Some Senate Republicans For JFK Foreign Aid Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—A group of Senate Republicans—admittedly a small minority of their party—rallied today to support of President Kennedy's Treasury-financed, long-term loan program for the development of struggling new nations.

Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., said there will be enough Republican votes to put over the 5-year, $8.8-billion loan program. The loan authority for the first year—$1,187,000,000—is part of this year's $4,326,500,000 foreign aid bill on which debate opened yesterday.

The big fight will come first on a proposed amendment by Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., to require the President to come back to Congress each year for appropriations to finance the fund. No votes are expected before Tuesday or Wednesday.

Allied Foreign Ministers Confer On Berlin Crisis

PARIS (AP)—The Western foreign ministers today opened a conference on the critical Berlin situation determined to resist Soviet threats but willing to negotiate.

Intelligence reports indicate that the Communist rulers of East Germany are unable to contain the growing anti-Soviet feeling there. The situation is even being compared with 1953 when the East Germans revolted briefly against the Red regime.

A revolt in East Germany would make the Berlin situation even more explosive than it now is. It would confront the Western powers with the problem of what to do should West German citizens seek to cross the frontier to aid their kinsmen in the East.

But all signs indicate negotiations were being considered on both sides. On his arrival Friday Rusk made it clear the West would talk with the Soviet Union if Moscow refrains from saber-rattling.

Underground Extremists In Algeria Attack DeGaulle

ALGIERS (AP)—Underground right-wing extremists today hooked into the cable of Radio Algiers on a midday news broadcast and launched a violent attack on French President Charles de Gaulle.

The startling broadcast, which came into the sets of listeners here, led many to believe that the extremists had seized the station itself. But they made no appearance.

Officials said the secret hook-in was done in such a manner as to throw two of the regular transmitters temporarily off the air, and permitting the extremists to give the impression they were talking from the radio station building itself.

the nursery at the 11 a.m. worship. Rev. Crawford believes "Church attending healthy Christians are happier Christians than those who neglect church services."

First Church of Christ, Scientist

The spiritual foundation of divine healing will be emphasized at Christian Science services Sunday

Included in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Spirits" is the account in Matthew of the healing by Christ Jesus of the man with the withered hand.

One of the citations to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy (p. 51) describes the basis of Jesus' healing mission in these words: "Jesus was unselfish. His spirituality separated him from sensuousness, and caused the selfish materialist to hate him; but it was this spirituality which enabled Jesus to heal the sick, cast out evil, and raise the dead."

The Golden Text is from Zechariah (4): "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

WINGS OF FAITH

WHO does not marvel at the flight of a bird? The soaring jet does not seem such a miracle. It cannot fly with the same grace and beauty and ease. Every bird must learn to fly. The mother bird pushes her fledgling out of the nest. The young bird falls helplessly until its wings discover the invisible support of the air.

If our lives are to rise beyond frail human nature, we too must learn to fly . . . on wings of faith. We must discover the invisible support of God's presence and power. Come to Church next Sunday. You can find there the invisible support of God.

Hats 'n Hair - - This Year They Go Together

THESE SHAPES ARE TOPS FOR FALL . . . NEW YORK (AP) — This year American women won't need to choose between hat designs and hair styles.

The nation's milliners have conceded to coiffures which stubbornly remain bouffant, beehive or heightened with hairpieces.

Thus fall hat creations are calculated to get along with fresh hair dos, either by covering up the whole head, or simply by tacking on somewhere, without getting into the hair's way.

Toppers like pirate bonnets are copious enough to hide ugly curlers, or infatiate enough to protect a new beauty parlor job from the client's coiffure.

Witchlike silhouettes cover hair teased into pointed head dresses. Metallic mesh fits around hairpieces such as chignons that flare out like a bridal veil. Extreme.

But extremes are important hat fashion this year. Big hats are huge. Little toppers are out of daughter's doll trunk. Sideways tams hang vertically over one ear. Textured hats are dense with fur. Plumed ones are as flamboyant as peacocks; shaggy ones as ragged as excelsior.

Like roosters' combs, little feather hats parade through the center of pretty heads. Caps drip with tassels. Toques clink with crystals. Each fall hat is drastically different from the next.

But they all abide by the new peace treaty with hair stylists. Either hats cover those lacquered locks entirely, or they become as unostentatiously a part of the coiffure as a hairpin.

Luncheon Fetes Miss Mary May

Miss Mary May, debutante, was honored Friday at a luncheon by Mrs. David A. Evans Sr. and Miss Anne Evans.

Upon arrival, Miss May was presented a corsage. Corsages were also given to other deb's—Miss Lee Lang Harrell, Miss Lou Ficklen, Miss Madge Stancill, Miss Mary Harrington and Miss Ginny James. All of Greenville; Miss Em Howell of Tarboro; Miss Anneta Jennette of Washington, and Miss Faye Moberly of Goldsboro.

The guests were greeted at the door by the hostesses and the deb's and were invited to the porch by Mrs. David Evans Jr. where Mrs. William L. Johnson and Miss Carol Ann Tadlock served tomato juice.

Mrs. Reynolds May, mother of the honoree, and Mrs. L. B. Garris, grandmother of Miss May, assisted with serving in the dining room from a table covered with a white linen and lace tablecloth. The centerpiece was an arrangement of magnolias and red roses, the traditional debutante flower. The auxiliary tables in the living room and den were covered with matching cloths and smaller arrangements of red and white flowers.

The six Greenville deb's were remembered with gifts.

Other out-of-town guests included Miss Kathy Sallie of Washington, Miss Olivia Hammond of New Bern, and Miss Ginny Eason of Tarboro.

Brush Scrubs With Suds-Sponge Blots

A new aid for homemakers is an upholstery brush with a synthetic sponge center, rimmed on three sides by bristles. It's handy for rugs and car interiors, as well as furniture.

Use it with plenty of thick soap or detergent suds, and the bristled "busy end" will take care of concentrated spot cleaning while the sponge absorbs excess moisture and speeds drying.

HOME DECORATING TODAY

By MRS. R. W. DAVENPORT

IT'S FUN TO BE YOUNG AND HAVE YOUR OWN LITTLE WORLD ALL YOUR OWN

Little boys do not require an excess of space to lay down to sleep, yet there is no reason for their quarters not looking big. For a small narrow room use a striped treatment on the floor and wall. This will give visual width. Use gay, sharp and masculine colors.

Now for your pretty little Miss. Spray-painted furniture would be nice. Use tile that looks like carpet. This can be cleaned easily and some are fire resistant. Build a little stage for the dolls in the window. Remember, it is never too early to encourage femininity. Use pastel colors and as many ruffles as you like.

If the room is for two and the space limited use a bunk or trundle bed. Let your baby grow up in a nursery almost as good as growing up in a circus. Use animal cutouts to create atmosphere. Invest in nursery furniture that can be converted into a teenage bedroom. Make a backboard for a sofa bed from the crib head and footboard. Put longer legs on the desk. Turn the toy chest into a table. A step-stool can turn into a book rack. Cover tables and desk in Formica. Later, add a rug and some chairs to comfort junior's growing pains.

The Home Furniture Store would love helping you plan for your young.—(Adv.)

Have You Ever Heard The Term Charge Accounts Anonymous?

By M. A. RAISER

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — "Charge accounts are like Topsy—they just grow." "The consumer suffers when his credit is good." "There is something immoral about always buying on the cuff." "Charge accounts seem at first to be an American problem, but they are a universal problem."

These are the views of brown-haired, blue-eyed Lois Doyle McManus, to whom is often attributed the founding of a group called Charge Accounts Anonymous.

Actually, says the attractive housewife, there isn't such an organization.

"It's merely a mental peg to cause a person to think before she buys," she explains. "I once mentioned Charge Accounts Anonymous in a speech before a credit conference in San Francisco. And I remarked that the consumer suffers when his credit is good, and IBM machines ring up interest charges."

"I merely meant to leave them laughing." Rumors Travel But the word quickly got around that she had organized Charge Accounts Anonymous and had canceled all her charge accounts.

"Neither is true," Mrs. McManus says. "What happened was that I had found my bookkeeping was a shambles because of having to care for my children, and something had to be done."

She says an investigation disclosed she was paying 18 percent a year in many cases on bills that had already been paid, because the law allows 15 percent interest a month on revolving accounts.

Cubans Bring Designs To US

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON AP Fashion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With ten dollars in their fists and their futures stuffed in suitcases, Jose Mojeno and Rafael Rivero fled from their Cuban homeland last October.

Recently they unpacked those suitcases here, along with a few fashion ideas they had stitched up in Miami in the interim. With a colorful array of suits, dresses and gowns, the young clothing manufacturers invaded the American buyers' market.

Although the team is comparatively unknown in this country, not long ago their costumes were status symbols among their own people.

Friends since boyhood, Rivero and Mojeno grew up in a middle class society. As teen-agers they began to experiment with their mutual interest in fabric and design. Mojeno designing and Rivero executing gowns for family friends. As their reputations spread, a demand for their talents forced them into business.

Their Cuban costumes of just yesterday loved smoothly fitted, beaded, jeweled, elegant costumes enough to spend up to $1200 a costume to have them.

"But so suddenly everything was different," troubled, frowning Mojeno gestures helplessly as a pretty interpreter translates for him.

Today Cuban women don't laugh or play anymore. You see them on the streets in dungarees and military uniforms. "Just say, 'There is no need to dress up in Cuba now,'" cautions Mojeno.

"The elegant women are gone." A tall, lank young blonde with black eyes spins around gracefully in a side-draped pale pink chiffon. Mojeno smiles appreciatively. "It is one of my favorites."

Eyes On Future "This is our future now. These clothes, they are our very lives. All we hope for is a little time for a little more happiness."

But talk about the old country? "Please, no, nothing political. Just say it has changed. You understand, we have relatives there."

Sale of some of those dresses among the luggage supplemented those two five dollar bills on hand. Furthermore, the foresighted young men had stashed some cash in a Miami bank for an inspirational trip to Paris.

Good work about their fashion creations had reached the Florida Gold Coast crowd ahead of them. Among their boosters was Elizabeth Arden who suggested they produce a collection for her shop. With these assets Rivero, the facturing boss, set up a manufacturing plant in a squat, unpretentious building. A dozen Cuban refugees who had cut and sewn for them in their Havana couture house are now among their 75 employees.

Like American Couture Now with the first American buyers' market past them, Mojeno and Rivero are already eyeing the big time. Until recently they idealized Paris for professional inspiration. However, the experiences of the two refugees have sharpened their appreciation for things American—including American design.

Thus their new dream in their new land where it is still possible to dream is that Mojeno and Rivero may someday move among the couturiers on Seventh Avenue here, and with the same style impact on American women's wear.

Refugee Problem For All Of U. S.

Since the end of World War II people of the United States have read about the refugee problems that have occurred in many parts of the world as displaced persons and political refugees have sought new homes.

The United States in the past has played only a secondary role in the resettlement of these refugees because of its geographical location. Now however, with the increasing number of Cuban refugees fleeing into Florida, it is becoming evident that the United States must cope with its own refugee problem on a first-hand basis.

In all probability the state of Florida, or the Miami area where the majority of the refugees are arriving, will find the problem of these new people severe as the influx continues. Certainly Florida and the nation as a whole wants to avoid the situation of congested refugee compounds such as those which existed many places in Europe immediately following World War II and to some extent still exist.

It is not enough that the United States, if it is to continue to accept these refugees, merely allow them to come into the country. It is not enough that this country merely erect compounds of refugee areas where they may stay as they arrive.

A program that is considerably more comprehensive must be worked out, and quickly, if the problem is not to become a severe one. If the influx of refugees continues, it cannot be expected that the Miami area alone, or even Florida, can effectively absorb all of the refugees. There must be places for them to live and means for them to make a living in other parts of the country. Furthermore, it does not seem wise to leave such eventual settlement of the refugees entirely to chance. Some of them have contacts in this country and plans for themselves when they arrive. Many others, however, have neither plans nor contacts to help them settle into a new life in the United States.

By its very location Florida will have to bear the major part of the burden of providing for these refugees at least initially; but the long-run responsibility should not be shouldered by Florida alone.

At Least Both Sides Are Less Apt To Err

A display of determination and an unmistakable statement of U.S. attitudes, were all taken seriously by the Soviet Union; if the relatively moderate tenor of their latest note to this country and our allies can be counted as an indicator.

The general texts of the note, released Friday, could better be described as argumentative than bellicose; there was more of an appeal to reason (their kind, of course) than threatening.

This, in addition to the official Moscow silence as regards reaction to President Kennedy's address to the nation, can be regarded as a hopeful portent for the future.

There is an understandable firmness of statement as to the Russian government's intent to attain a peace treaty with the East Germans if there can be no agreed-upon terms for all Germany.

And there's the rub. The principal terms leading to an all-German peace agreement were set by the wartime allies long ago. Crux of the accord was that such a peace would be signed after all German free elections which would determine the government with whom the peace could and would be negotiated.

That such a thing can come pass, is well-nigh impossible as long as Moscow clings to the idea of backing the Communist leadership in East Germany.

So the world is just as far from seeing a German solution as it was before this Moscow note. If there is a bright note, it is the tempering of belligerence.

We credit this to a better understanding of America's resolute position; and with this, we trust, a lessening of the chance of what is called "miscalculation" which could provoke an unwanted war.

Other than this, no runs, no hits and no errors.

Different Line Than Eisenhower

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—Stalin was always the heavy, mustache and all, looking for a poor old widow's mortgage to foreclose.

He might have divided the Western partners and picked them off one by one if he had tried the peppermint candy treatment in the first few years after the war.

But he didn't like candy. And he acted so trigger-happy he drove the Westerners into self-defense in a way he wanted least: military and economic alliances. But Nikita Khrushchev's is a different breed: More versatile, resourceful and imaginative.

He sounded like a real candyman, starting out, with his trips, quips, and antics, and his insistence on peaceful coexistence.

His biggest obstacle—as it was in the end for Stalin—was that military alliance of Western Europe.

For a time it seemed that by sheer jolly goodwill he might melt it away.

That alliance—NATO, with the United States as a partner—has never been a truly fireball arrangement.

The Allies, who had set a goal of 90 NATO divisions for themselves, right now have no more than 22.

The Russians have 175 divisions, which, although widely deployed, number 1.9 million men. The total NATO forces number about 400,000 troops.

It must have occurred to Khrushchev that here was another way, besides sweetness and light, to achieve the melting he wanted.

This was to alternate the good-natured foxy grandpa routine with threats which could hardly be ignored now when Russia has rockets which Stalin never had.

So for years Khrushchev had put on a dazzling show, switching tactics from soft to hard. And all along Berlin must have looked like a good bet to him.

Here was a city which, although its links were with the West, lay 110 miles inside Communist East Germany, a position the boy had always hoped he might some day occupy. Of course, he and the vacancy got together, and now he is the happiest youngster in the state.

But how could it happen that way? Some would say "fate"; others would say "good luck." But those who have Christian faith would certainly insist that there was a connection between the boy's dismissal and the older man's death in practically the same hour. Call it predestination or anything you care to, God is still running this world, and even the fall of a sparrow is noted by Him who calleth the stars by name.

If we are going to believe in God, let us believe in His omnipotence. For if He exists, He manages His creation.

Checks Are So Chic—

By HENRY HOWARD

Typical Attitude Found

With Berlin crisis talk hanging heavily in most places these days, it's only natural that people begin to kick around the idea of a stepped-up draft call, accompanied by a better-than-average chance of active duty for reservists.

This idea, the means through which the American people defend the right of many freedoms and liberties, seems to find at least a corner in most conversations these days. That, too, is only natural. It could affect many.

With this in mind, we set out to survey on a very small scale the feelings of some folks along this line.

Our survey carried us no further than the office walls. And we found the typical American attitude that seems to prevail these days.

We generally seem to have a knack for peering painstakingly, consciously or not, into a problem or situation in a never-ending search for the lighter side.

This is what we found. In reply to questions involving the likelihood of a particular individual's near-future military service we heard various versions of the lighter side.

"You'll probably be drafted soon," we offered to one. "Oh no," he said, "That's impossible. Mama told me I couldn't go."

Then he added: "No. Really. I wouldn't mind. I think I'd like it."

And on the heels of his closing comment, another said to him: "Well, when they come knocking on my door, I'll tell them you want to go and I don't and I'll just send them on around to your door."

These and other light comments we picked up in our brief survey. You'd think the results were disappointing.

But we found something else, too. Americans in general, it seems, just like to joke about things. Behind outspokenness we sensed a trait of real value.

In making their jokes, every single one hinted that the American position on Berlin should be one of unyielding. They were willing to do their part to preserve what can only be purchased and maintained the hard way.

Other Editors Sayings... Sound Program Needed

Rocky Mount Telegram
A familiar story is being heard in Raleigh again these days. The insurance companies are requesting another rate increase, declaring that earning records of companies justify higher auto liability rates.

This may be perfectly true; we are not in a position to dispute the contention of the state Insurance Department that such a rate increase is justified. We cannot dispute the contention that insurance companies are justified in seeking the rate hike based on their earnings.

One thing cannot be disputed, however: through the compulsory insurance law as required of motorists in North Carolina, coupled with the rate hike trend, the average motorist is caught in a bind from which there is no escape. Apparently no one in Raleigh has much sympathy for him; there has been talk of safe-driver reward plans, but thus far it has been nothing but talk.

There has been very much talk on the part of the insurance companies about what a bind they are in, and for a fact there certainly has been action taken through the Insurance Commissioner Gold and others apparently sympathetic to their cause.

But there still is little evidence that anyone is worrying too much about the lobbies little man on the highway who has to foot the bills.

He didn't ask for the compulsory auto liability insurance. The insurance companies themselves can't be accused of asking for it. Certainly it poses a big enough headache for them without adding more to their woes. Frankly speaking the insurance companies would just as soon have the whole program dispensed with.

No we're not blaming them. The trouble lies in the lack of comprehensive program in Raleigh for taking care of the safe and sane driver. The insurance companies do not oppose such a plan. They have repeatedly pointed out that need for higher rates come about through the "repeater"—he's the fellow who goes down the highway tearing up people and property. And he is the one who causes the present rates for liability insurance.

If ever a program is worked out so that safe drivers can obtain relief through discounts on their premiums, while the careless "repeater" is soaked with the difference in the cost of the premiums, then we can say the auto liability insurance program is working satisfactorily. Until that time, no such statement can be made.

More Accessories For The Auto

By ELMER ROESSNER
Fox tails have waned in popularity, but the number of other accessories for automobiles is staggering. Furthermore, the number is likely to increase.

There are so many accessories and appliances made today that Dodge has announced its 1962 Dart will have an "all-purpose instrument panel utility socket." And it's a good guess other makers will have competitive plus-ins.

The Dodge device will make it possible to plug in a wide variety of appliances easily and quickly. Among those that can be powered in that manner are: ACCESSORIES ENDLESS

Bottle warmers, including a new electric plastic-and-wool sack that hooks on to the ashtray.

An upholstery pad that circulates air through the seat. Portable radios. Tape recorders.

Electric razors. Map lights. Rear-seat reading lights.

Extension cords, with lights to flash warnings to other cars in case of a breakdown, or lights with which to examine the engine at night.

A soup or coffee warmer. Fans.

A portable refrigerator. Air pumps to inflate pneumatic mattresses, pillows, beach toys, rubber boats and other accessories.

An all-transistor portable radio. A hotdog warmer.

A citizen's band radio sending and receiving set. An evaporative air conditioner.

These are not dreams. All of these products are on the market. And if you want to know who makes them, write to Leigh Smith, Chrysler Building, New York 17.

The spectrum of the typical American attitude is indeed broad. It would be impractical to assign specific limits to the spectrum.

One extreme we noticed last night displayed the collective sympathy of several thousand Americans for a nut.

The College All-Stars and the pro champion Philadelphia Eagles had just finished the first half of the official football season opener in Chicago. It was halftime and a high school band — complete with majorettes and drum major — was entertaining the crowd.

It was a good show, as marching band shows go, until this typical American from around the far right-hand corner of the spectrum charged onto the field.

At the moment, the band was marching briskly down the field. The imposter raced to the 50-yard line and, jumping several steps ahead of the strutting drum major, he commenced to prance down the field. He was leading the band.

He brought perhaps a greater roar of approval from those thousands than did any football player or any band member.

And the pro cops. They drew by far a greater boo from the crowd than any referee when they chased down and apprehended the impromptu performer.

That's America.

Gov't Is Not Secret

By GEORGE E. BOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The news policy of this Administration is neither wise nor efficient. It will not last long. It will only stimulate good reporting which has long been absent, particularly from Washington.

Secrecy leads to rumors and guesses. Congressmen Pelly of Washington asked to be furnished with the names of American firms seeking export licenses to deal with Soviet countries. Such data is available in the Department of Commerce. I quote Representative Pelly:

"While my request has not as yet been formally acknowledged, I do know the nature of the reply I shall receive. When Secretary Hodges appeared before the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee on July 11, an opportunity was presented for me to personally ask about the matter, and the Secretary stated that the decision has been made not to disclose the names of any firms doing business with the Kremlin."

Do the firms in this business need protection from boycott or mayhem? If it is as bad as all that, why would they want to do business with Soviet countries? If Americans are ashamed to do business with Iron Curtain countries, they should not do it.

It must be said that the policy of secrecy is at least 20 years old. It did not originate in the Kennedy Administration. But that does not alter the fact that we are dealing with it now and a decision concerning it needs to be made now. It will be recalled that when Mikoyan came to this country, he was wined and dined by American businessmen and bankers. The businessmen were looking for contracts and undoubtedly some got some.

The excuse generally given for non-strategic material—a term hardly definable in this age of total war, is wheat non-strategic? Canada ships enormous quantities of wheat to Red China. No item can be strategically more important because Red China is going to keep Mao Tse-tung's regime through a periodical famine.

Does Canada, for a profit, wish to keep Mao Tse-tung's regime in office? Even if it is true that business has no conscience, it is also true that nations can go under by making fundamental mistakes in policy.

There can be no excuse for the blabber-mouth in any department, as there can be none for the indiscreet boaster or the homosexual who is subject to blackmail. Nevertheless, a broad, general suppression of information does not succeed. It can only lead to rumor and guessing.

During certain periods of the Roosevelt Administration, it was easier to get accurate information concerning the Administration from London than in Washington.

It may be recalled that we told that nothing of a secret nature was concluded at the Potsdam Conference. Also, it may be recalled that the reason World War II started was that Germany and Russia invaded Poland. At the conversation between Stalin and Harry Hopkins on May 29, 1945, the Top Secret document sent to our government stated:

"It is therefore in Russia's vital interest that Poland should be both strong and friendly. He (Stalin) said there was no intention on the part of the Soviet Union to interfere in Poland's internal affairs, that Poland would live under the parliamentary system which is like Czechoslovakia, Belgium and Holland and that any talk of an intention to Sovietize Poland was stupid. . . . Tigers Take 6-1 Win From Indians With Lary Hurling

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

For the first time in his major league career, Frank Lary is proving that he is more than just a "Yankee killer."

Until this year, the gritty right-hander was just a .500 pitcher in six seasons with the Detroit Tigers—when you exclude his 23-8 won and lost mark against the Yankees. In fact, the other American League teams beat him more than he beat them.

It's different this year. The Alabamian, now 30, Friday night registered his 15th triumph of the season, pitching the Tigers to a 6-1 victory over Cleveland. Lary's seven-hitter kept the Tigers within a game and a half of the Yankees, who needed 10 innings to defeat Minnesota 8-5.

Baltimore divided a doubleheader with Los Angeles, winning the second game 3-0 after the Angels had taken the opener 3-1. Kansas City blanked Boston 5-0. Chicago's White Sox and Washington were idle.

Johnny Blanchard's home run in Cincinnati increased its National League lead to two games over Los Angeles, defeating Pittsburgh 5-4 as Chicago's Cubs were handing the Dodgers a 4-2 trimming. St. Louis outlasted Philadelphia 9-8, and Milwaukee nipped San Francisco 2-1 as Warren Spahn won his 299th major league game. Lary already has beaten every team in the league except the Senators, whom he has faced only once. Minnesota, with two victories in three decisions, is the only other team to hold an edge over him. Two Cleveland hits and an infield out in the third inning produced a run and prevented Lary from making his third straight triumph over the Indians a shut-out.

Lary got solid hitting support from Al Kaline, Jake Wood and Billy Bruton. Kaline slammed his 14th home run with a man aboard in the third to snap a 1-1 tie. Wood had three hits including his eighth home run. Bruton had a couple of singles and scored twice.

Fullmer - Fernandez Title Fight Tonite

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Utah's Gene Fullmer, the crowding, bruising middleweight champion of NBA, and Cuba's Florentino Fernandez, a one-punch knockout artist, fight for the title tonight in a match that should make up in action what it might lack in finesse.

The nationally televised battle (ABC network) goes on in Ogden's 22,000-capacity stadium at 9 p.m. EST, with the local area blacked out.

Fullmer, 30, the champion from West Jordan, remained the favorite at odds of about 9-5, which may narrow by the time the two climb into the ring.

Neither was expected to have any problem making the 160-pound limit at weigh-in time.

This marks the sixth time the slugging young Mormon deacon has defended the title he won from a battered Carmen Basilio in August, 1959.

Mgr. Marv Jensen pronounced Fullmer at the "peak of his career" and promised there would be no excuses if Gene lost.

For Fernandez, 25, who goes into the bout with a string of three straight knockouts since growing into the middleweight division last November, this will be his first chance at a world championship.

His Havana manager, Eugenio Ruiz, and American representative, Angelo Dundee, were equally confident of an upset victory.

In addition to the National Boxing Association portion of the world title, there is the question—particularly on Fullmer's part—of national pride and prestige. The Fullmer faction made the Cubans sign an agreement to give Gene a return match within 90 days if he loses; but more important, the agreement stipulates that Fernandez must remain in this country during the 90 days.

Both Fullmer and Fernandez have been stopped once. Sugar Ray Robinson with a perfect left hook coiled Fullmer in 1957 in five rounds.

Rocky Kalingo, then the Philippines welterweight champion, stopped Fernandez in one round in November, 1959. One month later in a wild second round Fernandez got off the floor from a right hand punch and knocked out Kalingo.

Semi-Pro Finals

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP)—Rainey Shell of Greensboro, undefeated defending champion, meets Angier tonight in the finals of the state semi-pro baseball tournament.

Angier reached the finals Friday night by a comeback 10-6 victory over Caldwell. The big inning was the fourth, with five runs coming across. Otis Stephens' triple was the big blow.

If Angier beats Rainey Shell tonight in the double elimination journey, a final game will be played Monday night.

Spahn Lacks One Win To Meet 300

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Wonderful Warren Spahn, Milwaukee's splendid southpaw, needs only one more victory to become the seventh pitcher in modern times to record 300 major league triumphs.

The 41-year-old Oklahoman registered his 11th victory of the season Friday night and 299th with the Braves, outpitching San Francisco's Mike McCormick 3-2. Outfielder Henry Aaron made the victory possible with a pair of home runs, the first tying the score in the seventh inning and the second breaking the tie in the ninth.

Cincinnati's Reds, leading the league, opened a two-game lead over Los Angeles, defeating Pittsburgh 5-4. The Dodgers dropped a 4-2 decision to the Chicago Cubs. St. Louis outlasted Philadelphia Phillies 9-8.

New York's Yankees maintained their lead of a game and a half in the American League over Detroit, defeating Minnesota 8-5 in 10 innings while the Tigers were beating the Cleveland Indians 6-1.

Kansas City shut out Boston 5-0. Los Angeles' Angels divided a double-header with Baltimore. The Angels won the first game 3-1 and the Orioles took the second 3-0.

Spahn yielded only five hits for his fourth victory in five starts against the Giants this season. Milwaukee now trails the third place Giants by only one game.

Aaron's homers were his 28th and 29th of the season.

Frank Robinson, the league's leading home run and RBI man, drove in Cincinnati's winning run with a ninth-inning double.

The Pirates had taken a 4-2 lead in the eighth, climaxed by Dick Stuart's 17th home run. The Reds came back with four straight singles to tie the score.

George Altman slammed two homers—his 21st and 22nd—and drove in three runs to lead the Cubs to victory over the Dodgers.

Sandy Koufax was the Dodger starter and loser.

Julian Javier and Jim Schaffer hit two-run doubles to lead the Cards' 12-hit attack against four Philadelphia pitchers. The decisive run, however, was driven in by Stan Musial, who drew a walk as a pinch hitter with the bases loaded in the seventh.

Navy's Joe Bellino Suffers Leg Injury During Final Warmup

CHICAGO (AP)—The Philadelphia Eagles, bristling from a greeting of boos from the fans, proved their National Football League championship pride Friday night by harpooning the college all-stars 28-14.

They beat a good collegiate football squad after a prolike probe of its weakness—pass defense.

And the Eagles, booed by many of the 65,000 fans as they trotted onto the rain-soaked sod of Soldier Field, showed their detractors they could do it without the golden arm of Norm Van Brocklin—the quarterback who led them to the NFL crown last year, then quit and became coach of the Minnesota Vikings.

The All-Stars suffered a severe stroke of bad luck during warm-ups before the game, televised and broadcast by ABC. Navy's Joe Bellino, a key man in their strategy of attack, slipped while going down for a pass and pulled a right leg muscle. The All-American halfback, who soon begins a four-year stint in the Navy as an ensign, was to have made his last game a big one. He sat it out on the bench.

"The turf gave way and so did the muscle," he said. "But, gosh, how I wish I could have played."

Bill Brown (Illinois-Chicago Bears) ran back the opening kickoff 39 yards, and Norm Snead (Wake Forest-Washington Redskins) hit Aaron Thomas (Oregon State-San Francisco 49ers) with a 42-yard pass that went to the Eagles' 12.

It looked as if the All-Stars were primed, but they were pushed back to the 17, and the quickie strike was dead.

Minutes later, the Eagles got the ball on their 20. Sonny Jurgensen, Van Brocklin's understudy, was caught trying to pass. But he flipped the ball behind him like a Globetrotter basketball player.

Pete Retzlaff took it for 13 yards. It touched off an 80-yard drive in seven plays, capped by Jurgensen's 27-yard touchdown pass to Tommy McDonald. He was completely in the open.

McDonald snared two more Jurgensen tosses, each for 24 yards, for touchdowns, and Retzlaff took one for 25 yards.

The Eagles led 21-0 at halftime and made it 28-0 with their fourth td with four minutes left in the game.

Then Bill Kilmer (UCLA-49ers) brought the collegians to life with passes from the short punt, spread formation. In six plays, they surged 75 yards. Kilmer capped it with an 18-yard scoring pitch to Glynn Gregory (SMU-Dallas Cowboys).

Then guard Dick Green (Ohio U-Cleveland Browns) intercepted a King Hill pass and lumbered 57 yards for a touchdown.

"Had we scored on that first play, we'd have had them on the run," said All-Star Head Coach Otto Graham. "I'd like to play them again—and on a dry field I think we'd beat them."

Coach Nick Skorich said: "Our guys were concerned about being somewhat downgraded while the stars were being touted, and we went out to justify our championship."

Thomas Finishes Fifth Friday

ITHACA, N. Y.—Bobby Thomas, 17, of Greenville finished fifth in a field of 64 golfers in Friday's consolation round at the Junior National Amateur Championship Golf Tournament in Ithaca, N.Y.

The consolation round was played on the Ithaca Municipal Golf Course which was reportedly very wet and slow for the tourney due to recent heavy rains.

Winning the 18-hole medal play tourney was Ernest Denham of Louisville, Ky., second was Jim Dittelman from Alma, Mich., and finishing third was Jimmy Day of Laurel, Miss.

Thomas shot a 41-39 for a total of 80 during the consolation round. The previous day he was eliminated from the regular tourney when he lost his match by one stroke in a sudden-death playoff.

Jay Sigle of Whitmarsh, Pa., was the almost unanimous gallery choice today in the tournament when he was paired against Andy Nusbaum Jr. of Salina, Kan.

The quarter-final round which is scheduled for late today will narrow the field to four players for the semi-final round Sunday morning. The final 18 holes will be played Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Jenkins Speaks At 'Lost Colony' Tonight

MANTEO—In an address prepared for delivery on the stage of Waterside Theatre on Roanoke Island as a part of the East Carolina College Night at "The Lost Colony," Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, ECC president, says what is now called "the age of outer space is not a new thing, for at the time of the attempted colonial settlement it was a venture into outer space for Sir Walter Raleigh."

On the stage here Saturday evening, Dr. Jenkins was to be guest performer in the role of Captain Amadas. During the performance, Dr. Jenkins was to deliver his brief address.

SCOUT NOTES

A Pitt Scout District Board of Review is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Wyatt Brown, 1905 E. Sixth St., Greenville.

Scoutmasters have been asked to notify Brown if they have boys planning to review for Star, Life or Eagle requirements.

Plans are now underway for the August Roundtable — first of the new Scout year—to be held Aug. 29 at St. James Methodist Church in Greenville.

District Commissioner Harry Billica says the first roundtable has been moved closer to the starting of school this year for convenience.

Billica plans to have available "all the latest literature and ideas to start things humming" for the year's scout program. Fall program quarterlies and leader program notebooks will be distributed at the Aug. 29 meeting. "They will not be mailed," Billica points out.

The district commissioner has urged members of the Pitt District to notify either him or Scout Executive Rudy Alexander whether they can attend. He called for notice "no later than Aug. 26."

A barbeque and fried chicken supper is scheduled for 6:45 p.m. with the roundtable beginning at 7:30.

Pitt District officials have extended congratulations to Jimmy Newman of Explorer Ship 1 on his selection as the outstanding Explorer in the district this year.

By virtue of his selection, Newman will be included on the annual Tartan Guard Trip to Ocracoke Island (Aug. 11-13) for all commissioners and members of the Tartan Guard.

In addition to begin selected to take the trip, Newman will become a member of the Tartan Guard.

Skin divers early today brought six bodies out of the wreck while it was still suspended on cables under the lake surface. The seventh body—that of a middle-aged woman wearing a light brown suit—was found wedged between the seats after the bus was set on its wheels on dry land.

Turned Down By Army, He Really Expected It

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—A veteran Cuban diplomat says he has been turned down by the U.S. Army in his attempt to enlist and fight his old foe, Fidel Castro.

However, Guillermo Bolivar, Cuban consul to Tampa for 15 years, says he rather expected it.

He said he had hoped to help train sharpshooters or make available his knowledge of Latin American affairs to the government.

"I feel it is my obligation—my moral duty—as a United States resident to offer my services to this country in any way I can," he said.

He said he was an officer in the Cuban Army prior to 1941. Cuban Prime Minister Castro fired Bolivar from his consul's post in 1959. He has been employed by a Tampa restaurant since that time.

Whale Invasion Of England Has Been Repulsed

GILLAN COVE, England (AP)—An invasion of England—this time by whales—has been repulsed.

Holiday makers joined villagers in a day-long battle against 50 whales Friday on the beaches around this tiny Cornish cove.

Armed with oars and paddles, they drove off the mammals, some measuring up to 30 feet in foam.

The whales were believed to have sought refuge from marauding killer sharks.

Villagers, fearing the beach would be littered with mangled carcasses, put out in small boats to drive off the invaders.

Time and again the whales were repulsed but came back for more.

Mrs. Arthur White, a fisherman's wife, commented: "It was a tragic sight, as if the whales were trying to commit suicide. I felt almost sorry for them. But we couldn't let them land. They'd have spoiled a lot of people's holidays."

Seven Bodies In Bus Recovered

HERGISWIL, Switzerland (AP)—Seven bodies were recovered today from the bus that took 16 American tourists to their death in Lake Lucerne Wednesday.

Eight other bodies were still missing and were believed to have been swept out of the bus during its plunge to the lake bed.

Twenty-two persons survived the accident.

Four of the survivors were brought to the gymnasium to identify the bodies. They were Robert Work, 23, a student from Westerville, Ohio; Mrs. Blair Crowther, of Tampa, Fla.; the bus driver, Bruno Giacomello, from Como, Italy; and the Swiss tour conductor, Hans Gut.

English Teachers' Goals Set At ECC Conference

The 19th annual summer conference of the North Carolina English Teachers Association concluded its two-day meeting at East Carolina College Saturday afternoon. It was the first time the state-wide summer meeting had been held here.

Prof. Ovid W. Pierce, East Carolina College English professor and writer of successful novels, was speaker at the luncheon session which closed the meeting of the South in Fiction, following the presentation of progress reports from six professional study groups.

Pierce discussed the responsibility of writers to examine themselves and the heritages of the region, for "a region is necessarily all things and a writer's chief task is to see."

"We are to deny none of the validity of his vision, but what we can ask is that the vision however, be truly his, that it represent the writer's view in loneliness — included, uncompromised," said Pierce.

He defined the writer's task in assessing the place of his birth as an effort "to try, in so far as he is able, to know the difference between his own vision and that of others who have written of his land. . . It is not for the defense of the South that we ask, but for the writer's unending moral obligation to look again and again for himself."

NCETA President R.E. Piner of Wilmington and Vice President Walter McGraw of Roanoke Rapids conducted the sessions of the conference, which opened with an address by Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, ECC president, on "A Layman's Look at English Instruction."

The summer conference committee of the ECC English Department was headed by Dr. John D. Ebbs, and was composed of Dr. Meredith N. Posey, department director; Dr. Hermine Carraway, Mrs. Mary Goodman, Miss Janice Hardison, Dr. James Poindexter, and Dr. Elizabeth Uteback.

Several publishers were represented at the conference, outstanding among them being the display of the Folger Shakespeare Library of Washington, D.C.

March Of The 27th Regiment

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

War had come to the land. The call had gone out through the county. They came from the farms, the cross roads and the small towns. In 1860 the census had shown 1,521 white males between the ages of 20 and 60. But Pitt county furnished more men than this for the Confederacy. Two thousand or more were found in the many regiments that the state furnished for the Confederate army. They fought in all major engagements and also in many of the small hot skirmishes that took place in their native and other southern states.

They went out to fight the Yankees and those ever present foes that favor neither side—dysentery, malaria, gangrene and other diseases that haunt each battlefield. To many of the young untried volunteers with new uniforms, bright regimental colors, and thrilled by the admiring glances of the fair ones, and seduced by the martial music, it was a lark—this going off to war. But time would teach them better and so would distance, disease and death.

The Twenty-Seventh Regiment

G. B. Singletary formed Pitt County's first company on March, 1861. It had 140 men on its roll. One month later in April, the Marlboro Guard with 71 men under the command of W. H. Morrill was organized. These two companies later became parts of the Twenty-Seventh N. C. Regiment and designated as Company's H and E. The Twenty-Seventh was organized in New Bern on June, 1861. After some changes were made the Regiment was reorganized on Sept. 1861. At this time G. B. Singletary was elected colonel. However, he resigned in Dec. 1861 and John Sloan was elected as regimental commander with the rank of colonel.

During this period, seven of the companies, including H and E, were camped at New Bern. This was a period of drilling and learning the routine life of a soldier. While up in Virginia fighting was going on; along the Trent and Neuse it was every day camp life.

The Yankees Come

On March 14, 1862 the Federal troops under Ambrose Burnside moved against the Confederate troops guarding New Bern. The outnumbered Southern troops were forced to give up the place and the Twenty-Seventh was last to leave for Kinston where they remained until May 31. During their two month's stay, the Twenty-Seventh licked its wounds. Drilling and learning to do the double quick step kept the men in fighting trim. These two months of idleness from a fighting point of view made the boys from Pitt and other counties anxious to get back into the thick of things. While at Kinston the Twenty-Seventh became a part of Ransom's Brigade.

A Little Too Late

Orders came to move up to Richmond. The Twenty-Seventh took to the cars with anticipation. Here at last was what they were going up there where "big doings" were going on. They would be with troops of Lee, Jackson and others whose names were becoming as familiar as those of the men in the next tents. They arrived in Richmond on June 1st. As the train drew near the city a rumble of guns sent an electric shock through the Twenty-Seventh. They had arrived in time to get in a few licks themselves. When the train pulled into the depot, orders were given to double quick through the city toward the distant sounds of guns. But when the Twenty-Seventh came on the scene, the battle of Seven Pines was over. The chagrined soldiers stood there, in the coming heat of summer with the smoke of battle in their noses and muskets holding unfired bullets in their hands, wondering why fate had tricked them.

They were assigned to J. G. Walker's Brigade and moved over to Drewry's Bluff, overlooking the James River. Here they remained until June 26th, throwing up breastworks, drilling etc., repeating the dull routine of Kinston but at least on the doorstep of big things.

Almost But Not Quite

On the 26th of July, the Twenty-Seventh moved into the line of march for the coming Seven Days fight around Richmond. Battles that had history—Frazier's Farm, Malvern Hill would be fought but the "Johnny come lately's" from down N.C. way would only be held in reserve. They would have all the drama of war—shells bursting overhead, fighting going on all around them, but they would remain lying under the trees expecting to be called out. But the call never came. They were ordered back to camp at Drewry's Bluff. All summer they would march and counter march, support artillery and do picket duty on the James. They would take pot shots at the federal gunboats and have small skirmishes but this was the extent of their action.

Into Maryland

On Sept. 1st the Twenty-Seventh formed the rear guard of the army of Northern Virginia as it started on the first Maryland campaign. It crossed the Potomac on Sept. 8, 1862 near Leesburg, Va., Nolan's Ferry. The next day the troops joined the main army near Fredrick City, Maryland and became a part of Longstreet Corps. The Twenty-Seventh camped all that day, the 9th at a place called Buckey Town, Maryland. On the night of the 9th, they made a feint to draw attention of the Federals and allow "Stonewall" Jackson to set his troops in motion toward Harper's Ferry. Then set in a few days of marching and counter marching—just wearing out a lot of shoelatchet and stirring up dust to keep the Yankees guessing. They moved in and out of Virginia and Maryland so much the troops didn't know where they were. The only highlight so far was when on the 12th the Twenty-Seventh moved through a little Virginia town named Hillsboro. This place was noted for its pretty girls—"if nothing else."

"We Learn About War"

On the 17th day of September, the men of the Twenty-Seventh moved into battle line at Sharpsburg. They occupied the position on the extreme right of the Confederate line. As the battle picked up in intensity, the boys who had so often longed for such an experience began to wonder at the wisdom of it all. Forming their line in a cornfield, they advanced under a rain of canister and grape shot at the double quick. Men were falling all around, as the men made it to a rail fence and halted. For half an hour or more they held this position. Enemy artillery at the Dunkard Church was giving them a bad time. The Twenty-Seventh fought in the corn field, behind the fence and lost heavily in the "bloody lane." For two hours they held a position behind a fence with almost every cartridge spent.

About four o'clock on that afternoon the Twenty-Seventh was relieved and moved a mile to the rear to get ammunition and water. This lasted only about half an hour and the battle weary Twenty-Seventh moved back to its place in line. Night brought an end to that awful day and on the 15th they retreated with the army of Northern Virginia back into Virginia. They left behind 63 percent of the 325 men that had gone into battle; or to be exact 203 men. Company E (Pitt's Marlboro Guard) had its Captain, First and Second Lieutenants and two thirds of its men killed and wounded. Those that were left would never forget Dunkard's Church, the cornfield, the rail fence and "bloody lane"; that is, until something worse came their way.

The Sunken Road

The Twenty-Seventh spent the time between the retreat into Virginia and up until the last of November in small actions and raids. They moved after much hard marching to Fredericksburg, arriving there in the last days of November. Much activity was going on in the hills surrounding the historical old town. On Stafford Heights, Gen. Burnside was getting ready to cross the Rappahannock and push Lee out of his line that occupied the south range of hills that lay between him and Richmond. The Confederate line was seven miles long with Longstreet holding the left, and Stonewall Jackson the right. Along the base of Marye's Heights, a part of Longstreet's position, was a sunken road behind a stone wall. The Twenty-Seventh was among the troops behind this wall.

On Dec. 11, 1862, after much harassment by Confederate sharpshooters, Burnside threw his pontoon across the Rappahannock. Heavy artillery fire and street fighting cleared the town of Confederates. In the south hills, the gray line waited. Burnside's force composed of 14,251 were divided into three Grand Divisions: The Right Grand Division under Gen. Sumner, facing Longstreet, and the Left Grand Division under Gen. Franklin, opposite Jackson. In reserve, the Federals had the Center Grand Division under Gen. Hooker. Lee had 91,760 men in his seven mile long line at battle stations in reserve.

The morning of Dec. 13th was dense with fog. It lay like a thick wet blanket, hiding the armies from each other. When it lifted, between nine and ten o'clock, Jackson's men at Hamilton Crossing saw the blue wave moving out towards them. Fighting was heavy on both ends of the line. Wave after wave was thrown against the Confederates behind the stone wall at the sunken road. Firing in rotation, the men of the Twenty-Seventh, and others behind the wall, poured out lead with such rapidity that no flesh and blood could stand it. When darkness fell that day, the Union Forces had lost 12,653 men and the Confederates 5,309. The Twenty-Seventh had suffered only slightly. And as the curtain fell on that December day, the gray line had held, although broken once on Jackson's end. John Pelham had made a name for himself, and Lincoln was hunting another general.

A Little Rest

Leaving Fredericksburg the Twenty-Seventh headed south, Jan. 3, 1863. After making stops at Petersburg, Va., Goldsboro, Burgaw and Wilmington, they reached Charleston on Georgia's Washington's birthday. They went on from here to a place called Coosahatchee and stayed until April 26, 1863. Here in the land of sunshine, the men drifted back into the camp life they once disliked so intensely. They fattened up a bit; went to parties and dances, and put away for awhile the thoughts of war. It was a well earned rest and the Twenty-Seventh made the most of it.

On The Move

During May of 1863, the Twenty-Seventh had action at New Bern, and June found them back at Richmond. Summer was spent in moving from place to place between Richmond and Fredericksburg. All this moving about was to repel any threatening move the Yankees would make. The Twenty-Seventh repelled an attack by Union forces under Gen. Getty on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Bridge over the South Anna River.

A hot skirmish took place near "White House" where the men from Pitt County, along with others of Ransom's Brigade, checked the man so despised by all Confederates—"Beast Butler."

Fall Comes Again

The Twenty-seventh moved to Gordonsville on Oct. 1, 1863. Having been assigned to Heath's Division, they took up the line of march on Oct. 13th. In the fight that took place in the area, the Twenty-Seventh suffered heavy losses. 411 men went into battle and 290 were killed and wounded. Only 3 officers out of the 36 remained unhurt. New clothing had been issued to the men—gray jackets and blue pants. The men put their new garments in knapsacks and fought the battle in old clothes. Finding his knapsack too heavy, Private Laughinghouse of E. Co. (Marlboro's Guard) decided to put on his new uniform and throw his knapsack away. So in the midst of battle, he stood there, with bullets whizzing by him, changing into his new clothes. Picking up his gun and blanket, he went on about his business of fighting.

The enemy retreated and the Twenty-Seventh engaged in the morbid task of burying their dead.

They engaged in skirmishes and other similar action up until Feb. 4, 1863, and then went into winter quarters at New Orange Court House. This rest was broken up now and then by enemy sorties. On March 1, 1864, they were engaged in action over frozen ground that cut the feet of some of the shoeless soldiers.

The gaps the enemy made in the gray ranks were getting harder and harder to fill. For there was always one more corner to turn—one more fight along the way—in the fields, in the woods, and in the rolling hills.

The Wilderness

Some 14 miles west of Fredericksburg was a place of tangled vines, scrubby growth of oaks and pine, and little streams that made the way to the Rappahannock and Mattaponi's River. Here on May the 5th, 1864, the Twenty-Seventh drove the enemy toward Fredericksburg, along the Orange Plank Road that ran through the Wilderness. When they reached the intersection of the plank and Brock Road, they ran into the main body of the enemy troops. Upon meeting the enemy, the entire brigade was thrown into action. The fighting in the underbrush and scrubby trees was terrific. Fires started by exploding shells made an inferno in parts of the area. Wounded men roared to death and their cries of pain rose above the few lulls of battle. Both Confederate and Union troops suffered severe losses. Out of his 118,769 men, Grant lost 15,387 and Lee 11,400 out of his 61,353. At the end of the day, the Twenty-Seventh with other members of the brigade left back about two miles to a hill, where the line of the army had been established. Out of 1,753 men, who had reported for duty the day before, 1,080 had been killed or wounded. There would be no breaks now in the fighting; Grant had stated he would "fight it out along this line if it takes all summer."

The Bloody Angle

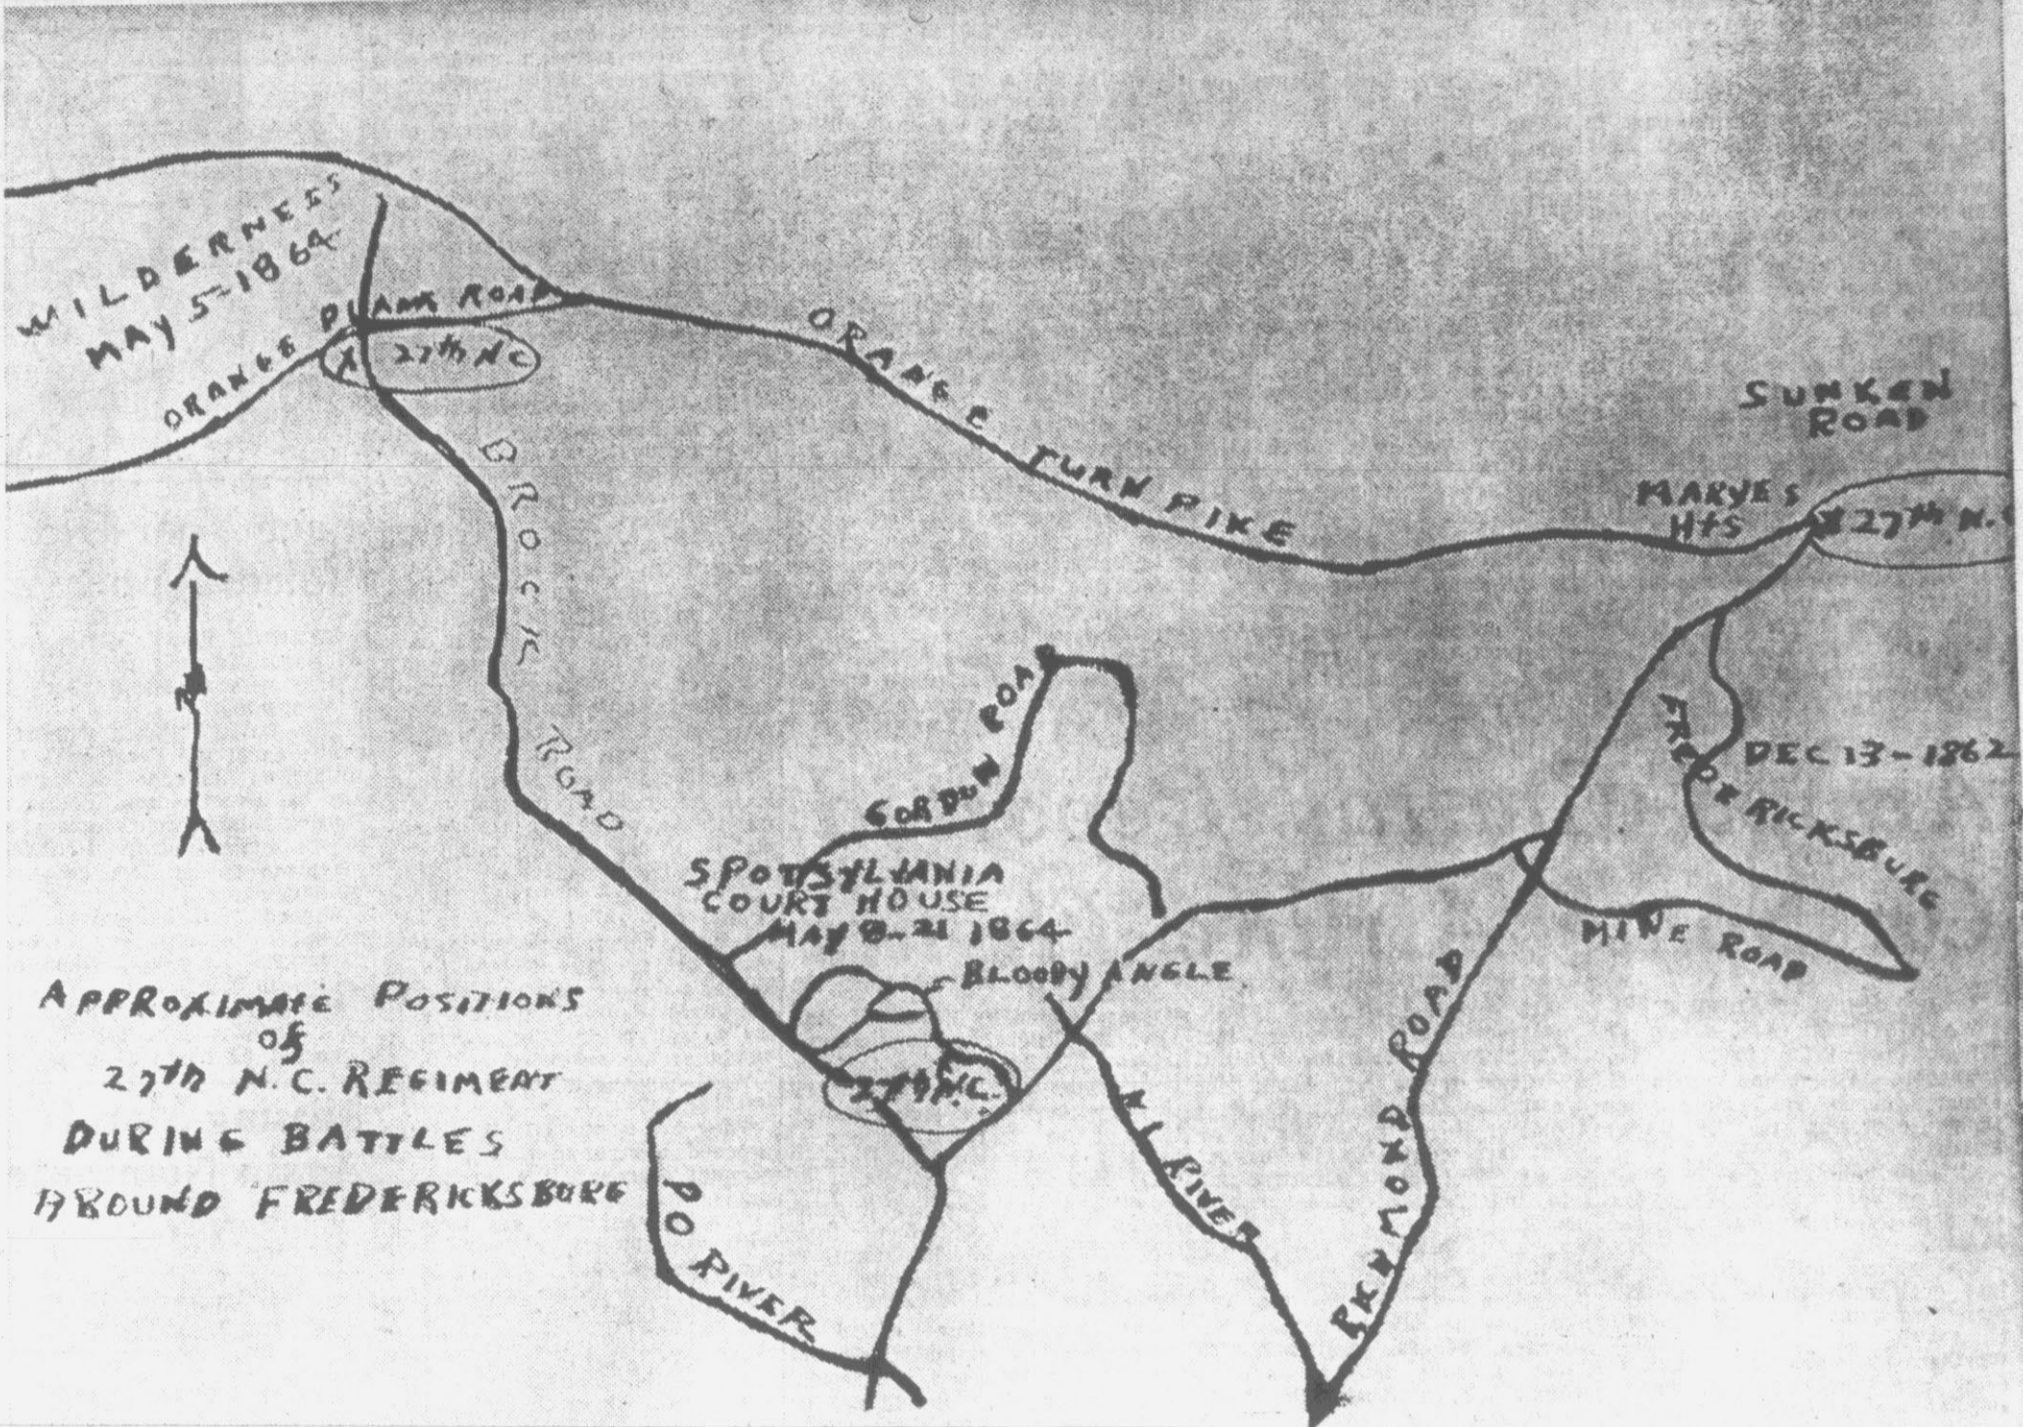

At 9 p.m. on May 7, 1864, the army of the Potomac left the Wilderness and moved toward Spotsylvania Court House. Lee sat up his defenses in a mule shoe shaped salient. Fighting took place against the Confederate position on May 9-10-11. But this was nothing to what would take place on the 12th. On the 12th the small stream that flowed at the bottom of the slight hill, upon which the McGool House stood, ran red with blood. One oak tree, two feet in diameter, was cut down by the bullets that flew in an increasing stream between the two armies.

Hancock captured 4500 Confederate soldiers and 20 guns at the apex of the salient.

Here in the "Bloody Angle" men stood on top of the dead piled three or four high, firing into each others faces. In this hell hole, after 20 hours of some of the most intense fighting of the entire war, the Confederates pulled back to a new line at the base of the mule shoe. In this battle that lasted from May 8th to May 21st, the Twenty-Seventh N.C. did its part and its battle flag had another notch cut in blood added to the many others it had gotten. Out of his 110,000, Grant lost 17,555 and Lee lost heavily of his 50,500.

Along This Road

Along the road that led at every turn toward Richmond, the fast depleting army of Lee threw itself across the path, of the "clair smoking" Grant. The Twenty-Seventh fought at Gary's Farm, Pole Green Church, the Second Cold Harbor, Weldon Railroad, Ream's Station and other battles taking place along the way. The lean tough men; their bellies gotten used to green apples and half ripe corn, fought on. Never again would the world see the likes of these ragged barefooted infantrymen. They fought against the well fed, well dressed, well equipped Yankee, whose ranks easily absorbed their losses. But each time a Confederate went down, there was no replacement to take his place.

The road of battle led on through the rest of 1864 and each step down it was costly. But by now there was no doubt where it would end.

The Sands Run Out

1865 came and the hour glass was running out; and there was no hand to set it right.

The Twenty-Seventh would fight at Petersburg and other places between there and Appomattox.

When April 4th came, all the Twenty-Seventh could muster was 70 men.

On April 12th at Appomattox Court House, 30 men of Co's H and E, stepped back from their stacked guns. This was what was left of the Pitt County's Volunteers and the Marlboro Guard.

The long roll was over, the bugles mute, and the guns finished. The soft wind of April ruffled with indifference the battle flags of the victor and the vanquished.

The Road Home

The thin gray line faced southward and began their long dusty, anxious walk homeward—not knowing what they would find—if anything. Back down the roads, with the scars of war fresh on either side. Sights that even the new peach blossom could not soften.

They came back to the Tar, to the cross roads, to the small towns—to the weed choked fields and the places where their homes were.

Armed only with their undying glory and that spark of hope that men reaching home always seem to have; they turned their thoughts to what was at hand and larger dreams of tomorrow.

Listen — The Wind

Today, if you visit the sites of those battlefields, you find the story of the most important events retold in the many markers that dot the area. And you will notice how green the grass is, and the silence that hangs around such places. And it is hard to realize the bloody drama of yesterday—the thundering of the guns and fierce hand to hand fighting—the dying—the dead; and the hollow shell of what is called victory.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

There are indications that the list of new books for the fall will contain some interesting items.

One title that is sure to evoke a great deal of comment is Mark Schorer's life of Sinclair Lewis.

Since Lewis, once the most popular of American authors, has been dead about 15 years, Schorer's book comes at a good time to rekindle interest in him and to begin to place him in perspective as a literary figure, the sort of thing that Arthur Mizener did for Scott Fitzgerald. This work will be the Book-of-the-Month selection for October.

Adams Papers

In September, the first four volumes of the Adams Papers will appear, these being "The Diary and Autobiography of John Adams." They will sell for thirty dollars a set, a staggering figure when one realizes that here are 300,000 manuscript pages in the entire Adams collection and that the series will probably run to 75 volumes—somehow a rather dismal prospect when one considers how much trivia will probably be included.

Penn Warren's Views

In the New Republic, the novelist Robert Warren ("All the King's Men," etc.) has a letter protesting Peter Jones' review of his "Legacy of the Civil War" because Jones finds signs in it that Warren is sympathetic with the Citizen's Council in the Deep South.

In his letter Warren outlines his basic political creed, though he is disturbed over having to do so. One point which he makes is this: "Any official of any state who does not honestly and vigorously endeavor to punish with full vigor any violence against, or coercion of, any individual or group has violated his public trust and should be impeached."

Certainly, as Warren suggests, a principle like this is not very revolutionary in terms of the American tradition, though Warren's endorsement of Martin Luther King and the sit-in demonstrators further on in the letter might be considered somewhat more so.

Bull Run

Much has been said in the press about the so-called reenactment of the Battle of Bull Run the other day. Cleveland Amory, writing in Saturday Review, has suggested that this much may be very well, since Bull Run can be treated as a piece of comedy of errors anyway, even though there were a good many people killed and a good many more scared to death. But who is going to make a Roman holiday of Gettysburg? Somehow an event like that is not going to lend itself too well to a travesty by a bevy of beery boys off for a weekend lark.

The Richmond News-Leader editorializes on the question in these terms: "The gaudy show at Bull Run was a noisy piece of amateur theatrics carried on by overgrown boys who set a thrill out of hearing guns go off. It was play-acting at about the 10-year-old level. Boy, you're dead."

Our only suggestion, for whatever it may be worth, is to reduce the cast to about three for the next occasion: two boys to lower a flag at dusk, and one old man to blow "Taps."

Edison the Critic

We are reading somewhere the other day what must have been one of the few literary pronouncements of Thomas A. Edison. It was to the effect that the average American loves his family and, after that, if he has any love left over, he gives it to Mark Twain. This remark means little today, and we wonder whether it ever meant much, though Mark Twain may have been that esteemed 50 years ago. If so, he certainly has no contemporary successor in the field of letters. But then neither do Jack Demsey and Babe Ruth in the world of sports. Are we losing our capacity for hero worship?

There is the story of the irate father upbraiding Johnny for not doing his homework and ending by saying: "When Lincoln was your age, he did his work every night." Johnny: "When John F. Kennedy was your age, he was President of the United States."

Flight From East Germany Has Been Going On For The Past Twelve Years

EDITOR'S NOTE—The spectacle of people running from the republic the Communists have created in East Germany is one that sells the Reds, a drain they would like to stop. It also adds fuel to the fire which keeps the pot of crisis aboil in Berlin. In this last of a series of articles on the background of the crisis, AP reporter John Bausman tells the story of the refugees.

By JOHN BAUSMAN
BERLIN (AP)—For the past 12 years police of Communist East Germany have been tramping up to abandoned homes, fixing a seal on the door and preparing to auction the household goods.
 They are the homes of people who left just about everything behind to flee to the West.
 Since 1949, when the Communist regime was set up in Soviet-occupied Germany, more than 2,600,000 persons have come to the West. They give continued evidence of discontent with Communist rule. They are key figures in recurrent Berlin crises.
 The vast majority of these refugees funnel through West Berlin, a far easier escape route than trying to cross the tightly guarded iron curtain border that divides East and West Germany.
 West Berlin, still occupied by the Atlantic Allies of World War

II, is an island of Western territory 110 miles inside that barbed-wire barrier. The refugee who makes his way to East Berlin has little trouble getting to the West. From there he is flown to West Germany, skipping border controls on the land route.
 The Communists would love to close this escape route. For years the East Germans, with Soviet backing, have been seeking control of all routes to and from Berlin.

The flight of refugees makes East Germany the only modern industrial nation in the world with a declining population.
 It has serious effects on the country's economy. More than half the refugees are between 18 and 45, the most active and productive years of a worker's life. Another 20 per cent are in the still important productive years of 45 to 65.
 Children and people over 65 account for the remainder, with the older group amounting to less than 10 per cent.

The refugees are a cross-section of life, with industrial workers and laborers forming the biggest group. There are farmers, tradesmen, housewives, students and such highly trained people as doctors, engineers and teachers.
 This last group of intellectuals and experts is a small part of the total refugee flood, but one that hurts the Communists. In the six-year period from 1954 to 1960, East Germany lost 35,000 intellectuals, including 14,000 engineers and 4,000 doctors and dentists. Western sources estimate the number of patients per doctor in East Germany is up to about 1,400 compared to 700 in West Germany.

 And many a skilled worker refugee has amused himself with the thought of how tough it will be for his old Communist bosses to find a replacement. Besides being an economic drain, the refugee stream is an embarrassment to the Reds. It leaves no doubt that people are dissatisfied with communism.

"These people can't vote in a free election, so they are voting with their feet," commented a Berlin refugee official, using a popular German phrase.
 Heartening as this is to the West, official West German policy is not to encourage flight.
 "We cannot strip that part of Germany of its best people. We say, 'Stay as long as you can. If you can't stand it any longer, then we'll do all we can to help you,'" West German Chancellor Adenauer once declared.

Thus far prospering West Germany has easily absorbed the refugees. Each community marks a certain amount of new housing for them and a labor shortage leaves plenty of jobs open.
 But life in the West is not soft. Refugees who dream of ease at times may have trouble adjusting to the competitive demands of free enterprise.
 A significant percentage of refugees trickle back from West to East. West German government sources figure 35,000 returned in 1959 and 28,000 in 1960, making a return of 25 and 15 per cent respectively. Western observers estimate returnees might total 25 per cent above the government figures, but nowhere near the much greater count claimed by the East Germans.

Some of those who return find life in East Germany even more unpleasant than they remembered and flee for a second time. An official at Berlin's Marienfelde Refugee Camp figured as much as 1 to 2 per cent of the daily flow might be second timers.
 And what happens back home when a refugee family flees?
 "The word gets around quickly," said a young father who had come from Halle with his wife and two children. "The police come to seal up the house and then the word spreads. It is a good feeling to hear someone has left. You say, 'Fine, there's someone else who doesn't like Ulbricht (the East German political chief) any more than I do.'"
 One secret of successful escape is to carry little. In spot checking trains, police are always suspicious if one carries much luggage or big packages.
 This means a refugee leaves behind just about everything—his furniture, china, motorcycle, television set, perhaps—all the things he has painfully accumulated over the years. Usually he cannot even try to sell before flight, since it would arouse suspicion.
 What happens to the possessions left behind?
 They are auctioned off and the proceeds are put in a special bank account under the refugee's name.
 "That's what they say they do with the money anyway," the young father said. "I don't know whether they do or not and I'm not going back to find out."

Armed Guards Reported On Some Airline Flights

By JOHN CHADWICK
WASHINGTON (AP)—Stuart G. Tipton, president of the Air Transport Association, disclosed armed guards are riding some flights operating in the United States.
 "It's probably just as well not to say which ones," Tipton told the Senate aviation subcommittee Friday.
 The subcommittee held hearings on legislation to make airplane hijacking a federal crime punishable by life in prison. Whether this would be enough to deter hijackers prompted discussion of the possibility of armed guards.
 Two senators said they might be necessary—at least on flights within range of Fidel Castro's Cuba.
 "This might be 'the best insurance we could buy,'" said Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney, D-Okla., chairman of the subcommittee. Sen. Clair Engle, D-Calif., author of the proposed legislation, agreed with Monroney that "it probably would be the most constructive thing we could do."
 The hijackers who took over a Boeing 707 Thursday said they wanted to force the pilot to fly into Cuba.
 On July 24 an Electra plane was hijacked after take-off from Miami, Fla., and flown to Cuba. The passengers and crew were returned, but the plane was held.
 On May 1 a twin-engine Convair was hijacked between Miami and Key West, Fla., and flown to Cuba. It was later allowed to return to the United States.
 After Thursday's hijacking over El Paso, Tex., the Federal Aviation Agency authorized the airlines to arm crew members who had received training in the use of firearms and were proficient in handling them.
 Tipton said the airlines are concerned about "the possibility of gunplay." Concern also was expressed by Herbert J. Miller Jr., assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department.

ment's criminal division. Monroney said, however, that he is "not too concerned" about a bullet ripping a hole in the pressurized cabins of high-flying airliners. He said that planes already are equipped with oxygen masks that automatically fall into the laps of passengers if necessary.
 Miller testified he did not believe the FBI would be able to furnish agents to ride the airlines, but he said he thought the attorney general has authority under present law to appoint special U.S. marshals who could do so.
 At the subcommittee's request, he said that if he found after further research there was any doubt on this score, he would draft an amendment to the proposed legislation before Monday specifically giving this authority to the attorney general.
 The Kennedy administration gave its backing to the proposed hijacking legislation as a means of meeting the menace of "air drunks, flying fools, and spies in the sky."
 The administration's views were presented by Najeeb E. Halaby, the federal aviation administrator. Halaby also told the subcommittee that agency authorities are considering police inspection of boarding passengers at airports within reach of Havana.

 He called this "a very drastic step," adding: "Can you imagine the line that would form from the ticket counter in Miami if everyone had to submit to police inspection?"
 The subcommittee called a closed-door session for Monday to act on the proposed legislation. Also under it, assaulting or threatening crew members would be made federal offenses. So would murder, robbery and other crimes committed aboard civil aircraft while in flight. And anyone carrying a concealed weapon aboard a plane would be subject to a $1,000 fine.
 Tipton said the nation's air carriers support the bill, "with great enthusiasm" and hope it will be adopted promptly. Also endorsing the legislation were spokesmen for the pilots, flight engineers, and operators of private and business airplanes.

Improved Community Service Will Be Goal

Community improvement will be the focal point of a one-day mental health conference to be held at East Carolina College on Wednesday under the joint sponsorship of the Psychology Department of the college and the Pitt County Mental Health Association.

The central theme of the conference which is open to the public, is "Promoting Sound Mental Health: On Individual and Community Responsibility." "The best way to improve a community is to better the quality of living in that community," Dr. Clinton R. Prewett, chairman of the East Carolina College Psychology Department said.

Through this conference, the sponsors are seeking to coordinate the community facilities so that they can be used most effectively toward the goal of productive living, Dr. Prewett stated. Speakers from Duke University the Pitt County Mental Health Clinic and the college will be featured throughout the day.
 Dr. Prewett stated that the high cost of living is "rather obvious in terms of admissions to mental institutions, the divorce situation and marriage, the educational problems of children, speech problems and the overall picture in regard to juvenile delinquency." The individual and his problems enter into community living and improvement, he explained. "Too often we measure improvement by the number of air conditioners in a particular city, or by the number of yards of concrete poured recently. That may be a part of community living, but I don't think it is the total picture," he said.

 The total picture is made more complete by the people, the way they think and how well they are functioning toward achieving self actualization, which could be defined as a person's maximum potential. Self actualization is not just a theoretical concept, Dr. Prewett said, but is an achievable goal for most people.

A similar mental health conference was held in January this year, sponsored by mental health associations of several eastern counties.
 Some of the subjects to be included in this conference include "Suggested Guide Lines for Personal Mental Health," an address by Dr. Prewett which will begin the program; and "Developing a Community Approach to a Sound Program of Mental Health" by Dr. Louis D. Cohen of the Department of Psychiatry of the Medical Center of Duke University.

Meeting of interest groups will include various ideas of interest to teachers, ministers, students, parents, physicians, and others. These topics will feature the role of the church, the school, the psychiatrist, the welfare workers, and the home.
 Dr. Phillip G. Nelson, director of Pitt County's Mental Health Clinic, will also participate in the program, with Preston Parsons, Dr. Calvert Dixon, Miss Dorothy Bolt and Mrs. Gertrude Neis.
 Members of the Advisory Committee for the conference are Dr. Carl Adams, E.C.C. Psychology Department; Dr. James Butler, public relations, E.C.C.; Dr. Frank Fuller, president, Pitt County Mental Health Association; J. S. Grimes, III, director of the Pitt County Welfare Department; Dr. Robert Holt, E.C.C. dean of instruction; Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of the college; Mrs. Joseph LeConte, secretary of the Pitt County Mental Health Association; Dr. Ray Minges; Dr. Nelson; and Mrs. J. B. Spilman, executive director, North Carolina Mental Health Association.

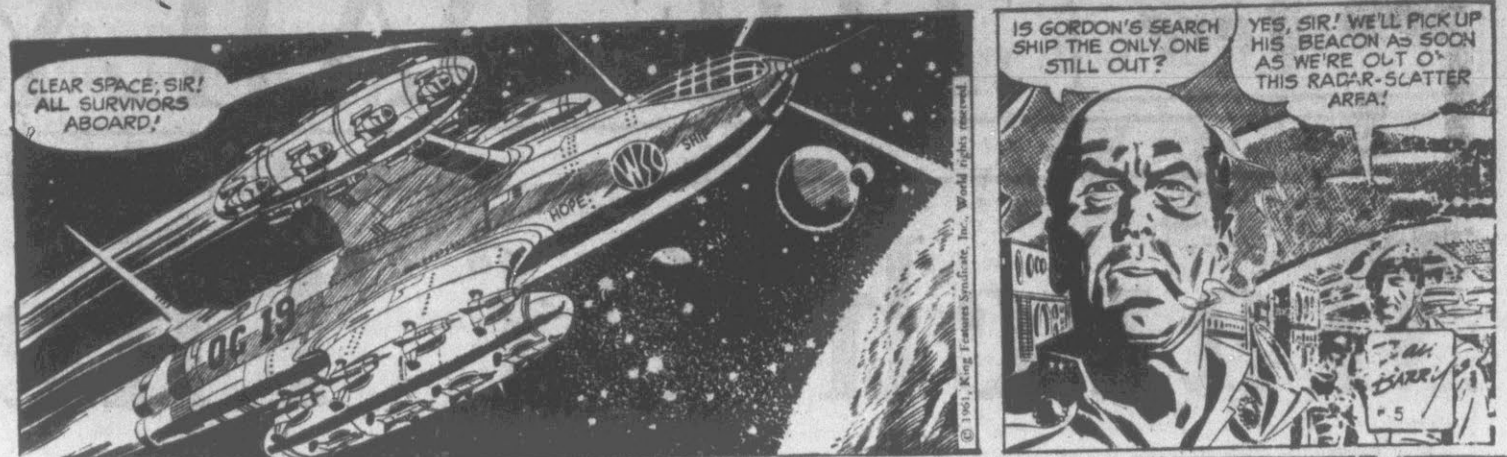

Ted Kennedy On Argentina Visit

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—President Kennedy's youngest brother Edward arrived by plane Friday on his tour of Latin America.
 "I want to know the problems, the aspirations and the programs of our people," he told reporters.
 He said he had brought with him the hope of his fellow citizens that Latin Americans soon will reach the state to which "all human beings aspire."

BOYS' REACTION—Like any other 5-year-old boy, Charles James Spencer, Churchill, the Earl of Sunderland, hates to get all dressed up. Attired in satin suit and ticorn hat with ostrich plume for his role as a page at a London wedding, the Earl, a cousin of Sir Winston Churchill, stood his ordeal as long as he could. After the wedding, he began setting up at the reception, making faces and sticking out his tongue. (AP Wirephoto via radio from London)

Four-Year-Old Voices Approval

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—President Kennedy passed muster Friday with Louisa Hackett, 4, a cute blonde.
 Mrs. David Hackett, wife of the chairman of the President's Committee on Juvenile Delinquency, and her two children, Louisa and Robert, 1 month old, were among the passenger's on the President's jet plane as he flew here from Washington.

Kennedy left his private compartment to chat with several passengers. He paid particular attention to Louisa.
 "Shy Louisa had nothing to say until Kennedy left. Then she announced: 'I like that President.'"
 Mrs. Hackett said she was surprised that her 4-year-old daughter had such a good opinion of the President.

Missing Man Is Again Nominated

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP)—Democratic voters in nearby Persimmon Grove decided 46 to 45 last May that George W. Hawkins deserved another term as constable —even though none of them had seen him or heard of him for seven weeks.

Now Hawkins' place on the November ballot is in danger again.

Unless he is found by Aug. 18, his nomination will be declared void, according to Circuit Court Judge Paul J. Stapleton.

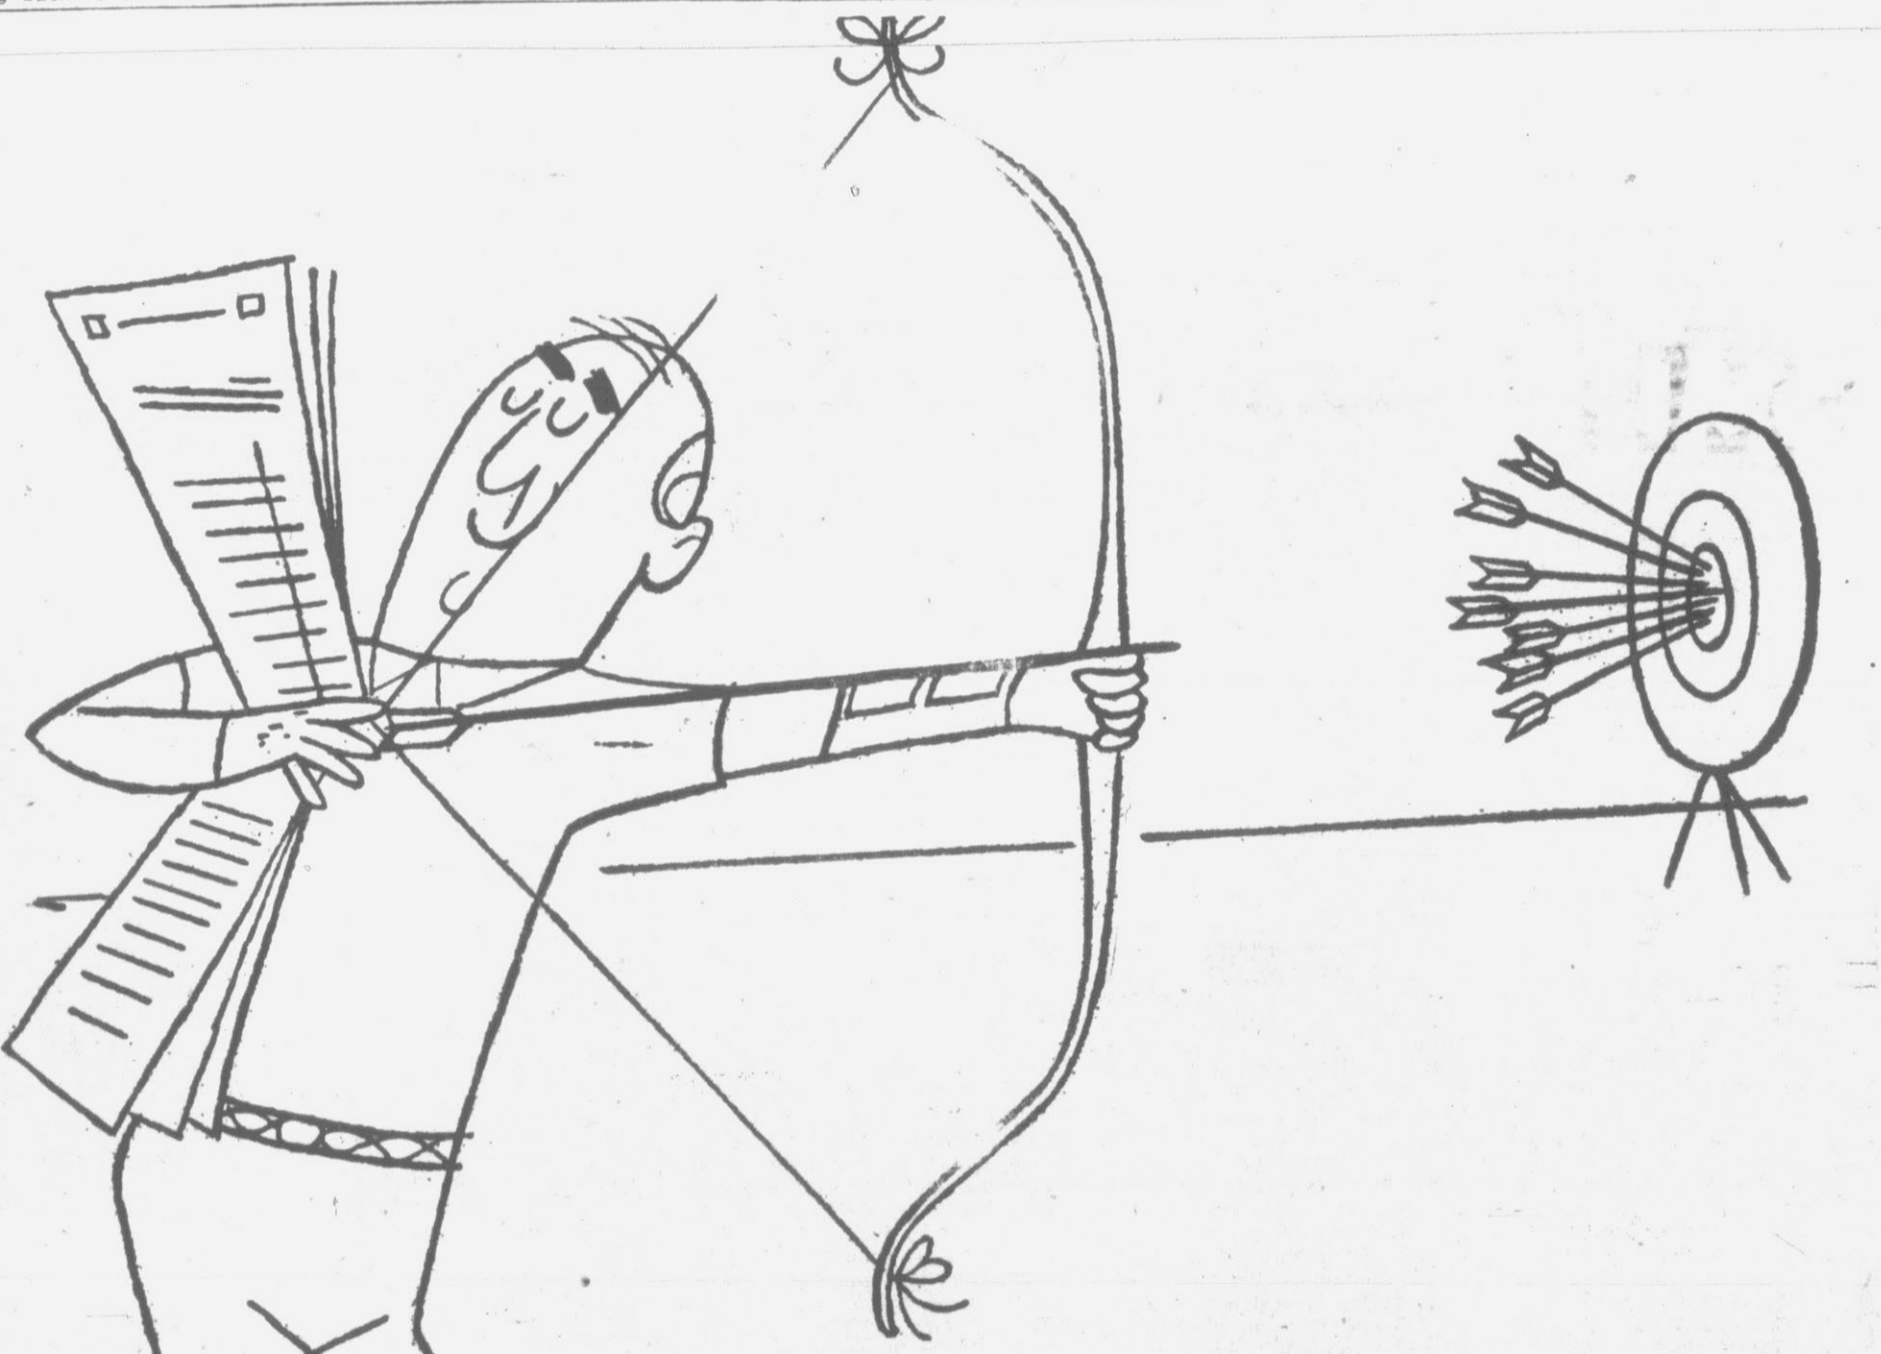

Hawkins has been missing since April 3. Judge Stapleton ruled Friday on a motion filed by Donald Zigler, attorney for the primary election loser, George W. Sexton, that unless Hawkins is found, he will be ineligible to run for office.

Italians Launch Jupiter Rocket

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Italian air force troops, training to man Jupiter missile bases in their country, successfully launched one of the 59-foot rockets on a 1,500-mile flight Friday night.

The Defense Department reported the military rocket met all objectives on the 15-minute flight to a target zone off the West Indies island of Antigua.

The launch, just at dusk, created an eerie spectacle in the sky. As the blazing rocket penetrated the cold air of the upper atmosphere, a bright vapor trail blossomed around it. The rays of the setting sun illuminated this trail brilliantly.

French Strikers Apply Violence

NANCY, France (AP)—Striking miners Friday overturned and set fire to cars, threw rocks and tomatoes, and invaded the offices of the coal mine where two cave-ins had killed nine fellow workers this week.

Office workers hid under tables as rocks and soggy tomatoes sailed inside.

The strikers demanded resignation of the mine director, better safety conditions, and shorter hours.

A MATTER OF LIFE AND DEATH

CHAPTER 31

"Give it up, Rollison," cried Sam. "If you would any of the crew, you'll land in jail."

Rollison thought: "Got him!" It was Sam's big mistake, for he was trying to tell the crew he was on the side of the law; which meant that they weren't in the racket, that they'd have no love for Sam and Tim Mahoney if they learned the truth.

Then Rollison heard a high-powered hiss. He twisted round and stared at a foaming jet of water coming from a ship's hose at a porthole, sending a lacework of icy water over the ship's silvery steel plates, and drenching him and Adam Bell.

The men raced towards him. Rollison had a chance to dodge, but the curtain of water hid him from the running men.

He swung right, towards the gangway.

Mahoney was nearer than any of the others, but he was standing against a stanchion; one of his legs was out of action. Sam was out, too. Rollison swung onto the gangway and hauled himself up, until he stood ten feet above the level of the quayside.

The hose stopped, and numbed silence followed.

The men were ganged up together on the quayside, hesitating because of his gun. Rollison waved it, and then raised his voice.

"No one's going to get hurt if they use their heads," he said. "No even I. After all, I only want the kidnapped girl. She's a nice bonny girl, as good as the best. In fact, she's the kind of girl you'd like your daughters to be. Have a look at the man Mahoney brought here, poor Adam Bell. He's her father. He didn't like his daughter being kidnapped, so he tried to get her back. I tried to help him."

He couldn't tell whether this was having any effect, whether he had won a little time.

"Just let me have Agatha, Tim," he called, and-looked at the injured American.

One of the men in the gang called: "What's this about kidnapping?" He had a loud, coarse voice, but what mattered was the way he asked the question, and his puzzled look.

Mahoney called: "The guy's lying, you fool."

"That's right," shouted Sam. "He's lying, he's trying to fool you."

"Shut up," said the man with the coarse voice, and he stared up at Rollison. "Let's have it all, you."

"All right," said Rollison. "I'll make it simple. I have a flat in Mayfair. I'd left this missing Agatha there in charge of my servant." He paused between each short sentence and could see that it was forcing itself upon them, the simplicity of the statements and his tone had a ring of truth. That was his gamble.

"I was at Silver Queen's Wembley plant today," he went on. "I'd been asked to investigate some trouble there. Sobotage, itching powder in face powder, sand in lipstick, the kind of thing to put your girl friends in a fine old stew. Enough to make them throw Silver Queen overboard, to sink without trace. Understand me, so far?"

Mahoney's face was twisted as he called: "Can't you see he's lying? He's making his story up."

"Shut up, Yank," a man said.

Rollison went on: "When Silver Queen's thrown overboard, where will you all be? Out of work, my boys. Any of you remember the depression days? Well, that's what you'll get again. Silver Queen gets thrown overboard. That's the fact. Someone's trying to do it, too. I was asked to find out who. I went back home to plan the next step. I reached my flat. I saw red oxide marks on the front door mat and on the stairs. Red oxide from there!" he roared in sudden fury, and pointed to the cask with the broken stove and the red oxide, sprayed with water and looking like blood.

Every eye turned to it, including Mahoney's; then back towards Rollison. "And I went upstairs. Agatha wasn't there. My servant was. He was a man I can remember since I was knee high. He's in a hospital, hovering between life and death. They smashed his head to pulp. Remember the murder of Jimmy Fance, your head salesman? They did the same to him. Next they took Agatha Bell away. I can tell you why. They wanted Adam Bell, and the only way they could get him was to threaten his daughter."

Rollison paused again, leaned over the gangway, and called very clearly and sharply: "Isn't that right, Adam?"

"It's absolutely right," said Adam Bell, in a voice which hardly carried to Rollison's ears. "They said they'd kill her if I didn't come out of hiding. They told me to come here. What else could I do? They told me that if I didn't walk quietly on board, that's what they'd do to my daughter." There was a pause, followed by an anguished: "What else could I do?"

Silence.

Then Rollison said softly: "The police aren't far off, and some friends of mine are locked up in the Crown's Nest. I don't know what Mahoney or anyone else told you, but now you know the truth. Every man among you will be party to kidnapping and attempt murder if you let the pair get away with it. But if you find the girl—"

The man with the coarse voice shouted: "Okay, let's find the girl!" He moved swiftly towards the stocky Sam who was backing away. "Where is she?" he demanded, "where's that girl?"

Sam was mouthing:

"None—none of it's true, none of it."

He broke off.

Glancing towards the long shed and the great Silver Queen upon it, fearful of what might happen there, Rollison saw men moving beyond it. Not one or two, but dozens of men, all hurrying. Ebb was there, too massive to be missed, with the rest of his men. There was Grice, too, and Division and Yard men, spreading out in three different directions.

It no longer mattered what Mahoney said, what Sam said, what the officers of the ship did; there was no danger now, it was all over. He'd gambled that most of the crew were honest men, and he'd been right.

He moved slowly down the shaking wooden steps of the gangway. He reached the bottom as Adam Bell cried out in a startled voice: "Look out!"

Rollison jerked his head up and saw Mahoney, who had a gun levelled in his big right hand. Rollison knew that he couldn't dodge right or left, for the gangway was too narrow. He'd found his way out; but there wouldn't be a way out of this.

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — The South Korean military government hungers for public support. But by their own admission, the generals and colonels ruling the country are no cinches to win any popularity contest.

That the junta is concerned with the base attitude of the public is shown in a 75-page mimeographed booklet just released to the press.

The pamphlet reviews the "revolutionary achievements of the first two months," but frankly says the public is watching the government "with a mixed feeling of anxiety and hope."

The junta, which swept to power in a May 18 coup, adds that "giving rash judgments and distrusting the policies of the revolutionary government... would only create uneasiness and as a result diminish the effectiveness of government policies." In other words: "Believe in us."

But there is every indication the message isn't getting across. Talk to a cross section of the public, city and country, and you get the impression that there are two types of Koreans now—those who for one reason or another don't like the military government and those who just don't care.

"The entire nation must join actively in achieving the revolutionary tasks to shorten the period of military rule," the new pamphlet says, but the government has taken few steps to whip up public support.

It has issued a bushel of decrees; in the early post-coup days of late May the streets of Seoul were cleaned, hoodlums were arrested in droves, and traffic was made more orderly. All this was generally welcomed.

Now there is a propaganda campaign, mostly ineffective, to sell the military government to the people. Main intersections have posters and cartoons lauding the work of the military leaders. Girl Scouts sit in police jeeps and recite traffic rules to pedestrians. A progovernment parade complete with band is held several times a week. The lack of enthusiasm is almost always obvious.

But the junta preaches austerity—to people who in many instances would hardly be alive if they lived any more austere.

Kennedy And Stevenson Review UN Strategy

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—President Kennedy and Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson sit down today for a point-by-point review of U.S. strategy in the upcoming General Assembly of the United Nations.

Their conference is expected to last for many hours.

Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, will remain overnight as Kennedy's guest at the Cape Cod summer White House.

Also on hand is Harlan Cleveland, assistant secretary of state for international organization affairs, who flew from the capital with Kennedy late Friday and is spending the weekend at nearby Harwichport.

Stevenson gave Kennedy a preliminary report Thursday on his recent trip to Europe, during which he conferred with French President Charles de Gaulle, among others.

While the discussion between Kennedy and Stevenson was billed in advance as dealing with all the problems expected to come before the U.N. General Assembly next month, Germany and divided Berlin presumably will be in for paramount attention.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev told the Western powers Friday he is ready to negotiate a settlement of the future of Germany and Berlin. But he advanced no specific proposals.

Assistant White House press secretary Andrew T. Hatcher said there would be "no comment at this time" on the Soviet move.

Hatcher said he doubted they would be any comment over the weekend.

Germany and Berlin, however, had no monopoly in the Kennedy-Stevenson talks.

Problems expected to come before the U.N. assembly cover virtually the whole field of U.S. foreign policy.

They include the Tunisian crisis, how to deal with Red China's bid for admission to the United Nations, and the package deal which would admit both Outer Mongolia and Mauretania, Vice President Chen Cheng of Nationalist China served notice during his visit to Washington this week that his country is determined to veto oth Red China and Mauretania.
