Citing The Worst Eventualities

Last week it was tentatively decided the battleship USS North Carolina would have a crew of ten when enshrined at Wilmington.

In wartime the big warship carried a crew of something over 2,000 men and officers; but that figure is thrown in as a measure of comparison and to demonstrate that as crews go, the contemplated staff is something more than "Skeletonized".

The tentative decision we fear will prove woefully inadequate.

If the North Carolina is open to visitors a mere eight hours each day, seven days a week, its "crew" will of necessity put in a full day's work serving merely as guides and guards during visiting hours. Escorting the presumed hundreds who will tour the ship each day, will be a fulltime job.

And there's another role—either politely or inadvertently overlooked. That of simply "standing watch".

Taking human nature at its worst, let's pause for a moment to cite the worst possible eventualities which may confront the guards of the North Carolina.

Small children, big children and childish adults have a lamentable trait of testing doorknobs, chains, levers, gears and yes, even the armor plating.

They will wander off into dark recesses and climb atop turrets and into some of the most improbable places aboard ship. Locks and signs and chains intended to bar visitors from specific areas will need guards if only to see they are not removed by souvenir hunters.

Anything that can be broken, is going to be broken. Anything that can be wrenched off, is going to be wrenched off.

Each day will see litter strewn over the decks, paint scraped with initials and names, woodwork carved, bits of sandwiches, apple cores, orange peelings, broken balloons and heaven-knows-what-all left in unlikely places. Just removing discarded chewing gum is something we bet hasn't figured in future plans.

And the boat slip in which the battleship will be presumably moored is another potential problem. Signs may be expected to read "Please Don't Throw Trash In The Water"; and readers will not see the "Don't".

A crew of only ten? The North Carolina will need more than that number to protect it from its excited visitors; and the maintenance and cleaning-up work will call for another special detail.

Piedmont Has Its Side, Too

By LYNN NISBET

VOTING RATION—The arguments over congressional redistricting have been punctuated with recriminations exchanged between eastern and up-state Democrats. Although there is a small element of fact in the accusations, they are for the most part unfair and very unkind.

The easterners demand special consideration for that they have through the years turned in consistent Democratic majorities, while the up-state counties have strayed into Republican columns with respect to the national ticket.

The Piedmont residents counter with the charge that easterners fail in their duty, for that they do not vote anything like the same ratio of population as do the central and western counties.

Both statements are true, but both are unfair in the light of all the facts. Certainly the eastern counties have given heavy Democratic majorities against relatively insignificant Republican strength. But the record will show that middle and western counties of comparable population have contributed about as many votes to the Democratic candidates as did the eastern counties, although at the same time giving more votes to the Republicans. County majorities were less or reversed, but the value of upstate votes in the total compilation is equal to that of the eastern votes.

The four big counties of Forsyth, Gaston, Guilford and Mecklenburg gave substantial majorities to the Republican candidate for President last year. But without the approximate 100,000 votes in those counties for Kennedy, all the votes of the east would have been wasted.

POPULATION—The record fully supports the claims of the up-state counties that they turn out a much larger percentage of the total population on election day. There are circumstances which, although they do not destroy factual validity of the claim, tend to deprive it of virtue. The same circumstances tend to alleviate the odium which upstaters put upon the east for that the population decrease which occasioned loss of a seat in the Congress occurred mostly in the east.

For some years the Negro population in North Carolina has represented about 30 percent of the total. Your reporter has not seen a racial breakdown on the 1960 count. It probably will be not more than 27 percent Negro. Except for a few metropolitan industrial centers the Negro population has been concentrated in the tobacco belt of the middle east. Several counties in that area have from 50 percent to 65 percent of the total population of the colored race. Very

One Custom That We Might Adopt In U. S.

There's a custom in another part of the world that has been repeatedly called to our attention with appearances of Premier Nikita Khrushchev on the American TV screens.

That would be the custom of "reciprocal applause"—we can think of no more apt name. It involves the honored individual (or group), on receiving a generous hand from an assemblage to applaud them too.

The gesture has an appealing side, denoting as it does, a measure of mutual admiration and appreciation; but more than that, the applause reverses the accepted practice of receiving and giving nothing in return. The warmth, this generates is multiplied.

Initial reaction on seeing Mr. Khrushchev applaud his applauders appeared at first a case of approving the good judgment of his audience in applauding him. But since the custom has become more and more familiar to us it has become increasingly appreciated.

Nearest thing to the Russian custom that we can offhand recall, would be the prizefighter's clapping of hands over his head in a gesture of acknowledgement. Entertainers are prone to bow—politicians and candidates may wave one or both arms; which can signify almost anything.

We're more than half-inclined to think that someday an applauded American will turn and emulate the Russian custom with applause for his audience.

From that day on, it is quite probable the general trend will set in.

First TV Talk To The Nation

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—As President Kennedy's White House term lengthened, this question repeatedly was being asked around Washington: When is he going to make his first nationwide TV talk?

He already had used three of the four main ways open to a president for getting his ideas across to the people: televised news conferences, messages to Congress and television speeches at special events.

It was assumed that Kennedy, acutely aware of a president's need for broad public support, would make a TV broadcast sooner or later.

It also was assumed that, because Kennedy is an extremely shrewd political tactician, he would make the broadcast when he was in the best position for it.

He was in a very good position for it Tuesday, perhaps better than at any time since he became president.

He was fresh back from his meetings with President Charles de Gaulle, Premier Khrushchev and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. The country is still interested enough to want to know what good, if any, came from the conferences.

So, while attempting to answer this, Kennedy also got his own foreign policy ideas across on the big issues.

He can do this now without being on the defensive—as he would have been, for instance, if he took to TV to explain his advance approval of the disastrous Cuban invasion—or without irritating any particular part of the American society.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, in his first term, took to TV earlier than Kennedy. He made a nationwide TV-radio broadcast on May 19, 1953, to explain why people couldn't expect an income tax cut right away.

This must have carried some element of disappointment for a lot of people at the time. So Eisenhower's talk, in a sense, was an effort to persuade the public to grin and bear it.

There can hardly be much disappointment in Kennedy's talk Tuesday—about his conferences abroad, particularly with De Gaulle and Khrushchev—since no one expected any big solutions or little ones, either.

Kennedy wasn't expected to say anything new on foreign policy. Since taking office his policy—standing stiff against the Russians—has been essentially the same as that of Presidents Eisenhower and Truman.

So, in talking to a nation which knows the broad outline of American policy and supports it, Kennedy was asking for continuance of the same support for the same policy given his predecessors.

Kennedy actually is repeating what Eisenhower did after his first meeting with Khrushchev in July 1953. He came right back and made a TV report to the nation.

But he made a mistake which Kennedy, benefiting by his predecessor's experience, did not repeat. Eisenhower raised hopes that things might be better as a result of the meeting.

He said there was a realization that negotiations could now be conducted without "propaganda and threat and invective." Within a few months American-Russian relations went down hill fast.

Eisenhower must have regretted his optimism five years later when Khrushchev, who had been rattling his rockets for some time, broke up the second summit with propaganda and invective because of the U.S. spy-plane shot down over Russia.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

FACE NEW TRUTH
There are people in the world who might be called "offbeats." This is a musical term, but it is also being applied today to people who step out of line, who insist on thinking for themselves, who see things which others do not see and hear things which others do not hear. The offbeats are the people who make great discoveries.

The prophets of Israel were offbeats. Socrates was an offbeat. So were Columbus and Galileo. The Puritans were offbeats. Practically all the great inventors were men who stepped outside limits which orthodox science had erected and insisted on finding reality beyond such limits. Usually they were criticized. Sometimes they were persecuted. But the offbeats have been people who have led us into new ways of thinking. They have made the great scientific discoveries. Pasteur was an offbeat. The scientific world roared with laughter over the fact that he attributed certain diseases to the presence of minute substances which he called germs. This was indeed a big laugh.

Frantic, But Couldn't

Just before press time yesterday, we tried rather frantically to learn something about the progress or results or the fate of the East Carolina College baseball squad in Sioux City.

As you know by now, the Bucs came through with flying colors by downing their first opponent in the eight-team national tournament.

But, like we said, at press time yesterday we didn't know all that. Still, while we couldn't uncover any clues as to what was going on out there, we did learn one thing.

Time bells and zones can most certainly be confusing. In fact, varying hours in different belts can be so confusing that we never could even decide what time the Bucs were to take the field.

Our sports staffer in Sioux City wired us the first in a series of reports on the tourney. In it, he said the first ECC game would begin at 11 a.m., Central Standard Time.

Our thought, then, was that 11 a.m. out there—one belt west of us—would be one hour later here. Or 112 noon. But, what if Sioux City were far enough north to be on Daylight Saving Time? That would cause another hour of fluctuation in the time of day. In the rush of going to press and the confusion of trying to decide what time the ECC game was to get underway, we reported, I believe, the Pirates would take the field at 10 a.m. (?)

To be frank, I'm still not sure what time that ball game started.

On the same subject—national baseball tournaments: It is entirely possible that Tar Heel college baseball squads may wrap up the intercollegiate baseball crown in undisputed fashion.

In addition to the Pirates' endeavors to win the NAIA affair (and they're off to a good start), Duke University is an entry in the NCAA tourney.

If both should be successful in their respective quests of college baseball, they would join Wilmington Junior College—the national junior college champion in the winners' circle.

East Carolina was faced with a tough assignment at 7 p.m. today. After subduing their first tourney foe, the Pirates were to face Sam Houston State, the tournament's top-seeded team.

One of Houston's pitchers threw the first no-hitter in the five-year-old tourney's history at an Ohio college Tuesday.

If the Bucs can defeat Houston, they'll be in the driver's seat out there.

Other Editors Saying The Tax Load

(Washington Daily News)

It is true that many people who do not now pay much taxes will have to pay them if the food tax is passed. This is the group least able to pay, but in matters of taxes, it is generally an accepted axiom that the same people usually pay the taxes regardless of the rate.

Insofar as the money to the state is concerned, it makes little difference whether the three present sales tax now used is increased to four or whether the food tax is instituted along with other selected exemptions. The same people will be the beneficiaries of the use to which the taxes are put.

There is much sentiment both pro and con regarding a tax on food. Those who say that this is the only way to collect taxes out of a certain element of the population do have a good argument. But to say that the element which benefits most out of the proposals to spend the money is the poorer element is not exactly true. All elements benefit.

The rich man's son goes to public schools even though the father is able to pay for private schooling. The poor man's son also goes to public schools. Both children benefit in probably the same way and to the same degree.

It can be said generally speaking that the rich man will buy more luxuries than will the poor man. He buys more because he can afford to do so. Then if the sales tax rate is increased to four percent from its present base of three percent, to that extent the rich man will be taking on an added tax burden that the poor man cannot afford.

There is no way to shift the tax load so that everyone in North Carolina pays exactly according to his ability to pay. This legislature is faced with the task of raising many millions of extra dollars so that our educational processes can be strengthened. It no longer is a matter of to do or not to do. It is only a matter now of where to place the tax load.

The arguments on the food tax versus the four percent tax funds Governor Sanford aligned squarely behind the food tax proponents. And as of this writing, it would seem more than an even bet that we'll maintain the three percent tax rate on sales in North Carolina while removing exemptions on food and several other items.

The point we are driving toward right here, as it appears to us, is this. Whether the food tax plan passes or whether the legislature enacts a four percent sales tax, the average North Carolinian will be paying about the same amount of taxes. There will not be enough difference either way for him to recognize the difference.

Removing the food and other exemptions will tend to spread out the load a little more. Uping the sales tax to four percent tends to keep a smaller group numerically paying the taxes.

Within a few days the matter is likely to be decided. North Carolinians will not feel the impact until July 1. Then when they go to the store, either way, food tax or a four percent tax, the consumer will begin to feel the added pinch. Then in the months ahead, we'll begin to know just how much the people want to pay for quality education.

Alcoholism 'Cure' Challenged

By ELMER ROESSNER

With the whole nation searching for a cure for alcoholism, it seems a shame that the Federal Trade Commission concluded that "Soberin" will not reform the drunkards. In fact, it has filed a complaint against one Maurice Van Dyne, trading as Soberin Aids Co., Brooklyn.

The FTC challenges his claims that persons taking his potion for five days will be cured of alcoholism. It also accuses him of falsely advertising that Soberin and the technique for its use is a new scientific discovery; that it overcomes the desire for liquor, and that it will cure alcohol addiction so completely that it will no longer interfere with one's business or social life.

As a matter of fact, the FTC says Soberin is nothing more than an emetic with syrup of ipecac as its principal ingredient. The medical profession, the FTC says, has long mixed ipecac in alcoholic beverages, causing the alcoholic to become so sick he never wants to taste alcohol—or ipecac—again.

CAN'T CURE MENTAL DISTURBANCES

"It cannot be claimed that an alcoholic will be cured after using Soberin for five days because there are many causes of alcoholism, some of which are psychiatric and cannot be treated by the use of the conditioned reflex or 'aversion' technique," the FTC charges. "Using the product is not an easy way to overcome the desire for liquor, and since its use contemplates nausea and vomiting, this would interfere with one's business or social life."

"Since there are some causes of alcoholic addiction which cannot be cured by Soberin, it cannot be said that the product will cure so completely that addiction will no longer interfere with one's business or social life."

That last sentence would seem to imply that there may be causes of alcoholic addiction that can be cured by Soberin. LONG KNOWN The ipecac kicker has long been used to bust out alcoholics. There are several sanitariums that have used it in connection with vitamin therapy and other treatments. Two of my friends went to one such resort. The treatment, apparently ipecac and vitamins, continued for three weeks. At the end of the course, patients were assured they could not stand a drink for two years, after which they should return for a one-week "refresher" course. Both men stayed dry for two years, failed to return and again began putting their feet on the third rail. Since then both have sobered; one because he found out what he was running away from, the other because a session in a hospital put the fear of death into him.

Enough of this small talk. There is a possibility that the Van Dyne case can become a classic.

Suppose, for instance, that Van Dyne brings 100 boozers before the FTC and demands a test of Soberin. He could ask that the hundred be put in government hospitals and, under test conditions, be pled with Soberin according to the directions on the bottle.

Then, after five days, the hundred could be brought before a full bank of Federal Trade

Farley Speaks In Anger

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

No more kindly person exists upon this planet than Big Jim, better known to the lesser folk as James A. Farley, who was among his sins, responsible for making Franklin D. Roosevelt President of the United States. In recent years, Big Jim has been selling Coca-Cola outside of the United States and has been making speeches all over the place. He is usually applauded enthusiastically even if he rises only to take a bow.

Rarely angry about things, Big Jim enjoys his way of life, continues to make friends, continues to travel and is never lonely.

Unlike Herbert Hoover, Jim Farley remains a partisan American without too much regard for political parties and he speaks as kindly of Harry Truman and John Kennedy as he does of his erstwhile Republican colleagues. Jim Farley remains a Democrat; supports his party and despises mugwumps who slide hither and yon wherever the provoker is best.

So, James Farley went down to San Antonio, Texas, and told an audience:

"But neither the Greeks nor the Franks nor ourselves ever before faced the mortal challenge which confronts us today in world Communism. Tens of millions of graves and thousands of concentration camps prove conclusively that the Communists place less value on the human spirit than did Attila the Hun. Space rockets and spinning satellites prove that our enemy intends to borrow every technical advance of Western civilization to destroy the spiritual values which produced these self-same material advances. Worse still, not being bound by our humanitarian and spiritual values—with unparalleled cunning—the Communist enemy has used the symbols of faith, hope and charity to subvert and destroy those values in the human heart itself."

This is the strongest language I have ever heard James Farley use. Then he said: "Let us not pay tribute to the enemy's zeal; that is only half the story of his success. The other half we have contributed through our folly, our childlike ineptitude and our outright appeasement."

These are important two sentences for the President to bear in mind during his visit with Khrushchev in Vienna. For after all, it is as easy to give away as to be taken. Who is to say that Franklin D. Roosevelt was taken by Stalin at Teheran; yet today we know that the losses of the United States at that Conference were enormous and the fact that none of them were incorporated in a treaty does not make the loss less. In fact, Farley denounces policies and attitudes for which Democrats were more responsible than Republicans although both sides pursued the same course. He says further:

"It was the incredible theory of the leaders of the West that our great strength frightened the Communists. To accommodate the supposed fears of the enemy, we disbanded our forces; demobilized our armies; dismantled our air arm; mothballed our fleet. The Communists at once expanded into the power vacuum we had left. Country after country fell before their unopposed forces."

Coming from James Farley, this attack upon the policies of General Marshall and Secretary of State Dean Acheson policies is startling. It can only mean that in 1961 what seemed to be right in the 40's has proved itself wrong and that some men are capable of recognizing error no matter where it originates. It is true that John Foster Dulles attempted to undo the errors of his predecessor but he could not have succeeded because they were established fait accompli. The Russians had taken advantage of every opportunity and using the Teheran agreements as a base proceeded to commit their outrages legitimately even though inhumanly. It is the legitimacy that must now be brought into question and that can only be done by the public.

ABC System Is Spreading In N.C.

By LYNN NISBET
 RALEIGH—The system of county and municipal operated liquor stores, established under the State ABC laws, is becoming more popular every year.

Since the first ABC stores were authorized in 1935, subject to vote of the people in New Hanover and Pasquotank counties, the plan has grown to where it includes 32 county ABC boards, 10 established municipal boards, and seven elections are pending under authorization of acts of the current General Assembly.

County-wide control boards have been established in Beaufort, Bertie, Carteret, Caswell, Catawba, Chowan, Craven, Cumberland, Dare, Durham, Edgecombe, Halifax, Johnston, Lenoir, Martin, Mecklenburg, Moore, Nash, New Hanover, Onslow, Orange, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Pitt, Rowan, Tyrrell, Vance, Wake, Warren, Washington and Wilson counties.

Pursuant to special legislative acts elections have been held resulting in establishment of liquor stores in the municipalities of Asheville, Clinton, Franklin, Greensboro, Hendersonville, Louisville, Sanford, Southport, Tryon and Winston-Salem. (The Sanford election was authorized early in the current legislative session, was held and carried for the ABC idea, and stores will be opened there in a few days.)

Bills providing for elections in seven other towns have been introduced this year. Elections at Ocean Isle Beach and Long Beach in Brunswick county have been authorized. So have election orders for Burlington and Graham in Alamance county and Hertford in Perquimans county. Bills have been introduced, but have not cleared the legislative mill, calling for ABC elections in Jamestown (Guilford) and Sparta (Alleghany).

An election held in Statesville last Saturday under authority of a 1959 act resulted in defeat of the ABC plan by about 500 margin. The voting has been postponed several times because of technical legal points. When the election was finally held, less than one half the qualified registered voters participated.

Many people are still bitterly opposed to the legal sale of whiskey, regarding it a moral or religious issue. Others accept as fact that some folks are going to buy and drink liquor, regardless of legality of its sale, and consider the problem from the viewpoint of economics—the question of whether the profits from inevitable use will go into the government treasury or into the pockets of bootleggers.

Statistics obtained from the State ABC Board show that since the system of county-operated state-supervised liquor stores were first established in 1935 gross sales through them have amounted to more than a billion dollars. The State tax has ranged from 8% to 10%, and under the current revenue bill it will be 12% on gross sales. That means the State has received during the past 25 years somewhat around $90 million from liquor sales. Counties and municipalities have received approximately the same amount in the average 10% "profit" on sales.

Opponents of the system contend that this is "blood money," while advocates insist it means that public government services have been aided by some $200 million that otherwise would have enriched illegal vendors.

Another interesting fact was discovered by checking with the State ABC board. The gross sales volume of beer and the revenues accruing to State and local governments from its sale, very closely approximates the volume and revenue yield from hard liquor.

Police Fire On Rioting Students

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—Police fired on hundreds of students rioting in downtown Santiago on Tuesday night and four persons were reported wounded seriously.

The rioting, during a two-day nationwide students strike took a grave turn when demonstrators began assaulting police in patrol cars.

The students are demanding that the government reform what they call old-fashioned methods of education.

Krushchev Was Dancing While Kennedy Reported To America

MOSCOW (AP)—While President Kennedy was telling the American people of his somber talks with Nikita Khrushchev, the Soviet premier was dancing the cha cha cha—with President Sukarno of Indonesia.

Back from Vienna in a light-hearted, light-footed mood, the 69-year-old Soviet leader was the life of the party Tuesday night at a celebration for the visiting Indonesian's 60th birthday.

It was the gayest Moscow party in several years and Khrushchev was in his gayest form since he gave up vodka for orange juice. Swept up by the rhythmic beat of a band playing "Indonesia Is Free, Cha Cha Cha," the Soviet premier was out on the dance floor, hand-in-hand with Sukarno.

Khrushchev did a few improvised steps just for laughs, crouching as in the Cossack dance and kicking out his legs. He beat a bongo drum. At another point he grabbed Sukarno's marshal's baton to lead the orchestra.

When the Indonesian president suggested this would cost the Soviet government a new loan, Khrushchev turned his pockets inside out to show they were empty and quipped: "Look, he robs me of everything. He takes everything I have."

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan and other Kremlin chieftains were at the party at the Indonesian Embassy. All of them got into the cavorting except Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who watched from the sidelines.

Nina Khrushchev, who accompanied her husband to Vienna for his talks with President Kennedy, danced a bit, then sat out the rest of the numbers smiling. The closest thing to a mention of politics came when Khrushchev took a dig at one of his favorite straight men—Mikoyan.

As the first deputy premier did a neat turn around the floor in a Caucasian dance, Khrushchev remarked: "You know, we had a meeting of the Central Committee about this and the only reason Mikoyan is allowed to hold his job is because he can dance this dance."

Khrushchev and Sukarno left the party together. Hundreds of Muscovites on the street outside gave them a rousing cheer.

The welfare department also reported 150 persons received aid to the blind payments during the month. Seven persons were removed from the classification of blindness. Four eye operations were performed.

Youth Booked In Killing Another

RAYNHAM, Mass. (AP)—A 16-year-old youth was booked on a murder charge today in the killing of a newspaperboy with a rock Tuesday.

Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis identified the youth as Richard Williams of Raynham. Police Chief Russell Reid said Williams admitted the slaying.

The victim was James Maurice, 11, foster son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert P. Bemis of East Taunton.

Reid said the youth, who lives near the slain boy, told him they had an argument and he picked up a 10-pound rock and struck the boy in the face with it.

The York County (Pa.) Historical Society museum contains the entrance door of the courthouse where the Continental Congress met. The door is all that is left of the old building.

Opposing Factions Still At Odds Over Loans Curb

RALEIGH (AP)—Opposing factions remained at odds today in the row over legislation to regulate North Carolina's small loans industry.

A settlement had appeared in sight following a meeting of the two factions Tuesday morning with Gov. Sanford. Later, however, leaders of both sides said the peace efforts had broken down.

Chief opponents in the battle on small loan legislation are Sen. Jennings King of Scotland and Rep. Roland Braswell of Wayne, sponsor of a small loans bill approved by the House.

King introduced a bill in the Senate which proposes much lower interest rates than those provided in the House-passed measure. The Senate has approved

King's bill.

Braswell said he could not accept the loan interest rates proposed as a basis of settlement. He added, "I was told to take it or leave it. And upon reflection, I decided to leave it."

The House-passed bill calls for a charge of $24 per year on the first $100 loaned, $20 on the second $100 and $16 on the third.

A Senate banking committee had agreed on a bill providing for $18 on the first $100 and $16 on both the second and third. The charge for amounts over $300 would be 6 per cent. Under both bills the small loan ceiling would be $600.

King said the compromise being considered before peace talks broke down called for $9 on the first $100 and $16 on the second and third.

Officers Chosen By Fire Dept.

Hugh Hardee Jr. Monday was elected chief of the Eastern Pines Fire Department.

Hardee has served as president of the fire department during its organizational period. The department recently obtained its first piece of fire equipment.

Judson Porter was elected assistant chief at Monday's meeting held in the Eastern Pines Community building.

Captains elected were: Bobby Stokes, Tommy Elks, J. S. Brown, Raymond Cox and Francis Clark. Noah T. Hardee was named secretary and Linwood E. Hardee will serve as treasurer.

Another department meeting has been set for Wednesday night at 7:30 in the community building. Each captain at that time will name ten men to serve under him. A spokesman said today the department plans to have 40 to 50 volunteers.

The fire truck is presently housed at Hugh Hardee's. It will cover an area in southeastern Pitt County from the Greenville city limits to the Simpson area and to the Winterville area.

Phone numbers to be called in case of a fire are: Noah T. Hardee, PL 8-2605; L. T. Hardee, PL 8-2678; Glenn Hardee, PL 8-1864; Hugh Hardee, PL 8-1828.

Competition Builds Up For Savings And Loans

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—The competition for your savings and the competition for the loans you seek is building up fast today—in the place where you work.

Impressive growth of credit unions in offices and factories is now being challenged by an increasing number of commercial banks also offering on-the-job services.

The banks are out after the estimated 40 per cent of America's 65 million wage earners who make little if any use of bank facilities.

The bank plan, started in the West only three years ago by the Bank of America, now is offered by some 300 banks across the land, with 200 more reported about ready to make the jump into self-service banking.

The in-plant banking facilities are offered in thousands of business establishments with payrolls ranging from 30 to more than 10,000 persons.

The banks are thus moving to meet the challenge by the fastest growing of any of the savings forms—the credit union. More than 12 million workers are members of these worker-run facilities.

The Credit Union National Association reports a membership gain last year of 781,072 with savings up 11.5 per cent to nearly $5 billion. Loans to members rose 16.8 per cent to $4.3 billion. Assets were reported as $5.6 billion, up 11.6 per cent over 1959.

The fast-spreading credit union plan has profited by low operating costs—usually free desk space from the company, much voluntary labor by members, and exemption from federal and most state income taxes. As a result the credit unions usually can pay higher interest on savings and charge less for loans than most out-of-plant competitors.

After several years of striking growth—assets totalled $2.2 billion in 1954, as against $5.6 billion today—the credit unions are now being challenged by the banks on their home ground, the office or factory.

The American Bankers Association is helping members with an operational blueprint. Usually all that's called for is a display rack, supplied by the bank, in some convenient plant or office location. There the worker can get deposit slips, loan application forms, explanatory folders and pre-addressed envelopes.

Talking points of the banks for their form of service is that it appeals to workers who may not want their fellows to know about their financial problems, and that the company isn't involved in any way.

The first school for officer candidates in the Women's Reserve of the U. S. Marine Corps was established in 1943 at Mt. Holyoke College in South Hadley, Mass.

Dr. Finch Finally Goes To Prison
SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)—Dr. Bernard Finch entered San Quentin Prison Tuesday for conspiring with his mistress, Carole Tregoff, in the murder of his wife and declared he loved Carole and still hoped to marry her.

Dr. Finch, 43, refused to talk with newsmen. "I wish they'd just leave me alone," he told Dale Frady, associate warden.

But Frady relayed questions for newsmen and brought back this report: "The answer is yes to all three questions. He still loves Carole; he hopes to correspond with her, and he hopes to marry her."

No comment was forthcoming from Carole, 26, who is serving a life term at the Corona Institution for Women.

Both could become eligible for parole after serving seven years.

People Drinking Sea Water, And Didn't Know It

FREEMONT, Tex. (AP) — Citizens of this Gulf of Mexico town have been drinking sea water since May 3.

But they didn't know until Tuesday that processed salt water was coming out of their faucets. Nobody has complained.

The water is from the first U.S. salt water conversion plant, completed April 7. Costing $1.5 million, it can process a million gallons daily. The cost is $1 per 1,000 gallons or about five times that of water from other sources.

The U.S. Office of Saline Water built the experimental plant.

Freemont pays 20 cents per 1,000 gallons and Dow Chemical Co. 30 cents.

The government hopes to cut the cost to 50 cents per 1,000 gallons.

Plans using various methods to convert brackish water are planned at San Diego, Calif.; Roswell, N.M.; Webster, S.D.; and Wrightsville Beach, N.C.

Heavy Damages Award Reversed

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The biggest award ever made by a Florida jury in a contested damage suit has been reversed by the District Court of Appeals.

A $473,000 judgment was given Lawrence Keegan, 18, after he was paralyzed from the neck down as a result of a dive into shallow water at Miami Beach in 1958.

The St. Paul, Minn., youth claimed the Biltmore Terrace Hotel was negligent in not warning guests that the water was shallow below a four-foot seawall.

But the appeals court Tuesday said "to require a warning under such circumstances would be as ludicrous as requiring a sign on the top of an office building reading, 'Don't jump off here.'"

Order Probe Of Arms Deliveries

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Parliament Tuesday instructed its foreign affairs and security committee to investigate Israeli arms deliveries to foreign countries.

The issue became live after foreign press reports alleging that Israeli-made submachineguns had been resold by Western Germany to Portugal for use in its African territory of Angola. The report has been denied by Bonn authorities.

Bill Eliminating Death Penalty To Undergo Debate

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would virtually eliminate the death penalty in North Carolina comes up for debate in the House Thursday.

House Judiciary One Committee give the bill a "without prejudice" report Tuesday. Such a report means the committee took no stand for or against the measure.

The measure, introduced by Reps. W. C. Harris of Wake and H. P. Taylor Jr. of Anson, would abolish capital punishment, except in cases where a person is convicted of a second capital crime while serving a life term for his first offense.

Meanwhile, the Senate passed on third reading and sent to the House a bill that would permit interest up to 8 per cent on certain loans. Under the measure, 8 per cent interest could be charged only for loans of more than $30,000 for a period of five years or longer.

The House blocked an attempt by Rep. I. Byrd Satterfield of Person to block Gov. Sanford's plan for getting more money for secondary road construction. Satterfield, a strong foe of Sanford's proposed tax on food, offered a resolution to require that any surplus in the state's general fund be used for school improvements.

In other legislative developments:

House members from Northampton, Hertford and Bertie counties introduced a bill to form a tri-county airport authority, which would have the task of building and operating an airport to serve the area.

Rep. S. Bunn Frink of Brunswick introduced a similar bill to permit the towns of Shallotte and Emerald Isle to join in building and operating an airport.

The House gave second reading approval to an amendment which would put curbs on county tax concessions to industry. Under the amendment, all property tax classifications and exemptions would have to be established by the legislature on a uniform statewide basis.

Additions For Community Bldg.

AYDEN—A refrigerator has been installed in the Ayden Community Building, it was revealed yesterday.

Town Manager Cleveland Paylor said an old ice box had been traded for the refrigerator. It is expected that it will be quite a convenience for those using the community building.

Paylor also reported that new venetian blinds for the building will be installed in the auditorium and will match the new paint job, recently completed. The paint was varying shades of green.

Diefenbaker Taking A Dim View Of Refusal By U.S.

OTTAWA (AP)—Prime Minister John G. Diefenbaker was expected to take grave issue with the United States today for blocking shipment by tanker of some Canadian grain sold to Red China.

One informant said Diefenbaker would have "quite a story" to tell Parliament concerning charges the U.S. Treasury has refused to allow an Illinois company to supply portable equipment needed to unload grain-laden tankers in Communist Chinese ports.

The equipment is reported made only in the United States. The U.S. action would not affect shipment of most of the Canadian grain. Freighters are used for the most part and Chinese ports have adequate dockside facilities to unload them.

A U.S. Treasury official in Washington confirmed that shipment of the unloading equipment had been blocked because it was to be installed on ships chartered by the Red Chinese government. The U.S. action, threatening to scuttle Canada's agreement to sell nearly a half billion dollars worth of wheat to hungry Red China, puts a strain on U.S.-Canadian relations in the wake of President Kennedy's visit to Ottawa.

Rotarians Hear R. H. McLawhorn

AYDEN—The Ayden Rotary Club heard a program by Rotarian R. H. McLawhorn Friday night, at their meeting in the Community Building.

McLawhorn discussed the present day concentration on bringing industry into a community. However, he noted that if farming interests were diversified enough, they, too, could do a lot toward enhancing and improving the economics of a community.

One Rotarian noted the presence of a pickle factory in Ayden and the fact that most of the cucumbers and other items which go into the manufacture of pickles come from communities beyond the immediate vicinity.

Bob Lawrence, of Lincolnton, N.J., was a visiting Rotarian. President Wayland McGlohon presided at the meeting.

Canada has agreed to ship famine-threatened Red China 217 million bushels of wheat and 58 million bushels of barley worth an estimated $425,600,000 over the next two years.

Because Chinese ports have no facilities for unloading grain from tankers, those vessels must carry their own unloading devices—units which cost about $12,000 each. A Montreal shipping agent, William H. Moore, reported that the unloading equipment is available only from the Dunbar-Kattie Co. of Batavia, Ill., and that the U.S. had ordered the company not to ship the equipment to Canada.

A spokesman for the Illinois firm said the Treasury told it that "under present U.S. law, supplying the machinery for use in China comes under the category of 'aiding and assisting a potential enemy'."

Margaret Schwartz, acting head of the U.S. Treasury's foreign-assets control office, told a reporter control regulations ban sale of American goods to Chinese Communist interests.

Mrs. Schwartz said the situation was brought to the Treasury's attention last Friday and it got in touch at once with the Illinois firm. She said the company agreed to keep the equipment from being used on the vessels in question and promised to cancel any future shipments.

The United States in 1958 temporarily prevented Canadian subsidiaries of American firms from selling cars and trucks to Red China. In 1959, Aluminum Ltd., which is largely U.S.-owned, held up a million-dollar order for Red China for fear it might lose U.S. customers.

N. C. Hurricane Problem Studied

WASHINGTON, N. C. (AP) — North Carolina news men and broadcasters met here Tuesday with U.S. Weather Bureau officials to iron out problems arising from local misinterpretation of the Weather Bureau's hurricane messages.

The group recalled that the advisories on Hurricane Donna last year were interpreted to mean the storm would spare the state. Instead, it swept inland, surprising many residents and causing heavy loss.

Ashley Fretwell, publisher of the Washington Daily News and president of the North Carolina Press Association, said that newspapers published editorials critical of the Weather Bureau but that they are now satisfied that local interpretation of the bureau's message was a main cause of the trouble. Broadcasters present also admitted their local interpretations of the Donna advisory resulted in varying advice to their listeners. In return, Weather Bureau officials described new devices to be used in hurricane reporting and also said they will try to "say it better" — phrase the advisories so that they are not subject to misinterpretation.

Bethel's Board Studies Services

BETHEL—Discussion of town board members last night centered on services for the newly an-nexed area north of Bethel. At their regular meeting, the members discussed extension of the waterline to the area. Mayor Joe Butterworth said all the materials have been ordered for extension of the waterline and that workmen plan to start on the line as soon as the pipe arrives. All the materials have arrived with the exception of the pipe.

Virginia Electric Power Co. engineers have been working on the new street lights that will be placed in the new area. Street lights should be installed "very shortly" the mayor commented.

The annexation process was completed about three weeks ago, with final approval of the move by the N. C. General Assembly. Mayor Butterworth said that "The people of Bethel are happy to welcome the new people into town." Other services of the town have already been extended to the area, including garbage pickup. In other business, the Town Board authorized payment of the town's bills.

CHAPTER 16
Captain Miles Standish shot a duck one day, but he ate it himself. There was not a morsel of fresh meat for the scurvy patients, who numbered fourteen, crammed into a dim bay that was located forward in the Mayflower, just below the galley. Sal Boyd, lacking other duties, often helped to nurse these men and women.

All talk was of the next journey of exploration, which would set forth the following day, as soon as the shallop was launched and rigged, and which would be under orders not to return without a site. This trip must be decisive. The plan was to explore the whole inside of the bay, if necessary, but in particular to examine the place that John Smith had designated on his map as New Plymouth. The longboat was about to start back for shore, and the men who were going on this trip were storing their gear aboard of it. Sal Boyd had no gear, but he knew he'd be going, and he would be ready. He had borrowed a whetstone, and now he sat in the waist, slowly and lovingly putting a razor edge on his knife. They'd need real men on this jaunt.

"It ought to go through red skin just the same's any other kind," he remarked, holding the knife high for Miles Standish to see.

The Captain had been about to take his place in the boat. He paused, looking down at Sal.

"You know, Boyd, maybe I shouldn't be the one to tell you this."

"Tell me what?"

"I wanted you, I asked especially for you. But—Well, certain others in the company decided that you'd be of more use here aboard the ship."

Sal sprang to his feet.

"What's that you're saying, man? You're not trying to tell me that I'm to be kept back here like a woman?"

"I—I'm afraid that's the way it's going to be, Boyd." He put a hand on Sal's shoulder. "You're a soldier, Boyd. Be one. I know it's hard, but—well."

"Sure," muttered Sal. "Well."

He turned away, snicking his dagger back. He didn't watch as the longboat was pushed off. He felt a little sick, and he was afraid that his eyes might be wet. Nobody should see him that way.

It was a raw morning, the sky was low, the wind high, while an icy snow-rain sliced the air. Nobody but a fool would be out in weather like this, if he didn't have to. After the longboat had gone the waist was strangely quiet, all but deserted.

Sal wandered about aimlessly, kicking things.

He went below, all the way down, to the lower hold where the barrels were.

It was neat. He snooped, nodding approval. The light was poor.

a mere filtering from above, but his hands told him that everything was in order, each barrel tight, the air spaces carefully kept.

A keg was on its side in the middle of the cleared space where John Alden probably did most of his work. Beside it on the deck was a small iron tube that coopers call a straw. It was a testing device.

If they wanted to know what a given barrel contained, all they needed to do was to put it on its side, work out the stopper, and sniff. However, in the case of beer, if they wanted to learn whether it was going sour, an important consideration in what should be moved down here, the surest way was by sucking some of it up through this "straw."

But this couldn't be beer. It was too small a container.

Sal went to it, unplugged it, put his nose down.

There was no mistaking the odor of Hollands gin. Sal beamed. He took up the straw and thrust it into the hole and gave himself a good, long, burning drink. He smacked his lips, while his eyes started to smart.

Since that last night in Plymouth, when it had played him false, Sal Boyd had known no gin. Aboard Mayflower he'd confined his drinking to the ship's beer, a thin, weak, malt-tasting fluid that might almost have been water. Now the Hollands tasted good. He took another drink.

He let it frolic inside, as he nodded knowingly.

He was not stealing anything. This was not ship's property, it was company's property, and Sal could always partake of the common fund.

Sal put the plug back—no use letting the stuff evaporate—but after a while he worked it out again, and took another drink, just a small one.

He sat on the keg, palms on his knees. He was beginning to wonder whether he hadn't ought to feel ashamed of himself.

He thought about this for a while.

He took another drink.

The air was close down there, and relatively warm, and it could be that Sal fell asleep. Not a real sleep, only a few nods, but he was brought to attention, his head snapping up, his eyes popped, who had just come down the ladder.

"What the Devil are you doing here?"

Sal waved a negligent hand.

"Go jump down the jakes," he suggested.

Alden started forward, raising his fists, and Sal, with a glad little cry lurched to his feet.

Alden slammed for the face, a long overhand right. Sal lifted his elbows to avoid it, but he didn't lift them fast enough. Blood spurted from his nose, streaming hot over his mouth, he was slammed back against a barrel.

He went right in again, head down, both arms swinging. He was hit twice, once over each ear. He fell like a tree.

He knew that he was on the deck. But he couldn't do anything about it. He could not even move.

He assumed that Alden would jump on him with both heavy boots and stamp out his consciousness, along with a good deal of his skin. Sal couldn't help that. He just had to lie and wait for it to happen.

Alden was an ass. He turned away, with a curious little sob from deep in his throat, the sound of a man who is frightened. He scrambled up the ladder. While

86 PROOF - GEORGE A. DICKEL DISTILLING COMPANY, LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

Sal blinked, dumfounded, his bloody mouth open, the hatch was slammed.

This much Sal knew: John Alden was afraid of him. Alden had attacked in a moment of rage, and now he trembled to think of what he had done—and what might be the consequences.

Was this because Alden was physically afraid of him? It seemed unlikely. The cooper was taller and somewhat heavier, and the way he had punched showed that he knew how to use his fists.

On the other hand, Sal Boyd, though only a few years older, had behind him all the dread prestige of piracy. Almost anything might be expected of a man who had served with the Sallee rovers.

There was another possible explanation, and Sal quaked to think of it, wishing that he could believe it.

John Alden might have gasped to realize he had knocked down—could he have reasoned thus?—one of the most popular persons aboard the Mayflower, a man who had a host of friends. It would be almost like knocking down the skipper, thought Sal, elaborating—indeed, in many ways worse, for nobody liked Christopher Jones. Similarly, there were few who cared for the surly cooper.

Not consciously but as a matter of course he decided that he would not go after John Alden. He certainly would not apologize, he wouldn't ask for more. That other cheek behavior might be all right for such as Elder Brewster, but in Sal Boyd it would have smack-ed of cowardice, an emotion Sal couldn't afford, but he would drop the matter, publicly. And if the cooper renewed hostilities—well, Sal would be steadier the next time, better prepared.

A more trying ordeal is yet to come for Sal Boyd. The story continues tomorrow.

Johnson Addresses West Point Grads

WEST POINT, N. Y. (AP)—Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson said today the Kennedy administration is beefing up counter-guerrilla forces to sniff out brush fire aggression without risking nuclear war.

In a commencement address prepared for the U.S. Military Academy graduating class, Johnson said: "The Communists will find that a nation which produced Davy Crockett and Daniel Boone and Jim Bowie is afraid of no forest, no swamp, no game of fighting however toughly it is played." The vice president said one of the administration's goals is to produce through research and development "all those weapons of conventional warfare which will give us the utmost conventional advantage over any enemy in order to deter aggression without inviting annihilation through ultimate war with ultimate weapons."

He added that in response to the threats against friendly or neutral countries, "we are stepping up the training of forces adapted to the most effective counter-guerrilla operations." But Johnson told the graduating class its members are going to have to be more than soldiers. He said that as they move about the world they are going to have to be ambassadors selling the idea of freedom. "Freedom has been murdered over large parts of the earth by propaganda, half-truths, and ignorance, supported by brute force," he said. "Men's morals and character have been stultified."

"I am no crusader. But I believe it is up to you and me to reach the minds of men the world over — to be able to impart to them the concepts of freedom, morality, and justice as we understand them. To do this we must be able to speak with wisdom, and, wherever possible, in the language of the people and in the context of their culture and history." Johnson said the nation must "keep pressing forward always the frontiers of knowledge." "While we are still in wisdom's infancy in dealing with nuclear energy, we are confronted with vast new problems in space, where the ultimate destiny of humanity itself may well be decided," he said. "Urgently, we must push on with all determination into space so as to win it for peace before some other nation conquers it for war and destruction."

AYDEN—Four men were found guilty in Ayden Recorder's Court Monday on charges growing out of the theft of two 100-pound bags of sugar from Lutz and Schramm Pickle Co. last December.

Another man connected with the case had previously asked for jury trial.

AYDEN—A go-kart track, to be located north of and adjacent to the old light plant here, will be completed in about 10 days, it was announced yesterday by Town Manager Cleveland Paylor.

The track has already been laid out, he noted.

The site will be open to youngsters and town officials hope it will be operated under the supervision of the Ayden Police Department. "We hope to teach rules of the road, sportsmanship and safe driving in general," Paylor commented.

The go-kart track is an outgrowth of numerous complaints by residents of the go-karts in town. As a result of the complaints, Police Chief W. D. Brooks declared that the go-karts would be classed as motor vehicles requiring licenses if they were used on the public streets. Since that time, there have been many requests for a place for the go-karts to be used.

As long as the go-karts are used on the track being built for them, they will not be treated as motor vehicles. If they are operated on the public streets, they would be classed as vehicles, it was pointed out.

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP)—A local lawyer is making plans to stop the federal government from enforcing a ruling that forbids the sale of loose leaf tobacco on most markets in the United States.

Nick Zeigler of Florence said Tuesday he will soon seek an injunction to restrain the U.S. Department of Agriculture from enforcing Monday's decision.

The controversial order from the USDA brought indignat response Tuesday from Gov. Ernest F. Hollings.

At his regular news conference in Columbia Tuesday, the governor said "We cannot passively accept this decision but will continue to press for a favorable verdict."

"This is too valuable a South Carolina industry," Hollings said, "to be carelessly handed to the federal government."

Zeigler said he would file his legal action in Federal Court in Washington in behalf of two Lamm farmers, O. L. Warr and Preston Warr.

Zeigler said he had learned that a report drawn up by Leroy Hodges, marketing specialist of the USDA, originally submitted to foreign buyers of American tobacco had little objection to buying it in loose leaf form.

Later Tuesday Agriculture Department General Counsel John C. Bagwell said in Washington that he had no comment on the proposed injunction action.

He noted however, that Zeigler filed a suit last year in Federal District Court attempting to outlaw the federal government's regulations on loose leaf tobacco.

AYDEN—At the monthly meeting of the Volunteer Firemen's Association of Ayden, President Tillman Chauncey announced that a fire practice will probably be held the latter part of this week.

Chauncey said he hoped members could practice using the technique of shielding through the media of the fog knozzie. He commented that he had seen this method demonstrated in Greenville at a fire school recently.

It was announced that the July 3 meeting will consist of a dinner at the Little League Park for firemen and their wives, members of the Board of Commissioners and wives, Police Department and wives.

Secretary Norman Dall was in charge of the meeting after Chauncey left for another meeting. The firemen met in their quarters above the fire department on Monday night.

Four Men Are Convicted In Sugar-Stealing Case

Another man connected with the case had previously asked for jury trial.

Planning Fight Loose Leaf Bar

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP)—A local lawyer is making plans to stop the federal government from enforcing a ruling that forbids the sale of loose leaf tobacco on most markets in the United States.

Nick Zeigler of Florence said Tuesday he will soon seek an injunction to restrain the U.S. Department of Agriculture from enforcing Monday's decision.

The controversial order from the USDA brought indignat response Tuesday from Gov. Ernest F. Hollings.

At his regular news conference in Columbia Tuesday, the governor said "We cannot passively accept this decision but will continue to press for a favorable verdict."

"This is too valuable a South Carolina industry," Hollings said, "to be carelessly handed to the federal government."

Zeigler said he would file his legal action in Federal Court in Washington in behalf of two Lamm farmers, O. L. Warr and Preston Warr.

Zeigler said he had learned that a report drawn up by Leroy Hodges, marketing specialist of the USDA, originally submitted to foreign buyers of American tobacco had little objection to buying it in loose leaf form.

Later Tuesday Agriculture Department General Counsel John C. Bagwell said in Washington that he had no comment on the proposed injunction action.

He noted however, that Zeigler filed a suit last year in Federal District Court attempting to outlaw the federal government's regulations on loose leaf tobacco.

Pravda Sounds Optimistic Note

MOSCOW (AP)—Pravda, the Communist party organ, said today the Kennedy-Khrushchev talks could be a prelude to a breaking down of cold war barriers, and pledged the Soviet Union will do everything it can to improve Soviet-American relations.

"Everyone understands that it is impossible to solve in two days big and complicated international questions," Pravda said.

"Two days are not enough to remove the roadblocks to peace put up during the postwar period by the cold war proponents. In order to get down to the elimination of these obstructions, the sides had to have a joint, businesslike and frank talk. And this took place in Vienna. The consensus of the participants that the talks were useful strengthens mankind's hopes that reason will prevail."

The Vienna conference between the U.S. President and Soviet was "a useful meeting," Pravda said.

Blackjacked In Resisting, No Injuries Found

GRIFTON—A 48-year-old Negro, reportedly resisting arrest by a Grifton police officer this week, was taken to a Greenville clinic Monday for X-rays after being hit with a blackjack. However, no injuries were reported.

Acting Police Chief J. H. Bates identified the man as James Cogsdale of Rt. 1, Grifton. Bates said that as he attempted to arrest Cogsdale on a charge of public drunkenness, Cogsdale resisted arrest and it was necessary for him to use the blackjack.

Cogsdale has been charged with public drunkenness and resisting arrest and is scheduled to be tried Thursday in Grifton Recorder's Court.

Go-Kart Track Being Prepared

AYDEN—A go-kart track, to be located north of and adjacent to the old light plant here, will be completed in about 10 days, it was announced yesterday by Town Manager Cleveland Paylor.

The track has already been laid out, he noted.

The site will be open to youngsters and town officials hope it will be operated under the supervision of the Ayden Police Department. "We hope to teach rules of the road, sportsmanship and safe driving in general," Paylor commented.

The go-kart track is an outgrowth of numerous complaints by residents of the go-karts in town. As a result of the complaints, Police Chief W. D. Brooks declared that the go-karts would be classed as motor vehicles requiring licenses if they were used on the public streets. Since that time, there have been many requests for a place for the go-karts to be used.

As long as the go-karts are used on the track being built for them, they will not be treated as motor vehicles. If they are operated on the public streets, they would be classed as vehicles, it was pointed out.

District Scouts Invited To Visit Swim School

All Explorers, Scouts and Cubs in Pitt District have been invited to the Raynez Swim School Saturday, according to Scout Executive Rudy Alexander.

Alexander said Ray Martinez, director of the school, has invited all the district's scouts to the new school near Greenville to watch a water safety demonstration and to swim in the school's facilities.

The Raynez School is located about four miles southeast of Greenville on Secondary Road 1726 that intersects with U.S. Highway 264.

Directions: Travel east on 264 to the intersection of Secondary Road 1726 at the perpetual care cemetery, turn right on 1726 and travel about a mile where the Raynez School is visible on the right; or, travel south on N.C. Highway 43 to Bell Fork and the intersection with Secondary Road 1726, turn left on 1726 and travel about a mile where the school is visible on the left.

Lights Briefly Out In Ayden Due To Thunderstorm

AYDEN—A thunderstorm moving in this area Saturday caused a number of street lights to go out for a short time, it was reported yesterday by Town Manager Cleveland Paylor.

The wind blew a pecan tree into a 7,200 volt line, which came into contact with a street light circuit, causing a number of the lights to go out of order. By Sunday the lights were back into operation, Paylor said.

To eliminate this difficulty in the future, Paylor said the street light circuit is going to be divided. If such an event should occur again, only half the lights would be involved after the circuit is divided.

Workmen plan to begin the project as soon as the tree trimming, now in progress, is completed.

Credit Women's Club Hears John Ray Hardy

"Community Credit and Collections—Telephone Techniques" was discussed by John Ray Hardy at the monthly meeting of Credit Women's Breakfast Club held last night.

Hardy stated, "The three Cs of credit are: character; capacity and conditions."

"In our hands lies, in the last analysis, the success or failure of the credit business as we now know it. A well-informed public, using its credit wisely—credit granters who operate ethically and who cooperate with other credit granters to see that their customers are not oversold and plunged into debt beyond their ability to pay—create a climate which does not invite government regulation. And it does make for a thriving, prosperous community," he continued.

"... the simple fundamentals of successful credit granting that will work profitably for everybody includes: taking a complete credit application; get a credit report from the Credit Bureau; explain your terms carefully to your new customer; follow up past due accounts promptly; and list your accounts for professional action when you have gone as far as your staff, time and money make practical," Hardy noted.

Mrs. Dorothy Copeland of the Greenville CWBC has been appointed district director of the Eastern Piedmont District of North Carolina CWBC.

This is one of the offices that is appointed by the state president. The appointment was made at the State Convention held in Asheville May 21-23.

Highlights of the State Convention were given by Miss Joyce Paramore, who represented the local club.
