Governor Tells Grads And Audience To 'Take Stock'

By MARY H. GREENE

Governor Terry Sanford of North Carolina, speaking at East Carolina College's Fifty-second Commencement Exercises Sunday afternoon, asked his audience to "take stock" of higher education in North Carolina by answering three basic questions.

"Are we," he asked, "falling to free the minds of men through liberal education, are we failing in many people to develop a commitment to basic American ideals, and are we failing to develop adequately a desire for life-long learning?"

The North Carolina Governor spoke in the college stadium before an audience of more than a thousand 1961 graduates of the college and of approximately 7,500 people attending the graduation exercises. He was introduced by President Leo W. Jenkins of East Carolina College.

pose, but rather to polish manners and to emphasize good breeding. The reason, he explained may lie in the social structure of our region, where people who have been able to go to college have tended to avoid new ideas because they have considered new ideas dangerous.

"We do not need to be afraid of new ideas," he declared, "but we do need to be afraid of not preparing our people for new ideas! Liberal education properly used can provide this preparation."

Liberal education, he said, should commit men and women to the basic ideals underlying American life. "Unfortunately," he told graduates, "there is much evidence around us to how that your elders are not properly committed, and that many people who should know better actually work to break down these ideals while claiming loudly to be protecting them."

"No person can contribute much to civilization," the Governor said, "unless he continues his education after his college years. As the Southern region moves into full-scale industrialization, he continued, it is particularly true that all people must believe that education is life-long."

Pointing out that an industrialized society is basically a society of clerical, professional, and technical workers, he said "It is in such a society that human resources must be developed to the fullest. Life-long learning is essential if this is to be accomplished."

Indicating things that North Carolina should and can do, Governor Sanford declared that "higher education must be made available, appropriate, excellent and supported."

A partnership of private institutions and public institutions will be required, he said, to achieve his end. "It may very well, also, include an expansion of community colleges so that many other students now unable to take advantage of higher education will be able to do so."

The fact that so few of the able students of North Carolina actually attend college he described as "a disgrace we cannot endure if we are going to meet the challenges of the new day with success."

North Carolinians, he stated, understand that this state must prepare for this new day. "This preparation," he declared, "will involve improved public schools. It will also involve improved higher education."

"I welcome you," he told graduates, "as you move out from this college into the full stream of citizenship and of the world of work. To join in this determination for improved life-long educational opportunity."

NETTED DEER

HASTINGS ON HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Shad fishermen netted a full-grown deer in the Hudson River Sunday. They spied the deer caught in their net far out in the river. They rowed out, tied the deer's legs and turned the animal over to agents of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

DIXIE CLASSIC DISCONTINUED

Montgomery Quiet Friday Also Puts New Limitation On Recruitment

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—This historic city was quiet but tense today—a sharp contrast to bloody rioting which brought martial law.

Armed National Guardsmen patrolled the Greyhound bus station and a Negro church where Sunday night's main outbreak of violence took place. Others patrolled the downtown sector and its fringes in jeeps.

Federal deputies sent in over the weekend also were seen on the streets.

City and county officers arrested 18 white persons after the disturbance.

Sporadic outbursts of trouble, including two house burning attempts, had continued for hours after steel-helmeted soldiers with fixed bayonets took command.

An estimated 1,000 Negro workers returned home quietly in the pre-dawn hours after spending most of the night in a church auditorium in protective custody. A mob had tried to get at them, but by 5 a.m. the church area was deserted except for 25 National Guardsmen left on guard duty.

"We don't anticipate any further trouble here," said a National Guard officer.

Among the churchgoers were 18 of the freedom bus riders whose arrival in Montgomery Saturday touched off repeated attacks by club-swinging white men and women. The so-called "freedom riders" were testing Alabama's bus segregation laws.

Only Negroes remained in the bus-riding group after the lone white man among them was savagely beaten and sent to a hospital and two white girls, also mauled by the surging mob Saturday morning, were sent home by train.

In all, some 20 victims were clubbed and smashed to the ground with fists in two hours of rioting near the Greyhound bus station.

After 18 hours of a jittery quiet, another screaming, brick-throwing mob struck Sunday night against the Negroes jam-packed into a church to greet the "freedom riders" and hear the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. condemn the city for what he called Hitler-like barbarism.

It was the Sunday night uprising which provoked Gov. John M. Patterson to proclaim "qualified martial law" and give troops under Adj. Gen. Henry V. Graham sweeping powers to take whatever action necessary to restore order.

The governor previously had protested bitterly against U. S. Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy's order to rush more than 500 armed U. S. marshals and deputies to Montgomery to prevent further interference with the bus riders.

In a tense, face-to-face meeting with Kennedy's top assistant, Byron R. White, this state's chief executive threatened to jail federal officers who sought to exert their authority in the absence of a request for federal help.

Patterson in his proclamation of martial law still insisted that the self-styled "freedom riders"—he called them "agitators"—were to blame for the race rioting because of their insistence on testing bus station racial barriers.

But, he decreed, "there now exists . . . a serious emergency, a defiance of the constitution and laws of Alabama, a state of lawlessness . . . which the local officers are unable to subdue."

Despite angry federal state bickering earlier in the day, U.S. officers worked alongside city and state police and the battle-trained guardsmen after Patterson ordered out the troops.

Even the bus riders won a reprieve from the threat of arrest on charges of violating a state court injunction which had sought to stop them from riding a bus here from Birmingham.

Sheriff's deputies holding contempt of court warrants turned them over to Col. Herman Price, who assumed the military office of sheriff under the martial rule.

Gen. Graham, entering the Negro church after the National Guardsmen arrived, ordered them there through the night for their protection while loops patrolled the streets.

Outside, scattered pockets of resistance to the law-and-order decree released their pet-up fury. They overturned a parked automobile, tossed a rock at Police Commissioner L. B. Sullivan's car, sent police chasing down reports of shots fired at Negro houses.

Fire bombs were thrown at the home of a Negro and a young white restaurant owner who nearly two years ago killed another white man after a wrangle with the Ku Klux Klan. The admitted slayer, who claimed self-defense, was acquitted by a jury.

While the rioting raged at the Negro church, the mob surged past federal marshals and city and state police, tossing rocks and bricks. Several persons were injured, but none seriously.

The main force of the crowd had been blunted by tear gas when National Guardsmen rumbled up in Army trucks.

Friday revealed these actions as he reported to trustees of the Consolidated University at their annual commencement meeting on recent basketball scandals which have involved players from both UNC and N.C. State, both units of the Consolidated University.

Friday said he and chancellors of both schools had considered and rejected discontinuance of intercollegiate basketball competition.

He said they had decided instead "to eliminate or correct conditions that have discredited the sport."

Friday reported these actions: 1. Basketball players who engage in any organized competition during summer months will lose eligibility for the following season. Friday noted that one student involved in the scandals reported he was first approached while playing summer basketball in upper New York State.

2. The program of athletic grants in aid has been examined and found to be in sound state. " . . . merely to discontinue the grants (for basketball) would be a backward step," he said.

3. Effective with the freshman class of 1962 not more than two grants in aid per year at each institution will be awarded in basketball to students from states outside the Atlantic Coast Conference area. The same principal would be applied in recruiting for football.

4. Limits on intercollegiate basketball competition which would mean the immediate discontinuance of the Dixie Classic. The basketball schedule would be limited to (1) the 14 games with other members of the Atlantic Coast Conference, (2) the ACC tourney, (3) the National Collegiate basketball tourney, (4) not more than two additional games each season with non-conference teams, other than in ACC and NCAA championship tournaments.

Friday said that holiday tournaments exemplify the exploitation for public entertainment or for budgetary and commercial purposes of a sports program which properly exists as an adjunct to collegiate education.

Meanwhile, District Solicitor Lester V. Chalmers, recently returned from conferences with New York authorities, said he was studying possible legislation aimed at clamping down on gambling in North Carolina.

A U.S. Post Office Department officer said today it appears the Atlanta Regional Office "will start all over" in receiving bids for a new post office at Stokes.

Marvin W. Clem, real estate officer for the Charlotte region, told the Daily Reflector the awarding of the contract for the proposed 800-square-foot building to serve Stokes will be decided by a committee in Atlanta composed of several department heads of the Atlanta office.

Clem said an announcement May 9 that reported W. F. Roebuck and the Carolina Township Volunteer Fire Department had been awarded the contract was premature.

He said the announcement came "before official acceptance was made."

The fire department's bid would have erected the office — and housing for the volunteer firemen's vehicles—on a site on NC Highway 903 two blocks east of the present post office.

Clem said bids on the new facility will go directly to Atlanta.

Clem stated he visited Stokes after the early announcement and reported his findings—"some new factors that had to be considered"—to the Atlanta office.

"The matter will be handled by correspondence through the Atlanta office," he said.

Clem said the deciding committee considers such factors as site location, cost of the structure and others in determining the successful bidder.

The real estate officer reported he went to Stokes to talk to a group "that felt like they had not had due consideration." Clem said he made a map-drawing of the community and submitted it to the Atlanta office.

He said he did not know when further action in the matter could be expected from the Atlanta office. "It's my guess that they will again advertise for bids."

State Award Won By Local Jaycees

Greenville Jaycees brought home the civic and community improvement award for their population division from the North Carolina State Jaycee Convention in Asheville this weekend.

At the same time, George Saleeby of the Griffon Jaycee club, was elected a national director. He is one of six national directors who will serve during the coming year. Saleeby will have three districts in the state assigned to him.

Greenville won the civic and community improvement award for cities of 15-50,000. Pres. George Coffman said the award was based on judging of scrap books submitted by the various clubs.

Greenville's scrap book for this particular category included: "You'll Get More in Greenville" project, support of industrial school project, assisting Chamber of Commerce with Newcomers Party, support of Urban Renewal, construction of a fall out shelter and Operation Survival, Salute to East Carolina College.

There were 12 separate award areas for which certificates were given, Coffman said.

He pointed out that winning the civic and community improvement award was especially noteworthy since this was the national number 1 project of the Jaycees this year.

Attending the convention from Greenville were Mr. and Mrs. George Coffman, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Taylor, Leon Moore and Bill Brewer.

Ayden was represented by its new president Bill Stroud, Marvin Baldree and Bill McLawhorn. Saleeby represented the Griffon club.

More Marshals

WASHINGTON (AP)—Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy said today 200 additional U. S. marshals are being sent to strife-torn Montgomery, Ala. This will bring the number there to between 600 and 700.

Kennedy said many of the marshals now there have been up for 48 hours, that Alabama is a large state, and that the Justice Department wants to be sure enough marshals are there.

Kennedy made his announcement to a crowded news conference.

When a reporter asked the specific reason for sending more marshals, Kennedy replied, "Obviously we're not satisfied with the situation or we wouldn't be sending more in."

Lyndon Johnson Homeward Bound

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson flew homeward today after a rigorous six-nation swing through South Asia to reassure America's allies from Formosa to Pakistan that Communist advances can and will be opposed.

Johnson said he came away from Asia "strengthened and encouraged."

"I believe the world will be better tomorrow than it is today," he declared.

After an overnight rest stop in Athens, Johnson and his party were flying today to Bermuda, with a refueling stop en route in the Azores.

Arranging Parley On Ransom Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuban rebels arranged a meeting with their American benefactors today to discuss Fidel Castro's ransom terms for 1,214 men captured in the Cuban invasion failure.

Eleanor Roosevelt, Dr. Milton Eisenhower and union leader Walter Reuther head a drive to raise millions of dollars to purchase 500 American tractors or bulldozers demanded by the Cuban prime minister in exchange for the prisoners.

Mrs. Roosevelt is the widow of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt; Dr. Eisenhower is president of Johns Hopkins University and brother of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower; Reuther is president of the United Automobile Workers Union.

They were scheduled to meet this afternoon with 10 representatives of the prisoners; Dr. Jose Miro Cardona, chairman of the Revolutionary Council, and council member Antonio de Varona. The 10 representatives were paroled by the Cuban government to work out arrangements to free them and their companions.

The sons of both Miro Cardona and De Varona are among the prisoners held by Castro.

Ulises Carbo, spokesman for the prisoners' representatives, said Castro had specified International Harvester or Caterpillar heavy tractors. He declined comment on a published report Castro also demanded a large supply of spare parts and a five-year guarantee on the tractors.

Carbo explained that although Castro mentioned bulldozers in making the exchange offer, "he really meant tractors."

The State Department had said Saturday the government would give "most sympathetic consideration" to granting export licenses if the tractors are purchased by private funds.

The United States has broken diplomatic relations with Cuba and exports of machinery to Cuba normally are not permitted.

In Havana, the government-controlled newspaper El Mundo said the private fund raising drive was a move "to disfigure the gesture of Cuba's revolutionary government and get the Washington government out of the dilemma in which its illegal and aggressive policy has placed it."

Although Reuther said no funds would be accepted or solicited until after today's meeting, donations and offers of money poured in.

Robert Berrellez, Associated Press correspondent just returned from imprisonment in Cuba, said the offer was "another propaganda trick. It's a form of political blackmail."

Castro ran into sharp criticism from the press in Latin America and scattered Latin American organizations began fund raising drives to help buy the tractors.

Buenos Aires' influential La Prensa said the offer by Castro recalled Nazi proposals in World War II to exchange Jews for trucks.

The 10-man negotiating team arrived in Miami Friday. The Havana radio said they were given a week to arrange for the ransom.

Early Sunday Morning Blaze In City Is Being Investigated

An investigation is underway today into the cause of an early Sunday morning fire on Evans Street at which several Greenville firemen were overcome by smoke.

Officers said firefighting units were called to the scene of the blaze about 1:25 a.m. yesterday when Box 26, at the intersection of 10th and Evans Sts., was turned in.

Fire officers said two of the men working inside the home suffered smoke poisoning when their filter-type smoke masks would not filter out vapors. They were examined at Pitt Memorial Hospital by doctors. A third firefighter was nauseated by the smoke, but was not examined.

One of the firefighters, volunteer Roger Paige, was pulled unconscious from the house by fellow firemen, and remained under observation at Pitt Memorial Hospital for several hours before being released.

Fire was breaking through the roof of the dwelling over a front bedroom when trucks pulled up at the scene, but the blaze was quickly knocked down with the use of fog lines.

Fire damage, which was described as heavy, was confined to this front room, and roof over the room, it was noted. Heavy smoke damage was done to the remainder of the house, firemen added.

Officers, who are making an investigation into the cause of the fire, said the old wood-frame structure is owned by Mrs. Paul Jones of Route 4, Greenville. Mrs. Jones' son-in-law, Charles Worthington, occupies the home, and was visiting in Virginia when the fire occurred, it was reported.

It was the second time in the past few months firemen have been overcome while battling fires locally. Greenville firefighters are supplied with filter-type masks, which will filter only few poisonous gases. The use of self-contained smoke masks, which contain their own oxygen supply, would prevent firemen from being overcome by unfiltered material. The use of self-contained-type masks would also enable firemen to enter a building in which the supply of oxygen was not enough to sustain life, and permit quicker extinguishment of the fire.

Second Fire Fire officers reported a hair dryer left on a bed was the cause of a second fire in the city yesterday.

According to reports, fire units were called to 508 East 12th St. about 3:50 p.m. yesterday when a fire was discovered in a bedroom of the dwelling.

Officers, who reported smoke damage to the house, said the bed and rug in the room were damaged by the blaze.

Fire alarm box 223 at the intersection of Cotanche and 12th Sts. was turned in for the fire.

"What is a Flock Print?" asks Mrs. H.D.G. Flock prints are attractive but to make a bad pun, can cause a flock of trouble for the drycleaner and a flock of disappointment to their owners.

Flock printing is achieved by first printing a fabric with an adhesive in a desired pattern. Then short fibers, hairs or metallic particles, "flock," are dusted over the adhesive. The design then stands up in relief against the fabric. There is also flock printing by electricity in which the flock is pulled through the surface of the fabric and stands perpendicular to it. You'll find flock printing on almost any fabric from sheer curtains and draperies.

Disappointment in flock prints may come from the fact that repeated cleanings or washings will cause a loss of flock in some designs. It may not be noticed at first, but you can understand that adhesives will grow weaker from cleaning and the mechanical action of cleansing, releasing the flock. Sometimes the adhesive which binds the flock turns yellow from the sun or exposure to heat. This is particularly noticeable in sheer curtains. Soil may hide the yellowing until the fabric is cleaned.

Serviceability of flock prints depends on the original production of the fabric. The adhesive is important. It may dissolve in dry-cleaning solvent or weaken in water. The heat-setting must be controlled in manufacture to provide best results. Most important in flock prints, and look for this when you select them, is a firmly woven base fabric which forms a good foundation for the flock design. Loosely woven fabrics may release the flock more easily.

You can obtain a variety of interesting designs by flock printing. Remember that their serviceability is questionable.—(Adv.)

Francis Speight Receives Highest Award Of Pennsylvania Academy

Francis Speight, noted artist and native North Carolinian, received this week from the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts the Academy Gold Medal of Honor, highest honor granted by the institution.

Mr. Speight, a faculty member at the Academy since 1927, will join the East Carolina College staff this fall as professor of art in residence.

The recent Francis Speight Retrospective Exhibition at the State Museum of Art in Raleigh was a major event on the year's program at the museum and attracted as viewers art lovers from many parts of this country.

The citation for the Medal reads: "The Medal of Honor of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts is awarded at the discretion of the Board of Directors to American painters and sculptors who may be exhibitors at the Academy or represented in its Permanent Collection, in recognition of high achievement in their profession, or to those who for eminent services in the cause of art or to the Academy have merited the distinction."

The Retrospective Exhibition in Raleigh is one of many in which Mr. Speight's work has been displayed. His paintings are also included in private collections and in the permanent collections of such museums as the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Pennsylvania Academy, and the Toronto Gallery of Art.

Actor Taken Off 'Critical List'

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP)—Actor Jeff Chandler, 42, who underwent an emergency operation last week, has been taken off the critical list at Culver City Hospital.

Chandler underwent 7½ hours of emergency surgery for a ruptured artery last Thursday. He received 55 pints of blood by transfusion.

His physician described his illness as complications which developed from an operation last May 13 to correct a slipped spinal disk.

TOKYO (AP)—A weak earthquake shook parts of Tokyo early today. There were no reports of damage. The central meteorological agency did not pinpoint the epicenter of the quake.

Arrest 'Slowest Gun In Midwest'

DETROIT (AP)—James Richardson, 29, is the slowest gun in the Midwest, according to bartender Morris Albert.

Richardson and Roland Price, 39, walked into his place shortly before midnight Saturday, Albert said, and announced "this is a holdup."

Richardson reached for a .38 caliber revolver tucked in his belt, Albert said, and became a study in futility as he tried to pull out the weapon, which had caught on his trousers. He gave up and the would-be bandits fled.

They walked right into two policemen. The pair was held for investigation of armed robbery.

Important Avenue Of Development

Legislation which would permit counties and municipalities to band together in forming economic planning and development commissions offers an important avenue for enhancing the overall economic development effort which is being carried out by many counties and communities individually throughout North Carolina.

For several years there have been advocates of this sort of thing all over North Carolina by those who recognize the value of area-wide as well as county and community effort toward economic development. During Gov. Hodges' administration, loosely-knit groups were formed in several sections of the state to approach economic problems from an area standpoint. For the most part, however, these efforts sputtered for several months and then died away.

The current legislation sponsored by Gov. Sanford and introduced by Sen. Dallas Alford of Nash County offers a better approach to the problem of area development. It provides for area organizations of greater stability, more continuity of effort and a considerably broader scope of operations.

Area planning and area-wide solutions to problems which are common to a number of counties in the same geographic region would be a considerable help to the efforts now being put forth by individual counties and communities. In many instances two or three counties might profitably combine their efforts in approaching one or more economic problems in which they have a common interest. In other cases a half dozen or a dozen counties may find it helpful to have an overall planning and development group to help coordinate work of individual counties and communities in solving common development problems.

Just as state-wide efforts toward solving North Carolina's general economic and development problems have been helpful to communities and counties throughout the state, so could multi-county and multi-community undertakings of this nature be helpful to various areas in the state.

The proposed legislation which would permit counties and communities to band together in forming economic planning and development groups should be passed by the General Assembly and utilized throughout the state.

Law On Game-Fixing Should Be Endorsed

House approval of the proposed law setting tougher penalties for both gamblers and players involved in "fixing" athletic contests should receive endorsement of the Senate.

Manipulation of scores in athletic contests such as those which have come to light in the current basketball scandal threaten the entire structure of college athletics. Unless the game-rigging is stopped, it will spread like a cancer through the entire field of amateur sports.

The sterner law against game fixing surely will serve as a deterrent for those who might be tempted to make a fast buck by rigging an athletic contest. It will afford greater protection for sports activities, and it will penalize only those who are found guilty of trying to fix sports events.

With a tougher law on the books for dealing with individuals involved in game-fixing activities, it is reasonable to believe that the courts which hear such cases will be inclined to mete out stiffer penalties to those who are found guilty. This will drive another peg to thwart those who are inclined either to offer or accept bribes for manipulating the scores of sports contests.

Checks Against Excessive Credit

By RALPH ROBEY

As a means of preventing an excessive expansion of credit we have an elaborate system of required bank reserves. These are calculated against deposits and this is effective because loans are by all odds the most important means of creating bank balances against the location of the bank and, within limits, may be changed by the Federal Reserve Board. Until last year it was required by law that the reserves be held as deposits in the Federal Reserve banks. Now some vault cash may also be counted as legal reserve, but this is a quite small proportion of the total. It is an enormous responsibility we have imposed upon the Federal Reserve Board of Governors. They must watch over our entire money and banking system and attempt to keep it sound. The board cannot, and should not attempt to, offset unwise financial policies of the government. It has been those policies which have given us the inflation since 1939, and if we have a renewal of inflation it will be from unwise governmental actions, not the policies of the Federal Reserve System.

Last year when we were losing gold it would have been unwise to make such a change in our monetary system. This is because it probably would have been interpreted as panic on our part. At present there is no basis for such an interpretation, and if the move is to be made this probably is the time for it.

This is all important because there is now afoot a proposal for the elimination of the requirement imposed on the commercial banks, but on the Federal Reserve banks. If the Federal Reserve requirement at the moment involves about $11 billion out of total gold holdings in the nation of a little over $17 billion.

Many persons will oppose this change. Their objection will be based primarily upon the belief that such a move would open us to the risk of runaway inflation.

This belief is not justified because, as stated above, this is not the particular reserve requirement which controls the volume of bank credit expansion in the nation. We now have some $7 billion of gold in excess of legal requirements, and it is not conceivable that we shall have such a growth of domestic bank credit as to use up this surplus. It could be used up only by the demand of foreign central banks and international finance institutions. Last year there was a large demand from this source, and we lost a substantial amount of gold. But for the past many weeks there has been no such demand, and there is no reason why it should be renewed, granting we do not become foolish in our financial programs.

Removal of the 25 percent requirement would not enable our commercial banks to make more loans than they can at present. The danger of inflation, therefore, would not be changed in any particular, and neither would the soundness of the dollar. It also should be emphasized that this move has no relation to the gold standard as such. If it is adopted we can return to a full gold standard just as easily, and just as quickly, as if the Federal Reserve Bank reserve is maintained.

It is an enormous responsibility we have imposed upon the Federal Reserve Board of Governors. They must watch over our entire money and banking system and attempt to keep it sound. The board cannot, and should not attempt to, offset unwise financial policies of the government.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

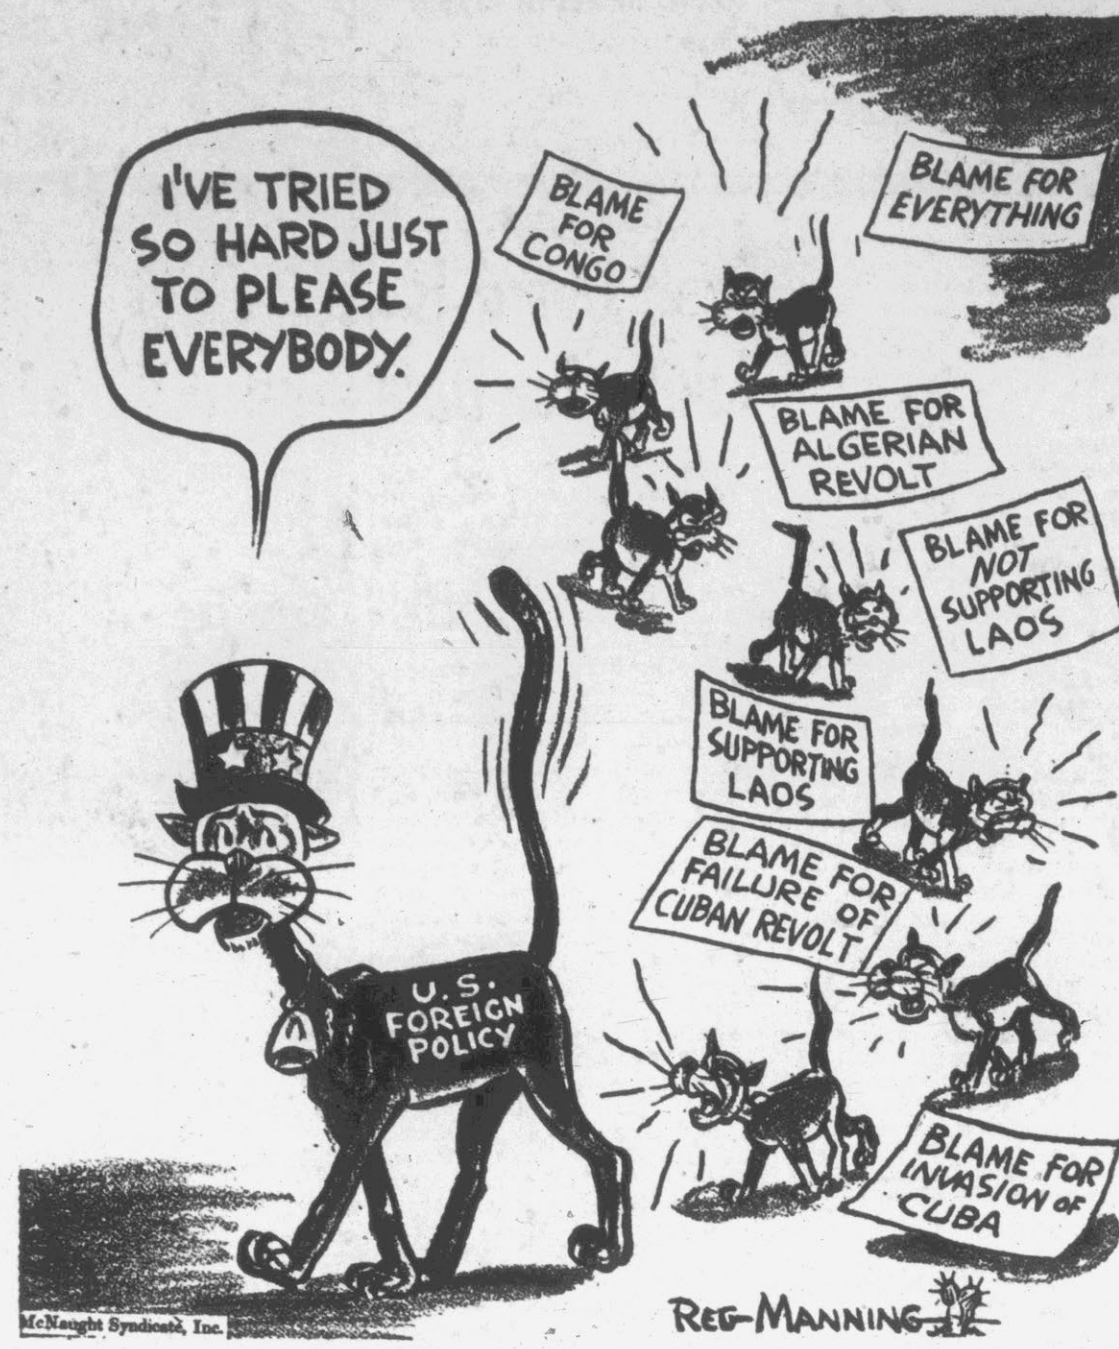

WE CAN LAUGH
Some years ago a prominent baseball manager started his career with everybody in his city disliking him. He was good for a rebounding boo every time he stepped out on the diamond. It looked, for all his skill, that he would end a failure and have to be replaced.

One day this manager walked out to say something to the pitcher. As he came back the crowd met him with a big boo. He raised his hat cheerfully and as he did so a bird flew out. The bleachers went into hysterics. After that the manager's popularity began to rise and increased with the years. It is amazing how often a big laugh has settled some of the most intricate and dangerous problems. Very often what we regard as problems are not problems at all. They are prejudices. They are dislikes we have taken toward certain people because of personal characteristics. Grudges of long standing have sometimes been eliminated in a split second because the two people who were feuding found something to laugh over together. If we only knew all the facts of every situation we should probably find many a murder has been averted by a laugh called forth at the right time.

Laughter has a therapeutic value. One of the great differences between man and the lower animals is that man has the capacity for laughter.

The Kittens

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

A Risky Gamble By Mao

Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The United States met the first serious defeat in its history in Korea. General Douglas MacArthur, our most distinguished military leader, was not permitted to bring that war to a victorious conclusion. In fact, he was dismissed from his post, after a glorious career because his judgement of the Korean War differed from that of the politicians in Washington. He was instructed not to invade the enemy's sanctuary in Manchuria. The Chinese Communists, who heretofore had counted for very little as a military force, gained "face" throughout Asia.

The Korean War was euphemistically called a United Nations police action and so far as the record goes, the United States was one of several nations involved in that engagement. But the fact is that we put up most of the effective troops and all of the money, and so far as the East of Asia is concerned, it was the United States and not the United Nations which lost prestige as a result of the Korean War.

Other Editors Saying Graduates, What Now?

(The Perquimans Weekly)

The young people of our area who have almost completed their formal education in the year 1961 should not make the mistake of assuming that they know enough to make their own way in the world. They have only begun to learn in school in terms of learning how to read, study and think for themselves, is more important than the subject that passed into their brains. If, in the process of acquiring a diploma, one has glimpsed the tremendous spread of human information and realized that what has been studied is the merest fraction of what is open for the individual to proceed intellectually.

One of the best aids to wisdom is the reading of the printed word. It brings to mankind the thoughts and ideals of the past, gives facts and trends, points the way to prophecy and understanding and permits those who live to profit by the experience of those who have passed into the great beyond.

Millions of American students about ready to graduate are entering a world which is somewhat confusing and, we believe, more confusing than that which has faced graduates in many of the years of our recent past.

Odd Angles In Business World

By ELMER ROESSNER

The business world is a curious, lopsided spheroid, with three South Poles and a global schizophrenia. An exaggeration? Perhaps. But let's look at the evidence:

A survey shows that 96 percent of the 52,000,000 American families own radios. The other 2,000,000 are obviously broke, deaf, or discriminating. . . Americans drink 400,000,000 cups of coffee a day, a new survey shows. That's enough caffeine to poison two Russian regiments a week. . . Smoking increased in Denmark last year.

Counting fringe benefits, a teacher can make a basic salary of $1,000 a year in New York. The New York Times calculates. No wonder there's a shortage of teachers. They are all headed toward Gotham.

Bank embezzlement losses rose from $8.8 million in 1959 to $10.1 million last year. . . Although there's no connection, college enrollment also rose. A survey by Avery label shows that 44 percent of American men are doing the shopping. . . With so many surveyors working, how can there be so much unemployment? . . . SHARE THE WEALTH The Arkin Organization has announced a new price schedule "to permit our retailers to increase their markups on our collection" from the traditional 41 percent to 43 percent. . . Still another survey: 74 percent of home-buyers polled said construction and materials were most important in a new house. . . "Disneyland" is the name of an engineering section of an assembly plant, Chrysler Corp. reports. . . With the success of Brand X products, The Old Promoter is planning to bring out Brand XL Products, which will be four times as good. . . TASS, the official Soviet news agency, said the major agricultural problem facing Russia is how it can "expand the gross grain harvest." This may be a warning to Red China not to look to Nikita for help in its current famine. . . And speaking of famines, this year's Norwegian herring catch is phenomenally small. . . Norway is buying menhaden oil from the United States. . . MORE BARNED FUN Fun Fairs, an aggregation of coin-operated amusement devices, are being offered shopping centers as profit-making customer attractions. . . A new electronic service will give brokers the last price of any issue traded on the New York Stock Exchange and the bid-asked quotations on 900 selected issues. . . Preco Chemical, now producing 21 different chemical coatings and adhesives, boasts that ten years ago it started its operations in a barn. . . A truck trailer built for use in constructing the Dez River Hydro-electric Dam in Iran has 400 wheels and is 85 feet long. . . A 48-page booklet "Home Painting and Color Guide" in interior color schemes, is 10 cents, from Du Pont, AP-6111, Wilmington 98, Del. We mention it because it must cost 48 cents each to print. . . Last year $100 million worth of sunglasses peaked that each position includes perquisites. In fact, in an older China (and Korea as well) many important official positions were purchased, the legitimate graft being so great. And even in my time in China, which was not so long ago, it was expected that an upstanding official would do well by himself and his family and nobody criticized him for it, except a few foreigners who did not know better.

It has therefore been assumed that the students' strike in South Korea, which succeeded in eliminating Syngman Rhee, was fomented by influences other than Korean. Not only was Red China suspected but also the United States which desired a younger man than Rhee, one less arbitrary, more "Democratic." So we supported John Chang as Premier.

Now, a military junta has taken over. It seeks an honest government. In East Asian countries, military men are notoriously not honest. The Oriental expression is that one is very near to a greasepot if one is very likely to rub off. Therefore no old China hand is going to take seriously the contention that a military junta seeks honesty. It may seek a better division of the spoils or all of it, but never honesty. It is not a local custom.

Therefore one must seek further. There can be no question but that Red China desires an amalgamation of South and North Korea with Communist North Korea prevailing. This would make Korea a satellite of Red China. It would immediately imperil Japan which can be attacked from the Korean Peninsula without any geographic interference.

It is the strategy of the Soviet Universal State to keep the United States engaged in endless tribulations. The Chinese Communists hold that war between the West and the Socialist countries is absolutely inevitable and even essential if Communism is to prevail universally.

Therefore, Red China is actively teasing the United States into an angry gesture. Laos is a Red Chinese enterprise; South Vietnam is another; Korea is another. At some point, the United States will become sufficiently irritated. Then Soviet Russia will have no alternative but to follow the lead of Red China. It is a risky gamble, but Mao Tze-tung must do something because the dissatisfaction in his country is excessive. The Chinese people have at no time had less to eat.

Debts Prove Costly

By ROGER BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass. — I hear that some of the college professors who are advising President Kennedy on means of increasing employment favor expanding consumer installment buying.

Present Extent Of The Credit Business

Credit comes in two forms:— (1) When you wife goes to her favorite store and has her purchases "charged." The store looks up her record through the Municipal Credit Bureau. If she has no black marks against her, the goods are given her or sent to her home. When the monthly bill is sent for these goods, the store expects a payment in a short time, of a payment in a maximum. The stores really like to encourage such charge accounts, as your wife is likely to buy more if she can charge the goods rather than pay cash.

The other form of credit purchase is where the buyer gives a note, or several notes, payable on specified dates, with power of repossession of the goods on a certain date after reasonable notice in case a note is not paid. I do not object per se to such installment buying, especially on refrigerators, television sets, washing machines, clothes dryers, and other household appliances which can be repossessed in good condition. I, however, earnestly urge that you read the light fine print on the agreement and really understand what you are asked to sign.

Houses, Automobiles, And Furniture

As I read the advertisements today on new homes for sale, I am astounded at the way they can be bought by veterans without any down payment, or can be bought by anyone at small down payments and a long mortgage of thirty or more years. This is very different from when I was a young man getting married. Then we were compelled to pay one-third in cash and the mortgage would be written for only five years. When talking to students of Babson Institute, I call to their attention the economics of birds, which build their "houses" before they are married and raise only a little birds.

To young people buying furniture on the installment plan, I am not prepared now to give definite advice. The laws of different states vary as to the rights of repossession. If you are behind in the payments on a house, it is a long legal process for the mortgagee to get you out of the house, especially if you are willing to pay a reasonable rent. If you are behind in your payments for a television set or some other luxury item, and default on these payments, you must be prepared to let the store take it back before you damage it. This also applies to certain household utilities mentioned above.

When it comes to buying furniture on installment, a young couple should carefully consider each item purchased. One installment note and agreement should cover the bedroom furniture; another note and agreement should cover the living room furniture; and a third note should be paid for in cash. Furthermore, the three sets of furniture should not be bought at the same time; but in order above outlined, say at least a month apart, even if you are obliged to "camp out" for a few weeks. As I look back to my early married days, we got considerable pleasure out of gradually furnishing our little house. Surely more pleasure comes in striving than in arriving.

Statistics Which Should Be Read

Let me close this column by giving some statistics for bankers, merchants, and parents to read. These figures are based upon a survey by the University of Michigan. The survey showed that 68 per cent of American households are in debt in one form or another, 48 per cent of the families are saddled with periodic installment debt repayments; 31 per cent owe mortgage debts; 24 per cent owe on non-installment debt. According to the study, 14 per cent of the families owing installment (Continued on page five)

First Graduates Of East Carolina Are Honor Guests

THE CLASS OF 1911 . . . They are: Dr. Pattie S. Dowell, faculty member at East Carolina College; A. E. Brown of Maury; Mrs. Ezra Wyatt of Hobgood; S. F. Linton of Wilmington; Miss Mary Edna Woodburn of High Point; Mrs. Robert Allen McCullen of Clinton; and Mrs. Leo Starbuck Probey of Washington, D. C.

Members of East Carolina's first graduating class, returning to the college for their fiftieth anniversary, were honor guests at events of Alumni Day on the campus Saturday.

J. Herbert Waldrop of Greenville, chairman of the college Board of Trustees, introduced members of the Class of 1911 to other alumni and guests on the campus at a luncheon in the South Dining Hall.

Present today a half century after their college days were Dr. Pattie S. Dowell, first student to be enrolled at East Carolina in 1909 and now a faculty member at the college; Mrs. Robert Allen McCullen of Clinton; Mrs. Leo Starbuck Probey of Washington, D.C. Miss Mary Edna Woodburn of High Point; Mrs. Ezra Wyatt of Hobgood; S. F. Linton of Wilmington; and A.E. Brown of Maury.

Fodie H. Hodges, principal of Harvey Junior High in Kingston, and other newly elected officers of the Alumni Association were installed at a business meeting. Milton Foley of Greenville was elected as alumni representative on the college athletic council. Z. W. Frazelle of Kenansville, retiring alumni president, presided at the luncheon and at the business meeting.

Among highlights of the luncheon was presentation to the Alumni Association of an oil painting of the late Dr. Robert H. Wright, East Carolina's first president, by A. E. Manning of Williamston alumnus of the college.

Senator Robert B. Morgan of Lillington, member of the college Board of Trustees, accepted the portrait from Mr. Manning, and announced that it will be presented to Mrs. Robert H. Wright, president Wright's widow, and their daughter, Mrs. Pearl Cadman, both of Chappaqua, N.Y. A letter from Mrs. Cadman, read by Senator Morgan, expressed appreciation of the family to the artist and the Alumni Association.

East Carolina President Leo W. Jenkins told alumni at the luncheon that their greatest service to the college at present is to act as "talent scouts." Encouraging not only athletes but also scholars, artists, musicians, and writers to attend North Carolina is "the greatest gift the alumni can give the college," he said.

He outlined developments of the past year which point toward East Carolina's increasing eminence in "quality education." He announced also that more than 3,000 applications from students wishing to enter East Carolina in the fall have already been received. "No other college has such a record for helping young people in service as East Carolina," he said, as he announced that 2,100 Marines have been enrolled this year in college extension courses.

Dr. Robert Lee Humber, Senator from Pitt County, in an inspirational address at the luncheon, emphasized the heritage which colleges today, such as East Carolina, have received from the early European universities of the Thirteenth Century.

We are the heirs, he said, of a great educational tradition in Western culture. Those present at the college today, he stated, belong to an institution enriching the artistic and intellectual life of a whole area, permeating regions outside of North Carolina, and building a healthier and more wholesome democratic society.

He concluded with a challenge for greater creativity emanating from East Carolina College. Creative accomplishment, he said, will determine the "permanent niche in history" of the institution.

Events of Saturday afternoon included reunions of the Classes of 1911 and 1936 and of eight other classes and a tea for alumni and others at the college president's home.

For those who rationalize that installment buying keeps their savings in tact, I would like to point out that statistics show this is a very costly practice.

Severest Critics Now Admit Carry Back Has Chance For Triple Crown

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — As Carry Back began a week's rest at Garden State Park today, even his severest critics admitted the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner has a good chance to capture the final leg of racing's triple crown.

If he wins the $125,000-added Belmont Stakes in New York June 3, Carry Back will become only the ninth 3-year-old ever to win all three races.

waited until he was ready to make his run. "I talked to him on the backside, and I whipped him some at the half-mile pole to make him move," said Sellers.

Carry Back in the race which comes just four days before the Belmont.

Coach Jim Mallory of East Carolina's playoff-bound Pirates said today that there was a possibility of the NAIA Area Seven playoffs being held in Greenville during the coming weekend, May 26-27.

According to Mallory, two possible sites, Greenville and Oglethorpe, Georgia, are under consideration.

The Area Seven competition will include teams from Alabama, Tennessee, West Virginia, Georgia, and North Carolina.

His time for the mile and three-sixteenths was 1:57.35, three seconds off the Pimlico record.

But there was nothing coy about the come-from-behind colt Saturday as he staged another late rush to win the $178,700-Preakness. The victory was worth $128,200 to his owner, Mrs. Katherine Price, and made her Dorchester Farm the leading money-winning stable so far this year with $459,129 in purses.

Carry Back started his charge as the nine 3-year-olds went into the final turn with less than a half a mile to go.

Carry Back paid $4, $3.20 and $2.20 and Globemaster $8 and $3.40. Crozier, four lengths back of Globemaster, returned $2.40.

Price was to confer with Garden State President Gene Mori today. It may result in Carry Back running in the $100,000 Jersey Derby on Memorial Day. Price had promised a long time ago to run the 32,211 fans made up the largest Preakness crowd since another come-from-behind horse, Silky Sullivan of California, lost to Tim Tam in 1958.

If there was an upset in the Preakness, it was Leonard P. Sasso's Globemaster finishing second instead of Fred W. Hooper's Crozier, the No. 2 horse behind Carry Back in the Derby.

Records Fall In Junior Champ Meet

Fourteen records fell yesterday in the second annual Junior Champ field events competition. The 45 boys participating in the Olympic type events were competing against records set last year when the Jaycee sponsored competition was held locally for the first time. The new records will go on the books as goals in future years.

In addition to establishing new records, first, second and third place winners were named for each of five age groups within which the boys participated.

The age groups and the first, second and third place winners in that order are as follows: Group 1 (8-9) Donald Taylor, Ronald Taylor, Wayne Singleton; Group 2 (10-11) Bobby Puryear, Mike Aldridge, Billy Brown; Group 3 (12-13) Barr Coleman, Ronald Vincent, Rocky Harris; Group 4 (14-15) Bill Mosier, Clayton Thomas, Danny Singleton; Group 5 (16-17) William Allen, Erskine Duff, Leon Williamson.

Each of the winners received a trophy. Certificates were presented to all boys who participated.

In Group 1 Ronald Taylor set a record for the 50 yard dash at 7.1 seconds. Donald Taylor and Wayne Singleton tied in breaking the record for the running broad jump at 11 feet five inches. Frank Davidson set a new push up record with 25 in 30 seconds. Russ Smith threw the baseball 136 feet, nine inches. Billy Clark established a new mark by throwing the football 50 feet.

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP)—Newberry College of South Carolina has been admitted to the North State Conference, which was renamed the Carolinas Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

The actions came Saturday at the annual spring meeting of conference commissioners here.

Newberry, the 11th member, and the first outside North Carolina, will begin conference athletic competition with the start of the next school year. For many years Newberry has competed against North State teams.

In other actions, the conference commissioners: — Adopted a recommendation from presidents of member institutions that athletic scholarships be limited to 35 with 22 going to football, 10 to basketball and 3 to minor sports.

—Established an athletic grant-in-aid program and agreed to immediately start honoring each other's signing of prospective athletes.

— Set up four qualifications for future applicants for membership: (1) limiting total membership to 12 schools, (2) requiring a complete athletic program, including participation in football, basketball and baseball, (3) requiring adequate athletic facilities and (4) requiring an accessible location for other member schools to avoid long travel.

— Recognized officially the following conference champions: baseball, East Carolina; golf, Atlantic Christian; tennis, East Carolina; track, Lenoir Rhyne. The commissioners decided not to have a 1960-61 basketball champion since High Point, which won the tournament, used an ineligible player, Joe Guzinski, who once played professional baseball. — Awarded the Messick Sportsman Trophy to Catawba.

Dunn Hurls 5-3 Greenville Win Against Falkland

Dunn held the Falkland diamondmen to seven hits, while his mates pounded out thirteen hits from opposing pitcher Haywood Outland. Walter Smith, Merle Bynum, Billy Cooper and Jimmy Fornes were the leading hitters for the Greenville nine, collecting nine of the thirteen hits.

Greenville meets Falkland again Sunday afternoon in a twin bill to be played in Falkland. Malcolm Griffin is the probable choice for mound chores in the first game, while the starter for the second game is as yet undetermined.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED
 Time: 1620. Scene: The harbor at Plymouth, England, where various sorts of ships were riding anchor. One of them, its true character masked while in the harbor to take on supplies, was a pirate craft, the Meermin. Her master, Sal Boyd, who went ashore for a bit of fun, enjoyed himself too fully. He fell into sodden sleep after giving indistinct directions to the boatman hired to row him back to the Meermin in the night. Next thing Sal heard coherently where children dancing and singing around the spot where he lay on deck, blinking up into a rising sun. He was on the wrong ship, which was moving away from Plymouth under full sail. He learned its name, the Mayflower, as he was led away by an officer to face the captain.

Christopher Jones was a man of middle age, thick, flinty, each eye a purple squirt of vinegar. Sal, who had always believed in the offensive, pounded the table. "You got to put back! Just because I picked a henheaded boatman—" "You were drunk." "And is there any law against that? Just because I get aboard—" "See here, we've been cooped up for weeks, and supplies running low. D'ye think that now we've got a wind at last, I am going to put back to deliver one lousy Sal-ice pirate to his fellow cutthroats? Because if you do, you've got another thing coming." "We're not pirates! We're privateers!" The Hollanders and Zealanders had lately patched up a peace with Spain, after many years of war, and the Beggars of the Sea, those formidable freebooters, were out of work; they lacked legitimate pickings. Many—including Sal's own Captain Oosterlinck—never had known any other life. To be plunged into peace was too much for them; and they had taken service under the obliging Emperor of Morocco, a potentate of whom King James was, on paper at least, an ally—though the King of Spain wasn't. Christopher Jones shrugged. "Call it what you like. Anyway, we're not putting back. I guess you're coming with us." "I guess I am," Sal said, miserably. "I don't know where you'll sleep. There ain't an inch left in the forecabin, or anywhere else." "Say, there's the truth, Captain. I never saw so many passengers anywhere. How many've you got?" "A hundred and two. And now you." "I'm not passenger. I'm a gunner." "We don't need a gunner. Webster's plenty, with only four fall-cones. I don't know what you'll do, Boyd. Just keep out of the way, I guess." "What about food? You can't let me starve." "What makes you think I can't? Look, Sal, you're not having any of the crew's rations—not unless some of 'em're willing to split with you, which I don't think they will. They carry their own food and beer. They're a highly holy pack, though, and maybe if you do enough psalm-singing they'll toss you a crust." He addressed the mate, "Fetch Elder Brewster and also Master Martin." "Why two?" Sal asked. He was a sailing man, and he took what came. There would be no sense in getting sore. Also, despite himself, he couldn't help sympathizing with Captain Jones, a much put-upon man. "Because one's a saint and one's a stranger. The saints are separatists. Come from Leyden, most of 'em. The others are very religious too, but they don't belong to the same church—whatever that is, some sort of crazy Brownist congregation, as far as I can make out. So I want both sides represented in everything I do. To keep the peace. This is going to be a long voyage, Boyd." "Why do they want to go to America?" "To settle." "To settle?" Why, it's all swamps and wild shrieking savages, from what I hear. Never been there myself." "I've never been there either. And for the life of me I can't see why anybody'd want to go. But then, I'm not a Brownist." Martin was a red-faced, square-faced man, pugnacious, positive. He glowered at Sal. "Never saw him before. And let me tell you right now, he's not going to be eating food that was paid for by the adventurers. Not as long as I am responsible for those accounts." Elder Brewster was otherwise. He was smallish, and mild of manner; and though most of the passengers, from what Sal had seen of them, were young, and the children were many, "elder" suited this one, who must have been fifty. He grinned at Sal, a greeting that could have caused him pain, for his nose and upper lip were blue with bruise. "I'm sorry about that punch, perhaps you would care to join us in some prayers?" "I thought your son said you were praying only a little while ago?" "We pray much of the time, having so much to give thanks to the Lord for. Also, we sing." "Oh? Well, it's clever of you to ask me, and I'd admire to join you most times, but I think that right now I'd best finish my sleep. Because my head feels like an anvil." "Ah, poor boy!" "And my mouth taste like the blacksmith's bib. So, if you'll excuse me—" The children were still going around the mainmast, holding hands. Sal implored their forgiveness for breaking the ring, though momentarily. They paid him no attention, and by the time he had resumed his previous position on the deck they were circling the mast once more, their determined voices raised. (To Be Continued Tomorrow)

sal. "Sal blurted. "My fault," said Brewster. "I should have given you more warnings." "Why didn't you smash me back? Half a sneeze would've knocked me over." "It might have been better if I had turned the other cheek." "I didn't hit you in the cheek, sir." "You didn't seem in a mood to listen. No, Captain, I can't say that I have never seen this man before. It was only once, early this morning. But we can't let him starve." "He'll not eat out of company rations," Martin stormed. Sal started: "Why don't you go to—" He paused. Captain Jones sneered, but Elder Brewster leaned forward politely. "Yes?" asked Elder Brewster. "Never mind—sir."

"We'll try to arrange something," Elder Brewster said. An embarrassed silence followed. Captain Jones stacked papers, harrumphing. He put a tooth picker in his mouth. "So that's settled. Master Clarke, this is a prisoner-at-large. As long as he behaves himself, let him alone. But if he causes any trouble—any trouble at all, understand?" "Aye, aye, sir." "—then hit him on the head. Hard." Blinking in the sunlight of the deck, Sal Boyd looked around once again. He exhaled, easily resigned. An orphan, he was tough, ingenious, amiable except when drunk, and willing to meet the worst. Like a cat, he could land on his feet. "If you haven't anything else to do," Elder Brewster offered,

Find No Need Of Censorship Now

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—The president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE) says "It is the consensus of the organized newspaper groups and wire services that no censorship of any kind is imperative at the moment."

Felix R. McKnight, executive editor of the Dallas Times Herald, made this report to the Texas Associated Press Managing Editors Association Sunday.

McKnight and other newspaper executives recently discussed with President Kennedy the President's comments about publication of classified information.

"Kennedy challenged the American press with the responsibility of protecting the national security. The American Press has accepted this challenge and will perform in the best interests of the country," McKnight said.

The Farm Scene

By S. C. WINCHESTER
Pitt County Agent

Results of recent research in the land preparation and cultivation of peanuts point up some good opportunities for increasing yields.

A series of tests last year showed where land was plowed deep enough to bury the crop residue (corn or cotton stalks and grass) to a depth of four to six inches and where the cultivation process was flat (no soil pushed up to the plant), the yield was 3,325 pounds per acre.

With the same land breaking process but where dirt was pushed to the plant forming a hilling effect the yield was 3,000 pounds per acre.

This showed a decrease of 325 pounds per acre because of hilling. This transformed to money by multiplying the poundage by 12 cents per pound shows a reduction of $39 per acre. It pays to cultivate flat.

Where the land was broken shallow, or where a disc tiller was used that did not cover the organic matter completely the yield was reduced. In this area where cultivation was flat the yield was 2,600 pounds per acre. Where cultivation threw dirt to the plant the yield was 2,150 pounds per acre. In a nutshell this test showed the following:

Deep plowing:
No dirt—3,325 pounds at .12 equals $399
Dirt—3000 pounds at .12 equals $360
Medium plowing:
No dirt—2600 pounds at .12 equals $312
Dirt—2150 pounds at .12 equals $258

These figures show a tremendous penalty for plowing and cultivating improperly. Flat cultivation can be accomplished by using the rotary hoe for the first four cultivations then use a flat, high speed sweep that does not throw dirt to the peanut plant.

Many peanut growers are finding that Alanap 3 or dinitro used to control grass and weeds helps them to keep the land flat for peanut production.

Insect control: For Southern corn rootworm and thrips use an application of 1 1/2 to 2 pounds of Heptachlor of Aldrin per acre soon after the plants emerge.

If peanut hay is to be fed to dairy cattle or beef cattle being finished for market do not use Aldrin, Dieldrin, DDT, Chlordane, or Toxaphene on the peanut plants. For foliage insect control use Methoxychlor five per cent dust at 20-25 pounds per acre.

Knowing Timber Increased Price

PINETOPS — Knowing his timber meant $1,500 more to George K. Warren when he sold it.

"Warren knew the volume and quality of his timber," says Charles T. Cone, assistant agent in Edgecombe County. "He sold a lot recently, and his knowledge increased his sale by some $1,500."

Tobacco Tips

By S. J. WEEKS
Pitt County Tobacco Agent

Each year insects reduce the value of the tobacco crop. Insect abundance varies from field to field and from year to year; therefore, it is essential that growers examine their tobacco fields frequently and treat with a recommended insecticide when necessary.

It is very important that insecticides be used when the insect damage is serious enough to justify the expense. In order to avoid excessive insecticidal residues and to save money, do not make applications using excessive rates.

The flea beetle often causes damage to the tobacco crop soon after it is transplanted in the field. This insect can be controlled by applying either DDT, Endrin, or Dieldrin.

Grasshoppers cause serious damage to some fields. They can be controlled by applying either Aldrin, Heptachlor, Dieldrin or Chlordane. These insecticides should be applied evenly to the tobacco foliage and to barrier strips 15 to 30 feet wide around the tobacco field.

Bud worms are usually prevalent each season in the tobacco fields. Unusually close examination is often required to detect this insect before it does considerable damage.

When controlling the budworm, the insecticide should be applied in the bud of each plant. This can be done best early in the morning, preferably before 10:30 a.m.

Since the budworm is closely related to the corn ear worm, corn meal bait is one of the most effective means of control. Bait can be prepared by mixing one part DDT or TDE with 75 parts of corn meal.

Endrin and Thiodan can also be used and will give effective results when applied as a dust or spray.

More information on rates of application of insecticides for tobacco insect control can be obtained from the County Agricultural Agent's Office in Greenville.

ASC Notes

The Pitt County Agricultural Conservation and Stabilization office today reminded the county's farmers who are replanting tobacco to report their operations to the local ASC office.

Office manager Wayne L. Wang said today, "Any farmer who re-sets his tobacco after it has been measured, plows up tobacco and sets it again, should advise the ASC Office immediately so that a revisit can be made to the farm. Otherwise, you may be guilty of filing a false acreage report and subject to a penalty and a reduction of the farm allotment."

The average price for tobacco this marketing year was 60-4 cents per pound. The 1961 penalty rate will be 45 cents per pound which is 75 per cent of the 1960-61 average price.

Wang also reminded the county's allotted crop farmers:

"Now is the time for farm operators and tenants to trim up their tobacco, cotton and peanut fields and to destroy ends of rows not intended to be a part of the field. When the reporter visits the farm he has no alternative but to measure all land on which an allotted crop is planted."

During the ASC office crop-measuring season, Wang cautioned tobacco growers of the sled row provision.

"Remember if any crop is planted in sled rows for tobacco, the entire area will be considered to

Three Injured In Collision Today

Three local women were admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital early this morning suffering from injuries received when the car in which they were riding was involved in a collision at the intersection of 10th and Cotanche Sts.

Officers said the driver of the car, Mrs. Mamie Gardner Radcliff, 506 East Second Street, was uninjured, but her passengers, Mrs. Nannie B. Crawford, Mrs. Rummel James and Mrs. Estel Taylor, received injuries.

Investigators explained that the Radcliff vehicle was headed South on Cotanche St. and collided with a car, operated by James Murphy Hudson, 26 of Route 2, Greenville, which was headed West on 10th St.

Hudson, charged with failure to stop for a red light, was quoted by police as saying he started across the intersection when the light was yellow. Mrs. Radcliff said she had a green light.

Damage to the Radcliff vehicle was estimated to be about $1,300 while an estimated $395 damage was done to the Hudson car.

The mishap occurred about 6:45 a.m. police said.

In a 2:20 p.m. Saturday collision at the intersection of Paris Ave. and Chestnut St., Nathaniel Moore, 32-year-old Negro of Route 6, Greenville, was charged with failure to yield the right of way and operating under the influence of alcohol.

Police said the Moore auto was involved in a collision with a car driven by Ida Allen Thigpen of Route 1, Greenville.

Damage to the Thigpen vehicle was set at $1,000. An estimated $900 damage was done to the Moore auto, police reported.

A passenger in the Moore car, Larry Reaves, 40-year-old Negro of Route 3, Greenville, was charged with public drunkenness by investigating officers, it was noted.

Safety Check Lanes To Be Operated Tomorrow

Four safety-check lanes will be operated in Greenville tomorrow by the Pitt County Safety Council to provide county motorists an opportunity to have their vehicles inspected.

Chairman of the council, Luther D. Moore said today the check lanes will be located in four strategic areas in Greenville "to make it as convenient as possible for motorists who desire to do so to have their vehicles checked."

Locations of the Greenville lanes tomorrow will be: North Greene St., in front of Farmers Warehouse; Dickson Ave., in front of Shack Electric Co.; East 10th St. in front of the East Carolina College gymnasium; and Charles St., immediately south of the 14th St. intersection.

Again on Thursday, the council-sponsored safety-check lanes will be operated in Ayden, Bethel and Farmville. One lane in each of the three Pitt municipalities will be operated Thursday.

Eleanor Faye Davis, representing Centennial High School, won a $100 scholarship sponsored by Hackney Brothers Body Company of Wilson and the right to represent District Six in the state finals to be held in Chapel Hill June 15 and 16.

In the boys division, Jimmy Murl Cash of Maury High School in Greene County won the $100 scholarship presented by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., of Winston-Salem. He will represent District Six in the state finals in the boys division.

Miss Davis placed highest among eight girl bus drivers from Pitt, Greene and Lenoir Counties. Young Cash was tops among 21 boys entered in the contest.

Yesterday's contest, under the auspices of the Governor's Traffic Safety Council, was open to graduating seniors who had operated school buses during the past school year.

North Carolina is divided into 30 districts that will produce 30 boy and 30 girl winners to compete in Chapel Hill for the first place award of $500 and the second place award of $200 scholarships to be given by the N.C. Motor Carriers and the N.C. State Motor Club.

Sanford Will Accompany Greenville Group Outing

Gov. Terry Sanford announced today he will accompany a group of Greenville businessmen to the nation's capital this fall for an annual football week-end.

The governor said he has accepted the invitation of W. M. Scales, Jr., of Greenville, organizer of the Security Caravan, to travel to Washington with the group the week-end of October 27-29. It will be the tenth annual trip of the Security Caravan to Washington. Approximately 100 Greenville businessmen are expected to make the trip.

George Marshall, president of the Washington Redskins professional football team, has announced that Sunday, Oct. 29 has been designated North Carolina Day by the Redskins because Gov. Sanford will be in Washington for their game that day with the Philadelphia Eagles. Gov. Sanford will be offered the use of the president's box at the stadium for the game. Marshall said. Arrangements also are being made for the governor to appear on national television during half-time at the ball game.

Scales announced that North Carolina's Sens. Sam J. Ervin, Jr. and B. Everett Jordan will give a reception for the governor and the Greenville party in Washington during the week-end. The group will have three special train cars for the trip to Washington and their return to Greenville Sunday night.

Kenneth Hite, Greenville attorney and president of the Security Caravan this year, said this morning, "We are delighted that the governor has accepted the invitation of the Greenville group to accompany them to Washington for this occasion. We are also pleased that the Washington Redskins have designated this as North Carolina Day. We deem it a signal honor and feel sure that the governor's presence will add a great deal to the occasion."

Catch Speedster Stalled In Ditch

Speeding just doesn't pay as one driver found out early Sunday morning.

Highway patrolmen were working a speed clock on U.S. 264 between Lang's Crossroads and Marlboro just after midnight Saturday, when a 1954 model car crossed the block allegedly at 100 miles per hour.

Patrolman Luther B. Long of Bethel, one of the officers present, gave chase and found the car stopped in a six-foot deep ditch.

The patrolman explained that the vehicle, driven by Kenneth Douglas Dixon, Negro, Route 1, Farmville, allegedly after crossing the clock, proceeded east on U.S. 264 and after passing two other cars, turned from the road onto a dirt path leading to a house, between Lang's Crossroads and Ballards Crossroads. The speeding vehicle hit a rut in the road, then plunged into the deep ditch, the officer said.

Dixon was arrested on charges of speeding and careless and reckless driving, the patrolmen reported. He was released under a $500 bond for Farmville Court Saturday.

As irony would have it, the patrolmen were working the speed-checking device from the yard of one of the five passengers in the speeding vehicle.

None of the six occupants of the car was injured, the officers said.

Cop Top Honors In Bus Rodeo

KINSTON—Entries from Lenoir and Greene Counties took top honors in the District Six competition of the sixth annual School Bus Rodeo-e here yesterday.

Eleanor Faye Davis, representing Centennial High School, won a $100 scholarship sponsored by Hackney Brothers Body Company of Wilson and the right to represent District Six in the state finals to be held in Chapel Hill June 15 and 16.

In the boys division, Jimmy Murl Cash of Maury High School in Greene County won the $100 scholarship presented by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., of Winston-Salem. He will represent District Six in the state finals in the boys division.

Deputies Raided Jaycees' Ball

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Deputies raided the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce Ball in the City Auditorium before midnight Saturday, and later charged 11 persons with liquor violations.

The Jaycees Executive Committee met Sunday and protested the raid as "high-handed and unwarranted." It added in a statement that the raid may have been a reprisal for a resolution adopted by the Asheville Jaycees a week ago calling for stricter enforcement of the gambling laws.

"There are circumstances of the case," said the statement, "that lead us to believe this abnormal zeal on the part of the sheriff's deputies was intended as reprisal for a resolution adopted earlier by the Asheville Junior Chamber of Commerce—a resolution which, by inference, might have been interpreted as criticism of Sheriff Laurence Brown and his department for their laxity in enforcing the gambling laws of Buncombe County."

Sheriff Brown could not be reached for comment Sunday.

But Chief Deputy Gordon Ramsey, who laid the raiders, some of whom were in plainclothes, said:

"I'm not going to try these cases in the newspapers, but will try them in the courts. We are going by the statutes. The law is the law."

The cases were tentatively set for Friday before Judge Burgin Pennell in County General Court.
