Western Allies Firmly Reject Red Plans For Berlin

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, Britain and France told the Soviet Union today it is jeopardizing world peace and endangering the lives of millions by its threats against West Berlin.

For this menace to world peace, the note said, the Soviet Union must bear full responsibility before all mankind. At another point the U.S. note declared: "There is no reason for a crisis over Berlin. If one develops it is because the Soviet Union is attempting to invade the basic rights of others."

The notes were delivered in Moscow Monday and made public simultaneously today in Washington, London and Paris. The one here was given out at the White House as a reply to a memorandum which Soviet Premier Khrushchev handed President Kennedy at their Vienna conference June 4.

Britain could be changed by the signing of a peace treaty between the Soviet Union and East Germany, as Soviet Premier Khrushchev threatens to do. Britain warned of the danger of unforeseeable consequences if the Soviet Union tried by its own action to change Berlin conditions.

The U.S. note was an answer to a memorandum which Khrushchev gave to President Kennedy at their Vienna conference June 4. He was reported to have taken a very tough line in his talk with Kennedy and in subsequent public statements he has declared he would sign a separate peace treaty with East Germany by the end of this year.

The U.S. note took an uncompromising tone insofar as its right to be in Berlin and to have access to the city are concerned. The note today said bluntly this country "is insisting on, and will defend its legal rights against attempts at unilateral abrogation because the freedom of the people of West Berlin depends upon the maintenance of those rights."

The U.S. note maintained its tone of stern rejection of the Soviet Union's Berlin demand throughout its 2,500-word length. Much of the document was devoted to reviewing the Soviet Union's threats and demands and rebutting them point by point.

Referring to the Soviet proposal that West Berlin be made a "free city" with withdrawal of the 11,000-man garrison maintained by the three Western powers, the United States said: "The Soviet government would thus seek to extend its postwar empire by the absorption of the eastern sector of Berlin and to shift the four-power principle from all of Berlin to the western part of the city alone."

U.S. Astronaut's Flight Delayed By High Clouds

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The United States' second manned space shot is now scheduled for 6 a. m. Eastern Standard Time Wednesday, having been delayed by the arrival of high buttermilk clouds.

Air Force Capt. Virgil I. Grissom, the astronaut ticketed for the rocket ride, took the news of the 24-hour delay calmly. When Grissom, 35, was awakened shortly after 10:30 p. m. Monday night and told of the postponement, he shrugged, then went back to sleep.

The news came to Grissom just 2 1/2 hours before he was to begin his medical checkups and don his 20-pound space suit. The postponement on the advice of a special team of U.S. Weather Bureau experts came as something of a surprise since all predictions up to 6:30 p. m. had been optimistic.

Even so, the nation's newest weather satellite, the Tiros III, fired a week ago, had detected signs of a developing high pressure system in the Caribbean almost as soon as it went into orbit.

Subsequent reports from the Tiros were watched closely since they substantiated ground reports of the high pressure front with multiple cloud layers. In announcing the postponement the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the cloud cover was attributable to an easterly wave which has been moving across the Caribbean for the past three or four days.

The weather hitch developed as technicians and scientists were preparing to resume the countdown which would have led to a scheduled 6 a. m. liftoff this morning. The presence of the high clouds would have hampered full photographic coverage of the operation which scientists insist upon from blastoff to burnout of the booster.

The delay caused a slight mounting of tension here in what had been an otherwise calm acceptance of the fact that another man was scheduled to take a 300-mile ride like a bullet.

Berlin Is Encircled By Troops

BONN, Germany (AP) — Soviet and Communist East German armed forces have set up a military ring around Berlin, sources close to the Bonn Defense Ministry said today. The informants declared the Communists have about 67,500 troops and more than 1,200 tanks stationed in a girdle 30 miles outside the city.

So far the Communists have given no signs of snapping the ring shut around the city. But it helps add psychological pressure in the current Soviet diplomatic offensive. The East Germans also are building anti-aircraft rocket bases in two rings around Berlin, one 25 miles and the other 50 miles from the city center, the sources said.

Some of the bases, containing Soviet rockets, were reported already completed and manned by East German soldiers. The informants gave this breakdown of Communist military manpower stationed around Berlin: Soviet army—one tank and two motorized infantry divisions and five border security battalions with a total strength of about 44,500 men and 900 tanks.

East German army—one division, four regiments and one battalion totaling 14,000 men with 200 tanks. At present Lieutenant Colonel in the N. C. National Guard, Langston is Plans and Training Officer for the 30th Division. He is a veteran of 24 years service in the regular Army and the National Guard. He has been Director of Personnel of Tripp Enterprises, and New Products Manager of Tripp Chemicals since 1952.

Gibbs' letter of resignation was made public at the meeting of the City Council, by City Manager Louis Scheipers on July 6. It was to take effect July 17. Gibbs, in the letter, said he was resigning "to accept a position with the State of North Carolina."

Before becoming chief of police, Gibbs was a member of the State Highway Patrol and the State Bureau of Investigation. His assignment will be to direct a vigorous new program to stimulate the travel of foreigners in this country and to coordinate the efforts of other government agencies in promoting U.S. tourism. His salary will be $19,000 a year.

The 43-year-old native of Winston-Salem entered the travel industry in 1940, after graduation from the University of North Carolina and became executive of Pan American World Airways in various foreign centers.

Guy C. Langston Sworn In Today As New Greenville Police Chief

Guy C. Langston was sworn in as Chief of Police of the City of Greenville at 10 a. m. today by Records Court Judge Charles Whedbee. Langston, a former Greenville Police Chief, replaces S. G. Gibbs, whose resignation became effective at midnight last night.

Langston returned today to a job he held from 1950 until November 1, 1952, and replaces the man who replaced him, nine years ago. Following the swearing-in ceremonies, Chief Langston told the gathering of city officials and representatives of the various law enforcement agencies in the county that "it is a pleasure to be back here. I am glad to be back home."

He assured the lawmen representing other agencies that they would have the full support of the Greenville Police Department, and said he was sure the other agencies would cooperate with the Greenville department as they have done in the past. Langston became Greenville's Chief of Police in 1950 after serving with the North Carolina State Highway Patrol and the Safety Division of the N. C. Department of Motor Vehicles.

While serving in the Army in Germany, Langston was attached to the Military Government Police. At present Lieutenant Colonel in the N. C. National Guard, Langston is Plans and Training Officer for the 30th Division. He is a veteran of 24 years service in the regular Army and the National Guard. He has been Director of Personnel of Tripp Enterprises, and New Products Manager of Tripp Chemicals since 1952.

Beauty Entries On Scene Today

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Seventy-five girls, each hoping she will be crowned Miss North Carolina, arrive here today. The winner will be elected Saturday after judging in talent, evening gown and swim suit. She will represent the state in the Miss America contest in Atlantic City, N.J., in September.

An orientation session was held this afternoon, and there will be a banquet tonight. The committee action in effect killed three school bills for the present session of Congress. Chairman Howard W. Smith, D-Va., said: "I don't know of any way the action can be reversed in this committee."

The motion to shelve the bills was made by Rep. William Colmer, D-Miss. A motion to reconsider the action also was tabled by an 8-7 vote.

A picture window, 10 inches high, 11 inches across the base and 7 across the top, was installed. Grissom hopes to see much of the East Coast of the United States and also perhaps catch a glimpse of stars in the heavens. U.S. manned space efforts are still far behind the Soviet feat of sending Yuri Gagarin into orbit last April 12. The United States is months away from achieving this goal, but suborbital missions provide valuable space travel training for the astronauts.

A total of 11,000 Allied troops are stationed in West Berlin as a symbolic force. These could be reinforced by 3,000 West Berlin alert police armed with light infantry weapons. The regular West Berlin police force totals 10,000 men, including traffic squads and detectives. The Communists can mobilize an armed force of about 1,400,000 men in all of East Germany, including about 400,000 regular Soviet troops.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Adm. Arleigh Burke has given assurance the battleship North Carolina will be in a seaworthy condition when the Navy turns the vessel over to the State of North Carolina. Burke said this in a letter to Hugh Morton, chairman of the USS North Carolina Battleship Commission. The ship will be brought here from Bayonne, N.J., as a war memorial and tourist attraction.

Charlotte (AP) — Four elementary schools in the consolidated Charlotte-Mecklenburg County school system will be integrated for the first time this fall. The consolidated school board approved the transfer of 14 Negro students to Wesley Heights, Bethune, Dilworth and Derita schools. Derita will be the first school in the county to be desegregated.

Chiefs To Meet On Readiness

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy called a meeting of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for today and the National Security Council for Wednesday to canvass the nation's military ability in the face of Soviet threats to world peace. The meetings are the windup phases of an urgent military study, Kennedy asked the Pentagon to take another look at military power, particularly of a conventional type, more than a week ago.

The White House said the review should be finished by late this week. The actions followed Soviet demands over Berlin and Russia's decision to halt a reduction of its military manpower and increase its defense budget by a third. No topics of discussion were announced for the 5 p. m. EDT session with the Joint Chiefs of staff—a session announced belatedly. But the military review obviously was coming in for attention.

And presidential press secretary Pierre Salinger said, "I understand the study is one of the things to be discussed tomorrow" afternoon when Kennedy brings the National Security Council to the White House.

Integrating Four More Schools

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Four elementary schools in the consolidated Charlotte-Mecklenburg County school system will be integrated for the first time this fall. The consolidated school board approved the transfer of 14 Negro students to Wesley Heights, Bethune, Dilworth and Derita schools. Derita will be the first school in the county to be desegregated.

Bolt Killed Two In Tobacco Barn

TIMMONSVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Lightning struck a tobacco curing barn near here Monday, killing two youths and injuring a third person. Eight persons died similarly in North Carolina last week. Seven persons were working in the barn. The three struck were unloading tobacco from a truck parked under the shelter of a shed projecting from the barn. Killed were Levon Weaver, 15, and Howard Erving, a Negro, 14. George Erving, 25, brother of Howard, was injured.

Tar Heel Tapped For Gov't Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President John F. Kennedy today nominated Volt Gilmore of Southern Pines, N.C., to be director of the Commerce Department's new United States Travel Service. The businessman, writer and lecturer on world travel is a Democrat and has been vice chairman of the Moore County, N.C., Democratic Executive Committee and an alternate delegate to the past two national conventions of the party.

His assignment will be to direct a vigorous new program to stimulate the travel of foreigners in this country and to coordinate the efforts of other government agencies in promoting U.S. tourism. His salary will be $19,000 a year.

Record 4,000 Flee Into West Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — The Communist threat to West Berlin sent a record 4,000 refugees fleeing into West Berlin over the weekend, raising once more the question of why the Communist police don't cut off the flow that worsens production shortages in East Germany and gives the satellite regime a worse name. The question always arises when there is a spurt in the number fleeing to the West.

The Communists' vast police apparatus undoubtedly could stop the traffic, 80 to 90 per cent of which funnels through East Berlin into West Berlin. There could be much tighter checks on travel into East Berlin, and then on the City's interzone railways that bring thousands from East to West Berlin each day to work. Tougher controls would frighten away many escapes since "flight from the (Communist) republic" is a crime punishable by two years in jail.

Fear of losing face is thought to be one powerful motive that keeps the Communists from stronger measures. East Berlin has been proclaimed the capital of their "German Democratic Republic." It would look bad to the world if citizens were prevented from freely visiting their capital. The communist authorities may also feel that they are better off without some of the refugees. They know their regime is unpopular. Discontented people who are forced to stay might turn out to be a lot more trouble than they are worth.

Third Round Of Surplus Food Distribution Set This Week

Pitt County's third, and smallest yet, round of surplus food distribution is scheduled for Thursday and Friday at the county fairgrounds, Pitt Welfare Director J. S. Grimes announced today. Grimes said a total of 950 families—involving about 1,600 persons—will be eligible to receive the surplus commodities this week.

This week's roll has been reduced considerably by welfare department screening since many families who received the foods in May and June have since been able to provide their own food through agricultural employment. On May 10 and 11 (initial distribution date in Pitt under the surplus foods program) a total of 800 families or nearly 3,000 persons were eligible. Then during the first three days of June, a total of 1,500 families that included around 5,700 persons could receive the commodities.

Grimes pointed out this month's distribution will be to public assistance cases only. Other needy families, he said, have been able to find employment on Pitt farms and have not needed the foods. He stressed, "We have been pretty strict about that sort of thing. If we should find a case where offered employment has been declined, we would cut that person off right then."

Grimes urged eligible recipients to bring and display their identification cards when they come to the fairgrounds at their assigned appointment. "The food cannot be given to them unless this is done," he said. He also urged recipients to "abide by the appointments we have made for them." The welfare department has mailed each eligible recipient a statement of a definite hour to receive his commodities.

Hours for Thursday and Friday will be from 8 a. m. until 12 noon and from 1 until 3 p. m., Grimes reported.

Record 4,000 Flee Into West Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — The Communist threat to West Berlin sent a record 4,000 refugees fleeing into West Berlin over the weekend, raising once more the question of why the Communist police don't cut off the flow that worsens production shortages in East Germany and gives the satellite regime a worse name. The question always arises when there is a spurt in the number fleeing to the West.

The Communists' vast police apparatus undoubtedly could stop the traffic, 80 to 90 per cent of which funnels through East Berlin into West Berlin. There could be much tighter checks on travel into East Berlin, and then on the City's interzone railways that bring thousands from East to West Berlin each day to work. Tougher controls would frighten away many escapes since "flight from the (Communist) republic" is a crime punishable by two years in jail.

Fear of losing face is thought to be one powerful motive that keeps the Communists from stronger measures. East Berlin has been proclaimed the capital of their "German Democratic Republic." It would look bad to the world if citizens were prevented from freely visiting their capital. The communist authorities may also feel that they are better off without some of the refugees. They know their regime is unpopular. Discontented people who are forced to stay might turn out to be a lot more trouble than they are worth.

The Soviets also may be taking a hand behind the scenes. In public Moscow says that all political matters in East Germany are in German hands. In private the Soviets often show concern over the World War II agreements with the Western allies that guarantee free movement within the city.

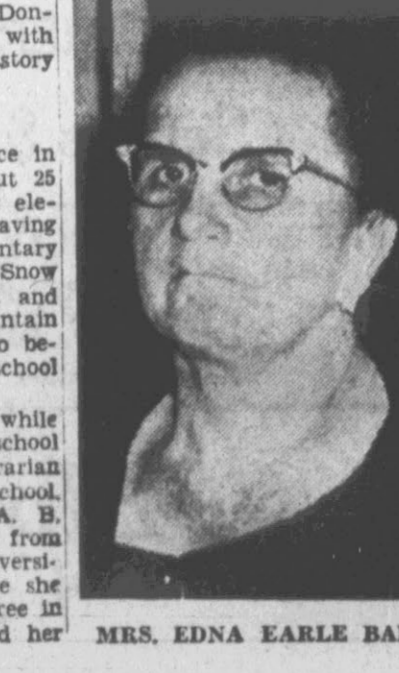

The welfare director said the distribution of foods to public assistance cases will continue on a monthly basis through August, September and probably October. "However," he pointed out, "before we get back into large-scale distribution, it is our intention to have numerous contacts with community leaders in the various sections of the county in order to pick up opinions and suggestions about who should receive the food."

He said, "We feel like we've learned something during these three months and we want to improve the effectiveness of the program. If we can handle it so it can be most beneficial to the people of the county, that's what we're after."

As in previous monthly distributions, actual distribution of the commodities Thursday and Friday will be under supervision of the office of County Auditor H. R. Gray.

Pre-Nuptial Activities Honor Frances Smith - Thomas Norris

Rehearsal Dinner
On Friday evening a rehearsal dinner honoring Miss Frances Ringgold Smith and Mr. Thomas Key Norris was given at the Silo by Dr. and Mrs. Mark T. Frizzelle of Ayden, uncle and aunt of the bride.

Guests were greeted by the host and hostess and the honored couple.

The dinner table was set up in a U shape. Marking the center was an arrangement of yellow glads, snapdragons and mums flanked by silver candelabra with burning yellow tapers. Silver epergnettes holding tiny, yellow mums, snapdragons, baby's breath and lighted yellow candles placed at intervals down the center of the other tables. Bridal place cards designated the seating arrangements.

A four course dinner was laid for 40 guests, including the wedding party, relatives and out-of-town guests. The honoree was presented a yellow mum corsage.

Cake Cutting
Immediately following the wedding rehearsal Friday night of the Smith-Norris wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Sumter Key Norris, parents of the groom, honored Frances Ringgold Smith with a cake cutting in the church parlor. The table was covered with a white French organdy handmade cloth over green satin. The center arrangement was a silver bowl of white gladiolas, snapdragons, mums and feverfew flanked with silver candelabra tied with tulle and holding white burning tapers.

At one end of the table was a five-tiered wedding cake. After the bride-elect cut the first slice, the attendants pulled the white ribbons tied to wedding symbols hidden in the cake. Lime punch was served from a silver bowl by Mrs. W. J. Smith. The guests served themselves to wedding mints, cheese straws, chicken salad timbales and nuts. During the evening the bride-elect's attendants were presented a piece of hand-decorated china by Miss Smith. The bridegroom's ushers were presented silver money clips. Those present were the wedding party, families, close friends and out-of-town guests.

Inducements Call For Re-Evaluating

Location of the new Beaudit Mills, Inc. plant near Hamilton in Martin County has created considerable interest throughout Eastern North Carolina because of the economic importance of a new large industrial plant in the area.

It has also created interest among other communities interested in industrial development because of the fact that the people of Martin County made a cash gift of $150,000 to the Beaudit company as a part of the arrangement for locating the plant in that county.

Reports on the location of the new industry in Martin County said the $150,000 gift to the company entered the picture only because other communities which were under consideration as a possible site for the new plant were offering similar concessions to the company. In the case of Martin County it was a case of meeting the competition in the battle for the new plant.

There can be no question about the fact that the people of Martin County have made an excellent investment by providing the $150,000 gift to the company. The 700 jobs which will be provided by the multi-million dollar plant will return many fold to the county and its people the amount of the gift. The fact that the people of Martin County were willing to make personal contributions totalling that amount to be presented to the company clearly indicates their desire to have the plant located in their county.

With the knowledge that the $150,000 gift to the company was one of the factors which brought about the location of the new Beaudit Mills plant in Martin County, other county and community development groups throughout Eastern Carolina might well re-evaluate their policies toward giving special considerations to top flight industrial prospects.

Over a period of years North Carolina has refused to allow special tax considerations or other similar government-sponsored concessions to industries in spite of the fact that other states have used these tools successfully in luring industries. There has likewise been the prevailing opinion in North Carolina that industrial development built on giving special consideration to companies to attract them to the state may not in the long run be a wise policy.

In Eastern North Carolina particularly, perhaps the time has come for us to reconsider what might be considered a reasonable concession to gain an industry . . . such as the gesture which was made by the people of Martin County.

Can this area expect to compete with other more industrialized areas in the future unless it meets competition in the field of industrial development? Has the time come when there is a need for a more flexible attitude toward special inducements for first-rate industrial prospects when these inducements might mean the difference between their locating in this area or selecting a site in some other section or some other state?

Have we here in Pitt County missed out on possible industries because we have not been in step with trends elsewhere on this particular point?

Here in Eastern North Carolina where the surface is just being scratched in the development of the economy through industry, every new success in locating a major new industry should be analyzed carefully to determine the difference between success and previous failures. Such analysis may provide valuable information which may enable a community to be successful rather than unsuccessful with its next important industrial prospect.

Does The Effort Match 1933's?

By LYNN NISBET

There are many reasons suggesting that the "quality education" program sponsored by Governor Sanford and enacted into law by the recent Legislature has been overrated. It involves more money than any proposal for public school support in all state history. That gives it prestige and justifies recognition as a very big deal. Yet—one is disposed to question whether the 1961 effort is really as great as was the 1933 enactment of a sales tax to keep the schools open. The situation then was desperate. Governor Ehringhaus and the Legislature faced imminent probability of school doors closing. To avoid that they took the courageous and unprecedented course of enacting a sales tax. The sales tax was born out of travail of two sessions of the General Assembly and it was an intensely lively issue in two others, until it was accepted as the basic part of the revenue program.

There was no threat this year that the schools would close. To the contrary, they were assured of greatly increased support. The Advisory Budget Commission had recommended, and wrote into the budget appropriation bill, an increase of $4 million more for the 1961-63 biennium than had been available for the 1959-61 period. That not only assured continuation of the schools, but meant some real improvement.

Governor Sanford envisaged a higher quality education program. He asked for and obtained an additional $56 million for public schools, not to keep the schools open and for reasonable improvement but for a quality level above anything that had before been offered. And to finance that program he suggested re-statement of many items originally covered by the 1933 sales tax, but which had through the years been exempted from the tax.

EXEMPTIONS—A good deal has been said about the 1961 act eliminating exemptions and making the 3 percent sales tax apply "across the board." It does no such thing. The tax was made to apply to basic foods, newspaper circulation and several other items which had been exempt, but there remain a lot of exemptions from any sales tax and the rate of some items is one or one-half percent, instead of three, and a maximum limit of collectible taxes was set up for a number of items.

The 1961 sales tax is still a selective commodity tax, with exceptions and exemptions to make sure that certain favored segments of business do not have to pay the same full rate of tax as other non-favored segments must pay.

Even with these exemptions the expanded sales tax coverage is estimated to produce sufficient money to finance the "quality education" program sponsored by the administration. Again, it should be remembered that this is not the first time long strides toward quality in the public schools have been taken. Institution of the ninth month and twelfth grade some years ago had the same objective of enriching and improving the established order of public schools.

In those instances the Legislature positively required the improvements. There was no option left with school people about the ninth month or the twelfth grade. The 1961 Legislature provided enough money and suggested a blue-print of activities to greatly improve the schools, but there is no mandate involved. The teachers will get higher salaries and their workload will be reduced. The belief is that these advantages will produce better education for the pupils. The fact is, however, that such improvement will come only if the school folks utilize the new tools given them, not because of legislative mandate.

HIGHWAY SAFETY—It is common practice to berate the Legislature for doing nothing to promote highway safety. The charge cannot be substantiated. It is true that two of the pet major bills sponsored by the Motor Vehicles Department failed of passage—mechanical inspection and chemical tests for determining content of alcohol in the system. Many people in and out of the Legislature are not sure about the real value of mechanical inspection, even less about the provisions of the bill offered. And there are questions about how making it easier to convict a driver of being drunk could prevent the accident which occurred hours before the test could be given.

Traffic safety was promoted by enactment of bills strengthening the point system as basis for suspension of driving license; provision for credit rating on insurance for accident-free drivers; making it as much violation of the law to "slow-poke" in traffic as to exceed the speed limit, and requirement for safety belt anchors on new cars. Highway safety also was served by failure to enact some bad laws, such as permission for over-sized vehicles, mail-order renewal of driver's license without examination, and others.

Legislature sometimes can render greater service by refusing to enact bad laws than in passage of wholesome positive legislation. The advocates of inspection and drunkometers would have us believe.

Largely Swayed By Emotions

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—One of the most amazing revelations from ex-Communists is that they did not think their way into the party. They felt their way in. They got out for the same reason.

It was not intellect. It was emotion. Many were intellectuals who devoted years of their lives to a cause they neither understood nor analyzed. One historic example, Whittaker Chambers, died a week ago.

Another intellectual, Bertrand Russell, as early as 1920 in his book, "The Practice and Theory of Bolshevism," was able to understand communism so clearly only three years after the Bolshevik Revolution that he could predict its direction.

Why was he able to see straight and others not? He could think coldly, even where he himself was concerned. He had historical perspective; he had a good enough mind not to have illusions about mankind no matter what banner it waved; and he was personally adjusted to his times and his environment.

Russell emphasized that under the kind of communism practiced in the Soviet Union all power in the hands of an elite made the "sacrifice of the individual inevitable."

For many years afterward this central inevitability of communism—the insignificance of the individual—was ignored or unperceived by hosts of intellectuals who jumped into the party and squirmed out.

For many of them, eventually, Communist disregard for the individual became the point at which they felt their disillusionment began. Chambers said Stalin's purges of the old Bolsheviks in the middle 1930s was a major turning point for him. Actually, it had begun long before, deep within him.

Chambers became famous when he disclosed he had been a Communist courier in an espionage ring which involved the State Department and one of its important officials, Alger Hiss. Later he wrote a book, "Witness," about his life. It's a tortured document. He sought to indicate his break with the party was the result of cerebration. But it was too emotional for that, just as his joining the party was. He wrote that he wined "at the failure" of people to understand that a "man does not, as a rule, become a Communist because he is attracted to communism but because he is driven by despair by the crises of history through which the world is passing."

Arthur Koestler, another Communist, thought pretty much the same. In "The God That Failed," a collection of testimonials by ex-Communists published in 1949, Koestler said "a faith is not acquired by reasoning."

He said persuasion may play a part in inducing a man to join the party but that the real reasons lie deeper, perhaps beyond an individual's understanding. He pointed to his own impoverished background as a cause. The same would explain a party in many cases, as it did in that of Chambers. He traced the beginnings of his own break to one night when he looked at his daughter's ear and suddenly thought it must have been made by God. For years he had had no belief in God. Unanswered is: When did his belief begin, and why?

He said, "Man without mysticism is a monster." Yet, until that moment of looking at an ear he had considered himself materialistic only. But the Stalin purges became the tangible moment at which he said he knew he had to break.

Yet Chambers was almost a classic type for candidacy in the party although he didn't understand that either.

In 1952, Morris Ernst, after talking to 300 ex-Communists on why they had joined and left the party, wrote in his book, "Report on the American Communists" that among the 300 there was an extremely "high incidence of suicide, desertions and divorces among the parents, brothers and sisters."

Chambers' early life was miserable because of the split between his parents, the suicide of his brother and the insanity of his grandmother.

Quote . . . "Whenever so much as 30 percent of the public's funds are committed to relief, there is reason to make sure that it is reserved for those who actually need help and cannot get it any other way. Or to put it another way, the taxpayers are entitled to some relief, too." — Charleston (W.Va.) Daily Mail.

Improbabilities Abound

Trite but true: North Carolina's beaches are a constant source of wonderment.

Some beaches are liberally sprinkled with shells; others relatively clear. One can walk along one stretch of beach where shells and their fragments carpet the shallows, and then encounter sandy areas where shells are almost non-existent.

Why? And on those shell-strewn shores one can reach into the shallows and clutch in one hand hundreds of shells. Tiny shells, small shells and fragments. Lift them up and look. Each represents a spark of life that was extinguished; and the multitude of tiny lives represented in that handful, multiplied by a figure that escapes comprehension, represents the total of such tiny deaths on a strip of beach no wider than your front yard.

Our household spent the recent weekend on the coast. Together we explored a short strip of the waterline, the submerged sandy bar and shell-laden areas. Some shells and some pebbles were saved by the younger beach-combers. But another facet captured their parents' attention: sharks' teeth.

A searcher could count on finding a minimum of three in thirty minutes of seeking. Some were quite large, some tiny.

Again a source of wonderment.

If shark teeth were so plentiful as to be easily found on the little strip of shell-covered beach, it was staggering the imagination to conceive how many sharks' teeth were actually washed ashore in the miles and miles of beach extending to either side of our narrow strip.

And further: if our only hap-hazard hunting found teeth so easily, it followed our own small beach front must have had a great number we missed.

One among the teeth especially aroused curiosity and speculation, for its root end had two tiny holes, . . . seemingly drilled to meet and provide a means for stringing the tooth for a necklace or bracelet.

None of the other teeth bore such holes.

Where did it come from? How long ago, and by whom were those holes made?

And if by some remote chance this souvenir of the deep was long ago actually in another's hands, . . . intended to serve as a personal adornment, . . . if all this was true: what kind of odds would you give on its being found by the writer in the waters off the North Carolina Coast? (It might be added I visit the sea maybe three times each summer.)

The degree of improbability approaches the impossible. But so does the sea.

Other Editors Sayings . . . The Papal Encyclical

(Greensboro Daily News)

When he became Pope John XXIII, Christendom was assured by the informed that the aged and cherubic Cardinal Roncalli would be an interim figure between the active "political" papacy of Pius XII and a younger successor sometime in the future; the present pope has been anything but that. In some two and a half years of office, Pope John has expanded the college of cardinals to its largest number in centuries, and has even added Africans; he has hinted at renewing ties with the Eastern Orthodox church and has received the Archbishop of Canterbury for the first time since the Reformation.

The inescapable impression, to Protestants no less than his own communicants, is that Pope John is a man of exceeding good will seeking ways to bind up the disunited of Christendom by every means at his command. Last week, in a historic encyclical entitled "Mother and Teacher," he capped an active papacy with a document that all but revolutionizes the outlook of the church on economic and political problems. Timed on the anniversary of Leo XIII's famous Rerum Novarum, it was no less iconoclastic. Just as the "New Things" removed the Roman Catholic church from its long alliance with the forces of royalism and legitimacy in Europe and brought it to terms with the still insular forces of republicanism and liberalism, so "Mother and Teacher" extends a properly belated palm frond to welfare capitalism and socialism. Its impact will not be lost in a world which wearies of hearing most of its pronouncements on politics and economics from the messiahs of Moscow and Peking.

The encyclical upholds the primacy of private property; but at the same time it takes the view that "so long as socialization confines its activity within the limits of the moral order, . . . it does not of its nature entail serious dangers of restriction to the detriment of individual human beings; rather it helps to promote in them the expression and development of truly personal characteristics."

That statement lies at the heart of a long and complex document; corollary to it are the Pope's admonitions on the subjects of industrial profit and economic justice for the workingman—as well as economic aid to underdeveloped lands.

Undoubtedly there will be sound observations that the church has merely accepted what the course of 20th Century politics has, for various reasons, already decreed. Yet anyone tempted to that shallow view might pause to reflect how scrupulously the political regimes of today's world—inside and outside the Iron curtain—have observed the "limits of the moral order"—or have, for all that, taken thought what those limits might be.

This papacy moves slowly in worldly realms, and as a spiritual mentor dedicated to things eternal rather than temporal it can afford leisure. Yet there is no doubt that Pope John XXIII has given the church's outlook a leap, if not a vault, in the direction of today's political and economic consensus. It is ironic, in fact, to think how many of the pope's own communicants now in power—as in Franco's Spain—will suddenly find their practices out of all tilt with the Vatican's viewpoint. What they will choose to do about that fact is, unquestionably, the key issue raised by the new encyclical.

Britons Take To Stamps, Bingo

By ELMER ROESSNER

While Britain still resists the hot dog, it has accepted two great Yankee manias: trading stamps and bingo.

All over the country bingo houses are collecting trading stamps and playing bingo, correspondents report.

Trading stamps are not new. They have been used for years. Merchants who use them give one stamp with each sixpence in purchases. Since sixpence is now worth about 7 cents, British shoppers have an advantage over their American sisters who get a stamp for each dime spent. However, for reasons not quite clear, there has been a great rise in interest. The number of collectors has doubled or tripled and new redemption centers are springing up throughout the country.

LAW LOOSENS BINGO
The spurt in bingo is more explicable. Bingo also has been played for years, usually in small games for charity. But the Betting and Gaming Act of 1960 makes commercialization legal.

All over the country bingo games are being staged in halls, theaters, clubs and at country fairs. More than $100,000,000 a year is changing hands. Prizes may now be of cash and that heightens the lure.

There are now two big bingo chains, as well as many single proprietary ventures. One of the chains is the Circuit Management Association, which controls movie houses and dance halls of the J. Arthur Rank organization. In some movie houses, especially in resort areas, it puts on bingo games in the morning before the film show starts, and many bingos stay for the movie. It is putting bingo in halls on afternoons and evenings when there are no dances scheduled. So far it has been careful not to make bingo games competitive with "cinema" shows, to avoid hurting the film business. The British movie houses association is opposed to bingo games during hours when pictures are shown, but it indicates it will not object if a theater operator must inject a bit of bingo to keep solvent.

The other chain, Mecca, Ltd., which originally operated dance halls only, has put bingo games into 60 dance halls and a few theaters. Among the ballrooms is the famous Lyceum Ballroom in London, where games are held regularly. Soon there will be nonstop sessions every Thursday.

REOPENING THEATERS
Several other smaller movie circuits are also getting into the bingo money. Associated-British Cinema has three theaters operating at bingo palaces. ABC, along with several other operating organizations, have reopened closed theaters as bingo centers.

The rise of bingo is not without opposition. Several church leaders are opposing it; a few are accusing it of causing juvenile delinquency. It has also hurt churches and charities financially. Bingo players are passing up benefit games for the money games put

Excuse For A 'Policy'

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The Chester Bowles foreign policy has nothing to do with benefits to the United States. It is a concept which he developed in India under the mystical influence of Nehru.

Nehru speaks nobly in the idiom of Rabindranath Tagore, a Hindu Tolstoy, while as a practical politician he makes deals which he hopes will help his country and keep his Congress Party in power. That does not mean that Nehru is a hypocrite; it does mean that he is an effective politician who has devised a pragmatic formula.

That formula does not include any benefits to the United States. Its principal purpose is to appease Red China and assuage Mao Tse-tung's desire to subordinate the Chienlung Line which includes large and important parts of India. Out of this, Nehru conceived the brilliant idea of Two Chinas which Chester Bowles swallowed whole and if he did not choke on it, most of his countrymen do.

The Two Chinas idea is one of those compromises which never succeeds. The United Nations is to recognize both Nationalist and Communist China, an utterly untenable position as each claims to be China. However, the permanent seat in the Security Council, arranged in 1945 at the San Francisco Conference, is the property of Nationalist China, now in residence on Formosa. How can Red China accept to subordinate a position? And by what legitimate process can the United Nations deprive Nationalist China of a permanent seat on the Security Council which is as much the right of Nationalist China as our seat is the right of the United States?

So there is always a wise guy who works out a scheme. Some say that this scheme is due to the genius of Owen Lattimore. I do not know for sure who the progenitor of this wisdom is, but the great idea is to admit Mongolia as a member of the United Nations.

Mongolia has not really been an independent nation except for a short spurt in history when Genghis Khan and his sons moved in all directions, conquering most of Asia including China and India and the whole of what is now Russia. In fact, so potent were these Mongols and their various Tartar satellites that in India, they established the Mongol Empire; in China, they took over the country and held it for 108 years as the Yuan Dynasty; they gave to Russia its form of government.

After about 160 years, the Mongols subsided. It is not to be presumed that they returned to Mongolia whence they came. We know that in India, they established themselves so effectively that they are still there, particularly in the north, in Pakistan, and in Kashmir. As recently as 1917, I encountered one of the last of the Turgot Mongols who had served in the Czar's Page Corps and was returning to his fater in Peking.

Owen Lattimore, who has spent much of his life in China, first encountered the Mongols when he was set into their country to buy wool, hides and skins, etc., for a Tientsin firm. He liked the people and is one of the few Westerners who have had much to do with these people. Lattimore is said to be in Mongolia now although there has been no public announcement that he is in the employ of the American government which does not recognize Mongolia as a separate country. How an American could go there without a passport is a puzzle which the House Committee on Un-American Activities might look into.

The principal activity of this Mongolian activity is to get Mongolia into the United Nations, thus pleasing Soviet Russia and Red China. The Mongolian delegation could include some Red Chinese members and nobody would know the difference. It is a trick to make it easier for Red China to come in by the back door.

The excuse given is that Soviet Russia vetoed the admission of Mauritania and will veto every other admission unless Mongolia is elected. In that case, the United States can announce that it will veto the admission of Mongolia. (Continued on page five)

Opinions In Brief
"A time-tested truism in the psychology of advertising says 'Repeat a statement often enough and it will become a part of the thinking process of the masses.'" —Carlsbad (N.M.) Current-Argus.

"There is room for differences of opinion over the wisdom of the various spending measures. But whatever the final decision on any of these, one of Congress' most fundamental duties is to maintain its constitutional controls over the people's money." — Industrial News Review.

KIDDIES' BOOK BAGS ESCAPE FEDERAL TAX
The retailers tax on luggage and handbags does not apply to school bags especially designed for use by children in carrying books and pencils and other supplies from school, and which are distinguishable from briefcases and the like, the Internal Revenue Service has decided (in Rev. Rul. 61-124.)

FREE BOOKLET OFFERED ON BOATING SAFETY

With more and more people on the water this summer, dangers are compounded. And the worst hazards, professional yachtsmen say, are those created by landlubbers who do not know the courtesies and the rules of the sea. To overcome this, a 24-page booklet has been prepared by the makers of Bonadettes, a seasickness remedy. Copies are offered free by the Council on Safe Family Boating, 477 Madison Ave., New York 17, New York.

Graphic Arts Exhibit Ready To Open

Graphic art by artists who received support under the WPA Federal Art program here, and work done by students of the Young Artists Workshop conducted this summer, will be on exhibit at the Greenville Art Center beginning Wednesday.

The young artists will be honored Thursday morning between 10 and 11 a. m., when refreshments will be served at the center. The public is invited.

The Greenville Art Center is an outgrowth of a Works Progress Administration's Federal Art Gallery opened in the 1930's. Today, some 25 years later, men and women who received support under the program, are accomplished in the field of art, some as practicing artists, some as teachers and others as writers. Nine of these artists are featured in the exhibit.

The purpose of the WPA program was "to create a widespread interest in the arts on the part of the general public, and thus to increase the demand for services of artists in private industry." The administration furnished a continuous line of exhibitions to the local gallery since it opened in June of 1939. Among the first artists to exhibit at the Greenville gallery were the nine whose work will be featured in the North Gallery of the center through July.

Nine Artists

Arnold Blanch, who is represented by a lithograph, "Portrait of a Farmer," was born in Manitowish, Minn., in 1896 and studied at the Minnesota School of Fine Arts and the Art Students League. He has taught at the league at different times since 1935, at the San Francisco School of Fine Arts, the California School of Fine Arts and Michigan State College. He is represented in the collections of the Brooklyn Museum, Carnegie Institute, Cleveland Museum and Philadelphia Museum.

He has written and illustrated several books on art and lectured in all parts of the country.

Russian born Rafael Soyev, now associated with the New School for Social Research in New York City, is represented by an etching, "Backstage." Known as a painter, graver and etcher, he has taught at the Art Students League and at the American Art School.

Anton Refregier is a former student of Hans Hoffman and is widely known for his murals. This Russian born artist, now of Woodstock, N.Y., is represented by a linoleum cut, "Mine Accident."

Another foreign born artist represented is Harry Gottlieb, a native of Bucharest, Romania. Noted for his painting and serigraphy, he has exhibited at Carnegie Institute, Corcoran Gallery of Art, Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the Whitney Museum.

On display at the center is his colored lithograph entitled, "The Launching."

George Constant, a native of Greece, is represented in the exhibit by a drypoint, "Concord Grapes." He has held over 31 one-man shows in this country and abroad. In the United States he has shown at the Art of Institute of Chicago, the Metropolitan Museum, the Brooklyn Museum, the Whitney Museum, the Museum of Modern Art and the San Francisco Museum.

New York City's Hugh Botts, director of the Audubon Art Membership Committee, is represented by an etching, "Street Show." In addition to his work in painting, printmaking and sculpture, he is known as a craftsman, illustrator and writer. His one-man shows have been held at the Smithsonian Institute, U.S. National Museum and at Rutgers University.

Chet La More, assistant professor of painting at the University of Michigan since 1946, is known as a painter and graver as well as a teacher. La More a native of Wisconsin, is represented by allithography, "Old Dock."

Professor of painting and graphic arts at Wesleyan University at Middletown, Conn., Russel Limbach is represented by a lithograph,

"Winter." The Ohio native is known as a painter and a writer as well as a printmaker.

Elizabeth Olds, a native of Minneapolis, is represented by a lithograph, "Steel's Kitchen Gardens." She now resides in New York City and is known as a painter, lecturer and writer.

Young Artists

Drawings, mobiles, sculpture and ceramics by students who participated in the Young Artists Workshop this summer at the Greenville Art Center will also be on display. These will be located in the South Gallery.

The workshop was conducted in June under the direction of Mrs. Bernard R. Jackson. Assisting were Mrs. Edwin Monroe, sculptors, who instructed students in their sculpture project; Francis Neel, art professor at East Carolina College, who gave instruction in designing mobiles; and Mrs. J.H.B. Moore who presented lectures and color slides of world famous paintings included in the N.C. Museum of Art, Raleigh. Fifty-five pieces are being shown.

The students, between the ages of eight and 13, were Ione Maxwell of Augusta, Ga., Mary Wesley Harvey, Margaret Scales, Hank Worsley, Tommy Worsley, Kyle Highsmith, Jan Flanagan, Mary Randolph, Ann Lautares, Janet Whitehurst, George Harvey and Ginger Minges.

The Greenville Art Center is open from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m. on Tuesdays through Saturdays.

Two N.C. Ports Have Played Big Roles Since Early Colonial Years

By JOHN MERCER REEVES (Chairman, N.C. Ports Authority) (Written for The Associated Press)

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP)—Since colonial days the inlet at Beaufort, N.C., and the Cape Fear River, near present day Wilmington, have been important because of the possibilities and potentialities of deep-water port development.

About 1730, the area which we know today as Morehead City-Beaufort was a thriving port terminal and, at Brunswick Town, across the river from present day Wilmington was another thriving port.

The Port of Beaufort in 1730 and the Port of Wilmington at Brunswick, in the same area, ranked in the top two or three ports of colonial commerce.

In the years preceding the Civil War, North Carolina, by developing an east-west rail line, followed the tradition of colonial port development by having the eastern rail head at what is now Morehead City. Meanwhile, just prior to and during the Civil War, the Port of Wilmington became of tremendous importance to the entire Confederacy, and for all the years of the War Between the States, Wilmington was part of the life line of Lee's army.

In the following 55 years, port development in North Carolina was of not too great significance, but in 1923, on the recommendation of the North Carolina State Ship and Water Transportation Commission, Gov. Cameron Morris asked for, and received, an act to have a state-wide referendum urging the investment of 8.7 million in port development.

Wilmington Port, despite the fact that this referendum was defeated, incidentally, this has been considered by some astute observers of North Carolina commercial history to be the greatest mistake made in judgment our people have made, continued to thrive and the people of Morehead City did not give up either.

A 1,000-foot pier and 32,000-square-foot terminal shed were built in 1935 and 1937 in Morehead City. World War II came along, and evidence of world wide commerce afterward, indicated that great wisdom on the part of our legislators dictated another effort toward ports development.

The present North Carolina State Ports Authority was established in 1945. A 1949 bond issue provided $7.5 million for improvement and development of two ports in North Carolina, and in 1952 the present sites of the two thriving North Carolina - operated deep-water terminals were dedicated. The one at Wilmington is known as North Carolina State Docks and the one at Morehead City is known as North Carolina Ocean Terminals.

Then followed five years of fair success, with a mixture of politics and good and bad business judgment. A new board was appointed by the governor in 1957 and the membership increased by the 1959 Legislature to nine men. This board employed D. Leon Williams, (Williams is now immediate past president of the American Association of Port Authorities), as Executive Director in 1958 and the executive offices were moved to Raleigh.

This Board, composed of W. G.

Clark Jr., as vice chairman; Collier Cobb Jr., as executive committee member; Earl Phillips of High Point; Robert D. Eichelberger of Asheville; Charles D. Gray of Gastonia; Kirkwood Adams of Roanoke Rapids; Tom Evins of Durham and Harvey Hines of Kinston, has served the State of North Carolina well and diligently. As chairman, I tender them my commendation and thanks for the unselfish service they performed. Gen. Eichelberger resigned in late 1960 for reasons of health and Mr. Evins accepted an appointment to serve on the Raleigh-Durham Airport Authority in early 1961. The other terms expired in June of this year.

Banking 'In The Round' Arrives

NEW YORK (AP)—Banking in the round has come to New York. Operations at the Sixth and Lexington branch of the Chemical Bank New York Trust Co., are now being conducted in quarters remodeled on a circular plan. Not only is the layout of the main business office round, but the staircases are circular, as is the elevator shaft casing. It's efficient, say bank officials, as well as attractive.

ROUTINE BREAK

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP)—Attendants in the emergency room at Mansfield General Hospital got a little break from the routine recently. Included in the day's cases were a mouse bite and a rabbit bite.

Bardot As Untalkative As Famous Mona Lisa

By BOB THOMAS

PARIS (AP)—At 1:30 hours I was gazing at the Mona Lisa. At 1:30 I was looking at Brigitte Bardot.

It's a long way from the Louvre to St. Maurice Studios, and even farther from the 16th century to the 20th. But I made the trip and got equal results from both ladies: nothing.

Mona Lisa you know about. An impossible interview. Brigitte Bardot I had to find out about for myself.

She is making a film, the name of which escapes me. It might as well be called "The B. B. Story" because it is about a girl who: 1. Becomes a fashion model; 2. A dancer; 3. "Europe's highest-paid star, a sex symbol for the world"; 4. Marries and divorces her director; 5. Has a procession of boyfriends; 6. Is assailed for her wild life; 7. Attempts suicide.

The man who took me to the studio indicated that the chances of Bardot's talking were as good as those of President Charles de Gaulle's doing the can-can at the Moulin Rouge. Even so, it was worth a try.

The scene being shot was directed over and over again by Louis Malle, 28, an intense member of the "new wave."

Finally, the shooting stopped and Bardot came out of the bedroom and sauntered about the stage. She was slim-waisted but broad-beamed in a pair of blue jeans. She also wore a white T-shirt that strained both the material and credulity. Her face was in the familiar pout and the hair had to be seen to be believed.

She floated around the set, staring at photos of herself on the walls. The man who brought me advanced cautiously toward her to ask if she felt like talking. A French gesture cut the air and she made it plain that would be impossible. That was that.

She has said that she will quit films at the end of this year, but she has promised that before.

WEATHER OUTLOOK—These maps, based on those supplied July 14 by the U.S. Weather Bureau, forecast the probable rainfall and temperatures for the next 30 days. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

The squat, round-faced Chinese Communist leader's face glistened with an Oriental smile as he clinked glasses with Nikita Khrushchev at a recent Kremlin palace reception.

Khrushchev's toast to Chinese Foreign Minister Chen Yi obviously was intended as an elaborate public display of Moscow-Peiping friendship, at a moment when Peiping was smarting from deliberate Kremlin slaps.

Chen Yi was out of character. Throughout the Orient, old China hands consider him a man who hates all foreigners with a deep hatred—and that may include distrust for Russians, too. Here is a story about him, told by a long-time Far East observer:

"Driving one day in Shanghai shortly after the Reds came to power, I stopped for a slow-moving car. The face looking at me from the rear window of that car was Chen Yi's. I'd seen many times the Asiatic scowl of hatred for foreigners, but never with such concentrated contempt. Chen Yi hates foreigners and cares little who knows it. He couldn't possibly have known my nationality. I could have been a Russian. The town was full of them."

Chen Yi was a victorious Red general then. He became foreign minister in 1959 at a time when the Peiping-Moscow argument over how best to push the world revolution was at a boiling point. This month it was Chen Yi, in a Peiping speech, who pledged Red China's regime to abide by Moscow's leadership of world communism. His avowal came amid evidence that the old quarrel had been boiling up once again. On the surface, at least, it seemed Red China would now go quietly along with Moscow's world blueprint. But behind the scenes there seemed still to be sullen Chinese resentment.

What does all this mean in relation to war or peace? What does it mean with regard to Western policies? What does it mean with relation to Premier Khrushchev's aggressive policy in Germany and West Berlin? Can a real Moscow-Peiping break be expected?

These are critical questions for the United States and the West. Much depends on correctly assessing Soviet-Red Chinese relations. The assessment cannot be made without a studious look at the past 40 years.

Ever since the Kung Chan Tang—Chinese Communist party—was born in Moscow 40 years ago there have been irritations between the Muscovites and their Oriental comrades. In its early days the KCT was just a creature of the Communist international. Actually it was bossed by Comintern agent Nguyen Than—now known as Ho Chih Minh, the Indo-Chinese Communist chief of North Viet Nam.

For years the party remained the merest drop in a Chinese sea of humanity. And as Japanese aggressiveness began more and more to worry the Kremlin, the Comintern ordered the Chinese Reds to join forces with Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang in a national front.

But Mao Tze-tung and his top lieutenant, Chu Teh, had other ideas. They believed in violent revolution. In 1927 they maneuvered Chen Tu-hsiu, the party's founder out of power, and organized the 4th route army to begin insurrection which would go into revolution one day against the Kuomintang.

Moscow, still seeking domination, sent in Wang Ming, a Soviet-trained follower of the Kremlin and 27 other Chinese to take over. At Stalin's order, he disapproved of guerrilla war against both Japanese and Chinese Nationalist forces at the same time. Stalin, fearing Japan, wanted unity.

Wang lasted until 1935. Mao maneuvered him out and, purged those wanting to keep the party strictly to the Moscow line regardless of practical Chinese considerations.

Mao proved to a skeptical Stalin he was right: A Chinese Communist revolution could succeed when it did, in 1949. Stalin summoned Mao the Kremlin and obliged him, after a discussion lasting more than two months, to sign a mutual assistance treaty.

Among other things, it recognized the final separation of Outer Mongolia (the puppet Mongolian People's Republic) from China. That remained one source of friction, but there were many others.

Today there are frequent, cautious Chinese references to the Wang Ming and Chen Tu-hsiu "deviations." Wang is called a "left opportunist," meaning he hampered the revolution by refusing to take advantage of opportunities.

Chen was a "right opportunist" who overemphasized national front unity to the detriment of revolution-ary action. The insinuation has been that if the deviationists—and thus the Russians—had been given their way, there would have been no successful Red Chinese revolution.

not long ago, confining the struggle to legality and avoiding other types of struggle were proved wrong.

It means, if the Chinese had their way, there would be violent action wherever the opportunity occurred, regardless of the risk. That includes the risk of nuclear war. The frictions remain and indeed seem to be growing as the debate rages behind the Bamboo and Iron curtains.

Found Snakes In Locker Storage

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Roger Tucker, a bus terminal employee making a routine check of storage lockers made an unexpected and chilling discovery Monday. More than 15 snakes had been left in the locker in two paper sacks and a cardboard box. Officers responding to Tucker's call said the snakes were of several different varieties and included one rattler. Police had to kill a few of the snakes. The others were turned over to the biology department of Mercer University.

Cobb Made It At Last "He Went To Eternal Home"

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ralph McGill, publisher and columnist of the Atlanta Constitution, wrote the following tribute to Ty Cobb, who died Monday. McGill formerly was sports editor of the Constitution.

By RALPH MCGILL
Publisher of the Atlanta Constitution
ATLANTA (AP)—All his life, Tyrus Raymond Cobb was in competition with life, but chiefly with himself.

never do it and it angered him that here was something with which he could not come to grips and have it out.
It was not like going out behind the grandstand with Billy Evans, the umpire. Try as he would, he could not find the old dream in the hills of north Georgia where he was born 74 years ago.

But he made it at last. He went to that mysterious Eternal Home on the sunny afternoon of July 17 just about the time the players of his day would have been taking the field for batting practice.

The greatest baseball player and competitor sports has ever known went Home as quietly as if his Father had come and taken him in his arms and carried him away.

Others are writing about the records. They will endure.
It is the man who interests us most. The fires which had flamed in him for most of his life had been slowly banked in the years of retirement.

Doctors marveled at him. He would not quit. He had cancer of the prostate and diabetes. His physicians would keep him in the hospital for a few weeks and greatly improve his condition.
And then, without notice, he would put on his clothes and leave. He would go out and try to find whatever it was he sought from life and then illness would drive him back.

Last December the twin disease began to gain. Not too many weeks before he died he returned to his distressed doctors in really bad condition.
We will never know what drove him. He worshipped his father, who had been school superintendent and state senator.

The father had been killed at home when he was away at the time. This loss always haunted him.
A few years ago he asked a few persons to lunch at an Atlanta hotel to announce his educational foundation. The tall, graying man dabbed at his eyes with a napkin, pushing up his rimless glasses.

He talked of his mountain bears who, in by-gone years, never had much chance at education. He wanted his foundation to help needy boys and girls. But there was a typical Cobb touch. They had to have toughed it out one year on their own to prove they were eligible.

Tears slid down his face. "The Cobbs cry easy," he said, somewhat apologetically. And this was a strange thing, because Cobb and tears had never been associated.
One wondered if this lonely and taciturn man, who could be so gentle and compassionate, and yet who could battle with his fists or at baseball with a ferocity which made men afraid, might not have wept many times in the secret hours of night.

Fiercest Competitor In Baseball Dies Of Cancer

Cobb's Record Like Towering Monument

By VERNON BUTLER
ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Ty Cobb, whose many records stand as a towering monument to the fiercest competitor ever to flash across the baseball scene, is dead at 74.

The incomparable Georgia Peach died Monday of cancer of the prostate gland. The diagnosis, first made in 1959, was not made public until death claimed the baseball great at Emory University Hospital. Cobb, who had made several trips to Emory, entered the hospital for the last time June 5.

In addition to the cancer, he had diabetes and chronic heart disease," Cobb's physician, Dr. Hugh Wood, said. Wood said X-ray examinations in December, 1959, showed that the cancer had spread to the pelvic bone and vertebrae.

He died peacefully and without pain," the physician reported. With Cobb during his last days were his son, James, two daughters, Miss Shirley Cobb and Beverly McLauren, all of California; and his first wife, the former Charlie Martin Lombard of Augusta, Ga. The Cobbs were married in 1908 and divorced in 1947. Two years later, Cobb married Frances Cass of Buffalo, N.Y., and they were divorced.

Private funeral services will be held Wednesday at 3 p.m. Eastern Standard Time in the chapel of the Thomas J. McGehee Funeral Home, Cornelia, Ga., with burial at nearby Royston. The family requested that in lieu of flowers, contributions be made to the Cobb Education Foundation.

Death thwarted Cobb's desire to build a home—"in which to die," as he put it—atop a mountain near Cornelia in northeast Georgia only a few miles from the Narrows community where he was born Dec. 18, 1886.

"I came back to Georgia to die," Cobb said in one of his last interviews. "I'm a small town boy who never got used to the big lights."

He spent most of his retirement years at Atherton, Calif., and at Lake Tahoe, Nev., before returning to his native state in 1958. He lived in a small apartment in Cornelia.

He quit baseball after the 1923 season with a lifetime batting average of .367, highest in the history of the game. He batted only 240 in his first season as a Detroit outfielder in 1905, then topped .300 for 23 consecutive years, his last two at Philadelphia. He managed Detroit for six years starting in 1921.

Cobb led the American League in hitting for 12 seasons, nine of them consecutive. He hit over 400 three times, compiled a lifetime total of 4,191 hits, scored 2,244 runs and stole 82 bases. He stole 96 bases in 1915 for one of his many all-time records.

Cobb's position at the summit of baseball was emphasized in 1936 when baseball writers awarded him 222 of a possible 226 votes, more than any other player. He was Wagner or Christy Mathewson when the first group was enshrined in baseball's Hall of Fame.

"I wouldn't change a thing," Cobb declared recently in reviewing his baseball career. "I played every game to the hilt. I always played to win. But I never filed my spikes the way they said I did, and I never deliberately spiked anyone in my life."

Cobb was frequently critical of power baseball after his retirement. He deplored the trend away from finesse.
He was a mellow man in his last few years, and he talked less of baseball. Projects close to his heart, besides the home on the mountain, were Cobb Memorial Hospital at Royston, Ga., near his birthplace, and the Cobb Education Fund. He endowed the hospital and the fund from the considerable wealth he accumulated through investments. He set aside money for the care of indigent patients, and his education fund provided money for college studies by needy boys and girls.

One-Armed Pro Takes On Snead

URBANA, Ohio (AP)—A one-armed golfer who'll take on Sam Snead in a private match at the Urbana Country Club Sunday says, "He may outdrive me, but I'll give him fits from 100 yards out and on the green."

And, adds Prospero Gianvito, "If he's the least bit off his game or I'm really on mine, I just might beat him!"

Snead, one of golfdom's leading money winners, just smiles and says: "We'll see."

Magic Number Is Three For Spahn

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer
The magic number now is three for Warren Spahn, the southpaw ace who has discovered the last five are the toughest in his bid for that charmed 300th victory.

Spahnie got No. 297 Monday night, beating Cincinnati for the first time this season as the Milwaukee Braves clobbered the Reds 13-4 and trimmed their National League lead to four games over second place Los Angeles.

Winston Leading Carolina League

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Winston-Salem leads the hot Carolina League race by a mere percentage point, with the Red Sox edged Greensboro, 4-3, Monday night for the victory that put them out front.

Wilson took a 6-4 decision over Raleigh, and Durham split with Burlington. After losing, 5-2, in the opener, the Bulls charged back for a 9-0 victory in the second game.

Relief pitcher Bud Rowland saved the game for Winston-Salem's third straight victory. With the tying run on third base and one man out in the ninth, Rowland tied two batters on grounders to second base.

Raleigh errors contributed to their downfall. The Tobs, taking advantage of five Raleigh miscues, piled up five runs in the third and another in the seventh. Willie Jones, the winning pitcher, took over in the first after the Caps had scored three runs off starter Pete Cimino. Jones gave up only one run the rest of the game.

Owen Johnson, Durham catcher, matched the loop record when he belted out three home runs in the 9-0 win over Burlington. The former Greensboro High athlete got two-run homers in the third, fifth and eighth innings. In the 17 years of the Carolina League, no batter has had four home runs in one game.

The games tonight: Winston-Salem at Greensboro, Durham at Burlington, Raleigh at Wilson.

Seeded players, headed by No. 1 Bernard (Tui) Barzen, the 1954, 1958 and 1959 winner from Dallas, and No. 2 Chuck McKinley of St. Ann, Mo., the recent Wimbledon finalist, plowed through Monday's first round.

Eleventh Win In Row For Whitey

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer
When Ralph Houk manages by the book, you have to figure he uses the Farmer's Almanac.

The New York Yankee skipper, taking note of the hot weather ahead, announced that Whitey Ford, who won 16 on a four-day rotation, was going to pitch every fifth day in the second half of the season. So what happened on Ford's first start with the extra day of rest?

The stubby southpaw ace ran into hot, humid weather at Baltimore—and pitched a six-hit shut-out for his 17th victory and 11th in a row, as the Yankees wrapped up a 5-0 decision.

The rain, however, caused the second game to be called with New York ahead 4-1 in the top of the fifth. That not only washed out home runs by Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle, but also left the Yanks in second place in the American League race by one percentage point behind Detroit.

The Tigers walloped Kansas City 7-4 for their fourth straight success.
Early Wynn gained his 292nd career victory with a three-hit, 4-1 decision over Boston for the Chicago White Sox in the only other game scheduled in the AL.

In the National, Warren Spahn won No. 297 as Milwaukee belted Cincinnati 13-4 and trimmed the Reds' lead to four games over Los Angeles. The second place Dodgers defeated Pittsburgh 6-4.

Philadelphia beat San Francisco 10-7, and St. Louis swept a two-night pair from the Chicago Cubs, 10-6 and 8-5.

Ford (17-2), who hadn't won more than 16 in one season since hitting his one-year high with a 19-6 record in 1956, struck out nine. Mantle and Bill Skowron, back after missing six games because of injury, homered in the sixth inning off loser Milt Pappas (6-5).

It was Mantle's 33rd, and he tagged what would have been No. 14 in a row, as the Yankees wrapped up a 5-0 decision.

U.S. Will Take On W. Germany

STUTTGART, Germany (AP)—With two members of the team in sick bay and two others recovering from ailments, the United States takes on West Germany today in the first half of a two-day track and field meet.

Sprinter Paul Drayton of Villanova is on the shelf with a muscle pull in his left leg, and half miler Jerry Siebert of Occidental, who won the 800 meters in the meet against the Soviet Union over the weekend, has a bad cold.

In addition, hurdler Fran Whittington of Santa Clara, Calif., went through a session with the dentist Monday, and pole vaulter John Uelses of the Quantico Marines is recovering from an infected leg.

West Germany probably has the strongest team in Western Europe, but still is not rated in the class of even a sub par U.S. team, so Coach Jim Elliott has no worries.

The meet is scheduled to get underway at 1:30 p.m. Eastern Standard Time in the Neckarstadion. The U.S. women competed against the West German girls Monday night and lost 66-38.

The men's meet will follow the pattern of the one against Russia except that there will be no decathlon or walk.

Hayes Jones will replace Drayton in the 100. Chuck Frazier will take his spot in the 200 and Earl Young will take care of his position in the 400 meter relay.

Jim Beatty will replace Siebert in the 800 meters.

The Germans, who are meeting the United States for the first time since 1933 when the country was unified, will not have the use of Olympic 100 meter gold medalist Armin Hary, who has retired, and Martin Lauer, the world 110 meter hurdles record holder, who is ill.

Elements Slowing Homer Records

NEW YORK (AP)—Roger Maris and Mickey Martle could blame the elements for making the road toward Babe Ruth's season home run record of 60 a little steeper.

As if spurred by an edict from baseball Commissioner Ford Frick Monday that Ruth's mark can be tied or bettered only in 154 games, the New York Yankee home run twins hit a total of three in Baltimore Monday night, only to have two of them—one for each of the sluggers—washed out as rain forced postponement of the second game of a double-header.

Last Round In CGA Tournament Today

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP)—Allen (Buddy) Watkins Jr., the fellow they didn't know was around, and Billy Joe Patton, always a pre-tournament choice, met today for 36 holes for the Carolina Golf Association amateur championship.

Each advanced Monday at the expense of the hometown favorites, the Smith brothers. Watkins, 24-year-old Greensboro entry, bumped Charlie Smith, 4 and 3, as the medalist and Walker Cup team member never did play up to his superb standard of earlier rounds.

Patton, 39-year-old Morganton lumber dealer, put out Dave Smith, 5 and 3 in the other 18-hole semifinal.

Watkins found victory most gratifying. He pointed to a newspaper headline that, with a pardonable burst of civic pride proclaimed an hour before the matches got underway, "It's Smiths vs. Patton in Backyard Contests."

The smaller type was reserved for Mr. Watkins.

He earned headline size type with his two over par shooting against Charlie.

Buddy birdied the first hole from 12 feet and never lost the advantage. He led by three after the seventh where Charlie's tee shot was lost deep in the woods, but then Buddy wobbled a bit, losing Nos. 8 and 9 with double bogeys.

As the hometown gallery waited for the big push by Charlie to storm into the lead it was Watkins who took charge again.

Charlie bogeyed 10, 11 and 12 as he had creek trouble, missed the green and was trapped in that order to drop 4 down.

Charlie's last gasp was a birdie four on the 13th, but he lost 14 when he three-putted and they halved 15 as a light shower began to end the match.

Patton, winner of the title in 1947 and 1958, was three under par in beating Dave Smith for the third time in tournament play.

Azalea Open Golf Date Is Settled

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Wilmington, N.C., apparently has won its fight to host the early April date for its Azalea Open golf tournament.

The city wants to continue the tournament as part of its annual azalea festival, set for Next April 5-8.

J. B. (Bunny) Hines, president of the sponsoring Wilmington Athletic Association, had said the Professional Golfers' Association (PGA) would have liked to bypass the April date in favor of more lucrative tournaments at that time. The last Azalea open carried a purse of $12,000.

However, at a meeting of the International Golf Sponsors Association here Monday, Ed Carter, tournament director of the PGA, was quoted as telling Hines the Azalea Open definitely would be on the professional tour in 1962, on the weekend before the Masters Tournament in Augusta, Ga. That's the date Wilmington wants.

Reulbach Dies Soon After Cobb

GLENS FALLS, N.Y. (AP)—Ed Reulbach, 78, an iron man as a pitcher, died at his home within hours of the death of Ty Cobb— who played for the losing Detroit Tigers when Reulbach and the Chicago Cubs won the 1907 and 1908 World Series.

Reulbach beat the Tigers and Cobb 5-1 in the third game of the Cubs' four-game sweep over the American League champions in 1907.

The big right-hander is best remembered however, for the two shutouts he pitched in a double-header against the Brooklyn Dodgers on Sept. 26, 1908, a feat never duplicated. The two shutouts came during a string of four that equaled the National League Record.

Reulbach spent 13 years in the majors, pitching with the Cubs, Brooklyn and Boston of the National League. He had a 182-106 won-lost record. His best year was 1908 when he won 24 games.

Reulbach is survived by his widow, Nellie. Funeral services will be held Thursday, with burial at Montclair, N.J.

New Bank Director And Vice President Elected

Austin H. Britt, manager of time payment operations for Wachovia Bank and Trust Company here, was elected assistant vice president, and Alex H. Galloway, president of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, was named a director of the bank today.

Their elections and other action by the directors were announced by R. W. Howard, senior vice president here, following the quarterly meeting of the Wachovia board this morning.

Howard said that deposits and resources of Wachovia on June 30 were the highest for this date in the history of the bank. Deposits were $594 million, resources totaled $686 million, capital funds were $55 million and loans were $361 million.

"Particularly are we gratified," Howard said, "by the substantial growth in our savings deposits. These deposits have been increasing steadily at the bank here over a period of many months, and the growth in the last three months has been most encouraging. This can be attributed largely to the enthusiastic public response to Daily Interest," which Wachovia began offering in April.

The continuing increase in personal savings, he said, is an indication of the healthy stability of the local economy and the thrifty habits of the people here.

Looking ahead, he said, "the number of strong upward trends now evident here and across the country suggest business in Greenville will continue to improve in the next six months."

Howard also reported good customer response to the establishment of Wachovia International. "There is increasing interest here in expanding the markets for Carolina products through increased international trade," he said. "Many companies are reporting Wachovia International services helpful in this phase of their business."

The directors declared a quarterly dividend of 12 1/2 cents per share, payable August 15 to shareholders of record at the close of business August 1.

Britt, who has been associated with Wachovia since 1954, is manager of the Time Payment Department here. His training and experience includes all phases of installment loan and sales finance operations. A native of Fairmont, he attended East Carolina College and served in the Army during the Korean War. He attends St. James Methodist Church here and is building a home on the Washington Highway at Oakhurst.

Galloway, a director of Reynolds since he was named treasurer in 1951, was elected president of the company in 1960. He is a member of the finance council of the National Industrial Conference Board, a director of the Firemen's Mutual Insurance Company of Providence, Rhode Island, and a director of Security Diversified Shares, Inc.

Built Own Island To Escape Flood

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—A huge dragline, stranded in the muddy Arkansas River, had to build itself an island of sand to escape rising waters.

The $100,000 excavating machine was being used Monday on a sandbar to rechannel a portion of the river downstream from here. Rapidly rising waters, fed by weekend rains, covered the sandbar and began lapping toward the expensive diesel motors.

Engineers couldn't get the machine to shore, so they put it to work building an island.

Camp Opens

More than 425 high school students from eight states have been registered for the 11th annual summer camp at East Carolina College which opened a full schedule of activities on Monday.

The music camp is under the direction of Prof. Earl Beach, chairman of the ECC Department of Music, with Director of Bands Herbert L. Carter assisting.

A staff of instructors and counselors numbers 50 persons. Activities include three bands, two choral groups, an orchestra, studies in art, piano, dance majorette, and drum majors.

Prof. Beach said the students have registered from all across North Carolina, and in addition there are students from South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Indiana, and Maryland.

Rotarians Told Of Tokyo Meet

Mrs. W. Jesse Moye of Farmville spoke to Greenville Rotarians last night on the Rotary International Convention which she recently attended in Tokyo.

Mrs. Moye, widow of the late W. Jesse Moye who served as governor of district 773 of Rotary International, attended the Rotary International convention during a two and one-half month round-the-world tour.

The Rotary International Convention in Tokyo, Mrs. Moye said, was the largest in Rotary history, attended by some 23,000 delegates representing 74 different countries and geographical regions. It was the first Rotary International convention held in Asia.

The world tour taken by Mrs. Moye was one of several scheduled by Rotary International in connection with the annual convention of the organization. During the tour, Mrs. Moye said, she met in different places throughout the world Rotarians and their wives she and her husband had known through other international conventions they had attended.

In Tokyo, Mrs. Moye said, the Japanese were gracious hosts to the visiting Rotarians, and throughout the country of Japan where she traveled following the convention the Rotarians were welcomed.

Mrs. Moye was introduced at last night's meeting by Dr. Sylvester Green who was in charge of the program.

His Job Calls For Teetotaler

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—John Gluyas, manager of the state-owned liquor warehouse, figures he has handled 49,439,267 bottles of liquor in 12 years, hasn't misplaced a single bottle — and hasn't drunk a drop.

"If I drank, I couldn't hold this job," he says, pointing to the thousands of glass bottles and the hard cement floor.

CHAPTER 15

"Now of course we'd be wise to start at the beginning," said Reginald Jameson, works manager of Silver Queen, addressing the members of the touring party. "I gather that you're particularly interested in the face powder and lipstick. The first room is the powder room."

Jameson gave the quick smile of a man who had made that joke a thousand times. "I mean, of course the place where the face powder is manufactured." He led the way to one of the single-story buildings, and opened the door. "If you'll step through and gather round me so that you can hear above the noise of the machinery."

The noise was persistent but subdued. A hundred or so girls in white turbans and white smocks were doing various operations with remarkable speed. A faint, perfumed haze of powder hung about the huge room.

Jameson kept talking, pointing, explaining.

"The powders are mixed in the next room, show you in a minute, and they come through here on a vacuum feed, each box is filled from the bottom—see?—and then it's packed and labeled and pushed along to the next process or for packing and storing. Twenty thousand boxes of ordinary powder go through one of these machines each day."

Jameson led the way into a smaller room, filled with sacks of powders, big drums filled with powders, with machines and big drums or containers suspended from the ceiling. "See that?" He pointed up to a big U-shaped container. "Everything goes in there for a start. It's dropped into the big hopper—see, that square thing that's shaking as if palsied—and it's sieved through a 120 mesh screen. Then it goes—"

He traced the different processes, showed where the ingredients were channelled towards one spot, then carried up on an enclosed bucket conveyor and tipped into the big mixer, which was on a level with their heads.

"Of course different shades are made at different times," Jameson went on, "the materials are the same, the only differences are the color pigments—dark powders made for dark-skinned people obviously. You know about the different shades we make here, from Peach Bloom to Dusk, don't you?"

They went back into the room where the boxes were filled. Anyone who wanted to put irritant into a few odd boxes would have to do it here. Rollison watched the four girls on duty. One of these could easily do it, or someone who distracted their attention before a box was sealed; or someone who came by night and filled a box or two by hand.

"Now let's have a look at the lipstick shop," said Jameson, and led the way. The party followed, sheeplike, out into the warm day, across a path which divided a bright green lawn, towards the double story building which had been pointed out before.

At a doorway, Jameson turned to speak to someone who was passing, and for the first time, came face to face with Rollison. Recognition flashed into his eyes, there was a perceptible moment of silence while Rollison looked at him blankly; but inwardly, he was cursing the frequency with which his photograph appeared in newspapers.

Jameson recovered quickly and led the way through double doors into a room which looked rather like a kitchen, with huge steel vats all filled with melted fat which was being stirred very gently by a mechanical spoon. "That's the first process," Jameson said. "We have to melt all the raw materials down, and then we add the coloring, in—here."

He flung open a door, almost dramatically. But he avoided Rollison's eye.

The smaller room had a sultry, fiery look. There was red everywhere; the red of flame. Big containers filled with bright red paste were being fed into big "mouths" which looked like letter boxes. The color touched the workmen, the floors, the walls, the outside of the containers.

"Bit satanic when you look at it quickly," said Jameson. "Not laid on for your especial benefit, either, it's always more or less like this. Now, you see the actual paste being bed through there. Now come into the next room, and you'll see what's happening."

Again he led the way, and this time took a quick, wary look at Rollison, who appeared not to notice it.

On the other side of the dividing wall, there was a row of seven or eight taps. Girls were at four of these, and the bulk lipstick was oozing out of the taps into shiny molds, pieces of metal about fifteen by five, two inches deep and pierced with holes rather like a cribbage board. The molten lipstick filled these up, until every hole disappeared.

"Then they go into this refrigerator, to cool off," said Jameson, and opened the door of a metal cupboard. Several of these metal molds were in there. "Next, the girl working here takes all the lipstick bullets out, and puts them on this tray. . . ."

The "bullets" were put onto the tray in even rows, then passed along to the girls sitting at a long bench in the middle of which was a moving conveyor belt. Naked gas burners, inside a kind of metal box, were by the side of each girl. Each had a mass of gilt containers on one side, and a tray of bullets on the other. On picked up a bullet, put it into a container, twisted it to make sure that it went up and down properly, then stood it on end so that it was conveyed, on the belt, through the naked flames, and put them on.

"That gives it the nice shiny surface the ladies like," said Jameson.

"So everything in this room is handled individually," Rollison

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Return of industrial output to precession levels and rise of average factory worker's weekly earnings to a new high merely emphasize the economy's stickiest problem—the number of would-be workers who haven't jobs.

The rebound in the production of the factories, mines and utilities has helped push employment to a record for this time of year. Still the official estimate puts unemployment at 5.6 million, or 6.8 per cent of the total labor force.

And Washington experts are predicting that despite the general growth in the economy the unemployment total is likely to be above 5 million next January. This would be more than 6 per cent of the expected labor force.

Some question both the accuracy of the federal estimates and the gloominess of the predictions. They contend that the labor department's tally of the unemployed takes in many who are merely seasonally so, and many who are looking for jobs they don't really need except to get some pin money.

But the hard core of the jobless, even if the fringe cases are trimmed off, is unmistakable. Labor Department figures show some 40 per cent of the jobless to be married men with family responsibilities, and 43 per cent of the jobless to have been out of work for more than 15 weeks.

Retraining programs for those whose skills are no longer in demand are under way. At best, they can handle only a small part of the jobless. The biggest part is the unskilled, and it is among these that unemployment showed the sharpest rise during the recession.

The lengthening of the factory work week has helped many workers who were skipping to get along on smaller paychecks. More hours worked and rising wage scales have brought average weekly earnings to $94.24, according to the Labor Department. Also helping was the increase in overtime pay.

Such increases usually precede any general expansion in factory work rolls. As industrial output rises, more of the unemployed should find new jobs.

Even this won't solve the overall problem of unemployment. For one thing, increased mechanization is accompanying increased output. This means that while factories are turning out more goods they are doing so without hiring more workers, and sometimes doing so without as many workers as formerly.

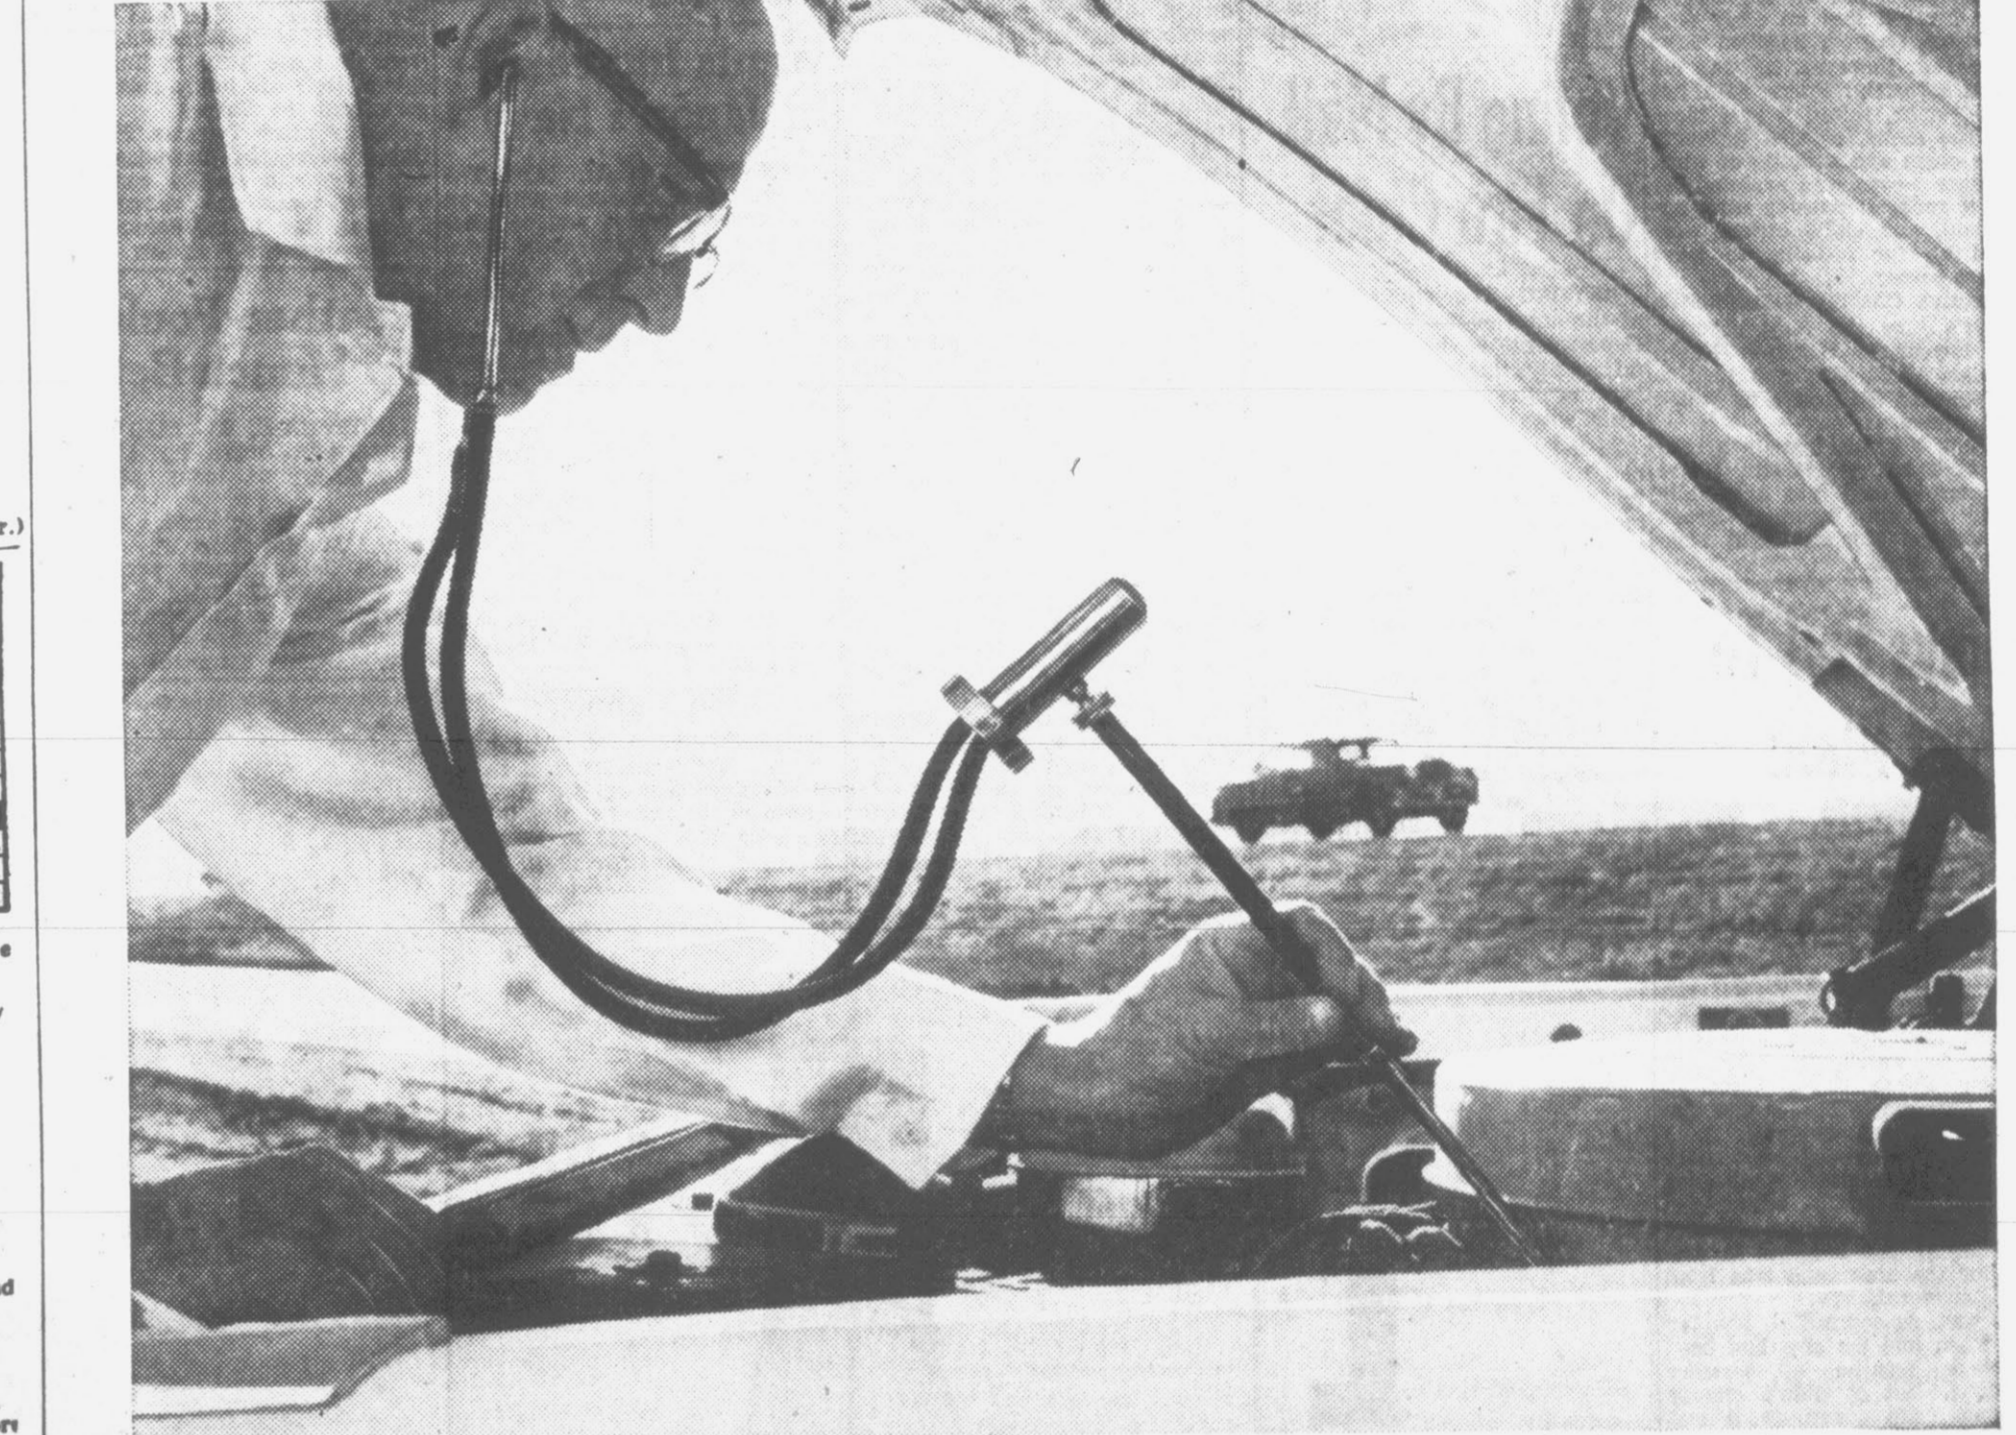

But the main reason unemployment seems likely to stay high, is that the total work force is growing as fast as the number of jobs. That leaves the question: Will the nation's economic growth be large enough to furnish all the new jobs needed?

Shell engineer uses stethoscope to pinpoint troublesome noise. Today's Super Shell fights three different engine noises to give you top performance.

Shell scientists use stethoscopes to pinpoint noise. Today's Super Shell, with 9 ingredients, hushes pings, knocks, and rumbles—to give you top performance

Shell scientists are sticklers for keeping engines quiet. They even use stethoscopes to track down mechanical noise. And they blend Super Shell to silence three different engine sounds—including a sinister rumble that can lead to trouble.

that they set off the fuel. Super Shell's medicine for wild ping is a new, improved version of TCP.* This remarkable additive "fireproofs" certain deposits, making them virtually harmless.

3. Super Shell fights plain, old-fashioned knock. Today's formula includes an anti-knock mix so powerful that a teaspoonful per gallon is enough to raise anti-knock rating a full five points.

- Super Shell's 9 ingredients for top performance
- #1 is TCP—for power, mileage, and longer plug life.
  - #2 is "cat-cracked" gasoline—for power.
  - #3 is anti-knock mix—for knock resistance.
  - #4 is Alkylate to control "high-speed knock".
  - #5 is Butane—for quick starts.
  - #6 is Pentane mix—for fast warm-ups.
  - #7 is an "anti-icer." (Added when cold weather sets in.)
  - #8 is gum preventive—for clean carburetors.
  - #9 is Platformate for extra mileage.

SOME engine noises are more than a nuisance. They're symptoms of insidious goings-on in your engine. They can mean that you're getting poor performance. Even heading for expensive repairs.

That's why Shell scientists are such sticklers on the subject. And why they insist that Super Shell's nine-ingredient formula must strike at the causes of three different engine noises.

1. Super Shell fights rumble—a rapid-fire, low-pitched knock that may mean the beginning of costly damage. Fortunately rumble is rare.

But it can crop up when a very high-compression engine is hot, accelerating, and at full throttle.

Hot-engine knock at high speeds is a familiar problem to Shell scientists. They first faced it when they developed Alkylate for aviation engines. Alkylate is now one of Super Shell's nine ingredients.

2. Super Shell fights wild ping—an elusive, sharp knocking that lasts for a few seconds and then disappears.

But while it's going on, wild ping is no friend to your engine. The noise you hear is an actual explosion. It's caused by deposits so fiery hot

WARNING: Don't trust your ears

You could have rumble, wild ping, or even ordinary knock without being aware of it.

But even when you don't notice them, these noises can be signs of trouble inside your engine.

So if you want to be sure of top performance, play safe and use today's Super Shell.

Its nine-ingredient formula fights everything from "trace knock" through the most sinister rumble.

*Trademark for Shell's anti-icer additive. Gasoline containing TCP is covered by U.S. Patent 2899318

Charge Thefts For Tattooing

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Five teenagers have been accused of taking $15,000 worth of equipment from three schools to pay for tattoos, police said.

Three of the boys have been tattooed, one of them five times. They range in age from 14 to 16 and will appear in court Wednesday.

The man who allegedly did the tattooing, and received part of the loot as payment, is being sought. The boys were quoted as saying the man sometimes asked for specific items, such as typewriters, and they provided them. One school was practically cleaned out in six thefts.

The items stolen included tape recorders, radios, adding machines, coffee pots and food.

Arrest Four For Liquor Violation

Four Negroes were arrested on liquor-law violation charges over the past weekend, according to Pitt County ABC enforcers. Ross Lee Hines, 38, Louis Dail, and Rosalie Sessoms, all of Ayden, were charged with illegal possession of non-tax-paid whiskey for the purpose of sale and placed under $200 bonds each, after officers found illegal booze in their possession.

Officers said a half-gallon of illegal spirits were found in Hines' possession, while Dail and Sessoms each had one-half pint of whiskey.

Officers making the arrests were Ayden Police Lt. James Ross, Sgt. Carlton Dennis, officers E.C. Hudson and Paul Hill, and ABC enforcer H. B. Lilly. Lilly and Deputy Sheriff Brooks Oakley arrested a fourth person on charges of possessing non-tax-paid booze for the purpose of sale during the weekend.

He was identified as Jim Eason of Route 1, Stantonburg.

Officers said he was charged when a small amount of non-tax-paid whiskey was found in his possession at an establishment in Fountain.

He was placed under a $200 bond, officers reported.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Four row houses built over an antiquated sewer line collapsed Monday night, burying seven persons in the debris.

Four were dug out alive, and practically unhurt. One of them, a six-year-old girl, lay under the tons of rubble for nearly three hours.

By mid-morning, nearly 12 hours after the collapse which rocked the neighborhood, firemen searched the ruins for the other three.

The three missing are Wayne Daniels, nine; Jesse Robinson, 70, who is blind; and his wife, 55. Rescued were Wayne's father, Ernest Daniels, 35, and his other children, Kenneth, 11, and Cheryl, six, and Mrs. Robinson's sister, Miss Nannie Russell, 62.

It was little Cheryl who lay buried so long amid the shattered plaster and splintered, twisted wood that had been her home in West Philadelphia. Firemen, using a giant crane, tore away the debris, uncovering the child, and in the words of one rescuer, finding her miraculously alive.

Cheryl's first question was, "Did my brother get out?"

Her rescuers could not say. They still can't. Cheryl escaped with minor bruises.

The Daniels and Robinson homes, brick and two stories tall, gave way at 11:15 p.m., plunging the occupants into the cellars and dumping furniture and heaps of rubble on top of them.

Pending further investigation, Water Commissioner Samuel Baxter, the city's emergency coordinator, gave four possible reasons for the collapse.

Water and sewage running through the brick sewer might have worn a hole in it, allowing water to escape and undermine the houses.

A structural failure of the houses themselves.

A collapse of the sewer for some undetermined reason.

An explosion. This was considered the least likely explanation.

Answer 2 Calls To Barn Fires

SIMPSON — Simpson's newly-equipped volunteer fire department yesterday answered two fire calls to burning tobacco barns in the Simpson area.

An estimated 600 stacks of curing tobacco were lost in a barn fire on the W. A. Hudson farm about a mile east of Simpson about 8 a.m. yesterday.

The volunteer firemen saved the barn from the blaze that reportedly was set off by a flooded oil burner in the barn's curing system. A fireman said the barn could probably be repaired in a matter of a few hours.

The second fire, reported to the Simpson department about 11:45 a.m., was already under control on the Snowdie E. Edwards farm near Hudson's Crossroads when the volunteer firemen arrived.

Yesterday's two fire calls marked the second and third fires for the local volunteer department.

Boasting new equipment, the volunteers answered their first call about a week ago when they responded to a call from a burning tenant house near Eastern Brick and Tile Co.

Batten Outlines Astronaut Plan

Dr. James W. Batten, East Carolina College professor, outlined last night for the Greenville Optimist Club the sub-orbital flight of astronaut Virgil Grissom for tomorrow from Cape Canaveral.

The ECC instructor, who tutored the seven U. S. astronauts and one alternate during their rigid training, explained the basic mechanics of the space flight.

He said he trained the nation's first spacemen to recognize constellations and first magnitude stars in orbital sequences. Batten's training of the eight men was aimed primarily at eventually planned orbital flights.

In his brief address, Batten told the Optimists the race for space has been spurred on by "the competitive spirit" of nations. "There's really no way of knowing exactly what we'll find when we get out there," he said.

In defending America for running behind the Soviet man-in-space schedule, Batten told his Optimist audience, "We could have put a man up there in 1957, but we want to bring ours back—and safely."

Prior to Batten's address, Optimist Gene Ward told the club the annual party for the Optimist Little League baseball squad has been scheduled for 6 p.m. next Monday at the Greenville Moose Lodge where the youngsters will be treated to a swimming party and hot dog roast.

Ex-Convict Says He Blew Up School, Killing 296

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP)—An ex-convict arrested for investigation of armed robbery Monday night, told police in a signed statement that he was responsible for an explosion at a New London, Tex., school, March 18, 1937, that killed 282 children and 14 teachers.

The detectives quoted Benson as saying "I blew up the school because I was mad at the school. I was reprimanded for smoking on the school grounds."

Benson said he was 17 at the time and was not in school on the day of the blast. The investigation indicated gas had seeped into the basement and that a spark set off the explosion.

Police said the statement was written by Benson.

It read in part: "I stole two 18-inch wrenches to take loose the unions (which connected the gas lines) under the school. I broke both loose and waited for two weeks to see what would happen."

Details of the explosion as related by Benson jibed as to date, number killed and cause of the blast, but Texas officials have gone on the theory that the explosion was accidentally and not willfully set.

Benson was arrested two hours after a cafe was robbed Monday night of $38. A waitress and a customer later identified Benson as the robber and he admitted he was the man, officers said.

The detectives said Benson told them about his past "to get it off his conscience."

Police called Henderson County, Tex., Undersheriff T. E. Herrington to check on Benson's confession of the school explosion and said information obtained checked with Benson's story.

Chief of Police Joe King, of New London, who was graduated from the school the year of the explosion, said he could not recall a student by the name given by the Oklahoma city man.

Neither did his school year book list such a name, the police chief said.

The New London explosion is considered the most tragic disaster involving children in modern times.
