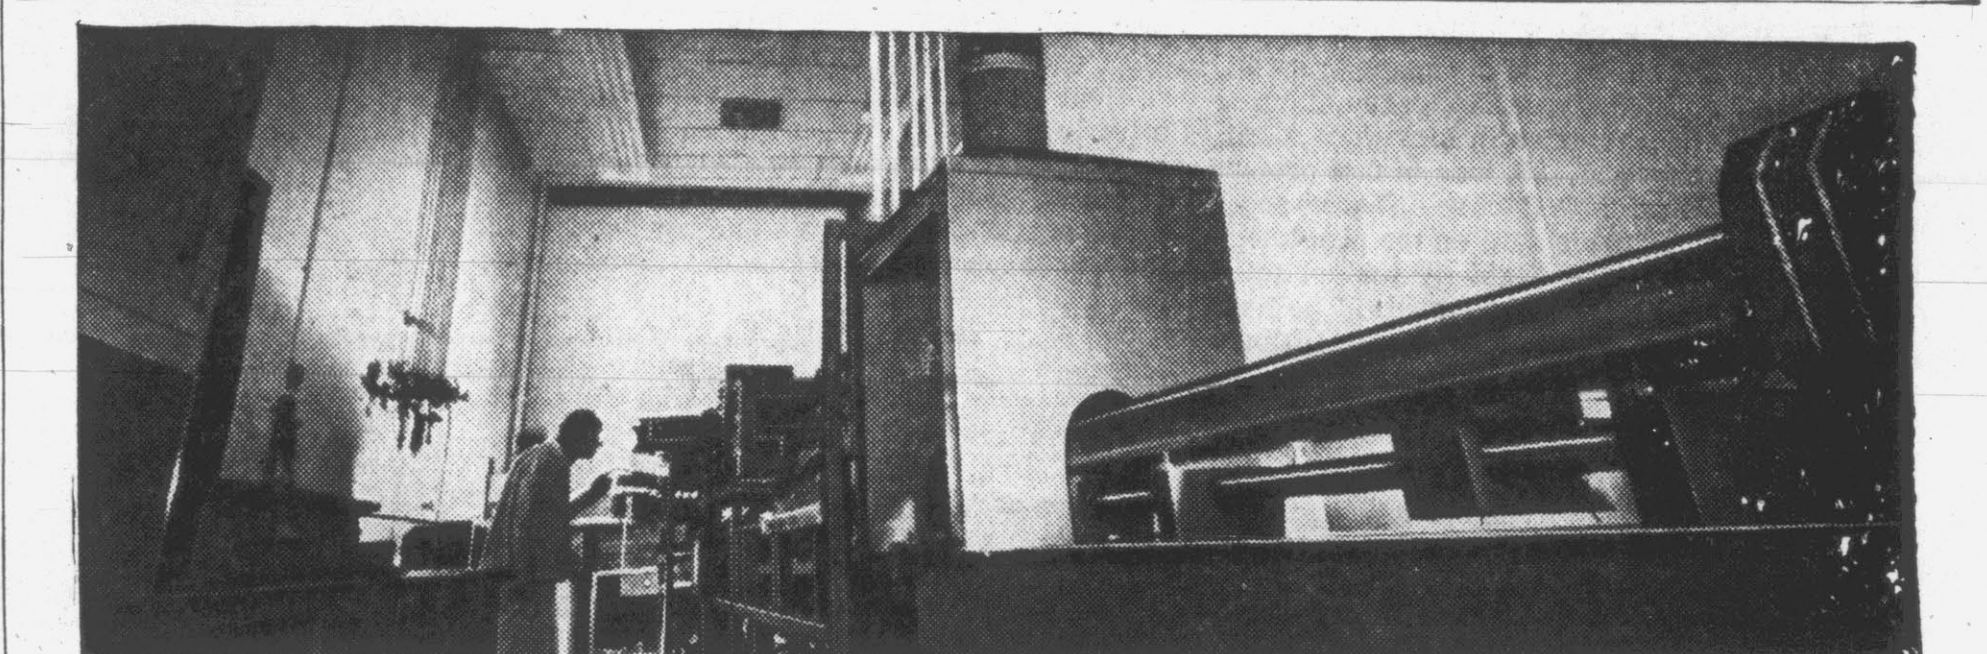

Election of district officers to serve with new District Governor Joe H. Leonard will highlight the weekend meeting. A new governor-elect—who will take office in mid-1962—will also be elected this weekend.

Leonard will succeed retiring Gov. J. Francis Essic.

All of North Carolina's 114 Civitan Clubs are expected to be represented at the convention.

CONNELL CAPA This is a "shock tube" at Shell's Research Laboratories near San Francisco. A high speed camera at the far end allows Shell scientists to study the fundamentals of combustion.

BULLETIN:

Shell discloses the nine ingredients in today's Super Shell—and the remarkable things they do to give your car top performance

- Super Shell gasoline, with 9 ingredients, is now at your dealer's. Today's formula contains cresyl-diphenyl-phosphate—a new, improved version of TCP. Read how this patented additive increases mileage, releases power, and helps your car give top performance.
- #1 is TCP for power, mileage and longer plug-life
 Today's Super Shell now contains an even better version of this world-famous additive. Its chemical name is cresyl-diphenyl-phosphate.
 TCP* additive can give your car up to 15 per cent more power; up to 17 extra miles per tankful; and can make spark plugs last up to twice as long.
 New TCP does this by neutralizing certain effects of combustion deposits. It is scientifically formulated to keep them from glowing when hot—a major cause of power loss. Also from diverting your spark—a major cause of "missing."
 The result is a super-octane ingredient that makes your engine purr with power the moment you put your foot down.
 NOTE: "Cat-cracking" refers to the use of a catalyst—a chemical substance that can alter molecules without changing itself.
- #2 is "cat-cracked" gasoline for power with a purr
 This is petroleum that has actually cracked under 900-degree heat and catalytic action. Its heavier molecules have been shattered into livelier, lighter ones.
 The result is a super-octane ingredient that makes your engine purr with power the moment you put your foot down.
 NOTE: "Cat-cracking" refers to the use of a catalyst—a chemical substance that can alter molecules without changing itself.
- #3 is Alkylate, noted for knock control in hot engines
 Jimmy Doolittle helped pioneer this high-octane ingredient for Shell aviation fuel.
 Alkylate—which took the dream of 100-octane gasoline out of the lab and put it into the skies—is now in Super Shell. It controls knocking in hot engines at high speeds far better than anything else yet available.
 NOTE: The engine in your car may frequently turn even faster than the engines of a DC-7 at cruising speed. Think of this next time you are passing on the highway.
- #4 is anti-knock mix for extra resistance to knocks
 You might think that two high-octane ingredients are enough for knock-free performance. But Shell's scientists have ears like musicians.
 So they insist on adding a special anti-knock mix. A mix, so effective, one teaspoon per gallon can boost anti-knock rating by five points.
 This mix has the tricky job of regulating combustion so that Super Shell gives each piston a firm, even push—rather than a sharp blow which would cause a knock.
- #5 is Butane for quick starts on cold mornings
 Butane is so eager to get going that Shell keeps it under pressure 400 feet below ground to stop it from vaporizing by itself. Think what this extra volatility means in cold weather.
 Your engine fires in seconds. There is less strain on your battery. And none on your patience.
 NOTE: Super Shell is primed with Butane all year round. In winter, Shell scientists simply increase the quick-start dose.
- #6 is Pentane mix for fast warm-ups on cold days
 Pentanes are made by tearing gasoline apart, much as you split kindling to start a log fire.
 In this case, the "logs" are petroleum's heavier hydrocarbons. A special process transforms their molecules from slow-burning "logs" into the quicker-firing "kindling."
 NET RESULT: Fast warm-up and top performance in a hurry.
- #7 is an "anti-icer" to check cold-weather stalling
 Super Shell's formula is adjusted up to eight times a year to beat the weather. For example, whenever the temperature is likely to be less than forty-five degrees, a carburetor anti-icer is added.
 Why add anti-icer at forty-five degrees? Because, even then, frost can form in your carburetor just as it does in your refrigerator. It can stall your engine.
- #8 is gum preventive to keep carburetors clean inside
 Even the purest gasoline can form gum when stored. This can clog carburetors and foul automatic chokes. But, with Super Shell, you needn't worry. A gum preventive does the trick.
 It acts like a policeman controlling a mob. Regulates unstable elements to help keep them from clotting. No gum problems.
- #9 is Platformate for extra energy, more mileage
 It takes eight million dollars' worth of platinum catalyst for Shell to produce Platformate. But fortunately this precious stuff can be used over and over again.
 The platinum re-forming process, which gives Platformate its odd name, converts petroleum into super-energy components—such as benzene, xylene and toluene.
 These three alone release 11 per cent more energy per gallon than 100-octane gasoline. Energy that shows up as mileage.

Shell engineer uses stethoscope to check car for top performance. Shell never stops its study of the care and feeding of today's cars. The knowledge gained leads to better and better products.

SPACE LADY

Miss Van der Wal checks "Heavens" chart to work out space problem.

Laurel Van der Wal and engineer George Ufen inspect interior of large space simulating chamber, in which experiments are conducted to show how man and equipment would act in space.

Laurel Van der Wal is a pioneer in the new frontier of space. She's a space scientist. She heads the bioastronautics group at Space Technology Laboratories in Inglewood, Calif. Miss Van der Wal, 36, was in fact project engineer on three MIA (Mouse-in-Able) shots that returned valuable data on the physiological effects of space flight by way of telemetered heart rate measurements. The first Thor-Able flight she conceived and planned carried a mouse in its nose to an altitude of 1400 miles, which is still a record for living things.

Her professional life has been filled with wind tunnels, rocket firings, aerodynamics, theoretical analysis, missile developments and space probe design.

She studied mechanical engineering at the University of California in Berkeley. After graduating with honors in 1949 she took up graduate work in mathematics, airport design, rockets and gas turbines.

Along with later employment as engineer, missile research test analyst, at various aeronautical firms she sandwiched in more advanced courses in space probing at three more schools. Since 1958 she has been with the research and development division of STL.

Yet Miss Van der Wal's life is not all space orientated. She's an avid follower of water sports—skin diving, surfing and skiing. At home she likes to spend quiet moments sewing, cooking, strumming a guitar, playing with her dog, or just loafing. She even finds the time to write technical articles.

With all her accomplishments, she'd like to try one more—a rocket flight. "I'd go in a minute if they'd let me," she says hopefully.

Working with design engineers, she reviews layout of space experiments for space vehicles. Engineers are Setsuo Okumura and Neville Barter, right.

Miss Van der Wal inspects Able V payload—first guided space craft designed to be anchored in a luna orbit to investigate moon environment.

In laboratory, Miss Van der Wal and Max J. Van der Horck conduct experiment in vacuum chamber, designed for carrying out experiments with small animals and equipment in atmosphere and area which simulate solar heat sources.

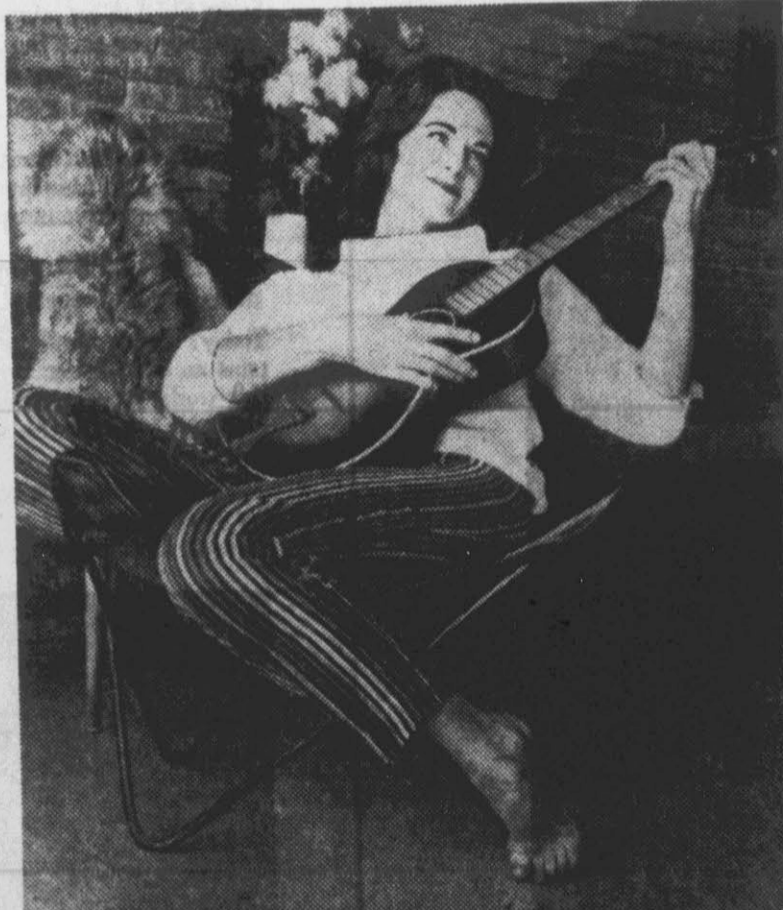

AT HOME - RELAXATION

Miss Van der Wal rests in front of her home in Playa del Rey, near Inglewood, Calif., with her dog, Penny, a Labrador retriever.

Neighbor's son, Kurt Little, 2 1/2, is intrigued by Laurel's "Whatsis," a gadget she built. It has hull of sub, superstructure of battleship, wings of jet bomber.

Fond of music, she likes to relax by playing her guitar. She also has a large record collection.

She likes to cook, prefers plain dishes like stews and roasts. "I'm a steak and potato gal," she says.

CHAPTER 27

"Let's get on with it," Fairlie said to Aral, feeling suddenly a little sick. And how things get mixed up, he thought. I have to play into DeWitt's hands by getting Thrayn away so he can lead

DeWitt to the Hall of Suns which I don't want DeWitt to find, because I can't leave Thrayn possibly to die and DeWitt won't leave him where he can't act as guide. Oh, hell.

And there is another thing, a very interesting speculation. It is this. What will Thrayn's people do to me if they catch me? Aral was several steps ahead. She stopped and looked back at Fairlie. "What's the matter?" she asked.

"Never mind," he said. "Just go on."

She led him, careful and crafty as a nocturnal hunter moving on soft paws. The mist was thick in the folds of the slope. She clung to these places and then to the sheltered lower bottoms where the stuff was like layers of white cotton-wool rolling over and over wherever the wind could get at it.

Fairlie lost himself completely. He waded through cold water, trying not to splash, and he squelched in mud and stumbled in tangled reeds, and then there was grass slippery with damp and the pavement of some iron and inextinguishable plastic that was nevertheless worn into humps and hollows by the passage of countless centuries and innumerable feet. And now there were walls around the two of them, and windows, and occasional lights and sounds.

Aral became even more stealthy and cautious. She crept. She fitted. She saw and heard all ways at once. It dawned on Fairlie that this was a talent born of long practice. She loved it. He could see her as a small child roaming quick and furtive through these streets, full of a giggling mischief.

The town smelled of ancientness. It felt of ancientness when he touched it, of substance crumbling away molecule by molecule, atom by atom, under beating suns and washing rains, under heat and frost, under the rubbing, grinding pulverizing weight of years, adding up in the thousands. Not old, as Thrayn had said, like the ruins. But old enough. Many of the buildings were empty and Aral kept to these deserted areas as much as she could.

But this aid quickly ran out on them and there were more and more lights in more and more windows and Aral began to dance on the tips of her toes, her face shining with the unholly excitement of the game. And it's well light but too faintly for their real form to be discerned. The lamps made a clustered blotch of light in the midst of this hugeness, and here the men were gathered, two or three hundred of them, listening in silence to the speaker.

And the speaker was a tiny silver sphere revolving in a plastic box.

"From the old records," Aral had said about the song. "Every body knows it." Fairlie looked down at the crowd and the little silver ball and he understood something that had puzzled him ever since he first met Aral in the ruins.

That was why the language had not changed much. The still listened to the imperishable records, still learned from them, and so their speech pattern had remained almost constant all this time.

"This is our strength," said the voice of the sphere, speaking out of the bitter nightfall of the face. "This is our hope and our salvation. We have been like children, and we have seen the results of our childishness. In suffering our eyes have been opened and we have become men. Now we know the falsehood, between that which is worth having and that which is nothing. For the first time, then, we are free."

Aral plucked at his sleeve. "Let's hurry while they're all inside." She led him swiftly away, but now her face was shadowed and uneasy.

"I know it by heart. And I always used to sneer at it, but that was before your ship came. The Lorn were so long ago—" she added irritably. "Oh, come on, don't be so slow and clumsy."

Fairlie swallowed his annoyance and followed her. The words of the ancient speaker rang in his ears. For the first time, then, we are free. He walked in the hollow empty streets, between the dark buildings and the crumbling walls and the little weak glimmers of lamplight. He looked at Aral. And he wondered.

The prancing assurance of Aral's gait suddenly lessened. Fairlie caught a look of doubt on her face. She glanced sidelong at him and then moved to a window of the building and looked in. Rashly, he thought, until he joined her and looked for himself.

"The soul," said the so-strong, so-sure voice. "That is the important thing. Not ships, not machines, not the cold glittering things that we had come to worship. No. Man's understanding of himself, his ability to enrich every moment of his life with quiet pleasure—this is our true goal."

The floor of the building was very large and it was sunk below the level of the ground so that Fairlie seemed to be looking into a big and richly decorated cave. Sweeping ramps curved down into it. Slim columns of some reddish metal, severely plain but beautiful in their soaring cleanness of line, upheld the roof.

The plastic floor still held a dim geometrical pattern suggestive of unfettered space and the walls had some sort of mural decoration done apparently with metallic wires that gleamed in the lamp-

Astronaut Shepard First Big New TV Star Of Year

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr., has emerged as the first big new TV star of the year. At a 60-minute news conference Monday carried by the three major networks, the hero of America's first manned space flight proved attractive, modest, quick-witted and flashed a delightful sense of humor.

The boyish-looking pilot fielded questions from a large gathering of reporters in Washington with a poised and easy air. He consistently used the word "we" in discussing the flight, explaining that "I am acutely aware of the hundreds who made this flight possible."

Before taking the questions, Shepard—with a grin—introduced his wife, his parents, his sister and his in-laws. At intervals he referred questions to officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and to fellow astronaut Gus Grissom. He made frequent reference to his six colleagues who shared the stage with him.

The televised news conference was preceded by two formal speeches by NASA officials which could have been dispensed with. Those in charge also permitted the session to continue too long—to a point where the questions were slow in coming.

Earlier in the day, the TV networks were tossing out regularly scheduled programs in order to follow the triumphal progress of Shepard around Washington. Most of those bumped were reruns but it was real public service, however, because all of them are sponsored.

NBC's interest in Cmdr. Shepard's progress was so great that the network postponed for a week the premiere of a new Western, "Whispering Smith." Instead, there was a 30-minute taped report of highlights of the astronaut's big day for the few who missed the live coverage and the regular evening TV news shows.

But that wasn't quite as free-handed a gesture as it seemed. The network has a sponsor ready and willing to pick up the bill for spur-of-the-moment news programs. It was the same company, by the way, that sponsored NBC's coverage of the actual space shot Friday—the only sponsored TV coverage of the event. Somehow it seemed inappropriate to preface the final countdown with a gasoline plug.

Recommended tonight: "The Renegade," NBC, 10-11 (EDT)—adventure during the first Battle of Bull Run, with Steve Cochran and Richard Ney.

AMBASSADOR ARRIVES BELGRADE (AP) — George Kennan, new U. S. ambassador to Yugoslavia, arrived early today to take up his new post. He was welcomed by representatives of the Yugoslav Foreign Ministry and U. S. Embassy at the railroad station.

Club Plans For Napkin Sale

Greenville's Exchange Club will conduct its annual Napkin Sale here Thursday and Friday nights to raise funds for the club's major project—aid for underprivileged children.

Exchange Ray Minges, chairman of the sale, announced today members of the club will canvass Greenville on both nights in the Exchange's sole money-raising project of the year.

This weekend's sale marks the 10th consecutive year in which the local club has conducted its house-to-house Napkin Sale.

A major portion of the Exchange Club's aid to underprivileged children involves providing hearing aids for the youngsters.

The local club also sponsors a Little League baseball team and Midget League baseball and football teams.

Last Sunday, Exchange President Luther Moore presented in behalf of the club a complete encyclopedia to the Free Will Baptist Orphanage at Middlesex. Presentation of the sets of books to children's institutions has been an annual function of the club in the last several years.

The Exchange Club, with the motto: "Unity for Service," meets each Friday at the Woman's Club.

Greenville's two Masonic Lodges will honor newly-elected Grand Master of Masons in North Carolina James W. Brewer at the local Moose Lodge tonight at 8 p.m.

Optimist Show Is Re-Scheduled

A Broadway-type stage production—sponsored by the Greenville Optimist Club—has been re-scheduled for May 22, the club learned last night.

At its regular meeting, Vice President and President-Elect Tom Money told the club the producer of the show had requested cancellation of the original date for the production, June 12.

Money said advance-sale tickets would arrive sometime this week and would go on sale immediately.

Money presided at last night's meeting in the absence of Optimist President Walter R. Whitehurst.

Proceeds from the stage production—"Help Mate," a three-act comedy to be presented on the stage of East Carolina College's Austin Auditorium—will go to finance the Optimists' youth and boys work projects in Greenville.

The Optimists sponsor a Little League baseball team, the Greenville Rifle Team, an annual oratorical contest for teenagers, and other youth projects.

Optimist Don Freeman is chairman of an April campaign by the club to sell advertising for a souvenir program to be distributed at the presentation of the play. The sale of advertising alone netted Optimists more than $1,000.

Big Underground Project Caves In

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A huge underground auto parking area project collapsed with a roar Monday night, creating a vast chasm filled with twisted scaffolding on fashionable Wilshire Boulevard.

No injuries were reported at the site of the four-floor excavation, scheduled to be completed next year.

Police said the cave-in apparently was caused by a ruptured water main beneath the half-block long site.

The parking area was being built beneath the multimillion-dollar California Bank building, now under construction.

Water from a broken main was rushing into a hole nearly 90 feet deep, filled with scaffolding, broken concrete and timbers.

Police closed all but two lanes of Wilshire Boulevard after the street sank about 1 1/2 feet, near the pit.

Smoke Stack Crashed, Setting Off Fire Alarm

CAUSE OF ALARM . . . This was the scene just before noon today of the roof of the Person-Garrett tobacco factory on 10th St., with a broken smoke stack and boom of a crane sticking through the roof of the structure. The stack toppled over when a cable broke. The boom of the crane was bent by the weight of the smoke stack. The mishap set off the sprinkler system within the building and automatically turned in a fire alarm from the company's box, number 13.

Greenville firemen were called to the Person and Garrett tobacco factory about 11:35 a.m. today when the sprinkler system in the factory automatically set off the fire alarm network.

Fire officers said the system tripped the alarm when a new smoke stack being installed, crashed through the roof of the building, causing the sprinkler system to rupture.

Workers said the new smoke stack was being set in place when a cable on the crane being used to brook the stack toppled over and crashed through the roof of the factory. The crane's boom was also damaged by the mishap.

No estimates of damage to the factory, crane or stack could be given at noon today.
