Six-Year-Old Bicycle Rider Is Injured In Friday's Accidents

A six-year-old bicycle rider was injured in one of four collisions in Greenville yesterday, which caused an estimated $750 damage.

The collision occurred at the intersection of Fifth and Pitt Sts. about 5:30 p.m., police said.

No damage was done to the Aldred vehicle while an estimated $200 damage resulted to the New-born vehicle.

SCENE OF MISHAP . . . where young bicyclist was injured yesterday.

An inch and a half of rain fell weekend, with rather widely scattered afternoon and early evening thundershowers.

In an interview with the Daily Reflector today, Sheriff Hinson attributed the successful investigation of the murder, climaxed Thursday with the arrest of 16-year-old Kenneth Allen Jolly of Ayden, to the stolen car lists, patience and perseverance of officers and citizens, and "the grace of God."

Hinson said his deputies, with help from State Bureau of Investigation agents and others, track down car after car that matched the description — "a 1961 blue Chevrolet" — given by Mrs. Waters' neighbors who told officers they saw the car in Ridgecrest Community the afternoon the 24-year-old housewife was slain in her home.

Hayes, a former Tar Heel, said in his complaint that the government failed to keep a lease agreement under which he contracted to build an 800-unit housing project for personnel of the Camp Lejeune Marine Base.

The complaint contended that on July 15, 1960, Hayes' companies were evicted from the incomplete housing development by the government and that T. A. Loving Co. of Goldsboro and Harlee Co. of Qualabaum Construction Co. of South Carolina were given the "possession and occupation of the leases to complete the project."

Jolly, upon his return home that night, had told his parents of taking the driver training car. Subsequently, he was tried in Recorder's Court and had his driver's license suspended.

In praising his own deputies for "an excellent job," the sheriff also complimented SBI agents H. T. Hartley Jr. of Goldsboro and John Edwards of Kinston and the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff Hinson said, "We thank God first and then the many, many people who prayed for a solution to this thing. I think He had a hand to do with it. I believe in prayer," the sheriff said.

Police said Charles Joyner of Woodlawn Ave. received abrasions to his right arm and back after colliding with a truck being driven by Ervin Streeter, 34-year-old Negro of Route 1, Greenville.

An estimated $10 damage was done to the truck while $5 damage resulted to the bicycle in the 12:35 p.m. mishap.

Franklin E. Dunn, 24, of 313 East 14th St. was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol as the result of the investigation of a wreck at the intersection of 14th and Forbes Sts. at 6:35 last night.

Officers reported the Dunn vehicle collided with a car driven by Grover C. Tice, 46, Greenville.

Damage to the Tice vehicle was set at $50 while damage to the Dunn auto was placed at $250.

An estimated $250 damage was done to a new truck on the Stafford Oldsmobile Company's lot on Cotanche St. when a second truck rolled downhill and crashed into the new vehicle.

Talking Of Christ In Soviet Union, Too

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
 Associated Press Religion Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — They're talking about Christ in the Soviet Union—even the people who don't believe in him.

Karl Marx himself once said it was bound to happen.

Several Soviet publications of late have cited gains in church membership and strength, among both peasant and worker groups.

In trying to explain the phenomenon, some Communist organs have included detailed discussion of Christian beliefs.

American religious observers say this may mean some Russians are hearing the Gospel story for the first time—even though it comes from hostile sources advocating atheism.

The Soviet magazine Science and Life said in a recent article which analyzed Adventist beliefs: "Having chosen Christ as his Lord, man must give himself up wholly to Christ's direction, and subject his will entirely to his Master's."

"The Adventists constantly instill into their faithful that men cannot radically alter their moral visage by their own strength. For this the intervention of an external force is needed, and that force is Christ."

Christian Century, a U.S. weekly, noting that numerous such expositions have appeared lately in various Soviet journals in efforts to explain the church's hold on people, commented: "Who knows into what heart this seed might fall."

The question also is raised if some of the Soviet articles may be written tongue-in-cheek, out of actual respect for religion, even though purporting to scorn.

The official Soviet antireligion monthly Science and Religion says Baptists are using all sorts of methods — aiding those with "material difficulties, sorrow, illness, anything"—all for the purpose of "catching souls."

The magazine adds that Christian influence is increasing, and says Communist atheism must find means to curb it.

Have You Tasted Flummy Pie?

By CECIL BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor

ANY COOK who wants applause needs only to bake a pretty, fancy pie shell. Easy to do, if you have a bit of time, and such an elegant show for company.

What will you choose for the pie shell's rim — presents, coins or buttons? For any of these borders, fit the pastry into the pie plate and trim the overhang even with the plate's edge; now bears weight-watcher's in mind. Cut out crescents with a small crescent-shaped cutter from a canape-cutter set; press the crescents onto the slightly moistened pie-shell rim so they barely touch.

For coins, cut out 1/4 inch rounds, using the center of a doughnut cutter or a thimble. Overlap the rounds on the slightly moistened pie-shell rim, pressing down lightly.

For buttons, make cutouts with a small metal bottle cap and place these, just touching, on the slightly moistened pie-shell rim. Now use a wooden skewer to stimulate button holes by piercing the center of each round of dough in four places.

How to fill the decorated baked pie shell? Here's Fruit Flummy Pie!

Desserts named Flummeries were popular in the 1890's, and one of these was made with sweetened and flavored gelatin mixed with beaten egg whites and lots of cream. This 1961 recipe uses the trimmings from the shapes.

1 1/2 cup heavy cream
Fancy Pie Shell

Sprinkle fruit with sugar and allow to stand 30 minutes. Soften gelatin in cold water; add very hot water and stir until dissolved; cool. Mix sugar, fruit, dissolved gelatin, lemon juice and a dash of salt. Chill until partly set. Whip egg whites until stiff; whip cream until stiff. Fold beaten egg whites, then beaten cream, into fruit-gelatin mixture. Turn into baked Fancy Pie Shell. Chill until filling is set; before serving garnish with extra fruit.

FANCY PIE SHELL
1 cup sifted enriched flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1-3 cup shortening

2 to 4 tablespoons cold water
Sift together the flour and salt. Cut in shortening until it is the size of small peas. Sprinkle with water while mixing lightly with fork. Turn out on prepared pastry cloth and form into a ball; flatten to 1/2-inch thickness and smooth edges. Roll out 1/8-inch thick; fit into 9-inch pie plate; trim overhang; decorate edge with cut-outs from trimmings. Prick shell with fork. Bake in 425 or 450 degrees oven for 10 to 12 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool and add Fruit Flummy filling.

Tip To Amateur Home Decorators

Use latex paint and afterwards you will be able to wash the brushes and rollers clean in just soap or detergent suds. No strong, smelly chemicals needed!

New Laundry Aid

One of the newest laundry aids is a plastic clothesline pulley. Its special feature is an aluminum-backed nylon brush which keeps both line and clothes clean. This handy device is a good reminder that clotheslines need occasional "laundering" with soap or detergent suds to protect clean wash from becoming soiled again before it's even dry.

Before laundering men's shirts, turn the collars up and open out French cuffs.

HOME DECORATING TODAY

By MRS. R. W. DAVENPORT GET VITAMIN PILLS FOR JADED INTERIORS

Does your home look tired? Is it run down at the heels? If so, begin now to give it vitamin pills. The summer, when you can enjoy the lawn, is the perfect time to redecorate on the inside. The paint odor leaves fast when the doors and windows can be left open. Your painter would welcome inside work during this hot weather. Also, the price would probably be less for the work.

It's a good time to have the furniture done over. Let the refinisher or reupholsterer pick up the furniture to be worked on and do it while you are away on vacation.

While the children can be outside playing is an excellent time to work with your decorator. While they play you can work with the decorator without too many interruptions. Your home is your castle, let's give it vitamins when needed. The Home Furniture Store has good home doctors, so let one of them prescribe the vitamin pills that will be just right for your home. You don't have to wait too long for an appointment. Call today! (Adv.)

Similar Situations Are Not Unusual

The differences of opinion on budget matters which cropped up between the Pitt County Commissioners and the Greenville City Council a month ago was not an isolated case in North Carolina where such a situation occurred.

In Wake County the Commissioners and the governing board of the city of Raleigh have agreed to a plan for working out their budget differences after a two-week long hassel over the city's appropriation for the County Mapping Department. In Mecklenburg County the commissioners and officials of the city of Charlotte reportedly are at odds over the matter of office rent being exchanged between the two local governments.

In all probability similar situations have cropped up in recent weeks between municipal officials and county officials in other counties of the state as well.

As for the difficulties between Pitt County officials and the Greenville City Council over appropriations, a plan apparently is in the making whereby the funds flowing from one of the local governments to the other will be analyzed by a joint committee and some plans for better coordination of the fiscal plans

Timing Of New Lines Discussed

By LYNN NISBET CONGRESSMEN

Question has been raised in two or three places about the applicable date of the new congressional district lines. Some change was made in the boundaries of every district except the present sixth.

The legislative act provides that it shall be in full force and effect from and after its ratification. It was ratified on June 16, 1961.

One interpretation might be that there are now only eleven instead of twelve districts in North Carolina, and that Reps. Paul Kitchin and Charles Raper Jonas are entitled to only half a vote each—since both are residents in the new eighth district.

The continued full representative status of incumbents does not bother the questioners so much as the problem of what would happen in event of a vacancy occurring in one of the present 12 seats.

Would a replacement congressman have to be elected from the old district, or would the new act be controlling as to the area?

SENSIBLE—Seeking answer to these questions your reporter has consulted spokesmen for the Attorney General's office, attaches of the Supreme Court, several high ranking State officials and a number of learned lawyers.

None of these men was willing to give a categorical answer without thorough check of Federal and State constitutions and statutes. Opinion was unanimous that the only sensible answer is that the old district lines will control until the election and the convening of a new Congress—the 88th, members of which will be elected in 1962 and will take office early in January 1963.

That conclusion is based on these several facts: The General Assembly cannot legislate out of office or terminate the tenure of a person who has been elected by the people for the specific term pursuant to the constitutions of North Carolina and the United States. The members elected to the 87th Congress will hold office until the session ends and the 88th Congress convenes.

In event of vacancy occurring by reason of death or resignation, the seat will be filled in a special election by the same people who elected the incumbent. Any other interpretation would be absurd, said one eminent attorney, despite the possible technical conflict with respect to effective date of the revised district act.

Candidates for Congress will be nominated from the new districts in the primaries next spring, will be elected in the general election next year, and will take their seats when the 88th Congress convenes on or soon after January 3, 1963. Until that time North Carolina will have 12 representatives in the Congress, representing the districts which have maintained since convening of the 78th Congress in 1943.

BONDS—Another question has been raised in some quarters about the legality of an election on local county, school district or municipal bonds on the same day the election will be called for a vote on the $61 million State capital improvement bonds. This query was passed along to Associate Justice Emery B. Denny of the Supreme Court in a casual and informal conversation.

He said there is no general constitutional or statutory impediment to holding local bond elections at the same time the State bonds are voted upon. He warned, however, that inasmuch as these local bond elections were authorized by special statutes, the specific act should be carefully checked to see that it contained no barrier. Some local bond election acts may require new registration of voters, for example, or contain restrictions which might be in conflict with the general statewide provisions. Appearance in the local acts of any limitation on the general suffrage might prevent a vote on the same day.

One of the "fuzzy" bothersome factors involving time of elections is the general statutory provision that an election on the question of legal sale of alcoholic beverages—establishment of ABC stores or sale of beer and wine—cannot be held within 60 days of "any other election." Complications arise by reason of the fact there are three levels of governmental authority empowered to call elections—State, county and municipality, and their calls are not always coordinated.

Dates are fixed by general statute for primary nomination and election of State and county officials. In even number years this means it is very difficult to pick a "liquor election" date between late March and early January of the next year, because of first and second primaries in May and June, general elections in November. In odd number of years the municipal elections usually come in late April, May and early June. That pretty well blocks out the period from March 1 to September for liquor elections. Meantime the State, either through legislative call or authority delegated to the Governor, may order elections, and there are numerous bond and tax elections ordered by counties and cities. North Carolina may not be meticulous in observing some constitutional requirements, but there can be no criticism of its adherence to the mandate the elections should be frequently held.

of each worked out before another budget-making time.

In Wake County the Commissioners and the Raleigh City Council are working out a plan whereby there will be joint meetings of the two boards four times a year in order that each governing body may be better informed of the plans and problems of the other.

Both the approach taken and Wake County to the problem there and the one in the making in Pitt County for the problem which cropped up here appear sound means of ironing out future difficulties.

It is increasingly important that the local governing bodies within a county closely coordinate their activities and their plans for the general welfare of all the citizens. At the local level of government as well as at the higher levels, it is becoming increasingly costly to operate the governments. Demands for capital outlays for various purposes are continuing to rise, and all of the local governments are finding themselves increasingly hard-pressed for funds to meet their needs.

By their very nature, the local government units within a county are drawn close together in their activities. There are many instances in which services can be combined for more efficient operation and represent a tax savings for the people. And since there is always an overlapping of the people from which two different local governments derive their tax revenue, it is important that there be coordination of fiscal policies insofar as possible between the county government and the municipal governments within the county.

The fact that the need for closer coordination is being recognized by municipal and county governments in various parts of the state should lead to more efficient local government throughout North Carolina.

Lasting Contribution Possible In Project

The Junior Chamber of Commerce organizations in this section of the state could make a genuine and lasting contribution to their own communities and a considerably broader area if they undertake the Literacy by Television project which they are now considering.

Commercial television stations have offered the use of their facilities for the undertaking which employs the medium of television to teach people to read and write. In other sections of North Carolina similar projects have been carried out with considerable success. Many citizens who missed the opportunity of a formal education have learned to read and write because of the program.

There are, unfortunately, many people throughout this section who have never learned to read and write who would be anxious to take advantage of the opportunity to do so. Once they have learned to do so, broad new fields are open to them, not only for furthering their education, but likewise in terms of better economic opportunities which help not only the individuals involved, but the community as a whole.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce over the years has been a forceful and active organization of young men which has made important contributions to community betterment throughout the country. Here again is another opportunity for the Jaycees to undertake a program that will provide lasting benefits to Eastern North Carolina.

Problems Swell For Presidency

By JAMES MARLOW WASHINGTON (AP)

Presidential problems ride John F. Kennedy's back like a monkey gorging itself on a fresh supply of calories every day.

Kennedy knew he would have problems, but didn't realize how quickly they would build up. While he was still a candidate, asking for the problems, he told the National Press Club Jan. 14, 1960:

"We will need in the 60s a president... willing and able to summon his constituency to its finest hours, to alert the people to our dangers and opportunities, to demand of them the sacrifices that will be necessary."

The word "sacrifices" is a permanent part of his vocabulary. He used it later in his inaugural address and again in his TV talk last Tuesday night.

On that day in 1960 he also said: "The time has come... again" for the "moral" leadership of a Wilson, Lincoln, Truman, Franklin D. Roosevelt who "led the people as well as the government and fought for great ideals as well as hills."

But Tuesday night after only six months in office he said: "When I ran for the presidency, I knew that this country faced serious challenges, but I could not realize nor could any man realize who does not bear the burdens of this office how heavy and constant would be those burdens."

His burdens are not the same as the early presidents—theirs were mostly administrative, political and domestic—when the United States was isolated and remote from Europe. Yet Alexis de Tocqueville could see when that would change.

"It is chiefly in its foreign relations that the executive power of a nation finds occasion to exert its skill and its strength. If the existence of the union were perpetually threatened... the executive government would assume an increased importance in proportion to the measures expected of it and to those which it could execute."

Those days came when America was no longer isolated and the presidency, under Wilson and Roosevelt, assumed increasing importance as the existence of the Union was threatened in two world wars.

But while Kennedy's problems are similar to theirs in a very real sense they are extremely different. Now the existence of the Union, as De Tocqueville anticipated, is "perpetually threatened" by Communism.

Where Wilson and Roosevelt had the burden of fighting a war, Kennedy must not only be ready for it but, through whatever skill he has, try to prevent it without losing in troubled peace either suddenly or bit by bit by attrition.

It was put another way by James MacGregor Burns, biographer of both Roosevelt and Kennedy, in making a distinction between their problems. He said: "It was enough for Roosevelt to cope with crises but it will be essential for Kennedy to head them off."

But it isn't clear what's bothering Kennedy, why his problems seem greater than he anticipated. In the engine of government he needs to be a expert administrative engineer. But that was to be expected, and he knew it.

Roosevelt didn't consider administrative chores overwhelming. He said they were "the least part" of the presidency which "is pre-eminently a place of moral leadership."

But even Roosevelt felt restrained in leadership in a way which sometimes seemed self-imposed, as in his early neutrality and avoidance of a part in the Spanish Civil War.

But in his fireside chats Roosevelt sought to provide leadership by educating the public to national support. This is what Kennedy did Tuesday night on the Berlin problem—but he's been slow starting.

So Long, Deppity—

By PATRICIA MOORE An Impression Is Made

Maybe you hadn't thought about it yet, but a lot of people around here have. Fallout shelters, that is.

Especially since the President's speech concerning the Berlin crisis and need of increasing the United States' armed might, people in Greenville, like people everywhere, have started to be more concerned with shelters and fallout and the draft.

We met a very young man the other day with some definite ideas about the whole thing. He obviously was impressed with his father's attitudes and had been dispatched to the office of J.H. Rose, Pitt County director of Civil Defense, for all available information on building fallout shelters and Civil Defense.

As we sat and talked, he told us that the way the situation was going, need might arise for the shelter by December, and they wanted to get some ideas right away.

He knew how many people a shelter would house and how many feet are needed per person. He knew how many extra people could get into a shelter for four.

He said his father might investigate the possibility of building the shelter larger than for four people, so that others could share the protection.

We thought to ourselves, fervently, that we hope someone will have such thought for us if the need arises. And we thought what a civic-minded thought that was.

The whole conversation was very typical for the day. It was typical of what others around here are thinking and doing, and here was a young man doing something about it.

If we had a basement of our own, we would be down there right now sectioning off brick walls and securing proper depth proportions for safety from fallout. We would make a game out of it, getting the first aid equipment ready, and a box of food and all.

After all, such a place could be a wonderful storage space, even a little room for children to play.

There are all kinds of shelters. From a few hundred dollars in cost up to several thousand. They can be built by a do-it-yourselfer, or by a contractor. They can be in a basement, under

Strength For Today Other Editors Sayings... Double Democratic Worry

(Washington Daily News)

So much talk has been made about a congressional race between Charles R. Jonas, Republican, and Paul Kitchin, Democrat, in the next congressional race that we might be losing sight of one important fact.

In the redistricting plan which finally was adopted, these two congressmen find themselves in the new Eighth Congressional district. Mr. Jonas has nothing to worry about insofar as getting the Republican nomination for congress. He has it definitely if he wants it, and no other Republican in the state comes close to matching his political appeal.

The story might be somewhat different when it comes to Mr. Kitchin, the Democrat. Several leading Democrats are saying that if Mr. Kitchin has strong opposition in the Democratic primary next May, he could be a loser. They also reason that despite all other factors in the election, Mr. Kitchin actually will be a stronger candidate against Mr. Jonas than will be a new man who has not entered the race before.

With Mecklenburg county in the new Eighth district, some are saying the opposite. Some are saying that the only way to beat Mr. Jonas is for a Mecklenburg county Democrat to be running against Mr. Jonas. But the trouble here is that to date no Democratic candidate of sufficient appeal has been thought of to make the race.

Political experts in the new

Eighth district are almost conceding that Mr. Kitchin will have strong Democratic opposition in the primary. Whether that opposition will come from Mecklenburg county, Lincoln county, Moore county, or some other is not known now. There is even talk that once again Dave Clark of Lincoln county might run for the Democratic nomination.

It all adds up to one important consideration. Paul Kitchin has a difficult road ahead of him both from the standpoint of his own party and from the standpoint of Republican opposition.

At the same time followers of Jonas in Mecklenburg county say quite openly and quite frankly that regardless of the name of the Democratic nominee, be it Kitchin or some other Democrat, Mr. Jonas is going to win if he chooses to run for congress again. They reason that Mecklenburg county is going to give Mr. Jonas such a substantial majority next time that it will be an insurmountable factor for the other counties to overcome.

Those of us on the sidelines who do not live in the Eighth district perhaps do not realize the strong political lines being drawn there. A real fight is in the offing, it would seem. It could be a double-barrelled fight, the first one being in the Democratic primary, and the second one being in the general election.

Most of us, of course, are in mental jobs. And these dictate the products they want. A domestic will insist on getting the brand of soap powder she prefers; the apartment doorman will name the brand of brass polish he wants, and the major domo will direct household purchases to the brands and stores he likes. It is likely that the Negro market will grow faster than the total consumer market in years to come. The Negro population is increasing faster than the rest; the Negro is moving constantly into higher income brackets.

Selling this growing market involves many problems. Sales and advertising attitudes are, of course, highly important. Some companies have hired Negro salesmen and Negro contact men. This strategy depends almost entirely on specific conditions. In some areas, it will work for some companies. In other places it can mean disaster.

Use of Negro models in advertisements has been tried by a few companies. Results have been uneven. In some cases, this has been regarded as recognition of the Negro as a consumer; in other cases, it has been looked upon as an attempt to cater slavishly to the potential customer.

There is no golden rule. After the standards of good taste and common sense have been met, each situation must be solved on the basis of its own circumstances. But any solution must take this fact into consideration: Uncle Tom is dead.

COMPANY INSURANCE MAY BE TAXABLE Under the vast complex of tax laws and rulings, many people think that insurance paid to an employee's survivors is tax free. Ha!

A new Internal Revenue Service ruling says that where a corporation insures the life of an officer, pays all premiums, has "incidents of ownership," and designates shareholders as beneficiaries, the proceeds are taxable as dividends. For understanding of this complicated ruling send 20 cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D. C., and ask for a copy of the Internal Revenue Bulletin of July 17, 1961. Or ask your local IRS office for a copy of Rev. Rul. 61-134.

Theme Of The Century

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The other night, I was at Tanglewood listening to a bit of sarcastic programming that could not have been accidental. William Schuman, a contemporary American composer, was squeezed in between Robert Schumann and Ludwig van Beethoven.

The American composer had an augmented orchestra and used all the noise-making percussion instruments he could think of. We had been listening for a couple of weeks to Bach and Mozart and they managed to be heard with very small orchestras, but the American had to have enough instruments so he could scream. Otherwise, we should not have heard him!

I asked an eminent musician what the noise was all about. He replied: "It is the twentieth century."

This is a characteristic remark by those who cannot explain away current absurdities. The twentieth century is not all noise, perhaps not really as much noise as the end of the 18th century and the beginning of the 19th when the troops of Napoleon marched through Europe. No century has a monopoly on stupidity, just as no century has a monopoly on wisdom, although some have been better than others. Surely no century enjoyed any particular right to noise.

There is, of course, another, a constructive side to the twentieth century which in the first six decades of its being has produced greater advances in certain fields of knowledge, in physics, chemistry, astrophysics, anthropology, archeology, in the exploration through the Antarctic and through space in an effort to reach the moon, in medicine and psychology. The twentieth century is not so bleak as it seems. The Earth has been orbited by the brilliance of man; the atom has been smashed and reconstructed. Distance has been annihilated and time is losing all meaning.

True, we are a disturbed generation, but disturbance is not necessarily noise or even excitement. It may be sadness, regret, hurt. It may mean loss of faith. It may be fear of death. The great movements in Beethoven's symphonies which fit the mood of the twentieth century more closely than Mr. Schumann's noise. The responses of man to identical stimuli are the same, no matter what the century.

The distinguished musician said: "It is the twentieth century," does not at all grasp the heart-ache of this period, the break-down of long-existent institutions, the uncertainty of the future. It is not necessary to have a chorus of drums to note the downfall of the Roman Empire. It took a long time to fall, almost as long as it took to rise. Julius Caesar was assassinated in 44 B.C., Octavianus became Emperor in 27 B.C. At this moment Rome was at its apex and Constantine became Emperor in 312 A.D. But the Roman Empire was split and the downfall to the so-called barbarians was imminent. By the sixth century, Rome was no longer great. It submitted to what we call the Middle Ages, that is, the rule of Western Europe by the Roman Catholic Church as the successor to the Roman Empire.

And this tells the amazing story of a civilization which is now at the point of survival or death. This is more the twentieth century than the terrific imitation of street noises and factory noises which our current American composers believe describes the age in which they live. But they do not live in such an age as they confusedly describe any more than the Russian composers live in the kind of dissonance which they enjoyed when they were still revolutionists. More

A Fresh Look At Negro Market

By ELMER ROESSNER

Manufacturers and advertising agencies are taking a fresh look at the "Negro market." This has nothing to do with the desegregation fight or freedom riders. The new study has been prompted by the fact that Negroes are holding better jobs, earning higher incomes and are spending more freely. Besides, there are more of them than there were a few years ago.

Ten years ago, consumer spending by Negroes was said to be $15 billion a year. Today it is estimated at $20 billion.

The Negro population has increased faster than the non-Negro population. In the last 10 years the increase has been more than 25 per cent, compared with 18 per cent for whites.

VALUES OF MARKETS Contrary to misconceptions in some quarters, there are few truly Negro products. Some cosmetics, obviously, are not suited to dark skins; certain fashions are not appropriate. But the sales of dream books, conjure books, hair-straighteners are insignificantly small. Negroes, almost entirely, buy the same sort of goods—and the same makes and brands—as other Americans do.

However, in many ways the Negro market is different, and many of these differences make it profitably desirable to merchandisers. Some of these are:

1. The Negro market is largely urban. It is concentrated in the metropolitan centers. The aggregate spending power of Negroes in small towns and rural areas is small, unimportant.

2. The Negro middle class is growing. There is a rise in the number of Negro merchants, teachers, doctors, lawyers and other professionals, increasing the proportion as well as the size of the middle class.

3. Negroes are becoming increasingly conscious of brand names and quality symbols. The emerging Negro is as conscious of the right to buy top brands as he is of the right to equal treatment in interstate commerce.

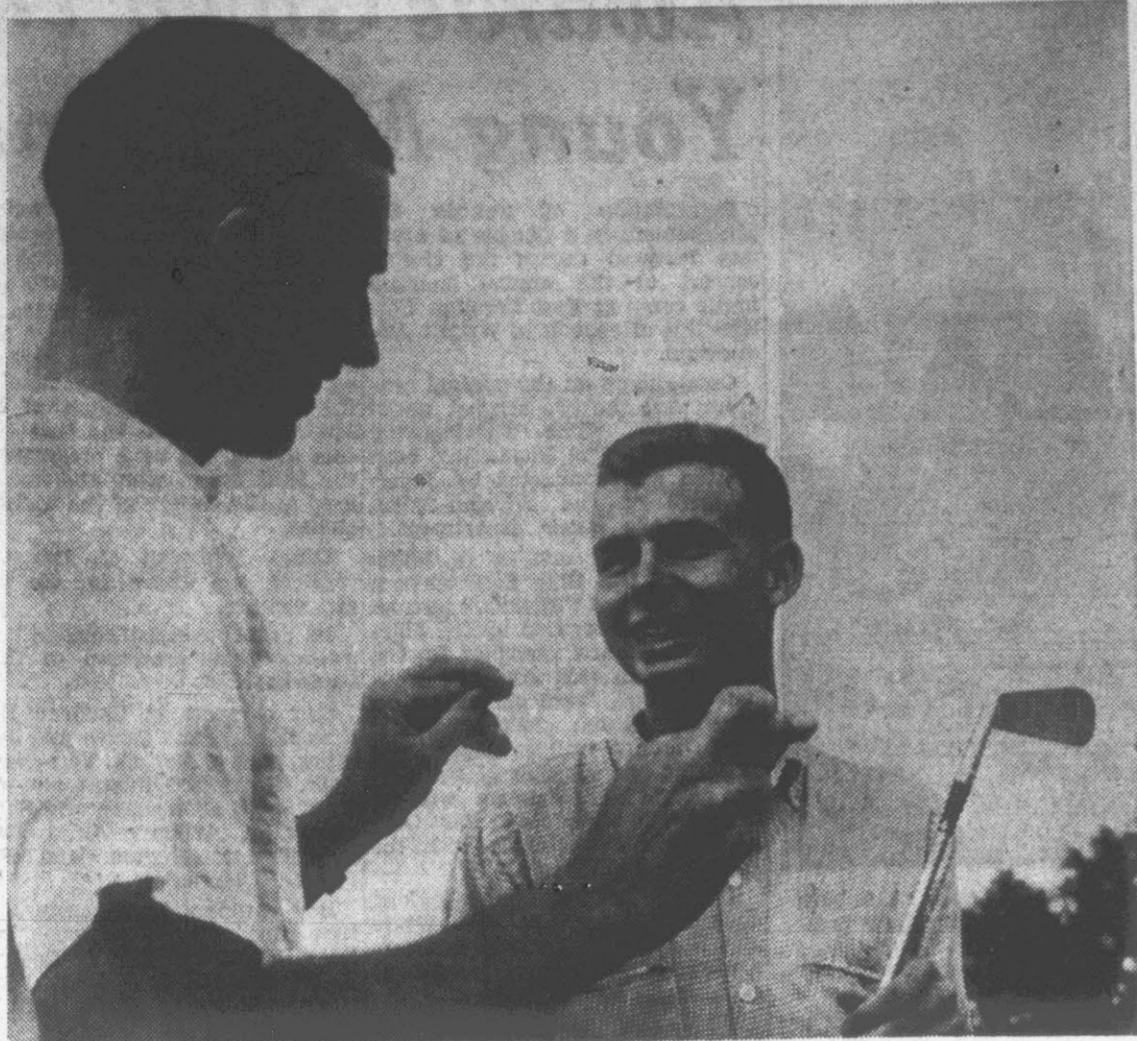

INFLUENCE 4. The Negroes' influence on the market is far greater than their relative buying power.

Leave Sunday For Nat'l Tournament

Play In Ithaca Is Starting Aug. 2

Bobby Thomas, 17-year-old Greenville golfer, leaves here tomorrow for another crack at the National Junior Amateur crown. Thomas, who won the right to represent North and South Carolina in the national tourney last week in Salisbury, will be trying to better his showing in the same tourney held in Kansas City a year ago. Thomas was eliminated in the quarterfinal round.

The Greenville youth, son of local pro Harold Thomas, will be accompanied to the tournament in Ithaca, N.Y., by a Virginia schoolteacher, Pete Griffin.

Thomas will join a field of 128 junior golfers from across the country in a four-day series of matches that begins Wednesday with each tourney entrant playing 18 holes.

Two 18-hole matches per day are on tap for the surviving golfers Thursday through Saturday. The finals match is scheduled for Saturday afternoon.

The national tourney will be held on the Cornell University golf course in Ithaca.

Thomas won his berth in the tourney July 18 by outstroking the field in the North and South Carolina Junior Amateur event in Salisbury. He edged N. C. Jaycee Tourney champ Tommy Arnold of Asheville by a stroke for a second consecutive shot at the national title. Arnold, as runner-up, is Thomas' alternate to the national event.

In winning last week's tourney, Thomas surged from one stroke behind Arnold on the last three holes to edge this year's Jaycee champ. The Greenville golfer managed his victory margin with consecutive birdies on the 16th and 17th holes in the final round.

Thomas and Griffin plan to arrive in Ithaca early enough for the Carolinas' representative to get in several practice rounds on the Cornell course.

When the rugged tourney starts Wednesday, the field will be cut in half after each round with the loser of each match eliminated. The national champ must win seven consecutive matches.

Griffin, a 1957 East Carolina graduate and native of Washington, N.C., will accompany Thomas throughout the entire tournament and report the results to the Daily Reflector.

Robinson Stages One-Man Show For Cincinnati

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Frank Robinson continued to put on a one-man show for Cincinnati, driving in three runs with his 31st and 32nd home runs Friday as the Reds maintained their one-game lead over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Johnny Podres, star of the Dodgers' first world series victory in 1955, boosted his season record to 13-2, tops in the league in percentage, by beating Pittsburgh 6-4. Podres needed ninth-inning help from Dick Farrell.

It was the Dodgers' sixth straight on their Eastern tour and Podres' fifth victory in a row as they continued to apply pressure to the Reds.

Frank Robinson hit home runs No. 31 and No. 32 and drove in three Cincinnati runs in a 4-3 triumph over the Chicago Cubs. Wally Post's homer accounted for the other run in Jim O'Toole's 10th victory at the expense of Dick Ellsworth.

Larry Jackson pitched St. Louis to a 6-2 decision over Milwaukee with the help of light-hitting Bob Lillis.

San Francisco scored five in the seventh inning to beat Philadelphia in the first game 8-5, but the Phils won the second 4-3 on Bob Malkmus' seventh-inning homer.

Podres gave up only one hit in the first six innings and didn't allow a Pirate to reach second until Dick Stuart hit his 15th homer in the seventh with a 15th on base. Duke Snider and Willie Davis hit consecutive homers off relief man Roy Face in the ninth, long after loser Earl Francis had departed.

Robinson provided the muscle for the Reds. When O'Toole ran into trouble in the ninth, Bill Henry balled him out after Jim Brosnan failed. Henry took over with men on first and third and one out. He struck out Ed Bouchee and made pinch hitter Sam Taylor foul out.

Lillis drove in three runs with a pair of singles while Jackson won his sixth over rookie Bob Hendley.

Dom Zanni grabbed his first major league victory on relief in the Giants' first game at Philadelphia. Malkmus' homer enabled Johnny Buzhardt to win his third for the Phils with a five-hitter in the second game.

Yanks Encounter Orioles' Hurler And Help Scoreless Inning Skein

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer
Skinny Brown has the longest scoreless string in the majors with 23 consecutive scoreless innings for Baltimore. The New York Yankees still are wondering what happened.

The Yanks maintained their one-game lead over Detroit in the American League, despite their 4-0 defeat Friday night because Bob Allison hit a pair of two-run homers that gave Minnesota a 4-3 victory over the Tigers.

Brown, who has been knocking around baseball since 1946, effectively silenced the Yanks' heavy artillery with six singles. It was the third time New York had been shut out this season. Although the Orioles are in third place, 9½ games behind New York, Paul Richards' men think they are making a serious move. Baltimore has won five straight, snapping a four-game Yank streak with the kind of pitching it was supposed to have. Proving that those who live by the sword also die by the sword, the Orioles turned to home runs by Gus Triandos and Jackie Brandt to beat Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris and co.

Rookie Don Schwall won his 11th for Boston in a little over two months when the Red Sox snapped a four-game losing slump and extended Chicago's to five with an 8-3 victory. As a reward for this hot streak, Schwall has been named to the All-Star squad for Monday's game at Fenway Park.

Marty Keough and rookie Bud Zippel led a 13-hit Washington attack in a 10-6 decision over Kansas City.

Los Angeles knocked out Barry Latman in a four-run sixth inning enroute to an 8-5 victory over Cleveland with some fine relief pitching by Art Fowler.

Triandos made Brown's task easy when he hit a three-run homer off Bud Daley in the first inning. Brandt's came with nobody on in the eighth. Mantle had three of the Yanks' six singles.

Brown started his string by shutting out Kansas City July 7 and worked three scoreless relief innings against Detroit July 19 and two more against Chicago July 23.

Allison was the whole show at Detroit with No. 21 off Paul Foytack in the first and No. 22 also off loser Foytack in the ninth. Each came with a man on base. Billy Britton homered for the Tigers off winner Pedro Ramos and pinch hitter Charlie Maxwell hit a homer off the Cuban in the ninth.

Boston backed up Schwall with a 13-hit attack that included three each by Pete Runnels, Gary Geiger and Chuck Schilling.

Rain Figures To Aid Golden Boy

CHICAGO (AP)—Weather permitting, the PGA championship tries again to get through its second round today but under a new, rain-dictated format that figures to favor golf's golden boy, Arnold Palmer.

The luck of the elements was first against, then with Palmer Friday, when a cloudburst halted the second round. Before then it looked as if lanky Art Wall had shaken off all but two or three contenders after recording a sizzling 36-hole total of 137. Par is 35-35—70 at the 6,722-yard Olympia Fields Country Club.

Wall, the first-round leader with a 67, had already posted a second-round 70 when the skies broke loose and forced a suspension of play at 1:20 p.m. Finally, at 2:45 when the torrents of rain had turned Olympia Fields into a series of puddles, PGA officials decided to cancel play for the day.

All second-round scores were washed away—cancelling, in addition to Wall's 70, a fine 69 by young Johnny Post of Shreveport, La., and a 71 by a former champion, Doug Ford of Yonkers, N.Y.

Those rounds had left Wall at 137, Post at 139 and Ford at 140. No one else was close. The other players of the field of 166 were fortunate enough to get in before the heavy rains developed.

In addition to Wall, who had said earlier, "I'd be lucky to shoot a 75 if play resumed," began when the round was washed away. Palmer, scheduled to tee off at 1:55 with Gary Player and Don January, would have had to whack away under miserable conditions.

Without question, it would have taken a Herculean round for any of the first day trailers—including Palmer, who had a first round 73—to stay anywhere near the pace set by Wall.

The next break came when PGA President Lou Strong announced that instead of setting the tournament back a day, the final 36 holes would be played on Sunday. The double-round finish, first for the PGA since it was shifted from match play to a 72-hole medal play event in 1958, definitely favors the younger, stronger golfers like Palmer.

Under the new setup dictated by the postponement, the field was to be cut to the low 60 scorers and ties after the second round. The normal PGA format is four daily rounds of 18 holes each, Thursday through Sunday, with the first cut to the low 90 and ties after two rounds and the low 60 and ties after three.

So Wall, who shrugged off the loss of a distinct advantage with a terse, "Well, that's too bad, but that's how it goes sometimes," goes off again today with a one-stroke lead over defending champion Jay Hebert and Ernie Vossler, who opened Thursday with 69's. Two strokes behind are Jerry Barber, Ford and Bill Heinlein, and three back are Don Fairfield, Doug Sanders, Buster Cupit, Jack Fleck, Bob Rosenberg, Shelley Mayfield and Paul Harney.

This Gary Gubner, who won the best toss in his budding career, 60 feet, 7½ inches, to win first place. This was one of the most gratifying wins in the 13-9 victory over the Russian team because it promises security in the shotput event for future international competition.

Gubner may be only a boy but he did a man's job in Russia. This young musician is a combination of speed and strength—plus a burning desire to improve. He's strong enough to challenge weightlifters, and can lift over 1,000 pounds with three standard lifts. With three years of varsity competition ahead, Gary Gubner is certain to make a mark throwing his weights around.

Welter Champ Is Aiming Higher

NEW YORK (AP)—World welterweight champion Emile Griffith of New York hopes to use Yama Bahama as a stepping stone toward a shot at the middleweight title when they tangle in a non-title nationally televised (ABC 9 p.m. EST) 10-rounder topping a Madison Square Garden boxing show tonight.

Bahama is a legitimate middleweight, although he will have to come in at 155 or less tonight under the terms agreed upon. Griffith, who was down to 145 a couple of days ago, hopes to come in around 148.

The Winner

GREENSBORO (AP)—Ed Sweetman preserved his lead in the stretch run and the Greensboro collegian won his second National Association of Left-handed Golfers Amateur Championship in three years.

Ed's final round was his poorest of the 72-hole tournament, a four over par 75, but it was enough to give the husky 24-year-old student at nearby Guilford College a 293 total and a one-shot edge over Gene Ferrell of Mobile, Ala.

There was another seven-stroke gap to third place, taken by Jack Cudd of Winston-Salem, whose 78 gave him 301.

Fourth place went to Stewart Chancellor of Midland, Tex., at 302. Jack Walters, the defending champ from Tacoma, was far back at 318.

Judge Asserts NFL TV Pact Is Illegal

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—A federal judge has ruled that the National Football League cannot have a contract with the Columbia Broadcasting System. But a league spokesman says road games will be televised this fall as before.

Judge Allan K. Grim held Friday to his 1953 ruling that the NFL's $9.3-million two-year contract with CBS violates federal antitrust laws.

The ruling followed two days of testimony in which NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said that unless the package deal was approved, half of the league's 14 teams would be without TV in 1962—"an economic disaster for the league."

NFL clubs will have to negotiate individually for TV contracts unless Grim's denial is upset by a higher court.

Rozelle declined to comment until he has a chance to study the decision.

Another NFL spokesman said league games would be televised the same way they were last season. Ten games were on CBS, two on the National Broadcasting Co. network, and one on an independent sports network last season. The new Minnesota entry is expected to be on CBS.

The spokesman added that Grim's denial of the NFL appeal to reconsider his previous decision was based on evidence eight years old, and not on current issues. The previous decision banned package-contract single-circuit TV on grounds that it eliminated competition among the teams and controlled prices.

The judge's ruling could affect the sports contracts of the National Basketball Association, the American Football League and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Grim also rejected a second NFL appeal to wait until Dec. 31 to have a full hearing on whether his earlier decision should be modified.

Before the ruling, William MacPhail, CBS vice president in charge of sports, testified that his network would be forced to drop all but three teams in 1962 unless the package deal were approved.

Joe Donoghue, executive vice president of the NFL champion Philadelphia Eagles, said that unless CBS renewed its option with the Eagles in 1962, "We're dead, out of business."

He added that without package TV "All sports as we know them will be out of business within two years."

Tex Schramm, general manager of the Dallas Cowboys, said package TV "is the sole difference between profit and loss."

Greenville Plays Falkland Sunday In Vital Twin-Bill

Greenville entertains Falkland tomorrow afternoon at Guy Smith Stadium in a do-or-die Eastern County League doubleheader for both teams.

Falkland, currently riding the crest of a four-way fight for the league lead, needs a double victory to keep it ahead of second place Oak City, only a half-game back.

Greenville, three games behind in fourth spot, needs a double win to pull it nearer the top as the season race goes down the homestretch.

Falkland kept its lead last Sunday with a double win from Leggett while Oak City was downing third place Hobgood. Greenville beat Enfield in the first game of a twin bill but saw an 8-0 lead nullified by a heavy downpour in the fourth inning of the second.

Scheduled for starting pitcher chores for Greenville tomorrow are Malcolm Griffith and Nathan Green or Seber Cobb. Falkland's mound choices will probably be Tommy Dunn and Haywood Outland.

The Greenville club this week picked up another member for its mound staff. Wayne Cosby, star pitcher for Catawba College last spring, joined the team just under ever. Cosby will not be eligible until next Sunday when Greenville travels to Falkland for a single game.

After tomorrow's doubleheader, Greenville will have only four games on its regular season schedule: one at Falkland, two with Oak City and a rained-out game with Enfield.

Eastern County playoffs begin Aug. 27 after the regular season ends Aug. 20. The top four teams will be matched in pairs with the two winners playing a best three-of-five series for the league title.

Clutch Power Wins For Durham

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A ninth-inning display of clutch power gave Durham a 7-5 victory over Burlington Friday night.

The Bulls thus consolidated their hold on second-place in the Carolina League, and pulled within one game of top-place Winston-Salem.

Norm Forsythe, Greensboro hurler, took the measure of the Red Sox as the Yanks blanked Winston-Salem 3-0.

The Wilson Tobs, climbing back up the standings after a slump, counted two victories over Raleigh. They finished off a suspended game, 4-0, and went on to a 7-5 triumph in a regular game.

The games tonight: Winston-Salem at Raleigh, Wilson at Durham, and Burlington at Greensboro.

Youngsters Said To Be Improved

ASHEVILLE (AP)—The youngsters of today are swimming faster and diving better than ever.

The proof was supplied Friday, the first day of the Carolinas AAU Junior Olympics short course swimming and diving championships, when 23 records were broken and another tied.

Today, another 100 youngsters will join the 400 boys and girls who participated Friday in the assault on the records. Forty events are scheduled today for swimmers and divers. Sixteen swimming records were broken, and six in the one-meter diving events.

The oldest record broken was the 200-yard freestyle for girls 13 and 14 years of age. Susan Resseguie of Ft. Bragg swam the distance in 2:15.8, breaking the record of 2:20.1 set in 1956 by Lee Skidmore of Columbia, S.C.

Will Umpire For All-Star Game

NEW YORK (AP)—Larry Napp, veteran American League umpire, will be behind the plate in the All-Star baseball game at Boston's Fenway Park on Monday, Commissioner Ford Frick announced today.

Frank Secory of the National League will be at first base; John Flaherty of the AL at second and Ed Sudol of the NL at third. Al Smith of the AL and Chirs Pelekoudas of the NL will work on the outfield foul lines.

Frick named Ed Rumill of the Christian Science Monitor, president of the Baseball Writers Association; Joe Cashman of the Boston Record and Ray Kelly of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin as scorers.

Rock Hill Coach To Head Staff

CHARLOTTE (AP)—"My top football honor," said Tommy Oates, football coach at Rock Hill High School, upon being selected Friday to head the coaching staff for the South Carolina football team in the Shrine Bowl game here Dec. 2.

"It's a wonderful event, and something all coaches look forward to," said Oates.

Bobby Giles of Olympia High in Columbia and Alan Reid Shelton of Beaufort High were chosen to assist him.

Names of the North Carolina coaching staff are to be announced tonight. The game is played for the benefit of the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children at Greenville, S.C.

Plan Televising Bluebonnet Bowl

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—The 1961 Bluebonnet Bowl football game will be played Dec. 16—a Saturday—before a nation-wide television audience.

R.B. Abercrombie, president of the bowl association, announced the date and said the telecast will be blacked out in the Houston area.

The Bluebonnet—which is not aligned with any particular conference—has matched a southwest conference school against a school from another conference in its first two games.

Watched Senate Pass His Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy looking on from the gallery, the Senate passed without dissent six of his bills designed to strike at rich crime syndicates.

The measures, approved Friday, now go to the House.

Asked by Kennedy to arm the government with new weapons for his declared fight with the underworld, the bills would:

- Make it a federal crime to use telephone or telegraph to transmit gambling information — mainly horse race results, odds and bets — across state lines. It would exempt transmission of racing or other sporting news by newspapers and wire services. Penalties for violations: Up to two years in prison, $10,000 fine.
- Declare it a felony to transport gambling paraphernalia — such as tickets or slips for illegal handbook betting, betting pools, numbers games. Penalty: Up to five years in prison, $10,000 fine.
- Tighten obstruction-of-justice laws, to punish racketeers or others who use violence or coercion to prevent witnesses from giving information to the justice of Treasury departments. Penalty: Up to five years in prison, $5,000 fine.
- Allow grants of immunity from prosecution to witnesses pleading the Fifth Amendment in trials or grand jury investigations concerning labor racketeering.
- Make it a felony to travel across a state line or use the mails to engage in or further racketeering enterprises. Penalty: Up to five years in prison, $10,000 fine.
- Ban interstate shipment of gambling machines and devices other than pinball and better equipment used at licensed gambling establishments, such as race tracks, which are legal under state law.

Four North Carolina veterinarians attended the 1941 reunion of the veterinary class at Auburn University and attended the summer veterinary short course this week. Judge Convicted In His Own Court RIDGECREST, Calif. (AP) — Judge Robert L. Pruett Sr., who was convicted and sentenced in his own court room, paid a $200 fine for drunkenness Friday.

Then he resumed his justice court bench.

Judge Pruett declared before sentencing, "I've been framed!"

But Municipal Judge John D. Jellicoch of Bakersfield denied a motion for a new trial and passed sentence after telling Pruett, "Your conduct in and out of court must be higher than an ordinary citizen if respect for our system of justice and courts is to be maintained."

After noting that the usual fine for being drunk is $50, Jellicoch fined Pruett $200.

Minor Damage In Three Fire Calls

Greenville firemen reported only minor damage in three calls answered by the department yesterday and today.

Officers said no damage was caused when electric wires fell on a car in front of 210 East Fourth St. yesterday during a rain storm.

The department received a call to the address at 4:42, it was reported.

At 12:13 a.m. today, fire units were sent to 829 Fleming St. where a bed was on fire.

Light damage was reported by firefighters who said the blaze was caused by a person smoking in bed.

Firemen were called to 513 McKinley Ave. at 8:40 a.m. when grease in the kitchen of the dwelling caught fire.

Officers, who said the blaze was out when fire units arrived, listed no damage.

'Intimidation' Charged Israeli

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet armed forces paper Red Star charged today that Israel's research rocket was part of a campaign of intimidation against the Arab states.

The paper said the rocket launching also was designed to "raise the flagging spirit of the Israeli population, which is disillusioned" with the policy of Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's government. It claimed the launching was timed to influence the August election of a new Israeli Parliament.

Arab Republic Loans Planned

CAIRO (AP) — Under an agreement signed Friday the United States will lend the United Arab Republic $34.4 million from the surplus of American surplus products given to this country.

The loans will be used to finance chemical, mining, engineering, food industries and road-building projects.

Prospector Finds 'Fabulously Rich' Gold Deposit In S. C.

By RON SHUMATE
Rock Hill Evening Herald

SHARON, S. C. (AP) — A 40-year-old prospector has found a "fabulously rich" gold deposit near here and he says there's enough gold there to last him for 25 years.

Glenn C. Rathburn, 40-year-old native of Waynesville, N.C., tracked the deposit for two and one-half years, working his way down out of the Appalachian Mountains in North Carolina.

He panned the first gold in the deposit about a year ago, while he was still engaged in his search.

The first pan he tried there brought gold — and so has every one since then. He moved onto the land, a 46-acre tract owned by Ollie Proctor, on February 7.

"I've never raised a pan in this deposit that didn't show gold," Rathburn said. "It's probably the richest untouched gold deposit in the world."

Rathburn said he can't estimate how much gold he's gotten.

"This, he said, is because he stores it all in the form in which he pans it and there's more silt than gold."

The U.S. Mint in Denver, Colo., does the refining and barring of the gold. Rathburn simply sends them the concentrates just as he finds them. And he only does this once a year.

The largest nugget he has found so far weighed about 2.3 pennyweights — a little more than two-tenths of an ounce. At the going rate of about $35 an ounce, that nugget was worth about $77.

A knowledge of geology, chemistry and even history led Rathburn to the little stream behind Ollie Proctor's house, about midway between Sharon and Hickory Grove.

Rathburn learned about these subjects at the Colorado School of Mines in Golden, Colo., and at an El Paso, Tex., mining school.

Rathburn is also an inventor. He worked for more than four years at the drawing boards devising a new type of separator — to separate gold from dirt.

His separator, which operates on gravity principle, has 29,000 moving parts and, when completed, will be 96 feet long.

Because some other minerals have about the same specific gravity as gold, the separator will also save those minerals, many of which can be used as by-products, Rathburn said.

The separator was originally designed for separating gold from volcanic ash in Australia. Rathburn plans to go there when he has depleted the gold supply near Sharon. Why Australia? "It's a good gold country."

Rathburn's family came from Ireland to work in the gold fields of North Carolina about 1805. His grandfather worked the gold fields of Pike's Peak and Cripple Creek in Colorado and his father was in the Klondike gold rush in 1898.

While he was still in college, Rathburn spent much of his spare time panning gold from saloon floors in Colorado ghost towns.

After wandering over much of the western United States, he ventured down into Mexico and Nicaragua.

He was general manager for four years of the A and K Mining and Milling Co. in North Carolina and was the fourth owner and president of Southeast Mining and Development Corporation in Burnsville, N.C., for two and one-half years.

In 1957 he decided to sell out and start free — jancing. He still owns a plantation in Yancey County, N.C.

Rathburn lives in a little hut he made by stretching a piece of canvas over several poles made from trees he cut down. Part of the hut has canvas walls, but most of it is open. He sleeps on a small cot.

He does most of his own cooking, though he eats some of his meals with the Proctors.

When he pans some gold, he puts it in jars, cans and bowls. When he has a sufficient amount, he transfers it to five-gallon jugs and ships it north, to be stored until he's ready to send it to Denver.

He pays a royalty to Proctor of one-eighth of all commercial minerals he gets from the land.

Rathburn is interested in persuading people to start mining gold again.

"I don't know of anyone who'd starve to death at it," he said. "And it would just add another industry to South Carolina if people would really get interested in it again."

"The people of South Carolina should remember that their state was one of the pioneer gold producers in America," he said.

Awards Given To Young Musicians

Presentation of awards for achievement in a number of areas was featured during the closing concert of the annual summer music camp at East Carolina College this afternoon in Wright Auditorium.

Outstanding on the musical program were the two original works for choir, "The Thanksgiving Song" and "The Fountain," both written and conducted by James R. Hall of the Winston-Salem city schools music department.

In the final number in which choir and the Blue Band gave a performance of "Alleluia," also an original work written by Dr. Martin Mallman and presented for the first time in this area, the combined groups were conducted by Prof. Earl Beach, chairman of the East Carolina College Department of Music and director of the music camp. Dr. Mallman will be composer in residence at East Carolina College beginning with the 1961-62 college year.

The majorettes, drum majors, choir, orchestra and Red, White and Blue Bands performed before a capacity audience as the annual camp came to the finale.

On Friday evening, the camp choir sang a number and with Donald Hayes conducting the orchestra, Paul David Fuller of Evansville, Ind. played the "Piano Concerto No. 1 in B-flat Major."

Receiving the highest award for the best boy camper, Richard Millgram of Fayetteville was presented the $50 scholarship fund of the Sinfonia Foundation of Phi Mu Alpha. This is the first time this award has been presented at the ECC music camp and may be used in the college of the winner's choice.

Potato-Buying Program In N.C. Is Stepped Up

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina agriculture officials plan to ask the federal government to buy another 100 carloads of Irish potatoes in an effort to shore up the market.

Gov. Sanford made a personal appeal Friday to Under Secretary of Agriculture Charles Murphy, to get authority for federal purchase of 40 carloads.

However, Hugh B. Martin, fruit and vegetable marketing specialist with the State Agriculture Department, said it was felt another 100 carloads should be taken off the market.

Martin, one of a party that flew to Elizabeth City Friday afternoon to look into the situation, said an estimated 1,000 carloads of potatoes were unmarketed in the commercial producing area.

The potatoes bought by the government would be used in school lunch rooms, and distributed to institutions and to needy persons.

Rep. Herbert C. Bonner, whose district includes much of the potato producing area, has been active in efforts to bolster the sagging market.

John A. Winfield, director of the Markets Division of the State Department of Agriculture, said prices fell to $1.25 to $1.40 per 100 pounds before the government moved in. About three carloads of potatoes had been purchased by the government earlier, he noted.

The government will pay $1.75 per 100 pounds, described by Winfield as "a ball out price." Only with a good yield could a grower get his money out of the crop, he said.

Plans call for storing 7,000 bags of the potatoes at Butler. The remainder will be placed in cold storage over the state, before their use in the school lunch program, and for distribution to institutions.

Grand Finale Today For Summer Music Group

East Carolina College's seventh annual Summer Music Camp wound up two weeks of individual, sectional and ensemble training, rehearsal and performance with its "Grand Finale" in Wright Auditorium this afternoon.

Nearly 450 junior and senior high school musicians, majorities, drum majors and art and creative dance students—tutored and supervised by a staff of more than 50—closed out two weeks of further exploration into the world of the fine arts.

This afternoon's program featured the first presentation in this area of a composition by Martin Mallman, scheduled to become East Carolina's resident composer in September. Performing the number—"Alleluia"—were the music camp's choir and "blue" band.

Included in today's camp-ending program were routines by majorettes and drum majors. Band and orchestra music, rehearsed painstakingly by the young musicians during the two weeks, hinted to the audience that had approached a point of perfection during the camp.

Today's program followed another stage show Friday night that featured presentation of the first movement of a Tchaikovsky masterpiece. The performance underscored the talent of one of the music campers—Paul David Fuller, a 16-year-old from Evansville, Ind., who is recognized as an accomplished pianist.

In addition to Fuller's performance, band, orchestral and vocal music was presented to the audience.

East Carolina's Summer Music Camp began seven years ago with a total enrollment of around 75 young musicians. It was born through the efforts of the college's Music Department.

Each year, the enrollment has grown as the word got around. Those initial 75 musicians were almost entirely residents of Eastern North Carolina.

This year's camp, with its enrollment of nearly 450, had representatives from eight states on the Eastern Seaboard and from the Midwest.

Represented by this summer's enrollment were North and South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Georgia, New York and Indiana.

Staffing the camp were members of the ECC Music Department, high school band directors from many various schools and East Carolina students. Aiding in the program, also, were other ECC staff members.

Earl Beach, head of the Music Department, served as director of the two-week affair. Another Music Department staff member, Herbert Carter, was Beach's assistant.

Instruction available at the camp was divided into specific divisions with specialists in each particular phase of study heading each division to provide top-notch training.

Piano specialist Dr. Robert Carter of the college staff headed the Piano Division. Don Hayes, conductor of the ECC orchestra, handled the Orchestra and Strings Division.

James Parnell headed the French Horn Division and Dr. Edmund Durham was chief of the Theory Division. Lewis Danfelt headed the Double Reeds Division.

Hubert Henderson, director of bands at the University of Maryland, served as conductor of the camp's best ("blue") band during the last week.

Another distinguished visitor to this summer's camp was Keig Garvin, a trombonist for the U.S. Army Band. Garvin conducted a brass clinic as a feature of the camp's program.

Thomas E. Mims of ECC's Geography Department, handled the camp's Art Section and Laverne Crenshaw of Greenville headed the Creative Dance Division. ECC Athletic Director Dr. N.M. Jorgensen conducted a program of recreation—mostly swimming—for the two-week event.

Other staff members included Louise Winstead, dean of girls; Loy Wagner, dean of boys, Marion Martin, assistant dean of boys; and Robert Ellwanger, head of the majorette and drum major staff.

During this summer's camp session, all boys were housed in Ragsdale Hall while the girls had room in Umstead Dormitory. In addition to these, day students attended the camp. Meals were served the students in the college's cafeteria.

The vital part of the music camp, according to Beach and Carter, was the participation of some 15 high school band instructors who joined the staff. "We could not operate without them," Carter says.

Available to the campers was instruction in section and ensemble. Private lessons with specific instrument specialists were provided to the campers on an optional basis.

Upon their arrival on the ECC campus two weeks ago, the campers went through a series of auditions to determine their level of competence. This maneuver provided for grouping for training on the basis of comparative ability and experience.

The spirit of competition was injected into the program with a system through which campers could challenge their immediate superiors by competitive auditioning to replace them in a group with a higher rating.

The system of arrangement resulted in organization of three bands—the "blue" (rated best), the "red" (second best) and the "white."

While Carter and Henderson shared director duties for the "blue" band, Raymond Babelay, band director at Wilson's Pike High, directed the "red" band and Spencer Mims, band director at Myers Park High of Charlotte, handled the "white" band.

Choir Director James Hall of the Winston-Salem city schools served as director for the camp's choral groups.

With the 1961 edition of the Summer Music Camp closed, the 450 campers left the ECC campus and the Music Department staff began laying early plans for next year's two-week training session for aspiring musicians.

STRIKING PRETTY POSES . . . during a training session are a group of young lassies who attended the Music Camp with hopes of leading their respective high school bands up and down the football field at halftime this Fall.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

Now that the dog days are here and it's too hot to think consecutively on any subject, we'll settle this week for a few scattered notes.

Speaking of dogs, Chapel Hill veterinarian Louis L. Vines' book called "Dogs in my Life" has attracted enough favorable attention to be placed on the recommended list of reading by the American Library Association.

Publishing Troubles

One of the puzzles of present-day publishing is how a magazine with a circulation of better than three million can be forced to fold up and go out of business. But this is just what has happened to "Coronet". The word is that the "Saturday Evening Post" also is in trouble and will probably undergo a drastic restyling this fall.

Help For Backward Nations

Several weeks ago we were commenting upon the need for citizens of backward countries to receive training in Western technology by having an opportunity to study in this country. The "English-Speaking World," a little magazine put out by the English-Speaking Union, has come out with some interesting figures dealing with this question. It says that there are some 50,000 overseas students studying in Great Britain, the majority from backward countries like Nigeria. Put another way, there are ten times as many of these students in Britain as there are in the US. This gives some idea of what we, with our resources, could do to help educate the people of struggling, emerging nations—if we had the imagination and the necessary drive.

The English-Speaking Union has the reputation of being a rather stuffy organization. Yet on one page of its journal there is a picture of members packing some 40 thousand books collected by the Liverpool branch for shipment to Africa, where there is about one book for every ten persons, and where ownership of a single volume is a matter of real pride. Why couldn't some of our numerous clubs, book and otherwise, do something like this?

English-Speaking?

The English-Speaking Union, incidentally, has as its aim the promotion of understanding among English-speaking peoples of the world. In its charter, English-speaking peoples are defined as the people, "irrespective of language," of the Commonwealth and the U. S. That's a good British definition for you.

Academic Corn

We see that Southern Illinois University is now offering a course in "agricultural journalism." Probably filled with bull and corn. The only sort of course that has not been set up somewhere by now is non-verbal English. But that will come in time.

And Brimstone

In Britain, at Oxford, no less, the conversation at the high tables is becoming a bit raucous these days as a big feud rages between two prominent dons. A. J.P. Taylor of Magdalen College has written a book called "The Origins of the Second World War." It has been severely panned by Hugh Trevor-Roper, Regius Professor of Modern History in the University. Trevor-Roper claims that Taylor's thesis that Hitler was not especially to blame for the Second World War is foolish, if not dishonest.

Big guns have been brought up by both sides, and the cl-max to the conflict probably came last week when the battling dons had it out on BBC TV. What an opportunity lost for selling soap, since the BBC carries no commercials.

Local Attractions

Turning to the local scene, we note that Dylan Thomas's great "Under Milk Wood" will be presented at the College on Wednesday, August 2, by a travelling company called Kaleidoscope. This piece shows Thomas at his best, which is very good indeed, and everyone who has any interest in poetry or the theatre will want to see it. The time is 8:15; place, McGinnis.

Also, on Wednesday, the movie "Exodus" opens at the State. Though critical opinions of this work have varied a great deal, it is certainly not a movie to overlook.

'Never On Sunday' Duo Abhor Popular Theme

By BOB THOMAS AP Movie-TV Writer

LONDON (AP)—That "Never on Sunday" pair was working Dassin sidestepped intimations again, this time just off Berkeley Square.

The nightingales were singing, he remarked. "Shares are owned but the weather was for the birds. That was the complaint of Melina, by friends of mine and Jules Dassin, the producer-director-writer and sometimes actor, whom I gave them."

He was trying to start his new film with Melina Mercouri, but to shoot—a film called "S. S. the London weather was bugging his camera."

"I am trying to shoot a sequence in which Melina and Tony Perkins walk around London," he said, wiping the drizzle from his brow. "But every time I start a new shot, the weather changes. How many times can I have them look at the sky and shrug their shoulders?"

Dassin's complaining shouldn't be taken too seriously. He is essentially a happy man. And why not? Miss Mercouri is his leading lady both on and off the screen. He is basking in the warm suc-

Familiar, Classic Structure, As Seen By Night

121-YEAR-OLD LANDMARK—North Carolina's State Capitol, with its majestic columns and entablature dramatized by floodlights, displays a classic blend of Grecian Doric and Roman Gothic architecture. Scotland's David Paton was the building's architect, designer and builder in the decade of the 1830s. The cornerstone was laid on July 4, 1833, for the entire tax that cost Tar Heels $531,674.46 over the 10-year period during a time when the entire tax structure for all State purposes totaled less than $100,000 per fiscal period. Copied from such immortal ancient Greek structures as the Parthenon, the Temple of Erechtheus and Lanthorn of Demosthenes, the classic masonry structure's night image was recently captured by Reflector staff photographer Stuart Savage

Hijacking Of Airliner Gives Castro A Weapon In War With Erwin Harris

By BEN FUNK
 MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—This week's hijacking of an American airliner gave Fidel Castro a weapon in his war with Erwin Harris.
 In effect, the Cuban prime minister said in his 26th of July address that he would gladly give up the $3.5-million Eastern Air Lines prop-jet if the Yankees would take Harris out of his whiskers. He called attention to the seizure of 10 Cuban planes in the United States by Harris, a Miami advertising man. He said if that business were stopped he would return the stolen airliner.
 Harris has been grabbing and selling Cuban property to satisfy a debt the Castro regime won't pay.

Castro and his official newspaper, Revolution, have screamed that Harris is a Yankee fascist and imperialist. Harris says Castro is a deadbeat.
 "The difference between Castro and me," says Harris, "is that he seized American property illegally. I have attached Cuban stuff by due process of law, with court orders."
 Their feud dates back to February last year, when Harris cancelled out of a $1.6-million advertising and public relations contract with the Cuban government.
 When the contract was signed, Castro was making friendly gestures toward American tourists and investors. Then, Harris says, Ernesto (Che) Guevara "assumed control of the economic life of Cuba, made it a Communist satellite and began frightening tourists away."
 Harris got out of the deal in a hurry, but he had already booked more than $300,000 in newspaper and magazine ads—debts for which his agency was responsible.
 Harris went to see Castro, who referred to Guevara, and spent 3½ hours cooling his heels outside the office of the economic minister. When he got in, Harris said, "Guevara laughed in my face."
 Back home fighting mad, Harris got a court order impounding $1.6 million in Cuban deposits in Florida banks. Another court freed the funds by ruling that a foreign government couldn't be sued.
 On appeal, however, Harris got a ruling that Cuba could, too, be sued on a commercial contract, and he won a $429,000 judgment, which included his court costs and expenses. By that time, Cuba had the money out of Harris' reach.
 Harris began his court-approved, one-man guerrilla war by attaching a $3.8-million British-made turbo-prop in which Castro himself flew to a United Nations meeting in New York.
 As it turned out, Castro never had paid for the plane and Harris couldn't collect. But he was only warming up to the fight.
 Until then, Cuba had been permitted to take back planes hijacked by defectors and flown into Florida. Harris began slapping attachments on them as they landed. He got five C46s, one military Cessna, a DC3 and three crop dusters—and he again got Castro's goat.
 In a July 5 radio-television speech, Castro threatened to retaliate by keeping any American planes that were hijacked and flown into Cuba.
 Harris attached a million-dollar shipment of tobacco from Cuba but released it when he learned that American companies already had paid for it. He seized 42 tank-type diesel engines bound for Cuba.
 Now Harris turned his attention to the port of Palm Beach, from which American supplies were going to Cuba by railroad-car ferry. He grabbed a 29-car lard shipment just before it was to go aboard the ferry.
 "Lard is important to Cuba," Harris said, "not just for food, but to be sent to Czechoslovakia for use in making nitro-glycerin."
 Harris heard he had found only part of a huge lard purchase. He told his attorney, Charles R. Ashman, to fly north along the railroad tracks, all the way to Chicago, if necessary.
 Fifty miles north, Ashman spotted the remaining 31 cars on a siding at Fort Pierce and attached them.
 The next week, Castro rationed lard in Cuba. Shipments to Cuba out of Palm Beach came to a halt.
 Harris still needs about $100,000 to satisfy his judgment. Because of his heavy expenses, he says that when it's all over he will be rich in satisfaction.
 "We have written some law showing how to deal with Communists: liars and thieves," he said.
 Following the precedent established by Harris, two American firms this week obtained judgments against Cuba totaling more than $7 million and began their own search for Cuban property.

Army's Induction Stations Prepared For Coming Rush

Some Few Leave West For Life In East Germany

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
 WASHINGTON (AP)—The Army, in effect, has given its induction stations a free hand to spend more money, hire more people, and stay open longer to handle the anticipated armed forces influx.
 In the wake of President Kennedy's military build-up move, Army officials said today, instructions have been sent to the Continental Army Command to take whatever action is deemed necessary so that examining and induction stations can keep abreast of the mounting workload.
 These were described as temporary instructions. First directives will follow final congressional action on Kennedy's requests for more money to add 225,000 men to the military services.
 In turn, the Continental Army Command has relayed work to its regional commands, which have issued specific orders to the induction stations in their areas.
 In at least one city, Albany, N. Y., recruiting and induction stations were told to begin working 10 hours a day, 6 days a week.
 The sharp rise in draft calls, starting in August, is expected to lead to an increase in enlistments and voluntary inductions.

By CARL HARTMAN
 BERLIN (AP)—Thousands of people flee from Communist East Germany every week, but a couple of hundred also leave the West in the hope of finding greener pastures under Red rule.
 The number who deliberately choose communism is small and apparently declining. Mostly they are people with little interest in politics.
 A peak—about 50,000—was arrived at in 1959, when life seemed to be improving under Communist rule. That was the year the flow to the West from the Communist east hit a 10-year low of 143,000.
 The immensely larger number who leave the Communist area takes on more meaning when you remember that there are only a third as many people in the Red zone as in the West German Federal Republic.

Strictly speaking, neither group includes many refugees—people fleeing for safety. Those who quit West Germany for the Communist-ruled area are not hindered. Leaving Communist rule without official permission is a punishable offense called "flight from the republic." Those who go secretly for fear of being caught and at least turned back. They do not risk taking much baggage. What they leave behind is confiscated.
 Anyone quitting West Germany can take what he likes with him, send what he likes. He can sell what he doesn't want and convert the proceeds into Communist East German currency at a favorable rate.
 By applying some weeks in advance, I got permission from the Communists to visit what is probably their biggest reception camp. It is housed in a dingy 17th century palace at Barby, near Magdeburg. Whatever splendor it may have had under the dukes of Barby disappeared long ago.
 The "refugees from capitalism" themselves were an odd lot.
 There was a young couple who said they couldn't get married in West Germany because they did not have the right papers.
 There was a rather pretty girl, with her mother, who said they had left the east because of trouble with papa, but now it was all fixed up and they were going home.
 Communist camp officials say they get many deserters from the West German army and young men who want to avoid conscription. Military service is not compulsory under the German Communists.
 People in West Germany attach little importance to the small movement to the Communist-ruled East.
 "When a jackass is enjoying life too much, he goes dancing on the ice," says a German proverb.

Assuming Duties At Lutz-Schramm

AYDEN—Former Ayden resident George K. Manning, now of Tarboro, will return to Ayden as of August 1 to assume duties as accountant and office manager of Lutz and Schramm, Inc. It was announced today by Curtis M. Cavleir, vice president and general manager.
 Manning returns to Ayden from Tarboro where he has served as town accountant for the past several years. Prior to that time, he was associated with an Ayden business concern and was an active member of the Ayden Junior Chamber of Commerce.
 Following his graduation from Duke University in 1955 with a B.A. degree in accounting, he accepted a position with the auditing firm of Price-Waterhouse in New York City. He is married to the former Kay Thompson of Ayden, and they have one child.
 Manning succeeds Ray Hertler, who has been serving on a temporary basis as office manager. Hertler plans to return to Pittsboro, Pa.

Ban Ordered On Gator-Hunting

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—The Florida Game Commission Thursday ordered a ban on alligator hunting throughout the entire state.
 Dr. O. Erle Erye, assistant director, told the commission the prohibition was necessary to save the alligator, one of Florida's most valuable tourist lures, from extinction.
 In the past, commercial hunters were allowed to take alligators more than six feet long for their hides, except in the Everglades region and a few other counties.
 But, Frye said, many hunters have been taking alligators under six feet in their greed for hides and the reptiles are fast disappearing.

Study Stresses Visual Aid Use

The use of visual aids in educational processes was the theme of the annual workshop in this area conducted at East Carolina College by Mrs. Marguerite V. Crenshaw, member of the East Carolina library staff, which ended Friday, July 28. Films, displays, and graphic arts were used and studied.
 Represented in the group were senior and graduate students in addition to teaching personnel from North Carolina, Virginia, and Florida.
 From Pitt County, the workshop was attended by the following students:
 Joy Johnson of Greenville; Argent Moore Tucker of Grifton; Mrs. Faye S. Watson, and Barbara Wilson, both of Greenville.

UNATTENDED REHEARSAL ROOSTER

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP)—A scheduled practice session on an abandoned house was spoiled for volunteer firemen in suburban Brighton three days before the event when the house caught fire and burned to the ground. The cause was not determined.

BY JOHN CREASEY A MATTER OF LIFE AND DEATH

Rollison dialed the number of his flat from the phone booth at the Silver Queen factory, but no one answered.

He didn't like it, but there was no need to assume that anything had gone wrong. If Agatha Bell would have followed, of course. That was the simple explanation.

He began to dial Ebbutt's gymnasium. Brrr-br. At a time like this, Jolly wasn't likely to leave his flat empty, except under some kind of duress.

The brr-ing stopped.

"Who's that?" Bill Ebbutt roared.

"Hallo, Bill," said Rollison. "How long will it take you and one other chap who saw Mahoney to come to Wembley?"

"Wembley?" Ebbutt seemed flabbergasted, and took a long time to consider. "Well, I dunno. 'Bout an hour, I s'pose. By car. 'Wot's 'e done now?"

"Mahoney's working at the Silver Queen factory," said Rollison, "and he's due to leave at half-past five. I'd like to have him followed."

"Can do," agreed Ebbutt, and then with a note of wheedling apology: "Wouldn't matter if I didn't go meself, would it, provided the boys that goes know the guy?"

"Send who you like," said Rollison. He was looking at the front entrance, and to his surprise saw Griselda Vance come back. She carried herself in much the same way, as if stealing herself for another unpleasant session. With Paul Vance? She didn't notice Rollison: one of the girl guards opened the door for her, and she disappeared.

"Anything else, Mr. Ar?" asked

Ebbutt.

"Yes, Bill. There's no answer from my flat. Send someone to have a look round, will you? Jolly should be there with a girl named Agatha Bell. Quite something to see."

"Mr. Ar," said Ebbutt, and all the hesitation and reluctance faded from his voice. "That's a job I wouldn't leave to no third party. I'm on my way."

Rollison stepped out of the phone booth and one of the girl guards blushed suddenly, caught in the act of staring at him.

"Has Silver Queen any other depots in London?" he asked.

"Oh, yes, sir," answered the girl, "there's the one at Clapham, that looks after the south and west distribution, just a warehouse, that is, and then there's the depot at Mile End, that's the place where the big export orders go from, and where we get deliveries of shipments from the Californian plant."

"Key points all round, are there?" mused Rollison. "Is there a letter or a letterhead available?"

"There's a shade card, sir. Shows all the different shades of all our products, and it's got the addresses of our different depots everywhere. Would you like one?"

"Very much. Exactly what I want," said Rollison, for the addresses were on the back. He folded and slipped it into his inside breast pocket.

"Now if I could see Mr. Edge?"

"He asked me to take you straight in, sir," the girl said, and opened the door for him.

Edge's office was just ahead.

"He is with Mr. Vance now," said the girl, and led the way past Edge's office. Another door

President Takes Weekend At Hyannis Port; Will Work, Too

By FRANCES LEWINE

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—President Kennedy took in the cool sea breezes of Cape Cod today after a steamy week in Washington marked by his call for bolstering American defenses.

Although he planned no meetings with advisers here this weekend, the President reportedly took along some affairs of state to work on.

White House press secretary Pierre Salinger said Kennedy was preparing for his Monday meeting with the vice president of Nationalist China, Chen Cheng, and Foreign Minister Shen Chong-huan.

Kennedy has been combining work and play in his weekends at his summer home here for the past five weeks. He was in good spirits when his big Air Force jet plane landed at Otis Air Force base in nearby Falmouth Friday night. He smiled and waved to a crowd of about 400 that applauded his arrival.

The President got home in time to join in a family celebration of Mrs. Kennedy's 32nd birthday.

The First Lady, spending the summer here with her two children, planned a birthday cake.

No details of the occasion were made public, including what the President gave his wife as a birthday gift.

On arriving presidential aides displayed a letter that caused just amusement at the White House, because it had come addressed in a large manila envelope that read: "Lt. John F. Kennedy, USNR, ret."

What's more, it contained a consoling note from Adm. Arleigh Burke, retiring chief of Naval operations, that Kennedy should not be disappointed about being passed over for promotion.

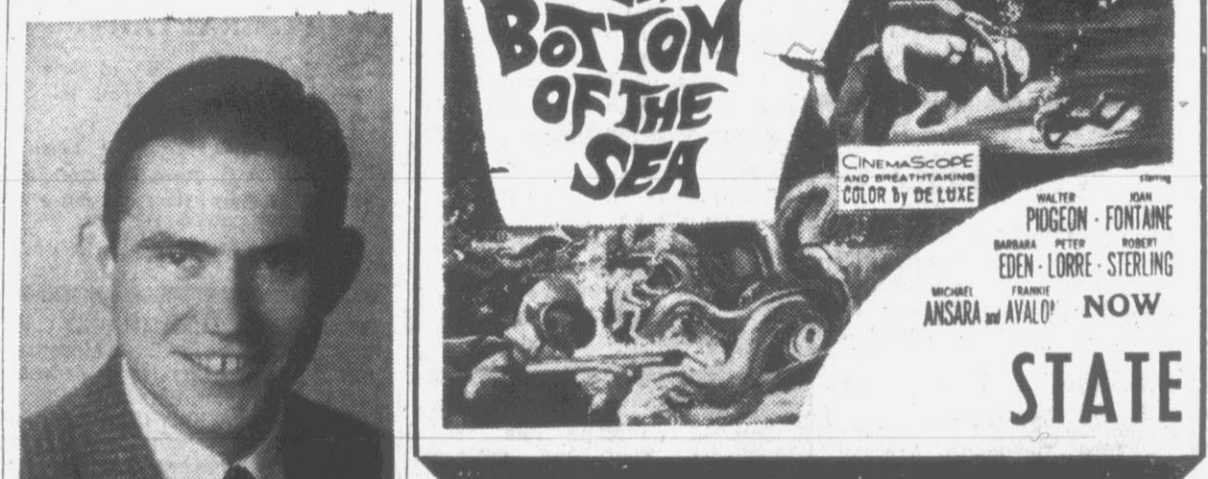

Many of those passed over for Navy promotion, Admiral Burke noted, "have achieved a stature in civilian life which ranks them among the leaders of the social, political, professional or financial circles in which they move."

"Failure of selection under such heavy attrition is no disgrace," Burke wrote his reserve officers, and John F. Kennedy, too. "It is

A man called: "Come in," and the girl opened the door and stood aside.

There was Edge, still sleek if troubled, and standing by his desk, Paul Vance.

In the good light of the office with its long windows, Rollison saw Vance clearly for the first time. He was still a man in grey. He was different from the last occasion only because the grey suit seemed lighter. He wore a grey tie. He was a well-built, good-looking man, of the impressive kind. His grey eyes had a lack of brightness which wasn't surprising; he gave Rollison the impression that he hadn't slept for a long time.

He was saying: "Yes, of course, stop every box that came from that batch of Peach Bloom, and stop everything else that might have been affected. Check all batches made that day. Tell Jameson to keep the laboratory staff working late tonight, it must be finished before they go home. Hurry, please, there isn't any time to lose."

"Reggie's all ready to start," said Edge. There was a stubborn note in his voice. "We can look after all that, Mr. Vance, but this mustn't be allowed to go on any longer."

Vance said: "Indeed?"

He turned away from Edge. His voice could not have been more cutting; no one could have been more effectively put in his place.

He inclined his head.

"Mr. Rollison, I believe."

"Yes," Rollison said. "Good morning. I'm sorry I brought trouble."

Vance said very slowly and deliberately: "Mr. Rollison, I am grateful that you brought this matter to our attention. I hope that it will be possible to find a practical way of expressing our thanks. However, I want there to be no misunderstanding of any kind. I do not wish to be associated with friends of Miss Bell. It is my considered opinion that the difficulties we are having here are inspired by her father."

He paused, to make sure that what he said sank in. "I am further of the opinion that her father killed my son. You will understand what I feel so strongly, and why I must ask you to leave these premises."

Edge looked as if he was about to speak, but he didn't.

Rollison said easily: "Yes, I quite understand. You could be making a mistake."

"That is my own responsibility," "Yes," agreed Rollison slowly, "yours alone, perhaps, but there are other things to consider, aren't there? Other shareholders of Silver Queen, for instance. The reputations of people who work here. The work itself and therefore the livelihood of the work people. In all, quite a responsibility."

"One I am quite capable of accepting," said Paul Vance, and added with an almost old-world courtesy: "I wish you good day."

Edge's brown eyes were pleading. "He's not himself," he seemed to be saying.

Rollison turned to go. Vance went to his desk. Edge looked as if he did not know what to do next, when the door opened. Even Rollison was taken aback. Edge exclaimed aloud. Vance, who had started to sit down, now stood upright, his movements very slow, his fists clenching, a hardness appearing at his eyes and the lines of his mouth.

The original Silver Queen, Griselda Vance, came in.

Charmer From Holland Is Winner At Long Beach

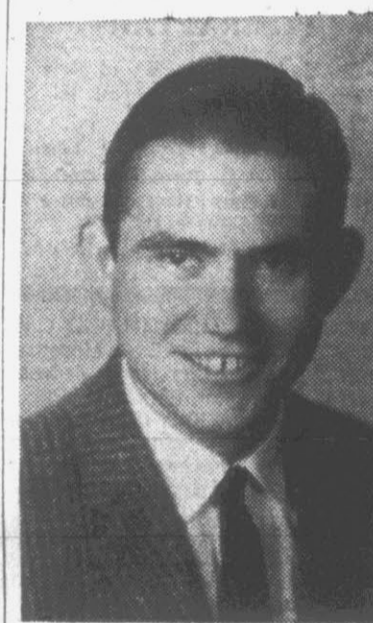

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—A sparkling brown-eyed charmer from Holland—much to her surprise—is Miss International Beauty of 1962.

The honor left the winner, Stann van Baer, 19, of Amsterdam completely amazed Friday night at the International Beauty Congress.

"What can I say?" cried the dew-eyed queen as cameras flashed in the crush of photographers following her triumph. "I didn't expect it—I'm so happy."

She is a fashion model and aspiring actress. Her little Dutch girl costume had won the points of the judges and the applause of the audience.

She had caught the judges' eyes from the start, a week ago. She won a citation in the play-suit division—which in this contest takes the place of a bathing suit

The availability of divine protection will be brought out in Christian Science services Sunday.

Highlighting the Lesson-Sermon on the subject of "Love" is the Golden Text: "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing." (Zephaniah 3).

This citation will be read from 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures' by Mary Baker Eddy (p. 571): "At all times and under all circumstances, overcome evil with good. Know thyself, and God will supply the wisdom and the occasion for a victory over evil. Clad in the panoply of Love, human hatred cannot reach you."

From the Bible will be read this verse from Psalm 84: "Blessed are they that dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee."
