Hill-Calhoun Vows Spoken

AYDEN—The marriage of Miss Betty Sue Calhoun and Mr. William E. Hill was solemnized on Saturday, July 29, at eight o'clock in the Ayden Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Raymond Gaskins, pastor, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Betty Calhoun and the late Mr. Johnny B. Calhoun. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hill of Norfolk, Va.

The vows were heard before a background of seven-branched candelabra, bridal greenery of floor baskets of gladiola and bridal fern.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Kenneth Branch, organist, and Miss Janice Wadkins, soloist. Miss Wadkins sang "Oh Promise Me" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her uncle, Manning Nobles, the bride wore a formal gown of white chiffon over taffeta. The bodice was of Chantilly lace, trimmed in seed pearls and sequins. On her head she wore a fingertip veil of illusion. She carried a prayer book which was centered with a white orchid.

The bride chose as her only attendant her sister, Miss Patricia Calhoun, as her maid of honor. She wore a mint green ballerina length dress of chiffon over taffeta. She carried a cascade of yellow bridal flowers.

Mr. Johnny Smith of Norfolk, Va. was best man.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Calhoun chose a street length dress of blue brocade, complimented by a corsage of white carnations. Her accessories were white. Mrs. Hill chose for her wedding

Miss Henrietta Taylor, whose marriage to Mr. Bruce Flier will be solemnized in late September, was honored Wednesday at one o'clock when Mrs. Fred York entertained at a luncheon at her home on Verna Avenue. Miss Taylor was presented a corsage of red roses.

The guests were greeted at the door by the hostess and honored.

Debutantes Honored

The whirl of parties in Greenville for the Debutante season started yesterday when Mrs. Lindsay Wilkerson, Mrs. Tyson Bilbro and Miss Myrtle Moon Bilbro entertained the Greenville Debutantes and their mothers at a luncheon at the Bilbro home. The honorees for this occasion were Misses Mary May, Lee Lang Harrell and Madge Stancill who were presented wrist corsages of red roses when they arrived.

The punch bowl was set up in the den where fruit punch and hors d'oeuvres were served before lunch. In the center of the bowl was a red rose ice float in keeping with the decorative theme of the party.

For lunch, the debas were seated at the dining room table and the mothers at auxiliary tables in the living room, all finding their place marked with tiny Dresden rose place card holders.

The dining table centerpiece was a small scale debutante cartwheel figure fashioned from tiny dolls characterizing each debutante present. The dolls were made from red rose ballpoint pens dressed

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

The gardener sits on his porch and looks with indifference at the going on in his garden. It is too hot to get out under the August sun and do any garden work. Bagworms are eating up his junipers and the lacewings are making his pyracanthas look sick. His lawn, if any is left, has taken on a slightly yellowish beat-tinge.

A hummingbird makes steady trips to the scarlet sage, and a steady stream of little ants are busy doing something that is important only to ants. The gardener looks with jaundiced eyes at such going on and wonders how anything as small as an ant could contain the spark of life or how a hummingbird's heart could beat a thousand times a minute.

He scans the blue hot sky for a cloud, and wishes the small wind in the pecan tree top would come down to his porch. The steady drumming of the katydid cries, "heat" and he takes off his shoes and moves his chair out of the reach of the sun.

Under this hypnotic spell of the weather, his mind touches on many things: How the heat seems to have no effect on the play of children, and the toughness of their little feet on the asphalt. How a leaf can stand the steady gaze of the sun.

He ponders on things that would never have been a part of his thinking a while back. Where to build his shelter against the poison of fallout? What part of his yard or garden will he place in? How much will it cost and should he hire out the building of it?

He wonders why the tranquility of the ordered state of things should be disturbed by trying to figure out the moves of a potbellied Russian peasant and the constant bleating of the Caribbean cockroach. How, as soon as the world rids itself of one bunch of vermin, another batch is bred by time, circumstances and indifference.

Each bagworm becomes a Cas-tro and each lacewing fly folds its wings and takes on the retund shape of the shoe pounding heel from Moscow.

Then a cloud hides the sun and a small amount of wind pushes aside the heat and his accumulating thoughts. So the gardener does what he can do. He goes to his tool shed and mixes the amount of arsenate of lead required to knock off the bagworms and sprays his junipers with a vengeance. Then with an agility that defies the heat, he cleans his sprayers and does out the evil smelling malathion to put at naught the lacewing fly. Complaining inwardly that no smart one has come up with a way to sweeten up the stuff, he washes off the few drops that have fallen on his hands.

Having cleaned up the international scene, horticulturally at least, he mops his brow and begins to figure out the amount of fertilizer required to green up his grass.

There comes to his mind the comforting thought that fall isn't far away; and that there will be many more falls to come, and springs, and summers, and winters. And he gives over into stronger hands that his, the tending of the world, and goes about doing what he can do.

Benefits Get Away From Farmers

The balance between the benefits received by family farms from the federal agricultural programs and those which accrue to large agricultural operators and middle-men associated with this segment of the economy are becoming a matter of increasing concern in agricultural and non-agricultural areas of the nation alike.

It is common knowledge that there has been increasing sentiment against many phases of the agricultural program from urban and non-agricultural areas within the nation. It is also common knowledge that this sentiment has been fanned by instances in which it has appeared that considerable financial gain has been realized by a relatively few people through certain parts of the agricultural program.

What is not recognized generally in non-agricultural sections, is that by and large the agricultural program means the difference between financial success and failure for many small farmers. Although there may be a small number of large operators who seem to get a disproportionate share of benefit from the agricultural program whether they need it or not, there are literally thousands of small farmers who could not make ends meet without the programs. Indeed, many of them have difficulty doing this even with the programs now in effect.

Certainly the agricultural program should not degenerate into a give-away program to either small farmers or large operators. Neither should it be rendered an ineffective hodge-podge of rules and regulations which would be of no benefit to agriculture by those who, lacking understanding of the needs and problems of farmers, fail to appreciate what kind of programs can be both practical for the nation and beneficial to the agricultural economy.

It is important that the farmers of the nation recognize the growing sentiment in many quarters against comprehensive farm legislation. It is likewise important that the farmers realize that much of this is brought about by misunderstanding of the agricultural programs and by isolated examples of operators who have engaged in "profiteering" at taxpayers' expense because of the farm programs.

If the economy of the nation is to remain strong, there must be a strong agricultural economy as a part of the overall picture. And as we have learned through painful trial and error over the past few decades, a practical and comprehensive program for agriculture is essential.

Unless the farmers themselves diligently seek to prevent a disproportionate share of the benefits of agricultural programs from flowing away from the family farms, they may soon find adverse sentiment thwarting their efforts toward positive, effective and reasonable farm legislation.

Demo Leaders Plan 'Organize'

By LYNN NISBET ORGANIZATION — Evidence accumulates that the presently dominant group in Democratic party circles in North Carolina is determined to build a cohesive and working organization. That the nucleus of this organization will consist of men and women who have not heretofore been very active in political affairs does not mean there will be lack of popular participation. The contrary is true. Witness the interest manifested last week in the selection of a secretary of the executive committee—a post which in the past has been of minor importance in the party scheme.

Under the existing plan of organization the secretary is appointed by the chairman, and his duties have been clerical and perfunctory. When Chairman Bert Bennett of Winston-Salem named Lamar Gudgeon of Asheville, a number of old time easterners squawked about all the party positions going to the west. East-west rivalry is as old as state history. It was much in evidence when residents of the Albemarle and Pamlico sections complained about western towns like Fayetteville and Raleigh getting too "uppity". There are still people in the Elizabeth City, Washington and New Bern areas who think any point beyond Raleigh is in the western outlands—so far as political consideration is concerned. That is true although the geographic center of the state is some 50 miles west of Raleigh, the population and voting center nearly 100 miles west.

The young folks who are now running the party at least are realistic in their approach to a statewide concept of organization.

NEW PLAN—North Carolina is one of very few states with a written Plan of Organization, or constitution, for its political parties—Democratic and Republican. Paul Butler, former national chairman, and several of his predecessors, have commended the idea of a formal plan—although vigorously opposing some of its provisions. The plan has been amended many times, almost every two years in fact, since the present text was written in 1918. It is now undergoing a complete revision, the first in more than 40 years.

The committee assigned that task is headed by Secretary of State Thad Eure, veteran of many political wars, ranking elected State official, and a party organization man without apology. On the committee is Attorney General Wade Brantley, another veteran, who served as chairman of the revision committee two years ago. The others are younger in years and exper-

Pep Talks Still Don't Change The Weather

It was to be expected. A few hot days and warm nights, strung together like beads, and we have complaints already.

People squint reproachfully at Old Sol, and their thoughts, spoken and unspoken, are summed up by one word "Whew!"

Greetings on chance encounter invariably include the dubious query "Is it hot enough for you?", and the complaint "Boy, but it's hot" echo from one street to the next.

So we should have snow in early August maybe? Leave us not forget the very recent complaints on the cold of winter and delayed springtime . . . the snow, the slush, the cold nose and hacking cough; the gray days and frost-ridden nights.

Then thoughts turned longingly toward remembered days of scorching sun and perspiring labors. Great deeds were recalled as having been done in summer heat, and . . .

O brother! This is no day for work. Pep talks notwithstanding, the most appealing thought on days like this involves much idleness, a shady spot where cool breezes blow, a pitcher of lemonade within easy reach, and the sound of duty's call muffled by distance.

Future To Hold World Turmoil

It is divided into two main parts. One is a catalogue of rosy promises of a richer and easier life for the Russian people in the next 20 years.

It was this part of the program which got most attention when it was made public over the weekend.

The other, predicting the ultimate triumph of communism without a timetable, is the blueprint for the long, fierce, unending struggle ahead.

Reading the full text in this part of the program makes the idea of "peaceful coexistence," which Khrushchev preaches, look like an exercise in the Communist lexicon of double-speak.

It says quite blandly that peaceful coexistence between communism and capitalism is not only possible but desirable. After all, it explains, this just gives communism more time to take over.

"It says, for instance: 'Communists have never held that the road to revolution lies necessarily through wars between countries. The great objective of the working class can be realized without war.'

The real child is Moscow's idea of what should be happening through that long twilight period of peaceful coexistence—that everywhere Communists should be trying to take over whatever country they're in.

The means may vary but the central theme is revolution. The revolution may not necessarily be violent. If, for example, Communists could get elected in enough numbers to control a parliament and thus take over government.

The program sounds a little skeptical that Communists are going to conquer many places without violent revolution. It says: 'Leninism maintains, and historical experience confirms, that the ruling classes do not yield power of their own free will.'

That's the polite way of saying you'll have to fight for it, boys.

The program emphasizes that one country after another should be knocked off from within—to avoid war—although the exact method will vary from country to country, depending on how much and what kind of opposition there is.

This advice is given: 'The success of the struggle which the working class wages for the victory of the revolution will depend on how well the working class and its party master the use of all forms of struggle—peaceful and non-peaceful, parliamentary and extra-parliamentary—and how well they are prepared to replace one form of struggle by another as quickly and unexpectedly as possible.'

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS PATRIOTISM There is a disposition on the part of many today to scoff at a living in a new world. The "one world" concept reminds us of the unity of the human race. In this unity, they claim, there is no place for division of any kind.

The idea of unity is inspiring. It is sound. But the reality of patriotism is sound also. Because a man is loyal to one woman does not mean either that he is a fool or that he is the enemy of womanhood in general.

Impressions of Cuba

By HAL BOYLE

Remember Those Days?

NEW YORK (AP) — Let's have another look back at the calmer times when people could go to sleep without worrying over whether the next morning they'd have to face a fresh world crisis.

Sometimes it's a blessing to have these days to recall. It's a compensation for growing older.

So, count yourself among the lucky ones if you can still remember when—

Anybody who bought a $10,000 house was considered well-to-do.

If you got a $50 weekly salary, that was the amount they put in your pay envelope. There were no such things as deductions.

When you went to the store for a gallon of coal oil, the grocer always stuck a raw potato on the spout to keep the can from leaking.

Babe Ruth earned almost as much for knocking 60 home runs in a year as many 16-year-old kids now get for singing as bonus players.

If you gave a child a penny, he didn't look up and ask, "What's it good for?"

It was regarded as a national disaster when movie stars Doug Fairbanks and Mary Pickford got a divorce.

You stepped on a running board before entering an automobile, and there was no such thing as a gasoline tax.

Ministers denounced the rumble seat as the greatest threat to the morals of the younger generation.

You could impress the neighbors with a $200 funeral.

A fountain pen was advertised as a lifetime investment.

The most popular indoor hobby in America was making home brew in the basement.

A draft was a breeze that seeped through a window—not an order issued from Washington.

A good pool player had a wider circle of admirers than a fellow who beat par on a golf course, and any man over 20 who still played tennis was put down as a sissy.

A wife was judged by the skill with which she could darn her husband's socks.

There was only one wonder drug—aspirin—and nobody had heard of a virus.

If you were sick, the doctor came to see you; you didn't have to go to see him.

Only mothers and old folks used rocking chairs.

Teen-agers took orders instead of giving them—and usually asked permission before using the telephone.

The best way to have security in your old age was to raise a family of 10 kids.

Remember?

Other Editors Sayings Opinions Had We Gone Into Cuba In Brief

(Henderson Dispatch) Now, days later, it is reported that a number of members of the U.S. Senate were so aggravated by Castro's seizure of an American commercial airliner that they favored sending enough power into Cuba to re-heat the plane and bring it home. So far as Castro is concerned, it would have served him right. But there would have been repercussions here and abroad, and they wouldn't all have been favorable.

For one thing, starting at home, owners of oil refineries and sugar plants and other properties worth hundreds of millions of dollars would rebel. The rebel government has seized would have wanted to know why the government didn't intervene in their behalf. It would have been a legitimate complaint, although the circumstances are not exactly parallel. Hijacking of the plane over American territory, in Florida, was piracy of the air, and certainly cannot be condoned.

Abroad, there would have been the gulping of leftists, even in so-called friendly countries, against an invasion. It would have been invasion, to be sure, although not on as large a scale as general landings and launching of a campaign to get rid of an avowed enemy.

Under international practices, until recent years at least, the United States would have been justified in using force to recover the plane. While it was private property, what is the Federal government for if not to protect its citizens and their interests in whatever quarter of the globe?

In the days of Teddy Roosevelt, that President would most likely have issued an ultimatum to Castro, coupled with the threat of force, which actually would have been used. What is more, he would have gotten away with it.

Senators have been represented as having submitted to all they are willing to take at the hands of this peanut dictator. They are said to be unwilling to submit to more insults, thefts, confiscation, and what have you. On the surface that certainly is a logical stand. Soviet Russia would not have submitted to as much as the United States has. The Kremlin did not hesitate to use force in putting down revolts difficult and the more hazardous Germany in 1953 and in Hungary in 1956.

While not specifically advocating force against Castro, the plain fact is that the longer a showdown is delayed, and the more the Cuban dictator is allowed to get away with, the more after all, is what counts most—will action in the future be. It is probable that the Kennedy administration would have had the support of the vast bulk of American public opinion in enforcing American rights, which, after all, is what counts most—or indeed should. Other people have run our affairs long enough and too long already.

How To Find The Replacements

By ELMER ROESSNER Replacements for employees about to be drafted or called up in the reserves can be found under orderly procedures by most businesses.

Even if a million young men are called up in the rest of this year, sound business activities can keep the impact mild. For one thing, the rise in the armed forces will be gradual (barring a boom) and business will have time in which to prepare.

Here are steps to be taken in preparation:

1. Determine at once which employees are liable to draft or call-up. This will provide the basis for a recruitment timetable.
2. Determine which of these can't be deferred because of skills, because they are irreplaceable, etc.
3. Make plans for hiring replacements. These plans should cover such factors as when specific skills will be needed, where such skills can be found by advertisements, pirating, etc), and how the replacements can be worked into the existing organization.

4. Confer with unions concerned, to gain cooperation and help in plans for orderly replacement of those called up.
5. Study up-grading and training possibilities. Best replacement talent may be in your own shop or office. A program for training up-coming young people may remove all the panic from the coming call-ups.
6. Review recent retirements and discharges. Some of those retired may be eager to return on a limited basis: half days or three-day weeks. Some of them may have just the talent needed for training programs.

WHERE TO FIND NEW BLOOD

7. Re-examine sources for replacements: private newspaper ads, employment agencies, state employment agencies, school and college bureaus, relatives of present employees, etc.
8. Review automation plans, with a view to speeding introduction.
9. Consider possibilities of eliminating unprofitable services, needless work, and unnecessary jobs.
10. Make all plans with full knowledge that the law will require you to rehire all draftees and reservists within 90 days after their release from active duty. Unless this fact is recognized, you may end up with two men holding the same job, with no hope of dropping either.

There's one more thing businessmen can do: get out the old World War II Eisenhower jacket and save food until it fits.

Flying A Flag Today?

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A.R. Booker, of North Hollywood, writes me: "Looking down the block of our industrial section we observed that only one flag was flying in the entire block. It occurred to us that something has happened to our nationalistic spirit, which perhaps in a sense is reflected by our national leaders in their dealings with other nations."

So Booker put an advertisement in the newspaper advocating a flag-pole revival. His ad only brought him two letters. He says: "When considering the placement of this advertisement I contacted the display advertisement department of a major Los Angeles newspaper. When I first read the advertisement to him his comment was: 'What are you trying to do, sell flag poles or flags?' It appears that it is our American custom to assume that no one does anything without an 'angle.' This is unfortunate, and I assume many persons who read our ad may have been under the impression that we sold flags or flag poles. I can assure you we have no relationship with the flags or flag poles, or the steel industry."

Flying the flag or singing the National Anthem is not as popular these days as it was, say in my youth. For instance, up in these parts, where once Longfellow and Bryant, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Nathaniel Hawthorne spent their summers, the Tanglewood concerts do not begin with the playing of the National Anthem and they fly a small flag in the big shed but not in the small theater. Per- not as baseball fans whose games always start with the singing of the National Anthem.

Maybe it is all a small matter but it is over matters such as this that the nations of the Earth are on the verge of war. Nationalism is not easy to define in this era; it is so different in different places. The proliferation of nations has many causes and becomes possible only the strong power that holds a people together has lost its potency. Sometimes thread of nationalism is no more than language, the association of a people by their mode of speech. Sometimes, it is historic memory, a nostalgia for a previous condition of relationships.

In Africa, for instance, it is difficult to the nations together either linguistically or historically. In fact, many tribes hated each other and where cannibalism prevailed, they ate each other. Nevertheless today, they manifest an intense nationalism which represents a negative response to European colonialism. But anti-colonialism is not enough to provide an intense nationalism. An example of modern nationalism is Israel to which men and women, boys and girls give their lives freely.

The Israeli Army includes women in many ranks and there Europeans labor in the desert not for themselves but for a nation which came into existence as such as recently as 1948. Israel is a startling example of nationalistic intensity. On the other hand, Red China is an Empire and a Cantonese remains a Cantonese and thinks in terms of his people—the Cantonese.

The trend in the late Nineteenth and early Twentieth centuries was away from nationalism toward universalism. Great Britain has throughout favored some form of internationalism because there have been so many components of the British Empire and of the Commonwealth of Nations that nationalism could only mean anti-British. Since the time of Woodrow Wilson, the United States has moved in the direction of internationalism, perhaps as a means for establishing a method for shifting responsibility for the smaller and weaker countries upon some international body. Although this country did not join the League of Nations which we had initiated, we did join the United Nations to which we have devoted ourselves so ardently that we have actually made sacrifices of sovereignty to strengthen the United Nations. The Korean War is one example of that and our financial support of every activity of the (Continued on Page 8)

Scientists Listening To Sun; A Broadcasting Blabbermouth

By FRANK CAREY
Associated Press Science Writer
BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Science is cashing in on the fact that the sun has turned out to be a radio broadcasting blabbermouth, one of the world's foremost radio astronomers says. Dr. Joseph L. Pawsey of the Radio Physics Laboratory, Sydney, Australia, said the star that supports life on earth—and also is responsible for terrestrial troubles like communications blackouts and the vagaries of weather—is yielding more and more of their secrets by means of radio waves generated within her hot, gaseous body. These radio waves, he told a conference of American and Canadian space scientists Wednesday here, are detectable on the earth 93 million miles away by giant antennas and other sensitive instruments located in various parts of the world. By studying them, the scientists can make deductions about the characteristics of solar areas through which the waves have passed enroute to the earth. He said the sun is constantly broadcasting some kind of radio waves, but really goes to town during periods of violence on the solar sphere—such as during the times of sunspot activity or when great "prominences" and "flares" shoot like fiery fingers thousands of miles into space. Flares are the things which send great clouds of hydrogen gas shooting towards the earth at speeds up to 1,000 miles a second, contributing to the magnetic disturbances which sometimes bedevil the radio and other communications on earth. Flares also contribute to spewing out intense bursts of ultraviolet light and X-rays, which may play a role in making the earth's water. And they also figure some in the generation of solar cosmic rays. Dr. Pawsey told the conference that studies of radio waves emitted by the sun at such times of violence are helping build up a better understanding of the mechanism of flares—and understanding which might lead to better means of forecasting their occurrence. He also said the techniques of solar radio astronomy—now only 19 years old as a science—have provided researchers with very powerful new methods of determining the structure of the atmosphere. The conference Pawsey addressed is jointly sponsored by Virginia Polytechnic Institute, the National Science Foundation and the Langley (Va.) Research Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. In another key report Wednesday, a famed British scientist, Dr. Sydney Chapman, said new, although still indirect, evidence suggests the possibility there may be a third "Van Allen" radiation belt surrounding the earth. Indicating that such a belt conceivably might provide an additional hazard for certain types of manned space flight missions, Dr. Chapman said the civilian space agency is planning special satellite experiments, with super-sensitive equipment, to hunt down the still elusive belt. Chapman is now doing research at the high altitude laboratory of the University of Colorado.

Women Display Political Interest

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — State Democratic officials learned the hard way that there are more Alabama women interested in politics than they thought. The women's division of the party's campaign steering committee planned a luncheon here. They figured since it was vacation time for some and canning time for others, not more than 80 would come. But committee officers found themselves in a stew when more than 200 reservations were made. The hotel where the luncheon was planned couldn't handle that many. So the luncheon was moved to another hotel, and plans are now being made for 250 women to attend the event Aug. 5.

East Germany Doesn't Even Have A Common Designation

Germany? For one thing, AP correspondent John Bauman reports in this third of a series of articles on the Berlin crisis, no German calls it that. Nevertheless, this war-born state is one of the keys in the touchy problem of Berlin and Germany. By JOHN BAUSMAN
BERLIN (AP) — The country known abroad as East Germany has a variety of names. But no German calls it East Germany. East Germany's Communists call their country the German Democratic Republic — or GDR. Or Democratic Germany. They regard it as an independent German state, worthy of recognition as such. West Germans still refer to it as the Soviet zone of occupation. Or they call it just "the zone." They regard its government as a Soviet puppet regime forced upon the people and not worthy of recognition. In fact they feel it is so unworthy of recognition that the West German government breaks off relations with any country except the Soviet Union that extends official recognition to East Germany. There is another West German term for East Germany — "Middle Germany." This is based on the theory that beyond "Middle Germany" lies an East Germany made up of those eastern parts of prewar Germany now assigned to Poland and the Soviet Union. Whatever you call it, East Germany is the smaller segment of a 41,700 square miles. It is less than a third the size of West Germany's 143,200 square miles. Its 17 million population compares with 52 million for West Germany.

The country's boundaries—from the Baltic Sea on the north to Czechoslovakia on the south, from the Oder-Neisse border with Poland on the east to the Iron Curtain border with West Germany—were drawn at the allied conference at Potsdam in 1945, right after World War II. At that time East Germany was set up as the Soviet zone of occupation. The Soviet occupiers ruled with a strong hand. They dismantled factories and tore up railroad tracks as reparations to be shipped off to the Soviet Union. Early local elections in the Soviet zone showed the majority of voters opposed to the Communist-run Socialist Unity party. But with Soviet backing, the party gained control of the zone's political life and became its governing party when the German Democratic Republic was proclaimed on Oct. 7, 1949. This was the Soviet answer to the establishment of the Federal Republic of Germany by France, the United States and Great Britain a month earlier. By that time the break between the Soviet Union and its war allies was fully recognized. Efforts to cooperate in Berlin had long since collapsed and the city had separate governments for the East and West sectors. There had also been the allied effort, last year, to break the Soviet blockade of Berlin and foil that first attempt to force the allies out of the city. East Germany, impoverished by stern reparations demands, was now called on to build itself up as a flourishing Soviet satellite. A heavy industrialization program left little production for consumers. Farms were collectivized and private firms and tradesmen were squeezed. For four years the East Germans submitted to their fate except for nearly 200,000 who escaped to the West each year. Then on June 16, 1953, building workers in East Berlin demonstrated against heavy work requirements and poor food supplies. The next day, June 17, popular uprisings broke out in East Berlin and other major cities. The people demanded free elections, food and an end to tyranny. The Soviets proclaimed martial law and brought in tanks and troops to stop the rioting. Leaders of the uprising were arrested and executed. The June 17 revolt was short-lived and brutally suppressed. It got no support from the West. No other has broken out so far. But the continued stream of refugees, totaling more than 2.5 million since 1949, has been a constant reminder of the regime's unpopularity. The Communists talk about raising the standard of living. In 1954, East German party chief Walter Ulbricht predicted his country would overtake West Germany by 1961. There has been some improvement. But by 1961 his country was no match for West Germany. It still rationed potatoes and butter, its towns were shabby and cities like East Berlin and Dresden were still marred by acres of ruins. They compared poorly with the abundantly supplied, extensively rebuilt cities of bustling and prosperous West Germany. For its size, East Germany has outpaced West Germany in numbers of men under arms. Its army, estimated by Western experts at 110,000 men, is proportionally about equal to West Germany's 300,000. In addition the East Germans have 40,000 to 50,000 heavily militarized border guards and 30,000 "security" police. There are also 78,000 civil policemen of less military value and some 300,000 men in militia units or "fighting groups" organized in offices and factories. Can a regime, clearly unpopular with a large part of its population, count on these forces in a showdown with the West? Western experts find this hard to assess. Certainly there would be some substantial defections, especially if the people were to defy the Communists openly. But the Germans have a tradition of military discipline and a hard core of Communist militarists might be able to hold some organizations together. Then too, the six East German divisions would be fighting beside 22 Soviet divisions. Closely tied to Soviet operations, the East Germans might find little choice but to go along or be crushed by a watchful Soviet ally.

Seventh grade teachers, Principal of Greenville Junior High School Joseph Smith Jr. and Mrs. Ellen Carroll, director of instruction for Greenville schools, met Tuesday evening in the city education offices to complete grouping plans for the seventh grade this fall. The group has been working on grouping plans all during the summer, but this week's meeting was concluding the work. Present for the meeting, in addition to Mrs. Carroll and Smith were Mrs. Anna H. Carter, Mrs. Dorothy Garcia, Mrs. Annette Pyley, Mrs. Stella Smith, Kari Turner, Mrs. Irma Worthington and Mrs. Nannie Fisher Shearin. Seventh grade teachers absent from the meeting were Mrs. Keith Holmes, who is vacationing in New York, and Mrs. Georgia Franklin, now teaching at Western Carolina College.

Churches Help College Problem

President Leo W. Jenkins of East Carolina College has expressed appreciation to the Board of Stewards of St. James Methodist Church in Greenville for action taken to assist in providing rooms for an overflow registration at the college this fall. Earlier this week, the members of the board of stewards at St. James Church voted to conduct a survey of the congregation to determine available rooms for Methodist students who are unable to be assigned dormitory rooms. The pastor, the Rev. C. F. Hirschi, will compile the information. It was learned by administration officials, also, that members of the First Pentecostal Holiness Church here were volunteering assistance in providing rooms, some families already reporting acceptance of students to live with them during the college year. Dr. Jenkins said the expression of this spirit of co-operation and support of the churches of the community with the college was an excellent demonstration of wholesome relations enjoyed by the college administration with people of Greenville and Pitt County. This is tangible evidence of religion practiced as well as religion preached, Dr. Jenkins feels. The housing shortage still exists, however, and college officials are hopeful that more rooms will be made available for students seeking admission here this fall.

Nudist Colony Sign Slows The Speedy Drivers

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — "Nudist colony." The crudely lettered sign, with an arrow pointing to the right, is slowing traffic to almost a snail's pace along Harbor View Road here. Richard Steele, 15, and Harry Muller, 16, said they had placed the sign after cars began to whiz through the area at excessive speeds. "A lot of people are interested in things like that," opined Richard, and now the 35 mile-per-hour speed limit is generally observed by drivers looking for the non-existent nudist campers. The two boys decided to make a little survey of how the "speed trap" works. "We watched about 200 cars last night and this morning," they said Wednesday, "and it's our consensus that more men than women slowed up to look at the sign."

Not Quite Ready To Leave Jail

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — George H. Brown spent 55 days in jail on seven bad check charges, but he isn't quite ready to leave. "Do you think you've learned your lesson?" asked Judge Jack Falk in criminal court Wednesday. "Yes, sir, judge," Brown replied. "You'll write no more bad checks?" "No sir, but judge, would you mind keeping me in jail until Friday?" "Why?" asked the judge in surprise. "There're a few things I'd like to take care of before getting out." "Like what?" "Well, to tell the truth, judge, I'd like to avoid temptation until Friday." The judge sent Brown back to a cell.

New Police Chief Is No Stranger To Greenville Post

GUY C. LANGSTON . . . Greenville's Police Chief for second time.

By START SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The responsibility of seeing to the security and safety of the lives and property of the citizens of Greenville, falls mainly on the shoulders of one man—Police Chief Guy C. Langston.

Langston, who took office as the City's Police-head recently, is no stranger to the local department, for he served as Police Chief here from 1950 to 1952. A native of Kinston, Langston was in the wholesale business for a few years after finishing school before entering the U.S. Army on active duty in 1940. A former National Guardsman, Langston entered the service as a staff sergeant with the 13th Field Artillery, and was soon commissioned a second lieutenant. A year later he was made a First Lieutenant, then the following year, in 1943, was promoted to the rank of captain.

Langston was released from active duty in 1946 after serving in the European Theater of Operations during the War.

The Chief related the unit he was serving with was stationed in England for a short time before landing in France on D plus 29 . . . 29 days following the landing at Normandy on D-day.

With a smile on his face—one which reflected the pride within him—he noted that his battalion was the first unit to enter Paris in August of 1945 with and as part of the Free French Forces.

A lasting memory, according to Langston, was seeing General Charles DeGaulle standing at the Arch-De-Triumph during the liberation.

Following the liberation of Paris, and the Battle of the Bulge, in December of 1944, in which his unit received a citation from the 99th Division for supporting fire given the Third Battalion, for five days and nights of fighting, Langston was assigned to the Military Government Police in Germany.

After returning to the States in 1945, Langston became a member of the Kinston Police Department. A year later, after receiving his release from active duty, the officer joined the North Carolina Highway Patrol, and was stationed in Vanceboro.

In August of 1949, he left the patrol and became a field representative for the State Highway Safety Division. He remained at this post until becoming Police Chief in September of 1950.

Langston left the police post here November 1, 1952 to accept a post as Safety Engineer and Sales Manager for Tripp Enterprises of Greenville, of which he later became director of personnel. In 1957 when Tripp Chemicals was formed, Langston was named sales manager, then later new products manager, the post he held until accepting the Chief's job here for the second time.

Langston, as chief, is charged with insuring "adequate security and safety for the lives and property of the citizens of Greenville". The duties which are varied, deal mainly with supervising and coordinating the operation of the department . . . all to the ultimate goal of protecting the rights of the people.

"The responsibility is what the Chief likes best about the job, he said, adding that it is "an important thing in this job—a challenge." "Meeting people . . . making friends" is also part of the job Chief Langston enjoys.

In speaking of the different sections of the department, Chief Langston emphasized that "each man is important" and the men working in one division should have just as much attention as the men in another department.

He continued by noting that each job performed by the department is important . . . no one thing can be placed ahead of another.

Several changes in the department have already been made, the official said, with more to come.

The Chief's office has been moved from the second floor to the old chief's office on the first floor, and the "door will always be open", Langston emphasized.

The Clerk of Court's office has been moved to the old Identification Officer's office and the Identification offices, as well as the detective division offices, have been moved to the second floor.

Plans are also being drawn for the construction of a new darkroom and identification office of the second floor, along with renovation of office space at the rear of the first floor of the department's headquarters.

The changes and plans, as well as the re-arranging of the "front office" at police headquarters, are necessary, according to Langston, to provide additional working space.

Among other things to come in the near future, Langston said, will be a training program for the members of the department with regular testing programs.

Langston, in addition to the Masons, New Bern Consistory of Scottish Rite and the Sudan Temple Shrine, lists among his "memberships" the North Carolina National Guard, in which he is a Lieutenant Colonel.

The police department head, who boasts of 26 years service with the National Guard and Regular Army was commissioned a major two years after being released from active duty with the Army, and was elevated to his present commissioned rank in May of 1952.

As lieutenant Colonel, Langton is plans and training officer (S-3) of the 30th Division Artillery.

Langston is a member of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

Among his hobbies, the Chief smilingly says are "mowing the grass" and sports, such as baseball, football, basketball, and volley ball "as long, as someone else is playing."

Chief Langston married the former Joyce Holland of Pamlico County and they have two sons, Mike, 10, and Bobby, 25 who is now living in Alexandria, Virginia.

J. E. Whitehurst Named To Pitt FHA Committee

Judson E. Whitehurst, Pitt County farmer of Stokes has been named to the Farmers Home Administration County Committee, according to Ben H. White, the agency's county supervisor. The appointment is for three years beginning this past July 1.

Purpose of the County Committee is to review applications for Farmers Home Administrations loans. Composed of three members, the committee is set up on a rotation basis, with one new member appointed each year.

Whitehurst succeeds Mark H. Smith, who has served on the committee the past three years. Other members of the committee are Harry J. Jarvis, Route 1, Ayden; and George D. Cox of Winterville.

In announcing the appointment White said: "Mr. Whitehurst is a successful farmer in the Stokes community. He is very interested in farmers and their problems. He is always ready to give of his time and talents in any way that will benefit agriculture and especially the farmers who till the soil. He is a leader in community and county affairs."

The committee determines the eligibility of individual applicants for all types of loans. It also reviews borrowers' progress and aids the county supervisor in adapting the agency's loan policies to conditions faced by farmers in this area. Members are selected and appointed so that, so far as possible, different areas or neighborhoods are represented.

FHA makes annual or intermediate term loans to farmers who need adequate funds to buy equipment and livestock, and longer term loans to build or repair houses and other essential farm buildings and to purchase or improve land suitable for family-type farm operations.

It also advances credit to farmers or their non-profit association to establish and carry out approved soil and water conservation practices, and to install and improve irrigation and farmstead water facilities.

Disputed Traffic Signal Will Go

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The Arkansas Highway Commission is going to remove a stop light that led to a State Supreme Court appeal.

The commission directed Highway Department lawyers Wednesday to start action to have the traffic signal on Highway 62 at Alpena taken down.

Highway Director F. R. Oliver said the department had tried previously to get the light removed but without success.

The light came into prominence recently when Ray Garrison of Alpena appealed a $10 fine to the State Supreme Court. He contended the light, which he was fined for running, was illegally placed.

Only an estimated one million people inhabit the Mongolian Republic, a windswept, desolate country that covers more territory than Alaska.

Newspaper Advertising Hits the Mark with a Large and Constant Audience

There's nothing hit-or-miss about the newspaper audience—it's a constant audience that varies little throughout the year. That's because newspaper circulation remains constant with little variation from month to month. There is no summer slump in newspaper reading habits. Furthermore, readers can pick their own time—day or night—to enjoy the paper. And they do—over 107,000,000 of them every day in the U. S. For sure-fire results, advertise consistently in the daily newspaper.

CHAPTER 29
Rollison was wearing an old brown coat, two sizes too large for him, baggy at the knees and pockets, ragged at the elbows and the sleeves.

A pair of blue dungarees were too tight round the seat. Covering his dark hair was a greasy cloth cap, once almost cream in color. A tunic shirt was open at the neck, and he had no collar, tie or muffler. His shoes were big and rubbersoled, and he walked with a slight swaying movement, as if unused to the steadiness of dry land. Now and again he gave a sharp, clear hic.

No one took particular notice of him. Men were walking from the big shed towards the ship; and in the other direction, too. They carrying the last of the oddments on board Silver Queen 3. Here was a ship, the hatches already being battened down, making ready to sail the oceans laden with the products of the Wembley plant.

Was Agatha Bell on board? Or was she in the warehouse? Rollison was aware of watching eyes, even though he did not think that he himself was noticed. Two men were on the bridge, but no tug was near.

Out in midstream, a police launch chugged slowly and sluggishly downriver towards Tilbury, the estuary and the open channel. None of the crew seemed to be taking any notice of the Silver Queen 3, but one of the men on the bridge watched it, with a pair of glasses at his eyes.

Rollison saw the other man, well-placed to see over the roof of the shed and the nearby buildings towards the approaches of the wharf. He also had glasses, hanging by a strap from his left shoulder. His gaze moved continually, as if to make sure that he missed nothing.

Ebbutt and several of his men were making their way in ones and twos, towards the small solid pub, the Crow's Nest, which was nearer the docks than any other place of revelry. On the opposite corner, across a cobbled road, was a corrugated tin hut bearing the brave words: Salvation Army Hut—Tea, Good Food, Beds.

Once Ebbutt and his men reached that spot, they could go into the Crow's Nest or the Army hut, and come out by a side door and approach the wharf with little risk of being seen.

Rollison drew nearer a man who stood by the gangway, checking all who went on board. This was a closer check than usual; one at the wharfside, one up on deck. Everything pointed to extreme caution.

The stocky man felt the sharp blade between his ribs, caught his breath with a hissing sound, and turned startled eyes towards Rollison. Mahoney, paying more attention to Adam Bell than to the couple at the foot of the gangway, noticed nothing at all. Rollison spoke out of the corner of his mouth as they drew nearer, and only the stocky man heard what he said.

"Tell Mahoney to go back to the shed."
Adam Bell was practically at the foot of the gangway, and Mahoney's hand fell on his shoulder, as if to let him know where the authority and the power lay.

Adam turned, put a foot up, to start climbing. Rollison thrust the knife harder. The stocky man made a choking sound.

"Tim, will you—will you wait over in the shed? The Old Man—the Old Man wants you there for a special job. I'll look after Bell."

Adam Bell stopped moving. Mahoney frowned at the stocky man, and at Rollison. Doubt seemed to flicker through his eyes.

Ebbutt and the other were probably at the Crow's Nest or in the S.A. Hut; some of them might be on their way here, but it wasn't likely.

They were to wait for Rollison's signal, a single shrill whistle, and then they would take them two or three minutes to get to the ship's side. A lot could happen to a man in two or three minutes.

Rollison is going to find that his scheme to rescue Adam Bell is ill-planned. Continue John Creasey's thriller here tomorrow.

Pointing to another man who just walked in, Tambellini commented casually: "See that fellow over there, he looks like my father."
"My God, it is my father," he shouted seconds later, leaping over the bar to embrace the man.

PINEDALE, Wyo (AP)—Plenty of heat was generated from a 420-acre fire in the Bridger National Forest of western Wyoming, but it couldn't be used for cooking meals for the 160-man fire-fighting crew.

A hurried-up call for cooking stoves was sent to forest service headquarters, which promptly sent out a supply of electric stoves.

There was only one hitch. The fire was 10 miles from the nearest power line.

Hollywood Is Lonely To Griffith's 'Aunt Bee'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY AP TV-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—“Whenever I feel lonely out here, I just go out shopping in a supermarket,” explained actress Frances Bavier. “Somebody will always look at me, smile and say ‘Why, hello, you’re Aunt Bee.’”

Miss Bavier is a tiny, gentle-voiced and sweet-faced performer with a background of 35 years in the theater. During the past 10 years she has become TV's prototype of the lovable mother and aunt. At the moment she is busy working on the second batch of “The Andy Griffith Show,” one of the few outstandingly successful new series of last year.

Although she has been constantly and profitably busy in Hollywood's film and TV studios for a decade, Miss Bavier has never lost her homesickness for her native New York and the stage.

“It's different out here and it's lonely,” she said frankly. “In the theater, you make friends and you spend time together when you aren't working. But here, no matter how long you work together, when work is over everyone says so long and disappears. You never see them until you start work again.”

There Is Joy On Leaving 'The Land Of Happy People'

EDITOR'S NOTE — AP news analyst William L. Ryan is just back from a short visit in Cuba and here reports on the problems of Cubans who seek to leave their homeland and find a new life in the United States.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst
"Visit Cuba, land of happy people," says the lettering on cardboard boxes of rum offered for sale to travelers.
You smile bitterly. You are a traveler, a refugee from your own country. You are one of yet another 20,000 the United States has promised to absorb. Before the day is out you hope to escape. To join the many tens of thousands who already have left.
Your goal is close — so very close. But this will be the most anxious the most tense day of all. You have with you all the worldly possessions you can carry on an airplane to Florida. All the rest is left behind.
For months you have undergone the mental strain of waiting lines for visas, lines for exit permits, lines for plane tickets, lines for everything. Lines inching ahead through the agonizing labyrinth of Fidel Castro's revolutionary bureaucracy. Now, at last you are at the airport. It will be the last day, if you are lucky. The last hours are the hardest of all.
The plane is scheduled to leave at 4:30 p.m., but the authorities have told you to be at the airport with all your baggage and documents at 10 a.m. So you arrive well ahead of 10 a.m. It is no time to take chances.

The terminal is dreadfully hot, crowded with others hoping to be as lucky as you, others waiting patiently in the seemingly motionless line, waiting to get authorization for the purchase of tickets for some other day.
You finally get to check your baggage. It is sent out to customs. There is nothing to do now but wait and wait. It gets hotter by the minute as the afternoon wears on and the passengers mill about the small waiting room. Once you are there you dare not leave. A window has been broken, and the room's air conditioning does no good.
One by one, at the rate of one every 10 or 20 minutes, prospective fellow passengers are called to customs, out on the field under the blazing sun. You know their baggage is being gone over bit by bit. Some things are confiscated. You don't know why. One family wails with frightened astonishment as authorities seize a pair of swimming suits are taken. Another man wonders why they seized a deck of cards.
A tiny girl loses a slim bracelet she had been wearing. Nobody takes out gold without special permission. Another, for the same reason, loses her tiny wristwatch. You wait and wait and wait.

Children are wailing, irritated by the heat and the long, exhausting vigil. It is 4 p.m. Anxious eyes scan the skies through the waiting room windows. The American plane hasn't appeared.
It wouldn't have mattered if it did show up on time. The customs people were a long way from finished. Then there were the interrogations by the G-2, Castro's intelligence people.
For many there would be intensive and often seemingly pointless questioning. There would be suspicion; the dread of being turned back, just at about the last moment. Some—a relatively few—know the bitterness already. The intelligence men are in and out of the waiting room and all eyes follow them. One G-2 man makes a cruel joke. He taps two young girls on the shoulders and asks for their papers. They go pale. Then he laughs at his own joke and hands the papers back. But others are taken away. Few will know the bitterness of losing at the last minute.

The plane finally appears. There is excitement. Little girls hastily put on their hats; mothers make a last minute fuss over wailing infants.

But on and on goes the search of the luggage, one passenger at a time. On and on go the questions. Another hour passes, yet another, and you realize this is going on every day and will be for months.
Many children are wailing now. Refugees watch with hawklike intensity every move on the airstrip. When will the luggage go aboard? When will the plane be called? It is now a few minutes before 7 p.m.
The customs and G-2 people finally have finished. The plane is called. Passengers' names are called out for boarding, one at a time, 110 of them.

Finally you hear your name. Hastily you gather in your bit of hand luggage and head for the ramp. You get in your seat in the crowded tourist plane, and you wait again. It is hot. The plane has been in the blazing sun for hours.
Why don't they close the door? Why don't they take the ramp away? All eyes are on the door. Then the ramp moves.
An audible sigh goes up in the plane. The pretty stewardess slams the door. The air vents go on and there is relief from the oppressive heat. But the plane is not moving. It will not be safe for anyone until it is in the air.

Now all eyes are turned toward the crowds of Cubans lining the railings on the terminal roof, waving goodbye. There are no smiles and children. Many of those left behind weep. Now the plane is aloft, and the tension lifts. You can feel it.
Finally, the plane touches down in Miami. You join the others in a spontaneous outburst of applause. The steward, smiling, says "Welcome to the United States," and you and the others applaud wildly again. You go down the steps.

Next to you is a weary looking man, in tears. He releases his grip on the hands of a child and kneels on the concrete, crosses himself, and says a prayer.
Another holds a box of the rum they sell travelers. On the box it says: "Visit Cuba, land of happy people."
And you remember the tears on the faces of those you left behind.

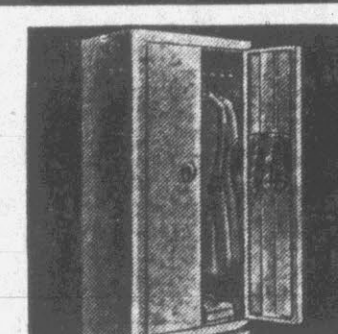

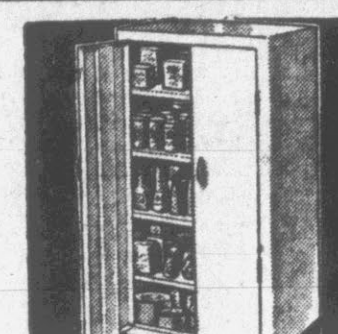

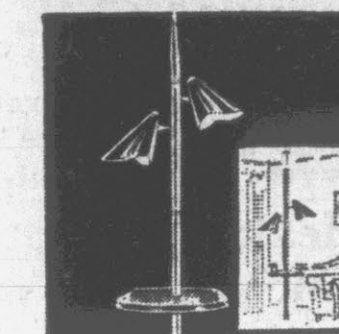

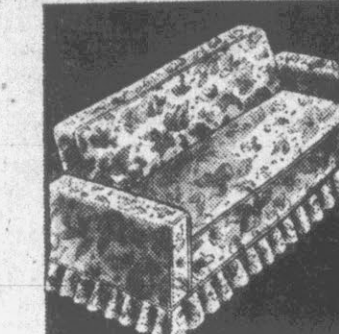

Preached Secession As Though Crusade

By TOM HENSHAW
Associated Press Staff Writer
They called him the "Peter the Hermit" of secession and Edmund Ruffin filled the role in every way.
He loved his South and hated the North and preached secession as the Peter of an earlier day loved his Cross and hated the infidel and preached a crusade.
But Ruffin survived his holocaust and that was his tragedy.
In the early days of the Civil War, Ruffin, a wealthy Virginia planter, traveled the length and breadth of the South, demanding, cajoling and organizing in the name of Southern independence.
(He went North but once. In New York his luggage disappeared, thus confirming a long-held opinion of Yankees.)
He showed up in Charles Town, Va., for the hanging of John Brown and, perhaps for a brief moment, the yes of the fanatic of abolition and the fanatic of slavery met across the scaffold.
While in Charles Town, Ruffin came into possession of several pikes with which Brown had armed his followers. He carried one of them throughout his travels. It bore the label: "Sample of the favors designed for us by our Northern brethren."
On election day 1860 Ruffin dutifully cast his vote against Lincoln and boarded a train for South Carolina, exiling himself from his native state until it "came to its senses."
"The defense of the South, I verily believe, is to be secured only through the lead of South Carolina," he said. "As old as I am (66), I have come to join you in that lead."
He was guest of honor at the South Carolina secession convention, sitting proudly on the dais like an Old Testament prophet, clad in gray homespun, long white hair tumbling to his shoulders, clutching a "John Brown pike" in his hand.
Ruffin was in Charleston — to "commit a little treason" — when the Fort Sumter crisis came to a head. Pike, carpetbag and musket in hand, he was off to join the Palmetto Guards.
His comrades in arms, young enough to be his grandchildren, gave him the honor of firing the first shot from their battery at the fort. He was also the first man inside Sumter after its fall.

Next, Ruffin appeared at the Battle of Bull Run, carrying his supplies—a big round cheese and a keg of hard crackers—and seeking his friends of the Palmetto Guards.
He rode into battle on a cannon and fired a shot that landed in the midst of the retreating Union army. Later, he surveyed his damage and expressed disappointment that he had killed only two Yankees.
After Bull Run, the war became a young man's game and Ruffin retired to his plantation to watch in virtual helplessness as the world he had ordained collapsed about his head.
One of his three sons was killed in battle and he was forced to evacuate his home when the hated Yankees moved in. They wrecked the place and wrote obscenities on the walls.
For days after Lee's surrender, Ruffin brooded and looked about him at a world filled with despised Yankee conquerors. One fine morning he retired to his room and penned his last defiance:
"And now with my latest writing and utterance. . . I here repeat. . . my unmitigated hatred to yankee rule. . . and the perfidious, malignant and vile Yankee race."
Then he put a bullet in his head.

cal to assume that Communists outside Russia will have enough sense to do things right by themselves.
So the program reassures them: "The Communist party of the Soviet Union will continue to strengthen the unity and cohesion of the ranks of the great army of Communists of all countries."
Boiled down to one sentence this means for unnumbered years ahead Communists everywhere around the world, with Russian help will be trying to knock off one country after another—hoping all eventually will fall under the Red banner.

United Nations is another. It has been part of the trend toward universalism which has lessened interest in patriotic nationalism this country— but times are changing. More and more young people have come to reject the intellectual mores of the 1920's and 1930's. They are not bound by the shibboleth of internationalism. They may, in time, wave a flag. The pendulum does swing.

GREENSBORO (AP)—The East and West high school all-star football teams get in their final practice tonight before Friday night's 13th renewal of the Tar Heel classic.

Fishing Roundup

MOREHEAD CITY, July 31 — Kingfish catches were running heavier here over the weekend, up to 14 pounds per fish.

ATLANTIC BEACH—Headboat fishing returned to normal, with both the Danco and the Carolina Queen reporting big catches, including red snapper.

HARKER'S ISLAND — Small boat catches slowed considerably — plenty of Spanish and kings still in the "hook-of-the-cape" but they just aren't hitting.

MARSHALLBERG — It was 22 kings and "lots of blues" for Mr. May and party aboard Capt. Neal Jones "Down Easter".

ATLANTIC—Flounder are getting bigger, averaging two pounds. Gray trout fishing is improving, with the big 3-4 pounders moving in.

DAVIS — Surf fishermen John Alvin and party, of Kinston, "caught so many mixed fish they didn't know what to do with them."

Football Notes

CAROLINA—How will the Tar Heels do? This was not an uncommon question asked during the relaxing days on the strand and elsewhere in vacationland.

The answer is: just fine, we think and hope. Ray Farris is going to be a poised and polished senior quarterback who will throw for great yardage and his share of touchdowns.

There will be few linebacking centers better than Joe Craver, a mighty lot of football player. And Jim LeCompte will be a sensational guard, to be talked about in game after game.

EARLY ATTRACTION — The Tar Heels will get one of their biggest challenges in their opening game, N.C. state, narrow and controversial 3-0 winner last season and favorite to win the conference title this year, comes here on Sept. 30.

This will be the first opportunity of fans in this area to see the 1961 Roman Gabriel, State's brilliant All-America quarterback. He and the Wolfpack will have a game under their belts playing the week before, but in far away Wyoming.

Yanks Take A Doubleheader To Increase Their Lead In AL Race

College All-Stars To Play Philadelphia Eagles Fri.

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN Associated Press Sports Writer CHICAGO (AP) — The College All Stars, three weeks of hard-nosed training behind them, will try to bedazzle the Philadelphia Eagles with wide open football Friday night at Soldier Field in the 28th annual midsummer game.

Three passers—Norm Sneed of Wake Forest, Bill Kilmer of UCLA and Tom Matte of Ohio State—are expected to operate mainly out of double-wing spreads and the short-punt formations.

Whisler Leading In EAG Tourney

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Navy Comdr. Bill Whisler is the current leader in the Eastern Amateur Golf Tournament, but few people, including Whisler, expect his lead to hold for long.

Waiting to try their luck on the Elizabeth Manor golf course in the next three days are some of the country's best amateurs. Many have already posted sub-par rounds in practice.

While Whisler was shooting two over par 72 Wednesday and grabbing the lead after the first qualifying round, some of the players who will be in action later this week were posting better scores in practice.

Trailing Whisler after the initial round of play were a pair of Virginia Beach golfers, Claude King and Billy McClanan. Both carded three over par 73.

Gastonia Gains Region 3 Title

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — The Gastonia Teen-er League baseball team, unbeaten in its last 22 tournament games, powered its way into the national finals again Wednesday night, spanking Greenville, Tenn., 9-0.

Gastonia goes to Hershey, Pa., later this month for a second shot at the national title it won last year.

Candler Bumgardner hurled a one-hitter in the Wednesday night windup of the Region 4 tournament here. Earlier Wednesday, Greenville moved into the finals with a 5-0 victory over Calhoun, Ga.

Curt Simmons, cast off by the Phils last spring, was the second most effective southpaw in the National League last season. He had a 3.06 earned run record, and now is a regular starter for St. Louis.

Fans have marked this down as one of the great attractions of the year. They are not likely to be disappointed. By game time tickets will be at a premium, which is a tip to the wise.

The fewest points allotted opposing National Football League champions as favorites in the history of the series, which is sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities Inc.

The All Stars, never installed as a choice by oddsmakers, have won eight of the 27 games played and battled the pros to two ties.

The collegians' running attack lost some glitter when Graham decided not to take a chance using Tommy Mason of Tulane, who suffered a pinched neck nerve in the All Stars impressive 14-14 tie last week with the Chicago Bears in a full-game scrimmage.

Also not sure is fullback Art Baker of Syracuse. He has an assortment of bumps and bruises. The Eagles are to arrive in Chicago today from their Hershey, Pa., camp and take workouts at night in Soldier Field.

Their new head coach, Nick Skorich, who succeeded retired Buck Shaw, still has not decided between quarterback Sonny Jurgensen or King Hill as the starter.

Wayne Newberry hit the two-run homer that scalped Raleigh for the Burlington tribe. The Indians had brought in one run in the ninth to tie the score.

Seven runs in the first two innings gave Greensboro the nucleus for its 13-3 slaughter of Durham. Ron Solomini smacked a grand slam homer to climax a five-run first inning.

Winston-Salem had to work right up to the end of the ball game to save a 5-1 lead built up in early innings. The Tobs put together four hits, a walk, and three errors for four runs in the seventh, and a tied score. Jim Rantz wild pitched with two out and runners on third and second, gave Winston-Salem its winning run.

The games tonight: Durham at Greensboro, Burlington at Raleigh and Wilson at Winston-Salem.

In New York, the Yankees increased their American League lead over Detroit to two and a half games with a 6-5 and 12-5 doubleheader sweep over Kansas City as Mickey Mantle walloped his 40th home run.

In Boston, rookie second baseman Chuck Schilling helped the Red Sox down Los Angeles twice 7-2 and 8-7 with a rally-starting single and a game winning home run.

In Cleveland, Chicago outfielder Jim Landis smacked two homers, the second one setting up another White Sox triumph after the Indians had won the opener 3-2.

In Detroit, Washington rookie first baseman Bud Zipfel belted his first major league home run to give the Senators an 11-inning 6-2 victory after the Tigers had won the first game, 4-3 on pinch hitter Charlie Maxwell's three-run homer.

A little single hit by Dave Philley in Baltimore, a 41-year-old pinch-hitter batting for Marv Breeding, drove in Jim Busby with the run that gave the Orioles a 4-3 second game triumph after Minnesota had won the first game of the two-night twin bill, 4-2.

In the National League, Cincinnati regained first place from Los Angeles, winning two games from Philadelphia, 4-2 and 3-2, while the Dodgers were being shut out by San Francisco 6-0. St. Louis defeated Pittsburgh 4-2 and Milwaukee beat Chicago 4-2. The Braves and Cubs played an 11-inning 7-7 tie in the second game of their doubleheader, ended by darkness.

The Yankees perfect day was marred by Whitey Ford's failure to record 20 victories. The little left-hander went into the ninth inning of the opener leading 5-3, but pinch hitter Haywood Sullivan hit a two-run homer to tie the score.

Luis Arroyo, brilliant relief pitcher, had to rescue Ford before the inning was over.

The Yankees won in their half of the ninth with the bases full and one out, catcher Joe Pignatano dropped third baseman Wayne Causey's throw of a grounder hit by Bob Cerv. It was the fourth Kansas City error and the Yankees' fifth unearned run.

The Yankees combed four Kansas City pitchers for 17 hits in the finale as Ralph Terry coasted to his seventh victory. Mantle got his homer in the first inning to put him in a tie with Roger Maris at 40 apiece, leaving them 17 games ahead of the pace set by Babe Ruth when the Babe hit his record 60 homers in 1927.

The Tigers were trailing 3-1 when Zipfel, Washington's 22-year-old first baseman recently brought up from Houston, let a throw drop that would have ended the inning. Chico Fernandez followed with a single and Maxwell followed with his three-run homer. Zipfel atoned for his lapse in the 11th inning of the second game when he smacked a home run of Phil Regan to break a 2-2 tie. Washington followed with three more runs to seal the verdict.

Held hitless until the eighth by Baltimore's Chuck Estrada, the Twins erupted for four runs in the ninth of the opener.

Schilling's eighth-inning single drove in the first of five Red Sox runs that secured Ike Delock's sixth victory in the opener.

Jim Grant pitched a six-hitter and outfielder Willie Kirkland hit his 21st home run in Cleveland's opening victory over the White Sox. Landis drove in three runs with a single and his second home run of the night to lead the White Sox to their split.

Odd Place For A Golf Shot

Mrs. Jack Herron of Modesto, Calif., shoots from the roof of the mens locker room on a golf course at Pasadena during the Women's Western Golf Association tourney. Her tee shot on the par three ninth hole hit a concrete floor next to the building and bounced onto the roof. A ladder was found and Mrs. Herron climbed to the roof and made the shot going one over par on the hole. Oddly, this particular spot wasn't marked out of bounds of the course. (AP Wirephoto)

UNC's McGuire Signs With Warriors

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Warriors of the National Basketball Association have reached into the college ranks for a new coach, hiring highly-successful Frank McGuire of North Carolina. "I got the best coach for my best player, Wilt Chamberlain," said Warriors' owner Eddie Gottlieb today after announcing that McGuire had been signed to a three-year contract. Gottlieb was disappointed when the club finished second last year and was eliminated by Syracuse in the playoffs. Gottlieb disclosed the contract also calls for McGuire to serve as a vice president of the Warriors, a newly created position. Salary terms were not disclosed but Gottlieb said the contract would make McGuire "one of the highest paid coaches in the country." McGuire, who led North Carolina to a perfect 1956-57 season with 32 victories and the NCAA championship, had been at the Chapel Hill school since 1952 and still had two years to go on his current contract. But officials released him from it. There had been speculation that McGuire might leave North Carolina. The university announced several weeks ago a deemphasis of basketball following the point-shaving scandals in which two North Carolina players were involved. Gottlieb said that he had about 25 candidates for the job left vacant after last season by the resignation of Neil Johnston, now with the Pittsburgh Rens of the American Basketball League. McGuire, 46, who began coaching in 1937 at Xavier High School in New York which he had attended, compiled a record of 126-39 there in 10 seasons. At his alma mater, St. John's University, he racked up a 103-38 record in five seasons. His teams at North Carolina won 164 games and lost 58 in nine seasons. Gottlieb said that McGuire would relieve him of some of his executive duties as vice president. "It was by chance," said Gottlieb, "that I ran into McGuire in New York last May. We got to talking and he told me he was interested in the job. I've known him for 25 years, ever since he played with Brooklyn in the old American League. "He's one of the best in the business anywhere—for coaching ability, personality, experience and ability to handle men. I was determined to get somebody with plenty of experience who could handle players. Neil Johnston had never handled players before taking the Warriors' job (two years ago)." In signing McGuire, Gottlieb strayed from his usual practice of short contracts. Johnston was signed on a year-to-year basis. When Johnston, a former Warriors' star, left after two seasons as coach of the club, there were reports of friction between him and Chamberlain, the sensational 7-1 high scorer who holds several

NBA records. "It is tough to coach a team when one player is given so many privileges," Johnston had said in apparent reference to Chamberlain. McGuire will have virtually the same team back with the possible exception of high-scoring Paul Arizin, who announced his retirement. But Arizin, who combined with Chamberlain to give the Warriors the best 1-2 scoring punch in the NBA, could change his mind. At Chapel Hill, N.C., Chancellor William B. Aycock announced Wednesday night that McGuire will leave the university, effective Aug. 31. The University News Bureau said it had been planned to make simultaneous announcements in Chapel Hill and in Philadelphia today. Chancellor Aycock decided to go ahead Wednesday night in response to a number of inquiries. Aycock insisted the university's de-emphasis program on basketball, adopted in the wake of the national game-fixing scandals, had no bearing on McGuire's decision to give up his $11,000 a year post. The chancellor said it was a matter of an offer from the Warriors too attractive to turn down. An indication that the parting was amiable was the announcement that the McGuire family—a wife, two daughters and a son—plans to live in Chapel Hill, with McGuire returning to home base during the off-season of the year. Dean Smith, a Kansan who has been assistant coach for three years, was tapped to guide the Tar Heels. His present salary of $8,000 will be hiked, by an amount still to be determined, Aycock said. Smith will be assisted by Kenneth Roseman, who will continue as freshman coach. McGuire, whose Irish temper showed itself in verbal clashes with Atlantic Coast Conference officials, came to Chapel Hill in 1952. He led his 1956-57 Tar Heels to the national championship. The past season had its low moments for McGuire and his Tar Heels. The NCAA slapped probation on the team for recruiting irregularities. Because of the probation the Tar Heels withdrew from the ACC tournament, after a 12-2 conference mark and a 19-4 over-all record. Later, three players — Lou Brown, Doug Moe and Ray Stanley — were implicated in various degrees in the game-fixing scandals. Rumors that McGuire would step into professional ranks cropped up, but he battled them down. Aycock said McGuire, who had rejected other offers without even discussing them with him, felt the latest Warrior bid was too good to refuse. While reluctant to lose McGuire Aycock said, "We do not, however, wish to prevent his acceptance of this unusually attractive position. We have agreed to release him, effective Aug. 31, 1961, with regret but with our deepest good wishes."

Cincinnati Wins Both Ends Of Doubleheader

By JOE REICHLER Associated Press Sports Writer The Cincinnati Reds are in position today to become the first team in baseball history to sweep a full season schedule from a rival club. The Reds not only made it 14 in a row from Philadelphia by winning both ends of a two-night doubleheader Wednesday 4-2 and 3-2, but surged back into first place in the National League by one game over Los Angeles. The Dodgers, who had led by a half game, were shut out 6-0 by the one-hit pitching of San Francisco right-hander Juan Marichal. St. Louis downed Pittsburgh 4-2. Milwaukee defeated Chicago by the same 4-2 score in the first game of their doubleheader. The second game was halted after 11 innings by darkness with the score tied at 7-7. New York's Yankees opened a 2½ game lead over Detroit in the American League. They swept a pair from Kansas City 6-5 and 12-5 while the Tigers divided a twin bill with Washington. Detroit won the first game 4-3 but the Senators took the second, 6-2 in 11 innings. Boston won two from Los Angeles 7-2 and 8-7. Cleveland defeated Chicago 3-2 in the first game but the White Sox won the second 8-4. Minnesota and Baltimore also split. The Twins won the opener 4-3 and the Orioles took the second 4-3. Jim O'Toole (11-8) and Joey Jay (15-6) pitched the Reds' winning pitchers against the Phillies. Gordy Coleman's two-run homer, his 20th, broke up the first game. Frank Robinson's two-run single was the key hit in the second. No club ever has won all 22 games from a rival. The 1909 Cubs had a 21-1 record against Boston and the 1938 Pirates and 1945 Cubs had 21-1 marks against the Reds. In the American League, the Yankees in 1927 took 21 from St. Louis but the Browns beat the Yanks in the 22nd game. Tommy Davis' fifth inning single ruined Marichal's bid for a no-hitter. It was the second shut-out in a row for the young Giant right-hander who walked two and struck out 11. Felipe Alou drove in four runs with a pair of homers. Johnny Podres lost it. Joe Cunningham's three-run homer in the seventh inning gave the Cards' Larry Jackson his seventh victory. Bobby Shantz, in relief, took the loss. Frank Thomas' two-run single in the eighth overcame a 2-1 Chicago lead in the first game. Hank Aaron's grand slammer gave the Braves a 7-4 lead in the nightcap, but the Cubs tied the score on Billy Williams' third homer of the day and Goerge Altman's two-run single. The suspended game will be made up on Sunday, Sept. 3.

Rusk Will Urge Allies Lay Plans For Soviet Threat

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk plans to urge Allied foreign ministers in Paris next weekend to work out detailed agreements on precise steps the Western powers would take to meet any specific threat the Soviet Union and East Germany may pose to the security of West Berlin.

Paris at midnight tonight, following a final meeting with President Kennedy late this afternoon on Berlin crisis planning.

Saturday he will meet with the foreign ministers of Britain, France and West Germany in the first of a series of conferences on the Berlin situation. The sessions will continue through Monday. Rusk plans to meet Tuesday with the North Atlantic Treaty conference and later with U.S. ambass sadors in Europe.

The Paris conference, apart from the Berlin situation, may also discuss Far Eastern problems. Rusk was planning to take as one of his advisers John M. Steeves, deputy assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs. Presumably the Central Asian issues taken up at Paris will be those of Laos and South Viet Nam.

The Allied ministers are reported planning to concentrate their Paris discussions on contingency planning—that is, what the Western powers should do in response to any pressures or threats which Soviet Premier Khrushchev may apply later this year in line with his announced intention to sign a separate peace treaty with Communist East Germany.

West Berlin.

The range of possible countermeasures is reported to include economic sanctions, such as a clampdown on trade with East Germany; diplomatic action, including protests and military moves which could include the use of force should the Communists forcibly cut off the traffic flow.

Indications are that the foreign ministers also will consider the advisability, and perhaps the time and place of a Western summit meeting later this year which would bring together President Kennedy, French President Charles de Gaulle, Prime Minister Harold Macmillan of Great Britain and German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

Congo Premier 'Vows' To Suppress Katanga

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Backed by a near-unanimous parliamentary vote of confidence in his new coalition government, Congo Premier Cyrille Adoula today vowed to suppress the secession of rich Katanga Province "in the days immediately to come."

In a firm inaugural address to the two houses of Parliament that approved his government Wednesday Adoula denounced Katanga President Moïse Tshombe and Belgian commercial interests in the province for committing "a great wrong against the Congo."

Gizenga's leftist Stanleyville regime joined in supporting Adoula, 39, who was the personal choice of President Joseph Kasavubu to head a unity government.

Gizenga, who stayed in Stanleyville and said illness prevented him from attending the Parliament session, was named one of three deputy premiers. Christophe Gbenye, a key member of Gizenga's regime, was appointed interior minister with control of the nation's loosely organized police.

"Neither Tshombe nor certain of his ministers nor the Union Miniers (the Belgian mining company in the province) nor the Belgians behind the Katanga secession can prevent the Congolese people from recovering their rightful heritage," Adoula declared.

Delegates representing Antoine

Adoula told newsmen only that it would be "normal" for the leftist leader to come to Leopoldville now. He declined to elaborate.

Gizenga claimed the premiership for himself after the slaying of Patrice Lumumba, whose deputy premier he had been, and won recognition from the Communist bloc and several African nations. But since his parliamentary deputies had voted for the Adoula cabinet, it seemed unlikely Gizenga could stay out.

Realistic Mock War Next Week

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The United States flexes its Army and Air Force muscles next week in the biggest mock war on civilian soil in a decade.

Called Exercise Swift Strike, the operation begins Sunday and lasts through Aug. 20. Most of the action, including air drops of 15,000 paratroopers, will take place between this huge military base and Ft. Jackson in South Carolina.

The realistic, "free play" maneuvers are designed as a test to determine the ability of military units to act in an emergency.

In free play exercises, commanders are authorized to move their troops and equipment exactly as they would under combat situations.

The display will include both active and National Guard units. It comes in the wake of President Kennedy's proposal to bolster America's military might to meet the challenges in Berlin and elsewhere around the world.

Under present plans in the simulated war, Charlotte in southern North Carolina, will be held by an enemy.

Firemen Respond To Two Alarms

Greenville firemen responded to two calls yesterday, the first to 1903 East Fifth St. at 4:50 p.m., and the second to 608 West Fourth St., at 6 p.m.

Fire officers said the East Fifth St. call was to an oil hot water heater which flooded.

No damage was reported.

The call to West Fourth St. was received, according to firemen, when food in the oven of the kitchen stove caught fire.

WEST BERLIN ■ ITS PEOPLE AT WORK AND PLAY AS EAST-WEST TENSIONS RISE

PEACEFUL Waiting for their refreshments, a West Berlin family watches the strollers from their table at an outdoor cafe on the Kurfuerstendamm, the city's main thoroughfare.

HOMeward BOUND. West Berlin factory workers on their way home at change of shift.

The West Berliners have calluses on their nerves.

Years of Communist pressure have given them the ability to take the recurrent crises in their stride. They go on working, playing, loving, marrying and bringing up families. The city fathers even look far into the future with ambitious rebuilding plans.

The vigorous 2 1/4 million West Berliners live in a modern city throbbing with life that still has many scars to recall the terror of war.

With them are 11,000 American, British and French troops and their families—the Western protective forces whose presence has so far deterred communist ambitions to gobble up the whole city.

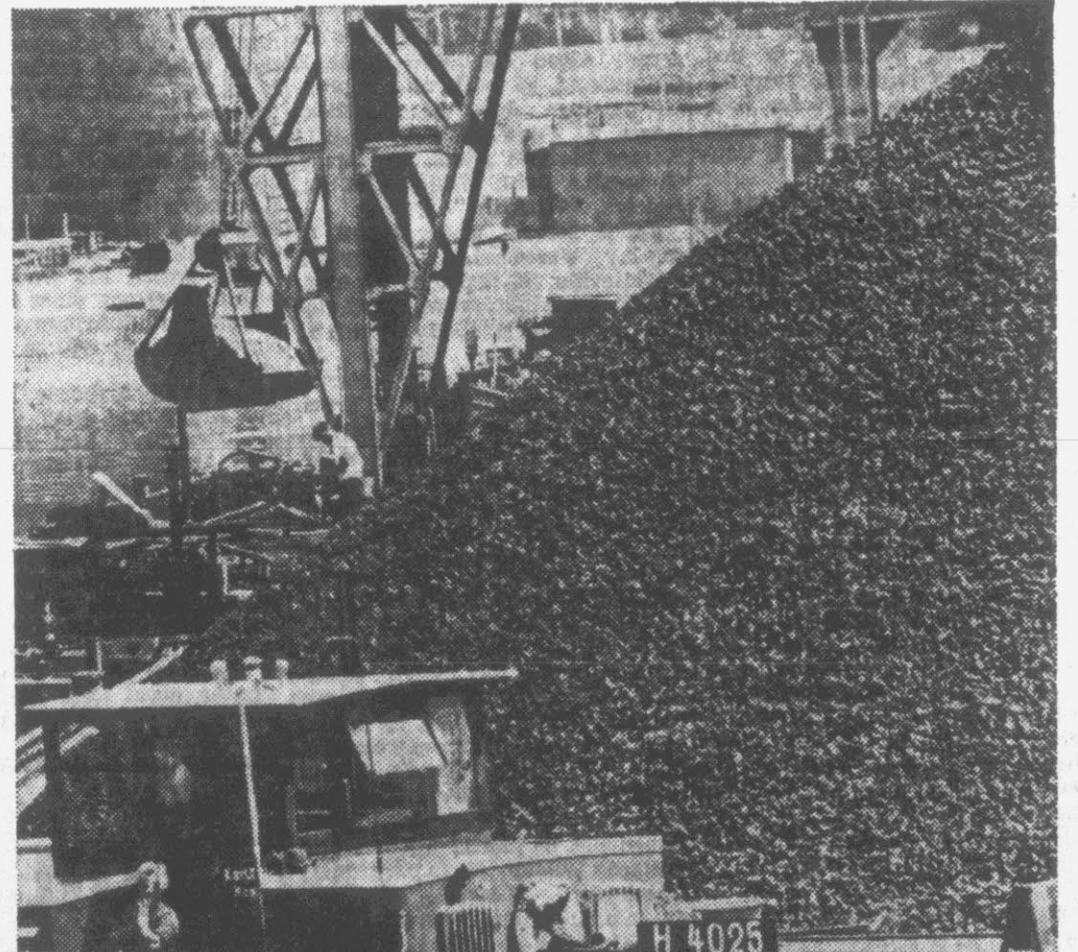

These latest pictures show West Berliners and the Allies at work and play under the shadow of the red menace.

Car arriving from Western Germany and heading for West Berlin is checked by customs at Dreilinden, central checkpoint for the 110 miles between West Berlin and Western Germany.

A Violent End For Visitors In Strange Land

ASSEMBLY LINE REPAIRS — Four fishing vessels line up for reconditioning and repair at huge drydock of Bethlehem Steel Company's Baltimore yard.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
They came from across the nation, from varying walks of life, strangers anxious to discover together the wonders of a world many had only read about.

Across the sea to Europe they traveled, to England, The Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Rhine River Valley and Bavaria, to Vienna, to Italy, and then to Switzerland.

And there, as their luxurious bus splashed along a rain-soaked mountain road beside beautiful Lake Lucerne, their tour ended violently Wednesday. The bus plunged into the lake, with 16 of the 38 aboard drowning.

Each paid $1,027-up for the 43-day tour sponsored by Gateway Holiday Tours of New York. Many were school teachers. All but five of the 35 Americans aboard were women.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Work of Connellsville, Pa. were among those who escaped death. They are newlyweds, and the trip was a part of their honeymoon.

Mrs. William H. Swan, the bride's mother, received a phone call from her daughter a few hours after the accident.

"She told me, 'We are safe,'" the worried mother said.

Mrs. Swan said she had a strange premonition something might happen to the couple.

"Each letter we received told of their happiness and their enjoyment of the honeymoon," she said. "It all seemed too nearly perfect."

Vynita Winter, 56, of Milwaukee, Wis., also had a premonition.

A travel agent who arranged the tour for Mrs. Winter and her sister, Nora Pannier, 64, said Mrs. Winter became concerned when a hitch in travel plans developed.

Told they would have to travel to Europe by plane rather than by ship as planned, Mrs. Winter said: "This is not a good sign. Maybe we shouldn't go."

The sisters, both school teachers, were among the survivors.

The accident was a tragic parting for many old friends. Miss Anna Mary Speck, 48, of Lorain, Ohio and Julia T. Tschant of St. Mary's, Ohio, planned the tour for a long time. Both were teachers.

Miss Speck was among those believed dead. Mrs. Tschant, a widow, survived.

Miss Louise McMurray and Martha Isaacs, of Washington, D.C., had worked together for 10 years. When Miss McMurray retired, she moved to Greensboro, N.C. They traveled together on the tour. Mrs. Isaacs lived. Miss McMurray died.

Miss Julia R. Schull and Pauline Q. Hudson, teachers at Keith Jr. High School in Altoona, Pa., also traveled together. Miss Schull died. Mrs. Hudson was among the living.

Three Norristown, Pa. travelers survived the plunge. They were Harmena Hunsberger, a widow, her daughter, Nancy, 17, and a friend—Helen Eigelson, wife of a Bell Telephone Co. employee.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lampton of Glendale, Calif., an elderly married couple, died together. Lampton, in his 60s, had retired only recently from his printing business.

It was the first experience with tragedy for Gateway Tours, which began operation only four years ago. In numbed sadness, its staff worked through the night, answering telephone calls from anxious, often sobbing friends and relatives of the travelers.

"We deal in pleasure," said Eric de Meyenburg, president of the company.

"We arrange for people to enjoy themselves, we send them on tours, we hear their happy remarks about exciting adventures anticipated and lived."

"Now comes this," he added sadly. "I am not used to such matters."

Quick Market Reaction To Defense Spending Plan

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—When the stock market closed Tuesday, July 25, the Dow Jones price index of 30 leading industrial stocks stood at 686.37.

That night President Kennedy told the nation he proposed to step up defense spending sharply and increase the size of the armed forces.

When the market closed Tuesday, Aug. 1, the index stood at 713.94, a record high.

Congress had been quick to start legislative moves to put the President's plans in motion. Stock traders had been even quicker to put their own evaluation on what lies ahead for business.

This doesn't mean that prices necessarily will advance steadily nor that stock traders may have second thoughts now and then. The President's move, however, was just what the market needed to move it out of a period of hesitation.

For business, as distinguished from the stock market, the new arms buildup merely adds momentum to a move already under way. Even before the President spoke, business fully expected steadily increasing activity in the months ahead.

And the extra government spending will come at a time when industry is particularly ready and able both to meet the demands to be put upon it and to profit from the government's action.

Many industries have idle capacity. This means that any increase in demand can be easily handled. Also, the nation's stubborn total of unemployment means that the manpower, except for some specialized skills, is available.

For stockholders the prospects are even brighter. Profits already have started to rise from their recession setback. As sales rise, profits should rise at an even faster pace. That's what stock traders are looking for.

A call of reserves and militia could hurt some companies if they lost key men. But here, too, the growing labor force and the large number of jobless men means business can adjust more easily than if the Berlin crisis had come during boom times and a labor shortage.

Most firms have their inventories in good shape. Excess stocks have been used up. Supplies are available if business spurts.

Companies with overseas connections also see more opportunities in the offing, now that the threat of a possible trade war between two rival European blocs seems dim.

The move of England, Denmark, Norway and Ireland to seek close ties with the Common Market nations—France, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg—forecasts further growth in the already booming European economy. That can mean more demand for American industrial materials and perhaps for American consumers goods to be sold to more prosperous Europeans.

All this is why the stock market has taken on a rosy glow. But Wall Street is a place of quickly changing moods. And the cautious will remember that in today's world there are many probabilities but few iron clad certainties.

Huntiny-Fishing Licenses Now On Sale In County

The 1961-1962 hunting and fishing licenses are now on sale at issuing agencies in Pitt County, according to an announcement today by Pitt Wildlife Protector J. O. Teel.

Teel reported that 23 agents through Pitt are selling licenses this year, and urged sportsmen to buy their licenses early. Licenses for 1960-1961 expired July 31, he noted.

State residents combination hunting and fishing are now $6.25, he explained, while State Resident Hunting licenses are $4.25. County hunting licenses are $1.65.

Teel, reporting that hunting and trapping regulations for the coming season are essentially the same as last year, urged license buyers to ask for a copy of the 1961-1962 Hunting and Trapping Regulations at the time they purchase licenses. The Wildlife Protector explained that by obtaining a copy of the regulations, hunters can be sure of the regulations and dates of the various seasons.

Two Driverless Cars Collided

An estimated $40 damage resulted yesterday when two driverless cars collided near the intersection of Evans and 10th Sts., police reported today.

Investigators said a car owned by Charles C. Jackson, 46, of Route 2, Greenville was being serviced at a filling station at the intersection. The vehicle rolled from the grease pit, it was reported, then crossed 10th Street and struck a vehicle parked at another service station.

The vehicle hit by the Jackson auto was owned by James R. Hudson, 41, of 2703 Jackson Drive, it was noted.

No damage was done to the run-a-way vehicle while an estimated $40 damage resulted to the Hudson vehicle.

No charges were placed.

Field Marshal To Leave Papers

WARWICK, England (AP)—Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery promised Wednesday he will bequeath to his old regiment the surrender document given him by German armies at the end of World War II.

Opening a new museum for the Royal Warwickshire Regiment, Montgomery said the museum will get the document in his will.

After the war, "Laborite legislators tried in vain to make Montgomery put it in National Archives. He refused and was supported by the then prime minister, Sir Winston Churchill, who said: 'Anybody who took the surrender of two million of the enemy in wartime is entitled to keep the receipt.'"

Chemicals also were strong as Du Pont rose around 2 points. Advances of a point or so were made by Eastman Kodak and Union Carbide.

Steels perked up as U.S. Steel rose last week on news of great-public added a major fraction.

Aircraft-missile issues, which rose last week on news of re-reat-defense spending, were up again with Boeing ahead nearly a point. United Aircraft, aided by a $69.9 million contract, also moved up, as did Douglas.

Chrysler took the lead in a firm motors section, rising around a point amid street gossip of further changes in top management.

Ford and GM also rose. Airlines were quiet, despite the latest fuss over plane hijacking.

Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at noon was up 5.81 at 716.27, well above the record closing high achieved Tuesday of 713.94.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were mostly higher in quiet trading.

CD Meeting . . .

Aid, and to work on educating the public on information necessary to know in case of an emergency.

Rose stated today that a public meeting will be held in the future on what the general public can do. "We are going to ask for an intensive program in the schools on dissemination of facts, as well as trying to get teachers to help with this program," Rose stated.

"We hope to get a first aid and home nursing course set up permanently in every community," he stated.

Mrs. Walter Taylor, executive secretary of the American Red Cross, and Mrs. Phyllis Marlin, chairman of home nursing for the Red Cross, appeared to inform the group on the home nursing and first aid programs. Mrs. Marlin said there are eight instructors prepared to teach care of the sick and injured, which include disaster nursing and improvisation of utensils as well as first aid.

She noted a problem in transporting equipment, especially beds, from place to place when holding a course and asked if permanent centers for the course could be set up.

Fourteen students are the maximum for the 14-hour nursing course, which usually meets about two hours in the evenings. In order to set a course up, leaders should first get 14 interested people for a class, and then contact Mrs. Taylor with the Red Cross to provide an instructor. There is very little expense involved for those giving or taking the course. The same procedure is to be used for organizing a class on first aid instruction.

Volunteers Save Burning Building

A stockhouse and stable building combination was saved from destruction by the Eastern Pines Community Volunteer fire department, which responded to a call to the burning structure about a half-mile east of the Greenville city limits yesterday about 8 p.m.

Fire Chief Hugh Hardee Jr. reported that the stable was owned by Mrs. W. J. McGlohorn and located just off U.S. 264 by-pass.

He reported that there was "little damage" done to the structure. Approximately 25 firemen responded to the fire which is thought to have started in hay in the structure, according to the chief.

The structure was insured, he added.

Engineer Says Watershed Project Half Completed

Engineer Eugene Mills reported Tuesday that the Grindle Creek Watershed project in northern Pitt County is about 50 per cent complete with the construction deadline falling Dec. 26.

In a report to the regular meeting of the Pitt County Soil and Water Conservation District Board of Supervisors, Mills said the project will be speeded up in mid-August by the addition of two draglines to the job. The two additional machines will bring the total to 10.

In reporting construction is about half complete, Mills added that 70 per cent of the performance time has been used.

The contract, dated Sept. 8, allows contractor W. J. McLamb of Shallotte 462 calendar days to complete work on the 28 1/2-mile-long drainage and flood control project.

Roy Beck, Pitt work unit conservationist, told the supervisors that the preliminary report on a proposed project for the Conecote Creek watershed will be submitted to the Drainage District Commissioners the last of this month. Beck said the report will include cost estimates for lateral canals the farmers have asked to be included in the project.

Chairman Arch J. Flanagan of Farmville reported to the meeting that a request has been sent from the board of supervisors to the Pitt County Commissioners for second-floor officespace in the County Office Building for SCS, Conservation Service office manager, reported to the meeting that he has received no instructions to hire personnel to work under ASCS supervision.

Tobacco Lost In Fire At Barn

SIMPSON—An early morning fire south of here today destroyed some 500 sticks of tobacco in a curing barn on the farm of R. L. Edwards.

Simpson Rural Fire Chief Gen. Porter said his men answered a call to the Edwards farm at Hudson's Crossroads at 5:15 a.m. today.

A discussion on SCS assistance to non-farm landowners was tabled until the board's September session.

Farmers Home Administration supervisor Ben H. White told the group funds are available for soil and water conservation loans. Watershed loans, he said, can be had at an interest rate of 2.6 per cent for terms up to 50 years. Soil and water loans are available to groups or individuals at five per cent, White added.

Porter said efforts of his crew saved the barn itself with very little damage; however, the 500 sticks of tobacco, property of Robert Edwards, was described as totally lost. While the tobacco was not consumed by fire, water and smoke damage wiped out its value.

The chief said an investigation failed to determine an origin for the blaze. Edwards was running the coal-stoker curing barn at about 140 degrees when the fire broke out.
