Church Shop

SEATTLE (AP) — When the Robert Hanscoms were looking for a building for their dress shop, they bought an empty church. They furnished it with ornate light fixtures from an old theater that was being torn down, painted the inside of the big front door bright pink, moved the pews to the choir loft and brought in a stock of dresses. Says Hanscom: "We've never found that people have any objection."

Hanscom and his wife, Dorothy, bought the 50-year-old frame church six years ago after its Methodist congregation had moved to a larger building. They tore down the parsonage next door to make a parking lot. One of their regular customers is a woman who lived in the parsonage as a girl while her father was minister.

Mrs. Bost Gives Lector Program

Mrs. V. E. Wells, Jr. was hostess to the Lector Book Club Tuesday at her home in Brookgreen. Arrangements of iris, mock orange and roses lent an air of spring throughout the house. Upon arrival members and guests were served a three course luncheon. After a lunch, members were invited into the playroom for the business and program. Mrs. Ken Phillips, president, welcomed the guests and presided over a brief business meeting. She then turned the meeting over to Mrs. Wells who in turn introduced Mrs. Stuart Bost as guest speaker.

Mrs. Bost gave a review of the book "That Certain Something" by Arlene Frances. After being asked to write a book Miss Frances chose the "Magic of Charm" as her topic. She believes that all of us have charm in one way or another. To put this charm into practice the first thing we must do is to overcome all our barriers, such as fear, tension, jealousy etc. "When you get these barriers out of the way, you might find you are a pretty nice person" writes Miss Frances. "Charm begins at home and the main basis of charm is consideration."

Guests present were Mrs. Bost, Mrs. Christine Wells, Mrs. John Drake, Mrs. Jim Ficklen, Jr., and Mrs. Jack Horton.

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

You can get about your Dahlia planting, if you have been putting it off because of the tricky weather this spring has been giving us. This Mexican flower, named after a Swede, is a great favorite among gardeners. It likes plenty of moisture and an ample supply of food. Dig in well plenty of humus forming material and then fork in about 3 ounces of bonemeal to the square yard.

The Dahlia should be set in an area to themselves. However, you can put them in your flower border. They like a sunny place but will flower freely in partial shade.

Set them 18 inches to 36 inches apart according to the height they will grow. As soon as the plant has grown up out of ground a little way, tie it to a stake. When the plant reaches the height of one foot, start fertilizing. Keep this up at monthly intervals. Use a fertilizer low in nitrogen and high in phosphorus and in potash (5-10-10). Cultivation should follow each feeding and after each rain. Keep a dust mulch of one to two inches deep around plants at all times.

If you haven't gotten your tubers, visit your local seed store and look over his selection.

Late spring is also a good time to transplant Magnolia. Be sure to get as many roots as you can. Spray tree with Wilt Pruf before you start digging plant.

Now is the time to seed your Bermuda lawn. Use two pounds of seed for each 1000 square feet. If started from seed, care must be taken to see that a dry summer doesn't kill off your stand of grass.

Fertilize existing Bermuda lawn now. Use about 15 pounds of 8-8-8 to each 1000 square feet of area. Put this on when grass is dry. Cut grass to height of one inch and keep mower set at this height all summer. Don't let grass get out of hand—mow at least every four to seven days according to growth rate.

When the foliage on your tulip has finished its work, overplant with Petunias, Zinnias may be seeded until July. Marigolds can be seeded until about middle of June.

Keep your eye peeled for bugs and plant diseases. They should be ready to make life miserable for you and your plants.

This spring and throughout the growing season, keep a garden record. Make your gardening more fun by testing different kinds of plant food on certain test plants. This should enable you to go about feeding your plants with better results in seasons to come.

Look your shrubs and trees over for broken and torn branches. Prune them and paint with tree paint. This should enable wounds to get a good start toward healing up.

Rye grass in open areas will be going out soon because of warm weather. Lower your cutting blade to one inch and cut over area. This should permit Bermuda that was seeded over last season to get some sun to it and get off to a good growing start.

Gardening weather seems to be here to stay. So fall in step with the new season.

Paper Hats Go Stylish

AP Newsfeatures
Paper hats are no longer strictly New Year's Eve. This summer you may see them anywhere from the boulevard to the beach.

Now that a way has been found to convert paper into yarns narrow enough to be knitted, hat makers can treat this knit paper with wet-strength resin for more practical toppers.

Some claims for knit paper hats: They will be available in unlimited patterns, colors and styles; stand up under repeated washings and dry cleanings; withstand 350-degree heat and more than 5,000 pounds of pressure; resist salt water, outdoor weathering and punctures, and be inexpensive.

But makers of the new fabric say, all knit paper doesn't have to go to your head. They predict it'll be used for carpet backing, automobile trunk and interior linings, reusable or disposable packages, draperies, slipcovers, dresses, coats and underwear.

Complexion Care

To achieve a beautiful complexion, you need plenty of liquids—both inside and out. This includes drinking at least six glasses of water per day, plus fruit juices and at least one glass of milk.

Externally, your skin needs daily bathing with plenty of soap-suds to wash away soil and oily secretions. This lets the skin "breathe," and removes possible sources of blemishes. While washing, massage the lather on with upward motions. Combining stimulation with soap-suds produces maximum benefits from this daily beauty treatment.

When you need to take the sleep off your face, or an oily shine off your nose, reach for soap and water. This will assure a clean base for "putting on your face."

Candy Fanciers: Divinity Fudge Makes Comeback

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor
NOW THAT the 1920s have inspired this spring's dress styles, how about reviving the candy that the flapper era ushered into home kitchens?

Divinity! While flappers were learning to do the Charleston, their mothers were probably learning how to beat up a batch of this luscious fudge. According to our culinary sleuthing, recipes for Divinity Fudge didn't begin to appear in our cook books until after World War I.

Probably the offspring of age-old nougat candy, our guess is that Divinity was sold in candy shops before home cooks ferreted out the secrets of its making. By 1929 Divinity was in its heyday and was known also as "fluff" or "feather" candy.

A 1929 candy cook book gives five ways to vary the original vanilla-flavored Divinity: Rose Mint (colored pink and flavored with wintergreen); Pineapple (chopped candied pineapple added); Sea-foam (made with light brown sugar; Brown Sugar (made with dark brown sugar; and Chocolate.

The first home recipes for Divinity took long, long beating because a one-temperature method for boiling the syrup to be beaten into the egg whites was used. We find that the two-temperature method given in the following recipe cuts down greatly on beating time. This Chocolate Divinity is easy to make, and so easy to eat that our family keeps asking for more!

CHOCOLATE DIVINITY

- 2 1/2 cups sugar
- 1/2 cup light corn syrup
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 egg whites
- 2 squares (2 ounces) unsweetened chocolate
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts or pecans (if desired)

In a medium-sized saucepan (about 2 quarts) mix together the sugar, corn syrup, water and salt. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a boil. Reduce heat; cook without stirring to 248 degrees (on a candy thermometer) or until 1 teaspoon of the syrup dropped into 1 cup ice-cold water forms a firm ball that does not flatten. Just before syrup reaches 248 degrees, beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Pour about 1/2 of the syrup very slowly over the beaten egg whites, beating constantly until blended. Meanwhile cook the remainder of the syrup to 272 degrees or until 1 teaspoon dropped into 1 cup ice-cold water separates into threads that are hard but not brittle. Add syrup, about 1 tablespoon at a time, to the first mixture, beating well after each addition and using either a wooden spoon or an electric mixer. If mixture becomes too thick for mixer, continue beating with a wooden spoon. Continue beating 5 minutes after last addition of syrup. Add melted chocolate and vanilla. Beat until mixture begins to lose its gloss and holds its shape when dropped from a spoon—about 5 minutes more. If nuts are used, mix them in at the end of this beating period. Drop by teaspoons onto waxed paper. Makes about 1 1/4 pounds SNOWY DIVINITY: Omit chocolate; after last addition of syrup, continue beating until mixture holds shape. jiffy.

Up To Those Who Register, Vote

Pitt County voters who wish a direct voice in saying whether the county shall issue $395,000 in bonds for construction of the proposed industrial training school will have to register on one of the next four Saturdays in order to be eligible to vote in the referendum on June 17.

In a county-wide school bond election such as this, a special registration of voters is required, and only those who register during the specified period will be allowed to vote on the bond issue. Having previously registered on the county's voting books does not automatically qualify one to vote in this special bond election.

The location of one of the state-supported industrial training schools in Pitt County has been approved by the State Board of Education and subsequently has received the endorsement and support of the County Board of Education, the County Board of Commissioners, the Pitt County Development Commission and various civic and business organizations throughout the county. The erection of such a school in the county is recognized by these groups as a great potential asset to Pitt as the county seeks to broaden its industrial base and develop its economy.

Under the legislation which authorizes such state-supported technical schools, the local government is responsible for constructing the physical plant of the school and paying about 10 per cent of the annual operating cost. The other 90 per cent of the annual operating cost of the school is underwritten by the state.

It is now squarely up to the voters of Pitt County to say whether or not such a facility will be located here. In more realistic terms, it is up to those who register for the forthcoming special election to say at the ballot box whether Pitt shall have the advantage of the proposed school.

We urge citizens throughout the county to take time this coming Saturday to register at one of the 25 polling places throughout the county in order to be eligible to vote in the June 17 bond election.

The technical training school is a facility which will increase considerably the development potential for the county, for it will provide here a source of trained workers for any kind of industry which might consider Pitt as a possible location for a plant. Moreover, the school will provide here in this county a facility at which people can learn skills which will enable them to secure better jobs in Pitt County or elsewhere.

Local citizens should see to it that Pitt County takes advantage of this important opportunity by approving the proposed bond issue that will make the school a reality here.

Some Progress In Redistricting

By LYNN NISBET

FORMULA—Substantial progress was made toward solving the congressional redistricting problem in the House committee Tuesday morning. The members discussed criteria for establishing the district lines and to all intents and purposes agreed upon three primary points.

The first consideration is to be the welfare of the Democratic party. The second is to guarantee security for incumbent congressmen. Third is the best interests of the State of North Carolina.

Of course, they didn't state the formula quite so baldly. In fact, all the direct statements placed good of the State in first place. Elaboration of an explanation of the several district arrangements which have been proposed accented security of the Democratic party and incumbent congressmen.

There was suggestion that the seniority and committee prestige enjoyed by incumbents should be evaluated as one of the items in determining whether he would be left alone or put in a district with another incumbent. This attitude assumes that the congressman has an inherent personal property right in his seat—which is contrary to all the tenets of democracy.

There was clear indication, too, that east-west rivalry will have substantial influence on the committee—and that may tend to solidify a statement of the congressional district committees in both houses are composed of one member from each of the present 12 districts. That means the committees are about divided among east, middle and west areas.

SECTIONAL—Of the five bills which have been introduced, two would put western incumbents against each other, three would put the dual-member new districts in the east. Rep. Ed Kemp of Guilford and Sen. Robert Moran of Cleveland would put Congressmen Harold Cooley and L. H. Fountain in one new district. Sen. Max Thomas of Union would put Fountain and David Henderson in the same new district. Bills by Rep. Herbert Hardy and Sen. Bill Eubank would put Congressmen Basil Whitener and Charles Raper Jonas against each other in a new district.

Hardy frankly said that his main purpose is to get rid of Jonas, presently the only Republican in the congressional delegation. He thinks that can be accomplished by taking Mecklenburg out of his district and running him against Whitener or Gaston, a proven Democratic vote getter. The tenor of conversation around the committee table was that each member wants his own area left alone, and the reduction in number of congressmen made somewhere else.

Hardy said at one point that he is trying to help the Democrats in the west, and warned that if "something like" his bill is not enacted "we eastern folks won't care how many Republicans you elect—we are not going to elect any." Rep. Jack Palmer of Burke asked Hardy to repeat that statement, said he was afraid he didn't hear correctly. Thereupon Chairman Ed Kemp warned against heated personal references. Then Rep. Pat Taylor of Anson suggested that some criteria or formula should be adopted before maps are drawn. Items should take into account population, area, communication facilities, prestige of incumbent congressmen, protection for the Democratic party, and other factors.

BY-PASS—Rep. Roger Jackson of Hertford said he felt like reaching out a long arm, clear across the piedmont, and shake hands with the small counties in the west and work together with them. "The far western folks are satisfied with almost any of the pending bills. There was no way redistricting could affect them except by adding more counties on the eastern edge—and the added counties would tend to increase the Democratic majority."

INDEPENDENT—Meantime, House and Senate committees are meeting separately considering the bills introduced in their respective branches. Suggestion has been made that sometime next week the two groups meet together to see if they can work out a commonly acceptable district pattern. It must be remembered, too, that there are 108 members of the House and 38 members of the Senate who are not on the committees, but who have just as strong ideas about how the lines ought to be drawn.

AMENDMENT—The committee gave a favorable report to the bill providing for automatic apportionment of seats in the House of Representatives by the Speaker of the House after "every enumeration" by order of Congress. Rep. Pat Taylor thought the word "enumeration" ought to be clarified and the fact spelled out that it meant the decennial census. When it was explained that language has been used in the constitutions and all statutes, both Federal and State, for many years, Taylor accepted it. But he still insisted on an amendment. He changed the first letter of the word from a lower case "e" to a capital "E."

Ghost Of Old Program Again Proves Downfall

Rejection of the proposed auto inspection law by a 58-55 vote in the House yesterday bears out the assertion that good legislation may be quickly forgotten in North Carolina, but poor legislation is long remembered.

It was in 1947 that North Carolina passed its first motor vehicles mechanical inspection law, and for the next two years citizens were required to wait in long lines while their vehicles were inspected for mechanical defect by designated persons. The mechanical inspection law caused such a furor throughout the state that the General Assembly two years later repealed the law.

In each session of the General Assembly since then there has been a move to revive mechanical inspection for motor vehicles in some form. And in each session the matter has been rejected by the legislators, primarily because of the adverse reaction created by the initial mechanical inspection program.

Passage of the mechanical inspection measure in the Senate and the defeat of the proposal by only three votes in the House this week represents the closest North Carolina has been able to come to adopting a new mechanical inspection program. It indicates that the impractical program undertaken more than a decade ago still is remembered throughout the state, and the ghost of the old program has, session after session, proved the downfall of new proposals.

It may be that some future session of the General Assembly will write into law a new mechanical inspection program for motor vehicles in North Carolina, but it appears the taint of the poor legislation originally passed will be associated with mechanical inspection proposals for years to come.

Not Backing Up One Big Pledge

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy, speedy in making good on some campaign pledges, is not backing up his promise to promptly offer and fight for a broad civil rights program.

Before he was elected, he was all for new civil rights legislation in a hurry. Now, after almost four months in office, he sees no need for speed.

Last September he promised to make a bill "embodying all the pledges of the Democratic platform" on civil rights a "first order of business" when he took office. He named two Democrats to prepare it.

This week these two — Sen. Joseph S. Clark (Pa.) and Rep. Emanuel Celler (N.Y.) — offered their civil rights package in Congress.

What was the administration's reaction? White House news secretary Pierre Salinger said Tuesday the Clark-Celler offerings "are not administration-backed bills." He said the measures were "introduced by them and are their bills."

Salinger said Kennedy had made clear that "he does not consider it necessary at this time to enact new civil rights legislation." He added that Kennedy's position has been to exercise all possibilities under legislation already on the books and to employ "powers" which the executive department possesses.

The fact that the administration didn't push for new civil rights laws so far this year must have had a pacifying effect on Southern Democrats in Congress where Kennedy hasn't had too much trouble getting his other programs through up till now.

In a Congress as conservative as this one, antagonized Southern Democrats — leaning up with conservative Republicans — could have done a wrecking job on Kennedy programs awaiting congressional action. If he came out now for powerful civil rights proposals, and really fought for them, those other programs could get royally fouled — up by the Southerners' war on civil rights.

Yet, this is what Kennedy said last Sept. 9 in Los Angeles when he was campaigning for the presidency:

"The president must give us the legal weapons needed to enforce the constitutional rights of every American. He must draft the programs — transmit them to Congress and fight for their enactment, taking his case to the people if Congress is slow-acting."

"Much legislation is needed. We must continually strengthen the legal framework which will allow us to move toward economic, educational and political equality."

"Such legislation is already being prepared. I have asked Sen. Clark and Congressman Celler to prepare a bill embodying all the pledges of the Democratic platform, and that bill will be among the first orders of business when a new Congress meets in January."

These promises got a lot of attention at the time, particularly when the Democrats were seeking the Negro vote in the large Northern cities. But to date the administration has not backed any civil rights program.

Houseboats And Tugboats

Anyone who has lived around the water can tell a houseboat from a harbor tugboat. The houseboat has a suite of luxurious cabins equipped to provide every comfort. Usually it is painted a spotless white, with gleaming chrome or brasswork. What is contrast with the dingy tug, whose small pilot house is crowded in above a hot, puffing engine. The houseboat is mostly cabins with a little engine. The tugboat is mostly engine with very little cabin space. The houseboat is built for pleasure, the tugboat, for work.

The society in which we live has its houseboats and tugboats too, figuratively speaking. We all know the houseboat type of person: charming, attractive, glamorous, luxuriously — and often idle. Like the houseboat which catches our eye by its beauty, this person automatically draws our admiration and interest. It is much harder to see the virtues of the tugboat type whose hard work and constant devotion to duty often make him appear plain and uninteresting.

But just remember: if you start out to buy one, you will find that tugboats cost more than houseboats. And when the water gets a little rough, there won't be a houseboat in sight, but the tugboats will still be doing their job. Don't let a little paint and polish fool you about the value of boats—or of people, either.

Harvard Was Never Like This!

From Border To Border

Yes, yesterday was a miserable afternoon. The rains came one after another drenching Greenville from city limits to city limits and Pitt from county line to county line.

Your columnist faced the task of writing this effort for today's edition. So I decided to hike down to the Blount-Harvey's parking lot where the Jaycees were staging a kiddie circus for the day.

The rainfall had ceased at the time so it seemed it might be a pleasant hike. But, alas, the bottom dropped out half way between here and there and your columnist was soaked.

Only the benevolence of one Max Ray Joyner saved me from pneumonia. He spotted me cringing against the Blount-Harvey building and kindly offered a ride.

Oh yes, I can report as the result of my venture that there weren't rare young'un on any of the rides at the time of my visit. In fact the circus workers were huddled under the merry-go-round tent attempting to remain dry as sheets of rain fell.

The elephants and ponies just stood and bore it. Oh well, I trust today will be a sunny one.

Today's bankers are encouraged to continue their studies. This was indicated by recognition of approximately 25 bank employees at the tenth annual American Institute of Banking Greenville chapter banquet Tuesday night.

These employees from Greenville and nearby towns had completed courses offered through the AIB. One group recently completed a course entitled "Negotiable Instruments" taught by Attorney William Brewer. Another group finished a course entitled "Principles of Bank Operation" taught by Reid Hooper of Wachovia.

R.W. Howard, senior vice president of Wachovia, pointed out this second class had continued through 21 weeks. Howard urged the bankers, who represented all Greenville banks as well as those in other towns, to pursue such studies. "Here is your opportunity to improve your skills, to improve your ability to do a better job," he declared.

He predicted that practically everyone in attendance will be called upon at sometime to do something and they would hesitate to do so because of inadequate training.

City clerk's office received a call about the time Charles M. King was being sworn in as mayor replacing S. Eugene West yesterday morning.

The person at the other end wanted to speak to the mayor. "Which one?" the puzzled clerk asked.

The voice replied that it didn't make any difference. The caller just wanted the mayor of Greenville.

Opinions In Brief

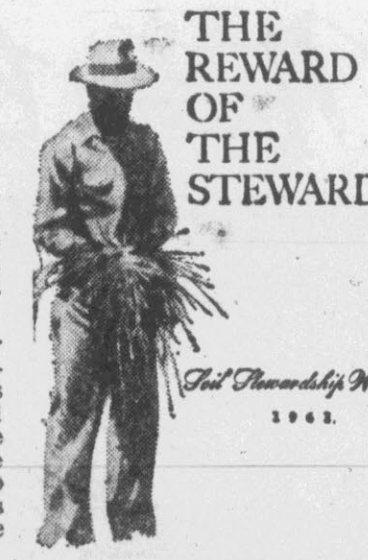

"It is well to keep in mind that the inner workings of this free nation are known to all the principal powers of the world. How well we conduct our home defenses will invite or discourage attack from those who would destroy our way of living in freedom." — Landrum (S.C.) Leader.

"Not much is new. During Nero's time, 200,000 Roman citizens were on relief drawing seven bushels of grain from the government each month, plus a free show every day to keep them occupied." — Mattoon (Ill.) Journal-Gazette.

"You know that the American people do not want their sons killed in wars in Asia or in Africa or anywhere. This ties the hands of the President who undoubtedly feels that should he insist upon upholding American rights, he would find himself without popular support."

"This is a point of view but it is not good enough because it turns this into a nation of cowards. It is too early in our history to live in our inactivity to war is involuntary isolation and perhaps reduction to the paucity of a Soviet satellite."

"Is this an extreme view? What of those who were two years ago denying Castro's connection (Continued on Page 5)

Human Termites Are Swarming

By ELMER ROESSNER

Termites swarm this time of year.

The insect type comes out of burrows in wood and flies off, seeking new places where they can shed their wings and bore into wood, eating, eating, eating.

The human type comes back from Las Vegas, Miami Beach, Jay or other wintering places, seeking home owners they can victimize, cheating, cheating, cheating.

There are new gimmicks each year but, curiously enough, most of the human termites continue to use old swindles. It is easier to find suckers who are unfamiliar with the old gyps than it is to perfect new ones.

WHAT TO LOOK OUT FOR Here are some of the more common swindles.

The free lot: This is expected to be worked heavily in most parts of the country because it has been used only lightly in the last few years. Householders are given chances on free lots, purportedly to promote a new development, usually some place in Florida, Texas or California.

All who mail in coupons or postcards are notified that they have won a lot. Sometimes they are invited to buy an adjoining lot at anything from $99 to $900 to "make the prize lot an 'estate.'"

But always there is a fee for surveying, registering title, writs of habes plotius and other things. The gull is separated from several hundred dollars and if he ever finds his lot he will discover that it is $9 worth of desert or swamp.

To save money; remember that if a development is good, no one has to give lots away for advertising.

YOUR OWN BABYLON The sharp landscaper: These horticultural termites have been fairly quiet recently, but they are likely to emerge in swarms with the rise in new homes. They approach home buyers and draw up a plan to landscape the layout. The sketches look wonderful, with imposing trees and impressive shrubbery just where they should be. The price is amazingly low — only $200 or $300 — with a contract already.

The home-owner signs, the landscaper come around, they scatter a bale of peat moss and a yard of top soil, sprinkle a couple of pounds of grass seed where the lawns are marked out, and plant the trees and shrubs. The trees are two feet tall, and the shrubs are four or five inches high. If the home-owner waters, fertilizes and waits 20 years, the effect will be just like the sketch.

To save money; deal with only established, local landscapers.

FERTIL—THEY SAY—IZER? The lawn gimmick: This is a quickie. A pair drive up in a truck and begin scattering black stuff on a lawn. When the lawn is half covered, one rings the door chimes and tells the householder that he's just discovered he made a mistake. He had an order to spread $150 worth of fertilizer on a lawn in the next block but got the numbers confused. He can't rake up the stuff, but to save his job, the home owner can have the full load for $49. Compassion (laced with avarice) often causes the owner to agree. The black stuff usually turns out to be soot from oil burners and can kill a lawn dead for three years.

To save money; if someone scatters stuff on your lawn, call the cops.

THE BOILER BUNKO: The furnace racket: A slicker offers to examine the furnace and/or boiler at no charge; sometimes he represents himself as city inspector. He dismantles things like crazy and after he has the furnace room strewn with parts, he announces that a new furnace is needed at some large price. He can't put the old one together, so the householder will have to decide quickly. This is more often a fall than a spring gyp, because snappy weather forces faster decisions.

To save money; let only your regular gas or oil suppliers, or established firms in your neighborhood, advise you on furnace and boiler problems. The door chimes are sounding; we have to postpone the rest of this until tomorrow.

Similar But Not The Greek Drama

Jean Anouilh's Antigone is not Sophocles'. There are of course similarities between the two versions. The central disturbance for Antigone and Creon and all the lesser personages remains the same. The story unfolds with the same sequence of action and movement: Ismene tries to join her sister's rebellion at the last minute; Haemon defies his father and follows Antigone in death. But there are differences. Haemon in Sophocles' version has a more important scene with his father in which he rises from a supplicant and obedient son to a persuasive and climactic rebel. But no blind prophet Teiresias in Anouilh's Antigone warns and threatens Creon so thoroughly that he rushes to release Antigone from the cave of death and to bury her dishonored brother Polynices. Anouilh has Creon attracted to the cave because he hears Haemon's cries. The modern-day rendering of the last war's soldiers that Anouilh accords his three guards is suggested in the earlier play, but Anouilh can take deserved credit for the lively and entertaining figures that he has made of them, especially the leader. Anouilh has a scene between the affianced Haemon and Antigone, in which she declares the depth of her love and hints the doom about to descend upon her. Sophocles does not have such a scene. Anouilh has a chorus who recite in turn (the strophe and antistrophe of the Greek play?), but the original Greek audiences would surely find different Anouilh's two men in evening dress and cloaks, who flit in from their assigned perches on the apron of the stage, like birds of ill omen, to croak their messages of disaster and tragedy. And who would not say that the language of the two writers was different, even above the fact that one wrote in ancient Greek and the other in modern French? The translations into English are bound to come out differently. For one thing, the stichomythia of the Greek play—the alternating single lines that are exchanged by the speakers as they debate and dispute—are not to be found in Anouilh. The modern theater has other conventions for Anouilh to use.

Mr. Anouilh should not say that his Antigone is a translation of the Greek play. He may feel his indebtedness to Sophocles and may acknowledge it, but he has written his own version of the Antigone story. Advertisement of the current East Carolina Playhouse production of Antigone fell into the error of pronouncing it a translation, perhaps out of a desire to capitalize on Sophocles' great name. But Anouilh's play can stand on its own merits as good theater, just as Sophocles' Antigone can.

The Playhouse production, which began a three-night run last night in McGinnis Auditorium at the college, draws plaudits to its director, Mr. Claude Garren of the English department; its actors, headed by Mrs. Garren as Antigone and Dr. H.D. Rowe of the English faculty as Creon; and its staff, who have provided suave and capable support. The right decisions were made as to lighting (particularly good is the scene where Creon sits crushed in his throne chair after the world has fallen in upon him) and as to tempo of the play: the play moves without an intermission to its striking climax and inevitable close. Abetting the good theater of the play are the actors who, besides the two already mentioned, are Charlotte Donat in the role

Likes Geniuses Off Playgrounds

CLEVELAND (AP) — There won't be any geniuses among the 500 playground instructors—mostly college students—that the city and school system hire this summer.

"I like geniuses," says Recreation Commissioner John S. Nagy, "but not on the playground I like them in laboratories."

The reason for not hiring anyone who scores 140 or more on the qualifying intelligence test, Nagy said, is:

"After a week, they learn everything there is to know. Then they're not interested in their jobs any more."

Just for the record, no one is signed up who scores less than 70, either.

THE HAUNTED STARS

By EDMOND HAMILTON

CHAPTER 23
Fairlie picked up the reaping-hook that lay where Thrayn had dropped it.
"DeWitt," he said.
DeWitt looked at him.
"I have something for you. A sample of the mighty armaments of the Vanryun." Fairlie tossed the reaping-hook.
DeWitt caught it, looked at it, then looked again at Fairlie. "You have a funny sense of humor," he said, "but it doesn't amuse me." Fairlie spoke to Thrayn. "He doesn't believe this is a weapon." Thrayn lifted his head from where he had been resting it in Aral's lap. "It's true. We haven't any weapons. We haven't needed any since—" He broke off, his face sullen and disturbed.

Fairlie translated.
"Since what?"
"Since we stopped trying to fight the Liora." Thrayn got up. He took Aral's hand and pulled her to her feet. "I don't think I want to go to the Hall of Suns. I don't want any more to do with this." He started off with Aral.

DeWitt stepped in front of him and pushed him back. "Wait a minute. What's up with you, Fairlie?" Fairlie told him. "Well, you tell him this. They were going to kill him, weren't they, and we got him out. He owes us something for that, doesn't he?"
When Fairlie had translated that, Thrayn glanced at DeWitt almost contemptuously and then looked at Fairlie. "You got me out, you and Aral together, and I expect you made your own bargain."
Fairlie was angry. And then he realized that Aral was not angry and that Thrayn had simply made a logical statement. Fairlie shook his head, baffled. "No bargain," he said. Then he asked Thrayn, "What are you afraid of?"
"Nothing. I just don't want to go, that's all."
"You're afraid, the whole town is afraid—afraid enough to try and kill us if we don't leave them alone. Why? Do they think the Liora are still watching them after all these thousands of years? Do they think just our presence here will bring the Liora down on them again?"
Thrayn said, "Yes."
Fairlie looked at him and Aral. "And you believe this too?"
Aral said, "We don't know. But we don't want to find out."
"Why do you want to go there anyway?" Thrayn demanded.
"There's nothing but an old building."
The man who was on guard said worriedly, "Those lights down there—they seem to be coming this way."
DeWitt glanced at the tracs. The last piece of gear was being loaded in. The men were ready to move. He turned to Fairlie. "Tell these two people they have a free choice. They can lead me where I want to go, or they can wait right here, tied up hand and foot, for their own people to find them. Go on, tell them."
Fairlie told them.
Thrayn got a trapped and hunted look. Fairlie somehow couldn't muster as much sympathy for him as he should have. He said, "The Liora are problematical but there's no doubt about your own people. Anyway, if there's nothing at the Hall of Suns, what harm can it do to lead us there?"
"All right," Thrayn muttered. "We'll go." He looked at DeWitt darkly. "But he may wish he hadn't."
They started for the tracs.
"What's he say?" DeWitt asked.
"Nothing friendly, I could tell that."
Fairlie explained and DeWitt laughed.
"The Liora again? I wish they were still around. I'd like to meet a race that could put the fear of God into a people so that all this time later it's still there. That's a real achievement."
DeWitt climbed into the trac and then, leaning down, he added, "By the way, tell your friends they can forget the idea they have in their minds. They won't have any chance of escaping on the way." He raised his voice, shouting to the men. "Douse those fires! Come on!"
The glade went dark in a shower of kicked sparks. Motors coughed. Headlights glared out suddenly, bringing the tree trunks into sharp relief. There was a brief confusion of men running, clambering aboard. Fairlie found his place in the trac next to Aral and Thrayn, with DeWitt on the other side of them. The trac heaved forward with a lurch and a roar.
DeWitt leaned forward to Muirhead, the man at the wheel. "Take it fast. We want out of here."
Muirhead took it fast. The trac lunged and swayed. Great trunks slid toward them down the headlight beams. They touched them at the last moment so close that the pattern of the bark was visible. Beside him Fairlie could feel Aral's body stiff with fear. He put his arm around her to steady her and she clung to him, hiding her face against his shoulder.
Thrayn hung onto the seat in a kind of daze. Fairlie was scared himself. He leaned his head back so that he could not see the tree trunks leaping at him and saw instead a racing pattern of branches against a black sky, and suddenly the blackness appeared as a vast and bottomless gulf in which moved shadow-wrapped unhuman forms, and he shivered in a draft of interstellar cold, remembering nightmare.

It had rained for four days. It had rained forever.
Fairlie wondered dully if he ever would be dry and warm and unmurdered again. For almost every hour of these days in which they had pressed north-westward under Thrayn's sullen guidance, the sodden downpour had fallen out of the heavy ochre sky. The goings, in the forested valleys and up on the naked ridges, had got steadily worse. He thought that if it got much worse they would not go at all. It seemed impossible. Trac Two was stuck again. That made the third time today. Rogers, his driver, not being as expert a driver as Muirhead, the heavy machine wallowed and roared like a mired dinosaur in the sticky brown clay of the slope, churning it to mud. Men shoved and at the wheel of Trac One, Muirhead pulled on the towrope. DeWitt gave angry orders. The rest of them stood in the rain and waited.
"I never thought," said Raab in a kind of grunt as he swabbed his eyeglasses. "That a trip to the stars could be ruined by bad weather."
He did sound ridiculous when you put it that way, thought Fairlie. What kind of a trip did you have to Altair? Oh, terrible. It rained nearly the whole time we were there.
He looked at Aral. She sat on a stone with her cloak huddled around her and her cloak was dripping and her hair dripped, and she looked a little bit like a drowned cat. She stared at them with sulky hatred and said nothing.
At least, Fairlie thought, she had a cloak. Thrayn had not. Somebody had given him a wind-breaker and worn over his tunic it looked quite incongruous. He stood near DeWitt—he had been warned at the start about getting too far away—and looked fixedly back at the rain-moored landscape of hills, hogbacks and tree-choked valleys through which they had come.
Fairlie walked over to him, his shoes slapping the water and mud. He said, in Vanryun, "There hasn't been a sign of them so far."
Thrayn shrugged and made no answer.
"They wanted rid of us, didn't they? All right, we left the city, we're a long way from it. Why would they follow us?"
Thrayn gave him a gloomy look. "They would follow a little way, for certain. And when they saw where we were heading—"
"You mean, toward the Hall of Suns? Do they too know where it is?"
"Everybody on Ryn knows where it is," said Thrayn. "Even though nobody goes near it."
"But you went near it."
"Yes. Because I was a fool. And now I am paying for my folly, and I shall pay more, when they overtake us."
Fairlie said, "I just doubt they'd follow at all. No matter if they do dislike us."
Thrayn gave him a bitter look and said, "Dislike? It is not the word. They fear you with a terrible fear because you bring a danger to Ryn that has not been met for ages. You broke the compact of ages in a ship, and now you are here in the Hall of Suns, the very shrine and center of the old Vanryun star-lust. Oh, yes, they will come after us and will try to kill you before you bring the Liora upon us."

"Thrayn uttered a cry. He was staring at the mountains, his face dark with strain." Continue the story tomorrow.

Foster Mother Created A Miracle In Frail Boy Who Was Blind And Deaf

By LEONARD VICTOR
Long Island Daily Press Writer

BALDWIN, N.Y. (AP) — Deaf and blind — locked away from sight and sound—the frail 7-year-old boy was a wild animal in diapers when they took him to Justice Purvis.

"My son couldn't talk, weighed just 25 pounds and had to be fed from a bottle when I got him," she said.

"There was no way to ask or tell him anything."

How do you teach a little boy who can't see, hear — and who hasn't learned to talk—even the simplest things like using the bathroom?

Justice Purvis found out. There are four rules for the wonderful people like her who serve as foster parents: Wash the child, feed it, dress it and—most important—love it! To these Mrs. Purvis added a fifth rule: Become a specialist in the child's affliction, learn the treatment and work hard at applying it.

She researched the treatment and teaching of the blind-deaf, from the rescue of Helen Keller to today's most modern methods.

She's still studying, learning, searching for new material even though her four years of endless labor with her blind-deaf boy have produced dramatic results.

Today, "her boy" is at the Perkins Institute in Massachusetts, a good student who is making tremendous progress at the famous school for the blind.

"Now, when he's home on holidays and for the summer, he dresses and feeds himself, reads my lips with his fingers, gets around the house and plays in the yard," she said in her gentle voice.

The miracle she created with that boy is only one of the reasons she's been chosen by the Nassau County (N.Y.) Family Service Association as the county's first "Foster Mother of the Year."

She was picked because she — and her husband until his death — were always willing to take those foster children with extreme handicaps—the ones no one else wanted.

Twenty-two lucky children have come to the Purvis home in the past 25 years.

Nearly all had the emotional problems caused by the upsets and rejections that made them foster children. Many had physical handicaps.

Many of her boys and girls—she calls all of them "her children"—just like her own five girls are grown now. They all come home regularly to "mother."

Mrs. Purvis has a total of 18 grandchildren now, and she won't say how many are her two married daughters' and how many her foster daughters'.

She has this advice for other foster parents: Don't slap. Look below the surface and find out what's troubling youngsters. Never forget that when they came to you they were bitter, resentful, rejected.

Stand still and let them run around you. Put your motor in second gear and keep it there.

Never take away a child's treasures. Respect his junk! "And above all, love them, love them, love them."

"There's no child you can't help with love."

THINKING IT OVER—Jolly, the orangutan, appears to be ruminating a weighty problem as it rests and soaks up some spring sunshine in the West Berlin, Germany, zoo.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newfeatures

It's a relief to forget the tough winter we've been through and though it's only early spring, some photographers are already planning for the summer ahead. Homer Page is one of those with a long-range view.

I first met Page in 1954 when he was an assistant to Edward Steichen in the preparatory stages of the world-famous "Family of Man" exhibition. Some time after, he was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in photography and taught at the California School of Fine Arts. For the last few years his photo-journalism has kept him traveling throughout Europe, Asia, Africa and South America for magazines, the Ford Foundations, the State Department and United Nations agencies.

"As I wandered around the world on my assignments," Homer told me recently, "I began to note the change in Americans traveling abroad. They popped up away from the usual tourist circuit... more, adventurous, less complaining.

"That's when the idea took root of a personal type of summer photo trip for camera fans. I visualized a small group of earnest photographers whom I could lead as a friend to the places I knew and being able to strike the right balance between informality and photographic purpose.

"I hoped to bring out or instill in each member a personal photographic project or point of view in his travels. It isn't enough to make a postcard record of where one has been. Each person's particular interest—architecture, native costumes or customs, transportation, and so on — may not be evident in advance but it can be developed along the way.

"I thought of it also as a leisurely summer course in photography while the traveler was discovering the continent and his own potentials photographically."

Page's ideas struck a responsive chord when discussed with an old friend who was a travel agent. As a result, the ideas passed from a dream state into a definite "Camera Holiday in Europe" itinerary which takes off from New York City July 16. After a jet-age start, with flights to London and Vienna, transportation will be by private motor-coach for the four-week trip.

"Traveling in our own coach gives the group a chance to mingle and hold seminar sessions along the way or to stop if we come across anything unexpected or picturesque. The informal atmosphere will encourage each member to set his own photographic pace since the group will vary in picture experience and talents. Of course I'll be available for specific technical advice in the field... and a bit of creative inspiration in the evenings over a cafe au lait."

During the trip, which will include five colorful capitals of Europe, negatives will be sent to Paris for processing. The photo progress of each will be checked by Page from the proofs which will be returned. This will be the occasion for an individual weekly critique and an opportunity to give direction for the week ahead.

"There's one danger I'll try to avoid," Page added. "That's competition. It wouldn't be fair to compare the results from a mixed group with a probable wide range in equipment as well as talent or experience."

"But I'm sure of one thing. Each one will return with his own portfolio of picture experiences which will be a source of personal satisfaction and happy memories."

Doctor's Eyes May Give Sight

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The eyes of a Boston doctor may give sight to two Jacksonville residents—a Negro store clerk and a German war bride.

Sam Dawson Jr., 35, an injury victim, was scheduled to undergo a corneal transplant today.

The woman, whom physicians declined to name, got a transplant Wednesday. She was given an excellent chance to regain sight in the eye.

Corneal tissue from the eyes of Dr. Edward C. Sweebe were flown five hours after his death to Jacksonville for the operations.

Sweebe, 32, a Waukegan, Ill., native, devoted his medical career to saving eyesight. He directed that his eyes be given after death to the eye bank of Massachusetts General Hospital Eye and Ear Infirmary.

Lodge said he is honorary president of the National Institute of Education and intends to meet former students who have been to the United States.

Kennedys Fly South Today For 'Tonic' Of 3-Day Rest

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Kennedy head for Florida today for three days of relaxation. The President and First Lady arranged to board a helicopter on the White House lawn in late morning for the short hop to Andrews Air Force Base, Md. They take off from there by jet plane for Palm Beach. The Kennedys plan to remain at the Florida resort city until late Sunday before flying back to Washington.

Reports 67 Calls Were Answered

A total of 67 calls were answered during the month of April by units of the Greenville Fire Department, according to a report issued by Chief George W. Gardner. Included in the calls, the report noted, were 10 box alarms, one false alarm, 23 telephone calls, and 33 rescue calls. Fire losses for the month of April have not been adjusted, the chief explained, noting all fires were minor. Losses for the first three months of the calendar year 1961 total $39,004.83, he stated. Volunteer firemen's payroll for the month totaled $259.50 while for the fiscal year, the payroll totals $2,066.00. Sixty-three commercial buildings were fire-safety inspected during April and 65 dwellings were checked, Chief Gardner explained. He added that four homes visited were not inspected because no one was at home, while four home owners refused to have their dwellings inspected. The fire department head concluded his report by saying all personnel for fire and rescue are continuing their weekly training programs and classes.

The White House Wednesday reported that the trip would be made, but announced no reason for it. There was no question however, that Kennedy sought a restful vacation to play some golf, swim and just loaf around. Some who see the President frequently say he's like any man who has worked long hours under severe pressure—he can use the tonic of a few days off. Kennedy has grappled in recent weeks with emergencies in Cuba and Southeast Asia as well as other anticipated problems on the international and domestic scene. Even before today's departure, Kennedy scheduled a White House meeting with the Cabinet. At Palm Beach, Kennedy will be kept informed of important developments at home and abroad and have access to split second communication with responsible officials. But, the White House news secretary, Pierre Salinger, said there would be no news from the resort. All announcements will be issued as usual through the White House.

Authorize Medal For Dr. Dooley

WASHINGTON (AP)—A House committee has authorized a medal for Dr. Thomas A. Dooley III, a physician who sparked a program of medical aid for Southeast Asia before he died of cancer last Jan. 18. The House Banking Committee approved a bill authorized $2,500 for a gold medal honoring Dooley. The bill now goes to the House for floor action.

This is the President's second Palm Beach vacation since inauguration. He, Mrs. Kennedy and their children spent five days during Easter week in the oceanfront home of his father, Joseph P. Kennedy. The children, Caroline and John Jr., will remain in their White House nursery this time. The Kennedys will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Wrightsman, with whom Mrs. Kennedy stayed during an earlier visit in March. The Wrightsman mansion is a short distance from the Kennedy place, which is closed for the season; Wrightsman is a retired businessman who accumulated his wealth in oil and other investments. He and Mrs. Wrightsman were at the White House Monday when the President decorated astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spalding, close friends of the Kennedys, will

It Takes A Practiced Eye To Tell The Married From Single

NEW YORK (AP)—It is getting harder to tell the married girls from the single girls. There was a time when it was easier. All you had to do was glance at a certain finger of her left hand. If she wore a gold band or it, there was no doubt about it. She was married. But customs change. So do rings. Many of the married women in America's 20 million-plus feminine work force don't wear their wedding rings on the job. And many single girls wear rings which give them the air of matrimony but actually celebrate only the fact they were able to graduate from high school or are members of a winning team in the factory bowling league. But there are other signs. It's a pretty safe bet a gal is married if— Whenever she leaves home after dark, she is trailed, two paces behind, by a tired-looking man who looks as if his feet hurt him. In reading a magazine she merely glances at an article titled, "America's 12 richest bachelors," then turns to one about "What's wrong with our schools?" When she's dining out, she tells the man with her, "I'll take this, and you'll take that. It's better for your stomach." She always kicks off her shoes in a movie house. She can't name the latest matinee idol, but she can take a vacuum cleaner apart and put it together again in 15 minutes. You look in her refrigerator and see eight bottles of milk and six cans of beer. At a party you ask her to dance, a look of incredulous surprise sweeps over her face. At a cocktail shindig, she keeps yanking at the same male elbow while yelping, "Remember what you promised. You said we'd go home after you had two."

Tax Assessors Concede A Point

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The tax assessors office admitted Charles E. Shawver had a point in protesting a $3,220 assessment for a house on his wife's Hialeah Heights lot. There's no house there. Officials found the house—right where it has always been—on a neighbor's lot. So they moved the assessment next door to the property of V. D. Dugger.

Criticizes Code Name Of Rocket

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Francis Case, R-S.D., criticized military officials for selecting the code name "Saint" for their satellite interceptor, designed to search out and identify enemy satellites. In a transcript of Senate Armed Services Committee hearings held Wednesday Case told Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara that use of the term "saint" for a weapons system "is irreverent, and for many people sacrilegious." McNamara said this had not occurred to him. He said the term was an abbreviation of "satellite something and intercept," but added that Pentagon officials "will certainly reconsider its use."

Gov't Launches 'Hire Now' Drive

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government launched a nationwide "hire now" drive Wednesday to put idle workers back to work through the public employment service. Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg said 40 governors have pledged support and he expects the others to join in soon. "This job drive," Goldberg said "is a practical appeal to employers to step up their hiring in keeping with the rising levels of economic activity now underway."

Critic Attacks Soviet Thinking

WARSAW () — Some of the basic theories and tactics in communism's fight against religion are being publicly disputed by Leszek Kolakowski, outspoken leader of Poland's liberal Communist philosophers.

Writing in the weekly Argumenty, Kolakowski makes his bitterest attack on Communist thinking since his harsh anti-Stalin criticism in 1957.

"It is not true," Kolakowski wrote, "that religion survives simply because of ignorance and backwardness in a civilization and that with increased urbanization and spreading of education it will wither away by itself."

He complained that Poland's Reds, to combat religion, are distributing atheistic propaganda of "astounding stupidity." Catholicism when opposed politically "in certain respects grows in strength," Kolakowski continued. "It creates considerably better intellectuals and a considerably more valuable cultural production."

POLITICAL CHANGE OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The town of Hoover, located in Oklahoma's "Little Dixie" area — a Democratic stronghold — wants to change its name to Fort Arbuckle. The name was applied to the post office back in the '20s when Herbert Hoover, a Republican, was president.

Prison Officials Hunting Cooks

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Too many cooks may spoil the broth, but Ohio Penitentiary officials have found that their problem is not enough cooks.

Among more than 4,000 inmates in the penitentiary and honor system, they had a difficult time finding a qualified cook to join the staff at the governor's mansion on honor status. To cope with the problem, the prison now is offering cooking classes.

Timely Tip To 'Keep Straight'

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Parents are allowed to tour the Erie County jail with their teenage sons in an effort to combat juvenile delinquency.

On the twice-weekly visits, arranged by two clergymen, the boys see the cell blocks, talk with inmates, and walk into an empty cell.

The Very Rev. Msgr. Franklin Kellner, Catholic chaplain, and the Rev. Marshall Lucas, Protestant chaplain, said they believe most boys get their ideas of jail from movies or television. "They have no real conception of the cold steel of jail bars or how small a prison cell is," the clergymen said.

Rumors Persist U.S. Has Cuban Invasion Survivors

Editor's Note—For 16 days during and after the anti-Castro invasion of Cuba, AP reporter Ben Price worked in the sensitive listening post of Guantanamo Bay Naval Base. The following account, based on his findings there and elsewhere, sheds light on some intriguing problems in the disaster's aftermath.

By BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP)—There is reason to believe that the United States is holding survivors of the Cuban invasion forces incommunicado—prisoners, if you will—on a Caribbean island, if you will.

And there is evidence that the U.S. troubles with communism in Central and South America are just beginning.

The first rumor about the U.S.-held survivors of the invasion, some of whom reportedly are wounded, reached the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay soon after the military effort collapsed. The grapevine there is so efficient that reports of activities in Havana, 600 miles west, sometimes reach the base before they are broadcast by the Castro regime.

Within hours after the grapevine report of U.S.-held survivors reached the base, the Castro captives from the abortive invasion—who were being interrogated in Havana on television—began talking of a particular island, Vieques. They said they had been trained for the invasion at the U.S. Marine base at Vieques, which is just a 20-minute helicopter ride from San Juan, Puerto Rico.

While the rumor about the Vieques prisoners was seeping into Guantanamo, it was also circulating in San Juan and New York.

A Navy officer talked by radio asking if newsmen wanting to check on the rumors could be admitted to Vieques.

The answer was that no one would be admitted to the base without special permission from Washington.

On the assumption that training bases are normally open to visitors, efforts were made to gain access to Vieques through the Central Intelligence Agency and the White House.

The CIA was noncommittal. A White House spokesman said it would not assist in the matter of entry.

While the Vieques operation was kept secret, the New York Times has reported the story of Dr. Rodolfo Nodal Tarafa, 27, a lawyer and member of the anti-Castro invasion forces.

Nodal said he and 16 other volunteers had been held captive at a gunpoint in Guatemala by CIA agents because they refused to serve in the invasion forces under a man they described as a murderer in the regime of dictator Fulgencio Batista.

The Washington Post reported these men were arrested as mutineers.

One consequence of the invasion flop apparently has been a great upsurge in Communist activities in Central and South America.

Early this month a chartered Cuban airliner landed at Kingston, Jamaica, to refuel. Out stepped 35 Communists, including two women, who said they had departed from Recife, Brazil, for Havana.

They made no bones about the fact that they were going to Havana to learn how Fidel Castro carried Cuba into the Soviet Orbit.

At a post-Cuban invasion background briefing, a high Pentagon official said the United States could expect more revolutions and more Castros south of the border.

Other reflections in the invasion aftermath:

Did the Castro forces have Soviet-built MIG fighters aloft during the fighting? Assorted communiques from the anti-Castro groups made that assertion. But the best radar the Navy owns, including shipboard and airborne, has yet to detect the presence of high performance jet aircraft in the Cuban area.

During the invasion and for some time thereafter, the U.S. Navy had Navy ships and aircraft in the Cuban area.

Their presence was described by the Navy as routine. They had nothing to do with the Cuban danger, the Navy said.

There are roughly 2,200 Cubans working on the base and some of them make a pretty good pipeline to Castro.

Further, any time the iron curtain countries want a good look at whatever portion of the U.S. fleet happens to be in Guantanamo, all they have to do is send a ship in.

The naval base is built around the outer bay of Guantanamo. There is a Cuban-controlled inner bay and access to this bay by ships of any nation is guaranteed by treaty.

In the last month or two, a couple of iron curtain cargo ships have sailed right down the middle of the Guantanamo harbor.

And what's been going on in Cuba outside the 24 miles of barbed wire topped fence surrounding Guantanamo?

From conversations with Cuban workers who live in Oriente Province at the eastern tip of the island, I gathered that the answer is nothing. They are raising crops as they have always done.

Underground agents said that if Castro is going to be overthrown in the near future, the United States will have to do it.

These are the same people who supported Castro in his rise to power and whose hatred of the police state of Batista is unabated.

While they profess to be sorrowful over the outcome of the Castro revolution, there seems little doubt that if they had to choose between Castro and Batista, they would take Castro.

The Cuban workers here have been reporting that Castro's militia and police have been steadily suppressing opposition with arrests and various forms of intimidation over the past two years.

They said they have consistently downgraded the possibility of a popular uprising.

Palmer Favored At Fort Worth Tourney Opens

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—The $40,000 Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament opens today with Arnold Palmer favored and with prospects of the most furious onslaught on par in the event's 15 years.

The touring golfers showed the 7,041-yard Colonial Country Club course could be had Wednesday when they posted 16 sub-par rounds, headed by Doug Ford's record-smashing 6-under-par 64.

Palmer didn't play the course but he remained a 6-1 favorite for the $7,000 first money although he never has finished higher than twelfth in his six years of participation here.

Al Geiberger, Bill Collins and Deane Beman had 67's and seven players, including Don January, who had a hole-in-one, posted 68's.

January was getting his second ace — his first was at Palm Springs, Calif., last February and it brought him $50,000 then. Here he only won $168.75 for being one of the low scorers in a pro-amateur.

Ford won top money of $630 for being low pro on a team and for having low score of the day.

George (Moe) Radovich coaches the University of Wyoming. He started on Poke basketball teams in 1950-52.

The East Carolina baseball team has had two games scheduled with Atlantic Christian this season, and both of them have been rained out. The first contest, scheduled for April 12, was made up on Monday at Wilson. The second contest was set for last night, but rain set into the Piedmont early in the morning and lasted all through the day, cancelling the second affair between the arch-rivals.

Pirate Coach Jim Mallory is in the process of trying to get the Bulldogs to come to Greenville tomorrow night and battle his East Carolina squad on the same billing as Elon's Christians, who have a game scheduled with the Bucs for Guy Smith stadium at 8:00 p.m.

If Mallory is successful in arranging the affair, Greenville fans will have a chance to get a look at two North State teams in battle against the Pirates in the same night.

The Mallorymen have already claimed the North State crown for the third season in succession with their 4-2 win over Catawba College last Saturday night. Since then the Bucs have posted a 12-10 win over the Bulldogs in a make-up game, boosting their league record to 12-1. Overall, EC boasts a 14-3 won-lost slate, the best in the North State.

Following the ACC and Elon games, the Bucs close out their regular season with a Saturday night contest against the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest. The game is set for Guy Smith stadium, and is a return bout for the two clubs. In their last meeting, the Deacons swamped the Pirates by a 13-0 score. In that meeting, which was sandwiched between three conference games, Mallory was forced to send his relief pitchers to the mound in order to have his best for the North State teams.

The story will be different this Saturday night, however, as Mallory will be calling on his ace, Larry Crayton to toe the rubber against the Deacons of the Atlantic Coast Conference. The speedy left-hander has compiled a 7-1 record so far this season, the best in the Pirate camp. Crayton has worked 57 innings and has given up 14 earned runs for a 2.2 earned run average. He has 79 strikeouts, more than the total kayos of all the rest of the Pirate mound corps put together.

Nathan Greene, the number two hurler for the Bucs is scheduled to start against the Christians tomorrow night. The junior right-hander has posted a 3-1 record this season, his only loss coming to Pfeiffer last week. Greene has pitched 37 1-3 innings, struck out 27, and has an earned run average of 2.9.

It is expected that Mallory will let Lacy West, owner of a 3-0 slate, share the pitching load with Greene against Elon. West is in his first varsity season on the baseball team, although he is a veteran athlete, having been a starter on Coach Earl Smith's basketball team for the past two seasons.

Individual leaders for the Pirates this season are:

Table with columns: REC, G, IP, R, H, SO, BB, ER, ERA. Includes Larry Crayton, Nathan Greene, Lacy West, Harold Brown, Earl Boykin, Dan Rouse.

Liston's New Manager 'For' Patterson Bout

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—George Katz, the new manager of Sonny Liston, today looked forward to a title match between the No. 1 heavyweight contender and champion Floyd Patterson sometime in the spring of 1962.

And, in the interim, Katz said, he is "all for" a match between Liston and former champion Ingemar Johansson this fall "if the price is right." Championships Sports Inc. of New York expressed interest in such a match.

Katz also said that he would be happy to go to Washington if Sen. Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn., asked him.

"As a matter of fact it would be a pleasure to meet him," said Katz. "I might make some suggestions to help boxing. I feel perhaps the senator might be interested, too."

Katz, who has been managing fighters for 28 years including former welterweight challenger Gil Turner, feels his appointment as manager Wednesday under a 2 1/2-year contract calling for a 10 per cent cut of earnings gives Liston a clean bill.

A Senate investigating committee headed by Kefauver and Patterson had demanded earlier that Liston rid himself of manager Pep Barone, of Allentown, Pa., accused of being a front for alleged underworld figures Frankie Carbo and Blinky Palermo. Liston recently bought his contract from Barone for $75,000.

Patterson had said that before he would agree to a match with Liston the challenger would have to get himself a manager who would meet with the approval of the Kefauver committee.

When Katz's appointment was announced, Patterson said in New York: "I want to stand on my statement of last week that if Sonny Liston can show the Kefauver committee that he has severed his connections directly and indirectly with the people the committee has talked about, he will get his chance next year."

In Washington, Kefauver said he doesn't know Katz or anything about him. But he expressed hope that Liston got a good manager.

Al Klein, of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission, said his office conducted a thorough investigation of Katz and found "no valid reason" for refusal to approve him as Liston's manager.

Stiff Penalties For Game 'Fix' May Be Asked

RALEIGH (AP)—The General Assembly was expected to receive a bill today calling for stiff penalties for persons convicted of attempting to bribe athletes in North Carolina.

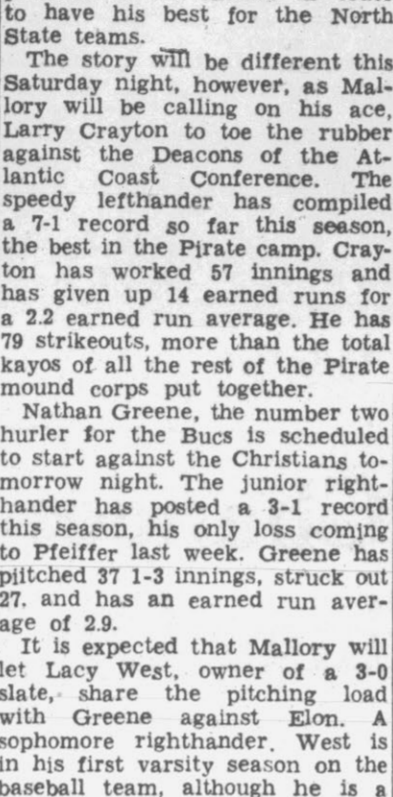

It was learned Wednesday that Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner James Weaver discussed the proposed legislation Tuesday with House Speaker Joseph Hunt.

Weaver also met with Atty. Gen. Wade Bruton to discuss the legal language in the bill. The measure stems from recent college basketball scandals in which two University of North Carolina players, Lou Brown and Doug Moe, were involved.

Brown was accused of being the contact man for a fixer who allegedly bribed college players for fix games. Moe was accused of taking $75 from an accused gambler, presumably for expense money. He was suspended from the University of North Carolina by Chancellor William B. Aycock for failing to report the bribe attempt.

'Keep Your Eye On VMI' Is Southern Loop's Motto

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS "Keep your eye on VMI" will be the common motto of Southern Conference baseball watchers, an utterly confused species, as the league's 1961 championship races rushes to its conclusion in the next 10 days.

Right now the title fight is a thing of wild disorder, with West Virginia heading the standings with a 6-2 record, Furman trailing at 6-3, Richmond and VMI at 5-3, and Virginia Tech still hopeful at 4-4.

VMI is the club to watch because the Keydets, who've won four of their last five conference starts, still have six league games ahead, any or all of which could prove pivotal in the championship scramble.

The first of these crucial games arrived this afternoon, when VMI and Virginia Tech were to do battle at Lexington in a makeup of a tilt rained out on April 10.

Furman could have two conference games to play — or perhaps none at all. The Hornets were rained out against West Virginia and Virginia Tech earlier this year. No date has been set for a makeup with West Virginia but Furman will play Virginia Tech May 20 "if necessary."

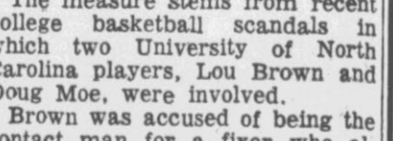

Barring a rematch with Furman, West Virginia has only the games with VMI left to play inside the league. Richmond has two sure games to go and an "if necessary" makeup against Davidson. Virginia Tech has three sure conference tiffs remaining and one — against Furman — in the "if necessary" category.

'Year Of The Southpaw' If Four Can Keep Up Pace

By ED WILKS Associated Press Sports Writer If Mike McCormick, Johnny Podres and Bill Henry, not to mention a guy named Warren Spahn, keep it up this could be the year of the southpaw in the National League pennant race.

McCormick pitched his second three-hit shutout of the season Wednesday night as first place San Francisco beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0. The Giants also managed just three singles, but bunched them for all their runs with two out in the fifth inning—the only frame in which they put a man on base.

Podres became the first pitcher to win five this season in the majors, extending his shutout streak to 15 innings with a five-hitter as the second place Los Angeles Dodgers remained within a game of the lead by defeating Philadelphia 6-0.

And Henry, who hasn't allowed a run in 8 2-3 innings of superb relief this season, gained his third consecutive save by striking out the side in the ninth as Cincinnati beat St. Louis 3-2. It was the Reds' ninth straight victory and put them in third place.

The Braves, with Spahn waiting his turn, beat Chicago's Cubs 3-2 behind the four-hit pitching of Lew Burdette, a right hander.

An error by Pirate third baseman Don Hoak gave the Giants the big break after McCormick (3-1) and loser Bob Friend (4-2) had duelled through four innings of perfect pitching. Felipe Alou beat out a roller to third, and when Hoak's throw to first was wild, Alou went to second. That left first open and Friend walked Ed Jay (2-3) in the ninth against four pinch-hitters.

The Braves handed Cub relief ace Don Elston (4-1) his first defeat on a bases-loaded error by second baseman Don Zimmer that let in the tie-breaking run in the ninth. It was Burdette's second victory in three decisions.

'This Is One' Top Bowler Is After

DETROIT (AP)—If Don Carter wins the $75,000 Professional Bowlers' Association Invitational Tournament that opens today in Paramus, N.J., they'll have to invent new words for him to conquer.

The 34-year-old St. Louis ace Wednesday night won the one major title that had eluded him—the American Bowling Congress masters championship.

"This is the one I wanted," said mid-mannered Don after defeating Dick Hoover of St. Louis, 888-826, in four games for the crown in a sensational battle.

Gary Bell Puts Cleveland Back In AL Third Place

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Gary Bell finally licked his problem—a sore arm that some observers felt was more than physical—and has the Cleveland Indians back in third place in the American League race.

The big right-hander, 24, was sent home early last season, with a 9-10 record, because of the arm trouble. This spring he was given a physical ok but seemed timid about giving the arm a real test.

Or so thought Frank Lane, former Cleveland general manager, after a scouting visit to the Indians' spring camp this year. Lane, now with Kansas City, figured, "It's just something the youngster will have to work out for himself."

Bell "worked it out" but big Wednesday night. He went 11 innings against the Chicago White Sox as the Indians made off with an 8-2 victory—Bell's first after losing seven in a row.

Detroit retained a three-game bulge over second place New York by hammering Washington 7-1. The Yankees defeated Kansas City 9-4. And Minnesota made it a three-way tie for third with Cleveland and Baltimore by bombing the Orioles 10-6. Boston defeated the Los Angeles Angels 3-2.

Bell, a 16-game winner for the Tribe in 1958, took over the AL strikeout lead with 33 by fanning eight. He walked four and gave up seven hits, blanking the White Sox after Roy Siever's solo seventh homer tied it 2-2 in the fourth inning.

The Indians, who scored on Vic Power's home run in the second and added an unearned marker in the fourth against starter Bob Shaw, broke loose for the big six in the 11th against reliever Frank Baumann (1-2).

Detroit made it seven out of eight behind the five-hit pitching of Jim Bunning (2-2). The slim right-hander also singled home the clincher when the Tigers broke out for four runs in the second against Ed Hobaugh (1-2).

Tex Clevenger (3-1), winning in his first appearance with the Yankees since Monday's trade with the Angels, blanked the A's with four innings of one-hit relief after they tied it 4-4 in the seventh against starter Ralph Terry. The Yankees broke it up with five runs in the eighth, with Elston Howard's double beating Bud Daley (3-4). Norm Siebern homered for the A's.

Minnesota shelled Baltimore starter Dick Hall (1-1) in a nine-run second inning. Harmon Killebrew and Billy Gardner each hit three-run homers and Zoilo Versalles hit a solo homer. Jerry Adair drove in four runs for Baltimore, three on a pair of homers.

The Red Sox were held hitless for five innings at Los Angeles, then crashed through for three runs in the sixth against Ron Moeller (0-2). Winning pitcher was Tom Brewer (3-2).

Forfeiting

HIGH POINT (AP) — High Point College announced today it is forfeiting all of its baseball games this season after learning that one of its players played professionally in 1955.

Athletic Director Tom Hamilton said that Joe Guzinski, a junior who has been a starter for three years on both the basketball and baseball teams, admitted playing for Bristol of the Class D Appalachian League in 1955 under the name of Joe Glenn.

High Point won the North State Conference basketball tournament this year with Guzinski playing. The league annually votes for its champion, and Hamilton said he has written to Dr. C. R. Henshaw, the league commissioner, asking that the situation be taken up at the league meeting May 24.

Hamilton said that Guzinski, 6-2, 195 pounder from Tunkhannock, Pa., admitted signing a professional contract in 1954 and playing for Bristol in 1955.

Guzinski was an all-conference baseball player as a freshman. He is an outfielder and infielder and is a long ball hitter.

Big League Expendables Sloughed Off To Minors

Podres Off To His Best Start

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Southpaw Johnny Podres of Los Angeles said today he's off to his best start in his eight years in the major leagues.

"I don't know why," said the Witherbee, N.Y., native after beating Philadelphia 6-0 Wednesday night on a five-hitter for his fifth straight victory without a loss. The victory makes him the winningest pitcher in the majors.

"Except it could be a slow curve which I developed this spring," he explained. "I had a slow curve before, but not like this one. Coaches Joe Becker and Leo Durocher helped me develop it."

"The slow curve I've got now has much more spin and better motion. Before I was using mostly a fast ball, curve and change-up. Now I'm using all four."

Podres, 28, who now has run his string of scoreless innings to 15, said he felt pretty good during the game but his pitching arm stiffened up "a little" afterwards. "I guess it was just from pitching," he said.

Last Friday night at Pittsburgh Podres had to leave the game after the sixth inning with an 8-0 lead when his arm stiffened up. Los Angeles won 10-0.

Of his five victories, Podres has completed only two games. Wednesday night's and a 9-4 victory over Chicago on April 29. He beat Philadelphia 3-2 earlier this year, Cincinnati 10-0 and Pittsburgh for his other triumphs. He was taken out in the earlier Philadelphia and Cincinnati games in the ninth inning when he got into trouble. In the 47 1-3 innings he's worked he's given up only 15 hits for a 1.53 earned run average.

About two dozen major league expendables — rookies who failed to win regular berths and old-timers whose talents weren't badly needed—went to join minor league clubs today as the big league teams passed the cutdown date.

As of today, only 25 players may be carried on major league rosters until after Aug. 31, when the limit goes up to 40 until the opening of the next season. The 18 major clubs have been optioning, selling and trading their surplus for several days and there was a final flurry Wednesday night just before the deadline.

The Washington Senators and Chicago White Sox, who opened the season a day earlier than the others, had to make the cut Tuesday, since the limit is 30 days from the opening.

The White Sox then picked up Wes Covington from Milwaukee and had to make another cut. The Boston Red Sox and Chicago Cubs got down to the 25 man limit the same day.

Here's how the others trimmed their rosters:

National League
St. Louis Cardinals—Traded outfielder Bob Nieman to Cleveland for Joe Morgan; assigned Morgan and George Crowe, pinch hitter, to San Juan, International League.

San Francisco Giants—Optioned rookie second baseman Ernie Bowman and outfielder Bobo Farley to Tacoma, Pacific Coast League.

Los Angeles Dodgers—Removed relief pitcher Ed Palmquist from roster.

Pittsburgh Pirates—Sold pitcher Tom Cheney to Columbus, IL.

Philadelphia Phillies — Optioned infielder Bob Sadowski to Buffalo, IL.

Milwaukee Braves — Sent outfielder Wes Covington to Chicago White Sox on waivers; optioned rookie catcher Phil Roof to Yakima, Northwest League.

Cincinnati Reds — Unconditionally released veteran infielder Willie Jones; sold pitcher Claude Osteen and outfielder Harry Anderson to Indianapolis, American Association; obtained first baseman Dick Gernert from Detroit.

Chicago Cubs — Reached limit earlier in week.

American League
Minnesota Twins — Unconditionally released outfielder Pete Whisenant.

Baltimore Orioles — Optioned pitcher Don Schaeffer to Salt Lake City, PCL.

Los Angeles Angels—Sent pitcher Ray Semproch to Toronto, IL; sold first baseman Julio Becquer to Buffalo, IL.

Baltimore Orioles — Optioned catcher Frank Zupo to Rochester, IL; cut one other player with held announcement of his name until today.

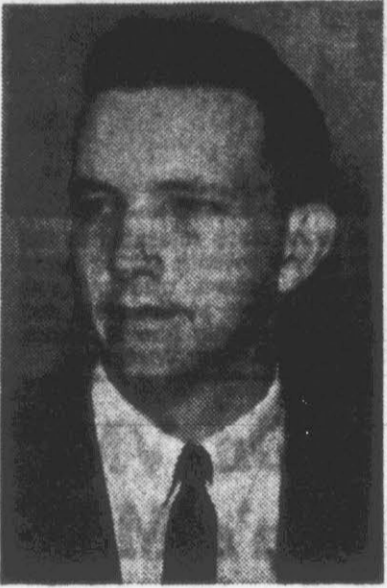

New York Yankees—Sold pitcher Ted Wineand and optioned outfielder Jack Reed, both to Richmond, IL.

Detroit Tigers — Traded first baseman-outfielder Dick Gernert to Cincinnati for infielder Jim Baumer and cash; optioned Baumer, veteran catcher Harry Chitt and rookie pitcher Joe Grzenda to Denver, American Association.

Kansas City Athletics—Optioned Leo Posada, outfielder, to Shreveport, Southern Association.

Boston — Reached limit earlier in week.

Will Coach And Teach At Bethel

Dan Wooten (above) has signed a contract to coach and teach physical education at Bethel High School beginning next fall.

He will replace Walter Latham as coach. Latham will remain as principal of Bethel High School. Last season the Bethel team won the Pitt Conference title, the tournament and advanced to the district finals.

Belvoir-Falkland had a 13-13 record for the past season.

Wooten was born and raised in Falkland. He graduated from Belvoir-Falkland in 1954 and East Carolina College in 1958. He majored in social studies and physical education.

He has taught social studies as well as coaching at Belvoir-Falkland. At Bethel he will be in charge of all physical education with the exception of girls basketball. He will coach basketball and baseball.

Wooten said he was making the change because he desired a full time physical education job.

Second baseman Luke Urban of Fall River, Mass., is captain of Columbia University's baseball team. He led the team in hitting last season.

Tar Heel Chances At Retaining The Crown Hinge On Meeting Pressures

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Whether North Carolina repeats as Atlantic Coast Conference baseball champion will depend on how the Tar Heels play under pressure, and Duke applied a little more Wednesday.

The Blue Devils edged Wake Forest 3-1 behind the three-hit pitching of Don Altman to take over sole possession of second place in the ACC with a 10-3 record.

Duke has just one conference game remaining, while North Carolina, with an 8-2 record, must play four more. Duke must play a make-up game with second-place Wake Forest, but the date has not been decided.

North Carolina and South Carolina, rained out at Columbia Wednesday, collide today. Then the Tar Heels face Virginia in a doubleheader at Chapel Hill Friday and Clemson at Belmont, N.C., Saturday. Saturday's game won't count in the standings because it's the third meeting of the two teams this season.

North Carolina and third-place Wake Forest (9-4) collide next Tuesday in the final conference game of the season for both teams.

In other games today, Clemson entertains Rollins, Virginia plays at North Carolina State, and Wake Forest at Davidson.

The Duke-Wake Forest game was delayed 30 minutes at the start because of rain, and then called after seven innings as the rain continued.

All three Duke runs were unearned. The Blue Devils scored one run in the second on an error and a single, and added two in the fifth inning on three singles, a walk and a sacrifice fly.

Altman now has a 5-2 record. The loser was Don Roth, now 2-1.

Carolina League Is Rained Out

Rain caused postponement of games in the Carolina League Wednesday night.

Weather permitting, first place Burlington meets Greensboro at Greensboro tonight. The Indians hold a one-game lead over second place Winston-Salem.

Other games tonight find Winston at Durham and Raleigh at Winston-Salem.

Tough Challenge For ACC Netter

DURHAM (AP) — Bruce Sylvia of North Carolina, defending Atlantic Coast Conference tennis singles champion, is expected to get some tough competition in the conference tournament that opens here today.

One of chief challengers will be lefthander Dave Dickenson of Virginia, the only player in the conference to beat the top-seeded Sylvia this season. Sylvia, a senior from Richmond, Va., lost just two matches this year. The other was to Ron Pickett of Dartmouth.

ECC Instructor Helped Train U.S. Astronaut Team

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

INSIDE CAPSULE . . . Astronaut John Glenn, one of three chosen from seven, watches through viewport as planetarium simulates orbit around earth.

cess of training the United States' seven astronauts.

Dr. James W. Batten, instructor at the local teachers college since a year ago, was selected as part of a vast force chosen by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to train the men in whom Uncle Sam's space prestige hopes lie.

His specific job, in his own words, was "to train the astronauts in celestial mechanics and celestial recognition."

Batten performed his task in an environment familiar to him — the Morehead Planetarium in Chapel Hill. For several years he served on the narration staff at the University of North Carolina's planetarium, donated to the school by John Motley Morehead III.

The ECC instructor, who holds a doctorate from UNC in earth and space science, met the seven space-bound men at the planetarium to train them to recognize the sequence of constellations in any given orbit.

He trained them in pairs—except for a final singleton—using the planetarium equipment, a replica of the Project Mercury capsule scheduled eventually to orbit the earth, gadgets called celestial spheres and other equipment. Each astronaut devoted two full days to his education in celestial mechanics and celestial recognition.

Batten describes how he "thoroughly acquainted" the men with the relative positions of the constellations and 42 first magnitude stars.

"We would set the planetarium equipment on any given orbit and teach the men the sequence of constellations and stars as the capsule would travel in that particular orbit. In space, the astronauts can determine whether the capsule is in its proper orbit by watching the sequence of the constellations and stars through the view port."

The view port is a small window through which the space pioneers will be able to peer into space in orbital flight.

In the training sessions with Batten, the astronauts were seated in the capsule replica in the center of the planetarium floor. Looking upward through the small view port, the trainees learned celestial recognition as the planetarium equipment simulated many different orbits around the earth.

The astronauts were taught the exact patterns of the constellations relative to a grid system.

The view port is equipped with the grid system to allow the men to visually plot the constellations and stars to determine their location at any particular time in orbit in relation to the earth.

Batten says the astronauts in orbit will be traveling east and facing west. His sessions with the men taught them to recognize the stars as he passes them in orbit. "It is most important that he knows where he is," Batten says, "because if for some reason the remote control re-entry mechanism fails, he must manually re-enter the atmosphere at the correct place."

Batten was impressed with his seven students. "They are very highly motivated boys," he says. "All seven of them are wholly interested in this nation's space program."

He sees his connection with the astronauts as only a small part of their training. "They must keep right on learning a wide variety of highly-technical phases of the program. There is very rigid training."

The ECC professor is proud to have been associated with training the astronauts. He is also proud of NASA's selection of the Morehead Planetarium as a training site.

"We feel very fortunate to have had our planetarium at Chapel Hill selected," he says. He points out the UNC facility is one of six planetariums in the nation. "It is one of the most modern in the world," he says, "because the Morehead funds are sufficient to keep the equipment as up-to-date as possible."

Batten says the planetarium's donor sent manager Tony Jenzano to Germany to secure the latest planetarium equipment and have it installed in Chapel Hill.

Batten, a native Tar Heel, joined the East Carolina College staff here last fall after receiving his doctorate at UNC last spring. His role here is to train school teachers.

Currently, he is winding up Spring Quarter classes in secondary education and school administration. His training of the astronauts came in his spare time.

He received his bachelor's and master's degrees at UNC and has studied at Columbia University in New York and the University of California at Berkeley.

A Goldsboro native, Batten recalls the birth of his special interest in space and astronomy when he was studying spherical trigonometry at Columbia.

His background as a surface and aerial navigator in the Armed Forces was an aid in his continuing the study of astronomy. For a while, before becoming associated with the Chapel Hill planetarium, Batten was on the staff of the Hayden Planetarium in New York City.

He has served as a school principal and has taught on the high school level. Currently, he is seeking to coordinate his training in education and science.

Scheduled for publication soon is a 100-page book—"Our Neighbors in Space"—which Batten authored. He hopes it will be adopted as a textbook for astronomy courses.

At age 41, Batten says he joined the ECC staff last year "because this is a good, growing institution that offers me many opportunities in both my fields." He adheres to both.

Batten is married to the former Sara Storey of Murfreesboro, N.C., and they live at 1014 East Wright Road here.

Batten performed his task in an environment familiar to him — the Morehead Planetarium in Chapel Hill. For several years he served on the narration staff at the University of North Carolina's planetarium, donated to the school by John Motley Morehead III.

The ECC instructor, who holds a doctorate from UNC in earth and space science, met the seven space-bound men at the planetarium to train them to recognize the sequence of constellations in any given orbit.

He trained them in pairs—except for a final singleton—using the planetarium equipment, a replica of the Project Mercury capsule scheduled eventually to orbit the earth, gadgets called celestial spheres and other equipment. Each astronaut devoted two full days to his education in celestial mechanics and celestial recognition.

Batten describes how he "thoroughly acquainted" the men with the relative positions of the constellations and 42 first magnitude stars.

"We would set the planetarium equipment on any given orbit and teach the men the sequence of constellations and stars as the capsule would travel in that particular orbit. In space, the astronauts can determine whether the capsule is in its proper orbit by watching the sequence of the constellations and stars through the view port."

The view port is a small window through which the space pioneers will be able to peer into space in orbital flight.

In the training sessions with Batten, the astronauts were seated in the capsule replica in the center of the planetarium floor. Looking upward through the small view port, the trainees learned celestial recognition as the planetarium equipment simulated many different orbits around the earth.

The astronauts were taught the exact patterns of the constellations relative to a grid system.

The view port is equipped with the grid system to allow the men to visually plot the constellations and stars to determine their location at any particular time in orbit in relation to the earth.

Batten says the astronauts in orbit will be traveling east and facing west. His sessions with the men taught them to recognize the stars as he passes them in orbit. "It is most important that he knows where he is," Batten says, "because if for some reason the remote control re-entry mechanism fails, he must manually re-enter the atmosphere at the correct place."

Batten was impressed with his seven students. "They are very highly motivated boys," he says. "All seven of them are wholly interested in this nation's space program."

He sees his connection with the astronauts as only a small part of their training. "They must keep right on learning a wide variety of highly-technical phases of the program. There is very rigid training."

The ECC professor is proud to have been associated with training the astronauts. He is also proud of NASA's selection of the Morehead Planetarium as a training site.

"We feel very fortunate to have had our planetarium at Chapel Hill selected," he says. He points out the UNC facility is one of six planetariums in the nation. "It is one of the most modern in the world," he says, "because the Morehead funds are sufficient to keep the equipment as up-to-date as possible."

Films Of Astronaut Taken During Space Ride Shown

By GEOFFREY GOULD
WASHINGTON (AP) — The man's eyes darted from side to side. His chest heaved. His helmeted head bent forward to look through a porthole. A strap of his spacesuit waved in the air like a piece of seaweed.

This was Cmdr. Alan B. Shepard Jr., America's first astronaut, viewed by a movie camera inside his capsule as he rode 115 miles into space last Friday from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The dramatic film was shown for the first time Wednesday before an audience of congressmen and many of their office workers who crowded into the House caucus room.

The first and last parts of the film, showing the Redstone rocket's liftoff and the landing at sea of the capsule, almost duplicated television coverage on the spot last Friday.

But the footage taken from inside during the flight gave the viewer some sense of what it is like to be strapped in a tiny cabin fastened to the tip of a roaring, flame-spouting 83-foot missile.

The color added impact too—Shepard's silver space suit as he nosed in the pre-dawn darkness to look up at the Redstone he was to ride. The white rocket itself, poised on the pad. The red elevator that carried Shepard to its top. The yellow flame at ignition. The blue sky and the darker blue of the Atlantic as the capsule dropped gently down.

No sound track accompanied the film. A National Aeronautics and Space Administration official provided a narration for the audience.

Shepard's face sagged a bit under the force of up to 10 times normal gravity at liftoff and re-entry. Vertical lines of concentration appeared between his brows. His eyes flicked back and forth like those of a man trapped—but this was a deceptive impression because the film showed his movements four times faster than they actually occurred.

This gave it the appearance of an oldtime silent movie, with Shepard shown moving jerkily and much too fast. His arms reached out to touch switches and guidance controls. He bent forward abruptly to peer out of his porthole.

That was when he exclaimed "What a beautiful sight," the narrator

The strap waving in the air showed the period of weightlessness Shepard experienced for several minutes at the top of his ride.

The whole time Shepard was talking — talking over his radio link to the ground, reading dials and telling how it was going.

As the capsule spiraled down to the sea at the end, sunlight repeatedly lit up the interior as the porthole rotated. This was according to plan.

Two other cameras were aboard. One was trained on the outside view, the other on the instrument panel. The NASA film did not show footage from either of these cameras.

Rep. Overton Brooks, D-La., chairman of the House Space Committee, for which the filming was arranged, said the outside view was obscured by cloud cover most of the time. The instrument panel view was not shown for security reasons, he said.

Nixon Sounds Like Wanting Second Chance

Editor's Note: Starting in November, 1959, and continuing through the presidential campaign, Arthur Edson of the AP Washington staff made periodic trips with Richard M. Nixon. So when Nixon returned to the political front this past week, Edson went along. Here's his report or what's up with Richard M. Nixon.

By ARTHUR EDSON

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Any one who traveled with Richard M. Nixon this week, who listened to his speeches, his news conferences, his informal conversations, would have to reach but one conclusion:

The man who came so close to winning the presidency from John F. Kennedy would certainly like another crack at it.

But this conclusion has to be hastily followed with qualifying footnotes.

As a political realist, Nixon knows the political odds are heavy against him.

One of his great political charms before his nomination was that he had never been beaten. Furthermore, he could speak as vice president, and the many chores President Eisenhower passed along to him kept him in the public eye.

Now he's out of office. He has a Republican party in which he would like to swing a little more to the right and the other would like to veer a bit to the left of the stands Nixon has taken. His influence, as he himself has said, is limited pretty much to whether what he says makes sense, a commodity usually not influential in political circles.

As he said in a Des Moines news conference: "As far as my political future is concerned, I think it's behind me."

Yet hope springs eternal, especially in the breasts of ambitious politicians.

And Nixon, heading today toward his Los Angeles law practice, must look back on his visits to New York, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and Ohio and find considerable grounds for hope.

Crowds were large and enthusiastic.

Republican leaders sought him out.

At times it was possible to think that Nov. 3 hadn't happened, and that he was still shaking every shrub in an effort to flush out a few extra votes.

Little things, for example. At the airport here Wednesday he beamed at two ladies wearing large Nixon-for-president campaign buttons. No, this isn't a new boom. They had frugally saved them from last year.

In Detroit there was one of those quaint side trips that make a regular campaign so hectic.

Nixon was rushed to a Salvation Army home for girls, only to find that there was a mixup and the crowd wasn't there yet. Nixon shook hands with the couple of dozen on hand, said he regretted missing the 500 girls and admired Craig, 4 years old, and Barbara, 14 months, children of Maj. and Mrs. John Cheyne.

It brought back many a campaign memory when Nixon said: "My, those children are just lovely just like dolls."

At a $100-a-plate fund raising dinner Wednesday night young Republicans marched in with Nixon on signs that read: "We'll do more in '64."

But if the similarities are great, the differences are greater.

Once he traveled with a staff that grew into a small army during the campaign.

On this trip, made mostly by ordinary commercial airlines, he was accompanied only by his dedicated secretary, Mary Rose Woods, and by a young Cincinnati lawyer, Sherman Unger, who was an advance man during the campaign and who took time off to help him again.

Where he once had help in writing in speeches, in arranging details so that everything meshed, in fending off autograph hunters, he now has to do much of the work himself.

"This," he told a friend, "is really harder than campaigning." Although he now pays his own way, this isn't much of a problem. Local Republican organizations pick up some of the bills, and the Executive Club of Chicago paid him a fee that will pay for the plane fares.

Hotels still give him complimentary suites, although in Des Moines he got the presidential suite, complete with a picture of President Kennedy.

And as Nixon flails away at Democrats, and prods the Republicans into greater organizing efforts, and conviction grows that there may be a double meaning in a saying of his.

"Don't throw in the towel," he says, "before the fight even starts."

It's advice he gives to Republicans about 1964 in general. But the suspicion is great that he also expects it to apply to Richard M. Nixon in particular.

TOASTMASTERS CLUB AWARDS — Kipp West and M. H. Bynum are shown talking with Sherrill Bryant, president of the local Toastmasters Club, after the two were presented with awards at the annual ladies night banquet last night. West received the Toastmaster of the Month Award, while Bynum was presented a "Certificate of Merit" in basic speech training for the completion of a 12-lesson self improvement course, the first such award received by a member of the two-year-old club. The Toastmasters group meets each Wednesday night at 7:30 at the N.C. State Highway Patrol Troop "A" headquarters building here.

Injection Puts Big Man Eater Completely Out Of Business

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A doctor who made a man-eating shark helpless in seconds by injecting it with a secret drug believes we are on the way to control of this fish that preys on people.

The shark, a 9 foot grey nurse,

GIVEN THE NEEDLE—Dr. Shane Watson right, holds the jaws of a nine-foot man-eating shark he killed by giving it an injection of poison. With the doctor is Antonio Losurdo of Sydney, Australia, who hauled the shark into the shallow water after it became entangled in his fishing net.

became tangled in the net of a professional fisherman who dragged it to shallow water.

Dr. Shane Watson, leader of a five-man shark research team, was called.

The doctor, dressed in a rubber underwater suit, went out to the shark in a boat. Then he leaned over the side, thrust a syringe attached to a spear into the shark, and injected the poison.

He said later: "I jammed the spear with the syringe on its end just above and behind the shark's right gills.

"After about 20 seconds it began to jerk spasmodically. It began to curl up on the side where I injected, and I feel that within 60 seconds it would not have been able to swim.

"Within five minutes it could be safely handled. Its heart had stopped beating after 10 minutes."

Dr. Watson said that before he injected the drug he had tested that the shark was still alive and too dangerous to pull into the boat.

"This is not an expensive drug," he went on. "The composition is still a secret because we have to be sure and make more tests.

"This was the first time since we started using the drug a year ago that we have been able to inject it and watch a shark until its death.

"I think this could be revolutionary in the search for something to control man-eating sharks."

He didn't say exactly how the poison would be used, but presumably a skin diver could carry a syringe along as part of his equipment.

Her Pupils May Have A Monster

CUYAHOGA FALLS, Ohio (AP) — There's a five foot robot named "Tobey" roaming around St. Joseph's school. And seventh grade teacher Claire Heinrich is wondering if she hasn't been responsible for creating a monster.

Miss Heinrich has in her class four pupils who breeze through regular lessons. Her problem: How do you keep them occupied while the rest of the class catches up?

She solved it by getting them to form a special "science club" and offering them a number of projects — including building Tobey.

The four — Michael Stevens, James Glendon and Dannis Saralino, all 12, and Joseph Grese, 13—worked Saturdays in Michael's basement, and in six weeks Tobey was a reality.

Plug in his cord and he walks on feet made from old vacuum cleaner rollers. He moves his arms, turns to look at you and winks — with the aid of two built-in motors. He's the pride of the school.

There's just one thing that has Miss Heinrich worried. Right after Tobey was completed, the boys asked their teacher:

"What next, Miss Heinrich?"

Vice President Johnson Arrives In South Viet Nam

Best High School Scientists Meet

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—His face is beardless, but he speaks intimately about binary computers.

She radiates beauty as she earnestly discusses the effects of light and darkness on the Red Harvester ant.

He never has known a blind man, but he has built a device to make the sightless "see" by sound.

There are 385 such examples—one for every finalist—at the 12th annual National Science Fair, which has brought together the best high school scientists from the best and five other countries.

All winners of local science competitions, they are vying for a number of awards, small in money, but rich in honor.

Two hundred and forty judges from universities and colleges roamed municipal auditorium Wednesday, examining the sometimes fantastically complex exhibits prepared by youngsters of 14 through 18. In the evening, the same judges questioned the competitors giving most weight to creative ability and scientific thought, then rating the thoroughness, skill, clarity and dramatic value of the displays.

The top four awards—first place to a boy and girl each in the physical sciences and the biological sciences—close the three-day fair Friday night. There also are a number of awards by contributing groups for a particular field. Awards in health categories are to be announced tonight.

Where other youngsters might have talked of sports and dates, Robert Guthrie of Des Moines, Iowa, and Richard Erusch of Munster, Ind., swapped information about computers for an hour.

Guthrie, 18, has displayed a computer that adds, subtracts, multiplies and divides to numbers up to a million and sends the answer visually through a teletype machine. He bought much of the equipment for 3 or 10 cents a pound from a junkyard.

Erusch, 17, son of an industrial engineer, built an apparatus to test small rocket nozzles. Gauges mounted on an instrument panel measure the critical pressures.

John Alexander of Tallahassee, Fla., developed the portable machine that throws a beam of light and varies the sound if it encounters an object. The Florida Association for the Blind is interested in the device.

Nancy Spodgrass, 17 and pretty, moved with her parents into a mountain area near Albuquerque, N.M. She became fascinated with the mounds left by the Red Harvester ant and wondered how the ants reacted to light and dark. The result: She found the insects suffered physically ill effects through constant exposure to light and that the ant exhibited superior powers of orientation in total darkness.

Interest in space set Charles Hughes, a Cleveland, Tenn., scientist-of-18, to building a working model earth satellite that measures cosmic radiation, temperature, the number of impacts of meteorites on the shell, the Doppler effect which calculates speed of a satellite, and solar radiation.

Wayne Young of Provo, Utah, has uncovered a new antibiotic in mushrooms and says two drug companies are interested enough to make further studies.

Cramer Serving N.C. Committee

Dr. R. E. Cramer, Professor of Geography at East Carolina College has been appointed by Governor Sanford to serve on a 12-member Technical Advisory Committee for the State Economic Development Program. This committee is made up largely of professors and specialists from North Carolina State College and the University of North Carolina.

The fields represented are varied, and include well-known specialists in business administration, sociology, agricultural economics, government, forestry, and urban studies. Dr. Cramer is the only geographer on the committee, which is under the chairmanship of George M. Stephens, Jr., special assistant to the Governor.

The first meeting of the committee was held in the Governor's Office on April 28 and a second meeting is scheduled for May 22.

The purpose of the States Economic Development Program, of which this committee serves in a technical advisory capacity, is designed to alleviate the basic causes of unemployment, underemployment, and underdevelopment.

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson arrived in this strategic Southeast Asian nation today, bringing assurances that the United States will stand by its allies in this part of the world in the face of Communist danger.

The vice president, on a round-the-world mission for President Kennedy, came here for an on-the-spot study of Communist aggression in a guerrilla war in which an estimated 400 to 500 Vietnamese are being killed every month.

Johnson stepped from a chartered jet and took a salute from a sharp-looking honor guard of 400 Vietnamese. Strict security precautions are in force for Johnson's visit.

The vice president read a short statement pledging U.S. support for hard-pressed allies in this part of the world.

SUITABLE REWARD?

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—Workers at a plant here who complete 100 days without an accident get a reward from the plant's safety manager—first-aid kits.

He is scheduled to hold a two-hour conference Friday morning with pro-Western President Ngo Dinh Diem.

During a stopover on Guam, Johnson said the United States will "stand up for freedom" anywhere in the world and will do all it can to help drive out disease and poverty.

"We believe in freedom not only in the United States, but everywhere," he said.

Johnson made clear the United States will stand by South Viet Nam.

"The United States is proud of the role it has been able to fill in assisting Viet Nam," he said in his airport statement. "My purpose is to explore with your leadership what is required to protect the integrity of Viet Nam and to fulfill the promise of strong foundations for a free society which has been put in place in recent years."

Beset by an estimated 12,000 Communist rebels, South Viet Nam is the first Asian stop for the vice president in his survey of the growing Red menace in this part of the world.

Johnson reportedly will offer

$40 million more in arms aid to enable Diem to boost his 150,000 man army by another 20,000. American aid to South Viet Nam since her 1954 independence has already topped $2 billion, about one-fourth of that military.

During a stopover in Honolulu Johnson disclosed the United States will also set up a central intelligence organization — probably in Saigon—to coordinate all U.S. intelligence in Southeast Asia.

While holding a striking force in readiness, U.S. military authorities in Hawaii told Johnson that American troops should not be sent to South Viet Nam at this time.

Johnson's chief mission is to find out how the United States can shore up the Southeast Asian countries against Communist infiltration. President Kennedy reportedly has given his emissary sweeping authority to make suggestions to the heads of states he meets on behalf of the administration.

The vice president's visit aroused enthusiasm among the South Vietnamese. Newspapers cheered him as an "ambassador of freedom" and declared his tour is to show that the United States is a "most reliable ally."

But one Saigon daily, Yuen Tong, warned: "We hope that the U.S. authorities, after getting a concrete idea of the real situation in this area, will no longer hesitate to act. The time is running out for us."

Johnson's talks with South Viet Nam's president will be one of the high points of his tour of six Asian countries. President Diem, 60, who took over a shaky, troubled and divided nation in 1954, has emerged as one of the Communists' most formidable Asian foes.

Johnson will remain in Saigon until Saturday morning, then fly to Manila. He will also visit the Nationalist Chinese government on Formosa, Hong Kong, Thailand, India and Pakistan, then return to Washington via Europe.

On the Wake-to-Guam leg of the flight from Honolulu, trouble developed in the hydraulic system of the vice president's Air Force 707 jet. Johnson and his wife were aboard the accompanying press plane at the time, holding an informal news conference. When ground crews at Guam decided it would take four or five hours to make repairs, the vice president switched the rest of his party to the press plane.

SCIENCE AND FARMING: Partners For Plenty

Like huge hypodermic needles, these instruments inject soil fumigants directly, and with precision, into the soil.

Grapevines are sprayed with experimental insecticides on the agricultural laboratory farm at Modesto, Calif.

Plant pathologist looks for signs of diseases in seedlings at the laboratory.

Every day the world gets 100,000 more people to feed. World population—now 2.8 billion—is expected to be over 6 billion by the year 2000. The United States population of 180 million is expected to double in the next 40 years. Twice as much food will be needed.

Even today supply is just about equal to demand for most of the crops we eat. The existence of surpluses in a few crops like wheat and corn generally blinds us to this fact. Yet agricultural scientists believe the challenge of the year 2000 can be met. But it will take even more dedicated research in scientific farming, especially in the field of agricultural chemicals that can protect our foods from destructive insects, plant diseases, weeds, fungi and root parasites.

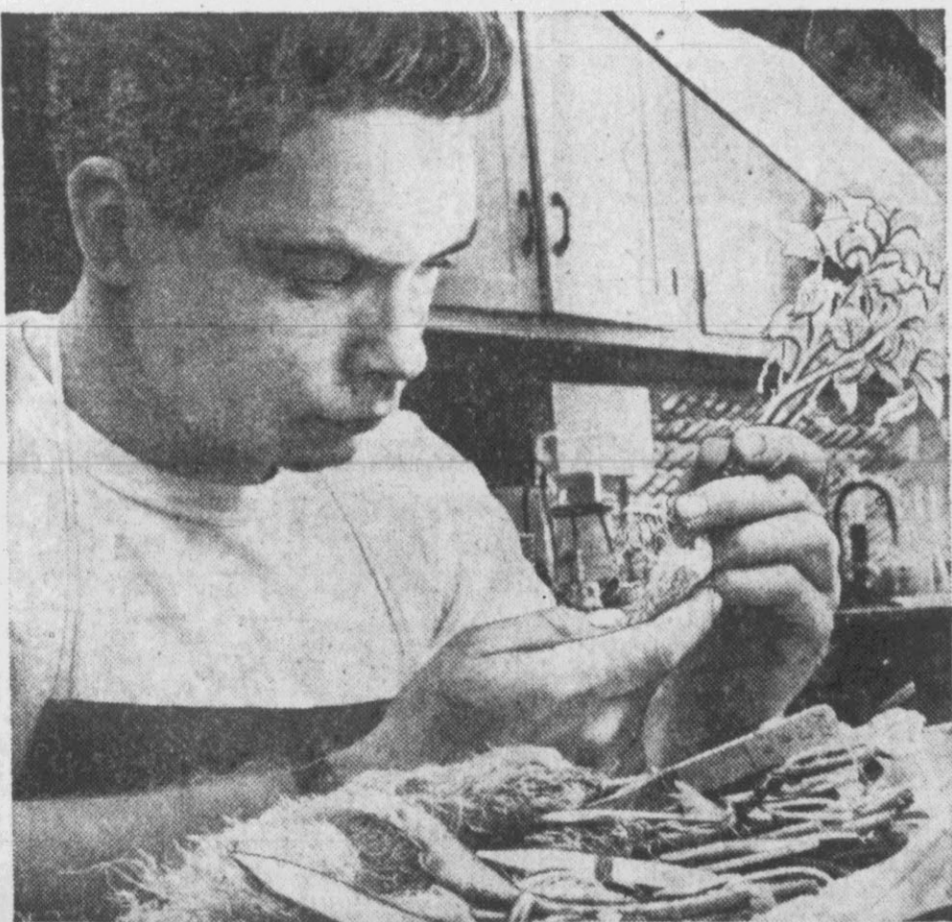

The damage by these crop destroyers is staggering. Insects still eat a third of all the food man grows. Crop losses in this country due to weeds, insect pests, fungi and plant diseases reach 13 billion dollars annually.

But great efforts to stop this waste are being made. New chemicals are being screened, tested and developed in the attack on the crop destroyers. As many as 2,000 new compounds may be tested in a search for one which will be a success and still meet the stringent safety demands of industry and government.

One of the country's largest experimental centers dedicated to the advancement of scientific farming is the Agricultural Laboratory of Shell Development Company at Modesto, Calif. Here, at the 142-acre plant, nearly 100 scientists, including chemists, biologists, entomologists, nematologists, plant pathologists and physiologists, are engaged in continual research and experimentation. Their activities are pictured here.

Plant physiologist J. Van Overbeek checks test planting of lettuce in weed plot treated two years earlier with new weed killer. Test plot is surrounded by weeds which originally covered entire test plot.

Scientist examines tomato roots for nematode damage. Nematodes, tiny worm-like creatures that destroy plant roots, cause estimated billion dollars worth of damage to U. S. crops annually.

Horticulturists produce artificially-disease-infested soil which will later be used in checking effectiveness of new chemical formulations designed to fight these diseases.

Plant physiologist studies growth of test-tube plants in experiment with new weed-killer.

Eisenhower And Former Top Aides Confer Today On Republican Roles

By JACK BELL
GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower calls back into action today a team expected to keep the voice of his former administration strong in Republican and national affairs.

A score of his cabinet members and aides sit down to lunch with the former President to discuss ways of strengthening their party and to make its policies and views felt during Democratic occupancy of the White House.

GOP National Chairman Thorton B. Morton planned a report on where the party stands now.

The unique meeting apparently signaled Eisenhower's intention to maintain close liaison with the men, now scattered in all sections of the country, who helped him in his eight years as president to plot the course he thinks his party should continue to follow.

This was in line with his expressed intention to continue to be politically active as long as he has the strength and opportunity.

Arthur E. Summerfield, former postmaster general, who helped with arrangements for today's meeting, said he thinks Eisenhower's action in calling the conference "is a grand idea."

"The general is getting together a group of men who are familiar with what is happening in the nation and the world," Summerfield said in an interview. "These men have much knowledge valuable to the country that ought not to be permitted just to seep down through the floor.

"In my recent travels I have found there is tremendous interest among the people on where we stand and where we are going. In cooperation with President Eisenhower I think we can contribute to some enlightenment on their part."

Summerfield said he expected the discussion to cover the whole range of domestic and world affairs.

Four students at East Carolina College have become new members of Alpha Delta Tau, Industrial Arts honorary fraternity. They were installed at a recent dinner meeting.

The new members are Lynn Cox of Rt. 1, Turkey; Clinton Green of Rt. 1, Harmony; Sheldon Ray Laster of Gatesville; and James Waugh of Rt. 3, Statesville.

Alpha Delta Tau is an honorary fraternity based on scholastic achievement in Industrial Arts and related fields.

Eisenhower has called on Republicans to support President Kennedy in world crises. He has said specifically that the country is firmly behind the Democratic President in "his effort to prevent the solidifying of a Communist stronghold in the Western Hemisphere," meaning Cuba.

Reached Heart Of Tax Agent

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Even the tax man has a heart and a bride-to-be here knew how to find it.

"Rush! Rush! Rush! This is honeymoon money," she said in claiming a $33 refund.

C. W. Giotzback, district director of the Internal Revenue Service, responded favorably.

M. Nixon, who Eisenhower has called the titular head of the GOP, was invited to the meeting but declined because he is attending a dinner in his honor in San Francisco tonight. Besides Summerfield and Morton those who accepted invitations to attend included Ezra Taft Benson, Fred Seaton, William P. Rogers, Frederick Mueller, James P. Mitchell, Charles E. Wilson, Leo A. Hoegh, Oveta Culp Hobby, Joseph N. Dodge, Percy Brundage, Clarence B. Randall, James J. Wadsworth, Sinclair Weeks, George W. Humphrey, Lewis E. Strauss, Maurice H. Stans, Philip Young, Gordon Gray, Bryce N. Harlow and the former President's son, Lt. Col. John Eisenhower.

Questions, No Answers In Shooting Into Home

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Who fired the shotgun blast into the David Grimes home early Wednesday, wounding three children? Why did he do it? Authorities were still looking for the answers to those questions today. "We have nothing to go on," Sheriff Jesse Hinson said today.

Rain washed away any tracks, and bloodhounds couldn't pick up the trail of the prowler who terrorized the family of nine for 30 minutes before firing a shotgun blast through a window of a bedroom where seven terror-stricken children huddled in bed. Three of the children received minor wounds.

First there was a banging at the front door. "It sounded as if someone was trying to break it down," Grimes said. Then Grimes heard footsteps crunching toward the back of the house.

Grimes peeped through a crack in the door and saw a stocky man in dark cap and dark leather jacket get an ax from an outbuilding and walk to the back porch. Grimes grabbed his shotgun and fired through the door. The prowler

Go Into Sahara To Study Wreck

ALGIERS (AP)—Rescue and investigation teams pushed over the Sahara today to recover bodies and seek the cause of the African continent's worst air disaster the crash of a French airliner that carried 78 persons to their death.

Five Americans were among the dead. It was hoped that desert specialists could locate nomads who witnessed the end of the Air France super-constellation early Wednesday.

The only clues so far were the last radio message from the plane at 1:10 a.m., which reported all was normal, and the sighting some 15 minutes later by a French soldier of what might have been a plane or a shooting star plunging toward the sand.

The sentry was at the big Edjele oil field in the Sahara. The plane crashed about 35 miles away, in a desolate area known as the Grand Erg Oriental.

A light plane with doctors and technicians landed near the crash site late Wednesday and reported there were no survivors and wreckage was scattered over a wide area.

The dead included Mrs. Alan Lukens of Wyoming, Pa., wife of the U.S. charge d'affaires in the Central African Republic; their three small children, and Lukens' mother, Mrs. Edward C. Lukens, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Alan Lukens was flying to Europe for the birth of her fourth child.

Air France first reported that 69 persons were aboard the plane, then that there were 79. After another check the figure was put at 78.

The plane was en route from Brazzaville, capital of the former French Congo, to Paris. It had made one stop, at Fort Lamy, Chad.

Driver Involved In 4 Accidents In Five Minutes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—William L. Seidensticker, 62, was involved in four auto accidents in less than five minutes.

Patrolman Floyd York gave this account: Seidensticker's car hit the rear of another.

He backed away from the collision and promptly collided with another car which pulled up behind him.

The three motorists, including Seidensticker, decided to pull their cars out of traffic into a service station. Seidensticker went first. His auto smashed through the station's closed overhead door and rammed a parked car inside.

Seidensticker again backed his car. This time he crashed into the side of one of the autos he had hit previously.

Seidensticker, unhurt, was cited for drunken driving, failing to maintain an assured clear distance ahead and backing without safety.

No Decision-Change Yet In Moving Area SCS Office

RALEIGH—State Conservationist Richard M. Dailey — top man in the North Carolina Soil Conservation Service organization — today reaffirmed an agreement made in Greenville April 21.

Dailey said today he agreed at the Greenville meeting to postpone a final decision on whether to move the area SCS office currently located in Greenville and serving an 18-county area.

He told a meeting of Pitt County Commissioners at the meeting the office would remain in Greenville for an indefinite period of time until a final decision could be reached.

A proposal to relocate the local office in either New Bern or Kinston was announced April 19 by Dailey. Dailey said the purpose for re-locating the area office — and five more of the state's nine district offices — was to centralize the offices in re-drawn SCS districts.

"This plan does not affect the actual Soil Conservation Service work in any single county. This is just an effort on our part to give our own people better and more direct supervision."

In making the announcement, Dailey pointed out the state's nine SCS districts serve from eight to 18 counties. The new plan would provide for a minimum of 10 counties and a maximum of 11 in each re-drawn district.

Dailey said today the original plan called for gradual relocation of the six area offices involved. The Greenville office had been concentrated on first, he said, "because the need in that district was greatest." The office in Greenville serves 15 SCS work units in 18 counties.

He estimated the statewide realignment and relocation plan would probably require at least one year and possibly 18 months. Other offices pointed to for relocation are area offices in Goldsboro, Raleigh, Salisbury, North Wilkesboro and Waynesville. Offices in Greensboro, Lumberton and Newton would probably not be relocated.
