Early Kennedy-Khrushchev Meeting Said Considered

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A Kennedy-Khrushchev conference on a cold-war problem has become a definite possibility. The chances that one will be held, and held soon, are rated currently at 3 to 2.

Salinger, White House press secretary, bombarded by questions about reports that efforts to arrange a Kennedy-Khrushchev meeting were under way, told reporters he could say only, "There are no plans for any such meeting at present."

Secretary of State Dean Rusk may have done some pulse feeling about a Kennedy-Khrushchev session when he and the foreign ministers of North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries met last week in Oslo.

(Editor's Note: What results might a meeting between President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev produce? What about Kennedy's bargaining position — the issues that might be discussed? A veteran Associated Press diplomatic writer analyzes these points in the following article.)

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER WASHINGTON (AP)—The prospective meeting between President Kennedy and Soviet Premier Khrushchev could have fateful results for world peace.

Kennedy will go into the conference, assuming it is arranged, in an apparently weaker bargaining position than he might have wished.

But any weakness is considered by some of the President's closest advisers to be more apparent than real. For they think it more likely than not that Khrushchev sees the recent U.S. setbacks in Cuba and Laos as evidence not of inadequate U.S. power, but of restraint on the use of that power.

Yet there is concern in some responsible quarters here about Khrushchev's extremely confident attitude, at least as he has shown it publicly. And if this attitude of his holds up in his private talks with Kennedy, the result of the meeting could be to increase East-West tensions instead of opening the way for an improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Kennedy has not indicated publicly what he would like to talk about with Khrushchev. But it is understood that he almost certainly has two major themes in mind:

1. He would like to persuade the Soviet leader to modify the Soviet Union's position in the docketed negotiations at Geneva for a treaty to ban nuclear weapons tests under international inspection safeguards.

Unless the Soviet position is radically modified, many U.S. officials believe the talks may collapse in a few weeks. This would be a severe blow to hopes for bringing the East-West nuclear arms race under control and initiating constructive disarmament negotiations.

2. He would like to warn Khrushchev against miscalculating restraints on the use of power by the United States and its allies as evidence that they will not hold their ground on issues of vital importance. One such issue is

West Berlin, to the protection of which the United States, Britain and France are strongly committed despite recurrent threats against the city from the Communist side.

Another issue is Cuba, of which Kennedy has said that he will take whatever measures may be necessary to protect the security of the United States against the development of a Communist base in this hemisphere.

Talks between the two men presumably would cover a far wider range of subjects than those Kennedy said at the outset of his administration that he would like to concentrate in his dealings with the Soviets on problems about which some agreement was possible. He proposed joint researches on outer space and cooperative endeavors to conquer disease. There is no reason to think that he would not renew this proposition in a face-to-face meeting with Khrushchev.

But in present world circumstances the major part of the conversation would almost inevitably deal with problems arising from the contest created by Khrushchev's efforts to make his confident predictions of a Communist world come true—and the efforts of the United States and its allies to block any further spread of Sino-Soviet power.

Khrushchev has been on the march aggressively ever since the collapse of the Big Four summit conference at Paris just one year ago this month. He was rebuffed, due to the efforts of the United Nations, in his bid for a pro-Communist government in the Congo.

But so far he has succeeded in promoting, with the aid of substantial arms shipments, a pro-Soviet regime in Cuba, and he stands a good chance, again with the aid of Soviet arms shipments, of winning all or a part of Laos.

In the case of the United Nations he served angry notice last fall that he wants the whole organization reshaped so that it may at any time be paralyzed in its operations by a Soviet veto.

It was his insistence on the same kind of veto right in the executive authority of the nuclear test ban inspection system that brought the Geneva conference into its present and possibly final state of stalemate.

On top of his real or prospective successes in Cuba and Laos, Khrushchev found cause for proud boasts of Soviet achievement in the successful orbiting of a man around the world a few weeks ago. This considerably increased Soviet prestige in comparison with that of the United States.

It would be surprising indeed if the Soviet leader did not approach a meeting with President Kennedy now in a more confident mood than that in which he visited the United States and talked with President Eisenhower in September 1959.

Green, Willis To Accompany Tour

RALEIGH—C. Sylvester Green and Thomas W. Willis are among industrialists who will accompany Gov. Terry Sanford and Department of Conservation and Development officials into the Ohio Valley area May 21-26, it was announced today.

Green is executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission and Willis is director of the Farmville Economic Council, Inc. They will be among 30 of the state's leading industrial developers who will accompany the governor to tell industrialists in Ohio what North Carolina has to offer industry.

C. & D. Director Hargrove Bowles Jr. said the group will contact industrialists in Pittsburgh, Pa., Columbus, Dayton and Cincinnati, Ohio, and Indianapolis, Ind. and tell them of the advantages awaiting industry in North Carolina in branch plant locations, industrial sites and other essential things they require for successful operations.

Gov. Sanford will speak at dinners to be held for invited industrialists in Pittsburgh, Columbus and Dayton and at luncheons in Indianapolis and Cincinnati.

Dinners and luncheons will be sponsored by the following North Carolina concerns: Branch Banking & Trust Co., First Citizens Bank and Trust Co., First Union National Bank, North Carolina Savings and Loan League, and Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.

The invocation was given by Jacky Dixon, Kenneth Hodnot gave a report on what the FFA had done in the past year. Billy Ellis introduced J. P. Miniz who entertained the guests with magic tricks.

Special guests included the school band members, the faculty and the FFA member's fathers. Awards were presented by Charles Johnson, the FFA advisor.

Gov. Jarrard of Greenville was among 47 University of North Carolina juniors and seniors initiated into Phi Beta Kappa, the nation's most noted honorary scholastic fraternity, in ceremonies here last week.

The 14 juniors and 33 seniors qualified for induction by maintaining a "B" average or better throughout their college careers. Following initiation ceremonies, the new members were guests at the annual Phi Beta Kappa banquet.

Pope Prepares Encyclical On Modern Social Issues

By FRANK BRUTTO VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John XXIII will issue a major encyclical soon giving the Roman Catholic Church's position on modern social problems.

The pontiff told an assembly of 100,000 workers from Italy and some 60 other nations Sunday that his document will outline "a magnificent program of Christian life and apostolic social activity."

The new encyclical will mark the 70th anniversary of Pope Leo XIII's famous encyclical "Rerum Novarum (Of New Things)". That papal letter of 1891 stated the Catholic position on labor, wealth and social justice. Along with "Quadragesimo Anno (Forty Years Later)" it is still a basic document of the church's teaching in the social field.

Pope John said his encyclical would supplement Pope Leo's and would deal with "the new, grave and at times perilous problems of our epoch." He said the problem of underdeveloped countries "is justly called the problem of the modern epoch."

Publication of the encyclical had been expected today, the anniversary of "Rerum Novarum." But the Pope said it would be delayed several weeks so the Catholic hierarchy abroad could receive the original Latin text simultaneously. Pope John described briefly the problems to be treated in his encyclical—"above all, and precisely, those concerning relations between private enterprise and the intervention of public powers in the economic field."

The Pope said his encyclical will be in four sections that will: (1) Review the social work of Pope Leo, Pope Pius XI and Pope Pius XII; (2) Deal with social problems that have continued during the 70 years since "Rerum Novarum"; (3) Affirm "new, grave and at times perilous problems of this, our recent epoch"; (4) Reaffirm some church teachings in the social field.

The third section, he said, will deal with "the most urgent (problems) of the present moment." Vatican sources said he undoubtedly will deal with the threat of communism in this section.

There emerges above all the problem of agriculture," the Pope said. He declared one of the greatest needs of justice "is to recompose the economic equilibrium between the two sectors (industrial and agricultural) of human existence." Pope John said another problem of global size is "the misery and hunger in which millions and millions of human lives struggle."

The pontiff said emergency aid to impoverished nations does not uproot the cause of the problem. He said collaboration on a world scale is needed instead, involving "many and disinterested workers designed to place large capital and intelligent, competent techniques at the disposition of underdeveloped countries."

Hemispheric Solidarity Is Lacking

It should be clear to the Kennedy administration and to the people of the United States by now that there is no such thing as hemispheric solidarity for action against Castro's Cuba.

That is not to say that many of the nations of Latin America are not gravely concerned over the establishment of a Soviet-type state of Cuba by Castro. Neither is it to say that a number of the Latin American nations are not working closely with the United States in an effort to prevent the spread of Castro communism to other parts of the Western Hemisphere.

It is evident, however, that there are among the nations of Latin America nations which are most reluctant to take any sort of action against Castro and Cuba. The Brazilian president apparently has rejected the U.S. view that something must be done about Castro with the assertion that it is against "any kind of foreign interference, directly or indirectly in order to impose on Cuba any form of government."

And in Ecuador the foreign minister resigned because the president of that nation would not join him in outspoken opposition to the Castro regime in Cuba.

The rebuilding of close friendship and ties between the United States and other nations of this hemisphere apparently was recognized by the Kennedy administration when it came into office.

Some steps have been taken in this direction, but it is clear that no great changes in relationships have taken place since the new administration took over. There are very close relationships between the United States and some of the Latin American nations. With others, however, there is an attitude of suspicion toward the United States that dates back for decades and has never been overcome. It will not be overcome in a matter of a few weeks or a few months.

In its position of world leadership, the United States must be concerned about its ties with nations in all parts of the globe. It appears evident to us, however, that in the years immediately ahead the relationship between the United States and the other nations of this hemisphere will be paramount not only to this hemisphere, but to the entire free world. There can be no question of the importance of strong hemispheric relations so far as the United States and the individual Latin American nations are concerned.

A continuation of an official U.S. attitude of relating Latin American relationships to a secondary position in the field of foreign affairs can only lead to disaster.

Again A Question Of East, West

By LYNN NISBET

GEOGRAPHY — Analysis of the personal chosen on the House and Senate finance subcommittees has renewed attention to the age-old question of where the east ends and the west begins, so far as North Carolina political activity is concerned. Just why place of residence should have any bearing on a legislator's competence to serve on a tax committee might be hard to explain—but it isn't at all hard to discover the feeling that residence has something to do with qualifications.

When Chairman Shelton Wickler appointed his 11-member subcommittee he named seven men from the geographic eastern half of the state and eight from west of the central dividing line. But—only one man comes from right on the coast, two others from the coastal plains area, and only two come from east of the Blue Ridge. The rest come from the area between the swamplands and the high mountains, the part of the state where most of the people live and most of the taxes are paid.

The House subcommittee is composed of Reps. Arledge of Polk, Bell of Carteret, Blue of Moore, Brooks of Durham, Elford of Gason, Harding of Yadkin, Harris of Wake, Henley of Cumberland, Jordan of Buncombe, Kemp of Guilford, McLaughlin of Iredell, Murphy of Pender, Peel of Martin, Rodenbough of Stokes and Woodard of Northampton.

Chairman Tom White named 10 members of the Senate subcommittee, and he got two from the coast, two from the mountains, and the rest from the area between. His committee is composed of Sens. Alford of Nash, Cook of Caldwell, Eubank of Pender, Forsyth of Cherokee, Hamilton of Carteret, Hancock of Granville, Johnson of Iredell, Kesler of Rowan, Moore of Robeson and Whitmore of Henderson.

ECONOMIC — Economic and political views are much more important than physical geography or place of residence in determining suitability of appointees. Main objection raised in the revenue bills to a subcommittee was that the subcommittee would be hand-picked to support the administration tax proposals.

Most comment heard since the selections were announced has been to the effect the fears proved groundless, and that the members of the subcommittee are fairly representative of total sentiment.

The House and Senate groups will meet separately for awhile, getting down to business Tuesday afternoon, but it is expected that later they will hold joint meetings. The law requires joint meetings bill, but no such requirement is made for the finance groups.

SMALL LOANS — Sen. Jennings King of Scotland put in Thursday his long promised small loans bill. The "little bill" had 22 other signatures. Besides King the signers were Sens. Warren of Sampson, Cook of Caldwell, Eubank of Pender, Hancock of Granville, Whitley of Johnston, Whitmore of Henderson, Royal of Anson, Clark of Bladen, Gentry of Stokes, Winkler of Watauga, Eagles of Wilson, Humber of Pitt, Midgett of Hyde, Winslow of Hertford, Thomas of Hoke, Brock of Davie, White of Lenoir, Stone of Rockingham, Roberts of Madison, Ayllett of Pasquotank, Shelton of Edgecombe and Hoyle of Lee. If every signer votes for the bill it will require only three others to assure passage in the senate.

TIGHTEST — This is by far the tightest of all the measures so far proposed for regulating small loan agencies. Senator King says it can be referred to as "the customers bill" or "borrowers bill," as contrasted with the House measure one of which is called the "bankers bill" and the other the "loan companies bill."

The Senate plan would limit loans permitted by licensees to a maximum of $300. The leading House bill has a $600 limit. The Senate bill allows a maximum of 2 percent per month interest on unpaid balances, and restricts charges for filing, recording, releasing and other legal handling of papers to actual fees paid the public officials. The House bill permits interest and service charges aggregating more than 50 percent of the principal of the loan in some instances.

CHANCES — Many members concede that chances for effective remedial legislation at this session are not bright, despite the fact the problem was recognized as a major one long before the session convened. Rep. Rowan Braswell of Wayne put in what is called the "loan company" bill on the second day of the session, and Rep. Irwin Belk of Mecklenburg sent up the "bankers bill" on the third day. Sen. King waited until the 8th legislative day to drop his plan into the mill.

Opinion is general that the Senate will not accept the House bill, and there is serious doubt the House will go along with the Senate idea. That deadlock may result in no constructive legislation this year. The situation has arisen in which compromise agreements (which could have been effected with a little give and take earlier) are now virtually impossible.

National Debt Remedy Isn't All We Expected

It is difficult to say whether assertions that something be done about the national debt had anything to do with action of the House of Representatives last week in passing a bill to permit Uncle Sam to accept gifts of money or other property for the specific purpose of being used to reduce the national debt.

Suffice it to say that those who have been urging Congress to do something about the mounting national debt probably did not have in mind exactly the sort of thing represented in the bill passed by the House.

It's also a good bet that citizens will not be running over each other trying to present gifts to Uncle Sam under the new legislation . . . unless, of course, the House included a provision making the gifts tax deductible.

Desirable If, When Justified

By RALPH ROBEY

So far President Kennedy has lost only one remotely significant test with the Congress. This was on minimum wages and the defeat was by only one vote in the House. That has now been wiped out and we have a new minimum wage bill.

The legislative history of this bill is unusual and significant. When Mr. Kennedy was a Senator he worked hard for increasing the minimum wage to $1.25 (it is now $1.00) and broadly extending the coverage. The Eisenhower Administration was in favor of a modest extension of those to be covered but it wanted the minimum increased to only $1.15. There was extensive Congressional debate but no agreement was ever reached and so nothing was done.

This year President Kennedy again proposed the minimum be lifted to $1.25 and that coverage be extended by one over four million. The House took up the measure first and it refused to go along with the President. It passed a bill lifting the minimum to $1.15 and providing for only a quite limited additional coverage. This was the measure which was enacted by a one vote margin. Then the Senate began its deliberation and, in time, as was expected, passed a bill almost as recommended by the President.

The next step, of course, was to iron out the differences between the two bills by means of a conference committee. This was not easy and for a considerable period there was some reason to believe that no solution could be found. The great problem was to win over enough Southern votes to assure House acceptance of the conference committee report. This was done by eliminating from coverage various groups which the Southern House members were insistent should not be brought under the Act. The largest single group was laundry workers.

The bill extends the coverage by an estimated 3,600,000 workers, and of these about 2,000,000 are retail employees. This is the first time that such workers have been covered.

Provisions for lifting the minimum wage are most complicated. Some go up immediately, but the $1.25 figure does not go into effect until the fall of 1963.

Now everyone likes to see wages go up when the increase is justified. But that is entirely different from having increases forced by law, which is what this particular measure does.

Now everyone likes to see wages go up when the increase is justified. But that is entirely different from having increases forced by law, which is what this particular measure does.

That is what the eighteenth century deists thought. But the Bible gives us no such picture of God and His work. Neither does it support the modern theory, which its proponents call "scientific," that creation came about by a fortuitous assembling of matter. The Bible begins with the confident affirmation that "God created the heavens and the earth."

How can anyone look upon the intricacies and the unity of nature and not see that the whole project has an original "blue print" and that the master Craftsman did the job? To maintain that it just happened is is already Republican. And there is an even chance that more than one of the 11 elected congressmen might be Republican in such an event.

It has generally been considered that congressmen represent people of a district. Some states do have congressmen-at-large elected, but in no state with as many as three congressmen is such a plan used.

Very few of our present congressmen have statewide appeal and prestige. It is entirely conceivable that many of our present congressmen might be eliminated with such a statewide system.

Today in the United States senate Eastern North Carolina has no senator. Both of our senators come from Piedmont North Carolina. To endorse a statewide system of electing 11 congressmen would only play into the hands of an area already stacked with national legislative representatives.

We realize that this matter of redistricting is not an easy one. There is no easy road, and whatever solution is arrived at will leave some scars. Many people are going to be unhappy.

But unhappy or not, the best answer for all of us is to redistrict. The worst possible answer, is to do nothing and thus by default allow the 11 congressmen in 1962 to be elected at large.

The state assembly will accept its responsibility in redistricting. We have no doubt about that. When the election of 1962 rolls around, we'll have 11 congressional districts in our state, with district lines definitely defined. That, to our way of thinking, is the only answer.

Despite the emergence from the recent recession, unemployment is high and most economists say it will continue so.

One school of thought—or perhaps it's only a kindergarten—says that automation is the cause and that the solution is a shorter work week, say of 32 or 30 hours.

This is persuasively simple. Machines enable three 40-hour-a-week men to do the work of four, so, by cutting the work week to 30 hours, all four can be kept on and, since production is the same, there's no need to cut salaries.

There's only one thing wrong with this theory. It won't work. If we should adopt a 30- or 32-hour week with no cut in pay, the results would be more, not less, unemployment.

Americans have largely confused cause with effect, symptoms with disease, in trying to solve the unemployment problem.

Automation is not the cause of unemployment; the "export of jobs" is not the cause. The cause is the fact that American labor has partially priced itself out of the market in many areas. Because labor costs in the United States are high, corporations turn to automation and they establish factories overseas; which

Loyalty And Selflessness

Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

In these days of semi-idleness and feather-bedding, loyalty and selflessness are hardly to be expected. But it does occur and it makes a tremendous difference.

Nearly 20 years ago, a young lady, Helen Patt, walked into my office and said that she would like to work for me. I did not know why. She had always wanted to work as secretary to a writer, she said. Very doubtfully, I employed her. She stayed nearly 20 years until she died, always my closest friend, always loyal, always understanding.

She grew from a young lady into a woman. She developed a personality so that many preferred to speak to her on the telephone. I often wondered about these telephone friendships. Yet, when she was in her terminal illness, these telephone friends came to see her, sent her encouraging letters and flowers. Perhaps it is a characteristic of our civilization that we become pals without seeing each other. At any rate, she knew, in her last weeks, that these voices she had heard on the telephone for nearly 20 years, were real persons and real friends.

Patsy was one called a "Girl Friday," or an "Assistant" or anything you like. Actually she was the inevitable development of our society, a woman devoted to her boss, who gave up everything in this life, not for a job, but for her boss' career. There are such women who watch their men get married, try to keep things going smoothly; remind their men when their marriage anniversary to another woman occurs; perhaps watch the boss go through a divorce and marry another who is perhaps a lonely life for many of these remarkable women but they find a joy in the growth and development of the man they serve. Often there are deep disappointments. I knew such a secretary whose boss died and she never could find another. Those who gave her employment, she found too small, too pitiful. I know another girl who when her boss died, found herself pushed aside; his successor has a girl of his own. There was no place for her.

When a man loses such a girl he faces difficulties beyond imagination. He has permitted himself to become dependent regarding the minutiae of his life and he no longer knows where to look for a pencil or a pad of paper, where to buy a theater ticket, or where to order flowers. He does not remember birthdays. He has a problem of reconstruction which seems to him to be insuperable, but somehow one manages in these matters as families do when there is a great loss. Life goes on and the errors of omission and commission are soon enough corrected.

I write of all this because in the midst of great political events, of earth-shaking affairs, we, each one of us, have our own joys and sorrows, our personal triumphs and our personal tragedies. (Continued on page ten)

Other Editors Saying Not The Answer

(Washington Daily News)

"Why worry about redistricting North Carolina?" "Why not just let the people of this state elect 11 congressmen-at-large in 1962?"

These questions were asked recently. The person asking them observed that it would be fair to all the people and at the same time we must do something about the unfortunate status of losing one of our congressmen.

This man, in his arguments, made the solution sound so simple that he convinced several persons around him that he had a practical answer. But let us examine his argument.

It is true that whereas North Carolina has 12 congressmen now, we'll have only 11 in 1962. Thus we must do something about the unfortunate status of losing one of our congressmen.

North Carolina could just say "well, we are going to elect 11 congressmen-at-large next time and forget about redistricting. It is entirely possible to do this. But is it practical?"

First of all, if 11 congressmen-at-large should be elected, it is quite possible that here in Eastern North Carolina we would be without representation in the congress. Since Piedmont North Carolina has a population far exceeding that of the Eastern and mountain areas combined, it is conceivably possible that the 11 new congressmen might all come from the Piedmont area.

Certainly, such a system would incur great injustices to our part of the state. Then in regard to electing 11 Democratic congressmen, we would dispute that claim. Piedmont North Carolina amounts to an export of jobs. This is not to say that any worker in America today is overpaid—with the possible exception of a few at Cape Canaveral. The average worker, especially you and I, is probably worth twice of what he is getting.

But this is to say that the typical worker is getting paid so much more than world rates that his produce has trouble competing in the world market.

So to compete, corporations install automatic equipment that requires fewer manhours, or establish branches overseas where underpaid (at U. S. rates) workers produce products at low, competitive costs.

John P. Maggard, of the School of Business Administration, Miami University, Ohio, marshals some of the facts in an article on "Meeting Foreign Competition" in the May issue of "The Management Review," published by the American Management Association.

Some of his facts: American-invented barbed wire can be sold in Dayton, Ohio, for $40 per ton less by German manufacturers than by Cleveland producers. A hundred pounds of German-made wire nails can be delivered in Florida, Ill., at a duty paid price of $8.35, while Peoria-made nails sell for $9.80.

"Steel" estimates that because of foreign competition American workmen lost these jobs between 1956 and 1959: 46,400 in steel mill products, 39,400 in passenger cars; 269,181 in typewriters, and 383,048 in sewing machines.

JOBS LOST TO AMERICANS. Several thousand American firms in the last decade have built plants abroad or bought into foreign industry. U.S. long-term investment abroad had reached $41 billion by the end of 1959; of this, investment in foreign subsidiaries and branches was $30 billion. General Motors, with a work force exceeding 100,000 in 18 countries, is currently investing more than $200 million to increase its foreign operations. Ford has more than doubled factory sales of foreign-made cars, trucks and tractors in the past decade. Chrysler has 17 wholly owned foreign subsidiaries. Studebaker-Packard, American Motors, Willys and Kaiser have foreign branches.

"Take the case of Philco, with plants in Italy; American Cyanamid, with plants in Western Europe; Du Pont with six European companies and 11 installations in Latin America; Park, Davis and Co., of Minnesota, Mining and Manufacturing Co., with their installations in South Africa," Dr. Maggard wrote.

Automobile tires made by Firestone in South Africa are Today, the Government is providing many cushions, which should protect us against a repetition of the foregoing unexpected events. I, however, wish to suggest a few new possibilities, with which readers may not agree, but which are possible: (1) Great Britain may go Communist. France certainly could go Communist at the death of DeGaulle. (2) There may be some unforeseen effect of all this space exploration and of the satellites now revolving in orbit around the world. These may slow the revolving of the world! Scientists do not now understand why the world keeps revolving as it does; and any noticeable slowing up of this revolving could raise havoc with business, investments, and welfare. The recent severe winter may be succeeded by worse ones each year, with unexpected results. (3) The present turn for the worse in the Cuban situation has been a complete surprise to President Kennedy. We must both keep Russia out of Cuba and also avoid having any more Latin American countries go Communist. Unemployment can be retarded and business is supposed to be improving; but a sudden permanent turn to Communism by any Latin American country would be both unexpected and very serious.

(4) Every so often a great earthquake has taken place, usually in the ocean. Geologists tell me, however, that such an earthquake may some day take place and swallow up New York or some other metropolitan city. Like the San Francisco earthquake, this would come wholly unexpectedly and possibly be followed by a great conflagration. (5) Geologists and chemists also tell me that a substitute for gold may be discovered at any time, a synthetic gold.

Eight Major Events

By ROGER BARSON

BABSON PARK, Mass.—There have been eight important unexpected events since 1860 that have affected U. S. markets. The first was the election of Abraham Lincoln and the beginning of the Civil War. This caused a great break in all markets.

Eight Severe Market Declines
In addition to the above, let me describe the seven other severe market declines which have come from wholly unexpected events. (2) Directly following the Civil War there was a tremendous impetus given to railroad building, which resulted in great speculation. This collapsed in the 1870's. (3) Up until the 1890's politics had not affected business; but at this time William J. Bryan, probably the greatest orator since 1860 has seen, started a campaign to go off the gold basis and to use silver. This raised havoc with the stock market.

(4) After Bryan's complete defeat, the stock market became then relatively steady until the Spanish-American War suddenly came upon us in 1898, with the sinking of "The Maine" in Havana Harbor. This first caused a panic, after which the stock market began to pick up around 1900 when all went well. (5) Among the various financial moves favoring trusts and other investments was a proposed merger between the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, and the Burlington Railroads. To the great surprise of everyone, the Supreme Court forbade this merger and trusts in general, resulting in another stock market decline. (6) Speculation again increased in the early 'twenties, reaching an all-time (to that date) stock market high in 1929 with the panic which many of my readers can remember. In a few years, however, this was largely forgotten when the Supreme Court again revived. (7) Soon after that, we got into World War II. This gave business a boost until the war came to a sudden end in 1945, after which it took us three or four years to readjust. All these events were unexpected at the times they occurred.

Unexpected Events Which May Be Ahead Of Us

(8) The Government is providing many cushions, which should protect us against a repetition of the foregoing unexpected events. I, however, wish to suggest a few new possibilities, with which readers may not agree, but which are possible: (1) Great Britain may go Communist. France certainly could go Communist at the death of DeGaulle. (2) There may be some unforeseen effect of all this space exploration and of the satellites now revolving in orbit around the world. These may slow the revolving of the world! Scientists do not now understand why the world keeps revolving as it does; and any noticeable slowing up of this revolving could raise havoc with business, investments, and welfare. The recent severe winter may be succeeded by worse ones each year, with unexpected results. (3) The present turn for the worse in the Cuban situation has been a complete surprise to President Kennedy. We must both keep Russia out of Cuba and also avoid having any more Latin American countries go Communist. Unemployment can be retarded and business is supposed to be improving; but a sudden permanent turn to Communism by any Latin American country would be both unexpected and very serious.

(4) Every so often a great earthquake has taken place, usually in the ocean. Geologists tell me, however, that such an earthquake may some day take place and swallow up New York or some other metropolitan city. Like the San Francisco earthquake, this would come wholly unexpectedly and possibly be followed by a great conflagration. (5) Geologists and chemists also tell me that a substitute for gold may be discovered at any time, a synthetic gold.

Unemployment Due Many Causes

amounts to an export of jobs. This is not to say that any worker in America today is overpaid—with the possible exception of a few at Cape Canaveral. The average worker, especially you and I, is probably worth twice of what he is getting.

But this is to say that the typical worker is getting paid so much more than world rates that his produce has trouble competing in the world market.

So to compete, corporations install automatic equipment that requires fewer manhours, or establish branches overseas where underpaid (at U. S. rates) workers produce products at low, competitive costs.

John P. Maggard, of the School of Business Administration, Miami University, Ohio, marshals some of the facts in an article on "Meeting Foreign Competition" in the May issue of "The Management Review," published by the American Management Association.

Some of his facts: American-invented barbed wire can be sold in Dayton, Ohio, for $40 per ton less by German manufacturers than by Cleveland producers. A hundred pounds of German-made wire nails can be delivered in Florida, Ill., at a duty paid price of $8.35, while Peoria-made nails sell for $9.80.

"Steel" estimates that because of foreign competition American workmen lost these jobs between 1956 and 1959: 46,400 in steel mill products, 39,400 in passenger cars; 269,181 in typewriters, and 383,048 in sewing machines.

JOBS LOST TO AMERICANS. Several thousand American firms in the last decade have built plants abroad or bought into foreign industry. U.S. long-term investment abroad had reached $41 billion by the end of 1959; of this, investment in foreign subsidiaries and branches was $30 billion. General Motors, with a work force exceeding 100,000 in 18 countries, is currently investing more than $200 million to increase its foreign operations. Ford has more than doubled factory sales of foreign-made cars, trucks and tractors in the past decade. Chrysler has 17 wholly owned foreign subsidiaries. Studebaker-Packard, American Motors, Willys and Kaiser have foreign branches.

"Take the case of Philco, with plants in Italy; American Cyanamid, with plants in Western Europe; Du Pont with six European companies and 11 installations in Latin America; Park, Davis and Co., of Minnesota, Mining and Manufacturing Co., with their installations in South Africa," Dr. Maggard wrote.

World Pays Tribute To Actor Gary Cooper

By BOB THOMAS HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The body of Gary Cooper lay in a mortuary chapel today as the world paid tribute to his greatness.

wide range of Cooper's acquaintances. They included Ernest Hemingway (unable to attend because of illness), Henry Ford II, Bing Crosby, John Wayne, Burt Lancaster, Peter Lawford, Walter Brennan, Dick Powell, Kirk Douglas, William Wyler, Danny Kaye, Samuel Goldwyn, Billy Wilder, Arthur, will attend the interment at Holy Cross Cemetery. Cooper Only members of the actor's family, which includes a brother, 1959.

Rosary will be recited tonight for the 60-year-old star, who lost his fight with cancer Saturday. Tuesday his friends among the waiting ranks of Hollywood greats will file into the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills for the funeral.

The shock of his passing was not lessened by the fact that it had been known for a month that he was dying. As the news swept around the world, it evoked words of appreciation for the lanky Montanan who personified the American hero.

Pope John XXIII cabled a message of sorrow to Cooper's widow and daughter. The British Broadcasting Corp. telecast a 15-minute tribute to the actor. "We feel like we've lost our best friend," said the movie critic of the Tokyo Shimbun.

The Washington Post editorialized Cooper "came to be a symbol of the vigor, courage and heroism in American life."

The London Times devoted 800 words to Cooper, calling him "the all-American hero."

The Cannes film festival in France lost its gaiety with news of Cooper's death. "The entire festival is in mourning," said an official. A special showing of "High Noon" was scheduled. Re-marked the Soviet member of the film jury: "His death is a great loss for the film world."

Even the Communist press paid tribute. In Paris, the Humanite headlined: "America loses cowboy number one." Rome's L'Unita proclaimed: "A great actor disappears." The major Yugoslavian daily, Borba, said: "Gary Cooper will survive his physical death because he was one of the best of the great film creators."

Spent with cancer, Cooper died at 12:27 p.m. Saturday. "He had great will to live or he might not have survived that long," said his physician, Rex Kennamer.

Cooper's wife, Veronica, and their daughter, Maria, 24, were at the bedside in the Holmby Hills home, along with the actor's priest, the Right Rev. Msgr. Daniel Sullivan. Also present was Cooper's mother, Alice Cooper, 87.

Dr. Kennamer said the actor was aware of his condition for many weeks. Heavy sedation prevented his knowing the end was near.

Forcible Rescue Saved Her Life

WILLMAR, Minn. (AP) — Policeman Nick Curtis broke down the door and pulled protesting schoolteacher Justine Wessel outside her apartment Sunday just before an explosion wrecked the building.

Neither of them, nor Caroline Ostlund, another occupant, Curtis rescued, were injured when explosions and flames destroyed an office-apartment building.

Miss Wessel was trying to gather her personal belongings when Curtis removed her forcibly.

Curtis was in a police cruiser that had just arrived to check reports of a light in a finance company office downstairs when the first explosion hit.

Within minutes, the brick structure was reduced to a single, partial wall. A doctor's office and barber shop had been in the building as well as the finance company and the upstairs apartments.

First loss estimates were put at $250,000.

Moon Trip Not Seen In Decade

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A leading Austrian physicist says he believes a landing on the moon by human beings will not be possible within the next decade.

Prof. Hans Thirring of Vienna University said the recent space trips by a Soviet and an American prove that a voyage to the moon will eventually be possible, but that the actual journey and safe return to earth is still a long time off.

Thirring has just returned from a month's visit to the United States. He received an honorary degree from the University of Philadelphia.

"Do Stain-Resistant Finishes need Drycleaning?" —Mrs. J.P.S.

Dear Mrs. J.P.S.: The stain-repellent Scotchguard finish which has received wide publicity in magazines and newspapers has excellent properties which perform to the manufacturer's claims. However, while it may permit the sponging off of "salad, motor oil, melted butter, milk, soft drinks and alcoholic beverages" as the manufacturer claims, there is no indication that the treated fabric does not require drycleaning. Recently this stain-repellent has been introduced to washable fabrics where, previously, it could not be used because it washed out of garments. A stain-repellent is a coating which prevents a stain from penetrating the fibers as long as the coating remains on the fabric. While you may be able to blot off a stain with a napkin, all garments will soil, as you well know, and drycleaning is necessary to remove soil and germs for health's sake and to restore a fresh appearance. Tests in the laboratories of the National Institute of Drycleaning, while not conclusive, indicated that water and oil stains were repelled by this finish even after prolonged wear and repeated drycleanings. However, after a period of time the stain repellency lessened somewhat. Difficult-to-remove stains came off quite easily without special spotting treatment. Removal of spots did not leave any "rings," either. Abrasion from actual wear is the most severe test of new fibers, weaves and finishes. It will take time to judge the effect of wear on this new finish. Presently, there are several apparent advantages in it. However, soil and stain will continue to mar all garments and they must be cleansed completely for the sake of good health and good appearance, no matter how easily a single spot may be removed. —(Adv.)

Rural Vote Continues To Outweigh Big Urban Vote

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If you want your vote in state legislative affairs to weigh more, move to the country.

The reason? Most state legislatures now are dominated by rural senators and representatives.

In theory, every state but Maryland must reapportion all or part of the legislature periodically. This prohibits the focus of power anywhere but with the majority of the people.

But in practice, theory is shelved and rural lawmakers keep a firm hold on their power.

That disfranchisement is common may be seen in this sampling:

Alabama's Bullock County has 12,000 citizens and two representatives. But the more than 50,000 Houston County citizens have only one.

Less than one-third of Iowa's population controls the legislature.

Some Wyoming counties with three legislators have fewer residents than other counties with but one.

Four urban Utah counties claim three-quarters of the state's population, pay 60 per cent of the taxes, but have only 44 per cent of the Senate seats and 54 per cent of the House.

And Perry County, Arkansas, boasts 4,900 residents and one representative, while the eight Pulaski County representatives average 31,250 constituents each.

In all but a handful of states, reapportionment is a vexing problem. And its solutions range from acceptance to agitation to reform.

Maryland's legislative districts can be changed only with approval by voters and there are no deadlines for changes. The last boundary changes followed a 1950 referendum.

The partition of Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama is the same now as it was a half-century ago.

Vermont's 246-member House—second largest in the nation—has been unchanged numerically since its first seating in 1793. And Connecticut's Senate is the same in number now as in 1874.

Reapportionment of all or part of the Iowa, Ohio and Arkansas legislatures is virtually impossible because of so-called "freezing" clauses which permanently fix district boundaries.

Small hope is held for overhaul of the assemblies of Kentucky, Utah, Vermont, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Wyoming—states where the lawmakers maintain a passive attitude.

Indiana's legislature was last reelected in 1921, despite a constitutional provision for a census and reapportionment every six years. An Indianapolis judge ruled recently that all future acts of the legislature will be invalid unless the constitution is obeyed, but there is considerable doubt the ruling can be enforced.

The rural-urban antagonism is compounded in Vermont, New York and Connecticut by partisan politics.

New York's Democratic party strength is centered in large cities. Republicans control upstate areas. Each can and does block the other's attempts at reform. A change would shift seats from urban to suburban sectors. And suburbia, while leaning to the GOP, is fast becoming a political question mark.

Vermont Republicans stand to lose Senate seats if reapportionment is enacted there. A Democratic Senate in Connecticut stands opposed to a Republican House. Efforts in one house are often rebuffed in the other.

But progress is being made. Partial equalizing recently occurred in eight states. Change is under study in 11 more.

Floridians will vote soon on a new districting plan (a similar measure was voted down by a 5-4 margin two years ago). In Michigan a constitutional convention this fall probably will rework that state's apportionment clause.

Governors in Georgia, California, Alabama and Utah are taking a personal role in seeking equalization of the governmental formulas in their states.

Elsewhere, individuals are taking matters to the courts.

A Mississippian refuses to pay his state tax, saying he isn't fairly represented. He claims that no legislative reapportionment since 1890 means taxation without fair representation.

A Kansas attorney has asked the courts to declare all legislative acts unconstitutional. He says the Kansas government has gone unchanged for so long it no longer reflects the wishes of the majority.

Most publicized of current reapportionment controversies is that in Tennessee. The U. S. Supreme Court is considering a case in which city voters claim they aren't being equitably represented.

But even these systems are driven by cross currents. The same feelings exist now which plagued the men who drafted the Constitution. The first constitutional convention saw large states demanding representation on the basis of population. Small states wanted representation divided equally, regardless of population. Delegates finally settled on the Virginia compromise, which established the bicameral system we know today.

The drift toward small-population control has prompted many states to make either a partial redistribution or begin serious study toward such an end. Eight states which have updated their formulas in recent years are Washington, Oregon, Nevada, Montana, Kansas, Missouri, Massachusetts and Maine.

But where one house was made representative, the other continues allocating seats on a geographic basis. Decisive control is thus split and the farm, mountain, grassland or forest lawmakers in a sense retain a disproportionate share of power.

Eleven states studying ways of equalizing districts and temporarily solving the reapportionment enigma include California, Colorado, Texas, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Virginia, Vermont, the Carolinas and Georgia.

Luncheon Clubs Grow In Number And Swank

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW OYRC (NAP) — Oustins luncheon clubs grow both in number and in swankiness. They are scattered from the eastern seaboard to Honolulu.

The recession led many corporations to cut operating costs in many ways. But most clubs say they have suffered no loss of membership. Companies often pick up the tab for one or more top executives. At a club, their man can both entertain at midday and do business with a guest, a client, supplier, banker or adviser. (In these days of antitrust probes, it's no place to be seen with a competitor.)

The clubs offer varying degrees of exclusiveness and more of them are opening on top floors of new buildings that can boast a view. The dues and luncheon checks vary as widely as the sites.

But all have in common the aim of luring men of like interests get together for a meal and maybe a drink. They may just relax but most members claim they discuss their problems or work out business deals. It's the same sort of thing that businessmen often do, so they say, when they leave the office early for a round of golf.

Swank decor and service helps. But members say the big idea is to avoid being disturbed by outsiders and have enough elbow room so that the talk can be private. To this end also most clubs have private rooms as well as in general luncheon areas. Some private rooms are rented permanently by corporations or groups. Most are open to use for meetings or other special occasions.

The growing number of office buildings, each with a new coterie of executives, has hiked the demand for club membership and led to the opening of many new clubs and the planning of still more.

Joining the rush of new clubs on the New York scene are the Fifth Avenue Club atop the Corning Glass Building and the Hemisphere Club at Time & Life in Rockefeller Center. Another new comer is the Harbor View Club at the lower end of Broadway, and fairly recent is the Pinnacle Club in the Socony Mobil Building near Grand Central Station.

Coming is one atop the Pan Am Building being built over the tracks at Grand Central. The Wall Street Club will move from present quarters to the Chase Manhattan Bank Building nearing completion in the financial district.

Older clubs report no loss of total membership due to the influx. The Rainbow Room Luncheon Club, loftiest in Rockefeller Center, says the Hemisphere Club has only helped supply the demand for such midday gathering places.

The financial district has many long established clubs, such as the Bankers Club of America, India House and the Whitehall Club.

Luncheon checks in New York City clubs are reported to average over $4, while at clubs in Denver, Tulsa and Honolulu the average is variously reported from $1.40 to $2.50.

Four Die As Car Plunges In River

STATESVILLE, N. C. (AP) — Four persons were killed late Sunday night when a car plunged from a bridge 12 miles east of here into the South Yadkin River.

Dead are David Alexander Gaither, 62; his wife, Adell, about 70; the couple's foster daughter, Miss Ophelia Allison and the Allison woman's 3-year-old daughter, Lee O., all Negroes of Rt. 1, Harmony.

State Highway Patrolman C. E. Gaither Jr. said the car was traveling from Statesville toward Harmony on old North Carolina 75 when it lured from the road, landing in the middle of the stream. Before it skidded 41 feet.

The four bodies were found in the back seat of the car, where they had apparently been trapped by the waters of the river.

The officer estimated the car left the highway about 9 p.m. Boston Haupe, 19, of Statesville, notified officers about 11 p.m. that he had seen a light blinking in the river below the bridge. The Statesville Rescue Squad responded, finally dragging the car from the water about 12:30 a.m. this morning.

The bridge is situated on a slight curve, the officer said, but the car apparently failed to negotiate the turn.

A brother of the dead man said he had last seen the family at a funeral for a relative Sunday afternoon.

Yanks Sweep Two From Detroiters

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Yogi Berra's pinch single in the 11th inning of the opener and a six-straight single attack in the first inning of the second game gave the New York Yankees a 5-4 and 8-6 sweep of a doubleheader from Detroit.

Minnesota moved into third place, past Baltimore, edging Los Angeles 4-3 while Cleveland was taking two from the Orioles, 1-0 in 15 innings and 6-4.

Cotton Forgotten, As Hens Take Over Farm Interest

By TOM WOOD
N. C. State College
MONROE — "I've been working with Dad since I was 18 — from high school onto the firing line." The "firing line" for Stowe Brooks seven years ago wound through the cotton fields at the farm near here. "Cotton was our big enterprise then," Stowe remembers. But it also took in a house with 2,500 layers. Today, R. Glen Brooks and his family have forgotten cotton. Their lines of endeavor wind around and through six big houses, the homeplace of 25,000 hens. Like many young farmers, Stowe Brooks had to try "public work" for a spell. "I wasn't satisfied with it," he says. "Now, I wouldn't trade the poultry business for any other way of life."

at the Dixie Poultry Exposition in Asheville last fall," says Stowe with a chuckle. "I told Dad we just had to have one like it." The proportioner is a gadget that fits on a well pipe. A system of valves is arranged so that Stowe can run worm medicine in the water lines to the chickens. "That gadget cost us about $95," says Stowe. "It has cut our worming time from five days to two days." A cutoff valve between the well with the proportioner and the Brooks' other well keeps the family from getting worm medicine in their own water. Another contraption Stowe built helps to spread sawdust on the layer house floors. He put a false front end just behind the real front end of a two-and-a-half ton truck. Then he hooked chains from the false front end into a gear box at the back of the truck. A quarter horsepower motor pulls the false front end back, forcing sawdust out through the open gate onto the floor of the house. "The whole thing — truck bed, gearbox, chain and labor — cost about $435," says Stowe. "It has been well worth the expense in time and labor saved."

A gimmick he rigged up for the egg house door lets his wife, Mary Alice, open the door with a foot while carrying a basket of eggs in each hand. It's a small board just outside and to the right of the door, connected to a rope that pulls open the door through a set of overhead pulleys. The Brookses sell 175 cases of eggs a week. Average production is 230 to 240 eggs per year from each hen. "Our cost averages about 30 cents per dozen," says Stowe. Their egg breakage runs about five per cent. Laying house mortality for chicks is about ten per cent. "We have more trouble with coccidiosis in growing pullets than anything else," says Stowe. Stowe is the manager of the farm, working under his father. He handles the bookkeeping. Stowe's wife, Mary Alice, takes care of the egg washing. "We wash every egg as soon as we get it from the nest." The family has a man and his wife working for them. "A family has to get along well together to succeed in a farm enterprise," Stowe says soberly. Many a farmer or businessman in North Carolina would be happy indeed if he could have as fine a business arrangement with his son as R. Glen Brooks.

Purchasers Seek Uniform Cotton

RALEIGH—Cotton manufacturers today are asking for more uniform lots of cotton to minimize troubles, and costs in the mills. What are they asking for when they speak of uniform cotton? In general it's cotton with a minimum variation in measurable fiber characteristics from one bale to the next. This minimum variability is as important to cotton mills as planting crops with a two-row tractor is to the farmer that plans to cultivate with a two-row tractor. Where do cotton mills look for fiber variability? The length of fibers is one source. Here the classer's pull determines the average length of fibers in a sample. Additional information about the fiber length is determined by instrument tests. These tests can show the fiber length distribution. As the percentage of short fibers (usually measured less than one-half inch) begins to increase, the cotton is likely to cause more trouble during processing. Uniformity of staple length is important whether it is one-inch cotton or 1 1/4" cotton. The fineness and maturity of individual fibers determine the performance of cotton in the dyeing of the quality cotton goods that we buy and enjoy. Other fiber qualities such as color and strength are required with a narrow range to produce high-quality cotton products. The demand for our raw cotton will be increased as we are better able to supply large quantities of uniform quality cotton.

Tobacco Tips

By S. J. WEEKS
Pitt County Tobacco Agent
Several farmers have been asking about the effect of the recent heavy rainfall on the tobacco crop. The rains have leached much of the nitrogen in the soil to a depth that will not be as readily available to the roots of the tobacco plant. Therefore, additional nitrogen will be needed to get a normal growth of the tobacco in this year's crop. To help correct this situation apply one-fifth of the original nitrogen where the rainfall was as much as one inch above the amount that ran off. If the excess water amounted to two inches or more one-third of the original nitrogen should be used. Either nitrate potash or nitrate of soda (preferably nitrate potash) should be used as your source of nitrogen for best results. The amount suggested should be used in addition to any top dressing that has been used, or that you were planning to use. It is realized that the amount of leaching is different in different fields. In some fields even more nitrogen in the form of nitrate of soda may be needed. I would suggest that you wait and observe the growth of tobacco for a while before using more than this amount. If an additional amount is needed it can be applied until the tobacco is waist high.

Scientists Learning To Judge Milk By 'Looks'

RALEIGH—Dairy scientists at N.C. State College are learning to judge milk flavor by its "looks." Now, of course, they don't have X-ray eyes that can "see" what milk tastes like. They're using a method that "senses" the quality and quantity of the different things in milk. The scientists hope to be able to pinpoint the causes of off-flavors in milk. This would lead to better methods of keeping out the off-flavors. For instance, when cows eat ladino clover during the season of lush growth, they take in something that gives their milk an unwanted flavor. The State College scientists have narrowed down the cause of off-flavor to a few possibilities. "The flavor components in the milk are removed by distillation techniques," says Dr. L.W. Aurnand, dairy chemist at N.C. State College. "These compounds are then resolved by a method known as 'gas-liquid chromatography.'" "Very simply, the compounds are injected into a heated column consisting of an inert material and a high-boiling organic compound. The compounds are volatilized by the heat and are swept along by an inert carrier gas (helium). They are resolved according to their chemical structure and characteristics. Then a delicate sensing device registers the quality and quantity of the components in varying peaks on a chart as they emerge from the column." The instrument is so accurate that it can measure as little as one microgram of material. (If one gram were 3,000 miles long, a microgram would represent 16 feet of the distance.) The picture that shows up on the chart helps to find the materials to blame for off-flavor. "We've concluded that ladino clover off-flavor may be due to either of two carbonyl compounds: Isovaleraldehyde or isobutyraldehyde," says Aurnand. "Or it may come from a blend of normal components in milk with those appearing in off-flavored milk." Aurnand says that the method can't judge the like-dislike aspect of flavor. "But once we learn to do this scientifically, the gas-liquid chromatography method can be used to cut out the human biases that hamper flavor-testing," he says.

Farm Net To Go Up $1 Billion

RALEIGH — There's good news for farmers in a report from Washington. Realized net income of farm operators in 1961 will be up a billion dollars or more over 1960, predicts the Department of Agriculture. The figure is expected to be about 10 per cent more than 1960's $11.6 billion. The report is tempered by the feeling that some increase in farm production expenses may offset part of the rise of $1 1/2 billion in realized gross receipts.

Dairy Judging Team Of Chicod To State Finals

The dairy judging team of the Chicod chapter of the Future Farmers of America placed second in a district rally held recently in Williamston. As a result, the team will go to the state finals in Raleigh in June. Eighteen schools were represented at the rally, held at a dairy in Williamston. F.F.A. chapters from throughout eastern North Carolina were in attendance, with Hookerton placing first in the dairy judging. Beef and swine judgments also were held. Members of the Chicod dairy judging team, which came in second, were Wayland Hardee, Terry Dixon, Wayland Adams, and Jacky Dixon. Terry Dixon was the second highest scorer for the district rally.

They Sell 1600 Eggs Each Day

DOBSON — It takes "quality" to bring people to your house after 1,600 eggs a day. But this is what is happening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arlis Easter of Mount Airy. Agricultural Agent T. N. Hobgood says the Easters have 3,000 commercial layers, and they market all their eggs at home.

Black Walnut A Valuable Tree

WAYNESVILLE — Black walnut is a valuable tree to farmers in Western North Carolina, says Frederick E. Boss, assistant agricultural agent in Haywood County. They grow well in rich mountain soil, and the supply of saw logs of this species is becoming more and more scarce. Boss believes one of the main reasons for the depletion of this valuable tree is the size at which they are cut. Lumbermen become too impatient and cut the trees too young, he said. Wait until they are at least 16 inches in diameter, Boss suggests, then black walnut will yield enough lumber to make cutting economical.

Boll Weevil To Require Action

RALEIGH — Tar Heel cotton farmers will have to crack down on the boll weevil this year sure enough. Entomologists found almost three times as many weevils per acre hibernating this winter as last in woods trash near cotton fields in the Piedmont cotton counties. The average was 1,558 per acre, compared to 590 last spring. In the Coastal Plain cotton counties, the average was 1,129 this year, compared to 1,049 last year. And in North Central North Carolina it was 377 and 430.

THREE SCORE—This is an official portrait of Emperor Hirohito of Japan who was 60 years old on April 29, 1961. He has headed the Nipponese empire since late 1926.

Sheep Profits In Watauga County

BOONE — Sheep appear to be a profitable enterprise for Watauga County farmers, said Agricultural Agent L. E. Tuckwiler, after summarizing sheep flock reports for 1960. Reports show that the average return per ewe was $24.19. Average cost of keeping the ewe was $8.50, which leaves $15.69 as a return for labor, management and investment. If ewes cost an average of $20 each, then the return to labor, management and investment is 78 per cent. Tuckwiler says most Watauga farmers keep around 20 ewes. They shear about seven pounds of wool each and raise a 115 per cent lamb crop.

CHAPTER 32
Strung out in a line, with DeWitt leading and Fairlie with Thravn and Aral not far behind him, the men began to climb.

A chill feeling came over Fairlie. There was something in DeWitt's hard, transfigured face that was very like the faces of the statues. Too like, he thought.

There was a massive door, the two valves plated with bright gold, untouched and untarnished except that the doors themselves sagged drunkenly, one inward, one outward. They made Fairlie think of the broken, gigantic doors of Gassendi cavern as he had seen them in the picture.

They had. They had not merely smoothed off the top of a stone mountain to make a pedestal for their Hall of Suns. They had built the Hall out of the mountain itself, carving the stone with unimaginable forces and cunning, shaping the whole top of the mountain into a gigantic monolith that was a building.

Military Secrecy Label Is Touching Off A New Stir

By BEM PRICE
WASHINGTON (AP)—The question of what ought to be classified as a military secret is touching off a new stir.

The enemy undoubtedly would like to know just how this nation miniaturized the hydrogen bomb. These are the sort of things which are properly secret.

an enemy the United States would have to classify as secret such things as oil, steel, coal and gas production.

Will Expand Curriculum For ECC Summer Term

President Leo W. Jenkins of East Carolina College has announced that the 1961 summer school of the college will offer a greatly expanded curriculum with the purpose of enabling students to complete more easily their college work in three years instead of four.

Eighty-two courses, in addition to those taught in previous summer sessions, are offered for the first time of the 1961 summer school June 5-July 11. The schedule for the second term July 12-August 17 includes 48 additional courses.

Included in this expanded curriculum will be courses which have been available at East Carolina only in the fall, winter, and spring quarters or infrequently in summer sessions. The student wishing to complete his college work in three years will thus be able to arrange his schedule more advantageously than at present.

The complete schedule of courses to be offered in the 1961 Summer School are indicated in the summer school bulletin and an attached supplement.

"We wish," Dr. Jenkins stated, "to encourage as many students as possible to make better use of our facilities and to shorten the time required to earn a degree."

"The educational process has been so extended in recent years that it seems desirable to shorten the time required," he explained. "Men students who must go into military service especially are delayed in beginning their careers."

Jehovah's Witnesses Again Stadium-Bound

"It is Yankee Stadium again!" announced W. R. Nichols, presiding minister of the Greenville congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, North Unit, at their regular weekly meeting. Date of the Yankee Stadium convention is June 20-25, 1961.

For the fifth time since 1950 Jehovah's Witnesses will use the famous sports park for their religious gathering. The last convention held there broke all attendance records with 253,922 (by count) present from 123 lands.

Commenting on the fourth convention, Nichols said: "The assembly theme is 'United Workers'. Jehovah's Witnesses firmly believe the only way to real unity is to put into practice Bible principles and teachings in one's daily life."

"Christian assemblies, such as the one being held at Yankee Stadium help in doing this," he said. He further stated: "Everyone in the local congregation is urged to attend if at all possible."

The New York assembly is the first in a series to be held this summer throughout the United States, Europe and Canada. Delegates from South and Central America will attend the New York convention.

"Our congregation will be represented by at least 30 delegates," Nichols stated. Further arrangements, including travel plans will be announced later.

thetically made metal which could not be torn from the gold now in Fort Knox. If so, other nations would save the effects, a great epidemic ravaging the United States and other countries is an unexpected possibility. (7) Finally, let me add two other possible unexpected events, — namely, World War III with atomic weapons or total disarmament. Certainly, either of these would raise havoc with most of our investments. What should we do? Diversify, diversify, — and again I say, diversify.

Wind Picked Up Truck, Spun It

POCAHONTAS, Ark. (AP)—"It was black, and it was coming at me, so I jumped in that pickup truck and took off."

Ed Tyler, an employe of a drive-in theater here, literally took off Sunday.

A windstorm—or tornado, as he called it—picked up the truck and spun it around several times before setting it down.

"I was hanging onto the steering wheel with my feet out the door," Tyler said. "I thought I was a goner."

He wasn't hurt. The storm damaged the theater but apparently hit nothing else.

Her Own Present Is Set Of Twins

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—Idella Mark, born on Mother's Day in 1928—it was May 13 that year—gave herself her own present Sunday: Mother's Day twins.

A boy, 5 pounds, 3 ounces, and a girl, 4 pounds, 7 ounces, arrived four weeks earlier than expected. Mrs. Mark's husband is a Denver sales executive.

Panic In Movie By False Alarm

TUXPAN, Mexico (AP)—Hundreds of moviegoers panicked and four persons were trampled to death when someone shouted a false fire alarm at a local movie house Sunday.

Seven other persons were seriously injured. Police were unable to find the false alarm.

Highway ...

serve the area and provide better facilities to accommodate its increasing highway traffic.

Proposed Route

Nelson's proposal would have new US 313 originate as it intersects with US 64 and US 13 in Robersonville.

From that point, the route would extend south as follows: Over NC Highway 903 through Stokes to an intersection with Highways US 13 and NC 11 continuing south through Greenville and then over NC 11 through Winterville, Ayden, Grifton, Kinston and Pink Hill.

From Pink Hill south over a paved secondary road for about nine miles to Beaulieu and an intersection with NC 41 to Wallace and continuing southwesterly over NC 41 through White Lake, Elizabethtown, Lumberton and Fairmont to the South Carolina State line.

From the line, south over SC 41 through Lake View and Mullins, or through Marion over SC 41-A, and continuing on SC 41 through Johnsonville, Hemmingway, Andrews, Jamestown and an intersection with US 17-A.

Thence southwesterly over US 17-A through Monks Corner, Summerville, Walterboro and Yemassee and terminating at Pocatigah, S.C., at an intersection with US 17.

Slightly Shorter

Nelson points out the proposed US 313 would be four miles shorter than US 17 in a journey from Williamson to Pocatigah. Future developments, he says, may provide a greater shortening of the north-south distance.

Nelson, whose hobby is developing highway routes, has been working on the US 313 proposal since about 1951. He says he feels optimistic now about the route becoming a reality.

He has already contacted many officials in many of the towns through the proposed route passes. "They are with me on this thing," he says.

The Greenville Chamber of Commerce, he says, is playing the same role in the promotion of 313 as the Fayetteville Chamber did in promoting US 13.

Nelson's newest proposal, however, involves only two states. His plan for US 13, that he feels is nearly finalized, reaches across the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana to New Orleans.

SMASHED 3 OTHERS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—Two-year-old Carlton Wormley sat alone in his father's car on a used lot as his father talked with a salesman. Suddenly the car rumbled forward and smashed three other cars. Carlton apparently had turned the ignition key and then pushed the car's automatic transmission into drive, police said. The damage: About $6,000.

WARM WEATHER ... and although much rain has fallen during the past week, there have been a few sunny hours. De-Emphasis Of Game Suggested RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Gov. Sanford said today he feels careful consideration should be given to the possibility of de-emphasizing big time college basketball.

Sanford said this at his news conference when questioned about the arrest of three North Carolina State College basketball players on charges of accepting bribes to shave points or throw basketball games.

Sanford, ex officio chairman of the Consolidated University of North Carolina Board of Trustees, was asked if he thought it would be wise to de-emphasize athletics. State College is a unit of the Consolidated University along with the university at Chapel Hill and the Woman's College.

"I think it would be extremely wise to give careful consideration to the whole problem," Sanford answered. He said one of the things "that should be considered most carefully is the de-emphasis of basketball."

Senate Asked To Give Bob Hope Gold Medal

WASHINGTON (AP)—"Moments enriched by humor are moments free from hate and conflict, and therefore valued by mankind," said a Senate resolution today proposing a gold medal for comedian Bob Hope.

The resolution, prepared for introduction by Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., on behalf of 97 senators, cited Hope's "countless miles of travel around the globe" to entertain American troops.

This phase of the rapid fire comedian's life already is well known to Americans, particularly those who served overseas during World War II and in Korea.

"Another less known side of Hope's life," Symington said, is that "for many years, quietly but consistently, this American has been engaged in a career of good works."

Symington said Hope has appeared in nearly every state on behalf of charitable, civic and philanthropic groups.

"All over our land," Symington said, "there are Hope fund-raising foundations for less fortunate people."

The British-born entertainer, 58 in two weeks, attempted to enlist after World War II. He was told he could serve better as an entertainer to build morale.

Hope took the advice literally and traveled more than 1 million miles to entertain servicemen all the way from North Africa to the islands of the Pacific.

His book on the wartime travels, "I Never Left Home," sold more than 1.6 million copies and earned about $175,000 which was turned over to charity.

Once Hope and his troupe narrowly escaped injury when their plane developed engine trouble and crash-landed in a river in Australia. Perhaps mindful of this incident, the resolution said Hope's trips often were made "under dangerous conditions and at great personal risk."

The fifth of six sons of a stone-mason, Leslie Townes Hope was born in Eltham, England. His father brought the family to Cleveland, Ohio, when Hope was 4 and he grew up in that city.

He has entertained in radio, television, motion pictures, the legitimate stage, nightclubs and in vaudeville. A dancer in the early days—his career as boxer Packy East already ended in defeat—Hope became best known later perhaps as a comedian expert at the split-second parry.

"No hamlet for me, just ham," was his reply to whether he sought a role other than comedy.

During World War II he was the only entertainer among 50 persons voted into the Living Hall of Fame at the Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Brotherton To Conduct Area Census Survey

Mrs. Shirley Brotherton will conduct the Current Population Survey here during the week of May 15, it was announced today by Director Joseph R. Norwood of the U. S. Census Bureau's regional field office at Charlotte.

The May Current Population Survey will include special questions on ownership of automobiles, home food freezers, automatic clothes dryers and television sets, in addition to the regular inquiries on employment and unemployment.

The number of television sets per household is being obtained at the request of the Advertising Research Foundation. The information on automobiles, freezers and clothes dryers is being collected for the Household Economics Research Division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture for use in a study of life rates for selected durable goods.

Questions will cover whether or not the cars and household appliances were new or used when purchased and year of purchase.
