Mayor Hints Action On Housing Program In June

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector City Editor

Mayor Charles M. King said last night the City Council will reconsider the Public Housing Authority's request for obtaining a loan "mighty soon after I get together with the Public Housing Authority and the council."

Mayor King met with the Redevelopment Commission last night, the first of three meetings he had said he wanted to have before making a decision on the Authority's request.

Reconsideration of the request "could be in early June," King stated. Asked if it would be possible that another special council session would be called between the June and July meetings, King replied, "It certainly would be possible."

Mayor King made the statements to reporters after M. E. Cavendish, chairman of the Redevelopment Commission, had carefully briefed the mayor on the progress of the commission's work.

$160,000 Gone

Councilman M. W. Aldridge figures the recent urban renewal-public housing referendum cost the city $160,000. The delay from the time a public hearing was held in February until the referendum in May saw the city's credit of $80,000 for First St. work expire. Dr. Aldridge pointed out the Federal government would have matched this 2 for 1, thus the $160,000 cost.

Officers Still Hunting Man Who Attacked ABC Enforcer

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

Officers are still hunting today for Isaac Taft, Greenville Negro who assaulted a Pitt County ABC officer yesterday at a still site near Greenville. The ABC enforcer, Walter Taylor, was attacked and bitten on the arm by Taft as he was attempting to subdue the man and place him under arrest.

PART OF LARGE STILL . . . destroyed by Pitt County ABC officers in a wooded area about four miles West of Greenville yesterday, is shown before officers used 50 sticks of dynamite to destroy the illegal plant.

the city is losing credit for work done in the area by the city and the Utilities Commission.

"Time here is of the essence," he declared. "Every day delayed is costing the city money. Although we may not undertake this during your administration, we may at some future time do so thus the city is losing money."

Cavendish said the council's failure to act on the Housing Authority's request represents a roadblock to the Redevelopment Commission.

"I hope that you—and I'm not placing the responsibility anywhere else—will dissolve that roadblock," Cavendish told the mayor.

At one point in the meeting Cavendish told the mayor approximately $80,000 spent on First St. had already been lent on a credit on the city's share of the redevelopment work.

Now approximately $75,000 is being spent by the Utilities Commission on a sewer line which can be credited and other funds are to be spent.

"If we are to receive credit we've got to get the show on the road and get this preliminary survey complete," the chairman declared. "The commission is now in the position of not being able to move either forward or backward or sideways or up or down."

"I didn't exactly go along with Urban renewal—forcing people to sell their property and I still don't go along with that," King told the commissioners.

"However I did ask for a city vote and I realize how it came out."

The mayor asked if the commission had decided on an exact area.

"No sir," Cavendish replied. "The studies are of a preliminary nature only."

He pointed out, though, that the general area was designated by the Planning-Zoning Commission under which the Redevelopment Commission operates with City Council approval.

The area was chosen after it was determined that substantial housing far exceeds the minimum requirements. Studies have shown 84 percent of the housing in the Shore Drive area is substandard, Cavendish continued.

The chairman reaffirmed that at no time has it been considered feasible to include Cherry Hill Cemetery in the project area.

King asked about Sycamore Hill Church on Greene St.

Cavendish said prior to the election his commission had talked to members of the church and they did not want to be included. Consequently, the chairman said, "our recommendation to the City Council—if we ever get that far—will eliminate the church from our plan."

King asked about people living on the edges of the area whose houses are not substandard.

—Commissioner Concerned— "That is a problem this commission is concerned with because after all we're human beings too, I hope," Cavendish said. "We have given serious consideration to working something out that those people will not be damaged."

However, he continued, there was danger in eliminating individual houses from the area in that there might be no end to such actions.

At one point, the mayor said, "I had just as well say what I'm going to say. I have felt that a business area on the river is not exactly the place to do it."

He said the business section should be expanded on Eighth St. or Tenth St. The Shore Drive area would deadend on the river, he said, and shoppers would "have to come through narrow streets to get there."

King also asked about compromising on a smaller area, perhaps by taking a block at a time. He suggested "starting on a smaller scale to find out how it works, to begin with."

Commissioner Howard Hodges answered that taking a block on each side of Evans St. would not work because no business would want to go into an area where it was surrounded by slums.

Hodges also asked the mayor, "Why are you going to hold us up from getting you the facts and figures to study?"

"I'm not going to hold you up," Mayor King replied. "Does that answer your question?"

"I want to tell the people I'm going to do my job. Are you going to do your job?"

"I'm trying my best to," Hodges replied.

Helped Convict Own Stepson

PITTSBURGH (AP)—A policeman gave testimony Wednesday that helped send his stepson to prison for robbery.

Patrolman Luther Montgomery testified in Allegheny County Criminal Court that he saw his stepson, William, and another boy in a drug store about the same time it was robbed of $60 last April 18.

The message called for a sweeping reorganization of military combat power, an increase in the Marine Corps, and a build-up of the land and air weapons needed for brush fire wars and paramilitary (guerrilla) operations.

The President committed the nation to take "a clearly leading role in space achievement"—a blunt notice to the Soviet Union that this country intends to make a contest of the race to the moon and planets.

"For while we cannot guarantee that we shall one day be first, we can guarantee that any failure to share this effort will make us last," the President said.

"Space is open to us now; and our eagerness to share its meaning is not governed by the efforts of others.

"We go into space because whatever mankind must undertake, free men must fully share."

Kennedy asked $679 million of new funds for space exploration including $531 million for the moon project.

He asked $335 million of new foreign aid funds, 2shared about equally between military and economic assistance.

The economic portion, $250 million, would go into a presidential contingency fund, he said, to be used only upon the President's finding that a sudden and extraordinary drain on the regular funds made necessary the use of this emergency reserve.

The need for such funds, he said has been "illustrated by recent events in Southeast Asia"—a reference to the Communist drive into Laos and the threat to neighboring nations.

The total foreign economic aid program, to be boosted $2.65 billion if Congress accepts the new presidential recommendations, is "both minimal and crucial," Kennedy said.

Princess Reveals Baby Is Expected

LONDON (AP)—Princess Margaret is expecting her first baby in the fall, Kensington Palace announced tonight.

The child will be fifth in line of succession to the throne.

Princess Margaret and Anthony Armstrong-Jones, then a society photographer, became engaged in 1960 and were married a little over a year ago.

Maj. John Griffin, press secretary to the royal household, said Princess Margaret and her husband are delighted.

JFK Calls For Larger Outlays

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy called on Congress today to beef up the military, strengthen foreign aid, attack unemployment, and pump $7 billion to $9 billion into rocketing a man to the moon.

To meet an extraordinary challenge of extraordinary times, Kennedy summoned the legislators and the nation to undertake "a great positive adventure" on behalf of freedom everywhere.

And his was an extraordinary message, a second report on the State of the Union, for delivery in person before a joint Senate-House session, almost on the eve of the President's departure for momentous conferences abroad.

It was broadcast and telecast by major networks. Kennedy asked for $1.5 billion new appropriations now to get on with his programs plus a recognition from Congress and the country that billions more will be required in the future.

Speaking of the objective of "landing a man on the moon and returning him safely to the earth," a project some experts believe may require 9 or 10 years, the President said:

"Let it be clear that I am asking the Congress and the country to accept a firm commitment to a new course of action—a course which will last for many years and carry very heavy costs—an estimated $7-$9 billion additional over the next five years. If we were to go only half-way, or reduce our sights in the face of difficulty, it would be better not to go at all."

Kennedy said the nation faces an "extraordinary challenge to protect the jeopardized freedom of the world."

"It is a contest of will and purpose as well as force and violence—a battle for minds and souls as well as lives and territory," Kennedy said in describing Communist efforts to seize and exploit the newly emerging nations.

"And in that contest, we cannot stand aside."

"This nation was born of revolution and raised in freedom. And we do not intend to leave an open road to despotism."

The message called for a sweeping reorganization of military combat power, an increase in the Marine Corps, and a build-up of the land and air weapons needed for brush fire wars and paramilitary (guerrilla) operations.

Proposed Location For Area Joint Airport

AREA AIRPORT CONCEPT . . . presented to CAB yesterday shows area bounded by 50-mile circle to be served by airlines. Cross in circle's center indicates approximate and tentative location for area airport.

Fingers Crossed While Awaiting CAB Decision

Greenville attorney W. W. Speight today had his "fingers crossed" in hopes that the Civil Aeronautics Board would award a certificate of air service to the Wilson-Greenville area "within 60 to 90 days."

He made his remarks this morning after returning to Greenville from CAB hearings yesterday in Washington, D.C.

Speight said he and W. H. Watson represented Greenville at the hearing and Jack Maynard, Wilson's city manager, and Moseley Hussey, manager of the Wilson Chamber of Commerce, represented Wilson.

"The Board seemed very interested in our proposal of the area airport concept," Speight reported. "In fact, they extended our time before them by about 50 percent."

"I won't say I'm optimistic about this, but we've all got our fingers crossed," said Speight, who has been closely connected with efforts to secure air service for the area for about 10 years.

"This time, for the first time, I think we've really got something," the local attorney said. He referred to:

1. A brand new policy made clear in a May 2 joint announcement by the CAB and the Federal Aviation Agency stating the two agencies' opinion that area airports would be more practical in that they would allow "improved scheduling (of flights), better quality of service through the use of larger equipment, and an overall improvement in air service to the area . . . without substantial inconvenience to the air passengers."

2. For the first time, an air carrier (Piedmont Airlines) has requested reaffirmation by CAB of the hearing examiners' decision that an airport to serve the Wilson-Greenville area would be feasible.

"Before now," Speight said, "we've been fighting by ourselves, but now other forces have joined us in the area airport concept."

Wilson, he said, "is ready to dig."

In the final appearance before CAB yesterday, Speight submitted "our final argument" that included a chart showing a 25-mile-radius circle, the area includes Greenville, Wilson, Tarboro, Rocky Mount, Kinston and Goldsboro and an approximate population of 253,000, according to 1960 census figures. The chart shows the ultimate airport situated in the center of the circle, slightly west of Farmville.

Speight said, "I feel like we'll hear something definite within 60 to 90 days." He explained that Piedmont Airlines would then use its discretion in selecting a site to use as a temporary terminal for immediate air service to the area.

The hearing examiners' report recommended either Wilson or R.H. Worthington were re-elected again to serve as the club's secretary-treasurer team.

Conleton, in the absence of Peterson, presided over the session held under the oaks on the east bank of Contentnea Creek and recognized political dignitaries attending.

Among elective official attending were Pitt County's Commissioners Robert G. Little, J. Vance Perkins, Robert L. Martin and Bruce Strickland; Congressman Herbert C. Bonner; Speaker of the House Joe Hunt; Pitt Sen. Robert L. Humber; Pitt Reps. Frank M. Wooten and Clifton W. Everett; Pitt Clerk of Superior Court D.T. House Jr.; Pitt County Court Judge Dink James; Fifth District Solicitor Robert D. Rouse Jr.; and Superior Court Judge William J. Bundy.

Other dignitaries recognized included J. Melville Broughton Jr., Robert Cowan, Jack Spain and Henry Oglesby.

Telegrams from club members unable to attend included communications from Sen. Sam J. Ervin and Greenville attorney Albion Dunn.

Sen. Humber, in a brief address to the club, urged all Pitt County members to support the upcoming county-wide bond election to finance an industrial school. He emphasized that the election will require a special registration of voters and pointed out that only two Saturdays remain for voter registration.

Budget Requests Studied By County Commissioners

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County's Commissioners last night plunged a little deeper into a 64-page fiscal 1961-62 budget request that echoes throughout with calls for salary hikes.

In their second extra budget session of the current budgeting season, the commissioners heard the annual appropriations request from the welfare department presented by Director J. S. Grimes and his three Welfare Board members—Woodrow W. Wooten of Falkland, Roscoe Everett of Bethel and Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, East Carolina College's president.

The welfare department asked the commissioners for a jump in administrative payroll that includes five new staff members and pay raises across the board. The three-man Welfare Board has already stamped its approval on the $124,000 administration request. Grant funds are uncontrollable by the commissioners since the largest percentage, by far, is provided by federal and state money.

Indications are that the commissioners will approve many salary increases for county employes for fiscal 1961-62. Several department heads and agency board

A program on American Folklore, Folk Tales and Songs, particularly North Carolina Folklore, was given by Mrs. O. E. Dowd, club member.

"When and where folklore began, no one knows for sure," Mrs. Dowd said. "The word folklore came into being in 1846, but the beliefs and practices were the law before tribes came into existence. Most of our arts and many of our present laws and beliefs originated in folklore years before the modern scholar had a name for it. Medicine came from tribal magic, so did chemistry, music, dance, painting, art and sculpture were closely related to traditional tales and beliefs. Practically all arts and sciences were transmitted by oral tradition which is the common hallmark of folklore."

"Although we are unconscious of it, folklore is a part of our daily lives; the term includes the body of knowledge and of material things possessed by simple people, created by them, and inherited from past generations."

The speaker traced the development of the American Folk Society and the North Carolina organization and the increased interest in recent years in the various folk arts, music and ballads, arts and crafts, tall tales and legends.

At the conclusion of the program, the hostess served a salad plate with tea and dessert.

Clean Hair Acts As 'Tonic' For Morale
Hospital patients sometimes find that medication and lack of care cause their hair to turn dry, brittle, and dowdy. The best remedy is a hair-cut to trim off brittle ends.

Because a relaxing shampoo and clean, well-groomed hair is a potent "tonic" for any woman's morale, one understanding doctor prescribed a three-hour "pass" so his patient could leave the hospital to visit her hairdresser.

New Type Hamper
A multi-purpose quilted vinyl-taffeta hamper, which slips on and off a tubular steel folding stand, is decorative as well as utilitarian. It's equally efficient as a personal laundry hamper in bedroom or bath, or as a caddy for dampened laundry before ironing.

Such hampers come in yellow, white, pink, or blue, with ivory stand, and can be washed by wiping with a sponge dipped into soap or detergent suds.

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

Some people seem to have a lot more success with plants than others. When almost everything a person plants thrives, that person is said to have a green thumb. And when you tell one of these persons that he is blessed with a green digit, he looks at you as if you were some kind of a nut. For he knows that most of his success is due to hard work and other factors.

There is a lot of digging, pruning, feeding and spraying that must go into the building of a good garden. And even with an abundance of hard work, there are other fingers on the gardener's hand that must help add up to the green thumb.

The finger of interest keeps the good gardener at his chores while other luke warm members of Adam's profession will like a drought stricken hydrangea when the going gets tough. The gardener must be interested enough in the welfare of his plants to see to their care, even though heat, bugs that he must conquer in elements strive to discourage him.

The third finger on the gardener's hand is that of know-how. And know-how comes mostly from doing. It is true that many gardening hints and ideas come from reading and from tips picked up from other gardeners but in the main, you have to get the feel of it by doing the job yourself.

The fourth finger is study. To get the most out of gardening, the gardener must study. He should have books and magazines on different garden subjects. He must be up on the diseases and bugs that he must conquer in order for his plants to perform at their highest peak of efficiency. Not only this, but he should know what will kill off these bugs and diseases in the cheapest manner and how to handle these spray materials with the greatest safety to himself and others that may come into his garden. He should study up on the latest fertilizers in order to give his plants longer lasting supplies of food. In short, the gardener should have a library for ready reference on plants and means to care for them in the most practical manner.

As in any hand, the thumb is the most important member. But the other members also have to be used for the hand to function at its best. And for the gardener at least, the finger of interest, know-how, study and hardwork add up to make the thumb green. But you must use them all to make the gardener's hand function as it should. The loss or lack of use of any one finger may cause your thumb to look a bit chortle along side the thumb of your gardening friend next door.

City Council Has Raised Doubts

As a result of the failure of the City Council to give approval for an application for funds with which the Greenville Housing Authority might carry out its study of local housing needs, there arises the serious question of whether a majority of the governing body of the city intends to carry out the will of the people of Greenville as expressed in the referendum on public housing and urban renewal.

Is it to be assumed from their actions Tuesday night that Mayor Charles King, Councilman Ford McGowan and Councilman James W. Lee want to prevent the Housing Authority from making a study of the housing needs of Greenville? Is it to be assumed that these three officials are reluctant to carry out the will of the people as expressed in the referendum on public housing and urban renewal? Will there be an effort to kill these programs approved by the voters by delaying them to death?

It is our sincere hope that the answer to these questions will be No!

It may be that one or all three of these officials will subsequently alter the position he took at Tuesday night's meeting and approve this step which must be taken before planning on the programs can proceed.

Even so, the delay in approving the application for funds with which the Housing Authority can carry out its study is, in our opinion, inexcusable.

The matters of public housing and urban renewal have been discussed thoroughly in Greenville since January when Mayor King, who was then a councilman, offered the motion that the issues be submitted to the people for a vote. If the months between January and May 2 did not provide sufficient time for consideration of these issues by the men who now sit on the city's governing board, certainly the three weeks since these men knew they were elected to office should have provided the opportunity for considering the question.

The Housing Authority has asked that it be allowed to carry out the duties which were imposed upon it after the vote of the people in the May 2 referendum. Certainly the citizens of Greenville—and we assume the governing board—want whatever recommendations the Housing Authority subsequently makes to the City Council to be based on careful consideration and study of housing conditions in Greenville. Obviously this cannot be done if a majority of the governing board stands as a roadblock between the Housing Authority and the funds it needs to carry out its study.

The citizens of Greenville did what was asked of them when they turned out in record numbers to express their opinions on the issues of public housing and urban renewal, both of which were approved in the referendum.

A majority of the members of the present governing body, if not all of them, said prior to the election they intended to be guided by the will of the people. It is now up to the Mayor and the Councilmen to fulfill that obligation, and to do so without further unnecessary delay.

Like It Or Not, U.S. Gov't Is In Picture

President Kennedy's endorsement of the private effort to accept Castro's offer to exchange 1,200 of his prisoners for American tractors puts the government into the overall exchange picture and in effect makes it a party to bowing to Castro's blackmail demands.

Although the President stated clearly that the United States government would not be a party to the negotiations, the fact that the President has urged citizens as individuals to contribute to the fund to provide Castro with tractors in exchange for the prisoners is likely to be interpreted around the world as official participation by the government. It is a situation which may enhance American prestige and cause considerable embarrassment to the Cuban dictator. At the same time it is a situation that could result in a lowering of American prestige because this country again has taken the dollar approach to finding a solution to an international problem.

We seriously question the wisdom of the position taken by the President in this matter. By suggesting that the American people pay the blackmail that Castro has asked in return for his prisoners a dangerous precedent may have been set. It may well encourage other dictators to try the same tactics to soak Uncle Sam or the American public for materials which this country can produce.

Timing 'Right' For Actionists

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—Negroes' efforts to end segregation in the South through direct but passive action—such as sit-ins and bus rides by Negroes and white sympathizers—raises a haunting question.

Would this country be closer to total desegregation if a quarter century ago Negroes had begun their present tactics instead of doing so in the long, slow road through the courts?

Back in the 1930s the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People instead of direct action, began a fight, step by painful step through the courts to have segregation declared unconstitutional.

Before ever trying to get the court to outlaw public school segregation, a truly explosive area, the NAACP fought to get schools on the higher levels desegregated through court action.

As long ago as 1946 the court outlawed segregation on interstate buses, although you might not think so in view of the white mob riots last week in Alabama over buses carrying so-called "freedom riders" of whites and Negroes.

The NAACP's crowning achievement was the Supreme Court's May 17, 1954 decision against public school segregation. All the court's previous anti-segregation rulings didn't have the impact of this.

Out of it flowed the bitterest Southern white antagonism, the determination to make a last-ditch fight in defiance of the court, the Little Rock riots and the Alabama riots last week.

Negroes became more confident of breaking down all the Southern segregation barriers with the government now compelled to intervene, even with federal troops, to back up the authority of the court.

But by the NAACP lost its role as the almost exclusive champion and spokesman for Negroes. Other Negro groups came into existence determined to fight faster and more directly against all forms of segregation.

This is particularly true among Southern Negro students who took the non-violent but still direct action of picketing and sit-ins. The first big example of the new policy came about six years ago in Montgomery, Ala. There Negroes put an economic squeeze on the white-dominated city by boycotting the buses. New Negro leaders, operating outside the NAACP emerged, like the Rev. Martin Luther King who led the bus boycott.

But the original question still remains: Would Negroes have moved faster toward desegregation if they had chosen the direct action road 25 years ago instead of the slower course taken by the NAACP? This writer thinks no.

For this reason: The psychological climate wasn't right. Neither were the circumstances.

1. Africa was still a collection of European colonies. Only in recent years have African Negroes begun to assert themselves and gain independence. This gave encouragement to Negroes everywhere to fight directly for their rights.

2. The United States, seeking to lead the non-Communist world, is made self-conscious every time there is an anti-Negro outburst in this country.

3. The Supreme Court decisions against segregation have split Southerners' thinking, even of those who may favor segregation but realize there can be only anarchy if the court's rulings are ignored or violated.

4. The court's ruling, coming one at a time over years, have conditioned both the country and the South into realization that segregation had to end.

5. The court itself, more than 50 years ago, had approved segregation and considered it constitutional so long as segregated Negroes got treatment equal to that given whites. They did not, of course.

But with the Supreme Court on the side of segregation, Negroes were handicapped. Any demonstrations could have been suppressed on the ground they were violating state segregation laws. The government could have done little or nothing to help, until the Supreme Court reversed itself.

6. Now the situation is different. With the court throwing out various Southern segregation laws, the federal government can back up Negroes protesting segregation as it did in Little Rock and on the buses.

'The Rebel' Scores Again

Publication of the spring "Rebel" by East Carolina College students again brings forth an outstanding interview with an outstanding North Carolinian.

It is almost amazing that the "Rebel" staff has been able to secure interviews of such a high caliber for the entire 1960-61 year.

Phillips Russell of the University of North Carolina has given direct answers to direct questions. The interviews posed questions which are of utmost importance to us today: integration in the South and this state's part; status of the eastern part of the state; and status of East Carolina College.

As for "our" part of the state, Russell gave optimistic answers. He encouraged the college "to cultivate and maintain the creative attitude that it has gained in recent years."

This is an attitude perhaps exemplified in the "Rebel" itself, which has truly devoted itself to a creative movement not only at East Carolina College, but in the eastern part of the state which supports this college.

Russell's articles have appeared in North Carolina newspapers and he is a noted biographer and retired instructor of creative writing at the university.

Artwork illustrating a timely piece on the Civil War era, "No Time for Generals, CSA" was another notable work of student talent. Larry Blizard was the artist, and he used drawings as his tool of illustration.

A section in the magazine on art at the college was devoted to the increasing use of welded sculpture, which has already been appearing at both college and Greenville Art Center exhibits.

Rounding out its program for spring, the "Rebel" included just enough, but not too much, poetry, several book reviews and short stories.

Not to be overlooked is an essay on "Immigrants in Willa Cather's Prairie Novels" by Elizabeth Pasti, which compares with an essay on William Faulkner's works by Junius Grimes in a past issue.

Again, the nicest feature about the student magazine is that it represents a high caliber of student work by the students themselves. The latter quality is not often enough found in student publications—some of which attempt to become literary magazines alone without reference to or regard for the student ability and mental atmosphere.

Enclosed is a copy of a letter I recently sent to Mayor Charles M. King. Since the answers to the questions contained in that letter are of vital importance to a considerable segment of the Greenville population, and since the Mayor is requested to answer such questions, I would appreciate it if you would print this letter in your "Open Forum" column.

Dear Mayor King:

Many people (citizens and voters of Greenville) supported you in your recent campaign because you opposed urban renewal. I think that you will agree that you would not have been elected absent such support. Since urban renewal was also approved in the same election, this poses certain questions. For example, will you accept urban renewal without qualification? Or will you stand by your campaign promises?

The answers to these difficult questions are vital to many of your constituents. For irreparable injury will assuredly result to some of your supporters if you permit the Housing Authority to file the loan application for federal funds. Even conceding that a federally-supported, integrated housing project represents progress (and if federal funds are involved such housing units will be integrated), are you convinced that the injury to existing persons does not outweigh such progress? Another example, I'm a widow. I've lived in my house over 40 years. I understand that it will be ripped down, among others, to build a park. Even if we disregard the sentimental value, there is evidence that I will not receive enough money to house me in a comparable manner. Further, I presently receive a small income on some houses I manage for my daughter. Again, it is my understanding that these houses will also be ripped down (to build a park). Without such income, I can't make ends meet. Even with such rentals it is difficult. How do you handle situations like these, Mr. Mayor? What plans, if any, do you have for your "senior citizens" who will be dispossessed by such idealistic schemes? Will you shrug your shoulders (as many in Greenville seem to be doing) and say "this is the price of progress"? My financial position is not unique. There are others in a similar position. We need answers to these questions. Only you can provide them. Take a public stand on this matter now, one way or the other. Print that stand in the newspaper before your supporters are injured, not after. If it's desirable to rip down the lives of people-to put up parks, let's equally desirable to borrow the necessary money to build attractive homes (not "units" for the displaced senior citizens).

In view of the importance to all these questions, I am forwarding a copy of this letter to the "Daily Reflector" with a request that they print it in the "Open Forum" column. I await your reply.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. J. B. Smith, Sr.

Sample Of Our System

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Looking through a General Motors report, I find that in 1960, this company had 595,151 employees and 830,873 shareholders. The capitalist share, as it has developed in the United States, is undoubtedly best described by these figures. The widespread ownership of American industry is characterized by widespread and diffuse public participation in ownership. Similarly, the size of the personnel, over half a million in this one company, represents an annual payroll of $3,487,000,000 out of a total sales of $12,733,000,000. The dividends on common and preferred stock amounted to $377,000,000 and $381,000,000 of the net income was retained for use in the business.

In a word, American capitalism, as experienced by General Motors, our largest producing firm, shows a widespread distribution of ownership, actually larger than the number of employees. It shows that the workers get about 25 per cent of the total gross income; that wages are about six times as large as dividends. Ownership therefore is not of an exploitive but rather of a co-operative character.

As one looks at the structural organization of this business, ownership is distributed from management which is inevitable in an organization which has roughly 800,000 shareholders. That means that ownership tends to be functionally a banking process. The owners do not participate in any phase of the industry's activities except that once a year, at an annual meeting, a stockholder rises to ask a question and is answered. While in practice, the stockholders are called owners, actually their relationship to the business has become more in the nature of banking; the stockholder providing capital to management for the conduct of the business and having an increasingly smaller voice in either policy or practice.

As a matter of experience, ownership generally is not concerned much with the details of the operations of a business provided that a profit is earned or the enterprise shows the prospect of growth. If the owner finds it profitable or convenient he moves out of one enterprise into another. The business is in the hands of management, which provides the force of the organization.

In many respects, American capitalism functions differently from European capitalism, the American enterprise providing a smaller return on an investment, leaving large amounts of earnings within the business for expansion, development, acquisition and research. All the presidents of General Motors, since its organization in 1908, have come out of the work force, except Pierre S. Du Pont who represented new ownership. He came in when the company was in danger of bankruptcy and the Du Ponts made a heavy investment to save the company. He served for three years and was succeeded by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., who came out of the sales force for the Hyatt Roller Bearings Company, a subsidiary.

This has been characteristic of American industry. Very few sons have succeeded to the positions of their progenitors. In the automobile business, the Ford is exceptional; in the steel business such succession is equally rare. In most enterprises, it does not happen at all. In family enterprises, it is expected that member of the founding family will succeed each other but that is not so in large corporate enterprises. The rise of men to authority out of the ranks, gives to corporate organization incentives which were unexpected in the early development of this type of enterprise.

It is the very bigness of modern business which provides opportunity for men to rise, because what is bought and paid for is experience, not a family tree or a propitious marriage. Experience, knowledge, competence is sought wherever it may exist and is given wide range when it is found.

"In fact, in recent years, it has become so difficult to find satisfactory managerial ways that a system of stock options—meaning participation in ownership—has become a necessity." (Continued on page six)

Cooking Is Fun

Repeated by request!
Baked Ham Potato Puff
Green Peas with Mushrooms
Holiday Cucumber Salad
Daffodil Cake Beverage
HOLIDAY CUCUMBER SALAD
4 cucumbers (each 8 to 10 inches long)

1-3 cup elder vinegar
1 tablespoon cold water
2 1/2 teaspoons salt
4 teaspoons sugar
1/4 to 1/2 cup minced parsley
Green pepper
Pare 3 of the cucumbers entirely; pare remaining cucumber partly for a striped effect. Flute cucumbers with sharp fork tines; slice thin. Mix vinegar, water, salt and sugar; pour over sliced cucumbers. Cover and refrigerate 3 to 6 hours; turn in marinade a few times. Arrange drained cucumbers in serving dish; make a border of the parsley; garnish center with green pepper cut in tiny leaf shapes with canape cutter. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

Interesting flavor combination.
Pork Chops with Apricots
Steamed Rice Snap Beans
Salad Bowl Bread Tray
Ginger Cookies Beverage
PORK CHOPS WITH APRICOTS
1 can (1 pound) unpeeled apricot halves
Juice of 1 small lemon (about 2 tablespoons)
4 loin or blade pork chops (1/2 to 3/4 inch thick)
Salt and pepper
1 medium-small onion (cut in thin strips)
Drain apricots; measure 1/4 cup of the syrup and mix with the lemon juice. Trim excess fat from around chops. Grease a hot heavy skillet with a piece of the fat; add pork chops and brown slowly on both sides — about 10 minutes. Sprinkle chops with salt and pepper. Add onion and half the apricot syrup and lemon mixture to skillet. Cover and cook gently until chops are tender — about 30 minutes; add remaining apricot syrup mixture toward end of cooking and a little water if necessary. Makes 4 servings.

Dr. Greene To Speak At Farmville Graduation

FARMVILLE—Dr. Sylvester C. dation. Greene, director of the Pitt County Development Commission, will be commencement speaker at Farmville High School on Tuesday, May 30. Delivering the commencement sermon the preceding evening, Sunday, May 28, will be Dr. Allen P. Brantley, executive director, Methodist Christian Higher Education. Prior to his accepting the Pitt County appointment as director of the Development Commission last year, Dr. Greene was vice president in charge of public relations at William Jewell College in Liberty, Mo. He previously had held a similar post at Wake Forest College. Also a Baptist minister, Dr. Greene has served as editor of the Durham Herald-Sun newspaper, president of Coker College, Hartsville, S. C. from 1936 to 1943, and for a time he was vice president in charge of public relations at Wake Forest College. In 1950 he was named the first executive vice president of the North Carolina Medical Foun-

Management seeks fringe benefits, as labor does, and usually gets such benefits as incentive pay. From the standpoint of a man's future, a fringe benefit is preferable to a highly taxed salary. By this means, management participates in ownership, but by no process does ownership usually participate in management which has become strictly professional and trained. The need for skilled management therefore is urgent and calls for increasingly high returns. The stock option is management's method of obtaining an estate providing return for their work.

Named Resident Group Chairman

RALEIGH — Virginia Blackwell James of Greenville has been elected a resident group chairman in recent elections at Peace College in Raleigh. Other student government and activity officers were also elected. Liberia is the only country in Africa's 12 million square miles that has never been dominated by a European colonial power.

REPEAT PERFORMANCE

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Appearing in City Court on a charge of speeding and having an improper muffler, an 18-year-old boy told Judge F. H. Farham he was in a hurry to reach the county attorney's office. He explained he was due there to discuss a reckless driving charge.

Church Supports Resistance Move

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—The passive resistance movement against racial segregation, now stirring upheavals in the South, today had the backing of the United Presbyterian Church. An action approved by the denomination's General Assembly "commends and encourages those persons who are seeking by non-violent means to bring about equality for all." "Kneel-in" campaigns also were hailed as offering churches a chance to show whether they believe in the Gospel, and welcome worshippers regardless of race. In the closing session of the eight-day policy-making assembly the church Wednesday also con-

Both those who do and those who abstain were urged "to respect each other and constructively work together in dealing with the problems of alcohol." In the past, the church has condoned only abstinence. The new policy also encouraged abstinence, but adds: "All drinking must be evaluated not in terms of one's right to drink or not to drink, but in the light of Christian responsibility to our fellow man in society."

Sure Victor If He Is Located

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP)—George W. Hawkins is a cinch to be elected as constable in Campbell County's Seventh Magisterial District—if he can be found. Hawkins, of Permisson Grove, has been missing since April 3. In Tuesday's Democratic primary election, he got 46 votes to 45 for George W. Sexton. No Republican candidate for constable is entered for the November election.

Pushbutton Era Finds Sawmills
SHELTON, Wash. (AP) — The pushbutton age has reached Washington's century-old lumber industry. The Simpson Timber Company has opened its third sawmill in Shelton, built to turn out lumber without men laying a hand on log or board. Ten men, at pushbutton panels, control barkers, cutoff saws, gang and band saws, edgers and trimmers. A spokesman says they will produce 120,000 board feet of lumber in an 8-hour shift, an average of 12,000 feet per man. The industry average is now 5,000 to 7,000 board feet.

Korean General's Visit Called Off

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Premier Chang Do-young's on-again off-again flight to Washington to see President Kennedy appeared off today.

The young general who led the overthrow of South Korea's elected government last week was refused both a visa to enter the United States and an invitation from the White House.

U.S. Charge d'Affaires Marshall Green told him that Kennedy is too busy to see him before leaving for Europe early next week.

Apparently still hopeful, the soldier-premier conferred for 45 minutes again today with Green. Informants said the diplomat tried to explain to Chang why Kennedy was unable to meet him now and at the same time put new pressure on the leader of the military junta for an early return to civilian government in South Korea. Brushing aside protocol, Chang made a surprise announcement Wednesday that he was going to see the President. It brought a quick reply from Washington that the visit was "not practical or feasible at this time."

Military censors prevented Korean newspapers from carrying the State Department's statement and most Koreans still had the impression Chang planned to depart as soon as possible.

Between the time the statement was issued in Washington and today's meeting between Chang and Green, five airline seats were booked for the United States Friday.

This led to the speculation that Chang might be thinking of going to the United States to sell his revolution even if he couldn't see Kennedy.

The airline bookings were made by the Rev. Edward J. Moffett, 39, a Maryknoll priest who runs a mission and hospital on South Korea's Paeng Yong Islands near the 38th Parallel about 4 miles from Communist North Korea.

Father Moffett could not be reached immediately for comment. The military junta ruling South Korea meanwhile released from prison at least nine former cabinet ministers of the overthrown government. They were allowed to return to their homes but kept under guard.

Four ministers were known to be still imprisoned. Ex-Premier John M. Chang—no relation to his soldier-successor—defied an attempt to haul him off to prison but is under house arrest.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED Sal must be protected; and John Alden, who stood high in the estimation of her parents—he had taken pains to insure this—as a matter of course had appointed himself the protector.

This could lead to trouble, especially in a place where there wasn't much room to move about. Sal, though piqued, told himself, and sternly, that in the presence of this proprietorial young giant he would not give an inch; but neither would he go out of his way to seek a fight. To Sal, brought in the streets of London, streets he had roamed like a wild beast, aggressiveness was a shield for the unarmored, the safest defense a vulnerable man could devise.

Ever since he could remember, since babyhood, Sal had kept himself ready to do battle at any time and with any weapons or with none. Fighting was essentially dirty, and he saw no romance in it, no glitter. Not for him the punctilio of the duel! Giving the other man an equal chance struck Sal as stupid. His motto—he could not have been alive had it been otherwise—was "hit before you get hit."

Among the separatists it was different. Sal sensed, aboard Mayflower, an unspoken scorn for his type of truculence. These soft-spoken men had muskets and swords, not on their persons but stored below, and Sal had been told that they had four field pieces in the hold. This was natural enough, since they were heading for a wilderness inhabited by savages from all accounts were fiends, ferocious, bloodthirsty.

The Mayflower passengers not infrequently squabbled among themselves, pale and passionate, their eyes aglow; though whether these spats were concerned with matters theological or only with money Sal had not learned. But no fists were raised, or even without fuss.

Sal's own considerable talent for butting, scratching, punching, kicking, gouging was wasted aboard of this vessel. It would be regarded not with awe, but in a stunned shocked silence. He knew this. He felt it. So it was that he eschewed the company of the cooper.

Christopher Jones, Captain, had classed his passengers as saints and strangers, and this was as far as Sal went for some time. The saints had come from Leyden, where for many years they had worked and worshipped away from their original homes in England.

They had left the Low Countries, Sal gathered, not because of any persecution but in part because their children were speaking only Dutch, forgetful of an English they had perhaps never properly learned, and in part because the lack of decorum and even the frivolity with which the Dutch reflected an attitude too painful for the saints to endure. These did not seem good reasons to Sal Boyd; but he said nothing.

A mild, sweet-smiling old man named Carver was the leader of the saints, as far as Sal could make out, though the one Sal had singled that first night on deck, Elder Brewster, was also a personage of importance among them, as was William Bradford, a tall, deadly serious, much younger man, husband of Sal's cloak-benefactress.

Among the strangers was William Mullins, a pudgy, harassed man with light blue eyes and a distracted manner, a man who continually muttered to himself as though doing sums in his head. He might have been forty, or even older. He had sold his shop in Dorking, a draper's shop, and was one of the adventurers in this enterprise; that is, he had invested money in it, as had Mrs. Martin.

It would have been hard to imagine a more unadventurous man, as far as appearance went, than Mr. Mullins, whom Sal Boyd at first regarded simply as the father of Priscilla. Yet in so crowded a place, and as day crawled after slow day, Sal began to ponder the mystery that was William Mullins.

Why should this pursy, absent-minded person, this man of paunch, sell his snug business to transport himself and his family—for besides Priscilla there was a Mrs. Mullins, a wan slight female of indeterminate complexion; Joseph, a much younger brother; and two servants, the Radales—to the wilds of North Virginia? Was he inwardly restless as outwardly he twitched? Sal couldn't know. But he watched William Mullins.

He watched Mullins's daughter even more assiduously. Priscilla was a delight. Once she steadied her step and the color had come back into her cheeks, he was able to see a great deal of her.

Priscilla was too old to play with the children, as she was too young to converse in an edifying fashion with the adults. There was another strapping young man, the strongest of them all, and independent, his own master and signed on only for one year—the cooper, John Alden. But he, too, though thick-thighed, was thin of wit. He bored Priscilla, who preferred Sal, especially after the fifth day out when Sal, having succeeded in borrowing a razor, shaved.

They talked of a great many things, most of them inconsequential.

Priscilla was dismayed when he told her that he'd been drunk the night he boarded Mayflower.

"Don't you know," she asked with a primness not usual in her, "that strong waters are bad for you?"

"Wouldn't be any fun drinking 'em if they weren't."

"Don't you know that Bacchus has drowned more men than Neptune?"

"Well, sure. But the ones he finished off had more fun than the poor devils that got wrecked and then woke up with sand in their ears. Besides," Sal added, "I don't reckon I'll ever have money enough to drink myself to death on."

Countering, he reproached her for the shortness of her skirt. She colored at this. She explained that she had been growing fast and that her father said he couldn't afford to be buying new clothes all the time, so she'd been letting them out a bit by a bit. She conceded, however, that this particular petticoat, which had no hem left at the bottom, already had gone as far as decency would allow.

"You'd better stop growing."

"Oh, I think I have. I mean—"

He reprimanded her, too, though in the gentlest manner imaginable, about her habit of going around bareheaded. She said she saw nothing shameful in this. He said not shameful, no; but foolish. He pointed out that they were on the open sea, with heaves of wind; and what would her hair look like after a few weeks of that? It was straight enough already. Even if she had a gaffing iron—

"Oh, my father wouldn't let me use one!"

"You'll wish you could, if you don't keep covered up."

She could follow such reasoning. Next day and every day thereafter she wore a bonnet.

Unique Way Of Getting Revenge

ELMONTE, Calif. (AP) — A food market curcular recently carried an ad saying:

"wanted. Engraver. Must be familiar with faces of Lincoln and Jackson. A lot of money can be made by right man. Call Gilbert 8-6191."

That's the phone number for the police department and the calls flooded in. Exasperated officers spent considerable time explaining they weren't looking for an engraver.

"It probably was somebody we pinned trying to get back at us," said Sgt. Earl Robert. "What a way to get revenge!"

Captain Christopher Jones made Sal a prisoner-at-large and called a conference of the leaders of the two divisions of Puritans, "saints," or separatists, and "strangers," to decide what to do about the intruder the jealousy of the ship's big rot want to have to fee. Kindly Elder Brewster of the "saints" befriended Sal and let him share the sparse Puritan stores. Sal was bowed over at his first sight of pretty Priscilla Mullins and incurred the jealousy of the ship's big and burly cooper, John Alden, when Priscilla was attentive to Sal.

CHAPTER 5

The separatists had a phrase that tickled Sal Boyd's ear. When they wished to caution a friend whom they deemed rash they'd admonish him "to preserve better walking."

Sal decided to preserve better walking in the case of the cooper. The burly young Alden had enjoyed a month of companionship with Priscilla Mullins before Sal came aboard, and if he considered her as good as his fiancée this was because he had known no competition.

Not that he took Sal to be such! He was a scrap of garbage from the murky nether world of London, against whom Priscilla

Freedom Bell Is Friendship Mark

ELKHORN, Wis. (AP) — A small "freedom bell" presented by a group of German farmers will occupy a place of honor in the new city hall being planned here.

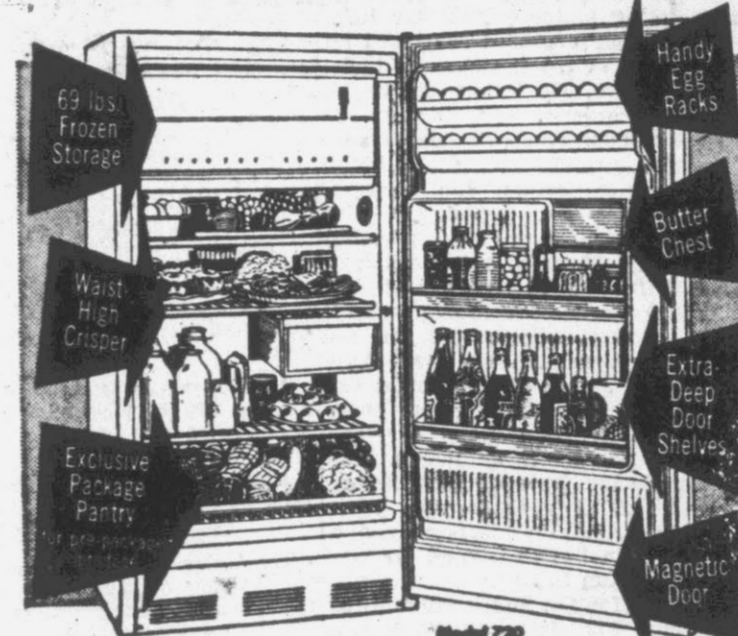

The bell is made of china and stands less than six inches high. It is a replica of the "Liberty Bell" presented to West Berlin by the U.S. Air Force after the Berlin blockade ended in 1949.

A group of 75 German farmers who spent a weekend as guests in farm homes in the area presented the replica.

Twenty-One Leave June 12 For European Study Tour

Twenty-one men and women from five states who will participate in East Carolina College's 1961 Grand Tour of Europe will leave New York June 12 for travel and study through July 20 in nine countries. A number of the tourists will also take an optional trip through Spain July 20-August 2.

Mrs. Myrtle B. Clark of the college department of education, director of the college's first European tour last summer, will accompany the 1961 group. She has announced that a small number of student-tourists may still make reservations if they apply at once to the Office of Extension at the college.

Those taking the tour this summer represent the states of North Carolina, Virginia, Colorado, Texas, and Florida.

Atlantic crossings from New York to Prestwick, Scotland, and on the return trip, from Paris to New York will be by air. Travel in Europe will be by motor coach.

Countries to be visited on the tour are Scotland, England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, Italy, France, and Switzerland.

Among varied features of the European trip are a visit to Stratford-on-Avon and attendance at a performance at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, a cruise through the Rhine Valley, luncheon at the historic Five Flies Restaurant in Amsterdam, an evening at a Swiss country inn, luncheon in the Eiffel Tower Restaurant in Paris followed by a cruise sail, and a drive through the English Lake District.

Plans also include two days in Edinburgh, Brussels, Venice, Nice, and Geneva; three in London and Florence; and four in Rome and Paris.

Those touring Spain will visit Madrid, Toledo, Cadiz, Granada, Lisbon, Seville and other places of interest.

Tourists enrolled as students will, on completion of requirements, receive nine quarter hours of credit.

of graduate or undergraduate credit, according to the type of work done. Several who do not wish to receive college credit are also enrolled for the tour.

Premier Khrushchev.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, one of the last of the major spokesmen attending, left Wednesday night. There was no word on when he might return.

Marshal Chen Yi, Communist China's foreign minister, is staying on, though.

Chen Yi made his second major speech to the week-old meeting Wednesday. He went down the line for Gromyko's proposals. The Communists want a system that would give them an iron-bound veto against action on complaints that Laotian neutrality was being violated.

In the Western view, this would hamstring any move to halt a Communist takeover in Laos. U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk has said he will not accept a system that would be paralyzed by a veto.

President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev are the leaders who can bring these positions together, if anyone can. They will almost certainly have a try when they meet in Vienna June 3-4.

Gen. MacArthur Agrees To Attend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur has accepted an invitation from Philippine President Carlos P. Garcia to be a guest of the Philippines at July 4 Independence Day celebration in Manila.

The celebration will mark the 15th anniversary of Philippine independence.

Philippine Ambassador Carlos P. Romulo, saying he was speaking on behalf of MacArthur, announced the general's acceptance of the invitation.

Divided House Will Be Carried Out By Couple

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — The house of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Jones is a divided one.

Jones, 62, and his wife, Margaret, were divorced in 1953.

Jones moved across the street and rented a place to live while his wife finished raising the younger of their five children.

Then the Negro couple got around to completing a property settlement.

They talked about selling the five-room frame house, Jones said Wednesday, but cutting it in two was "kind of her idea and I went along with her."

Jones moved back into his half of the house.

A brother, Ellis, helped Jones start sawing the house apart in their spare time.

Jones said it won't be long before there are two houses instead of one.

He plans to skid his wife's part of the house three feet away, nail on new siding on both sections and slap a coat of paint on them.

Mrs. Jones isn't available for comment.

Second-Strings Talk At Geneva

GENEVA (AP) — Second-string delegates went through the motions today of an international conference on Laos, but it looked as if they could make small progress until President Kennedy sees Premier Khrushchev.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, one of the last of the major spokesmen attending, left Wednesday night. There was no word on when he might return.

Marshal Chen Yi, Communist China's foreign minister, is staying on, though.

Self-Styled 'Fuehrer' And Followers Hauled To Jail

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — The self-styled "fuehrer" of American Nazis, George Lincoln Rockwell, and nine of his followers spent the night in jail after picketing activities.

Officers said the district attorney's office would be consulted today to see if any further action would be taken against the group.

The Nazis were booked for "disturbing the peace in a manner that would unreasonably disturb and alarm the public." They were picked up at the Civic Theater where they were protesting showing of the movie "Exodus."

Police identified the prisoners, in addition to Rockwell, 43, as Roy James, 23; Robert Washington Johnson, 23; Anthony Edward Wells, 23; Charles Beveridge, 21; Paul Edwards Dukel, 21; Seth David Ryan, 22; Andrew Newman Chappell, 23; Ralph Lee Hassinger, 33; and John Padler, 23. All are from Arlington, Va.

Another party member, Bernard F. Davis Jr., 20, also of Arlington, was booked with reckless driving after the "hate bus" he was driving crashed on the Lake Pontchartrain causeway earlier Wednesday.

While Rockwell's group was in jail in New Orleans, another group of Nazis not connected with the American Nazi party, planned to be ready if anything happens in New Orleans upon arrival of the "Freedom Riders," who were in jail in Jackson, Miss., Wednesday night.

A battered and bandaged "National Nazi" from Memphis, Tenn., Doug Olefke, 27, said at Pensacola, Fla., that uniforms and supplies are being rushed to New Orleans. He added he and five others were on their way to Mobile, Ala., and New Orleans.

"We're ready," said Olefke, who added by supplies he meant "tear gas, roofing nails and other things. If anything starts, we'll be in it."

Olefke told the Pensacola News Journal he and others were in the Montgomery race riot of last Saturday and admitted they threw tear gas bombs into the Negro church Sunday night during a mass meeting.

Chalmers Says Possible Warrants To Be Issued

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — District Solicitor (Prosecutor) Lester Chalmers says more warrants probably will be issued in connection with the basketball scandals after he makes another trip to New York next week to confer with authorities there.

Meanwhile, at Winston-Salem, Wake Forest College issued a statement Wednesday night that basketball star Billy Packer had voluntarily gone to New York and conferred for two days with the district attorney's office concerning the point-shaving scandal.

The college said the statement was made "in the interest of protecting the name of a basketball player the college believes to be honest." Packer, the college said, was not taken before the grand jury in New York and no indictment was returned concerning him.

Carrier Open Starts Big Field

RALEIGH (AP) — A big field of pros and amateurs, headed by defending champion Ronny Thomas, of Durham, teed off today in the fourth annual Carrier Open Golf Tournament.

Thomas, young assistant pro at Duke, won last year with a 36-hole score of 131. He faces stiff competition this year from such pros as Avery Beck of Kingston, Al Smith of Danville, Va., Chuck Alexander of Rocky Mount and Thorne Wood of Asheboro.

A Durham foursome, led by pro O'Dell Massey, posted a 20-under-par 52 Wednesday to win the pro-am tournament which served as a tune-up for the Carrier Open.

His partners were Inez May, Barbara Parker and Geneva Roberts.

Mrs. Macy Scott of Troy scored a hole on No. 11. She used an eight iron to score her first ace. With her handicap, it counted a zero on the score card.

"So far as the college is concerned," the statement continued, "Packer is innocent of any wrong doing in connection with the scandal and he will resume his regular schedule as a student." The 5-foot-9 back court star from Bethlehem, Pa., went to New York on Tuesday at the request of the district attorney, the statement said. He returned to Winston-Salem Wednesday.

Wake Forest College said it would have nothing else to say concerning the trip, and also announced that Packer would not discuss it further. Charlie Bryant, assistant coach at Wake Forest, made the trip with Packer.

The college said Packer made the trip of his own free will "because he wanted to clear his own name from rumor which had linked him to the scandal."

It also was revealed in New York on Wednesday that Wake Forest's game with New York University was an attempted fix on the part of an NYU player. "I am amazed," Coach Horace (Bones) McKinney of Wake Forest said when told that NYU's Raymond Paprocky had said he had to return a $1,000 bribe offer because NYU upset Wake Forest 70-61.

McKinney, an ordained Baptist minister, also said he was "very much relieved" to learn that Packer apparently had been cleared in the point shaving scandal.

The stain of the basketball gambling scandal has touched two of North Carolina's Big Four. Three North Carolina State players were indicted recently on charges of accepting bribes to fix basketball games, and Lou Brown, a former member of the University of North Carolina team, was indicted in New York as an intermediary between college players and gambler Aaron Wagman.

Following involvement of N.C. State and the university, President William C. Friday of the Consolidated University, which controls both schools, set down strict rules concerning the number of games the two teams may play and their recruitment of basketball players.

Chalmers said he had talked at length with New York authorities after Wednesday's announcement that Joseph Hacken had been indicted in New York on 17 bribery charges and one conspiracy count in the basketball scandals.

He said the indictment of Hacken should help the investigation being conducted from Raleigh.

Chalmers said barring unexpected developments, he would have nothing further to announce here this week. He also urged that rumors implicating various players and schools in the spreading scandal be laid to rest. "Almost all of them (rumors) are unfounded," Chalmers added.

The solicitor also is preparing a bill to introduce in North Carolina General Assembly which would stiffen laws against gambling and against dissemination of information to assist gamblers.

'600' Highlights Stock Racing Card

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Stock car racing in the Carolinas this weekend will be highlighted by Sunday's World 600 at Charlotte. Most other tracks, however, have cards scheduled.

Saturday night racing is scheduled at Winston-Salem's Bowman Gray Stadium, Rockingham Speedway, and Hickory, N.C., Speedway. An added feature at Bowman Gray Stadium will be "demolition derby" in which the last car able to move will be declared the winner.

Harris, N.C., Speedway has a five-event card scheduled Sunday afternoon.

The Columbia, S.C., Speedway has nothing scheduled this week-end because of the World 600.

LITTLE LEAGUE

Ties For Top

Coca-Cola yesterday blasted Texaco, 22-3, and surged into a two-way tie for second place in the North State League.

Led by catcher Donnie Taylor's double home run performance, Coke's barrage included 17 hits. The winners scored runs in each but the fifth inning. Eight Texaco errors helped pitcher William Moye get credit for the victory. However, Moye limited Texaco to five safeties.

Taylor slammed his homers in the first and last innings and added a single and a double in five at-bats. Shortstop Ken Merritt banged out three hits in five trips.

Texaco's leadoff batter, Bobby Hardy, doubled in the first inning and scored on a sacrifice and an error. Texaco, however, could score only two more runs, tallying single markers in the second and fourth frames.

Exchange Beaten

Greenville Tobacco Company yesterday matched runs with Exchange for six innings and then, in an extra inning, scored a single run to hand the Tar Heel League leaders their first loss of the season, 10-9, at Elm St. Little League Park.

Exchange's loss dropped it into a three-way tie for first place with Pepsi Cola and Moose.

Shortstop Joe Smith scored the winning run in the top of the seventh after he had reached first on a fielder's choice. He was scored by consecutive singles by George Garrett and Allen Hahn.

In the Exchange half of the seventh, Gordon Sommulin reached third with two out but died there as Mike White fled to center, ending the game.

Smith banged a three-run homer for the Tobs in the fourth. Richard Gaylor hit for the circuit for Exchange in the second.

Drop Of White Sox Is Shocker In American League Competition

BY ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The White Sox dropped their fifth in a row at Baltimore Wednesday night as the Orioles twice came from behind for a 2-1 and 5-3 two-night doubleheader sweep. That left Chicago just 607 percentage points shy of plunging back into the cellar.

12½ games out of first. Detroit retained a 4½-game lead by beating the Minnesota Twins 5-4 while Cleveland defeated the last place Los Angeles Angels 7-1. New York beat Boston 3-2 and Kansas City knocked off Washington 6-5.

'500' Tourney Begins Today

By JERRY LISKA
Associated Press Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—The $50,000 "500 Festival" open golf tourney starts today with promise the top-notchers in a field of 147 pros will burn up the speedway as much as their daredevil driving counterparts next Tuesday.

This second annual golf feature, serving as a prelude to the golden anniversary Memorial Day 500 auto race, is held on the flat Speedway, par-71 course—half of which nestles within the 2½-mile famed racing oval.

The turf is hard and only the close-cropped, tricky greens may prevent a par-wrecking stampede by the likes of leading money-winner Gary Player, U. S. Open champion Arnold Palmer and National PGA champion Jay Hebert in a star-studded challenge for the $9,000 first money, last year won by Doug Ford.

In Wednesday's pro-celebrity warmup, no fewer than 14 of 50 name pros shot sub-70 rounds, led by a 34-31-65 by Tony Lema, San Leandro, Calif. Ford, however, had a one-over-par 72.

Four players bagged 66's, including Lionel Hebert, Paul Harney, Don Whit and Bill Collins. Shooting 67's were Jay Hebert, Bill Casper and Tommy Bolt.

Player, leading the 1961 PGA money-winning list with almost $49,000, and Palmer settled for 70's. Player and Palmer are expected to decide, before the 72-hole Speedway show ends Sunday, whether to defy PGA and play in the Canada Cup matches in Puerto Rico June 1-4. Both have been threatened with a $500 fine and six-month suspension by the PGA if they skip the Memphis open to play in Puerto Rico.

Jackson's Win For Cards Knock Bums From Second

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Right-hander Larry Jackson, who lost three in a row after being sidelined by a broken jaw, won his first for the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday night with a 7-2 victory over Los Angeles that knocked the Dodgers out of second place in the National League race.

San Francisco padded its lead to a full game again by beating Cincinnati 5-4. Pittsburgh took over second place with a 7-3 decision over the Chicago Cubs, and Philadelphia defeated Milwaukee 7-1.

In the American League, Detroit stayed 4 games ahead, getting past Minnesota 5-4 while second-place Cleveland whipped the Los Angeles Angels 7-1. New York defeated Boston 3-2, Baltimore swept a two-night doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox 2-1 and 5-3, and Kansas City beat Washington 6-5.

Jackson, now 15-6 lifetime with the Dodgers, gave up eight hits and seven walks, but left a dozen Dodgers stranded. Relief ace Lindy McDaniel finally nailed it, coming on and striking out Tommy Davis with the bases loaded in the ninth.

The sixth-place Cards, winning their second in a row, scored once in the first on Bill White's home run and then beat Roger Craig (3-3) with two in the second on singles by Stan Musial, Daryl Spencer and Alex Grammas and a force out by Hal Smith. Jackson doubled home two more in the sixth.

Winner Mike McCormick (5-2) of the Giants and the Reds' Jim O'Toole (4-4), a pair of young southpaws, duelled through six scoreless innings before San Francisco scored three unearned runs in the seventh. The Giants sewed it up with two more in the eighth.

Art Mahaffey (5-3) beat the Braves with a four-hitter. Jim Woods and Charlie Smith hammered homers for Philadelphia, with Smith's two-on shot triggering a six-run fourth that beat Don Nottebart (2-3).

Al Kaline and Rocky Colavito each hammered home runs and drove in two runs for the Tigers. Both homers were off loser Camilo Pascual (4-4). Don Mossi remained unbeaten and won his fifth, but gave up a two-run homer by Zolio Versalles and needed Bill Fischer's relief to save it.

Gary Bell won his second in four decisions with a four-hitter for the Indians, striking out 10 and blanking the Angels on one hit until Leon Wagner homered in the seventh. Johnny Romano hit a home run for the Indians, who then chased Jerry Casale (1-4) with a four-run third.

A bases-loaded walk by Pete Burnside capped a two-run comeback in the ninth for the A's and tagged the loss on Johnny Gabel (0-1). Bill Kunkel won his first in relief.

The Yankees did it on a two-out single by Tony Kubek in the ninth that beat Chet Nichols (0-1). Ralph Terry (2-0) gave up only three hits, but one was a tying homer by Gary Geiger in the eighth. Roger Maris hit a two-run homer off Boston starter Gene Conley.

Archie Talks On June Title Bout

NEW YORK (AP) — Archie Moore gazed into the audience at a press luncheon. He spied one writer who had been critical of him.

"You took me apart the other day," he said. Then, turning on the charm he added, "You said I was greedy. I wasn't greedy, just hungry."

That was the way it went with Archie, the ageless one, talking about himself and his June 10 title defense against Giulio Rinaldi of Italy at Madison Square Garden.

The title is Moore's share of the world lightweight crown. He is recognized in New York, Massachusetts and Europe. Harold Johnson is recognized in the National Boxing Association states.

Moore spoke about his losing fight with Rinaldi last Oct. 29 in Rome which he described as "not unfriendly grounds but kind of pro-Rinaldi grounds." Of course, the title was not at stake that night for Archie was way over the 175-pound class limit.

"I suffered the same thing, only a more bitter dose many years ago," he recalled. "Jimmy Murray (a matchmaker) called me up and asked me to fight a young man named Leonard Morrow. I told him I was not in shape but he said 'you don't have to be in shape for this.' I went in there, thinking I could take him out any time I wanted. I think I lasted 2:29.

A-FRAME CABIN
Hillside; Waterside

By ANDY LANG
AP NEWSFEATURES

Higher personal income, more leisure time and better roads are enabling more and more families to realize the fond dream of owning a vacation hideaway. New cottages and cabins are going up at the rate of 75,000 a year. It is estimated that this figure will climb to 200,000 annually within five years or so.

One kind of leisure home that makes the most of a hillside or waterside location is called an A-frame cabin, simply because its design somewhat resembles the letter A. The all-wood cabin is supported by a series of A-shaped structural frames, placed one behind the other, six to eight feet apart. The walls rest on the slanted legs of the A, which are imbedded in the ground, and the flooring is laid over the cross-bar. A second level is usually built under the peak of the A.

The design calls for a minimum of foundation work. Combining the walls and the roof reduces the amount of materials and carpentry needed. Other savings are achieved by using standard-size components and by leaving the interior side of each slanting surface exposed.

The basic frame can be modified in many ways to meet specific requirements. For example, by adding sections at either end, or a balcony or dormer at either side, you increase the amount of enclosed area. Extending the main floor in one or more directions gives additional room for sunbathing and other kinds of outdoor relaxation.

Underneath the main floor are several square feet of storage space — enough, in some cases, for an auto or a boat.

Depending on how much money you want to spend and your skill as a handyman, you can have the cabin built professionally or do much of the work yourself. Since the components can be bought cut-size and drilled, ready for assembly, the construction job is not as difficult as might be supposed. Some parts of the job, however, might have to be done professionally; the installation of utilities, for instance, would fall into this category.

Clue: Attacker Was Nearsighted

TORRINGTON, Conn. (AP) — The man who attacked 18-year-old Frances Weingart may have been nearsighted.

Miss Weingart told police her assailant struck her just as she was closing the door of the dairy store where she works. Then, she said, he squinted and exclaimed "Oh I'm sorry—you're the wrong person" and fled.

MAIL SURPRISES

PATCHOQUE, N. Y. (AP) — When Humphrey Avery, owner of a plant nursery, opened his mail he got two surprises. First, four $10 bills fell out of an envelope with a note reading "For stolen merchandise." Second, it was the first news he'd had there was a theft.

Tax-Deductible Ruling On Tractor Gifts Argued

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Harry P. Byrd, D-Va., said today the Internal Revenue Service will have to answer to Congress if it rules that tractors-for-prisoners donations are tax deductible.

President Kennedy called on Wednesday for contributions to a private committee he helped organize to buy 500 tractors to send to Cuba's Fidel Castro in exchange for 1,200 prisoners taken in the ill-fated invasion.

The statement touched off bitter debate in the Senate Wednesday night, with the Democratic leaders defending Kennedy's stand against Republican critics.

As a part of a policy in which Kennedy said the government is "putting forward neither obstacles nor assistance to this wholly private effort," the President noted that "tax exemption is granted as a matter of course to any in the rehabilitation and assistance of needy refugees."

Challenging this, Byrd said representatives of the IRS will be called before the Senate Finance Committee, which he heads, to justify any such formal ruling.

"A ruling of this kind would be a distortion of existing regulations," Byrd said. "This is not charity, it is blackmail."

The IRS has drafted a letter to the citizens committee, presumably saying that it can have the tax deduction privilege if it meets certain conditions.

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., said in a separate interview that until the IRS makes its ruling formally, Kennedy's statement that contributions would be tax exempt is not binding.

"This is just the expression of the President's opinion, which he has a right to have, but with which I differ," Williams said.

The challenge to making donations tax deductible reflected what amounted roughly to about 3-1 opposition to the tractors for prisoners deal among Congress members publicly expressing an opinion.

In other developments, newspaper publisher John S. Knight Wednesday declined an invitation to join the Tractors for Freedom Committee.

Knight, publisher of the Detroit Free Press, Miami Herald, Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal and Charlotte (N.C.) Observer and News, said he received the invitation in a telegram from the committee. Invitations were sent to 50 prominent people, the committee said. In his telegram from Detroit to the committee, Knight said, "I vigorously oppose any deals, however well intended, which would strengthen Castro in Latin America and subject the United States to further scorn and ridicule."

In Chicago, Eleanor Roosevelt, a committee co-chairman, said a group of "experts in agriculture and machinery" will go to Cuba — probably next week — to determine what type of tractors Castro wants.

The other chairmen are Dr. Milton Eisenhower, brother of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, and the United Auto Workers president, Walter Reuther.

In Detroit, Reuther said he would like to go to Cuba with the technicians to work out details with Castro. He said he had asked UAW vice president, Pat Greathouse, to get in touch with farm equipment companies.

Carolina Singing Convention Set

WILSON — Preparations have been completed for the Twenty-First Annual Eastern North Carolina Singing Convention, Mr. L.A. Hagwood, President, announced today.

The date for the annual affair has been set for the Traditional Fourth Sunday in May which comes on the 28th this year.

On this date lovers of gospel music will gather in Fleming Stadium in Wilson for the Annual Singing Convention. Performances will get underway promptly at 10 a.m., and continue until late in the afternoon. Admission is free.

Mr. Hagwood is very much enthused about the program for this year and he has every right to be. Many outstanding singing groups have been lined up for the event. Among them are the Carolinians Quartet of High Point. Also on the program is the Pembroke All Male Chorus of 22 voices who have appeared in the convention for many years and are always a treat for the audiences. Others on the program are the Songsters Trio of Kernersville; Melody Quartet, Zebulon; The Sink Singers, Lexington; The Labor Sisters Quartet, Concord, Va.; The Selma Trio, Selma; Gospel Harmony Quartet, Raleigh; Marvelaires Quartet, Zebulon; The Songsman Quartet, Norfolk, Va.; The Pilgrims Quartet, Wilmington; Eastover Quartet, Fayetteville; The Happy Times Quartet, Zebulon; Chodivians Quartet, Greensboro; and others to be announced later.

This annual event is sponsored by the Wilson Junior Chamber of Commerce. Members of the Wilson Jaycees have made preparations to accommodate several thousands of spectators. The convention has grown through the years in attendance from 1500 when it was organized in 1940 to when it was 10,000 and 15,000.

Labor Law Will Be Explained

CHARLOTTE — Staff members of the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor-Management Reports propose to explode all the mystery connected with the 1959 labor law when they visit Charlotte on June 2.

Robert T. Amis, regional director who administers the provisions of the labor-management act locally referred to as the Landrum-Griffin law, today announced plans for a labor school at the Henry Lawrence McCrory Y.M.C.A., 300 South Caldwell St. This is the first of four such meetings in North Carolina. Others will be held at Greensboro, Raleigh and Wilmington.

"Two members of my staff will come to Charlotte to conduct the meeting," Amis said in Atlanta today. "They are prepared to give a line-by-line explanation of the items which must be included on the annual financial reports filed by each local union."

"What's more, Charlotte labor leaders who attend will go home with answers to their individual problems. The law really isn't as complex as many people are led to believe, and as union members live with it they come to respect it," Amis continued.

Evangelism Is Key Interest Of Greenville Minister

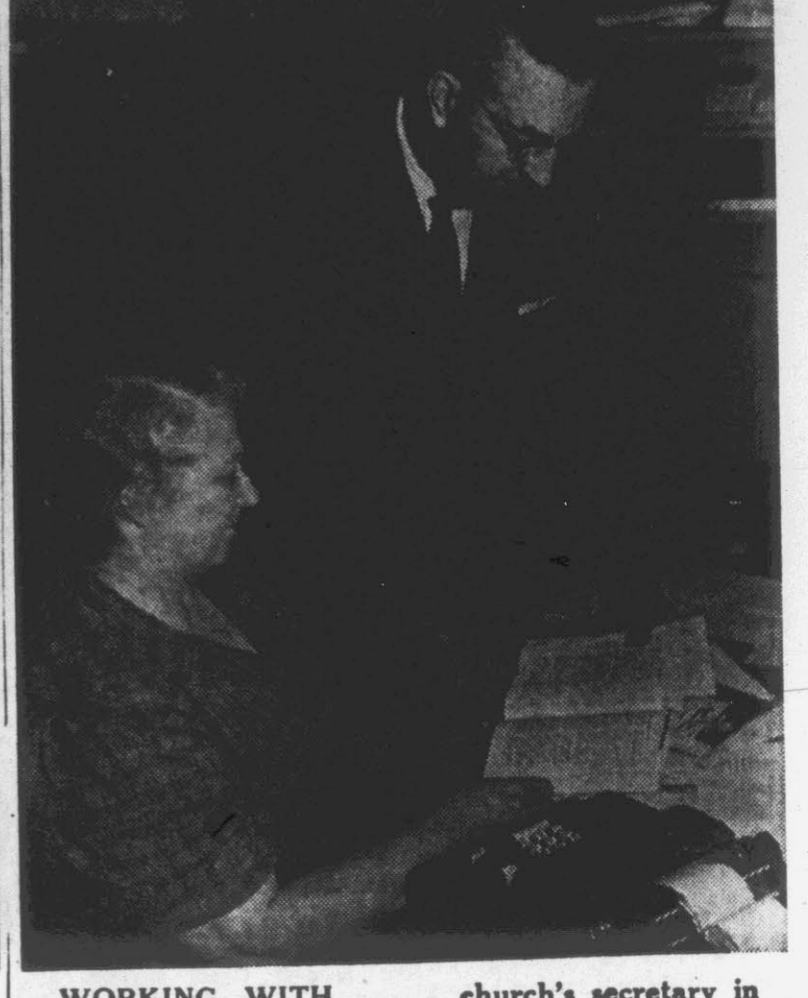

IN THE PULPIT . . . of the Church's sanctuary

JARVIS MEMORIAL PASTOR . . . The Rev. Howard McLamb

CHECKING RECORDS . . . of home visits made

WORKING WITH . . . church's secretary in office.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"My great passion as a Christian minister is evangelism. . . winning souls to Christ," says the Rev. Mr. Howard McLamb, minister of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church here in Greenville.

The Rev. Mr. McLamb, a native of Sampson County, and a graduate of Clinton High School, Rutherford College, Duke University and Duke Divinity School, joined the North Carolina Methodist Conference in 1935 when he was appointed to the Pink Hill Circuit, where he remained until 1939. In that year he went to Fairmont Church in Raleigh and from there, in 1945, went to Ahsokie where he remained until 1949. The Rev. Mr. McLamb moved to Hamlet in 1949 and served as pastor of the First Church there until he became the first Superintendent of the newly appointed Goldsboro District in 1954. He remained as pastor of the church here a year ago.

Pointing out his love of evangelism and church work, the Rev. Mr. McLamb noted that while on the Pink Hill Circuit, he led in building of three new churches, and while superintendent of the Goldsboro district, helped to organize 12 new churches and saw six new sanctuaries constructed, 27 new educational buildings erected, and 19 new parsonages built. He also noted that the Fairmont Church, during the time he was pastor, increased in membership from 240 to 682 and said while in Hamlet, the church's budget increased five-fold.

"I have loved all phases of the ministry in every appointment," said the Rev. Mr. McLamb, noting he has "tried to serve with a sense of mission, believing the Lord had called me to the ministry and believing every day brought new challenges from God and new accounting of stewardship to Him."

"I have had a Christian enthusiasm and commitment which has grown," the minister expressed, with a "great passion" as a minister for "evangelism. . . winning souls to Christ in the local church," missions and church extension.

"The happiest moment of my life is when a person comes before the congregation to be given baptism and confirmation" after preaching the love of Christ and his power to change life into the beautiful and the eternal. "I am moved with the conviction of John Wesley, founder of the Methodist Church, who said, "I am a brand plucked from the burning," and my every thought and energy is devoted to rescuing from sin and to Christ and the church all who are lost." "This conviction," he continued, "explains all of my other thoughts and activities related to the ministry."

"I promise the Sunday School, because this is the best way to get whole families started toward Christ, then lead them all the way into the church's membership and service. . . and enjoy visiting in the homes of the people, to minister to the needs they feel at that time. . . and then follow through until they are oriented as active members of the church."

The Rev. Mr. McLamb is past president of the Raleigh Ministerial Association and has held membership on many conference boards, including: the board of Evangelism, the board of Missions and Church Extension, the board of Lay Activities, the board of Ministerial Training Qualifications; the Co-ordinating Council; the Bishop's Committee on Church Architecture, the Commission on Christian Higher Education and the Commission on Town and Country Work. A past director of Evangelism of the Fayetteville District, the minister is currently a member of the World Service and Finance Commission of the conference's budget group.

The Rev. McLamb emphasized that his ministry is his hobby, spending the major part of his time on working for the church. The minister married the former Azile Brock of Mt. Olive, and they have two children, Guinevere, 16, a junior at Rose High School, and Kinnon, 18, a freshman at the University of North Carolina.

Bravery For The Sake Of Beauty

EAST CHICAGO, Ind. (AP) — Husky policemen fled, but secretary Maria Gomez remained inside when a tear gas bomb accidentally exploded in police headquarters.

"It's not devotion to duty," he explained. "It's just that I wouldn't be caught dead on the street with my eye makeup dripping down my cheeks."

Liberia, presently celebrating 114 years of independence, was the only republic in all of Africa for more than a century.

Bills To Increase Hunting And Fishing Licenses Are Revived

RALEIGH (AP) — Two bills, one of which would increase the cost of hunting and fishing licenses, were revived by the House Wednesday and sent back to committee.

Rep. Hugh Johnson of Duplin, who introduced the measure to boost the cost of hunting and fishing fees, told the House changes were being considered to make the bill more acceptable.

The House defeated the measure Tuesday on second reading by 59-53. The bill proposed to raise state resident hunting licenses from $4.10 to $4.25, combination hunting and fishing licenses from $5.25 to $5.35, and county hunting licenses from $1.10 to $1.25.

The other bill which was revived calls for regulation of water well drillers. It was defeated several days ago.

Meanwhile, the House received a bill which would permit the state's industry hunters to receive higher expense allowances than other state workers.

Under present law, the expense allowance limit for state employees is $12 per day out of state and $9 in the state.

Rep. Rachel Davis of Lenoir introduced a bill that would clear the way for the Kinston City Council to use public funds in attracting a private bus company to begin operations in Kinston.

New legislation included a bill by Rep. Tom Woodard of Wilson to provide the school bus transportation be continued for school children when the area in which they live are annexed by a municipality.

Rep. J. Eugene Snyder and Sen. R. F. Vanlandingham, both of Davidson, introduced bills to appropriate $10,000 for restoration of Daniel Boone homeplace in Davidson County.

The license taxes on commercial fishing boats would be changed under a bill introduced by Rep. D. G. Bell of Carteret. It calls for a $1 tax on boats up to 18 feet without motors, $3 on boats up to 18 feet with motors, 50 cents per foot on boats between 18 and 26 feet, and a tax of 75 cents per foot on boats over 26 feet.

Ex-Dictator Of Peru Out Of Exile, Seeks To Rule Again

LIMA, Peru (AP)—An ex-dictator has returned from self-exile in the United States with the intention of ruling Peru once again. Retired Gen. Manuel A. Odría is an extreme rightist, a friend of Uncle Sam and an enemy of communism and Fidel Castro. He ruled with an iron fist in 1948-56 but built houses, schools and hospitals. Before stepping out, he called free elections and was succeeded by Manuel Prado, whose term expires next year. Under Prado the country has enjoyed a democratic form of government. Within the past six months, it has broken off diplomatic relations with Cuba and passed an anti-Communist law. The presidential elections are still a year away but the campaign is already off to a fast and violent start. And the man most in the headlines is Odría. Riding a campaign jeep into Huancayo, 125 miles east of here, Odría was attacked by a mob of students, using an Inca slingshot, struck Odría just above the left eye with a stone and almost fractured his skull. Stunned and bleeding, he was led into the safety of a hotel. In a bloody clash that followed, seven persons were killed. Scores were injured. Odría charged the attack was executed by his political enemy, the once notorious APRA (American Revolutionary Popular Alliance) party. Odría has not officially announced his candidacy. But that is a formality that can be taken care of later. Only two candidates have publicly announced: Fernando Belaunde Terry, leader of the leftist Popular Action party, and Hector Cornejo Chavez, candidate of the middle-of-the-road Christian Democrats. The key to the elections may well lie in the hands of the APRA party, leftist but anti-Communist. APRA may do what it did in 1956—build up voting strength and then throw it all to the candidate most likely to win and cooperate with APRA. In this case, it might go to Prime Minister Pedro Beltran. He denies he is running but privately is reported actively interested. Beltran belongs to no party. He was appointed prime minister in July 1959 to help Prado straighten out the economy. If Beltran decides to make an open bid, he would probably be a candidate of Prado's Peruvian Democratic Movement party and with APRA support would have an excellent chance to win. Avoid the mistake of using a single lamp to light a reading area, leaving the rest of the room dark. The contrast between the dark and lighted areas will cause eyestrain and fatigue.

Alaska Has Its Own Pageant Of Dramatic Past

JUNEAU — Alaska may have a distinction unique among the states of the Union. The 49th State, as far as is known now, will not schedule a Civil War Centennial pageant of any kind. Reason, of course, is that while all the fighting was going on down south, Alaska was still under the jurisdiction of czarist Russia. But pageants Alaska will have—and one of the most outstanding not only in Alaska but in the nation, if last year's critics are any judge, will be "Cry of the Wild Ram," an historical pageant which will be produced in Anchorage July 21-22 and 28-29. This year's presentation written and directed by Alaskan Frank Brink, will be the second annual production of the story of Alexander Baranov. Baranov left Russia in 1791 to manage the North American operations of a Russian trading company and stayed on thru near-mutiny and Indian massacres — to become "Lord of Alaska" as described by Hector Chivigny in his book of the same name. The pageant drew rave notices from visitors and Alaskans alike last year. Covering the period 1791 through 1818, the drama features a cast of more than 40 plus dancers and chorus. The pageant's producers point out that Alaska visitors who come to see the drama may enjoy taking side trips out of Anchorage to visit the actual location of several of the scenes depicted — particularly Kodiak and points on the Kenai Peninsula. Travelling by air to Anchorage, the visitor may stop off at Ketchikan or Juneau to take a side trip to Sitka, which became the capital of Baranov's Russian America.

Blackout Blamed On Bird's Nest

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — A bird's nest high atop a light pole caused a blackout at a Sarasota-Leeburg Florida State League baseball game. The next caused a malfunction in the lights Monday night and the game was held up an hour and 23 minutes until a splice could be made. Tuesday electricians found the next, with three birds in it, and transferred it to a more suitable location.

Query In Alleged Market Manipulation

EDITOR'S NOTE—The Securities and Exchange Commission last week announced it will investigate the American Stock Exchange in the wake of charges of price rigging and illegal stock sales by two of its important members. This is the second of four articles summarizing the situation. The author, Frank Corrier, reports financial affairs in Washington for The Associated Press.

American Exchange II
By FRANK CORRIER
WASHINGTON (AP) — Did Jerry and Gerard Re enlist any fellow members of the American Stock Exchange as willing helpers to their alleged massive manipulations of that important market? This is a question which investigators from the Securities and Exchange Commission presumably will try to answer as they probe the "rules, policies, practices and procedures" of the exchange, the second largest in New York City and the nation.

SEC lawyers already have stated that some exchange members, wittingly or not, aided the Res by purchasing certain stocks at strategic times. Only one member has been named in this connection, however, and no action has been taken against him.
The Res, father and son, have been expelled from the exchange by the SEC, which held they illegally peddled nearly $10 million in stocks in rigged markets between 1954 and 1960.
Now the SEC is inspecting the exchange itself to see if it gives investors adequate protection.

Edward T. McCormick, president of the exchange, says the inquiry is welcomed and recent reforms will discourage anyone from trying to imitate the Res.
Because the Res got away with so much for so long, the SEC proposes to find out for itself. The agency is doubly concerned because the Res were no ordinary exchange members. They were stock specialists, operating at the very heart of the market.
As specialists, the Res were responsible for maintaining fair and orderly trading in about 20 stocks. They conducted the daily auctions in these securities.
According to the SEC brief in the case, the two men prostituted their vital role and did "many millions of dollars of harm to thousands of unsuspecting investors."
The brief said they got help from exchange floor traders — members who speculate for their own account.
"Floor traders could and did create the appearance of trading activity by 'ganging up' on a stock which the Res were distributing," the brief said.
Edward J. Garrett, vice president of the Loral Electronics Corp., gave the SEC testimony that financier Jennis M. Doroshaw once told him "there were many other people on the floor" working with Jerry Re in one alleged manipulation. Doroshaw denied this.

The reported manipulation occurred Oct. 25, 1954 and involved the common stock of Thompson-Starrett Co., Inc. The stock closed that day at a two-year high of $4.25 a share. Trading was unusually heavy at 42,400 shares.
"At least 34 per cent of that volume," according to the brief, "can be traced to exchange members or their wives."
This document also stated that the closing sale at the $4.25 high was to a floor trader.
A number of exchange members made purchases at 12 1/2 cents a share below the day's lowest shares, he briefly said. It reported this was only one of a number of transactions in which Marks bought or sold Re stocks at rising prices while the specialists were engaged in their alleged manipulations.
Marks last year was hired by the Res at $200 a week to help run their business while they were sidelined by the exchange, pending a SEC decision in their case. He is continuing as a specialist in the stocks they once handled.

No charges were filed against Marks in the Re case.
In discussing price rigging, the brief said the Res also used several methods to push up stock prices by "painting the tape"—creating the appearance of trading activity to whet the public appetite.
The brief said they spread rumors that certain stocks were sure to skyrocket. They wined and dined brokers and fed them a side order of hot tips. They had friends and acquaintances make strategic purchases.
Bernard (Toots) Shor, the New York restaurateur, bought 1,000 shares of Thompson-Starrett after Jerry Re touted the stock at a testimonial dinner for Vincent F. Aano Jr., a Republican leader on Manhattan's East Side. Aano bought 10,000.
Others who took investment shares from Jerry Re included some of his good friends in the baseball world: Chuck Dressen, manager of the Milwaukee Braves and Cookie Lavagetto, manager of the Minnesota Twins.

The brief said the stocks which the Res sold illegally were obtained from corporation officials who, it claimed, wanted to dispose of large blocks without registering them with the SEC, as normally required by law. These officials usually were willing to sell in private deals at prices below those prevailing in the market, the brief added.
Shares moved from corporation insiders to accounts in various names—accounts which the SEC contends were controlled and maintained for the benefit of the Res. Then they moved from these accounts to the floor of the exchange, where they were sold to the general public at high prices. The SEC brief said well over one million shares traveled this route "at a profit which must be of similar magnitude."

The losers, it said, were the many public investors "who had every reason to expect that the exchange market in which they dealt was honest and fair."

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Hormones and hearts, a diagnostic test in burns, and dangers from human bites figure in the medical news:
Hormone Protection?
A new synthetic male sex hormone apparently can reduce the amount of cholesterol and other fats circulating in the blood, a physician reports. Whether this actually reduces the risk of having a heart attack is not yet proven.
But it provides an interesting possible new approach toward preventing heart attacks, says Dr. Donald Berkowitz of Philadelphia. The synthetic hormone, oxmetholone, is only half as masculinizing as the natural male sex hormone. So, Dr. Berkowitz wondered whether it might protect men against blood fats and artery clogging much like the female sex hormone is believed to do for women. The hunch appears correct, he says, and maybe this or other hormones can point the way toward greater protection.
Burn Test
The 5-year-old girl was badly burned, with burns covering half her body. Doctors used a standard test—injection of a blue dye—to determine how much blood she had lost. But the test also told them something new—which areas of skin were so badly burned that they would not recover later, and so had to be covered with skin grafts. The blue color spread to

(The other—and even more satisfying—half you'll discover the first time you drive a Corvair!)

And when we say "low price," we mean more than merely the pint-sized figure on the window sticker of a new Corvair. You're going to be saving like sixty on gas. And on the antifreeze you won't buy next winter, and the radiator repairs you'll never have to pay for. ## Fear Holiday To See Toll Of 100

CHICAGO (AP)—The National Safety Council estimated today as many as 100 persons might be killed in traffic over the Memorial Day holiday. The estimate, which the council stressed was not a prediction of that many deaths, covers those occurring in the 30-hour period between 6 p.m. local time Monday and midnight Tuesday. The last one-day Memorial Day holiday was in 1957 when the traffic-death toll was 94. The 15-year high for a comparable Memorial Day holiday was 109 in 1956. The low was 81 in 1951.

Congress Considers Probe Inflatable Plane Dispute

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., said today he has asked the Navy to halt the transfer of Capt. Cooper B. Bright until Congress can investigate Bright's dispute with certain admirals over an inflatable plane project.

Flood, member of the House subcommittee handling defense appropriations, told a reporter he has so written to Secretary of Navy John B. Connally.

He said he told Connally the veteran Navy captain's transfer should be set aside "until such time as responsible congressional committees can examine the project further on its merits" and until it can be determined whether the transfer "could be attributed to this operation."

Bright, 52, who once headed a Navy-industry study of the inflatable plane concept, said Wednesday that on orders from superiors last November he destroyed data on a new version designed to take off straight up from virtually any kind of ship.

At the same time, he said, he was directed to talk to nobody about the matter — an order he said was relaxed in February to allow off-duty conversations.

Bright contended the novel inflatable plane idea was suppressed. He attributed this to some admirals who he said feared it posed a threat to the future of carriers.

During testimony before House committees last year, Bright clashed with Vice Adm. John T. Hayward, deputy chief of naval operations for development. Hayward said he rejected the project and defended his action as "a sound technical decision."

Bright said that during this time he was told by Adm. James S. Russell, vice chief of naval operations, to stop pushing the project.

The Navy had no comment Wednesday on Bright's charges.

The balding, heavy-set captain said that last month—three days after making a formal new pitch for the project to Connally and Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, chief of naval operations—he was ordered to report in June to a new post as inspector of Navy material in San Francisco.

Bright regards this assignment as just about the end of the line.

He now is attached to Navy's logistic war plans branch, where he was moved more than a year ago after being relieved as project officer on the inflatable plane study.

Bright said he decided to make a presentation on what he said was a promising vertical takeoff aspect of the inflatable plane concept—after hearing Connally tell Navy and Marine officers "to move your ideas out in the open with boldness and courage."

Attached to that presentation, a copy of which was made available

Familiar TV Shows To Be Leaving Scene

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The television channels are due for drastic dredging operations during the summer and when the new season opens in September the viewers are sure to miss some of their old favorites.

Network schedules for fall are now pretty well filled and, by my count, at least 38 weekly entertainment programs out of some 109 current shows will be among the missing.

Among them, according to present plans, will be such established, long-playing favorites as the Groucho Marx, Ernie Ford, Loretta Young, June Allyson and Shirley Temple shows.

Death, as it must, will visit "This Is Your Life," a herd of horse-operas, too, will move onto that big corral in the sky. "Wyatt Earp," "Bat Masterson," "Stagecoach West," "The Deputy," "The Rebel," "Gunslinger" and "Whispering Smith."

Mortality will be high among the situation comedies, too. Departing are "The Tom Ewell Show," "Bringing Up Buddy," "The Tab Hunter Show," "Peter Louis Mary," and "Guestward Ho."

"Peter Gunn" disappears after three seasons; "Michael Shayne" after one. The end too, is in sight

NEW YORK (AP) — A moderate stock market recovery move was dampened early this afternoon by continued weakness in American Telephone, Du Pont and General Motors. Trading was routine.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was unchanged at 249.50 with industrials up .10, rails off .10 and utilities off .30.

Steels were up on generally optimistic statements from steel industry leaders. A higher tone prevailed among chemicals, coppers and airlines. Electrical equipments were off. Tobacco and drugs were mixed.

AT&T was off 2½ at the start but cut the loss and traded at 120¼ for a loss of 1½ early in the afternoon.

Du Pont was off 1½ at 208 and GM was down ¾ at 44.

American Airlines rose a point. American Machine & Foundry advanced a point. McDonnell Aircraft rose 1½, Avnet Electronics gained 1½, and Douglas Aircraft was up 1½.

Big Three motors fell fractionally. International Telephone, U.S. Steel and Lorillard were fractional gainers.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 1.42 at 695.10. Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds were firm.

Budget . . .

The commissioners all have stated their feelings that the rapid exodus from county positions is expensive since the county must train its workers.

Through last night's session, the five commissioners had waded through less than one-fourth of the total budget request. They stated another budget session for next Wednesday night in the commissioners' room of the courthouse.

The total request, prepared by county auditor H. Reginald Gray, represents a 2.66-cent tax increase hike from the two-year-old $1.23 ad valorem rate. Still, the commissioners have expressed the feeling they can provide various budget increases and keep the tax rate constant.

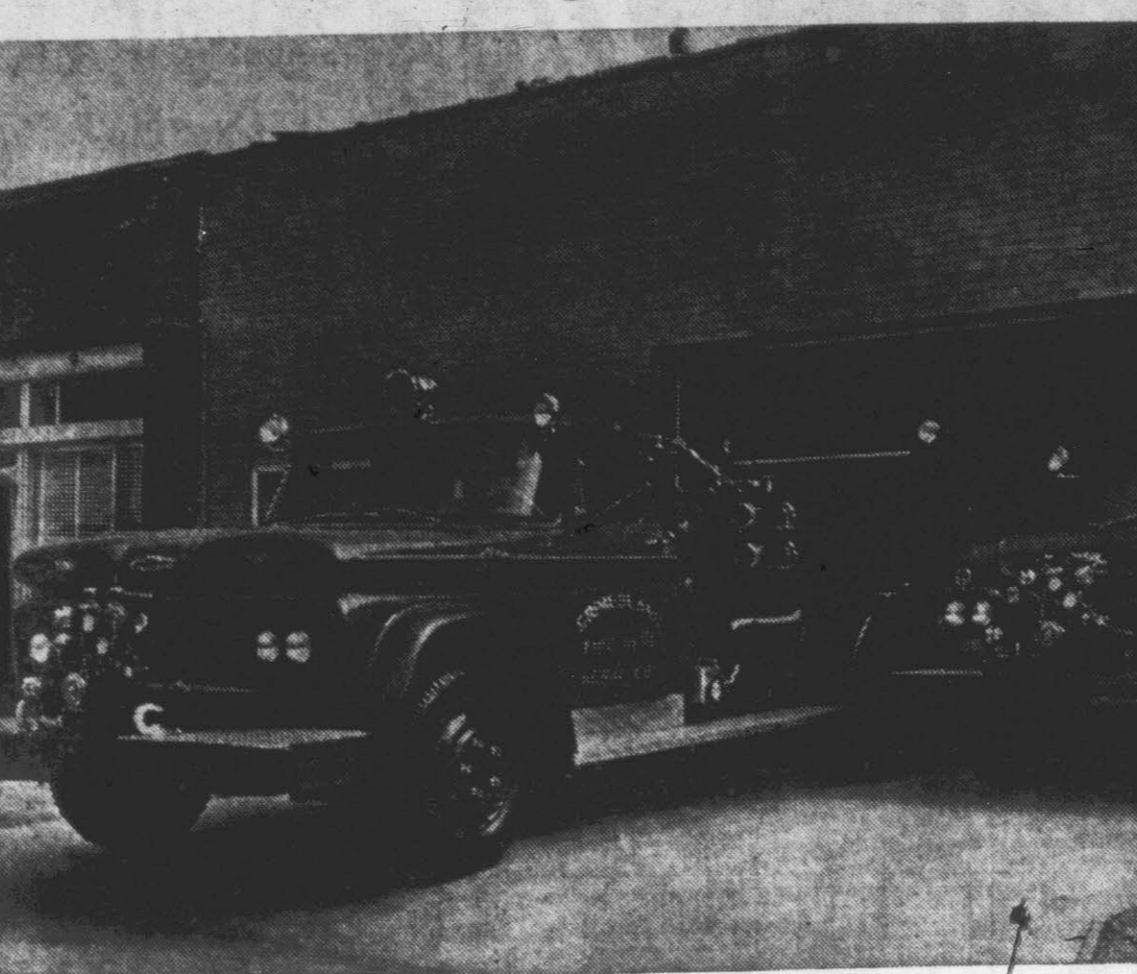

This fiscal year, the county will draw ad valorem levies from a tax valuation of above $85.5 million—nearly $2.5 million higher than the $83,175,925 last year.

The higher valuation, according to Gray, will allow for moderate budget increases without raising the tax rate.

Preliminary budget action is only tentative. The commissioners will attempt to finalize the entire budget as close to July 1 as possible.

In another matter brought before the board last night, the commissioners voted an appropriation of $125 to purchase a surplus tractor-trailer unit to be used in hauling surplus foods into the county.

Grimesland Raising Firetruck Money

NEW RURAL FIRE TRUCK . . . has arrived in Grimesland and is ready to go into use. A fund raising campaign is still underway to pay for the truck and equipment. Those who contribute are entitled to protection for the life of the truck, which is usually about 15 years or more. (Photo by Roy Hardee)

GRIMESLAND — Grimesland's rural fire truck arrived Saturday, and since then a concentrated fund-raising drive has been launched by members of the rural company of the Grimesland Volunteer Fire Department.

The truck is being housed in Grimesland, along with the urban truck, at the Grimesland Fire Department. The truck is a 1961 model, equipped to carry 500 gallons of water. It has a 500-gallon front mounted pump with two inch-and-a-half lines which are pre-connected and one booster reel. Pre-connected hose will save time which otherwise might be spent in connecting.

Standard ladders, extinguishers and axes are also contained on the fire truck.

The truck was used yesterday in a solicitation drive. Cost of the truck and equipment was about $7,500. Some $4,000 remains to be raised to completely pay for the truck and equipment.

Those wishing to join the membership of the rural company, which will serve the area around Grimesland, may contribute $5 per building of tobacco barn size and larger. For this contribution, persons are entitled to fire protection.

This contribution is made just once and endures for the life of the present fire truck. A fire truck is generally in use for 15 years or longer.

Those who do not participate in the membership drive will be afforded fire protection in case of fire but will be assessed $50 plus the joining fee at the regular rates.

Following the first fire, if these people choose to ignore both payments, fire protection will be discontinued for them.

Similar plans for rural fire companies have been followed by other communities. Those who pay for cost or equipment and the truck are entitled to protection. Those who do not are given protection for the first fire, and if they choose not to pay the $50 fee, they cannot be entitled to further protection.

The Grimesland Fire Department has been incorporated according to North Carolina law, it was reported today. The incorporation papers arrived last week.

An urban company of volunteers will serve the town of Grimesland while the rural volunteer company will serve the surrounding areas in case of fire.

Those in need of fire equipment may contact the Grimesland Town Hall at PL 2-637 and give their names and addresses.

L. E. Tetterton has been elected to serve as chief of the rural company.

Volunteer firemen are those who contribute their time and services without pay.

Good Turnout At Safety Lanes

Voluntary vehicle safety inspection lanes, being sponsored by the Pitt County Safety Council, were in operation in Ayden, Bethel and Farmville today, and council officers said the turnout was "good".

One safety-check lane was operated in each of the towns, to check safety equipment, such as lights, horn, brakes, tires, and windshield wipers, on vehicles.

Local auto dealers cooperated with law enforcement officers and the Pitt Safety Council in operating the lanes, where a mechanic was on duty at all times with officers and other lane workers.

The Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company of Greenville supplied the lanes with free drinks to be given to motorists who had their vehicles checked.

Luther Moore, chairman of the council and chairman of the council-sponsored safety-check lanes, reported that the four lanes, which were to be operated in Greenville, Tuesday were closed due to the weather, but will be rescheduled for a later date.

Moore said, however, that indications are that the lanes will be very successful here when they are run. He explained that one of the four lanes was run for a short time before it closed and checked 53 cars.

Moore urged all drivers to take advantage of the inspection lanes when they are opened, saying the lanes are for the vehicle owners benefit, by letting him know that his vehicle's safety devices are in good order or are faulty.
