Wide Range Of Emergency Actions 'Held In Reserve'

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy administration was reported today to be holding in reserve a wide range of military and diplomatic actions which may be taken by the United States and its European allies as the Berlin crisis develops.

Ultimately if East-West negotiations over Berlin produce any progress toward ending the crisis, diplomatic exchanges could lead to a summit conference with Soviet Premier Khrushchev. At the present, however, that is more a possibility in the background of official thinking than a serious long-range prospect.

Administration informants said Kennedy's Berlin action program laid before the nation Tuesday night was only a starter. They said that what Kennedy and Rusk contemplate is a series of steps which will be put into effect as the maneuvering between the Western powers and the Soviet Union over the future of Berlin takes its shape in coming months.

Rusk refused at a news conference Thursday to give any indication of what form these proposals might take. But in reply to a series of questions he would not rule out any possibility. The questions raised such matters as removing "irritants" to the Soviet Union in the operations of the Western powers in West Berlin.

Georgia-Florida Tobacco Sees $60.50 Opening Day

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — First day sales in the Georgia-Florida five-cured tobacco belt averaged a record-smashing $60.50 a hundred pounds, $4.61 above the 1960 opening.

Volume was off slightly from the booming first day. Low and fair quality grades of primings and nondescript were mostly higher Thursday and offerings of lugs, cutters and leaf showed little change.

Increases amounted to $1 to $3 in most cases, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported. Although warehousemen paid up to $70 for some selected baskets, the practical top opening price was the same as on the 1960 opening—$66. Sub-standard nondescript sold as low as $9.

Volume of sales was heavy with more tobacco on the floors than on opening day last year, when two-day first week. Some observers reported demand for medium and common grades even keener than at the opening day.

Ten-year-old Otho Cozart Jr. of Greenville, who aspires to be a geologist or a mineralogist, returned from a family outing to Franklin in Macon County with a tube full of rubies—one weighing eight to 10 carats—some sapphires, topaz and several moonstones.

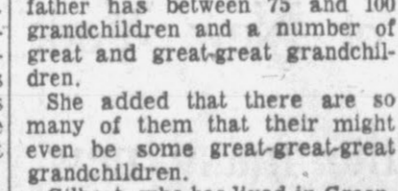

He found them in the Holbrook Mines, which is an old ruby-sapphire operation in the Cowee community. Armed with equipment including shovel, buckets, slush box and sieve, young Otho paid his dollar for entrance to the mines last Tuesday and ended up with the best "finds" of the day.

Ayden Boy Held For Goldsboro Slaying

Kenneth Allen Jolly Signs Written Confession On Killing Housewife

GOLDSBORO — A 16-year-old Ayden high school football player last night signed a 10-page written confession telling the story of how he killed a young housewife here last Feb. 23.

Young Kenneth Allen Jolly, described by his football coach as a "courteous, nice boy," related how he stabbed and beat to death Mrs. Billy Waters, 24, in her home in Ridgecrest community just outside the city last February.

His confession was made to Wayne County Sheriff Jesse Hinson during a three-hour questioning session in the Wayne Court-house last night. Young Jolly signed the 10-page story of a murder around midnight.

The youth related to Hinson that he told his mother the blood stains on his clothing came from a "bloody nose." Officers reported today they have found some stained clothes they think Jolly was wearing at the time of his confessed crime; however, they said, identification is not positive.

A preliminary hearing for the Ayden youth has been tentatively scheduled for Monday before local magistrate Carl Malpass.

Jolly was picked up at his Ayden home Thursday by Wayne deputy sheriff James Sasser, SBI agent H. T. Hartley Jr. and Pitt County deputy Ralph Tyson.

The officers described the youth as "very emotional" at the time of his arrest. Jolly was charged with murder here last night and jailed without privilege of bond.

Ogden Parker, assistant district solicitor, said Jolly appeared calm as he admitted the crime and quoted the youth as saying he was glad to get it off his shoulders.

The theft of a driver education car in Ayden led investigating officers to Jolly's arrest. He told his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Jolly Jr., he had stolen a car. His father reported it to Ayden police. The youth subsequently was tried in Recorder's Court and had his license suspended.

At the Waters home, he said, he knocked at the door and, when Mrs. Waters answered, asked directions to someone's house. He said he then pushed his way into the house, forced the housewife into the kitchen and asked her for money. Sheriff Hinson said young Jolly told him he became angry when the teacher suggested the youth's parents come in to discuss some tools the teacher discovered missing from the agriculture lab.

Hinson quoted young Jolly as saying he then washed his hands and the two murder weapons in the kitchen sink, leaving the knife and mallet in the sink, and drove to Wilson where he sat through part of a movie.

Reported Theft

Leaving Wilson, he drove to a point about a mile from his home and parked the stolen vehicle, he said Jolly said he then walked home and reported the theft of the driver training car to his parents. The youth related to Hinson that he told his mother the blood stains on his clothing came from a "bloody nose." Officers reported today they have found some stained clothes they think Jolly was wearing at the time of his confessed crime; however, they said, identification is not positive.

Army Secretary Urges Readiness

HICKMAN Ky. (AP) — Secretary of the Army Elvis J. Stahr Jr. warning that "we in a very real sense are living in wartime," has outlined a National Guard program with both long- and short-range objectives.

Good Student, 'Average' Boy, Future Gridiron Star

AYDEN — Shock and concern resounded through this Pitt County town today in the wake of the arrest of a 16-year-old Ayden High School student in connection with the February slaying of a young Goldsboro housewife.

—he did better than requirements. He has been described by other people in Ayden as a nice, courteous boy. He never got into any trouble before this.

A member of the Baptist church

Stahr was here to receive the honors of his home town on "Elvis Stahr Day."

"We all must be stronger, more effective and more combat ready than ever before," he said.

Jolly was linked to the case through the theft of a driver-training automobile in Ayden, which he had previously voluntarily admitted taking in February. He was tried and convicted in Ayden Recorder's Court on the charge of taking an automobile without permission. That was the first blot on his record so far as Ayden police are concerned.

Stahr made the remarks in an interview and in a speech prepared for delivery at a Governor's Day parade of Kentucky National Guardsmen. He did not make the speech because of a change in plans and threatening weather.

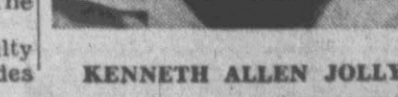

Stahr mentioned no numbers in talking of enlarging the guard, which now is authorized by Congress to have 400,000 men. But he said the program calls for some units to be brought to full strength and to be ready to go in three to five weeks should they be called to active duty. Other units will have to wait up to three months.

Since then, several residents who live in the neighborhood of the deceased Mrs. Billy Waters have reportedly identified young Jolly, through pictures, as having been in the neighborhood on Feb. 23, when the slaying occurred.

Stahr mentioned no numbers in talking of enlarging the guard, which now is authorized by Congress to have 400,000 men. But he said the program calls for some units to be brought to full strength and to be ready to go in three to five weeks should they be called to active duty. Other units will have to wait up to three months.

Engagement Announced

August Bride-Elect Feted

Miss Virginia B. Cooper and Mrs. Robert Harris honored Miss Suzanne Taylor, August bride-elect, at the home of the former on Second Street recently.

Miss Cooper's home was decorated throughout using a pink color scheme, the main focal point being a shower of pink wedding bells to the side of the doorway into the dining room. The dining table was covered with a pink cloth and centered with a large bride doll dressed in pink satin and net. To the right of the doll a silver candelabrum held spriguettes of pink flowers and candles. Miss Taylor and her mother were presented with corsages of pink carnations. The hostesses served iced tea, sandwiches, cakes and nuts to about 20 guests.

Make Your Send Offs Fun For All

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Latest fun wave is the bon voyage party given at the drop of a travel folder.

But you don't need to be going abroad to be feted. Any pure and simple away-from-the-group vacation activity merits a send-off whether you go by steamship, sports car or hay wagon.

A typical setting is the backyard or garden party with dancing outdoors. The motif is determined by the vacation plans. A camping trip calls for tent, campfire cookery, sports shirts and dungarees.

One party organized to send two 17-year-olds on a Mexican vacation was Spanish in theme. A packaged do-it-yourself bullfight kit was used for decorations and music.

Two huge bullfight posters and a Spanish calendar were put up behind the house. Each table was supplied with bullfight tickets and pictures to match. The recording that accompanies the kit was actual music from the Banda Tourina, official ensemble of the Plaza Mexico Bullfight.

Little bride tables were decorated with wide-strips of red, yellow, orange and black fabric in a basket-weave effect. Candles were the same colors.

Each male guest wore a black matador's cape made from a pattern in the kit, cummerbund and a white shirt.

Girls were dressed like senoritas. One wore a manilla draped over her head and face, another a large Spanish comb with a veil draped from it, along with red skirt and white cotton blouse. Another wore black leotards and a gaucho hat.

Hot peppery food was the key to the menu. Chili con carne was made at home in traditional fashion. The other foods served were canned Mexican favorites—enchiladas, tacos, tortillas, served with sauces.

Governor Demonstrates He Thinks Affairs Going Well

By LYNN NISBET
Reflector Bureau,
Ass'n Afternoon Daily

RALEIGH — Governor Terry Sanford was 20 minutes late at his weekly news conference Thursday morning, but he was in fine fettle when he did arrive. He quickly demonstrated that he thinks everything is moving along pretty well and he is not mad at anybody.

First item on the agenda was presentation to the Governor of life time membership in the AMVETS. He accepted graciously, with high commendation for the program of that veterans organization.

He issued a formal statement bragging on North Carolina Sandhills peaches and designating next week, July 29-August 5, as North Carolina Peach week. He hoped all North Carolinians would eat a lot of peaches and enjoy them as much as the news folks and the orphans did at the ice cream and peach party Wednesday at the Mansion.

He announced a number of appointments to boards and commissions and, of course, commended the appointees very highly.

He sees no reason for further intervention in the Holly Ridge land dispute between the Wildlife Resources Commission and local landowners, because the Attorney General and other lawyers for the State are handling the case very well.

He declined to fall into a trap set by reporters with "needling" questions about apparent delay on part of the U.S. Senators getting their nominees for Federal judgeships approved. That is senatorial patronage and he will stay out of it—except he did write U. S. Attorney General Robert Kennedy that he had no objection to any of the nominees proposed by the Senators.

He commended as a "humane act" the intervention of Democratic State Chairman Bert Bennett in a Madison county criminal court case to stop prosecution of a Republican law student charged with impersonating a law officer while watching voting at an election in Marshall last year. The fact that the head of the Democratic party in the state went to a county in which he was not resident to intercede in behalf of a Republican charged with illegally interfering in an election made news headlines. Nearest approach to unkind comment by the Governor throughout the news conference was implication that somebody had imposed on the Republican student. He was a victim of circumstances, and his rescue by the head of the Democratic party was a humane act.

Governor Sanford has demonstrated capacity for criticism and courage to speak out when he doesn't like the way things are going. He has never been as caustic in comment as were his predecessors, Governors Scott and Hodges, but his manifested complete satisfaction with the status quo was a bit unusual.

That attitude was further demonstrated in the conference on employment of ex-prisoners, which immediately followed and became almost a part of the weekly news conference. One reporter asked if the heavy rate of repeaters in prison terms, in view of the long time efforts toward rehabilitation, did not mean that many of the prisoners are "hopeless" prospects for rehabilitation.

"I am not willing to admit that any human being is ever a hopeless prospect," said the Governor. "The record is replete with instances of men and women 'coming back' from near degradation to useful and productive citizenship."

Concert Includes Original Works

Three original works will be heard in the closing concert of the annual summer music camp at East Carolina College Saturday afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock, in Wright Auditorium.

Written for choral groups, two of the compositions by James Hall, of the Winston-Salem city schools music department, are "Song of Thanksgiving" and "The Fountain." Mr. Hall will conduct the summer camp chorus in these two numbers.

The third original composition, "Alleluia," was written by Dr. Martin Mailman, who will be composer-in-residence as a member of the East Carolina College Music Department next year. This will be the final number on the program combining choir and the blue band in concert conducted by Prof. Earl Beach, chairman of the ECO Music Department and director of the music camp.

The final appearance of the musical units opens with performances by majorettes and drum majors at 1:30 p.m. Music for the drills will be by the red and white bands. The majorettes will perform under the direction of Misses Nancy Cook of Fayetteville, Shely Manning of Goldsboro, Lib Rogers of Greenville, and Karen Kiser of Grand Rapids, Mich. and the drum majors will drill under the leadership of Robert Ellwanger of Grifton and Ayden.

The white band, with Spencer Mims of Myers Park high school band, Charlotte, will play "Chorale" by Wagner-Gordon and "Valse" by Chabrier.

Under the baton of Raymond Babelay of the Pike Senior high school band of Wilson, the red band will play "Die Nacht" by Strauss-Davis and "Genuine Festival" by Osser.

With Don Hayes of the East Carolina music faculty conducting, the music camp orchestra will play "Fugue in G Minor" by Bach and "Buckaroo" by Aaron Coplan.

After the blue band plays "Greensleeves," arranged by Alfred Reed, "Inglesina" (The Little English Girl) by Delle Case, and "A Sketch of the West" by McKay, with Hubert Henderson, director of the University of Maryland bands, conducting, the music camp chorus will sing the two original numbers written and conducted by Mr. Hall.

The presentation of camp awards, including a $50 music scholarship from Phi Mu, Alpha, music fraternity, will be made by Prof. Beach, assisted by Herbert L. Carter, director of the East Carolina College bands, the camp chorus and the Blue band will combine to perform "Alleluia" written by Dr. Mailman and conducted by Director Beach.

It is noteworthy that Mr. Hall composed his choral piece, "The Fountain," upon his arrival at East Carolina College for the 1961 summer camp. He was so impressed by the new fountain in the center at Wright Circle on the heart of the campus that he "went right to work on this new music under the inspiration of the moment," he said Friday.

Prof. Beach said the staff of 50 instructors and counselors had been really impressed by the maturity of the junior and senior high school students who have been here for the two-week camp. More than 425 persons registered for the program of instruction.

An art display will be featured, also, on Saturday. Thomas Mims and Nelson Dudley have directed this phase of the summer camp program.

The Saturday program is open to the public.

Takes Many Blows In The Name Of Art

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Anne Bancroft has been struck in the face more than 2,800 times in the name of art.

Film audiences gasped years ago when actress Mae Clarke played a role in which Jimmy Cagney pushed a grapefruit in her face.

A grapefruit in the face would be merely cool and refreshing to Miss Bancroft.

As Annie Sullivan, teacher of deaf, mute and blind Helen Keller in "The Miracle Worker," she was slapped hard—or hit in the face with a plastic doll—four times a performance by her undisciplined young charge whom she gradually brings to love and learning.

Anne played the stage role through 700 performances and won her second Broadway Tony award. The first was for "Two for the Seesaw."

She and Patty Duke, who plays Helen Keller as a child, are again costarred in the screen version of "The Miracle Worker," a picture that probably won't leave a dry eye.

The other day I talked with Miss Bancroft during a luncheon break on the set. Her head was ringing.

They had just finished shooting one of the slapping sequences.

and Anne had been bopped in the face—and bopped hard to insure realism—some 15 times.

"It's all in the business," she said, matter of factly, "but sometimes you hate to do it over and over again—if it isn't your fault."

She said she had a headache but Anne, a dedicated actress if ever there was one, declined to take any aspirin. She said it might affect her performance in the scenes to be taken that afternoon.

Anne, 30, whose first public performance was an impromptu dance as a child before a captive audience of eight street workers in her native Bronx, was signed early by Hollywood. She appeared in a dozen or more films, all of which now she is willing to forget.

But it was her two starring appearances on Broadway that won her fame and recognition as one of the best of the current crop of young dramatic actresses. She is also one of the best-liked by other performers, who regard her as a real pro who worked hard to develop her natural talent.

"I have hundreds and hundreds of problems," she said cheerfully, "but no real plans ahead."

"I don't see how one can plan ahead in this business. I take singing lessons when I'm not busy working. I just want to do good stuff, whether its musicals or dramas."

Put $15 Million In Area Economy

KINSTON — Operations of the Du Pont Plant here put more than $15,000,000 into the local economy last year, W. E. Gladding, Manager, announced today. The Plant produces "Dacron" polyester fiber.

Mr. Gladding reported that the payroll was $14,832,494, while purchases of goods and services from 163 local suppliers totaled $516,987. An additional $1,590,056 went for goods and services purchased from 613 other suppliers located outside of the Kinston area but within the State of North Carolina, he said.

Approximately 3,000 calls were made on the Plant by various salesmen representing a variety of materials needed to keep the Plant operating. The list of items purchased included these eyebrow raisers—a pressure cooker, ping pong balls and gun patches. The pressure cooker was used for experimental dyeing, the ping pong balls for checking plugged tubes on the boiler and the gun patches were used to clean out instrument tubes.

The Du Pont Company operates 79 plants throughout the country and the figures reported do not include purchases made in North Carolina for the plants located outside of the state, Mr. Gladding said.

Economic Strength To Be Guarded

As Congress and the people of the United States contemplate the obviously essential increases in military spending proposed by President Kennedy, it should be apparent that efforts must be bent to retaining a strong and sound economic position in the country while military strength is being bolstered.

Added to the budget proposals already made by the administration, the additional $3.5 billion in military spending would boost the officially anticipated federal deficit for the fiscal year to five billion dollars. Conceivably, say officials, this rate of expenditure might not require a tax increase early next year if the economy of the nation continues on its upward movement. Even so, it should be remembered that the current increase in military spending is not a one-shot thing. It could well continue over a period of several years, depending on the international situation.

Since the beginning of his administration in January, President Kennedy has proposed to Congress many pump-priming measures that admittedly are designed to pull the country out of the recession that was in effect when his term of office began. In recent months, however, the economy of the country has taken a decided upturn, and although trouble spots still remain, a general recession no longer prevails. A number of the pump-priming programs proposed by the President would have no impact upon the economy of the nation until many months from now even if they were approved by Congress. And by that time they may serve only to increase the possibility of inflation.

It must also be realized that the additional military spending of $3.5 billions requested by the President this week will in themselves increase activities in many industries, thus stimulating the economy.

As the President pointed out this week, this move he calls for is not for the expected Berlin crisis alone. It is for the long pull to assure that the United States will be able to negotiate from a position of strength in easing international tension, and will be able to meet force with force if that becomes necessary. It is essential that the country remain on a sound financial footing, for in the past this, plus its economic strength and vitality have been important factors in sustaining this nation and its allies.

As Congress and the administration move to implement the military build-up, there should be a corresponding move—with an equal degree of unity—trim earlier pump-priming proposals by at least an equal amount. The United States can ill afford to weaken its basic economy in the face of crisis by creating a heavier-than-necessary tax burden, and by injecting into the economy too many elements that tend to bring about inflation.

It would be just as foolish for this country to undermine its economic strength with non-essential spending at this time as it would be for us to ignore the need for improving our military position.

We trust that the President as well as members of Congress will see to it that the economic strength of the nation is not ignored as they move to increase the military strength.

Justices Asked For An 'Advisory'

By LYNN NISBET

ADVISORY—The Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court have been asked for an "advisory" opinion on the question of whether the constitutional amendments proposed by the recent Legislature can be voted upon at the election called this fall on the issuance of $61 million State capital improvement bonds.

Attorney General Wade Bruton has ruled out the amendments vote, on the ground that the constitution requires amendments to be submitted "at the next general election" after the Legislature proposing them, and the 1961 Legislature failed to designate the bond plebiscite as a "general election" and also prohibited use of absentee ballots.

It is generally understood that majority of the legislators who voted to submit the amendments believed they could be voted upon this fall. Apparently Governor Sanford held that opinion. Preliminary steps were taken to form a "selling organization" to promote the bonds and the amendments. When the Attorney General ruled against the amendments vote, Governor Sanford requested the advisory opinion from the members of the Supreme Court.

The judges don't like the idea. The late Chief Justice Stacy spoke for all his colleagues when he protested that the advisory tends to put the individual justices in embarrassing situation, in that they are asked to state an opinion on a major issue— which opinion they will be expected to back up in formal court decisions—without having the benefit of briefs or oral argument discussing the issues. It is recognized that the advisory opinion is not legally binding upon the justices, but they dislike to be put in position of changing conclusions. They do not respect a request for advisory opinions, except from heads of the other two collateral branches of State government.

HISTORIC—Historically significant use of the advisory opinion on the question of calling a convention to pass upon repeal of the Federal 18th amendment and submission of constitutional amendments, both ordered by the General Assembly of 1933.

The Legislature enacted a bill calling for the convention issue to be voted upon at a "general election" to be held on Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1933. The authority of the General Assembly to designate a general election at any date other than the regular biennial election of members of the General Assembly was questioned. On March 29, 1933, Lieutenant Governor A.H. Graham as President of the Senate, and R. L. Harris, Speaker of the House, formally requested an advisory. Chief Justice Stacy and Associate Justices Adams, Connor and Brogden wrote individual opinions upholding the general election. Associate Justice Clarkson dissented. The election was held, although by the time the question was moot, enough States having already acted to repeal the 18th amendment.

The 1932 Legislature also submitted major revisions in the State constitution, based on the Brookings Institute recommendations and an exhaustive study by a constitutional amendment commission. The act submitting these amendments carried the usual provision that the vote would be at the "next general election." Elaborate plans were made for a real campaign to put over the new constitution at the 1934 regular election. Then question was raised whether the vote could be held, since that would not be the "first general election."

On October 15, 1934, Governor Ehringhaus called upon the justices for another advisory. Meantime, Justice W.J. Adams had died and been succeeded by Justice Michael Schenk. Opinion of the justices was unanimous that the 1933 election was "general" and therefore the amendments could not be submitted at the subsequent 1934 election.

DIFFERENT—the current situation is different from that in 1934. It also is different from 1956 when several constitutional amendments were approved and an odd-date general election. In both those instances the General Assembly specifically designated a general election and fixed the date in the act.

The act submitting the amendments this year simply says they shall be voted at the next general election. The act authorizing the bonds says they shall be voted on a date to be fixed by the Governor, and that the election shall be according to general laws except no absentee ballots will be permitted. The Attorney General suggested that provision took the election out of the "general election" class.

Chief Justice Winborne has asked for detailed information on the acts this year and the previous years, and is polling his justices—all of whom are on summer vacation. An answer is expected in a few days.

Majority opinion around Capitol Square is that the judges will concur in the Attorney General's opinion, and the amendments will have to wait until November of 1962—unless a special session should re-enact the bills submitting them and call a general election on a day certain.

Area Development Planning Holds Hope

The idea of area planning and development approved by representatives from 19 Eastern counties this week is not new, and yet it holds considerable promise for counties with common problems and common interests.

As a part of the state's program to help Eastern Carolina counties cope with the economic problems they are facing, the idea of area groups concerned with overall area development should provide an important supplement to county and community efforts toward economic development.

Several years ago a similar approach to area problems was undertaken in this part of the state, but the final alignment of counties involved proved too large to be practical. The effort died before it got off the ground. This time the program appears on a sounder footing, and the various area groups are small enough for close coordination of efforts by the individual counties, and yet sufficiently large to give an area approach to problems.

It is our hope that Pitt County will enter into the program with vigor and that other counties likewise will make a sincere effort to develop an organization that will be mutually beneficial to the counties individually and to Eastern Carolina as a whole.

Berlin Troubles Are Long Range

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Short of an explosion, you'd better get used to an angry Berlin problem which will boil up again and again for years.

It's a mixed-up end, in a sense, an ironic mess. Even President Kennedy isn't expressing hope for a permanent Berlin solution now. He said in his TV talk Tuesday night there is "no quick and easy solution." Before he was President he said the dilemma would not be solved for years.

This is what's likely to happen if there's no war now: Temporary arrangements to reduce the heat and then another flare-up. Nothing shows better what a mess it is than Kennedy's statement Tuesday night: "Berlin is not a part of East Germany, but a separate territory under control of the Allied powers. Thus our rights are clear and firmly rooted."

Those rights may be clear in the Western mind but not necessarily clear in the thinking of the Russians or the East German Communists.

Berlin lies 110 miles inside Communist East Germany, over and through which lie all the supply routes to Berlin. But Berlin itself is two cities, not one.

East Berlin is under East Communist control. In West Berlin, whose almost 2 1/2 million people's sympathies are with West Germany, the United States, Britain and France have almost 11,000 troops as a symbol of Western support for them.

It's easy to imagine how Americans would feel if, say, Kansas City, in the heart of the United States, was a Communist-run town whose links were with Russia and whose supplies and visitors came from there.

What then does Kennedy mean by saying the West has "rights" to Berlin? The U.S. government argues this way:

In agreements made with Russia during and after World War II Allied troops were to stay in Berlin until the victors in the war signed a peace treaty with a new German government.

The Soviets say, in effect, all this is now out of date and it's about time a peace treaty was finally signed.

But the trouble is there are two Germanies: the West German government of Chancellor Adenauer, allied to the West; and the East German Communist government which is actually a Russian puppet.

Adenauer insists no peace treaty with East Germany should be signed because this would mean the Allies agreed there could be two Germanies. He wants, and the United States backs him up, just one single German government for all Germany.

In short: A peace treaty with East Germany would mean and legalize the indefinite division of Germany. So long as the Allies do not sign with East Germany, Adenauer can hope for a single, united Germany some day.

How then could the two Germanies be united? This country suggests, and Russia wants no part of it, that the people in the two Germanies be allowed free and open elections to choose a new, single German government (Continued on page six)

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

LORD OF ALL

The Lord is very merciful to his creatures. It is a good thing for us that He is. If He gave us what we deserve, the going would be pretty grim. God in his mercy treats us better than we deserve to be treated.

But there is one thing God will not for a moment tolerate. He will not tolerate a divided allegiance. He has no use for half a person. He must have us all if He is to use us, and He must have the whole of our heart's devotion if He is to have fellowship with us. It is a matter of His being either Lord of all or not Lord at all.

We all recognize the hideous character of such sins as lying, stealing, committing adultery, or indulging in violence. Yet strangely enough the Bible and the outstanding teachings of the church have always held that pride, avarice, jealousy, selfishness and the like are really sins which devastate the soul with equal force. We can in a measure avoid the gross sins because practically everyone understands their evil nature. But pride can creep in upon us, avarice can devastate our souls, jealousy can make us unhappy and separate us from God—and all without our knowing it.

Let us ask ourselves before we utter our prayers whether or not we are really putting God first. Is He Lord of all?—because if He is not then we can be sure that He is not Lord at all.

The differences here involved are insignificant to an appalling degree.

A Happy Treat And Beat

For the age group whose happy memories go back to 1938-44, television holds a happy treat (and beat) on Monday night.

The looking-and-listening audience is caught up in 30 minutes of reminiscence as the music of Glenn Miller literally lives again. It's all there, the onetime classics of the ballrooms and recording industry; the same disciplined precision; the same style in harmony and rhythm.

Ray McKinley, leader of the band and onetime arranger in the Miller organization, has revived the musical spirit of a great era. The camera work is excellent, settings simple, and the show's emphasis is properly on music and musicians.

I particularly appreciate that because the great big bands were as businesslike as General Motors and the big men of the day made a fetish of discipline and teamwork. Glenn Miller was a prototype of the breed.

There was no cuteness, a minimum of vacant grinning; and caper-cutting was done only by specialists in the field.

The televised program of Glenn Miller has its flaws, chief among which is an overly-large portion of phony dialogue and vapid conversation. One might add, too, that viewers have to bear up to more toothy grins than you'll find in three magazines full of toothpaste ads.

There is also room to wonder if the show was put together as a backdrop for vocalist-and-master-of-ceremonies Johnny Desmond, or if he was added to strengthen the entertainment value of the presumed stellar attraction: Miller's music.

Irregardless, there are more strong points than weak ones; and I might add, "it's live, and it comes from New York," which is something rare these summer days.

Another voice, less-happily related to the pre-World War II years, appears to be gaining strength.

Remember Gerald L. K. Smith, who briefly strutted across the national scene at the time a certain German paper-hanger was at the height of his power?

Pearl Harbor and the subsequent declaration of war against Nazi Germany "sank" Smith and his followers.

But he seems to have picked up some new supporters and new financing... enough anyhow, to permit adding The Reflector to his publication's free mailing list.

The second such copy crossed my desk last week... a 32 page magazine devoted to ultranationalism, anti-Jew writings, anti-Communism articles, anti-Administration (past and present)... all flavored with sensationalism.

Our mail covers the spectrum from hate material to more ethereal matters. File 13 can accommodate even Gerald Smith, so there's no problem involved. I'm just sorry this evidence of growing appeal (however slight) has come to light.

Other Editors Sayings . . . Opinions

(New York Herald Tribune)

Professor Gilbert Highet of Columbia remarked the other day that the academic year just ended had been an excellent one for the study of Latin, and indeed, enrollment in both high school and college Latin courses has increased steadily in the last few years. Latin, so often "buried" by the curriculum theorists, seems to be having a comeback.

Of course Latin can never be buried. Its decline in the schools was merely another example of why children should not be allowed to decide what they learn. For the first two or three years at least, no child likes Latin. "What is the use of it?" cry the piping voices in the classrooms as they have always cried over the years, only to provide their own inevitable answer: "It is no use. It is dead."

NOWADAYS in matters of education, what Johnny doesn't like Johnny usually doesn't have to learn. So the "educators" proclaim sentimentally that Latin is out of date, mentally narrowing, and a waste of time better spent in citizenship courses. This is the entire case of the anti-Latinists.

What is to be said in Latin's favor? A great deal and on two different levels. First, Latin is the mortar of our culture as Greek is its foundation, and no person who aspires to real education ought to ignore or dismiss it.

Latin is the influential expression of many schools, of philosophy and of Christian liturgy. It is indispensable to medicine and science. It is deeply embedded in jurisprudence. Its literature created not only masterpieces in its own right but dominated European literature for centuries afterward.

BUT THERE are immediately practical reasons too for the study of Latin in secondary schools. Latin is the key to English grammar, and to other grammars, because it is the only language (except Greek) which is still taught from a purely grammatical point of view.

The answer, then, to the common complaint that Latin "didn't do me any good" or that "I don't remember anything about it" is to ask what "good" came from those hours of plane geometry or algebra, or even of deep-breathing exercises. The people who attempt to discredit Latin, whether from conviction or from the thirst for frivolous publicity—one is uncertain in which category to place Harvard's dumping of Latin diplomas—would do well to consider this question.

"The long-term concept is the only sensible method of spending foreign economic aid funds efficiently, but doing it this way would deprive the appropriations committees of the House and Senate of the annual opportunity to cut back Administration requests. The attitude of the committees does reflect, of course, the grassroots distrust of foreign economic aid ('give-away') and resentment at being called upon to continue it indefinitely."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"We in the United States usually assume that if we carry democracy to another country the people will welcome it with open arms, make it work effectively and resist the temptations which threaten to destroy it. This is not always true. Democracy must be earned and it must be both desired by the people and understood by them."—Mt. Pleasant (Pa.) Journal.

"There just isn't enough money in the big or even the middle income categories to operate a $90 billion a year government. So the lower income people must pay the bill."—Industrial News Review.

State Status Is Low

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

When did the State Department begin to be unpopular? Certainly it was not unpopular when John Hay or Elihu Root or Charles Evans Hughes was Secretary of State. The degradation commenced when Woodrow Wilson appointed William Jennings Bryan to this position. Bryan was not only unsuited for this office but he was antagonistic to the President and his policies.

When Robert Lansing took over, the State Department was run solely by the President who not only decided foreign policy but conducted it out of the White House. At the Paris Conference, after World War I, men like Herbert Hoover and Bernard Baruch were more significant than the Secretary of State.

Then came the four term regime of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who managed the State Department as an adjunct of the White House. The Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, hardly knew what was going on. He was not included in any of the major conferences. He did not have as much to do with formulating policy as Harry Hopkins or a dozen other men who can be mentioned. The State Department came to be managed by an Under Secretary of State and often Secretary of State in all. What is now called the Fourth Floor, consisting of minor officials, the Deskmen, emerged to primary significance.

There are some who put the blame on the bad reputation of the State Department on Senator Joe McCarthy which is nonsense. Senator McCarthy went after the State Department because there was something there to go after. The so-called "American underground" within the State Department was leading to the Senator about Communists, pro-Communists, homosexuals, and blabber mouths. Also the Senator discovered that during the Administration of Harry Truman, Dean Acheson, who was an extraordinarily able Secretary of State, was apparently unable to free his department of the wrong personnel and therefore got a bad reputation for himself. I know that when Herbert Hoover Jr., was Under Secretary of State, he was also unable to get rid of undesirable personnel.

During the Eisenhower Administration, John Foster Dulles managed the State Department out of his vest pocket. It was strictly personal management. The President played a comparatively small role in the conduct of policy, largely because Dulles was a superior person intellectually and by experience.

It was during the Eisenhower Administration that the State Department permitted the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) to exercise an influence never intended for this office. Whereas John Foster Dulles gained stature in the eyes of the public, the State Department, which he headed, lost public support.

Public opinion is not readily definable. Public relations experts are never sure that what they say will make a profound impression on the public. They gamble. They throw a balloon into the air, hoping it will not burst. The State Department and the CIA, during the Eisenhower regime, suffered too many failures. The public wondered why they knew so little—why they let Nixon go to South America to be spit upon, why they let Jim Hagerty go to Tokyo to be treated as an enemy; why they let Eisenhower be placed in an ungracious position regarding his visit to Japan; why

Round-Up Of Odd Business Items

By ELMER ROESSNER

Here's a round-up of curious items in the business news, some amusing, some only significant:

A moderate housing boom is under way. Total units started in June were 136,900, compared with 127,300 in May, 1960. However, starts during the first half of this year were 646,000, compared with 654,400 in the first half of 1960.

Fifty mobile supermarkets now serve half of Mexico City's population. They consist of big, red trailer trucks, with ramps, air conditioning and music. Each item is one peso (8 cents). A new branch bank on Long Island is designed so it may be expanded upward or on either side.

A warehouse at Sioux Falls, S.D., has been constructed by spraying urethane foam on the interior of an air-supported nylon frame.

ONE WAY TO MAKE SALES
Rennie Wagner, an American

Oil dealer in Manitowoc, Wis., built a 45-foot steel tower at his service station, climbed to a room on top and announced he would not come down until he had sold 400 tires. He dickered with customers via a loud speaker. He sold the tires in five days, five hours and 40 minutes, then came down.

Delinquency in installment payments is declining, the American Bankers Association reports. A new compound makes foam pillows and mattresses smell like fresh-laundered linen. Chemical Week reports. General Dynamics is developing a small generator to convert gas heat directly into electricity.

The Hotel Multnomah in Portland, Ore., has been running ads in Seattle newspapers headlined, "Seattle, disband! Your tax structure is unbelievable." It emphasizes the fact that Washington imposes a 4 percent tax on hotel tents, while Oregon does not. The Multnomah lists its phone number as Capitalistic 8-7411.

BIG BLOW
Chemtron used 220,000 pounds of carbon dioxide to force 2,200,000 cubic feet of air from a Pennsylvania cave so the cave could be used to store propane gas. A Greek priest in 219 B.C. invented the first coin-operated vending machines, to dispense holy water. McGraw-Hill researchers found. Census says there were 53.3 million households in the United States in March, 1961—a fact to be evaluated by every manufacturer of consumer products.

Many employers have already begun to condition employees to new Social Security deductions starting Jan. 1, 1962. Rates on employers and employees go up 1/2 percent each, to 3 1/2 percent. The rate on self-employed goes to 4.7 percent.

To get around British price-fixing laws, discount houses lease goods for 21-years instead of selling them. The first payment is the discount price and the subsequent payments are a penny every three months, only if formally demanded. . . . Violent protest poured in on a Denver dairy that advertised only delivery customers might be able to get scarce milk if war broke out over Berlin. . . . Mortgage interest rates are lower than a year ago, the United States Savings and Loan League says.

SELF-LIGHTING CIGARETTE TO BE TRIED AGAIN

For the third time at least in the last quarter century, a self-lighting cigarette will be introduced. It should be on the market by Christmas. The cigarette can be ignited by gently rubbing the treated end on an impregnated surface on the package. It then glows evenly without flame, and the ignition system is said to have no taste. Continental Tobacco has been working on the idea for four years.

CHAPTER 24
Reginald Jameson moved to another part of the Silver Queen laboratory, leaving Rollison alone with Heremiah Edge.

Jameson came back in a few minutes. "We had a new supply of powdered glass in a few weeks ago, and it's mostly dark," he said with restrained savagery. He moved to a microscope, and with jerky movements, put a little of the face powder from a new box onto a slide, and pushed it under the instrument.

He peered through the lens, then backed away. "Seen this, Rollison?" he asked. Rollison moved forward. "Thanks." When he looked, he saw tiny, dark blotches, with some crystals which were unmistakably glass. He drew back.

"It's there all right," he said. "In the whole batch." The silence seemed to last for an age. Rollison was able to feel the tension in the two men. It wasn't just this discovery; it was all that had gone before, the reason for the indications that they had been so jittery.

Then Edge said: "Well, we've got to stop this batch." "Can't," said Jameson. "It's out."

"Know where it's gone?" "We can find out. We might be able to find out," Jameson corrected, and licked his lips. "This is one hell of a business."

He stared at Rollison, and went on huskily: "If many people used this stuff, it would damage the name of Silver Queen so much that we'd be sunk. Jerry, you'd better go and see the Old Man. We can't handle this one on our own. I'll find out as much as I can about the batch. It's over two weeks old, and went into stock the usual way."

The man was Tim Mahoney. The doors closed behind them, and they were in the room where the girls sat and worked with such nimble precision.

Edge was striding out. Rollison caught his arm. "D'you mind if I look round on my own?"

"What good can you do?" "Who knows?" asked Rollison. "I can try."

Edge said: "Please yourself, and if you're stopped in any of the workshops, say I gave you permission. I can't stay now. When the Old Man hears about this—" He broke off; obviously he was really nervous about Paul Vance's reaction, as was Jameson.

The stubborn idiot won't call in the police. I wish to hell I knew why. He went striding off.

Rollison stood quite still, watching the door of the raw materials room, where he had seen Mahoney. A lorry, laden with brown, reinforced paper sacks all labelled TALC 120, rolled up to the double doors and came to a standstill.

Rollison took cover behind the lorry, and went nearer. The doors opened and two men in khaki one of them.

Opposite the double doors was a smaller, double-storey house. The macadamised path leading to it was reddish in color. The lipstick shop, of course.

Rollison hurried across, and pushed open double swing doors. He was in a hurry, but even though he'd seen it before, the sight that met his eyes pulled him up short. It was like walking into a painted inferno. Everywhere—walls, floor, benches, even the ceiling, was tinged with red.

To the right was a staircase. Rollison moved towards it, but a man appeared as if from a fiery furnace, face and clothes, hands and feet tinged with red.

"Help you sir?" That was a challenge.

"Mr. Edge gave me permission," said Rollison. "My name is Rollison." He skipped past the man who wasn't quite sure what to do, reached stairs and hurried up to the landing.

Through the window he could see men unloading the lorry, and could see into storeroom. Mahoney appeared. He was empty-handed when he reached the lorry, turned his back on the pile of heavy sacks, hoisted one of the lorry onto his shoulders, and took it into the storeroom. He didn't show any sign of being worried or in a hurry.

"So he doesn't know I saw him," said Rollison to himself. He looked at his watch; it was half-past three, and Agatha would be raging; she would have to raise. He hurried down the stairs and his challenger looked relieved.

"Sure I can't help you, sir?" "You can. What time do you finish here tonight?"

"Five-thirty, sir, unless there's need for overtime." "Thanks," said Rollison, "half-past five ought to be late enough for me! Is there a telephone handy?"

"Well, sir, there's a pay phone in the front hall of the office, but if Mr. Edge—"

"He's with Mr. Vance," said Rollison. "I don't want to disturb him." He went out into the bright light of the summer afternoon and, confident that the lorry hid him from Mahoney, went to the offices.

He saw the telephone booth, went in, coins already in his hand. He had put one in when he saw the doors leading from the main offices open.

Griseida Vance appeared. She reminded him vividly of the moment when he had seen her standing against the partly open door, waiting for Paul Vance to take her neck between his fingers. She had that kind of defiant look.

Paul Vance is going to reveal the reasons for a deep hatred. The story reaches a climax on Monday.

Letters Of Gen. McClellan Show He Toyed With Idea Of Being Dictator

One-Two Punch Hitting U.S. Financial Plans

By TOM HENSHAW
A thoughtful army encourages its soldiers to write letters home. It's good for morale.

But the letters Gen. George B. McClellan wrote to his adoring wife, Nell, back in 1861 might have given a thoughtful army second thoughts had it known about them at the time.

McClellan, called up to command the Union Army after the Bull Run disaster, openly ridiculed the President of the United States and toyed with the idea of becoming a dictator.

"Our George," or "Little Mac" as his soldiers called him, turned out to be a failure on the battlefield, and in a way, it was a good thing. One big victory conceivably might have turned the trick for him.

McClellan, born to wealth in Philadelphia, a top scholar at West Point and a railroad president at 32, was summoned to command after a minor success against the Confederates in western Virginia.

Arriving in Washington with the Bull Run panic still hanging heavy in the air, he wrote to his wife: "I find myself in a new and strange position here; President, cabinet, Gen. Scott (the general-in-chief) and all deferring to me. I seem to have become the power of the land."

Adulation did nothing to dispel his day dreams. He had barely arrived on the scene when Democratic politicians began sounding him out as presidential timber for 1864 to run against Lincoln—the "Original Gorilla," he called him in letters to his wife.

Admirers dubbed him "Little Napoleon" and when photographers trained their crude cameras on him, he took to posing with one hand tucked inside his jacket indicating the comparison wasn't odious to him.

"I receive letter after letter," he wrote to his faithful Nell, "calling on me to save the nation, aluding to the presidency, dictatorship, etc. I have no such aspiration."

"I would cheerfully take the dictatorship and agree to lay down my life when the country is saved."

"I almost think," he continued, "that were I to win some small success now I could become Dictator or anything else that might please me—but nothing of that kind would please me—therefore I won't be dictator. Admirable self-denial!"

McClellan's letters hint that his self-denial might have become something less than admirable had not things began to go wrong for him for the first time in his life.

When he finally took the field he ran into a deft new Confederate commander, Robert E. Lee, and for the better part of a year they wallowed around eastern Virginia in a bloody stalemate.

Relieved of command and then restored, he stopped Lee at the Battle of Antietam but refused to follow up his advantage (daring was not his forte) and Lincoln fired him again.

Nevertheless, McClellan mustered enough popularity to run against Lincoln for the presidency in 1864. Lincoln trounced him soundly, 212-21, in the electoral college.

In fact, the defeat so rankled him that the man who toyed with the idea of being dictator left the country for Europe and didn't return for four years.

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP) — In a one-two punch Washington and London this week jabbed at U.S. business and financial plans and prospects. In time, American consumers and taxpayers may feel it.

President Kennedy is dealing with the Berlin crisis by strengthening U.S. defenses. Prime Minister MacMillan is bolstering the English pound. Together their proposals add some new items to the American business score cards—and in some things Washington and London are pulling in opposite directions.

Here are the new things American businessmen, consumers, stock traders and investors must take into account:

Congress is asked to raise U.S. military and civil defense by about $3.5 billion. This will send the official estimate of the Treasury deficit up above $5 billion, and the unofficial predictions even higher.

At the same time, England is cutting its share of Western defense spending. And France has much of its military attention centered on the Algerian and Tunisian trouble spots and the threatened Sahara oil fields.

For business, the Washington moves mean more defense orders. This will change stock market opinion of some industries. And deficit spending will fire another rocket in the series already timed to boost the economy in general to a higher level starting in the fall.

If business is souped up as expected, Treasury revenues may be enough to make a tax hike unnecessary, the President hopes. He also hopes deficit spending and booming business won't mean more inflation. Washington has just reported that the cost of living has hit a new high, with a very modest rise in prices.

But while Washington is trying to spur consumer spending and business expansion, London is trying to put a brake on its inflationary boom. And the steps it is taking are giving American businessmen pause.

Higher sales and import taxes on American goods will stop the flow of some to England and doubtless cut back sales of others. U.S. firms with plants there also will feel the moves to discourage British consumer spending. Some may take a second look at their plans to expand their operations.

A chief aim of the London moves is to beef up British exports. This could lead to more competition here with domestic producers, and to keener sales drives in world markets.

By hiking its bank rate to 7 per cent from 5 per cent London is offering a new challenge to the American drive to trim its deficit in balance of international payments and to prevent a return of the outflow of U.S. gold.

London is trying to halt its own outflow of investment money and the drop in its reserves of gold and dollars. With higher interest rates obtainable there, short-term investors may turn again to the British market.

If stock prices here rise in response to the promise of more government spending, and bond prices weaken, dear money could come back to the American scene.

U.S. businessmen, stock traders, consumers, financiers, all will have to readjust to the new moves—keeping in mind that a strong dollar and a strong pound are important factors in a strong defense against the Kremlin's threats.

Fats Shortage Confronts Cuba

By JACK BEST
Canadian Press Staff Writer
HAVANA (AP)—The key word in Cuba today is "manteca." Translated from the Spanish it means lard, or fats. Manteca—or lack of it—has presented Fidel Castro's revolutionary regime with a sticky problem. For the first time in its 2½-year history, the regime has had to impose rationing. Families are restricted to one pound of lard and one pound of cooking oil monthly for each person above the age of one year. This is going to hurt. Cubans normally consume an extraordinarily large amount of fat. The government places the blame on "American economic aggression" for the present embarrassing situation, claiming the United States is maintaining an unannounced embargo against exports of lard to Cuba. The United States has traditionally been the sole supplier of Cuba, selling this country 98,000 tons a year. Shipments of lard from the United States have ceased or practically ceased. Some, however, suspect that Cuba's dollar shortage may have as much to do with this as any real or imagined embargo. Shortages have been cropping up all over the place in Cuba in the last several months, as the U.S. embargo on most exports sinks in. But none has caused such consternation as the lard shortage. Cuban people like their food fried, so they use a lot of fat—many times the one pound monthly now to be allotted. They also like to douse certain foods, for instance rice and salads, with vegetable oil. The government says the shortage will be over in 18 months. It is feverishly building up the country's pig stocks, mostly by imports from Canada. In 1960, infant mortality in the United States dropped below 26.0 per 1,000 live births for the first time in the nation's history. Insurance statisticians say the previous low was 26.1 per 1,000 live births in 1956.

Saboteur Wants UN To Intervent

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP)—Bernard Brous, accused of blowing up three telephone company microwave stations in the Nevada-Utah desert, Wednesday asked the United Nations to intervene in his behalf. Brous, 52, was arrested by Mexican authorities and turned over to the United States earlier this year. Acting as his own attorney the self-styled commander of the republican army filed a petition in U.S. District court asking that his plea to the U.N. be made part of the court record. He said his arrest on a yacht off Mexico was an "international political kidnaping and barbaric revenge."

as Germany is divided, its strength is split. But even now the East German Communists don't have full control of their territory. For instance: The Russians, not the East Germans, control those supply routes to Berlin. The Russians threaten—whether or not the Allies do it—to sign a separate peace treaty with East Germany and give control of the Berlin supply routes to them. This would put the Allies in a goofy box: They'd have to get permission for sending supplies and people to Berlin from an East German government they don't even recognize as a government. All kinds of mix-ups could happen then although the East Germans would hardly try to shut off Berlin without Soviet approval since they'd have to depend on Russian support if the West decided to smash its way through. And here is the note of irony: Not only the Russians but probably millions of people in the United States, France and Britain—remembering what a single big Germany did in the war—don't want to see the two Germanies united. Nevertheless, the United States keeps telling the Russians Germany must be unified while knowing the Russians won't agree to any such thing.

ed this but they made a salient error. They brought together in the State Department and in the White House too many men who have such status that they have to assert themselves—Adlai Stevenson, Chester Bowles, Dean Acheson, A.A. Berle, Jr., General Maxwell Taylor, Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., McGeorge Bundy—there are too many such men about. They are a chorus of prima donnas. No impresario would risk a chorus of prima donnas in an opera; the confusion would be too great. Each one of these men is ready to be Secretary of State. Thus, comes a Cuban fiasco, a Laos fiasco, a disarmament failure, a Vienna Conference failure. The public wonders what it all means and they put much blame on the State Department, which continues to be an unpopular agency of government.

Thomas, the Realist

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—John 11:5-16; 14:3-6; 20:24-29; Acts 1:13.

Christ has told His disciples that He is the way to God. Before His death He says He is going to prepare a place for them, and that they know the way to His destination. Thomas complains that he has no idea where Christ is going, so how should he know the way?—John 14:3-6.

After Christ's resurrection He appears before the disciples, but Thomas is not present. The others seek him out and tell their glad tidings. Thomas, however, refuses to believe in Christ's resurrection unless he can see Him and touch Him for himself.—John 20:24-26.

A week after Easter Christ again appears in the midst of His disciples, including Thomas. He invites Thomas to touch His wounds, to "reach hither (his) hand, and put it into (His) side," to see for himself. "And he was not faithless, but believing."—John 20:26-27.

Thomas' doubts are conquered; "My Lord and my God," he exclaims. Jesus says to him, "Thomas, because thou hast seen Me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed."—John 20:28-29.

HOW A DISCIPLE WITH DOUBTS IS LED TO A FIRM FAITH

Scripture—John 11:5-16; 14:3-6; 20:24-29; Acts 1:13.

By N. SPEER JONES

THE reference from Acts in this lesson can be dismissed briefly, as it tells us only one thing about Thomas—that the former doubter is continuing his discipleship with full fervor—a fact which must surely be concluded from the episode in John 20.

Everything else we know of Thomas comes from the three brief passages cited from John. We are introduced to him in 11:16.

The meaning of Didymus is "twin." It is just possible that the psychological complexities of being a twin have contributed to Thomas' skeptical nature.

When the disciples utter some remonstrance about Christ's returning to Judaea, since that is where He was so recently stoned. He gives a very enigmatic reply.

One interpretation is that because He walks in the daylight of the Lord's way, or does God's bidding, stones or other dangers cannot hurt Him during His allotted time on earth (12 hours).

of death. (Matthew 26:56). Thomas' gloomy disposition reveals itself again in John 14:3-6. Christ has previously told His disciples that He is "the way" to the place He is going—Heaven. He reminds them of this, but indirectly.

Thomas' rejoinder could be translated, in today's terminology, "How should WE know?" in an all-too-familiar tone of lazy criticism—"an excuse for ignorance," as A. E. Bruce terms it ("Peloubet's Select Notes"). Christ, instead of being angry, explains fully and directly what He means—He is the way to God, the way to life itself.

In chapter 20 we see that Thomas is the only one missing, other than Judas, from the meeting of the disciples on Easter Sunday.

Why? Probably, as J. D. Jones suggests ("Peloubet's Select Notes"), because he has retreated into an isolated and almost prideful grief—not only over Christ's death but over his own embarrassed disappointment at having partaken in an apparently ill-fated cause.

Around his sensitivity, Thomas had built a hard shell, and could not even share his grief.

The disciples, however, full of joy of the Holy Spirit, seek him out in the intervening week to tell him of Christ's rising. Thomas, unwilling to "be taken in again," says, in effect, that they really have to prove it to him.

The fact that he mentions Christ's wounds indicates how deeply he felt, within his shell, the awful experience of the crucifixion.

However, as is often the case with such cynics, Thomas, when once his walling of love and faith has been reached, drops all his barriers and breaks forth with an unsurpassed expression of his steadfast faith—"My Lord and my God."

According to tradition, Thomas' remaining years were devoted to successful mission work in the Far East, perhaps in India.

GOLDEN TEXT

"Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed."—John 20:29.

Only he who is not Godlike need fear danger, "because there is no light in him."

Notice that Christ says that He is glad for the disciples' sakes that He did not get to Bethany in time to save Lazarus, because now He will have the opportunity to give them proof of His holiness by raising Lazarus. This would indicate that Thomas had not been the only doubtful one heretofore.

More unique than doubt in Thomas' nature was pessimism and cynicism. Three times Christ states that He will go to Judaea, and two of these times (verses 7 and 15) indicate that His disciples shall accompany Him. Is Thomas so courageous, then, when he volunteers that they will go?

Yes and no; for it seems as if he has been brooding quietly over their peril and has assumed the worst—death. Despite this gloomy conclusion he is willing to follow Christ.

When the time comes, all Christ's disciples, including Thomas, desert Him in the face

Greenville Little Leaguers Move To State Playoffs

Without Arroyo, Yanks In Bad Way

By JACK HAND Associated Press Sports Writer Luis Arroyo probably won't get a vote when they pick the most valuable player in the American League...

Ralph Terry, making his first start since July 15 after a bout with shoulder trouble, had the Chicago club eating out of his hand with a three-hit shutout and one out in the ninth...

Baltimore completed a four-game series sweep over Boston with an 8-5 decision behind Chuck Estrada. The Orioles blasted loose with six runs in the seventh inning...

Harmon Killebrew's 31st home run put Minnesota out front to stay en route to a 5-2 victory over Washington. Don Lee made the lead stick with a two-run homer...

In the National League, Cincinnati held tight to first place by one game over Los Angeles. The Reds jolted a game loose from Milwaukee 2-1 and Los Angeles thumped Philadelphia 11-6...

The Yanks' Roger Maris, who leads the majors with 40 homers, and catcher Elston Howard, hitting .362, were injured. Maris aggravated a pulmonary muscle while sliding out a double...

As a result of this decision, the Yanks opened a full game lead on the idle Detroit Tigers. Baltimore completed a four-game series sweep over Boston with an 8-5 decision behind Chuck Estrada...

TARBORO—A three-run home run by Pete LaTours in the third inning yesterday provided the winning margin for Greenville's North State Little League all-stars as they dumped Ft. Bragg here 7-5 and advanced into next week's state Little League playoffs.

Greenville's entry stretched only three hits into their seven runs while Ft. Bragg could get only five tallies from 11 hits, including two homers and two doubles.

The North Staters, by beating Ft. Bragg for the District 4 title, vaulted into the four-team state tourney in Charlotte next Thursday and Friday. Charlotte's winner will advance into the sectional tourney to be held this season in Georgia.

Greenville will be matched next Thursday afternoon at 4:30 on the Myers Park Civitan Field, located on Randolph Road in Charlotte. The two winners of Thursday's doubleheader will clash Friday afternoon for the state Little League crown and a berth in the sectional playoffs.

In its victory yesterday, Greenville scored three runs in the bottom of the opening inning to take a 3-0 advantage. The runs came on three walks, two fielder's choices, two wild pitches, a sacrifice, a hit batsman and a pair of singles.

Stuart Jones opened the inning with a base on balls and was sacrificed to second by Donnie Brewer. Jones went to third on a wild pitch and beat the throw to the plate on a grounder by Donnie Taylor with Taylor safe at first.

Taylor advanced to second when Ft. Bragg pitcher David Carr hit Charles Allen with a pitched ball. Taylor moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Bert Bennett. Then Van Harrington singled Allen home for the North Staters' third run.

Ft. Bragg picked up three of their runs in the top of the third to knot the count. A two-run homer by Harold Ingle, the first of two Ingle homers, and a double by Dean Wetsner after Eddie Washington had reached first on a fielder's choice accounted for the Ft. Bragg runs.

Then in the Greenville third, Allen reached first on an error by the shortstop. Another shortstop error left Bert Bennett safe at first and allowed Allen to score before Jack Cobb drew a walk. That set the stage for LaTours' out-of-the-park blow that proved the winning margin.

Ft. Bragg mustered two more runs in the top of the fifth on another Ingle homer—a solo shot—and a double and two singles. Allen, Greenville's starting pitcher, was relieved by Cobb in the fifth with one out and two runners on base. Cobb struck out the next batter and then got catcher Mike Rose on a pop fly to first base to end the Ft. Bragg threat.

Plans for the Greenville Little Leaguers are to leave Greenville next Wednesday for Charlotte and the state playoffs. Coaching the North State stars are Clint Joyner and Jesse Jordan.

Further, a federal judge has criticized the courts for what he termed ruling in favor of sports. This came about Thursday when Judge Allan K. Grim took under advisement an appeal by the National Football League for a suspension until Dec. 31 of his ruling that the league's $9 million, two-year television contract with the Columbia Broadcasting System was in violation of antitrust laws and therefore invalid.

In answer to the government suit it doubted the legality of television contracts entered into by other sports leagues and groups in addition to the National Football League.

Gordon said some of the contracts were being investigated now by the antitrust division of the Department of Justice.

Veteran Of Aches & Pains Manhandles Tough Course

CHICAGO (AP)—Lanky Art Wall, so used to trouble and playing so well he can't be bothered by conditions irking most of the other pros, takes a one-stroke lead and a bundle of regained confidence into the second round of the PGA golf championship today.

The way this veteran of aches and pains manhandled the par 35-35 — 70, 6,722-yard, Olympia

Field Country Club course with his brilliant 3-under-par 33-34-67 on Thursday, the Palmers, Player called Olympia's "flying grass" fairways the worst they had ever played.

"They're ridiculous," said Palmer, who needs the PGA title to complete a four-way slam of the British Open, U.S. Open and Masters championships within the last 16 months.

Wall, who laughed agreement when someone suggested his 67 was probably his best played round since his sizzling last day 66 won the 1959 Masters, finished late in the day and wrested the first-round lead from defending champion Jay Hebert of Lafayette, La., and chunky Ernie Vogler of Oklahoma City. They had 68's.

Little Jerry Barber and former champion Doug Ford were at 69 with Bill Heinlein, 50, club pro from Carmel, Ind., playing in his 18th PGA. Among the others still far from out of it were such as Doug Sanders and Bob Rosburg in a group at 70, national open champion Gene Littler in a group of 10 at 71, Player, three-time champion Sam Snead, Ken Venture, Mike Souchak and Tommy Bolt in a huge contingent at 72, and a grim, disappointed Arnie Palmer in another bunch at 73.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Ed Sweetman protected a three stroke lead going into today's final round of the 72 hole amateur championship of the National Association of Left-handed Golfers.

Speed Attempt Is Delayed A Week

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Attempts to speed 180 miles an hour at Daytona International Speedway have been given up for this week.

Art Malone, drag racer from Tampa, suspended his attempts in the specially built Mad Dog IV to keep a racing commitment in Michigan over the weekend.

He reached 172-977 m.p.h. on one lap Thursday—his fastest yet—but didn't attempt to get up to 180 for the $10,000 prize posted by speedway President Bill France.

"I'm going to drive the car to the safety limit and no farther each time," Malone said. "I think too much of my life and the car to jeopardize them."

Fenway Park Is Again To Host Boston Slugger

BOSTON (AP) — Ted Williams, author of countless illustrious games, returns to Fenway Park Monday where he made All-Star baseball batting history 15 years ago.

The retired Boston slugger will throw out the first ball for the second All-Star contest in which the American League will try to even matters following a 5-4, 10-inning loss to the Nationals earlier this month.

On July 9, 1946 the AL bombarded the senior circuit 12-0 when the major league luminaries last played at Fenway Park.

Williams hit two homers, two singles, walked, drove in five runs and scored four.

The "topper," the dynamic batsman started in one of recorded athletics' greatest moments of muscle vs inertia.

It was the day Ted did the impossible — knocking Rip Sewell's "blooper" pitch 410 feet into the right field bullpen.

Ted had to supply all the power himself and did so — as only "No. 9" could.

"Thumper" Williams makes his curtain call Monday at the All-Star game dotted with his records. Williams ended his career last season with a .344 lifetime batting average, third among all-time home run sluggers (521) and sixth in RBI (1839).

Sharing third place at 223 were Jack Cudd of Winston-Salem and Bob Johnson of Charleston, W.Va.

Next at 227 was Dr. Leon Dwulet of Point Pleasant, N.J. The doctor has had a hectic week. His wife entered a Greensboro hospital Monday morning for an appendectomy, leaving him with their five children to keep tabs on between rounds. They plan to leave for home Saturday.

Ted Olsee of Grand Rapids, Mich., continued to run away with senior honors, shooting an 82 for a 227 total and an eight-shot lead, and Tom Moore of Napoleon, Ohio, was far out in front in the junior division. He had a 74 for a 54-hole score of 234 and a 10-stroke lead.

Cincinnati's Invasion Of Milwaukee Proves Cure

By JACK HAND

Associated Press Sports Writer There was nothing wrong with the Cincinnati Reds that a trip to Milwaukee wouldn't cure. The only trouble is, the Reds are fresh out of trips to Milwaukee.

In their final game of the season at County Stadium, where they won nine of 11 stars, the Reds jolted a game loose from the Braves in the ninth inning. Vada Pinson, breaking from third base with the bases loaded, knocked the ball out of catcher Sammy White's glove Thursday for a 2-1 victory.

As a result of that triumph, Cincinnati still holds a one-game edge on the Los Angeles Dodgers who thumped Philadelphia 11-6 with an 18-hit attack.

San Francisco's Juan Marichal blanked Pittsburgh on five hits 2-0, the 10th shutout for the defending National League champion. Chicago knocked off St. Louis again 3-2, using the same combination that won the day before, pinch hitter Bob Will and relief pitcher Barney Schultz.

In the American League, the New York Yankees strengthened their lead over idle Detroit to one full game by stopping a ninth-inning Chicago rally for a 4-3 victory. Baltimore scored six in the seventh and beat Boston 8-5. Minnesota trimmed Washington

Will Chamberlain of the Philadelphia Warriors led the National Basketball Association in rebounds last season, averaging 27.2 per game.

UP TO 40—Roger Maris of the Yankees smiles broadly in dressing room in New York after taking over the major league home run lead with 40. Maris smashed four homers—two in each game—as the Yanks beat the Chicago White Sox, 5-1, and 12-0. Maris is 14 games ahead of the record pace of Babe Ruth when he hit 60 homers in 1927. ## Annual 4-H Club Week Heads Into Election Climax Today

RALEIGH (AP) — The annual 4-H Club Week moved toward a climax today as candidates campaigned for state offices. Dr. John T. Caldwell, chancellor of North Carolina State College, scene of the week's activities, was the speaker at a final morning assembly. Balloting for officers this afternoon, and the annual talent parade tonight, will close out the week for 1,400 boys and girls and their adult leaders. The annual health pageant Thursday night featured the coronation of Arlita Lowry, 15, of Pembroke, and Frank Knox, 17, of Rt. 1, Mooresville, as queen and king of health. ## Woman Scientist Handed Problems Of Solar Wind

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Guess who's worried about solar winds? A blonde named Marcia, that's who. Ranger I—an unmanned space explorer—is poised to blast off from Cape Canaveral. One of the instrument assemblies aboard is called an electrostatic analyzer. One of its jobs is to probe solar winds. That's where Marcia Neugebauer comes in. "I'm a co-experimenter with the electrostatic analyzer," says Marcia, 28. She looks like a well-scrubbed, freckle-faced college freshman. But she's a senior scientist who is among the key personnel responsible for Ranger's complex machinery. Marcia works at the California Institute of Technology's Jet Propulsion Laboratory here. She is in charge of coordinating the various experiments being performed by instruments on Ranger. "I'm the only one that worries about the scientific aspects all together," she said. She said it's up to her division—the division of the space sciences at JPL—to determine where the scientific instruments are placed in the spacecraft and how often a reading is taken from each. Marcia received a bachelor of arts degree in physics from Cornell University in 1954 and master of science degree, also in physics, from the University of Illinois two years later. She is married to Dr. Gerry Neugebauer, 28, JPL project scientist for Mariner B, a proposed 1964 unmanned expedition to Mars. The couple, who met at Cornell and have been married for five years, live in Altadena. Marcia said she and her husband do not work on the same projects. "They try to keep us separated; it's a matter of policy," she said. There are only seven other women scientists or engineers working among the 852 men at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Possible Shooting War Strategy Analyzed

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — If shooting starts on account of Berlin, the United States and its NATO allies will try to keep the area of hostilities as small as possible. This is one conclusion of Harry S. Pease, a reporter for the Milwaukee Journal, who has just ended a six week survey in Europe assessing the strength and strategy of the United States and its allies. Other conclusions: In any prolonged major East-West clash in Germany the West will resort to nuclear weapons to offset the tremendous advantage held by the Soviet Union in the manpower and concentration of weapons. There is hope that the Western powers, despite the admittedly formidable military machine built up by the Soviets in the post-war years, can head them off by a strong defense. Pease said no one doubts the desirability of Western policy aimed at keeping any clash small at the outset. "However," he adds, "my own observations of our field forces lead me to doubt that any prolonged period of conventional war could follow a major clash between Russian and West European or American military forces. "In the European area, the Communist conventional forces are more than seven times as large as ours. In general they are better equipped and enjoy the priceless advantage of central direction and control. "The best—possibly the only—way to keep the Russians from massing tanks and artillery, or even the infantry, to achieve this local continental superiority would be atomic explosives on Russian concentration points. To meet this situation the U.S. Army in Germany, some 200,000 plus strong, keeps its atomic weapons at the ready. Where a missile or an airplane is described as nuclear capable, it nearly always means they are nuclear armed. Pease wrote a series of articles on his findings for the Milwaukee Journal, which made them available to the Associated Press. These are some of the highlights from his survey, which took him to U.S. military installations in Scotland, England, France, Denmark, West Germany, Italy, Spain and Turkey:

U.S. strategy is based on maintaining forward positions, dispersing relatively small units possessing high mobility over hundreds of miles in depth. They are equipped with nuclear weapons of battlefield size designed to give a relatively small force a chance to cope with a massive enemy advance. Nuclear weapons are regarded as equalizers in the U.S. arsenal in Germany. These include the Honest John, a free flight rocket, unguided, with a range of 12 miles. Pease speculated its atomic punch can clear a square mile of significant enemy resistance no matter how the enemy might be protected. There is Corporal, a true guided missile capable of delivering a 1,500 pound payload on a target 80 miles from its launch pad. A highly trained mobile crew can get it ready in 70 minutes, and it takes a 15 minute countdown before firing. The giant is the mighty Redstone missile, which can hurl a nuclear warhead almost as big as an automobile 230 miles, by conservative estimate. In civilian life the Redstone launched the first American satellite and the mercury capsules that carried spaceman Alan Shepard and Virgil Grissom. At Cape Canaveral preparations for a launching takes weeks. But the mobile "scout and shoot" units in Germany can have a Redstone ready to go in a few hours. It is highly flexible, movable by road 100 miles in any direction. On that basis it can land the equivalent of a 1,000-plane World War II air raid anywhere within a quarter of a million square miles.

Students Support ECC Night At 'Lost Colony'

Growing interest in the East Carolina College Night at "The Lost Colony" on Roanoke Island on Saturday, August 5, has been evidenced by the support of summer session students at East Carolina Alumni. President Fodie H. Hodges of the East Carolina College Alumni Association and President Otis Strother, III, of the East Carolina Student Government Association have urged alumni and students to join in the East Carolina College events, including the fish fry in Manteo in the late afternoon of August 5. Strother said the SGA is supporting the charter bus plan announced by the Alumni Office, noting that the trip from Greenville to Waterside Theater and Manteo in an air-conditioned Trailways bus will permit travel in safety and comfort. Guest performer in the August 5 production of "The Lost Colony" will be Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, East Carolina College president, who will also speak in the brief ceremonies during intermission. He will be the 12th person with East Carolina College connections to appear in the 1961 production of "The Lost Colony." Dr. Jenkins will appear in the role of Captain Amadas. Peter Juhl, East Carolina student, appears in the lead role, playing John Borden this season. Clifton Britton is director of the current production, making this his eighth season as director and his 14th year of association with "The Lost Colony." Britton is an alumnus of East Carolina College and teacher of drama and director of "The Goldmasquers" in the Goldsboro high school. The charter bus will leave the East Carolina College campus at 1:30 p.m., returning to Greenville immediately following the play. Reservations for the trip and for seats in Waterside theater may be made through the Alumni Office in Greenville. Mexico's most-traveled highways are patrolled daily by a fleet of green jeeps equipped with two-way radios and repair devices and manned by experienced mechanics. There is no charge for assistance they render except for the actual cost of gasoline, oil, repairs or spare parts.

Union Carbide To Be Exhibitor At Trade Fair

Test observer records completion of "full throttle" acceleration trial as car, filled with Super Shell, hits 60 miles per hour.

5390 acceleration tests prove today's Super Shell, with 9 ingredients, can give your car all the power you need for top performance

Shell test crews run convoys of cars through thousands of tests. They turn up some surprising facts. Helpful facts, too, for anyone who wants a smooth-running, responsive engine.

A '61 sedan idles on a straightaway near the Shell laboratory at Wood River, Illinois. The tank is filled with Super Shell. Suddenly, the driver presses the accelerator against the floor board. When the car's speed reaches 60 miles an hour, stop watches clock the elapsed time. How long did it take? Did the car accelerate smoothly? Was there any indication of abnormal combustion? These are a few of the questions that Shell's experts will ask.

10,000 test miles
To make sure of their answers, they will turn the sedan around and try the same run again. Wind and weather can make a significant difference in these tests—and Shell engineers want a true average.

A fleet of ten Shell test cars gets more than 5390 acceleration tests in about six months. And each car travels at least 10,000 miles.

Why so many tests? There are certain times when you must have top performance. You may be pulling onto a busy highway, or climbing a steep hill, or passing. Those 5390 acceleration tests help certify today's Super Shell for top performance when you really need it.

NOTE: Next time you're on a flat, straight stretch of deserted road, try the "full throttle" test. If your car seems to "run out of engine," give Super Shell a chance. One of its nine ingredients is new, improved TCP. It can help restore up to 15 per cent of lost power.

Mileage test
Top performance is measured in many ways by Shell scientists. Here's a way they test Super Shell's mileage ingredient, Platformate.

A half cupful of Super Shell, with Platformate, is carefully fed into the fuel system of a conventional car. The car is started, accelerated and held at 30 miles per hour until it runs out of gas. Then, the same amount of gasoline without Platformate is poured in—and the test is run again.

In repeated tests, Shell engineers have found that Super Shell takes the car an average of 48 feet farther per half cupful.

In 100 miles of driving, that 48 feet turns into 2 1/2 extra miles. A nice little bonus.

Special Hot Weather Blend
Shell scientists also test Super Shell for top performance in all kinds of weather. In summer, for example, they make sure that Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend fights hot weather stalls. Try a tankful of Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend. You then can be sure of top performance—even when highways sizzle.

Super Shell's 9 ingredients for top performance

- #1 is TCP*—for power, mileage, and longer plug life.
- #2 is Pentane mix—for fast warm-ups.
- #3 is anti-knock mix—for knock resistance.
- #4 is Alkylate to control "high-speed knock."
- #5 is Butane—for quick starts.
- #6 is "cat-cracked" gasoline—for power.
- #7 is an "anti-icer." Added when cold weather sets in.
- #8 is gum preventive—for clean carburetors.
- #9 is Platformate for extra mileage.

With an area of 5,800 square miles and a population of some 200,000, Kuwait has one of the world's richest oil reserves, estimated at 60 billion barrels. Production, which totaled more than 500 million barrels in 1959, is handled by the Kuwait Oil Company, jointly owned by British and American oil interests. It ranks fourth in world oil production, after the U. S., Venezuela and Russia.

DETROIT (AP) — Outside directors—men who hold no management positions with the company—have taken control of the Chrysler Corp. for the first time since the late Walter Chrysler founded the auto firm in 1925.

Following a meeting in New York Thursday the corporation announced the resignation of L. L. (Tex) Colbert as chairman, president, chief executive officer, chief operating officer and director.

The directors installed Lynn A. Townsend as president and abolished the rest of Colbert's jobs, even to reducing the number of board members by one—to 17.

For Colbert they created a new post-chairman of the board of Chrysler of Canada, Ltd. This will enable him to keep his stock options (45,000 shares at $52.49 a share, slightly above the present market price) and to remain eligible for his Chrysler pension ($92,250 a year when he retires nine years hence.)

The action came exactly one year after Chrysler disclosed it had fired its previous president, William C. Newberg, because he owned half interests in two companies whose sole business was making parts for Chrysler. Newberg had been Colbert's personal choice and close friend.

Newberg was dismissed June 30, 1960, but it was not until July 29 that the corporation spelled out the reason.

After Newberg, Chrysler tried without success to lure top men from other auto companies as president with Colbert to remain as board chairman.

Meanwhile lawsuits against Colbert and the directors by dissident stockholders complaining of the management began to pile up. Last fall a committee of the outside directors set out to find a new man. Townsend, a financial expert who only joined the company in 1957, was told early this week he was their choice.

Townsend's elevation came concurrently with the company's announcement it had made a $6.2 million profit in the second quarter of 1961. Chrysler lost $21.9 million in the first quarter.

Townsend, 42, who became administrative vice president last December, has been the chief architect of a drastic cost-cutting program at Chrysler.

Both Colbert and Townsend refused to elaborate on the meeting in New York. So did George H. Love of Pittsburgh, who became chairman of the new executive committee of the corporation. In addition to Love its members are R. E. McNeill of New York, Neil McElroy of Cincinnati, L. F. McCollum of Houston and Townsend.

When the Chrysler board meets Love will preside. He said he will resign as chairman of M. A. Hannah Co. and as director of National Steel Corp. to devote more time to Chrysler.

From its inception until the past April, Chrysler's board has been dominated by company employees and controlled by the president or board chairman who had the power to fire such employees.

In April the board offered a revised slate of directors to the annual meeting which for the first time put the balance of power with directors not working for Chrysler.

Chicago's Milk Strike Is Souring Some Of Parents

CHICAGO (AP) — Prospects of another milkless day soured some Chicago area parents today but it sweetened many of their children.

"I never realized how the power to paralyze a city and disrupt our routine is centered in so few hands," commented Hazel Crest, Gregor of suburban Hazel Crest. As she spoke representatives of the Associated Milk Dealers and two striking dairy workers' locals labored to end the wage dispute which has shut off 90 per cent of the city's fresh milk supply.

Some 2 million quarts of milk are sold daily in the Chicago metropolitan area. But not one quart was available today. Stores reported heavy sales of canned milk and powdered milk. Sales of soft drinks and ades apurled.

Mrs. McGregor, mother of three young boys, said: "My husband and I quit drinking milk and cream. The boys need what little we have left. My husband and I are drinking iced tea."

In suburban Glenview, Paula Fassnacht commented: "The milk was all gone at our store, so we're using frozen malted milk." Mrs. Fassnacht said her daughter, Laurie, 4, "just loves the stuff and always preferred it to regular milk."

Mrs. James Saxon, mother of six children including two sets of twins, said: "The kids are just having a little picnic, drinking fruit juices, except the young twins who prefer milk. If milk doesn't come in soon, I'll have to drive out of town to get some."

A North Side resident, Mrs. Saxon added the second set of twins, James and Matthew, "are hoping the strike continues so they can drink pop."

The succinct attitude of Mrs. Kelly Crump, a Des Plaines wife with two young daughters: "My kids like orange juice. To hell with the cows."

The strike began Tuesday night. Some 3,200 inside dairy employees walked off their jobs in the 60 area dairies. Dairies shut down but deliveries of previously processed fresh milk continued for 24 hours when 5,200 milk drivers joined the strike.

Issues involved in the strike include wages, automation and fringe benefits. Inside workers now average $110 weekly; the drivers average $127. Old contracts expired May 1.

Plant in Kansas Devised Signal

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—An air raid warning system for householders mentioned by President Kennedy in his speech to the nation Tuesday night was developed at the Midwest Research Institute in Kansas City.

The device, called the National Emergency Alarm Repeater, is a little box that can be plugged into an electrical outlet in any home and can be sold for less than $10.

Henry Brown, electronics engineer at the Office of Civil Defense Mobilization in Battle Creek, Mich., confirmed Wednesday that President Kennedy was speaking about NEAR.

Dr. Charles N. Kimball, Midwest Research president, said: "All the research and development has been done. The next step would be putting it into production."

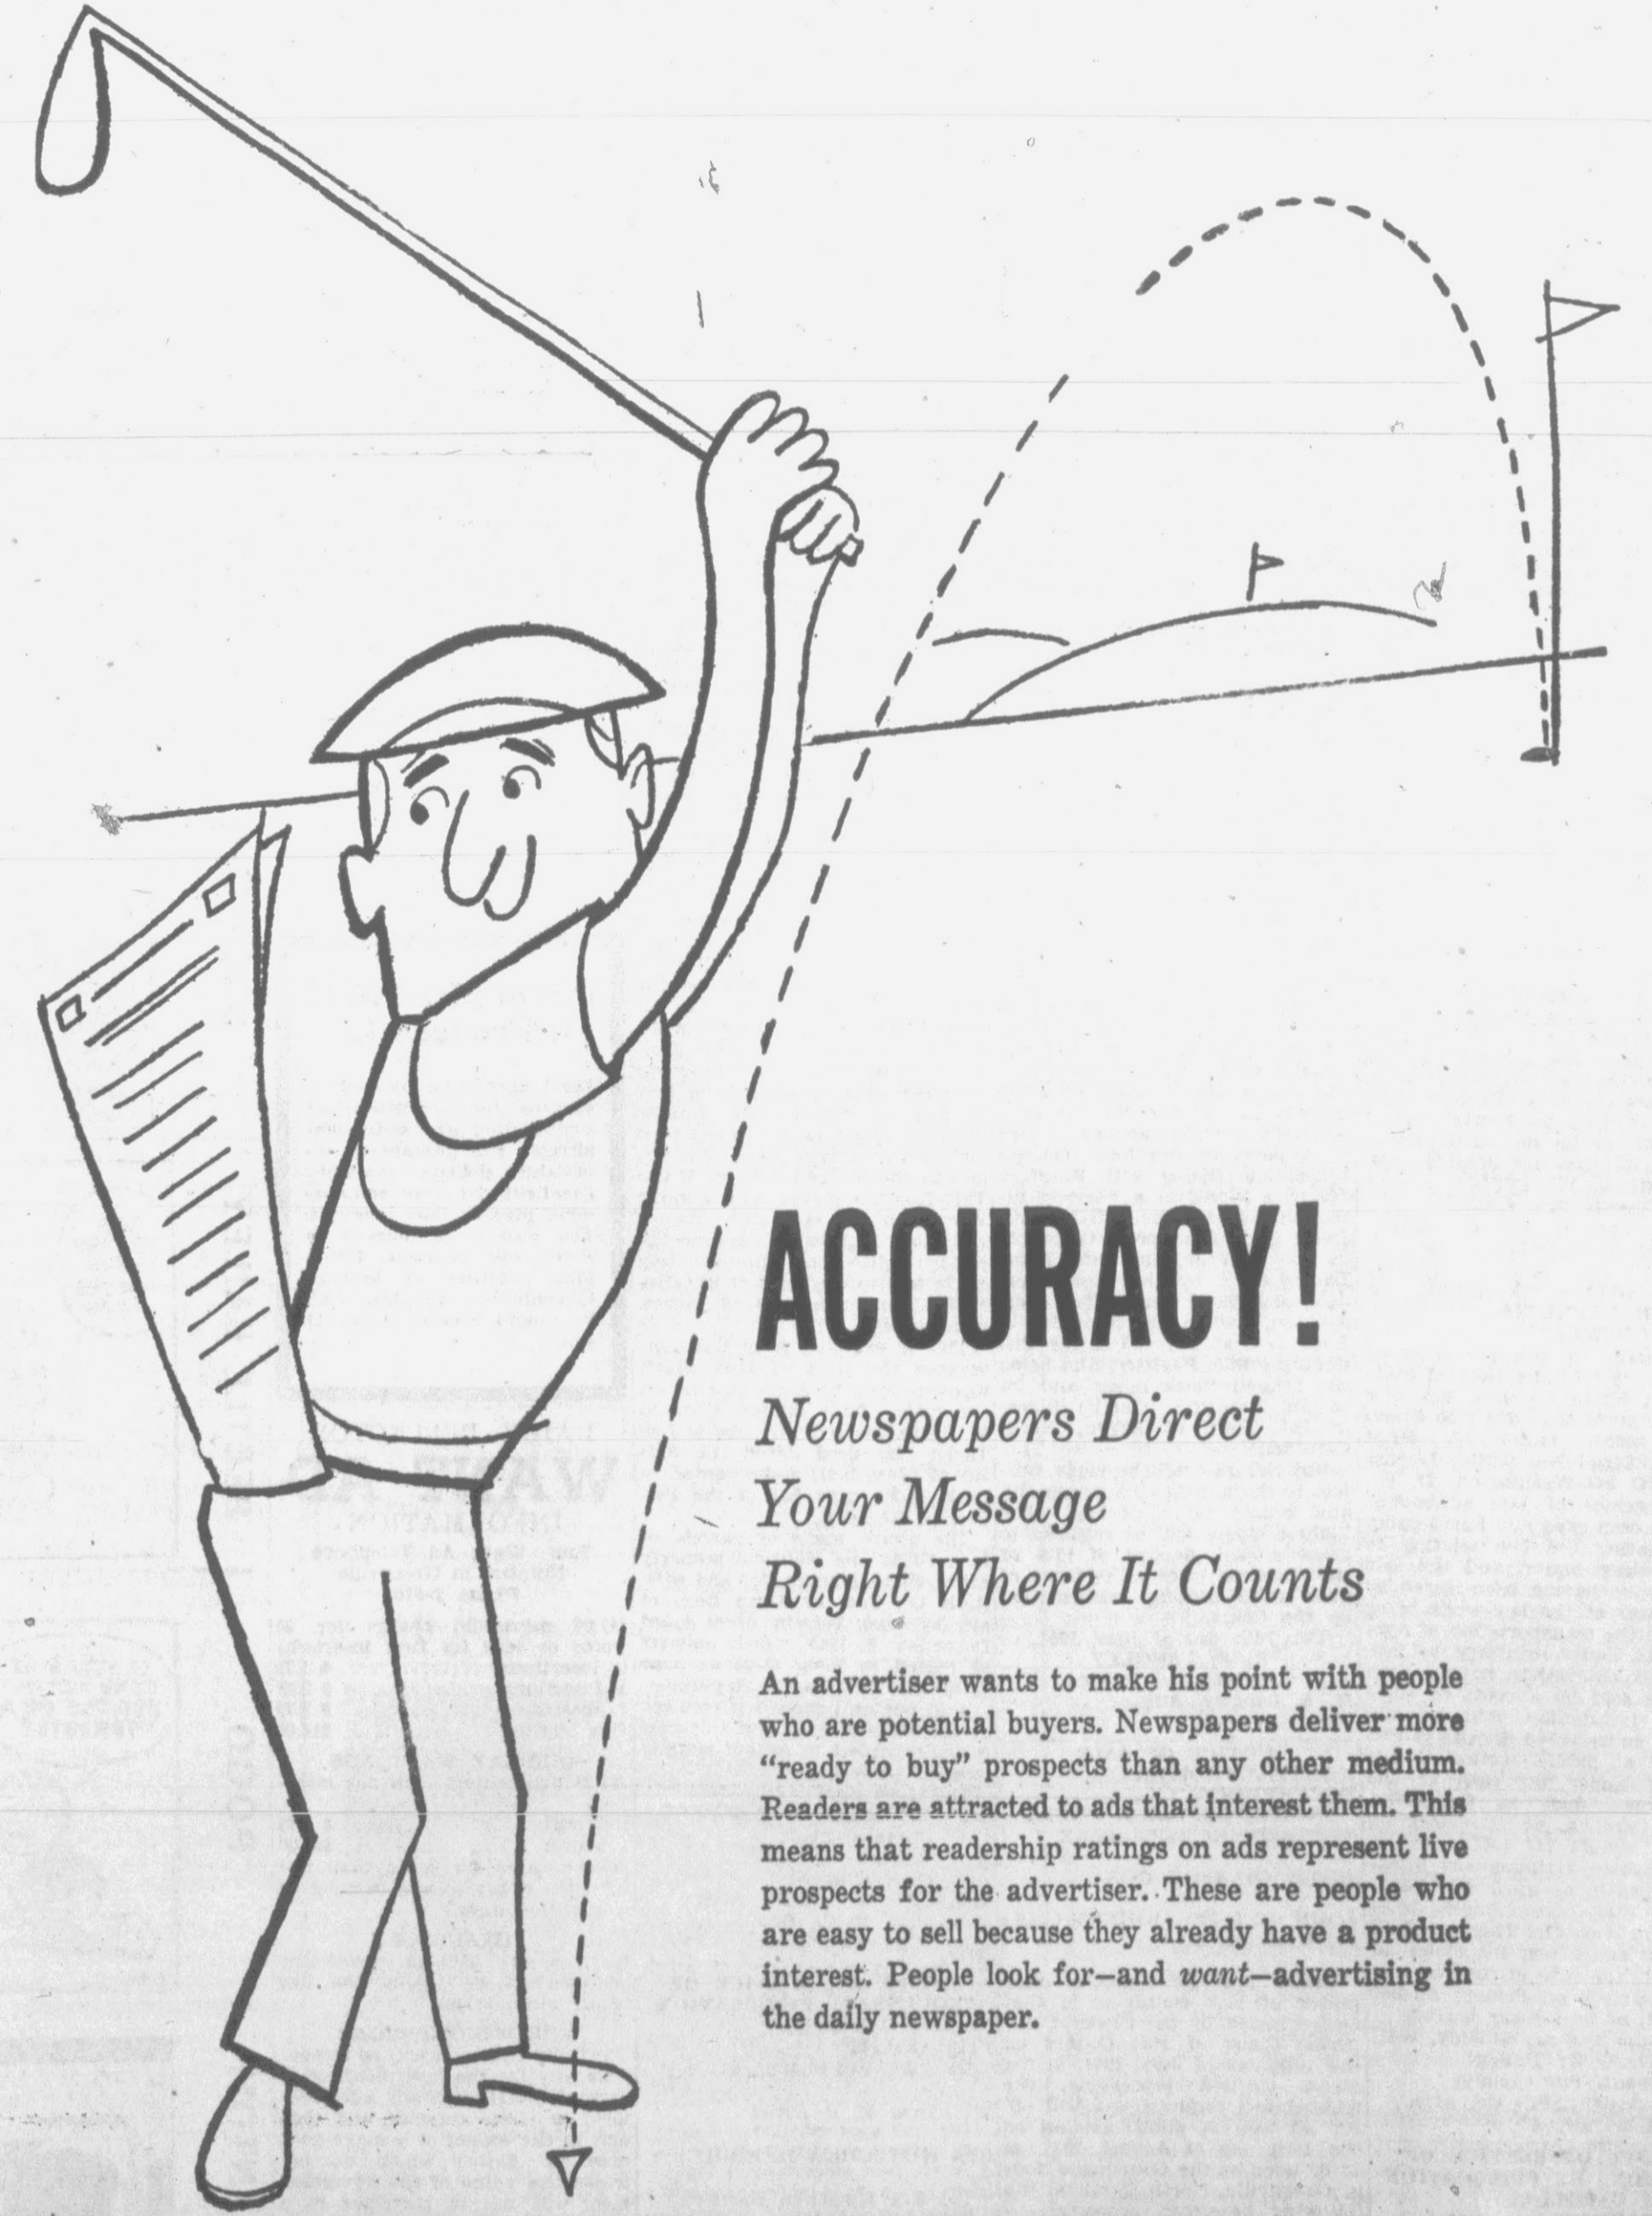

However, in order to operate the alarm system, power substations would have to be equipped with generators to convert part of the regular 60-cycle power into the special signal.

Dr. Kimball and Harold L. Stout, who has been in charge of the project, said the equipment could be installed nationwide at an expense of $1 a home.

Civilians Hear Sylvester Green

Local Civilians last night heard an address by Dr. C. Sylvester Green, Executive Director of the Pitt County Development Commission.

Speaking at the club's regular bi-weekly dinner meeting, Dr. Green outlined the goals and accomplishments to date of the commission since its establishment by the Pitt County Board of County Commissioners.

The speaker noted that the Development Commission was authorized to "promote the overall welfare of Pitt County." While this authorization has many facets, the primary ones are assisting and seeking to secure new industry for the Pitt County area, he said.

Since his employment as Executive Director last January, Dr. Green noted that 339 industrial firms have been contacted, with second contacts being made with 92 of these. At present, five "hot" prospects are considering this area as a possible site for industrial location.

Director Green emphasized the fact that names of prospective industries were confidential and some companies go to great lengths in order to remain unidentified while evaluating different sites. A non-surplus of skilled mechanical labor in this area is detrimental to the securing of new industry, stated the speaker, but with the forthcoming Pitt Industrial School in operation this problem will be greatly alleviated.

Prior to Dr. Green's address, club members were urged by President Herbert W. Wilkerson to attend the Civitan North Carolina District meeting to be held in Morehead City Aug. 19-20. Wilkerson also presented immediate past president Kenneth Quiggins with a Civitan button signifying his service as club president during the past year.

Sub Re-Fueling Report Checked

LUNENBURG, N.S. (AP)—The Canadian navy said today it is investigating a report that the mother ship of a Soviet herring fleet fueled a Soviet submarine in international waters 100 miles off Nova Scotia.

Capt. Douglas Mosher of a Nova Scotia scallop dragger said he and his 19-man crew watched the operation last Saturday on George's Bank.

British Defer Common Market Announcement

GENEVA (AP)—Britain today sidestepped a definite announcement to its partners in the European Free Trade Association on whether it plans to join the booming rival Common Market, a source at the EFTA conference reported.

There was no other word on what Edward Heath, No. 2 man in the British Foreign Office, told Britain's trading partners but the atmosphere at the opening session of the conference was said to have been friendly. It was held in a closely guarded secrecy.

Prime Minister Harold Macmillan is to outline the British position in the House of Commons Monday, and precautions have been taken to prevent a leak beforehand.

After a cabinet meeting in London Thursday, Home Secretary R. A. Butler told the House of Commons the government had settled its policy toward the Common Market and would canvass conservative members for support.

It was generally understood Macmillan's government, despite opposition at home and from other commonwealth governments, is ready to link up with the Common Market if France permits certain concessions to commonwealth trade.

EFTA is composed of Britain, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Switzerland, Austria and Portugal and Finland is an associate member. The Common Market is made up of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg and already has a long start toward completely free trade among the six nations and a common tariff barrier against the rest of the world.

Britain, which must export to live, is anxious not to be shut off from the 200 million potential customers in the Common Market countries. At the same time she does not want to undermine the economies of the commonwealth

STATE is truly the Community Bank - the Bank for Everyone

If you were to examine the roster of STATE BANK's customers, it would reveal just about every kind of person and enterprise in this area. You'd find merchants, big and small . . . manufacturers and wholesale distributors . . . planters and farmers of every category . . . college professors and students . . . many professional people . . . and, a large sprinkling of plain everyday Mr. and Mrs. John Doakes.

This broad cross-section is just what you'd expect in an old-established bank. Indeed, STATE is truly the community bank, the bank for everyone, and the bank for every banking service.

Just because STATE is owned and operated by the community it serves, don't get any ideas about STATE Bank being a small, local bank. There's a whale of a difference between just another small bank and a bank that's local by choice! STATE is big in concept and just as progressive as a modern bank can be. It serves not just Greenville, but the entire area of which Greenville is the hub.

Services? Name it. We have it! Loans? Any size and character. Checking Accounts? Of course. Savings? Yes sir-ee, paying 3% interest . . . with interest earned every single day. Trust Services? A most highly regarded and experienced department to serve you. Safe deposit boxes . . . bond and security transactions . . . credit reports . . . the works! Yes sir, everything you'd expect to find in a big bank.

One big difference, however—our service is more personal and considerably more friendly.
