East German Gov't Says Treaty Parleys In Progress

BERLIN (AP)—East Germany announced today that negotiations already are under way in Communist capitals for the German peace treaty demanded by Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

But it added nothing about negotiating it. Bolz said the foreign ministers of the Soviet bloc will meet late in the fall—exactly when or where he did not say.

Khrushchev has demanded that peace treaties be signed with East and West Germany. Since the West is firmly against signing a treaty with anything but a reunited Germany, it appeared the projected conference would draw up a treaty, the West would reject it and then Khrushchev would sign it ahead and sign it before the end of the year, as promised.

up against the West in Germany. The Communist press made no fuss about the appointment. Neues Deutschland, the official party organ, carried the one-sentence report in bold type, on page one, under a small headline.

less thousands still reach West Berlin, spurred by the increasingly belligerent speeches of Khrushchev and other Communist leaders threatening to close off their escape route.

He said a peace treaty would open the way for "the military neutrality of both German states and so to a neutral, peacefully unified Germany."

Ubricht told workers in an East Berlin factory: "The borders of the German Democratic Republic must, if necessary, be defended militarily against the militarists in Bonn, and by the forces of the Soviet Union as well as the national people's army."

Ubricht said strengthening East Germany "in all fields" would warn the West against what he termed "war hysteria ignited in West Germany."

Khrushchev Insists On 'Respect'

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev, reiterating he is ready to negotiate, today welcomed President Kennedy's expression of hope for a peaceful solution in Germany.

He said Western leaders who claim that only seven million will die are talking nonsense. He made the declaration at a "friendly rally" in the Kremlin for Romanian Communist party boss Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej who has been visiting the Soviet Union since July 31.

Khrushchev said talk about low casualty figures is imperialist propaganda to prevent the Soviet Union from taking action on the German question. He reiterated his intention of signing a peace treaty with East Germany.

He said that "lies and shouts" on the part of the West will not stop the Soviet Union. For example, he said, the roars of the British lion no longer frighten anyone.

Re-Affirms No Exclusion Pledge In Redeveloping

Redevelopment Chairman M. E. Cavendish last night re-affirmed that no one has been or will be given special consideration in the development of Shore Drive area.

"No one has been promised that their property will be excluded from this area," Cavendish declared at the regular monthly meeting of the Redevelopment Commission.

He said he has been asked if the commission gave permission to owners of an office building now under construction at Second and Washington St. to build in the area with assurance that their property would not be taken.

Attorney Louis Gaylor, one of the owners, had appeared at a prior Redevelopment meeting to inform the commission that his group intended to go ahead with construction. However, he said at the time, he realized it was a calculated risk.

Shout Approval

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress, shouting its approval, has given President Kennedy a record peacetime defense budget, including about a billion dollars more than he asked.

That completed action just 16 days after Kennedy asked for an additional $3.5 billion to strengthen conventional forces in the face of new Communist threats.

Congress voted an extra $25 million to continue production of B52 bombers, an additional $225 million to develop the 2,000-mile-an-hour B70 bomber—which the administration has cut back pending if it would be superseded by missiles before it could become operational—and extra money for stepping up National Guard and reserve strength.

The bill also carried $207.6 million Kennedy requested for an intensified civil defense shelter program.

101st Airborne In Today's Jump

FT. BRAGG, N. C. (AP)—The "Screaming Eagles" of the 101st Airborne Division, carrying the Army's new and powerful M-14 rifles, leaped from the sky near Cheraw, S. C., today in war games.

The first of about 6,000 of the Strategic Army Corps (STRAC) paratroopers from Ft. Campbell, Ky., jumped at 10:50 a. m. in an Exercise Swift Strike airdrop expected to take about five hours to complete. Three drop zones were in use by the troopers commanded by Maj. Gen. Charles W. D. Rich.

The jump, second of the joint Army-Air Force exercise to train personnel in the limited war situations STRAC is designed to meet, was delayed for about two hours by low clouds and poor visibility.

Sec. Rusk Reports To President Today On Chances Of Negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy got a personal report from Secretary of State Dean Rusk today on Allied military and diplomatic plans for meeting the Soviet challenge over West Berlin.

Rusk, who returned from Western Europe Thursday night, was reported to be encouraged about the buildup in military forces by other North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations paralleling that ordered by Kennedy.

Kennedy and Rusk, however, were reported increasingly concerned over what they consider the rigid, threatening attitude being displayed by Soviet Premier Khrushchev in public statements and private meetings with Western diplomats and visitors.

There is a growing conviction that Khrushchev's present position offers no real hope of successful negotiations, in spite of his demand that the West seek a peaceful settlement of the Berlin dispute he has created.

He is confident the NATO allies in Europe will take prompt steps to build up their military forces toward the goal of 30 combat-ready divisions which NATO is supposed to have on its Western front.

The secretary of state and the British, French and West German foreign ministers made substantial progress on working out contingency plans—plans specifying how to meet a variety of anti-Western moves which the Soviets may make with respect to Berlin and its access routes.

Rusk got agreement with the other foreign ministers, including France's Couve de Murville, that at some point there should be negotiations with the Russians for a peaceful way out of the Berlin crisis.

He continued by saying "62 yards (86 feet) of skid marks" were found leading north on N.C. 43 (the direction from which the truck was coming) from the point of impact.

He testified that the Dudley car pulled up and stopped (headed west on the rural paved road) the one truck went by and the car eased out into the highway in front of the truck driven by McCroskey, and the collision took place.

Patrolman W. K. Chapman, who investigated the collision, said when he arrived at the scene, he found a tractor and semi-trailer and a 1953 Ford joined together on the west side of the highway" off on the shoulder of the road.

The officer explained that "skidmarks traced 87 feet" back of the trailer to a point in the intersection. Ptl. Chapman set this as the point of impact of the two vehicles.

He continued by saying "62 yards (86 feet) of skid marks" were found leading north on N.C. 43 (the direction from which the truck was coming) from the point of impact.

He quoted McCroskey as saying he saw the auto stopped as he approached the intersection and assumed that it would grant him the right of way but as he came closer, the auto pulled into the highway in front of his truck. He applied the truck's brakes but was unable to avoid the collision.

Ptl. Chapman reported that Dudley was transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital by members of the Greenville Fire Department Rescue Unit. He arrived at Pitt Memorial Hospital at 7:25, the officer noted, stopped breathing at 7:50 a. m. and was pronounced dead by a doctor at 7:55.

He set the time of the collision at about 6:45. After conferring for about a quarter-hour, the jury recommended that no criminal action be taken against the driver of the truck, McCroskey, but made no mention of Mrs. Dudley.

Ptl. Chapman noted that the woman has been charged with failure to yield the right of way. The charge is to be heard before Justice of Peace Luther D. Moore August 18, he noted.

Current Military Training Maneuvers A 'Coincidence'

By ELTON C. FAY AP Military Affairs Writer WASHINGTON (AP)—Military forces of the United States and her allies are in training maneuvers in far flung quarters of the world while diplomats talk and Communist crisis deepens.

But Washington officials say it is coincidence that the troubled time and training happen to come together, that big-scale military training must be and is planned long in advance.

In West Germany, three battle groups of the U.S. Army and tactical planes of the U.S. Air Force have just started a 10-day operation.

In this country, up to 30,000 Army troops and a swarm of planes are in the midst of a two-week operation, called Swift Strike, to train and test out airborne and other techniques.

troops of the 7th Infantry Division have teamed up with Republic of Korea units in "Operation Sharp Edge." A U.S. Navy amphibious force, including both landing craft and destroyers, is in the operation.

Heading down the west coast of South America is a Navy force of four destroyers, patrol planes and a submarine, beginning "Exercise Unitas II." Prime purpose of this exercise is to help train navies of eight South American countries in anti-submarine warfare.

A North Atlantic Treaty Organization training operation, Trade-wind Five, is under way in the western North Atlantic. This exercise, however, will be essentially a paper maneuver to test out command functions. No big movement of ships is involved.

session of the General Assembly for any purpose prior to the November 7 election. That almost certainly means there will be no special session of the 1961 General Assembly until after the members of the 1963 Legislature have been nominated.

ment of ships is involved. Earlier this summer, U.S., Canadian and other ships held exercises in the same area.

Military exercises, because of planning requirements and budgets, are scheduled months and even years in advance.

The big-scale exercises of NATO and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization are planned a year or two ahead of time, officials say.

There remains this possibility: If the primary next spring upsets current administration control of the Legislature, a special session might be called for next summer so that the incumbent legislators could do the law making, before they have to surrender their seats.

Election On Improvement Bond Issues Tentatively Set Nov. 7

By LYNN NISBET Reflector Bureau, Assn. Afternoon Dailies

RALEIGH—Governor Sanford told newsmen at his weekly conference that he would call an election on the $61.7 million capital improvements bonds authorized by the recent General Assembly on Tuesday, November 7, 1961.

He said decision about a special session of the General Assembly to submit school building bonds and perhaps other issues would be deferred. "We will worry about that later," he said. He added that there certainly would be no

Modifications Of Rocket Plane Are Ordered

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—Modifications have been ordered for an X15 rocket plane which lost cabin pressure during a Navy pilot's checkout flight.

When cabin pressure dropped during Cmdr. Forrest Peterson's flight Thursday, his pressure suit inflated automatically to protect him.

The suit, ballooned out by gas pressure, slowed Peterson's reactions a trifle—and he went 280 miles an hour faster and 5,000 feet higher than he had planned because he was slow in reaching a flap control.

The X15 reached a speed of 2,720 m.p.h. and an altitude of 80,000 feet in an eight-minute flight, then landed here. It was Peterson's first flight in the X15 with a newer, more powerful rocket engine.

The X15s record flights have taken it to 3,603 m.p.h. and up 169,000 feet.

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN
It is with mingled feelings that you go about tearing down an old garden. In a few short swipes of an ax or jabs of a shovel, you can end a decade of growth and a handful of dreams. For a garden is but a dream that seed, labor, sun and rain have brought to fulfillment.

But when an owner passes and the unchecked lush growth of years is allowed to throw its weight where it pleases; a young jungle is born. Such a place becomes an eyesore to both new owner and neighbor. The only answer is to be found in the blade of an ax and the point of a shovel.

For many years the giant wisteria had wound around the tree and the pressure of its grip had slowly squeezed the life from its unwilling host. Many cargoes of purple flowers had spilled down from its limbs. The ax and saw soon removed vine and tree. But the roots of the vine and rotten roots of the tree only gave way beneath repeated attacks of shovel and ax.

Plants long hidden came to light—their growth stunted by too much shade and encroaching weeds and vines. A rose with canes as thick as the wrist of a man would never know another spring; nor would the ivy on the chimney wall.

Volunteer things, sown by the wind and bird-cherry laurel, red bud and a stunted cedar tree, growing where a rock garden once stood, went to the growing pile of roots, sawed off limbs and vines.

Dogwood stretched themselves in new found freedom and azaleas regained some of their lost composure. Boxwoods, some of their more noisy neighbors removed, gained back their places of prominence. Photina, abelia, osmanthus, with their new haircuts, looked pleased as if someone had given them a pony.

Long hidden walks came to sight and one could see his way about. The holly tree thought ahead to better times.

The work goes on to the approval of people in the neighborhood and the passerby down the street. But yet, you can but wonder if there are not other eyes, also, following the work of shovel, ax and saw. Eyes that liked the garden as it was with its dense growth, its shaded shelter from the sun. Eyes that knew more intimately than any other the place of each growing thing and the reason for them being there.

But maybe they do not disapprove at all. Perhaps the gardeners they see will never need an ax or saw.

And maybe it is just as good to take away and begin again. Try a new plant that has never known this particular garden spot before. So the work is done and the garden area seems strange and empty to the daily eye.

The sun comes adventuring, feeling its way down the peccan damp ground, touching again a long hidden leaf and sending a message of growth into its roots. Parts of the garden that are left take up again where they had left off; and the new cleared areas would soon be readied for new plants. The grass will grow; and the pruning shears and saw kept handy, so in the years to come, there would be no need of the drastic operation just finished.

It Turned Out Like Television

ST. SAUVEUR, France—(WNS)—When Genevieve Estienne was appointed to select local entries for a contest to name the "perfect fiances of France," she discovered that there were no fiances in St. Sauveur.

To save the romantic reputation of the community, the vivacious blonde hairdresser introduced her prettiest customer, Michele Lefebvre, to the town's soccer star, Roger Gautier, and named them the town's entries.

To the embarrassment of the plotters, Michele and Roger won the contest. They were smothered with wedding gifts by shopkeepers, and the mayor found them a "honeymoon home."

The pair were wondering how to get out of the marriage when Roger was hit so hard in a soccer game that his right leg was broken.

"At that moment I knew I was in love," confessed Michele. She rushed onto the football field threw her arms around Gautier, and took him home to nurse him back to health. Now the "fiances malgre eux" are on their honeymoon.

Is 20, 30 Or 40 Years Best For Home Buyer?

By MORTON YARMON
Women's News Service

NEW YORK—(WNS)—When you buy a home, should you take as many years as possible to pay off the mortgage, or as few years?

This perennial question is back in full force now that we have a new Kennedy housing program that features 40-year mortgages. Before getting into the arguments on both sides of the question, let's look at some figures, using as an example a $20,000 house with a mortgage of $18,000 that calls for payment of 6 per cent interest.

If your mortgage were to run for 25 years, you would have monthly mortgage payments of $115.98. At the end of the 25-year period you would have paid in $36,794 for your home.

On a 30-year mortgage, the monthly payments would amount to $107.92 and the total cost would be $40,851.20.

And what about a 40-year mortgage? At 40 years the monthly payments amount to $99.04; but the final one balloons to $49,530.20 or about two and a half times the $20,000 you think you're paying for your new home.

These figures add up to this bare truth: the longer the mortgage term, the lower the monthly payments and the greater the total interest charges.

Now to the current arguments. Those who favor the 40-year payment plan have only one argument, but they feel it's an overriding one. They feel that the lower monthly payments allow many of us to own our own homes who otherwise would be unable to do so.

Against this is a series of arguments. First, opponents say that banks and other lenders will be loath to offer mortgage money for that length of time without Government guarantees since a house may be depreciated into a state of worthlessness over that long a period of time.

Second, the equity the owner has in his home is built up so slowly that, should a recession hit us, many homeowners would abandon their homes.

Third, since few families stay in one house for anything like 40 years, the mortgage payment actually is the equivalent of rent, and the families never really get to own their own home.

Then, the time when the family can own its own home free and clear seems so far off that ownership becomes an impossible illusion. As a consequence, it is feared there will be little pride of ownership.

Finally and probably most telling, the length of time of the mortgage will be so overpowering that families will tend to consider the mortgage an albatross around their necks.

What should you do in the face of these arguments? Most sensible course, according to family finance experts, is that you choose the period with the highest monthly payments that your present income allows you to assume.

Then—and this is most important—what make certain that your mortgage agreement includes firm prepayment privileges that allow you to pay off the mortgage ahead of time without any penalty payments. In that way, should you begin to earn more money or should your expenses take a dip because the children go off and get married, you can cut down the number of years during which you face regular mortgage payments simply by making larger payments when that is convenient.

In other words, you get to eat your cake and have it!

This Should Be Last Year For Wagon Train's Scout

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When a successful TV series star begins to beat about boredom and the fear of type-casting, he probably wants more money.

At least the symptoms usually appear the moment he gets a better contract or a piece of the show.

Thus, when "Wagon Train's" co-star, Robert Horton, started to make the usual throaty growls last season, nobody took him quite seriously. They tried the usual antidotes, including a share of the show. But Horton surprised them.

"I think five years in one role is enough," Horton said Thursday between scenes on the "Wagon Train" set. "I've done lots of other things outside the show, so that type-casting isn't my problem. I just think that there are other things to be done, and other roles I'm interested in playing."

"But I'm not unhappy about 'Wagon Train.' I wasn't a Western actor and I was thrown against Ward Bond, the epitome of the Western actor, in this series. I consider that I was able to develop an interesting and different character in it. But now I have other things to do—and I turned down part ownership of the show to do them."

So this will be, honest and truly, the last year of scouting for Flint McCullough. And if the wheels keep turning for a 1962-63 season, the train's chief scout will be a character called Duke Shannon. Scott Miller, blond, 6 feet four and a basketball star at the University of California at Los Angeles, has already been chosen for the part. This season, Horton's last, Miller is being groomed to leap into the empty saddle.

Last year Scott had seven or eight minor roles in the series. So far he has played bigger parts in six of the seven "Wagon Trains" which have been finished to date.

"It's a lucky break for me," the young actor conceded, "but it is a little scary, too. After all, I haven't had too much acting experience."

That, of course, is nonsense: before Scott got into TV, he had the title role in a motion picture: "Tarzan, the Ape Man," and everybody knows the dramatic demands made on actors in that legendary part.

Three old TV pros seem to be playing a secret game in full view of the audience: it was the Jimmy Durante special on NBC Wednesday night, and Jimmy, Bob Hope and Garry Moore were apparently more interested in breaking each other up than in entertaining the folks at home.

The sketches were ragged. Inexplicable laughter muffled the lines, if any, and the whole show looked as if it were an early rehearsal telecast by mistake. Not even the witticisms of writer Goodman Ace and his doughty crew of jokesmiths were able to surface often through the intramural jokes.

Well, what do you expect in summer? A regular Perry Como show?

Smaller Latin Nations Moving To Insure They Get Their Share

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP) — Latin America's smaller nations today were challenging their bigger neighbors to make sure they get their share of President Kennedy's $20-billion Alliance for Progress aid program.

In the maneuvering at the Inter-American Economic Conference here the United States is standing on the sidelines as a benevolent neutral.

The smaller nations, after winning one victory Thursday, appeared to have enough votes to insure creation of the controversial commission of "seven men" to coordinate national development plans.

Uruguay, smallest country in South America, is leading the campaign based on evident fears that otherwise the big nations will reap most of the benefits from the U.S. drive to bolster Latin America against the twin threats of communism and Castroism.

The United States proposed creation of the commission when the conference began but pulled back when Argentina, Brazil, Mexico, Chile and Peru demanded that it be demoted to an advisory group. The larger nations, which already have their own development programs, want to deal directly with the United States and the various lending agencies instead of going through an over-all hemispheric board.

Argentina and Brazil reportedly are urging the United States to launch an immediate crash program of aid to the weaker nations on an emergency basis.

This move has aroused suspicions among the smaller countries that their bigger brothers are only trying to keep them pacified for the time being.

U.S. observers say both groups probably will have to make concessions to get the Alliance for Progress program started.

Bolivia, threatened by revolutionary ferment, won the first small-nation victory with a motion calling for priority to aid to small countries. Brazil, which has serious economic troubles in her own northeast, sought to change the wording to read "regions" in direct need.

The Bolivian motion won 29-1, with the United States voting alongside the Cuban regime whose revolutionary influence it seeks to counteract with the alliance for Progress program.

The conference has attracted private investors from many parts of the world — representatives of railroads, banks, power and automobile interests among others.

They are showing an interest in pouring billions of dollars into the U.S.-sponsored aid program—but first are seeking to find out how it can be done best, the risks involved and particularly what Latin American business interests are willing to contribute.

Richard S. Aldrich of New York, vice president of the International Basic Economic Corporation (IBEC), said: "We felt that the private segment of the U.S. economy ought to emphasize the fact here that it represents a vital source of investment capital."

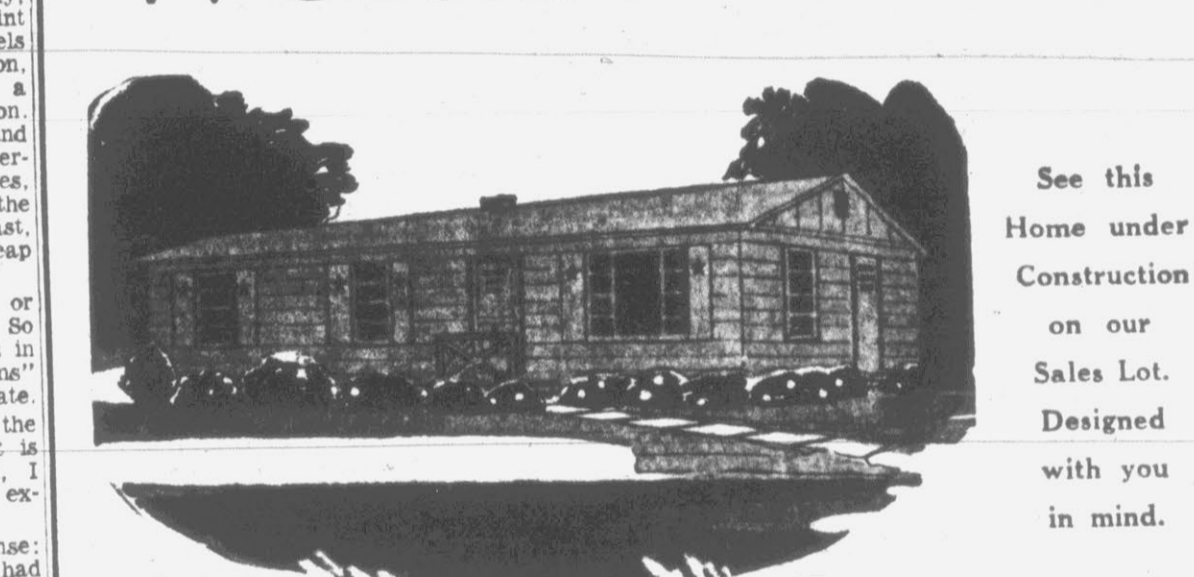

"We are making it clear to them," he said, "that the government will have to call on local private investment groups to take an active part. No aid program can be successful without local participation."

A representative of two investment firms—one in Miami, Fla., and the other in the Bahamas—said his firms were backed up by $2.5 billion in capital.

"We are aiming at the grass roots level, where the government agencies are not reaching," he said.

Another investor said, however, "there are a million difficulties in the Alliance for Progress yet to be overcome."

Patience Obviously Wearing Thin

It is clear that a good many members of Congress are fed up now with the action of Cuba's Fidel Castro and are ready for the President to use force against Cuba if Castro continues to step on U.S. toes.

This feeling has been growing, and reached a new peak among members of Congress this week when the Pan American plane from Mexico City was diverted to Havana. As word of the hijacking spread there were immediate demands from members of Congress that the President issue an ultimatum to Castro to release the airliner and its passengers immediately or expect U.S. forces to seek their release.

The fact that Cuban officials authorized return of the plane to the United States before any official action was taken by the administration rendered statements of the members of Congress as just so many words. But they do reflect a growing feeling in Congress that the United States should not tolerate further serious insults from the Castro regime.

Whether or not such statements by members of Congress regarding the use of force against Cuba will influence the administration's feeling on the matter remains to be seen. The situation does suggest, however, that there is a growing feeling at high levels in the United States government that we must evaluate anew our position that the U.S. will not intervene with military forces in Cuba. The situation may well have reached the point where any incident may prove the straw which breaks the back of U.S. patience with the Castro regime in Cuba. And if that is the case, it would rank in importance with the expected Berlin crisis . . . except that it could come at any moment and would involve immediately the commitment of U.S. military forces. There may be no time for talk or negotiations.

The United States has taken far more insults from Cuba than many would have expected a few years ago. Certainly the Castro regime has confiscated American properties worth many times more than a single airliner or a number of them. Yet the accumulation of these incidents over a period of many months now is bringing the matter to a head. As indicated by statements by members of Congress this week, American patience in some high circles has reached the breaking point.

Fidel Initiated None Of These

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—Before your blood pressure goes up, thinking of Fidel Castro and hijacked American planes, look at the record. It's a dizzy, almost incredible story compounded of confusion.

So far as the record shows Castro initiated none of the hijackings. There were four. Three of the four planes were forced to land in Cuba. Castro immediately released two, kept one. The fourth got detoured to El Paso.

None of the five hijackers involved was a Cuban citizen. Two were Americans from Arizona, one was a Frenchman, one a Puerto Rican, and one, a waiter, was born in Cuba but had become a naturalized American citizen.

Meanwhile Cubans fleeing Castro hijacked or flew 24 of his planes to this country. The United States returned 14 of them to him. The other 10 were seized under a court order to be sold for a debt owed by the Cuban government to a Miami businessman.

And if Castro had used his head he probably could have gotten the 10 back too. How? A State Department spokesman said: "If Castro had invoked Cuba's sovereignty over the planes the American court most likely would have refused to let the planes be seized."

Why didn't he do that, since it sounds so simple? The State Department spokesman said this was the answer: He probably didn't know how he could do that, or he didn't think of it, or perhaps he couldn't find a lawyer to represent him here. But that's only the beginning. Wednesday a French gunman, over Mexico and at gunpoint, forced the pilot of a Pan American World Airways plane with 81 persons aboard to fly him to Havana. After it was all over an official of the airline said the gunman was incoherent and had no connection with Cuba. Crew members described the hijacker as wild eyed and apparently mentally disturbed.

Before all this was known there were angry shouts in Congress. But Castro would not have had to send an agent to Mexico to capture a Pan American plane. Pan American is the only American airline still maintaining regular flights between Cuba and this country. So if Castro wanted to be could have helped himself to some Pan American planes on the ground in Havana.

But that's only the beginning. worst possible time to hijack an American plane. All the American nations are meeting right now in Uruguay where the United States has offered $20 billion in Latin American aid.

One of Castro's chief lieutenants, Ernesto Guevara, is there, trying to make the United States look like a villain. He made a speech to that effect. Castro would be the villain if he turned hijacker at this time. The truly ludicrous touch came here:

Instead of trying to chastise Castro directly, the United States is anxious for the Latin-American countries to crack down on him. No one has been working harder to get just this crack-down on Castro than the Colombian foreign minister, Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala. And Castro knows it. By chance, the minister was on the plane hijacked Wednesday and forced down in Havana.

If Castro had tried to hold him there would have been a Latin-American explosion. Castro's government lost no time in announcing it was releasing the plane right away "in deference to the Colombian minister." Castro even went to the airport to see him. The diplomat quoted Castro as expressing mortification.

A wife cannot simply forget to remember. Well, anyway, I had this odd dream the other night. I had passed on to the remembrance of a grateful posterity. My wife, after counting the insurance and a suitable period of quiet jubilation, married an elephant.

Many of her friends thought this was rather an unusual choice as the elephant wasn't as elephants go, an outstanding character. But those who best knew Frances, my wife, realized the reason—the elephant to her bore a sentimental resemblance to her first husband. And he had an added virtue: He didn't drink martinis.

"The best headstand you did, Jumbo," said Frances, pausing in her knitting, "was before those 10,679 fans in Omaha on August 12. It was such a hot night. You were simply magnificent. And I was so proud of you."

Reaching boredly out for another peanut, Jumbo replied: "You have it all wrong, kid. The best headstand I did was in Kansas City on August 1 before 12,325 people."

"Incidentally, we played in Omaha on August 13—not August 12—before a lousy crowd of 3,819, my foot slipped and I fell on my back, and it rained that day and the highest temperature was 67 degrees."

"Can't you get anything straight?" "Sorry, dear, said Frances. So it went, night after night. Elephants in winter quarters like to recall the previous season. But every time Frances tactfully attempted to bolster Jumbo's ego with some remembrance he would say: "It didn't happen that way—it happened this way. Can't you ever get anything straight? What's the matter with your mind?"

Finally, one evening, Frances broke into tears and said: "Life with a husband with a perfect memory is just too much for a woman. I wish I had my first husband back."

"Well, kid," sneered Jumbo, with an air of mock sympathy as he reached out with his trunk and patted her on the shoulder. "It's a little bit late to be thinking of that, isn't it?"

Right about then my dream ended. Blinking in the morning sunlight, I awoke and looked across at my wife.

"You got home rather late last night," said Frances. "Just where were you?"

"I forget," I mumbled. "You forgot awfully easily," she said. "Sometimes I wish I had married an elephant. They never forget."

Something In Common

NEW YORK (AP)—I dreamed the other night that my wife remarried—this time to an elephant. It's not too hard to figure out why an ordinary husband would have a dream like this. One of the most vexing things about wives to most husbands is their inordinate memory. No machine fed endless information on tape, can match the total recall born in wives. The many incidents of ordinary living that don't register at all in a husband's mind—and others that he wisely chooses to regret and forget—stay in a wife's mind at her immortal beck and call.

Quote . . .

"Those most guilty of fiddling while highway safety is burning are the people themselves. They just won't get really worked up about highway safety. If they did get so worked up, the legislature would enact needed laws and the courts would use those laws to punish those who make death traps of our highways." —The Raleigh Times.

Other Editors Saying . . . Membership In UN.

United States on UN membership. The National Strategy committee of the American Safety Council realistically appraises the Red China's chances of admission and the disastrous consequences that would result.

You should know the criteria used by Great Britain and the U.S. in judging the issue of diplomatic recognition. Britain believes that when a government is in control of a territory it should be recognized. This act of recognition has nothing to do with the way the government assumed the power or with the way it controls the people governed. Recognition and approbation are entirely separate questions, so say the British.

To the United States recognition has great significance, for not only self-interest but moral principles are involved. We assess the ability of the government to live up to international obligations. Article four specifies the nation must be peace loving and willing to carry out the obligations of membership.

The President needs your support. Speak to your representatives urging an early vote on a concurrent resolution in the Senate and House which reaffirms the position this nation has followed. This is that we oppose Red China's membership in the U.N. by all means at our command, including the veto.

The President has taken his position. If this nation is to continue the moral leadership of the free world we must not submit to the admission of Red China.

This nation knows that we have been losing support as the membership changes. And if we are ever out-voted, we should go down holding firm to the criteria that has guided the

Travel Speeded By State Plane

By LYNN NISBET
PLANE—The newly acquired State executive airplane took a trip Monday from Raleigh to Asheville and back. That was just one of many flights made since the State accepted delivery of the plane about a month ago. It is used for base of this story because it is fairly typical.

Hargrove Bowles, Jr., director of Conservation and Development, had a speaking engagement in Asheville at 11 o'clock Monday morning. Roy Wilder, assistant director of C&D, had to go to Bent Creek Ranch to arrange a State sponsored convention. Tom Ellis, director of the C&D Parks division, needed to go to Mount Mitchell State Park. Robert Barbour, chief of the community planning division in the C&D set up, needed to meet with the Asheville and Western Region planning director.

A few local telephone calls set up a combination plane trip whereby all these deals were taken care of in one day. Sure, the State men had to get on the job an hour or two before regular work time and stay on an hour or two after regular quitting time. The main point is that four State officials transacted business in the Asheville area in one day, by plane plus a little bit of local automobile travel, that otherwise would have required the use of four automobiles for three days each. Furthermore, the men would have been away from their desks for three days and had two nights expense away from home.

Of course, there could be a lot more cooperation in use of automobiles for long trips, but the time saving is not enough to justify the effort in many instances. Soon after World War I pooled trips in automobiles were comparable to air plane use now.

INDUSTRY—That smokestacks and massive machinery are not the only evidence of industrial growth is illustrated by an editorial in the Goldsboro News-Argus. The paper notes that action of the recent Legislature had added 159 new jobs at Cherry Hospital and 110 at O'Berry Training school. Both institutions are under the State Hospitals Board of Control. The hospital is for mentally ill Negro adults, the school for mentally retarded Negro children.

The local economic value of institutions of this kind is often overlooked. According to the budget book Cherry Hospital had 644 persons on the payroll for the past fiscal year at an annual average salary of $3,442. O'Berry School had 218 employees at an annual salary of 3,032. That produced a payroll well above two and three quarter million dollars. Addition of 269 persons to the joint list of 862 runs the number of employees above 1100, and with the general pay raises for both new and old employees, will mean a total annual payroll of nearly four million dollars.

The Goldsboro story is duplicated in essential features in every community where a large State institution—hospital or college—is located. Despite the substantial industrial development at Raleigh during the past decade, the college and hospitals still constitute a major source of income.

Another fact sometimes overlooked is that a college, a hospital or a military installation, is worth more to a community than a manufacturing plant with the same payroll. Patients, soldiers and students attract visitors to far greater degree than industrial workers. These visitors spend money at hotels and restaurants and department stores.

ABC—The towns of Hertford in Perquimans county and Jamestown in Guilford county voted last week in favor of establishment of ABC liquor stores. In each instance the total vote was less than 500, but the ABC idea prevailed by substantial margins. Several weeks ago the town of Sparta in Alleghany county, also voting under a special act of the 1961 Legislature, refused to permit ABC stores. A few weeks earlier Ireddell voters, under previous legislative authority, for the second time decided not to allow liquor to be legally sold in the county.

Whether these election results constitute a "pattern" with respect to legal sale of liquor in North Carolina is debatable. Hertford is about halfway between Edenton and Elizabeth City, both of which have had liquor stores for many years. Jamestown is close to Greensboro and Winston-Salem, where legal liquor stores have operated very satisfactorily for some time. Sparta is sort of isolated in an arid area, so far as legal liquor is concerned, a long ways from an ABC store. Ireddell adjoins three ABC counties—Catawba, Mecklenburg and Rowan, and four "dry" counties—Alexander, Davie, Yadkin and Wilkes.

If there is a pattern it would seem to be that in communities where the voters know how ABC stores operate they are likely to approve the idea; where they are not familiar with the legal operation they are inclined to oppose it.

In all areas the approach to the question of legal or illegal sale of liquor is being recognized as economic rather than moral or religious.

Socialism In The Power Field

By ELMER ROESSNER
The drift of the Kennedy Administration toward socialism is shown most clearly in its program for expansion of the government's role in the production and distribution of electric power.

Nearing a final vote in Congress is a proposal to build the world's largest nuclear power plant in conjunction with the plutonium reactors at Hanford, Washington. This would be linked to the government's hydroelectric dam at Bonneville on the Columbia River, and to lines that would carry power to Southern California.

Also pending is a proposal for the government's construction of transmission lines from its upper Colorado River dam to carry power to users in Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah. "CHEAPER POWER"

The reason for the Administration's expansion in the power field, as given by Floyd E. Dominy, Federal Commissioner of Recreation, is: "Our main point of interest will be to sell power cheaply to the public."

However, if reducing power prices were the chief objective, it could be done very simply: Exempt private power companies from taxes.

Government power, as produced by the TVA for instance is cheaper largely because TVA pays no taxes, although it does make some payments to local governments in lieu of taxes. Private power costs more because private companies pay heavy taxes.

The Colorado River transmission system, for another example, if built by private enterprise would yield $1 million a year in Federal taxes and revenues, and $2 million a year in state and local taxes, including $1,160,000 in local school taxes, according to industry spokesmen. The power companies say that

This Is Their World

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The other night, I found myself surrounded by thousands of shouting, yelling, applauding, singing youngsters who were demanding more and more encores by Arthur Fiedler's Boston Pops Orchestra. It was their music, their night, their world. And it was very different.

The most exciting moment was when this magnificent symphony orchestra, somewhat augmented, played "Pop's Round-Up." Being an older, I thought what was to come was some kind of medley and I was not disappointed. It was a medley of the theme songs of television shows.

The older folks could not identify the older music which has little of Beethoven or Brahms. And I fear that some of the older folks looked down their noses at all this excitement, because at a Boston Symphony concert, or any other, one behaves according to protocol. The applause is usual and sufficient. There are no encores.

Not so on this occasion. The kids shouted the name of each theme song; they applauded during the playing; they even sang the songs. They had a grand time and any old man or woman who could not cheer along with his grandchildren should admit that he has had it and retire to such memories as senility endures. An 80 year youngster said that her only complaint was that she could not dance!

Each generation speaks its own language whether it is in speech or music and while it may want to hear what the ancestors had to say, it will reinterpret it. So when Tchaikowsky is done to jazz, it is not, as some say, vulgar stealing. It is rather an idea by another generation which cannot dance to a Strauss waltz but can make its own step, slow, meditative, with a little necking on the dance floor.

Older people always know what is right and what is wrong and they hate to see the world go to the devil. But somehow that never happens. There have been Caesars and Alexanders and Genghis Khans and Hitlers and then the human race catches its breath and goes about its business in its own fashion.

These young people who come to hear a symphony program end with "The Stars and Stripes Forever," as Fiedler always does, are not as frightened as their parents are. They expect to take their chances with life and to laugh at those who, having no daring, resort to petty snobbery as a defense.

Of course, these kids will not become millionaires, as Andrew Carnegie or Al Capone did; they may work in a laboratory for $10,000 a year, saving the human race and enjoying that as they revelled in "Tiger Rag" played as though it had been orchestrated by Ravel.

These kids do not complain about income taxes. They will find a thrill in blowing up a bomb or sitting on a space-ship or skin-diving. Theirs is a different world as their ambitions are different from those of their parents.

And so here I sit, under my maples, looking at a house that may be 200 years old or more, if one believes everything he hears, listening to a radio play Haydn. There are no children on this farm this year. One is building his own world far from mine; another has gone to the wars and is in a distant place where he lives in an entirely different civilization; another is at college during the summer studying economics, a very stupid but essential subject.

And so the world moves on and the oldsters shake their heads and wonder what will come of it all. My father wondered about that, I am sure, when I forsook his ideals of life and seized upon my own. And now I am a grandfather and watch a few thousand kids express themselves in their own way about the things they love.

Faithful is no wonder. Phil the Fiddler. But you have never heard of Phil the Fiddler! He was a character invented by Horatio Alger with the object of convincing young boys that if they worked hard, spoke truthfully, were loyal to their employer, they would, in the end, marry the boss' daughter and inherit the business.

Today, a young fellow does not want to inherit the business. He wants to know mathematics so that he can work on something that will orbit the Earth or something.

AMERICANS SPEND $2 BILLION FOR SOFT DRINKS IN YEAR

The Census Bureau reports that soft drink plants produced 1.2 billion cases of soft drinks last year. That figures out to about 16 bottles for each man, woman and child. Total production was $14 billion at the plant, and probably more than $2 billion at retail.

Mark, Young Missionary

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Acts 12:12, 25; 13:4-5, 13; 15:36-39; Colossians 4:10-11; II Timothy 4:11; I Peter 5:13.

Mark, cousin of Barnabas (leader of the church at Antioch), accompanied Barnabas and Paul on their first missionary journey. When hardships became severe, however, he left them and went back.—Acts 12:25; 13:4-5, 13.

When the time came for a second missionary journey, Barnabas wanted to take his young cousin along again. Paul, however, refused to take the former deserter, who "went not with them to the work."—Acts 15:36-38.

So strongly did each feel that "there arose a sharp contention, so that they parted asunder . . . and Barnabas took Mark with him, and sailed away into Cyprus," apparently having faith in Mark's potential.—Acts 15:39.

Barnabas' faith proved justified. He so redeemed himself later that Paul, imprisoned, found in him one of his three loyal friends, and commended him to his followers.—Colossians 4:10-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—II Timothy 2:3.

EXPERIENCES OF A LAD OF AVERAGE ABILITIES WHO IS CALLED INTO CHURCH SERVICE

Scripture—Acts 12:12, 25; 13:4-5, 13; 15:36-39; Colossians 4:10-11; II Timothy 4:11; I Peter 5:13.

By N. SPEER JONES
THE SUBJECT of this lesson is the author of the second gospel. He never refers to himself in that gospel, but we learn about him from the book of Acts, from some of the letters of the apostle Paul and from a reference in Peter's writings.

It was Pamphylia—a rugged mountainous, disease-ridden province in Asia Minor—that proved too much for the young Mark; he deserted the cause.

He fulfills an important role in early church history in that he is younger than the apostles and thus bridges the gap between them and later leaders.

In addition to the physical hardships, factors influencing Mark may have been his youth (lack of a mature steadfastness of purpose, plus homesickness) and a failure to realize the wide range of Christian work.

John Mark was the son of a Jewish convert named Mary (or Miriam), a well-to-do resident of Jerusalem. That she was important in the Christian community there is indicated by the fact that Peter, leader of the apostles, went to her house after his release from prison as that was a meeting place of the early Christians.

It is easy to see why, when the time came for a second missionary journey, "there arose a sharp contention" between Barnabas and Paul when Barnabas expressed a desire to take the deserter with them a second time.

Thus Mark was well known

Paul's faith in the young man had been destroyed.

to Peter, Barnabas, leader of the Christians in Antioch, had an even closer connection with the young man in that he was a cousin.

Barnabas, however, perhaps because his greater experience

In the opening of our lesson, Barnabas and Paul (Saul) are about to return to their headquarters at Antioch, in Syria, after a trip to take them to the Christians in Jerusalem. Barnabas, as head of the church, was undoubtedly seeking new potential leaders.

Paul's eyes—to the extent of being one of only three loyal friends. He also indicates that he had sent Mark as his personal representative to the Colossians.

Our lesson demonstrates that he was indeed a shrewd judge of character and that in the end his faith in Mark as a potential leader was more than justified.

Our lesson's final reference shows what favor the young Mark eventually found with the great apostle Peter, who considered him such an apt pupil that he called him his son.

Newsman Came Out Second Best

By LYNN NISBET
RALIGH—Reporters who thought they had Governor Sanford trapped in one phase of his philosophy came out second best in the foray at the weekly news conference.
Couple weeks ago the Governor urged private enterprise in North Carolina to hire ex-prisoners, many of whom make excellent workers. This week the Governor's office had to fire an ex-prisoner who had been on the office staff as a sort of errand boy mail clerk, because he had been convicted of "peeping Tom" operations.
Reporters wanted to know how the Governor could reconcile that incident with his general urging for hiring of ex-prisoners by private business firms. He had no difficulty reconciling the ideas.
"It's an individual proposition," he said. "There almost certainly will be some bad ones in the ex-prisoner deal. There are a lot of good ones. It is just as unfair to judge all of them by the bad as to judge all by the good."
When one reporter asked if the firing of this mail messenger clerk established a policy, the Governor quickly replied "It establishes policy to this extent—we will fire everybody caught and convicted of peeping Tom activities, and it won't make any difference whether he has done time or not."
Fact is, most of the staff at the Governor's Mansion, many of the workers around Capitol Square, and other State mental jobs are former prisoners—and they are doing good work.

Ford Gets 14th Win In Row, Spahn Shoots For 300 Mark

By ED WILKS Associated Press Sports Writer

It's a southpaw's world at the moment in major league baseball. Left-hander Whitey Ford, with his usual help from left-hander Luis Arroyo, has become the first 20-game winner of the season, and tonight left-hander Warren Spahn shoots for a rare 300th victory.

New York Yankees three games ahead of second-place Detroit in the American League race. It was Whitey's 14th consecutive victory, tying the Yankee record set in 1904 by Jack Chesbro. It also marked the 16th time in Ford's 28 starts this season that Arroyo has trudged in from the bullpen.

Browns with 20. A third-inning double by Frank Malzone wrapped it up for the Red Sox as Tracy Stallara (1-1) won his first in the majors. Al Schroll (0-2) was the loser.

Nat'l League President Giles Fires Controversial Dascoli

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—Controversial umpire Frank Dascoli was fired Thursday by National League President Warren Giles in an action unprecedented in modern-day major league baseball.

A spokesman for the National League said he could recall no instance of an outright dismissal of an umpire during the season play.

Giles said Dascoli's dismissal came about because recent remarks attributed to the umpire "makes his continued employment incompatible with the best interest of our umpiring staff, our office and the league."

Back in 1952 umpire Douglas (Scotty) Robb quit after it was reported he was fined more than $100 by St. Louis Cardinal manager Eddie Stanky and Solly Hemus, then a Cardinal player, after a ruckus over a called third strike on Hemus. Robb later joined the American League.

Hemus also has figured in Dascoli's troubles. Giles made it plain there was no question of Dascoli's integrity or impartiality on the field.

Dascoli was registered at a Cincinnati hotel Thursday night but it declined to give his room number and he could not be located in the usual baseball hangouts in the downtown area.

Dascoli, a resident of Danielson, Conn., joined the National League umpiring staff in 1948. He has been a subject of controversy among players, managers, fans and league officials many times during his tenure.

Several weeks ago he and Hemus, since ousted manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, got into a dispute before a television audience. Hemus called Dascoli "arroyant." Dascoli called Hemus "a busher." Both were reprimanded.

Last week, columnist Murray Olderman of the Newspaper Enterprise Association wrote a story quoting Dascoli as saying "games have gotten completely out of hand because he (Giles) refuses to back us up."

Olderman quoted Dascoli as saying he would quit at the end of this season.

Last weekend, Giles and Dascoli went into another of their many conferences here and a

I'm just hoping my back holds up. If it does maybe I can have a good last two months because it might help the Yankees retain the American League pennant.

A number of people have said that Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris, who are so hot with their home run bats, will be getting many bases on balls from here on in. If the pitchers persist in walking them I'd like to start hitting again so I can drive them home.

What bothered me about my good year in 1960 was my 95 strikeouts. I never had so many and right now I should be choking up on the bat to meet the ball when the pitchers have two strikes on me.

If I had learned to swim earlier my muscles today might have been a lot looser than they are. Maybe I wouldn't have hurt my back so many times. I'm back wearing a corset again. But since I hurt my back a few years ago the doctors advised me to do a lot of swimming, and it has helped my back. But I still need that corset. I die when I'm not hitting well.

Certain pitchers in the American League pitch me high, tight, fast balls. When I'm facing them I try to open my stance more so that I can get out in front with my swing. Casey Stengel had always tried to get me to hit to right field with a man on first, to stay out of the double play. It has paid off because I've got good power to right on the outside pitch.

Last year I hit 26 home runs and I would say I hit 14 or 15 to the opposite field.

In 10 years I've hit below 300 only once but I've always had a tendency to turn my head. That's just my way of hitting. I just can't keep my eye on the ball. My head is in left field and I still hit a home run over the right field fence.

Bill Dickey once told me "you can't spoil success; just do what comes naturally."

When I first broke into baseball I used a real heavy bat. It was 36 inches, 38 ounces. But now I've tapered off to a bat of 34 ounces. I can get it around better.

I was very proud last season when Ted Williams asked to use my K55 bat. He used it toward the end of his career, and so did Bob Cerv. Sometimes Mickey Mantle uses it hitting righthanded. It's a bat with good balance.

I only hope my back holds up and I can hit 300 again. But if we win the pennant I'll be happy enough.

RIDING HIGH ..... by Pap'

There is an old racing saying that goes: "Horses for courses." Meaning, of course, that certain horses run better on one track than on others. Apparently, the same holds true of jockeys.

Take the case of Tommy Barrow. Tommy is a veteran rider who has done well at tracks across the nation. He started riding quarter horses in his native Florida at 12 and has been riding professionally since he was 16 years old. Somehow or other, Barrow seems to save his best riding performances for the seashore tracks in New Jersey—Monmouth Park and Atlantic City. Maybe, it's the salt air.

Barrow spent his early youth on a potato farm in Arcadia, Fla.

Spahn Going For Big Win Tonight

By DAVE O'HARA
Associated Press Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP)—Southpaw Warren Spahn, the Milwaukee Braves' ageless wonder who defies old man time, shoots for his 300th National League victory tonight in opposing the Chicago Cubs at County Stadium.

At an age rare among active players, Spahn, 40, will seek to become the 13th pitcher in major league history—and only the third left-hander—to reach the coveted 300 mark.

Since winning his 299th with a 2-1 decision at San Francisco a week ago, Spahn has been saved to make his history-making effort before home fans in the opener of a home stand.

Despite an 11-12 record, Spahn still ranks as a pitching ace. Many of his losses have been by narrow margins. He sports a creditable 3.40 earned run average, the same as when he posted a 21-10 record last year.

Spahn is in an entirely different position since the last pitcher to win 300 games 20 years ago. In 1941, Lefty Grove struggled to attain the goal while with the Boston Red Sox. Old Mose just made it. He failed to win another game and retired after that season.

There he developed strong arms and shoulders digging potatoes. When Tommy was 10, his family moved to Orlando where many of the local cattle barons raise and race "quarter horses." When the day comes that Barrow is forced to retire, he plans to go back to digging potatoes in Florida. But this time he says, "I'll be digging the potatoes out of gravy!"

Spahn, who won his first game for the Braves at the age of 25 when the club was in Boston in 1946, already holds a flock of records.

Grove, the only living member of the exclusive "300" set, reportedly is seriously ill and had to turn down an invitation by the Braves to be on hand for Spahn's initial crack at No. 300.

The other members of the "300" club are Cy Young (51) Walter Johnson (41), Christy Mathewson and Grover Cleveland Alexander (37), Kid Nichols (36), Jim Galvin (35), Tim Keefe (34), John Clarkson (32), Eddie Plank (32), Mike Welch (31) and Charles Radbourne (30).

Young, Nichols, Galvin, Keefe, Clarkson, Welch and Radbourne did most or all of their pitching before the turn of the century. Plank, who played from 1901-17, is the only other left-hander to hit 300.

The biggest lefty winner in National League history, Spahn also holds the major league record for the most 20-victory seasons by a southpaw. He reached that mark for the 11th time last season with the first no-hitter of his career, a brilliant 15-strikeout performance against Philadelphia. He posted another no-hitter against San Francisco earlier this year.

Spahn, a native of Buffalo, N.Y., who now is an off-season rancher in Hartshorne, Okla., came up to the Braves in 1942. He appeared in only four games without being involved in a decision and then went into the Army. After three years, during which he was wounded, decorated and given a battlefield commission in Europe, he rejoined the Braves in 1946.

CHAPTER 36

Reginald Jameson obviously had glimpsed Griselda Vance through the office window. He turned, swift as a man could, and leapt towards the door. He did not see Rollison, but reached the door and raced out, his footsteps thudding on the stone.

Griselda had vanished. Rollison felt sweat on his forehead and his face as he crawled towards the desk. He picked up his gun and crawled on until he reached the window, then raised his left arm, the elbow bent, and crashed it through the window. When the ringing echo of the breaking glass died away, he could hear the footsteps, Griselda's sharp and quick, Jameson's heavy and dull.

They were heading for the lipstick shop, and the lighted window there. That was the one hope of shooting Jameson.

Griselda was drawing near the window, her figure began to show up more clearly; Jameson was still just a dark shape against the greyness. Griselda appeared in the clear silhouette, running without looking behind her—running with the knowledge that death was at her heels.

When Jameson appeared against the light, Rollison fired three times in succession. He saw Jameson moving across the window, as if he had not been touched.

So he would reach Griselda. Suddenly, more lights flashed on. The night watchman and Bill Ebbot appeared against the light from the front of the porter's booth. Griselda appeared in it, too. Rollison could picture her gasping for breath, could imagine how she tried to make the men understand.

Ebbot came running to help Rollison. The night watchman saw Griselda and rushed towards her.

Jameson began to crawl towards the big powder room, in the night's darkness. He saw lights at the gates, and cars coming along the road. He knew that the police would soon be here. A wound in his waist hurt badly and was bleeding a lot, but he didn't let that stop him.

He reached the swing doors of the mixing room, and went in. The doors swung behind him. He heard car engines racing, and headlights suddenly swept against the win-

Agatha Bell was alive. Rollison was told about that before he was carried into the ambulance, and then to the hospital, anxious about his leg.

The next day when he awoke a nurse told him: "I've some messages for you. Both men will live. Mr. Vance and Mr. Jolly. The police left word about an hour ago. And you should be about in a couple of weeks, if you're lucky. And now there's a lady waiting outside to see you. A Mrs. Vance. And there's a policeman. Which one would you like first?"

The policeman had gone, taking his story with him. He'd told Rollison that Jameson was in the hospital, too, but that he would be well enough to stand his trial.

Paul Vance would almost certainly pull through; and Agatha Bell, who had been doped before being put in the powder bin, had been taken to some club in Mayfair, run by a lady someone named Gloria, the policeman thought.

"How long had she been at the factory?" Rollison had asked.

"Miss Bell? Since the night before last," the policeman had said. "She's okay. Mr. Rollison. You needn't worry. And Mr. Grice will be along soon."

"Fine," Rollison had beamed. But he wasn't really interested in Grice.

Griselda came in. She was dressed in black, and that seemed right. It threw the beauty of her hair into vivid relief, as well as the whole beauty that was hers. She moved with a grace that seemed part of a dream, and sat down near the bed.

"Hello," he said.

"Hello," said Griselda. She leaned forward, and kissed his forehead, firmly, then drew back.

Rollison grinned.

"You may always feel like that about me." He paused, watching her very closely, before going on: "Seen Paul?"

"Yes."

"Hatchet buried?"

"Yes," she said, "he knows the whole truth, now. Jimmy plotting with these men who wanted to bring Silver Queen shares down to next to nothing. And Jameson driven mad by something Jimmy had done."

"Yes," Rollison agreed, "the whole truth. Have the police found Jameson's backers?"

"I think arrests are pending here and in America."

"Arrests and some hangings, I hope," said Rollison, bleakly. He didn't look away from Griselda.

"Life's been hell for Paul."

"I know," she said.

"Griselda," Rollison went on, "there are times when I ask to be thrown out. Blame my incurable interest in other people. You can help each other to get over it—and probably you can help Paul more than he can help you."

Griselda said very slowly: "What do you think I can do?"

And Rollison told her: "He loved his son, and had great hopes for him. He could give the same love and have the same hopes for his daughter."

Rollison was up and about in good time for Jameson's trial. It lasted four days, and before the verdict and the sentence to death, old facts were repeated and new ones came out. The devotion between Jameson and his sister was used skillfully by the defense, whose only hope was a verdict of guilty but insane.

The fact that Jameson himself had introduced his sister to Jimmy Vance was offset by another—that Jameson had telephoned both Adam Bell and Paul Vance about Jimmy's murder.

There were other things: for instance, Adam had been convinced that he would hang for the crime, and had attacked Rollison because he had been sure that Rollison would hand him over to the police. That Jameson had wrongly believed that Adam could name him as the killer of the two girls who had died of cyanide in lipstick.

There was sober great rejoicing after the trial and the verdict and sentence of death.

Rollison knew that Paul Vance and Griselda and Adam Bell and Ag had dined together on that night, for he had been invited to join them.

He preferred to dine at home, however, because it was a great occasion: the first full meal that Jolly had cooked since he had been discharged from the hospital.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock market prices were pretty well mixed early this afternoon after a session in which the trend moved up and down uncertainly.

The Associated Press 60-stock average at noon was up 0.20 to 254.50. If maintained, the gain would carry the average to another closing high. Industrials were up 0.20 and both rails and utilities unchanged.

Xerox was up more than 4, adding to a similar gain Thursday, and MGM moved ahead another 2 points or so.

Copper shares were weak, Anaconda dropping more than a point and Kennecott nearly 3.

Motors were mostly stronger, along with rubber, building material and mail order firms, but other groups were irregular.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at noon was up 2.73 to 723.22, also above its record closing high.

Goodrich ran ahead nearly 2 points and Goodyear around one. Ford was active and higher, along with Chrysler and General Motors. Du Pont and Air Reduction were ahead about a point among chemicals, but Union Carbide dipped.

Other gainers included Woolworth, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, American Can and Raytheon.

Lower were U.S. Steel, American Motors, Douglas, Boeing, Radio Corp., Jersey Standard and Pan American World Airways.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange moved ahead in moderate trading.

U.S. government and corporate bonds were mixed.

Governor Cites Double Benefits

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Double benefits for Eastern North Carolina farmers should flow from a new Nutrena Mills Inc. animal feed formula plant here, Gov. Sanford said today.

He called it a "real boost for the agricultural economy of the region" in a speech prepared for dedication ceremonies for the plant.

"It will not only provide a ready market for a variety of basic feed crops, but will, at the same time, encourage for their widespread livestock production—a profitable operation for which a market already exists," Sanford explained.

The governor's views were echoed by James C. North, president of Nutrena, in his speech prepared for the dedication.

North promised his firm will sell feed to farmers, and in turn will promote expansion of grain production by purchasing from farmers of the area.

"... to the extent that they are available, grain and other feed ingredients will be purchased from Eastern North Carolina producers in a competitive market," he declared. "This, in itself, should encourage broader diversification offering producers an expanded market for their grains and thus providing them with a broader economic base than is now offered by tobacco."

Titov Says He Left Space Ship, Used A Parachute

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet cosmonaut Gherman Titov said today he was ejected from his space ship at the end of his epic 25-hour orbital flight and parachuted to earth.

The second Soviet spaceman told a jammed news conference his spaceship Vostok II came down separately by parachute "but if the need had arisen, I could have landed it myself."

Titov said there were two landing systems available—either to remain in the space ship and parachute down with it or to descend separately. He said he had preferred to use either system.

"I felt well and decided to test the second landing system," he said.

The ship landed safely nearby, he added.

The space flier said he experienced no ill effects—from the acceleration forces, noise and vibration of the takeoff, from the prolonged weightlessness or from the transition from weightlessness near the end of his 17 trips the globe.

Titov said after landing neither he nor medical experts could detect any changes in his physical organism.

The self-assured young major reported one variation from normal. He said he wasn't hungry for his first two meals although he ate them on schedule.

"Frankly speaking I had no particular appetite," the 26-year-old cosmonaut said. "This was probably due to the sustained weightlessness and excitement."

Titov spoke at a news conference held at Moscow University for more than 1,500 Soviet and foreign newsmen, scientists and diplomats.

Mstislav Kel'dysh, president of the Soviet academy of sciences, introduced the Soviet Union's new space hero and said his 25-hour flight had produced a wealth of scientific information that will be published and shared with scientists all over the world.

The flight, Kel'dysh added, opened the way for manned flight "to Mars, the Moon, Venus, and even further into the depths of the universe."

Kel'dysh said foreign newsmen will be permitted to watch launchings of Soviet space ships in the future but gave no indication when this would happen.

"You realize carrier rockets are not only peaceful instruments, and if the Americans had such advanced carrier rockets you can be sure they wouldn't be showing them either," he said.

The Soviet academician said Titov had demonstrated that a human pilot is able to control his space ship manually, make scientific observations and land his craft on any spot on earth.

Titov told the newsmen he regarded his historic flight round and round the earth as "something natural," that it did not seem like anything extraordinary because he had trained so thoroughly for it.

Queen Plays An Unwitting Role

LONDON (AP)—Britons were told today their Queen—who never mixes in politics—is playing an unwitting role in West Germany's federal election campaign.

Millions picked up their newspapers at breakfast time to see a cartoon strip from a German election booklet showing a smiling Queen Elizabeth talking with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

"Partner der freien Welt"—partners in the free world.

Newspapers said the booklet was issued by Adenauer's Christian Democratic Party to help him win in next month's election.

Rocket Passes Underwater Test

AZUSA, Calif. (AP)—Aeroflet General Corporation says it has achieved the first successful underwater launching of a liquid-fueled rocket.

A 15-foot-long Aerobee was shot from a water-filled test basin at the company's plant in Azusa on Thursday and flew 30 feet into the air.

The company said the engine was ignited while under water and proved the feasibility of launching giant rockets directly from the ocean.

De-Germed Meat Loses Its Flavor

CHICAGO (AP)—Scientists and medical men have found how to preserve meat indefinitely without refrigeration. They de-germ it.

Maj. Gen. Webster Anderson, new quartermaster general of the U.S. Army, said Thursday the preservation technique is to bombard the meat with rays from radioactive cobalt or from atom smashers.

The rays kill micro-organisms that cause food spoilage. Anderson said he told newsmen the germless meats have been proved safe for human consumption by scientists and medical men.

The only drawback, Anderson said, is that bombarded meat loses some flavor. The scientists are working on that.

Find Doorstop A Homemade Bomb

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A piece of pipe used for more than a year as a doorstop at Romanoff's restaurant in Beverly Hills turns out to be a homemade bomb containing about seven pounds of dynamite.

Beverly Hills Police Chief C. H. Anderson said the dynamite was encased in the 3 1/2 inch pipe, 16 inches in length. It was capped on both ends.

Lee Hall, a maintenance man at the restaurant, unscrewed one of the caps Thursday and found a copy of the Chicago Tribune dated Oct. 22, 1959, and a paper-wrapped substance in preliminary stages of deterioration.

Police and the sheriff's bomb squad were called. Officers said the pipe contained a stick of dynamite of 40 per cent nitroglycerine density.

FIREMEN RESPONDED TO FALSE ALARM

International was chartered in 1959. Meetings had previously been conducted exclusively in hometowns of other clubs in Zone Nine.

Yarborough urged participation in Youth Appreciation Week, a project with which he is credited. He also called on Optimists to promote and participate in a new Optimist International endeavor, the Stay-In-School program.

Another highlight of last night's meeting was a 15-minute address by Greenville Optimist Geare Ward who is Zone Nine Boys' Work chairman.

Ward outlined the program of the Greenville Optimist group and his plan for Zone Nine this year in boys' work activities. He urged his audience to "organize your boys' work activities efficiently and carry them out energetically."

Spinked throughout the two-hour business session program, eight District 18 chairmen outlined their respective programs for the year and urged local club participation.

Included in the eight were Carroll Pledger (Boys' Work) of Durham, Doc Martin (Achievements and Awards) of Charlotte, Hugh McArver (Life Membership) of Gastonia, Rocky Stroud (Membership and Attendance) of Rocky Mount, Reginald Brown (Youth Appreciation Week) of Raleigh, Jack Wood (Stay-In-School Program) of Charlotte, Hugh Prather (Secretary-Treasurer Duties) of Charlotte and Hugh Cranford (New Club Building) of Charlotte.

Zone Nine Lt. Gov. Guy Eagles of Rocky Mount presided over the session that included an invocation by Greenville Optimist President H. Thomas Money.
