BETHEL — Miss Judy Whitehurst, bride-elect of Aug. 26, was honored Wednesday, with her bridal attendants, at the country home of Mrs. J. L. Brown. Co-hostesses were Mrs. R. L. Goodall, Mrs. C. E. Hammond and Mrs. W. P. Thigpen.

The entire lower floor was decorated with garden flowers carrying out a pink color motif. The living room mantel was backed with magnolia and a bridal scene. The honoree was presented a corsage of asters.

As the guests arrived they were served a fruit juice cocktail. The dining room mantel was banked with magnolia, pink and white wedding bells and pink roses, and the buffet and chest were decorated similarly. The luncheon table, covered with an imported French handmade lace cloth over pink satin, was centered with a silver epergne containing an arrangement of pink and white lilies, roses, snapdragons, asters and baby's breath. Guests were served a three-course turkey lunch. Auxiliary tables were centered with silver containers holding pink and white flowers. The bride's table had a tiny wedding cake as the centerpiece.

Miss Whitehurst presented her bridesmaids with sterling silver monogrammed book marks and her honorary bridesmaids tiny clothes brushes with mahogany handles. Little Miss Kem Anders, who will be flower girl, was given a silver cross and chain. The hostesses selected silver and china in the bride-elect's patterns as her gifts.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
 Want to enhance that fish? Stuff it! Several ways there are to do this deliciously for Lenten meals.

A whole baked fish, filled with a well-seasoned bread dressing, makes a great family or company dish. Impressive to look at, satisfying to eat. This you've probably tried. But have you ever stuffed fillets or steaks? Here's a bread stuffing we like that may be used with either cut of fish.

BREAD STUFFING FOR FISH
 ¼ cup butter or margarine
 2 tablespoons finely diced onion
 1-3 cup finely diced celery
 2 tablespoons minced parsley
 3 cups soft bread crumbs (crusts removed)
 ½ teaspoon salt
 1-8 teaspoon pepper
 1 to 2 tablespoons water

In a medium-sized skillet cook onion in butter over low heat until golden; add celery, parsley, bread crumbs, salt and pepper. Sprinkle in just enough water, tossing mixture as you do so, to hold together. Use as stuffing for fish fillets or steaks.

For Steaks: Choose two large halibut steaks weighing about a pound apiece. Place one of the steaks in a buttered shallow baking dish or ovenproof glass plate; the container should not be much larger than the steak. Spread Bread Stuffing over the halibut steak; cover with other steak. Brush with butter (melted) and sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a moderate (375 degrees) oven 30 minutes or until fish looks opaque through when flaked with a fork. Serve from baking dish, cutting vertically. Makes 3 large or 4 small servings.

For Fillets: Choose 6 small fish fillets totaling a couple of pounds. Spread Bread Stuffing over each fillet; roll and place carefully in a shallow baking dish—11 by 8 by 2 inches is a good size. Bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven 30 minutes or until fish looks opaque through when flaked with a fork. Makes 4 servings—½ rolls per portion.

Debs Honored By Ty Wagners

Mr. and Mrs. Ty Wagner entertained the Greenville debs and their marshals, honoring Miss Mary Harrington and Miss Lou Ficklen, at a dinner Friday night at their home on the Ayden Highway.

On the dining room table was a Dresden sectional epergne with debutante and marshal atop the colonnade center. In the surrounding circular section red rosebuds were used with burning candles.

After a three-course dinner served on the terrace, dancing took place.

The debs were given white satin evening bags as gifts from the hosts.

Foreign Aid Bill's Form Not Set

President Kennedy's long-range foreign aid program has successfully overcome a major hurdle in the Senate, but this victory for the administration by no means assures that the foreign aid program will be accepted by Congress in the form the President has proposed.

The need for more long-range planning in the nation's foreign aid is apparent, we believe, to citizens of the country as well as to members of Congress. The success of our foreign aid plan in the future may well depend upon the ability of the administration to make long-range commitments to nations we are seeking to help. It is also important to the efficiency of operating the program as well as to the program's effectiveness that it be operated on something other than a year-to-year basis.

Notwithstanding these factors, Congress is responsible to a large degree for the fiscal well being of the nation, as such it can ill afford to provide the administration with a blank check which, if imprudently used, could place the nation in an unhealthy financial condition. Neither can Congress afford to hold so tightly to the purse-strings as to render the foreign aid program of the nation ineffective and inadequate to meet the needs which are being thrust upon us.

Judges Can Aid Uniformity Goal

By LYNN NISBET

JUDGES — Governor Sanford has called some 175 of the leading "traffic judges" in the state to attend a traffic safety conference in Raleigh on Thursday, August 24. The purpose is to get the ideas of these judges for laws and enforcement of laws as a part of the program of the newly organized and highly financed Traffic Safety Council. Invitations to attend the conference went to judges of municipal and county courts across the state, most of whom have original jurisdiction over traffic offenses. The list does not include justices of the peace, who do not have but often assume jurisdiction, nor does it include superior court judges, who in many counties represent the only judicial authority over most traffic offenses.

The participants in the conference for most part will be municipal and county recorder court judges, for whom traffic violations constitute a relatively small part of their judicial activities. Yet the impact of these activities upon the fast growing travel business in North Carolina is very substantial. A system of traffic courts throughout the state, which would have as their main purpose the enforcement of traffic laws, with uniform organization and jurisdiction in every county, with schedule of costs and fees the same in every county, has long been the dual purpose of traffic safety and promoting the tourist industry.

If the conference called by Governor Sanford results in establishing such uniformity, so the court costs for the same offense will not vary among the counties from $7 to $30, a long forward step will have been taken toward the desired goal.

WOMEN — Another phase of overall "court reform" is treated in a recent news release by the American Judicature Society, which deals with women jurors. That is almost as controversial in North Carolina as is the matter of uniformity in traffic courts. Here's what the news release says about the subject under the title of "Deliberating Women":

Compulsory jury duty for women would not only add a feminine mediatory factor that is often necessary in jury deliberations but would reduce the burden of jury duty on the part of the community now available.

Wallace M. Rudolph, of the University of Nebraska law faculty, in an article in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Judicature Society, says that excluding women from jury violates the right of a defendant to a fair trial and the right of society to expect service of its citizens.

At present, in nineteen states jury duty for women is optional—meaning that women can refuse to serve simply on the basis of their sex. Under the optional system in New York City, only about 800 women in 1958 volunteered to serve in two courts where jury requirements were 71,000. Compulsory jury service for women would double the number of people presently available for jury duty.

One result to the optional plan is that the few who volunteer are usually from the upper middle class, reducing the probability of a cross-section of the community serving on juries. Rudolph believes that since many men are excluded from jury duty for economic and occupational reasons, inclusion of women on a compulsory basis "provides a method for wives of men excluded to represent their social and economic views."

The psychological value of women on juries is such that tension is alleviated and disagreement lessened. Their role as mediators decreases chances for hung juries which are a great expense to society. In cases involving juveniles and domestic issues, studies show that women are more sympathetic and understanding than men. When Oregon first permitted women on juries, it stipulated—in recognition of women's interest and aptitude in dealing with young people—that in cases involving a minor under eighteen at least half the jury be women.

Justice Douglas, speaking for the Supreme Court in 1947, said: "... a flavor, a distinct quality is lost if either sex is excluded. The exclusion of one may indeed make the jury less representative of the community than would be true, if an economic group were excluded."

In the United States women granted suffrage in the Wyoming Territory, were first called for jury duty in 1870 on the theory that the right to vote carries with it the right to serve as jurors. The Wyoming Supreme Court, following a U.S. Supreme Court decision, disagreed with the theory, and courts throughout the country consistently upheld this position after the nineteenth amendment was passed. Women, however, continued their fight for the right to serve on juries and by 1956, all but five states allowed women to do so, with nineteen carrying the optional provision. Thus only twenty-six states impose on women their duty, as citizens, to serve, along with their right, to do so.

The long-range lending and Treasury-borrowing tools which the administration has asked Congress to approve for the foreign aid program would prove valuable both to the United States and to the nations of the free world it seeks to help through its program. In the interest of sound fiscal policies, however, it seems reasonable that the administration should be willing to accept something less than the initial $8.8 billion authorization for a full-five-year period.

Congress, at the same time, should recognize that changes in the international situation necessitate greater flexibility in this country's economic aid program that will enable the United States to make the most of its aid dollars in the cold war and at the same time see that the aid does the greatest possible good to the nations into which it flows.

Hopeful Prediction Is At Best, Generalized

Predictions by agricultural economists at N. C. College that North Carolina's farm income may increase by five per cent over last year should be good news for the agricultural areas of the state.

If the prediction proves to be correct, North Carolina's farm income will reach a new record high, $54 million above last year's record of $1.08 billion. It would mean that agriculture as a whole throughout the state would be in a better relative position than last year and that the general economy of North Carolina—which still depends heavily on agriculture—should reflect the better conditions in agriculture.

The prediction does not mean, of course, that the agricultural economists at State College expect the farm income of every family or every county in the state to be up by five per cent over last year. There will be a number of counties which, because of less favorable growing conditions this year than last, which may well see a decline in their agricultural income from this year's crops. There are other counties which may experience agricultural income gains far above the five per cent figures estimated by the economists.

Taken as a whole, however, the prediction of a five per cent increase in agricultural income is good news for the state. Particularly is it good news for the Eastern section of the state where agriculture makes up a greater portion of the total income than is the case for the state as a whole.

More Talk And More 'Protests'

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — More talk, more notes, more protests. That's all the Allies can do about the latest Communist squeeze on Berlin, unless they want to fight over it. While they talk tough, they're not talking that tough.

Over the weekend the Soviet and East German Communists put a flat stop to the flood of East German refugees who have been fleeing in record numbers to West Germany by simply crossing over from East Berlin to West Berlin.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, backed by President Kennedy, while denouncing the sudden blockade against the refugees as a violation of a 12-year-old East-West agreement, used the occasion for some anti-Soviet propaganda.

This won't improve East-West relations. But, since a show of force to break the blockade against the refugees and let them through might mean war, Rusk probably feels propaganda is the most beligerent weapon he can afford to use.

Besides the Berlin dispute for all the propaganda they can milk out of it. So Rusk's statement Sunday just added up to a few more words in what has become an international shouting match.

Rusk, pointing out that the Russians wouldn't let the East Germans vote on whether they wanted a Communist government, said by their flight they had "voted with their feet" against communism.

The flight alone, without the added kick from Rusk, was embarrassing enough to Premier Khrushchev who only last week had embarrassed himself by demanding that the West recognize the "grandeur" of the Soviet Union.

He must have blurted this out without thinking, for there were two things wrong with it: 1. He lifted it wholesale from the soborous phrasing of French President Charles de Gaulle who is forever talking about the "grandeur" of France. 2. It is nationalistic and therefore contrary to the teachings of Khrushchev's favorite Soviet saint, Lenin, who insisted that communism is non-nationalistic.

The agreement which Rusk said the Soviets had violated—by stopping East Germans from crossing into West Berlin from East Berlin—was made in Paris in 1949 by the American, British, French and Soviet foreign ministers.

Here is the latest. There was a 12 per cent increase in crime last year as compared with the year before. Every major crime classification showed an increase in 1960. We wonder how many of the people in this country realize that every day throughout the calendar year of 1959, 24 people were feloniously slain, 328 were victims of aggravated assault. There was a daily average of 41 forcible rapes committed in 1959, 196 robberies, 1195 larcenies, and 1879 burglaries. On an average throughout that year 790 automobiles were stolen every day. And this, of course, in the free world—amongst the most privileged and most highly civilized people of modern times. When we reflect that only a percentage of crimes are detected and punished we realize further that the most decided understatement of the Bible is that the heart of man is desperately wicked. The richer we get the better we are educated as a nation, the more advantages we get—the more we seem to fall down on the job morally.

What under heaven is the matter with us? Where is this going to lead? And what is more important, where is it going to end?

Awesome Thing To See

There's nothing more awesome than a fire just after it has started. We are accustomed to arriving at the scene after the fire trucks, and this leaves nothing for the layman to do but watch the professional fire fighters at work.

But all fires start somewhere and occasionally we come upon a blaze with no one around. This happened to your columnist Sunday night. Driving along U. S. 264 just west of Grimesland we spotted flames to the left of the road. I suspected a tobacco barn was afire.

As soon as I could, I turned down the car around and headed back towards Grimesland with the idea of calling the Grimesland Fire Department to the scene. But just as we pulled alongside the barn the wall of the fire siren, sounded in Grimesland.

I stopped the car and walked down the woods path to the tobacco barn which was burning fiercely at its top. Soon the sound of the fire truck's siren could be heard down the road. The vehicle wheeled into the path and came to a halt near the barn. The Grimesland volunteer firemen quickly pulled hose from the truck. The engine noise became a roar as the pumping began.

Within a few minutes fire fighters had brought the blazing barn under control. The streams of water blotted out the flames with breathtaking suddenness and the firemen were soon entering the barn to knock out the embers.

The 750 sticks of tobacco were lost but the Grimesland firemen saved the barn. This shows that rural fire departments springing up all over the county can save property. That's true even though the personnel is volunteer and they have to gather at the fire station and then drive some distance to reach the blaze.

Rural fire fighting is becoming more complete for Pitt County as departments spring up in various communities. Here's one who hopes that growth will continue.

Pres. Kennedy's alerting of the nation to the dangerous world situation is showing results on the local level. There is more talk of Civil Defense than your columnist has heard in a long time.

The key to survival in case of atomic attack seems to be fall out shelters and I assume the construction of home shelters will become more and more popular.

Interestingly enough I saw what appeared to be a ready made shelter along side the highway on the way back from Morehead Sunday. It was built on galvanized steel culvert with each end closed in.

I was tempted to stop and learn more of this novel shelter but it was Sunday and no one was around.

At any rate I expect the shelter is getting more inquiries these days than ever before.

One other thing I saw of interest along the road is an old house which stands in front of a garage.

The ancient house appears to be in perfect repair, although its rather certain that it is not used for its original purpose anymore.

Some day I'll stop and look that over, too.

Other Editors Saying... Schools' Responsibility

(Raleigh Times)
It was unfortunate that news stories on Governor Sanford's talk to teachers at Mars Hill recently jerked one sentence out of the speech into the lead paragraph: "I am going to require of you more than a 22 per cent increase in your teaching proficiency."

The Governor did say that. But, he said a lot of other things and the other things he said show that he isn't asking the teachers alone to bear all the burden of delivering quality education to the Tar Heel young people. He also told the teachers that the State cannot now afford the luxury of wasted time, or ineffective teachers, or lazy students or selfish parents. He noted that we can't afford to use our schools to provide a water resort for parents, a Roman holiday entertainment spectacle for the public, or a part-time way for teachers to make a full-time salary.

All those things put together with the demand that teachers increase their proficiency 22 per cent to match their salary raises make up a real picture of what is needed for quality education on the teachers. Too many people are saying that these years have been howling all these years for this raise, and that now that they have gotten it they had better revolutionize the schools in one year, or perhaps one month or even the first day of the term.

Even if every teacher did indeed increase her proficiency 22 per cent on the first day of this new term, we still wouldn't have really quality education in North Carolina. We wouldn't have it by the end of the 1961-1962 term—and we wouldn't have it five years from now. Real quality education is something that must grow from year to year, something which must continue growing each and every minute of every day. It is like a really quality mind which never stops growing.

Governor Sanford wisely noted to the teachers that they are the key to the continuing goal of providing quality education. The teachers are indeed that key, but a key is no good unless there is something for it to unlock. Unless we do have devoted parents and devoted students and devoted communities, the best teachers in the world will be able to deliver only a routine brand of education.

The teachers are on the spot this year because they did get a 22 per cent raise, but so is every other person connected with our system of education. No one should attempt to burden the teachers with all the responsibility for providing quality education, and it is good that Governor Sanford has so clearly outlined the areas of responsibility which all the people must share.

It is much in order, too, to note that North Carolina will not have "quality education" by 3 p.m. on the opening day of school this year. We won't even have it by the end of the second day, or the second month, or the second year of this "quality education" age.

You just don't get quality education in a day or a month or a year. There is abroad in our land something of a feeling that the legislature accomplished quality education by the simple act of voting the money Governor Sanford asked the schools.

It is unfortunate that there is such a feeling, since it won't be that quick or that easy.

For example, Raleigh has had quality education in its schools for quite a long time. The fact that the teachers here will get 22 per cent more pay this year will not automatically make them 22 per cent more proficient. The truth of the matter is that Raleigh has had proficient teachers, and the pay raise won't mean

Twin Issues Here

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The case of General Edwin A. Walker does not die. The only publicized charge against him is excessive patriotism. For this heinous offense, he should, at least, have a court-martial in public, so that all may know how evil this man has been.

Senator Strom Thurmond has taken up the cudgels for General Walker. He calls attention to a memorandum prepared by Senator Fulbright in which the Arkansas Senator takes the position that right wing propaganda activities by military officers create important obstacles to President Kennedy's program.

In the first place, one must ask Senator Fulbright to which of the President's various programs, he refers. Secondly, how can the inculcation of patriotism interfere with any President's program? Senator Thurmond makes the point that the essence of Senator Fulbright's memorandum is "the philosophy candidly expressed, that the American people are not to be trusted with governing themselves, particularly with reference to matters of foreign policy."

Senator Fulbright, in his memorandum, said: "The American people have never really been tested in such a struggle. In the long run, it is quite possible that the principal problem of leadership will be, if it is not already, to restrain the desire of the people to hit the communists with everything we've got, particularly if there are more Cubans and Laos. Pride in victory, and frustration in restraint, during the Korean War, led to MacArthur's revolt and McCarthyism."

Senator Fulbright here raises the essential question that faces our nation today: Will Khrushchev drive us into some form of totalitarian government? Will the fear of Soviet Russia force us to give up our constitutional characteristics and adopt some form of dictatorship, whether to be by a Fascistic elite group or by Communists? The distrust of the people by the intellectuals is a normal response to the seriousness of the times which face us, but Senator Fulbright is wrong, as to date and fact, when he suggests that it was the Korean War which led to the activities of Senator Joe McCarthy.

What is now producing the John Birch Society and other groups, some of them less doctrinaire and less fanatical. It is the growing feeling among large masses of people that in the Roosevelt, Truman and Eisenhower Administrations, elements invaded and infiltrated the American government which did not believe in American sovereignty, which did not favor the American economic system, which were so alarmed by Soviet Russia's policies and purposes. It is ridiculous to discount these popular movements. They are growing rapidly and whether one agrees or disagrees with their programs they are a reflex of a growing public mood of distrust.

Senator Thurmond says: "... unless our most urgent problem is the Communist menace, then truly, there is little need to alert the American public to the menace of the Cold War. The need to give the American people the facts about Communism exists only if Communism is our number one problem. This (the Fulbright) memorandum states, however, that the principal problem is, and I quote: 'to restrain the desire of the people to hit the Communists with everything we've got, particularly if there are Cubans and Laos.' I have been told by the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs that 'everybody knows the enemy.' I must be very confused, for I thought the enemy was Communism. I did not realize that, as this memorandum says so bluntly, the American public constitutes the principal problem."

Unfortunately two issues are raised here. Senator Fulbright raises the issue of the ignorance of the American people; Senator Thurmond says: "The American people have never really been tested in such a struggle. In the long run, it is quite possible that the principal problem of leadership will be, if it is not already, to restrain the desire of the people to hit the communists with everything we've got, particularly if there are more Cubans and Laos." Our system of education has collapsed. Our newspapers and newspapers and other media of information are futile and purposeless. It is too strong an indictment.

The most that the Arkansas Senator can mean is that it is difficult for most men to evaluate current problems. This is true in high places as well as among ordinary people. Certainly President Kennedy evaluated the Cuban situation incorrectly as President Eisenhower evaluated his relationship to Khrushchev incorrectly.

This discussion will be continued.

(Continued from page four) that they will be any more proficient the first day of school in September than they were the last day of school in June.

It seems reasonable to assume, then, that there won't be any dramatic improvement of education here on the first day of school. It seems just as reasonable to assume that the improvement will continue to be gradual.

And, everyone should remember as the Governor pointed out, the providing of real quality education is the responsibility of everyone concerned. Any feeling that the teachers alone, or the superintendents alone, can do the job should be forgotten now, even before the next school term begins.

Asheville Track To Be Repaired

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Promoter Gene Sluder of the Asheville-Weaverville Speedway said Monday that the asphalt on the fourth turn will be ripped up and repaved "with concrete and heavy steel wire."

He made the statement after a demonstration by 4,000 spectators Sunday when a 500-lap Western North Carolina 500 stock car race was halted after 258 laps. The track on the fourth turn became so torn officials would not let the drivers finish the race.

Sluder said NASCAR had agreed to a 200 or 250-lap late model race before the current season ends. He said rain checks from Sunday's race will be honored then.

St. Louis Wins 5-Hit Shutout Over Dodgers In Nat'l League

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Do you pitch to a .122 hitter with two on, two out and first base open with the pitcher the next batter in the second inning of a scoreless game? Or do you walk him intentionally, loading the bases, to get to the pitcher?

The Los Angeles Dodgers have only a two-game lead in the National League pennant race at the moment because they decided to walk the 122 hitter, Alex Grammas, Monday night. Pitcher Ernie Broglio then followed with a two-run single — and a five-hit shutout — as St. Louis beat the Dodgers 5-0.

That whittled half a game off the Dodgers' lead over Cincinnati as the second-place Reds move into Los Angeles for the opener of a three-game series tonight.

Cincinnati was idle Monday, but still hopeful. Milwaukee rapped Pittsburgh 9-3 and the Chicago Cubs thumped Philadelphia 9-2 for the Phils' 17th consecutive defeat.

In the only American League games scheduled, Minnesota beat Kansas City 6-2 and the Los Angeles Angels defeated Washington 5-1.

each hit a home run and batted in seven runs between them for the Cubs as the last place Phils, who have won only one of their last 23 games, came within two of tying the modern NL record for consecutive defeats. The 1906 Braves and 1914 Reds each lost 19 in a row. Southpaw Dick Ellsworth (6-7) was the Cubs' winner, and Frank Sullivan (3-11) was the loser.

File For Dixie 400 Stock Race

ATLANTA (AP)—Two drivers in the Pontiac stable, Glenn (Fireball) Roberts and Robert (Junior) Johnson, were the first to file entry blanks for the annual Dixie 400 stock car race Sept. 17 at Atlanta International Raceway.

Practice runs will begin at the track Tuesday, Sept. 12, with qualifying time trials on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of that week. A purse of about $45,000 is expected with additional accessory awards.

Roberts, winner of the first Dixie race last year when it was a 300-mile event, hails from Daytona Beach, Fla. Johnson is from North Wilkesboro, N.C.

Although the race has been increased to 400 miles, Roberts is still rated the defending champion and has been honored with his picture on each of the 30,000 reserved seat tickets for the event.

The move that missed for the Dodgers, ending their winning streak at six games, followed singles by Stan Musial and Carl Sawatski. When Grammas came to the plate, the Cards' utility infielder was hitless in 32 at-bats in a slump that stretched over 20 games going back to June 26.

If the Dodgers thought Grammas was about due, they were right. He collected two singles after the Cards' three-run second inning and came around to score on both.

Broglio, a 143 batsman (7-for-49) when he stepped in against Don Drysdale in the second inning, gave up nothing but singles, walked four and struck out seven while gaining his first complete game victory in more than two months for a 9-10 record. This was the second shutout of the season for Broglio, a 21-game winner last year and his first since he blanked Cincinnati on April 15.

It was only the third time the Dodgers have been shut out this season, and it ended a three-game streak by Drysdale (10-7), who had lost only one of five previous decisions since June.

The fourth-place Milwaukee Braves, still 10½ games out of first after winning 16 of their last 24, made it four in a row behind 6-2-3 innings of two-hit, shutout relief by rookie Tony Coninger (3-2), the young right-hander took over from starter Bob Buhl in the third inning, when the Pirates built a 3-1 lead, and checked the champs on a pair of singles the rest of the way.

Roy McMillan drove in four runs with a pair of doubles and Ed Mathews walloped a two-run homer for the Braves, who had 11 hits off loser Harvey Haddix (8-6) and three relievers. Mathews' home run was his 24th of the year and moved him past Joe DiMaggio into 10th place on the all-time list with 362. Dick Stuart and Bob Clemente homered for the Bucs.

USGA Girls Jr. Golf Meet Begins

SEATTLE (AP)—Ann Baker of Marysville, Tenn., who shared medal honors with Mary Lou Daniel of Louisville, Ky., met Mary Ann Doctor of Westfield, N.J., today in what loomed as the first round feature match at the USGA Girls Junior Golf Championships.

Miss Baker, Tennessee women's amateur titlist, met Miss Doctor, the 1960 New York metropolitan junior champion last year in the first round of this tournament at Tulsa, Okla., and Miss Baker was the 1 up winner.

In Monday's qualifying round, which culled the field of 69 to the leading 32 players, Miss Daniel and Miss Baker each scored 78. Opposing Miss Daniel in the opening round of match play today was Joan Edwards of Portland, Ore., who, like Miss Doctor, qualified with an 83.

The Tennessee champion was a semifinalist last year when Carol Sorenson of Janesville, Wis., won the title.

Oriole Pitching Can Be Decisive Factor In Race

NEW YORK (AP)—Baltimore pitching can be the decisive factor in the American League pennant race between the New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers. Although the Orioles, 11 games out of first place, still have a long shot chance at the championship, their chief contribution may come in the "spoiler" role.

The Orioles have six games left with the Yanks and seven with Detroit. Four of the Yanks' games are in Baltimore, where Roger Maris has yet to hit a home run.

Detroit has the edge in the schedule since the Tigers still have 27 games to play with second-division teams, including over 10 with the last-place Kansas City A's. They play only 20 more with first division teams.

New York must play first-division teams in 28 of its 46 remaining games and has only 18 left with the last five clubs.

Both teams have broken better than even on the road, but the Tigers boast a better record away from home. The Tigers sport a .500 record on the road and 47-14 at home. Each club has 20 games left at home.

With the exception of Washington, which has held New York all even—7-7 in 14 games—the Yanks have been battering the second-division teams. They are 13-2 over Minnesota and 11-4 over Kansas City, N.J. today in what loomed as the first round feature match at the USGA Girls Junior Golf Championships.

Cool Weather Is Lucky Break To Players For A Few Days

By GEORGE BRYANT
Reflector Staff Writer

"Faster, faster, catch that ball in your hands, lift those legs" and other familiar phrases rang out across the county today as high school football practice got into full swing.

The weatherman was helpful on this opening day with unseasonably cool weather. The boys, probably most of them out of shape, should be thankful for this weather, but they better be prepared for some more of that hot sticky weather that has been with us for the past three or four weeks.

Equipment was issued all day today at Farmville and the boys went for their physicals.

Ayden Has 15 Veterans
Over in Ayden Coach Stuart Tripp said practice would also start tonight, but at 7:30. He is hoping for 15 lettermen to return. They lost 12 by graduation. Tripp hopes to start two sessions a day as soon as possible, but some of his boys are still in the tobacco fields. "It is hard to tell just what we will have right now," he added. "Cars and girls give me a great deal of competition," he said.

Tripp said the loss of Kenneth Jolly, who pled guilty in Wayne Superior Court yesterday to the February slaying of a Goldsboro housewife, will hurt his team. Jolly was one of the key men on the Ayden squad.

First To Start
Rose High School was the first Pitt County school to start practice. The boys reported at 8 a.m. in light equipment (shorts and shoes) for their first workout.

Coach Bud Phillips had about 46 enthusiastic boys on the field for the first workout. He said he had a few who were still working, but would be able to attend the afternoon sessions.

About 15 of the 46 boys practicing today were veterans and the rest were new prospects. Rose High lost nine through graduation last year.

The first drill today consisted mostly of conditioning exercises such as running and passing.

Don Bennett, assistant coach, said most of the boys seemed to be getting along all right, but two or three were complaining of aching sides.

Alan McArthur, Greenville's ace halfback last year, was among those who came out this morning. As usual, he looked good, even on the first day.

The Phillipsmen will have "chalk talk" during the afternoon session beginning at 3 o'clock. They will be on the field by 4 in full dress for another practice session.

Farmville Begins Tonight
Farmville High school will begin its first practice session tonight at 8 o'clock. Like Greenville they will be in light equipment, but will not start with heavy equipment for a couple of days.

Coach Elbert Moyer said graduation took 11 players, but they would have five returning who would probably be the nucleus of the squad. "They will probably determine what we do this season," the coach said.

Moyer explained the reason for the night sessions in that many of the boys were still working in the fields and could not be available during the day. He hopes to go into two-a-day sessions next week.

Second Round In Asheville Meet

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Paul Tarnow of Tampa, Fla., who put together a pair of 34s Monday for an opening round 68, led qualifiers moving into today's second round of qualifying in the Biltmore Forest Country Club men's invitation golf tournament.

The low 32 scores after today will make up the championship flight for match play the rest of the week over the 6,264-yard, par 70 course.

Unaware He Has Few Weeks Left

BALTIMORE (AP) — Unaware that he has only weeks to live, Vincent Cavalieri, 37, is back home in his beloved Italy today. The former Baltimore garment worker left by plane Thursday with his wife, Mary, and his daughter, Anna Maria, 7, for his native Ascoli Piceno in Italy. He was sure the Italian air and food and his mother's care would restore his health. Doctors in Baltimore's Mercy Hospital didn't have the heart to tell him he has incurable cancer. His family knew, though, and so did his fellow workers, who raised $901 for the air trip.

Tips

By S. J. WEEKS
Pitt County Tobacco Agent

Nematodes are costing tobacco growers more money than any other tobacco disease. However, much progress has been made in reducing losses caused by nematodes.

The results of experiments and farm demonstrations indicate that certain management practices such as plowing out tobacco stubbles immediately following harvest and the rotation of tobacco with nematode resistant crops will give good nematode control. Immediate control can be obtained with a soil fumigant. It must be remembered that soil fumigation pays only in fields where nematodes are a problem. In fields where the population of nematodes is low and a suitable rotation and cultural practices are being used, the use of a soil fumigant might not be profitable practice to use. Therefore, it is very important for you to know the level of the nematode population for each field on your farm in which tobacco is grown. Once this information is obtained you can then plan the best nematode control program for your farm. If an accurate nematode population is not determined it is not advisable to take the risk of not fumigating.

The only way to determine the severity of nematode disease is by checking the roots immediately following tobacco harvest. This system has been used for many years in connection with crop rotation, soil fumigation and fall cultural practices experiments and demonstrations. It has been found to be fairly accurate in predicting what will happen the next time the field is planted to tobacco. Once the severity of nematode damage is determined a control program is planned for the next crop of tobacco, which may be two or three years in the future.

Any farmer making a request will be shown how to make readings of root knot damage in his field. After you have completed the survey for your farm I will be glad to assist you in preparing a suitable nematode control rotation and will make other control suggestions that will help reduce the nematode population. It is very important that this important task be performed immediately, in order to plan a nematode control program for your farm.

A Western Historical Novel The BURNWOOD MEN

By ROBERT MEEGEE

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

The first of the succession of disturbing sights that began for Tam Barrie at Fort Benton in Montana Territory when the riverboat arrived that summer in the Seventies was his cousin, pretty Dove Demarest, debarking with the man she married, Cleland Strike. Tam's immediate hatred for Strike made him wonder if he could not carry out his assignment with fair judgment.

Tam had been sent from the Philadelphia bank owned by Dove's father to check on Strike, who had borrowed heavily on his word and his new family connection. Tam's orders had been: see that Strike launches a successful cattle operation or bring back the money, intact.

Watching covertly, Tam saw Strike drop his mask of gentleness after he had debarked and conversed with a fellow passenger, a proud, Indian-featured man whom he had rallied LaCroix.

On Front Street, outside the Centennial Hotel, Tam Barrie hesitated.

His course should be to brace Cleland Strike at the first possible moment. But he thought with a sudden pang of jealousy, Strike might not be up yet—nor Dove.

He must choose his moment, for his inquiries around town had indicated that Strike was not a man to be handled with impunity. Unless he were in the right mood, Strike would enjoy annoying or evading Tam. And certain questions must be answered, if it took Tam all summer.

Irresolute, Tam stood watching the crowds. In spite of his lack of rapport with the raw crudity of this land and the people who lived in it, Tam was stirred by the hurrying and sweep and the hurry of it. Here was lusty life, primitive but exciting.

Now two men of the Metis passed Tam in their colorful costumes, trim with a French flair even to the fringed sash around their waists. Strong, straight men, who smiled with a flash of white teeth, their manner alert and confident. Their name for themselves, Tam thought, fitted them well, for their skins were a glowing dark bronze: the Bois Brules, the burnwood people.

With a sudden decision, Tam turned toward Arnoux Street. Strike's temper, he thought, will not improve with age. He did more or less agree to meet with me today. Might as well get it over with.

He looked at the two-story house with interest as he approached. He had been told that it was built by Grandson Strike, Cleland's father.

Tam went up the steps, and knocked. After a moment, a "breed woman opened the door a crack and peered out at him.

"What you want?" she asked.

"Tell Mr. Strike that Tam Barrie is here to see him."

"Mr. Strike not home. Mrs. Strike, she here."

Tam's heart jumped. "Ask her if she'll see me," he said.

"You wait," the woman said. "I find out." With a soft pad of moccasins she was gone, leaving the door ajar.

When heels clicked on the stair, Tam deliberately turned away, pretending interest in the buildings of Benton, and the sweep of the river beyond. The steps came closer, the door creaked slightly. Tam turned.

"Why, Cousin Tam!" Dove cried. Her arms went around his neck. Her lips were soft and warm on his. For a moment the soft curves of her fine body pressed against him. Then, laughing, she thrust him away. "Tam, let me look at you. Clea said you were here, but I can't believe it. Come in the house. Clea is out, but he should return soon. We'll have a chance for a good talk."

He followed her into the parlor. "My best wishes on your marriage, Dove," he said.

"Yes, Tam," she said, "Cleland and I were married in Chicago on our way west. And— he's wonderful, Tam."

"Glad to hear it," Tam said brusquely. "You weren't very considerate of us at home, Dove. But then, you were always a law unto yourself even as a child. I suppose you lead Strike around by the nose, just as you did me in the old days."

"There was an impish gleam in her eyes. "No, Tam. Not Cleland Strike. If you don't know by now that no one leads him, you'll learn, and it will be a hard lesson. But I did lead you, didn't I? We had fun in those days, sweet coz."

"That's an old, lost time, Dove. What of the present? Are you happy?"

He sensed a shadow of hesitation. Then she said: "Of course, Tam. I'm supremely happy. Everything is new and exciting, and Clea adores me. No regrets, Tam."

"Good," he said, meaning it. "I'll probably see you often in the next few months."

She arched her eyebrows in surprise. "Is that discreet, Tam?"

"On business, I mean," he said. "I'm out west in the interest of Seaboard & Continental."

"Papa's bank? Concerning the money they loaned Clea?"

"You know, then. They want to know if the range cattle business is a likely field for further investment. They intend to study your husband's operations in some detail."

"Your old money matters are not my province, Tam. But here comes Clea now. I hear him riding up."

She touched him lightly on the cheek. He flushed a little, hearing the tinkle of her knowing laugh. He turned toward the door.

Strike came into the parlor, beating the clinging dust from his hat against his knee. His eyes narrowed as he saw Tam.

"What are you doing here, Barrie?" he asked, his glance flicking sideward to Dove.

"We had a business appointment, remember?" Tam's voice was businesslike; he tried to ignore the anger that welled in him from the very nearness of the man.

"I conduct my business affairs at the store of Strike and Company," Strike said curtly. "Not get out."

Frowning, Dove moved to her husband's side. "Clea, don't be unreasonable. Tam represents the bank."

Strike scowled. "I know the bank is worrying about their $150,000. Not bad, but worried, though, or they'd have sent someone more important than this office boy."

Tam held his temper. "That's how office boys get to be vice presidents, Strike. They want me to investigate this range cattle business of yours. Some of the directors are beginning to question your figures. My job is to see if you are as good at cattle raising as you sound. I'll admit you did a good job of convincing them there was money to be made, perhaps too good a job, for they sent me out here to verify your claims."

"What do you know about the range cattle industry?"

"Nothing. Our western correspondents agree, however, that with the buffalo vanishing, there will be grass for immense herds of cattle. You borrowed the money to bring in those cattle."

"And I will. But I arrived just yesterday. Do you and the bank expect me to conjure great herds out of thin air?"

Tam shook his head. "Of course not, Strike. But the season is well along. The bank expects me to follow your progress, to see that you use their loan wisely. There "What kind of rumors?" Strike growled.

"The bank has its confidential sources in Washington and in Ottawa," Tam said. "We even have access to the confidential reports of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. And the police don't like Strike and Company. According to their files, you were active for years running whisky across the border. They say you smuggled furs and robes. They have a report that three wagonloads of guns and ammunition filtered across the border, to end up at Sitting Bull's camp in the Cypress Hills."

"What is that rumor to me?" Strike asked.

"Just that it was Strike and Company that supplied the arms, and Strike and Company that ran them north. Further, Strike, there is another rumor, a vague one, hinting at something deeper."

"Isn't the range cattle business deep enough? Isn't it precarious enough a gamble to occupy a man?" Strike demanded.

"The bank thinks so," Tam said.

"But there was the persistent whisper that out here on the prairies some dangerous game was afoot. And there's nothing more cowardly than big money, Strike. So they sent me out here."

Strike gave that harsh bark of a laugh. "So they thought I'd be fool enough to jeopardize my future, use their $150,000 to gamble? Well, suppose that rumor were true, Barrie. What would you do about it?"

"Our bank has power in high places, Strike," Tam said slowly. "Power in Washington, power in Ottawa, and this frontier is not without law."

Chrysler Corp. Rejects Demand

DETROIT, Mich. (AP)—Chrysler Corp. has rejected a United Auto Workers demand that its 60,000 production and maintenance workers be paid salaries instead of hourly wages—one of the union's major new contract proposals.

Chrysler told the UAW Monday hourly pay for production workers is used generally in industry and that Chrysler deems this a proper means of compensation for such work.

Neither General Motors Corp. nor Ford Motor Co. has replied to the union's pay change demand.

Chrysler also turned down a union proposal that it join the UAW in urging Congress to pass a wide range of social legislation, including a measure to decrease the 40-hour work week automatically when unemployment reaches a certain level.

"We can't even get an agreement from them that a healthy economy is in the best interest of both the company and the union," Arthur Hughes, assistant director of the UAW's Chrysler department, complained afterward.

Gervid Atkinson, Chrysler labor relations director, told newsmen: "Generally, we feel the company should not get into strictly social legislation unless it affects us directly."

Peace Marchers Are Hauled Out

HELMSTEDT, Germany (AP)—The Communists hauled 35 "Peace Marchers" out of tense East Germany today after the marchers had rejected a Red offer to transport them speedily to Poland.

A spokesman said members of the group, made up mostly of Americans and West Germans, didn't know yet what they would do next. The marchers were on a San Francisco to Moscow trek.

The group had expected to reach Moscow on foot by Oct. 25 to distribute pamphlets explaining the need for atomic disarmament.

(Continued from page one) judgment to assess the defendant with court costs. He said, "I do not feel that the taxpayers should bear the cost of this action" because it included state and defense evidence in the court record for possible future review by parole officials.

In addition to the state's witnesses Taylor presented as evidence photographs of the scene of the killing, a butcher knife with an eight-inch blade, a wooden ice mallet and photographs of a heel print found at the waters' residence after the woman was slain.

During this morning's session, conducted before a packed courtroom, the defendant's father, mather and brothers were at his side.

Before pronouncing sentence Judge Burgwyn commended investigating officers for their "diligent investigation" of the case. He also praised Jolly's father, W. O. Jolly Jr. of Ayden, for "his integrity in reporting immediately the theft of the car to Ayden police."

It was a driver education car stolen by Jolly the day Mrs. Waters was killed that led officers to Jolly's arrest July 27. The youth drove the car back to Ayden via Wilson after leaving the Waters' residence and told his father he had stolen it. The six-foot, 250-pound youth was tried in Recorder's Court on the car theft charge and had his license suspended.

Two Collisions Here Yesterday

An estimated $650 damage resulted in two collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police although no injuries were reported.

Heaviest damage was done to a vehicle operated by Willie H. Tripp, Jr., 20 of 1016 Colonial Ave. when the vehicle collided with a utilities pole on Wilson St. near the intersection of Dickinson Ave.

An estimated $400 resulted to the car in the 11:58 p.m. mishap, it was reported.

Investigators quoted Tripp, who was driving alone, as saying he was in the process of making a left turn off of Dickinson Ave. when the lights from an oncoming car blinded him, causing him to strike the pole.

Willie Birtrum Cannon, 62, of Route 2, Greenville was charged with failure to yield the right of way in the second collision investigated, which occurred at Five Points about 7:55 a.m.

Police said the Cannon vehicle collided with a car operated by Henry Harrison Berryman, 51 of 1509 East Fifth St.

Damage to the Berryman vehicle was estimated to be about $150 while an estimated $100 damage resulted to the Cannon car.

Dropped Dead On Street Yesterday

A 47-year-old Negro woman, Cora Lee Johnson of 2 North Greene St., dropped dead at the intersection of Second and Cotanche Sts. yesterday, apparently the victim of a heart attack.

Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey said the woman was walking west on Second St. when the attack occurred, just before 4:15 p.m.

The coroner said the Greenville Fire Department's Rescue Unit was called to the scene but the woman was dead when they arrived.

Coroner Harvey said the death was due to "natural causes"—apparently the result of a heart attack.

Motorists Alerted To Need For Caution

Urged Play It Safe For Children

A mounting share of the responsibility for the safety of all children now rests on the shoulders of motorists as the new school term is about to start.

Authorities from three areas of civic activity, the police department, the public school system, and parent teacher organizations, join in broadcasting an appeal to all car drivers:

"Drive Carefully," is the essence of their pleas.

Through the efforts of police authorities, the new crossing guards, the school safety patrols, and teachers in instructing the younger children in how to "play it safe" in traffic, have brought constant improvement in the accident rate. Maintenance of this record is possible only by eternal caution, the authorities agree.

Children "Forget"

Major responsibility of the motorist—and this includes drivers of trucks and other commercial vehicles as well as drivers of passenger cars—derives from the fact that they are grown ups as opposed to the realization that school pupils, especially those in the earlier grades, are but "children."

And children are impulsive, frequently thoughtless, as compared with grown ups who have learned self control, traffic safety authorities agree. This means that no matter how much early training the children may get in protecting themselves from the hazards of traffic, they are liable to "forget."

They are liable to dart heedlessly from between cars parked at the curb, liable to thoughtlessly try to beat a traffic light, liable, with false bravado, to "dare" the oncoming car, or seek to relieve a wayward ball.

These aspects of danger are surmountable only by the alertness of the motorist who is urged to be on the double alert in residential areas and near school buildings.

Hold to Limits
Rigid adherence to neighborhood speed limits is the first rule for the motorist. These speed limits, generally speaking, are established with a thought for making necessary emergency stops with safety.

But this, in itself, is not enough as far as the motor car is concerned. Condition of the vehicle itself, especially brakes, tires, and motor functioning, is basic to the ability to make quick, safe stops.

Motorists who, as a general rule, have their cars checked mechanically in preparation for the coming fall and winter season, are urged to have this done this year in advance of the opening of school.

Another point to be checked is functioning of the windshield wiper to make sure of driving visibility in bad weather.

'Dollar Value' Of Education Is Increasing

The value of education in terms of dollars and cents income for the individual continues to rise despite prophecies of a few years ago that the rapidly mounting number of college graduates might be expected to reduce the payoff. Evidence supporting this conclusion comes from reports in the American Economist by Herman P. Miller of the United States Census Bureau.

They may be summarized as follows:

Earnings of the average college graduate in 1958 were about $9,200, or approximately 65 per cent more than that of the man with only a high school diploma.

Those with high school diplomas showed even a better record of earnings increases over those without, on a shorter period of time. The average high school graduate earned 48 per cent more in 1958 than the elementary school grad, as against 26 per cent more in 1946.

Earnings of the average high school graduate in 1958, somewhat less than $5,600 a year, compare with $3,800 for the elementary school graduate that same year.

Mr. Miller, whose reports were based on a study of census returns, adds another fact to explain the rising value of education. Since 1940, the proportion of men employed as professional and technical workers, and as managers and proprietors, has gone up about 50 per cent.

FOR GYM WORK

Canvas and rubber footwear should be worn only in the gymnasium, doctors warn.

Excellence Is Goal For Education In Coming Term

As the day approaches for the annual return to learning, school-oriented thinking focuses sharply on the aim of making education in this nation the "pursuit of excellence."

This spirit prevades the schools of all levels, from kindergarten through college. It is intensified in the plans and preparations of administrators and teachers. To them, and to parents concerned with their children's readiness for learning, it is a challenge and a responsibility.

To the children themselves, the pursuit of excellence becomes a recognized and wished-for goal. Their attitude toward, and vital interest in, schooling is influenced by parents who now place a greater value on learning, and by their own experience.

Mature Students Aware
As the demands of colleges for a higher level of qualifications for admission, and the importance of a higher education, are more and more impressed upon the consciousness of youth, the more mature students have come to full awareness of the pursuit of excellence. Today, this awareness reaches even into the elementary grades, where the youngest children now look ahead to the practical realities of college and career.

As an acknowledged requisite of life in this increasingly complex world, the pursuit of excellence has brought into being new methods of teaching—aimed at extending the capacity of instructors to cover the vastly greater range of knowledge that must be absorbed by modern children and, more important, aimed at increasing the capacity of teachers to stimulate students to do their own thinking.

To Be Creative
Modern technology, employing both mechanical and electronic equipment, is moving into the schools along with television to take over much of the rote instruction, so that teachers may give more and more attention to educating children to think and to use information.

Along with these aids there is an increasing use of a variety of experimental teaching methods, all directed toward achieving the desire for excellence in schools and in teaching. Methods and equipment alike help to free teachers for their ever more significant role in creative education, as opposed to rote instruction.

In the light of the new concentration on the pursuit of excellence in education, the time until school opens is for parents and children alike a period of greatest importance.

Take Steps Now

Replenishing the wardrobe, selecting school supplies, preparing a proper home background for study and arranging examinations for eyes, teeth and general physical fitness are essential steps to be taken—the earlier, the better.

Of equal importance is the question of intellectual and emotional readiness, and here parents are helped by the children's increased interest in the pursuit of excellence. However, high school students as well as grade school youngsters need to know that their parents stand ready with advice, counsel and encouragement on this vital question of preparing for better education.

The beginners, of course, will need help and training to meet the new demands of going to school.

There's assistance for all—parents and teachers alike—in the pages of this special section, presented now to make "getting ready" an easier job.

Toy Teaches

INSTRUCTION MACHINE? No, and yet it teaches. This is an example of the direction in the toy industry toward helping to make learning fun when parents cooperate to choose playthings wisely. It actually spurs interest in the once spurned "fractions." The "math wheel" shown here was developed by Milton Bradley.

Average Cost Of Year On Campus Has Increased

Estimated Minimum Is Put at Nearly $2,000

Rising tuition and other academic costs are a harsh fact of economic life for parents of many of the more than 900,000 freshmen who will be trekking off to college for the first time this fall.

According to the U. S. Office of Education, college costs have taken a 40 per cent jump since 1953. The expense of one year of education now averages about $2,450 at privately operated colleges and universities, and around $1,825 at tax-supported state universities.

Costs at the privately operated schools range from a minimum of $1,000 or so at a few lesser-known institutions up to $2,000 or more at some of the "prestige" universities and fashionable women's colleges in the East.

By 1970, some educators say, the price tag for a bachelor of arts or bachelor of science degree is likely to be double today's already awesome figure.

Raising the money for Junior's college education is admittedly a vexing problem for many parents but the fact remains that more young men and women are going to college this fall than ever before. And— notwithstanding the upward trend in costs—even greater numbers will be seeking admission in the years just ahead.

Never in the history of the nation were there more plans available for helping youth to finance higher education. They range from government-aid and established scholarships, to bank loans, assistance from dad's employers, and even to "learn while you earn" plans.

High school guidance counselors are well informed on these plans and can help students and their parents choose from among them.

It is estimated that more than half of the students now going to college earn at least a part of their expenses during vacations or at part time jobs during the school term.

School Laws Are Different Today

The first compulsory school attendance law in the United States was enacted by Massachusetts in 1852, reports The Encyclopedia Americana. Under this law children between the ages of eight and fourteen were required to attend school 12 weeks a year, six of these weeks to be consecutive.

Homework Aims Are Pointed Up By Researcher

Homework objectives are set forth in "Guided Study and Homework" by Ruth Stang, Department of Classroom Teachers of the American Educational Research Association of NAEA, as follows:

- (1) To stimulate voluntary effort, initiative, independence, responsibility and self direction.
- (2) To encourage carryover of worthwhile school activities into permanent leisure interests.
- (3) To enrich the school experience through related home activities.
- (4) To reinforce school learning by providing the necessary practice, integration and application.

Enrollment Is Up For College Girls

Over the past five years there has been a 43.8 per cent increase in the enrollment of women in degree granting institutions of higher learning, as against a 29.9 per cent increase for men.

A fifteen and one-tenth per cent jump in the number of first time enrollments of women in degree granting colleges was noted last fall, over the previous year, as against a 10.6 per cent increase for the men.

ADVISE MORE PLAY AFOOT FOR YOUNG

Once shoes have been properly selected and fitted, the family must take the next step to insure sound foot health, health authorities say. Where youngsters are "bused" to school and driven to other activities, parents should plan opportunities for walking fun. Crisp fall days are ideal for family outings. Dad can use the walks, too, Dr. McCarthy pointed out.

College Financial Aid Available To Many

Scholarships Are At Hand To Help

Some 141,554 scholarships valued at more than $31,000,000 were revealed as being available recently, in a study undertaken by the U. S. Office of Education.

One of the largest is said to be the National Merit Scholarship supported by $20,000,000 from the Ford Foundation and the Carnegie Corporation. Merit scholarships range from $100 to $150 annually with winners allowed to enter the college of their own choice.

Some industries, such as Westinghouse, conduct nationwide "talent searches" at the high school level to uncover students with commendable interest in scientific careers, deserving of help.

CARS HONORED

Only seniors who are on the honor roll may park their cars on the school parking lot in East Windsor, Conn., according to a ruling made by the town's Board of Education.

This is a message of importance to a vast number of high school students who are eager to continue their education at a college or a university. It is of equal importance to their very much concerned parents.

Before you despair because you are afraid you and your family cannot raise the money necessary to finance your higher education, do a little checking.

You'll find that as long as you are qualified for admission to a college or university and have gained acceptance, that you can borrow the ready money you will need, or at least a substantial part of it.

With the help of your family you can proceed to higher learning on the installment plan. In some instances, notably those made available by the federal government, you'll find you can borrow substantial sums without having to worry about paying any of the money back until after you graduate.

Check Guidance Counselor

So check your high school guidance counselor. Ask him about the help you need, now available in many different forms, under shorter many different plans, even from some local banks.

Some qualified students are eligible for government loans under the 1958 program intended to encourage careers in science and in teaching. These loans, allowing the student to borrow up to $1,000 a year, need not be repaid until after graduation and over a 10 year period.

Those who go into teaching as a profession get even a better break. Half of their loans are cancelled.

Colleges and universities through which these loans are made available used $57,700.00 to help students this past year. Federal and some state governments are moving toward amplification of this program.

Literally thousands of banks now make educational loans available, reports the American Bank-

LONGEST TERM

Among the 50 states of the U.S., Missouri's average school term of 182 days is the longest, according to research by the National Education Association. Maine's average term is just one day shorter.

ers Association, with new ones projecting plans almost every day.

Among the well-established "pay as you learn" programs is that of The Tuition Plan, Inc., a subsidiary of C. I. T., working through some 300 colleges and universities and providing installment financing for all costs of a higher education.

There are some colleges that offer installment plans of their own. Some big industries offer assistance to parents of children headed for college.

Offer Work-Study Plans
Some colleges, about thirty-five, offer work-study plans with students alternating on a job while they go to school. A booklet entitled "Cooperative Education in the United States," listing these schools may be had for 25 cents by writing the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C.

Rising cost of higher education means that few if any can finance a higher education without some financial assistance.

To the average student the advice is: don't be sensitive on this point; check your Guidance Counselor. He can direct you to the help you need.

85 Per Cent Of Students Work At This College

One of the nation's youngest and most unusual institutions of higher learning is sixteen-year-old Roosevelt University housed in the now converted Auditorium Hotel, a Louis Sullivan architectural masterpiece on Michigan Ave. in downtown Chicago.

Eighty-five per cent of Roosevelt University's enrollment of 5,000 work for their living. That's why classes start at 8:30 a.m. and continue through 5:30 p.m.

Roosevelt University is proud of its cosmopolitan student body. Side by side in classrooms sit Occidentals, Orientals, Africans and Asians and native Americans. Their only campus is the whole city.

AVOID STUFFINESS

On-Job Training For High School Students Stressed

JUST LEARNING ABOUT SELLING, is what these students are doing in a York, Pa., high school, under direction of a teacher of Distributive Education, which has spread across the country with the blessing and participation of big national chain organizations as well as local stores. Students go from classrooms to part-time jobs in stores for practical experience and then on to business careers. And they are so enthusiastic about it, they have their own local and national DE clubs.

Vocational Education Counseling Urged By Educator

The overwhelming emphasis placed on importance of a college education during recent years may have obscured for many, but certainly not for all, the needs of nearly 2,000,000 American youth. The nature of the situation may be realized, from some pertinent figures. Of the some 1,873,000 boys and girls who graduated from high school last year, approximately 993,000 went on to college, full or part time. The other 880,000 did not go to college at all. An additional 900,000, it is estimated, dropped out of high school before graduation.

"The heavy emphasis on college is, of course, pleasant for those whose abilities and motivations will lead them to complete four years of higher learning," writes John W. Gardner, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, in the corporation's annual report. "For all other young people, the emphasis on higher education is apt to be a considerable source of strain. All too many are led to believe that in failing to go to college they have missed the high road of American Life," he continues.

"Properly Understood" "This is unfortunate and unnecessary. Properly understood, college or university is merely the instrument of one kind of further education for those whose interests and capacities fit them for that kind of further education. It should not be regarded as the sole means of establishing one's human worth. It should not be seen as the unique key to happiness, self respect and inner confidence. "It is not the top goal of a democracy that every citizen be the equivalent of a brain surgeon or a top executive. It is the goal of a democracy that every individual fulfill his own potentialities and live a meaningful and satisfying life in the context of those potentialities. "As long as we insist on defining college as the only means for further growth after high school, we shall have increasing — and ultimately — unmanageable pressure for admission of unqualified students and we shall do needless harm to those who cannot make it."

He feels that high schools must take on the responsibility of helping youngsters find the right job and place in society. "To be specific," he declares, "every high school in the land should provide continuing vocational and educational counseling for all who leave school short of college. These services should be available until the boy or girl reaches the age of 21.

Work Study Program "One means of providing an effective transition between school and community," he says, "is the work-study program, in which the student spends part of his day (or week) on a job and part in school. Such programs deserve wider adoption than they have to date. "Equally valuable," he says, "are arrangements that make it easy for the young person to resume his education at any time under conditions suited to his need."

Career Training In Schools Expanded

High schools all over the country are broadening their career training programs for girls who, for one reason or another, are not planning on going to college.

The training offered goes far beyond the basic bookkeeping and stenographic techniques, so valuable in business careers, to keep pace with the broadening vistas of this more modern world.

A U. S. Department of Labor pamphlet titled "Suggestions to Women and Girls on Training for Future Employment," offers hints helpful to girls in making their choices.

It also cites, by way of example, a three semester course in quantity food preparation at Central Dauphin High School in Harrisburg, and a medical assistant's program at the Trade High School in Springfield, Mass., as some of the rewarding instruction available.

Courses in commercial art, training as hospital nurses' aides, beauty operators and dental technicians also are available in some schools.

Many such courses, including specifically those in retailing—called Distributive Education—are supplemented by on-the-job training with school credit.

Private schools and industry expand the training opportunities. Airlines maintain schools for hostesses. The new electro-dynamics industry offers training in assembly work. Training also is offered in the new business machines field.

School advisors can help girls choose which field they want to enter.

TIME TO GO BACK TO SCHOOL finds parents and children preparing for pursuit of excellence in education. As mother reminds this young scholar, promptness is important for the right start. Wall clock is "Chantilly" by Seth Thomas division of General Time.

Driver Education In Schools Is Spurred By Mounting Traffic

Attention is riveted more than ever this year on practical education in safe driving at the high school level, as the result of a prediction by Burton W. Marsh, director of the American Automobile Association's department of Traffic Engineering and Safety. He contends, as the complexity of traffic mounts and the number of drivers behind the wheels of automobiles continues to soar, the day will come when a pre-requisite of taking a driver's license examination will be satisfactory completion of an approved driver education course.

With about half the high schools in the country now furnishing such practical instruction for students, studies reveal that students who have taken approved driver education courses have only about half as many accidents as those who have not taken courses. Insurance companies recognize this in rate structures.

What About Time
One problem encountered by maintaining or adding driver education to the regular curriculum concerns the complaint that driver education takes too much time, especially the practice driving aspect.

Minneapolis voters countered this complaint several years ago in a referendum approving funds for a complete driver education program. Classroom work is provided during the day. Behind the wheel instruction starts at the end of the school day and also is furnished during the summer.

Elsewhere, students sometimes are excused from study hall for practice.

"An important challenge during the '60s should be to reduce driver education costs while retaining high quality in the course," says Mr. Marsh. "For it is true, and it will continue to be true, that the host factor is subject to frequent scrutiny and is always subject to possible criticism."

Instructors Needed
Some schools are having difficulty getting and maintaining dual controlled instruction cars, and even enough qualified instructors. Such devices as the AAA Auto Trainer and the Aetna Driver-trainer, simulating driving conditions for students, may help in these areas. So may kinescoped driver-education films now available.

Degree-Hungry Youth Has Increased By 34% In Five Years

Some idea of the rising tide of youth engulfing the colleges may be had from a U. S. Office of Education report of the past year. Enrollment in nearly 2,000 degree granting schools listed in the office directory surged this past year to a total of 3,610,007 for an all time high. This was an increase of 34.8 per cent from the enrollment of just five years ago. Last year, the enrollment of first timers in college was tallied at 929,823 for a jump of 12.4 over fall of 1959.

More than likely the number of students who will enter colleges and universities this fall will not only exceed substantially the number that entered for the first time in 1960, but may well be expected to approach the million mark. Other interesting facts about college enrollment were revealed by the report. For example:

During the past year the number of women enrolled in colleges and universities grew by 9 per cent over the previous year, for a total of 1,228,500 while that for men increased by 4.5 per cent to a total of 2,173,797. Forty and seven-tenths per cent of the students to enroll in degree granting institutions of higher learning for the first time last year were women, for a total of 387,049. That was an increase of nearly 51,000 over the previous year for the girls.

Toeing The Mark Began In School

According to the researchers of The Encyclopedia Americana, the expression "toe the mark" stems from the early days of our country when few school children wore shoes and they literally did "toe" along the crack in the flooring as they waited their turn to read.

Snacks For The Youngsters Can Be A Problem

Choosing snack food is difficult since school children differ in their patterns of hunger. For all choices, good nutrition should be the guiding rule. A judicious mother will plan to have snack foods at home that do not contain "empty" calories, but instead calories that contribute to the over-all nutritional needs of the children. Snacks should not interfere with the appetite at mealtime. For instance, a glass of milk or a piece of fruit two hours before dinner is better than a slice of chocolate cake or a piece of candy. Children who eat the right foods at home, including nourishing snacks, are less likely to buy "empty" calorie foods when out with friends.

Beginner's Introduction To Formal Education Can Be Eased At Home

ADVICE FROM EDUCATOR MADE AVAILABLE TO ALL INTERESTED

In some areas of the country the child's first introduction to school may be through kindergarten, at the age of five. In others that first contact may be enrollment in the first elementary grade, a year later at the age of six.

In either event, the child's first attendance at school is one of the single most important events in his, or her, young life. On this occasion, the youngster moves out into the great, wide world away from the first time, from complete supervision by parents.

How to prepare the youngster to meet that great, wide world is a question that naturally concerns, and sometimes troubles, parents of first timers.

Health check - ups, clothing, school supplies - all these are needs that can be readily handled, but parents often have doubts about the even more vital matter of the child's attitude toward, and readiness for, school.

teacher?" they wonder. "How will he-or she-get along with other children?" "Is he-or she-really ready for school?"

When the school includes kindergarten, this extra year is actually a way of getting the child ready for school-for the more formal lessons of Grade One.

Pre-schoolers are full on "contradictions" in their knowledge, skills and behavior, according to Ohio Educator Elizabeth M. Fuller, and kindergarten works to get these into line. Miss Fuller's study, a National Education Association booklet called "About the Kindergarten," lists some of these contradictions.

She reports that these preschoolers like others around, yet can't always get along with them—they are great teasers, yet can't always take a joke well; they know several thousand words, yet use only a few; they ask endless questions, but often don't wait for the answers; they want to do everything themselves but can't meet adult standards yet.

The questions that come up in a kindergarten's day suggest the type of things that need to be learned to overcome these contradictions.

Miss Fuller's booklet lists questions such as, "What is my name, address and phone number?" "Why do we lose our mittens?" "What happens if Tom hits Bobby?" "What sound is that?" "What does that picture tell us?" "What color is that?" "Why do traffic lights have three colors?" Experience in solving simple problems in working and living with others prepares the child to enter first grade.

Parents interested in studying Miss Fuller's booklet may obtain it by sending 25 cents to National Education Association 1201 16th Street NW, Washington, D. C.

How To Help In Homework Field

Years ago parents took it for granted that they would have to drill their children in spelling and in memorizing multiplication tables.

Then came a change in teaching methods which left parents feeling that "coaching" their young might lead to confusion.

Now the approach to helping a child with his homework is more "middle of the road."

Educators and parents agree that mainly the responsibility of parents lies in backing up the teacher's efforts to guide the child toward independent studying.

This may be accomplished, says Bess Goodykoontz of the U. S. Department of Education, by arranging a definite time for the child to do his homework and encouraging the child to stick to it regularly.

Important is furnishing the child with a regular, suitably quiet and properly equipped place to do his work. This also means helping the child gather together necessary materials for study, such as pen-

LEARNING FOR THE FIRST TIME TO BE TOGETHER is an exciting experience for these kindergarten children, caught by the camera during a mid-morning milk break at Harrison Street School, Geneva, Ill., with their teacher Jean Pomrenke.

A WHOLE NEW WORLD OF DELIGHTFUL wonders is open up for the child who goes for the first time. Witness the fascinated expression on this beginner, captured so sensitively by Carl Purcell in this photograph for the National Education Association.

ANOTHER FORM OF LEARNING that should be scheduled for all the children before the new school term starts has to do with their health and visits to the doctors for check-ups. Here Sister gets a lesson in the way of x-rays from the dentist who has kept an important annual record of her mouth, that helps him keep her teeth in good condition.

50 Million Adults Back To School

Machines Adjust To Youngsters' Learning Speed

One of the frequently claimed facilities of the new "instruction machines" now being introduced into the American educational system, is that they make it possible for the student to learn individually at whatever rate best suits his individual capacity.

The machines, operated by the students themselves, require active and immediate response, for which there is equally immediate correction or confirmation, thus eliminating persistence of errors.

The "instruction machines," which under no circumstances supplant the ability of teachers to educate, may be "programmed" to set up factual information or problems as required by the stage

An unprecedented number of parents will be in a position to set a most practical example for their children this fall, when an estimated 50,000,000 adults "go back to school" with a view to improving their own positions in life.

They will be distributed among classes in night schools and in special classes offered in plants where they work.

Others will be enrolled in professional business schools and at least 800,000 will be taking correspondence courses according to John C. Villame, President of International Correspondence schools.

They will have their own "homework" to do, side by side with that assigned their children who should be inspired to do better work by seeing dad and mother engaged in study.

of development of the students using them.

SETTING A GOOD EXAMPLE for children this year will be countless American parents enrolled in adult education courses, with homework of their own to do—at the same time the youngsters do theirs.

And away we go with . . .

Co-Eds Have Own Style Opinions

Career Plans and Preparations Influence Mature Approach to Campus Grooming

lege is likely to be a reflection of the styles best liked on a particular campus, plus the individual tastes of the co-ed.

A lively appreciation of the present and a keen eye on the future combine to help each girl determine what she wants to wear in class and on campus. Full awareness of the importance of her college years leads today's co-ed to choose her fashions with particular care.

Wants Adult Poise

She plans for more than attractive, appropriate dressing — she wants wardrobe units that will combine easily with each other, on a variety of occasions. The dividends she expects to get are: valuable time saved when it comes to choosing what to wear at any particular time, plus the poise that comes from knowing she is always well dressed.

Her mature attitude toward her future, with the increasing emphasis on planning for careers, gives every college girl an added incentive for wardrobe planning. Since adult poise ranks right along with training and ability in assuring success in a career, and since proper dressing is art of adult poise, college girls begin early to form the ideas and habits of grooming that they will carry into their career lives.

Spreads to High School

Even the freshman has a head start in planning her college attire. The mature approach to fashion has spread to high school, where alert teens are tending more and more to insist on a well-groomed look for school and after-school. Thus the girl entering college for the first time now has a much better idea of what is expected of her in the way of fashion than she might have had a few years ago.

What's involved is not elaborate and well-coordinated fashions. "Studied simplicity" is the fashion rule at most colleges, with "kookie" styles reserved for sports, leisure or dorm life.

Classics Preferred

Shirts, sweaters and skirts are still the mainstays, but these classics have a fall '61 look—sweaters with new fluid shaping, for instance, or skirts with new color treatments.

For "occasions" the basic wool dress continues in favor, and may appear this season in a flared silhouette, as a change from the basic sheath. Walking suits are liked for their adaptability to campus life and take on new fashion flavor with such details as off-center closings.

An alternative is the dress-plus-jacket. This season, the jacket is likely to be both eased and length-

College Panic On Wane As Youth Facing 'Realities'

More Turn Attention to Many Good Smaller Institutions

Gradual subsidence of what was called the "college panic" is observed among students who aspire to a college education, and also their very much concerned parents.

Both groups, it is pointed out, are beginning to face the practical realities involved in gaining admission to institutions of higher learning.

Not the least of these realities, by any means, is the realization that standards of admission are stiffer and every year finds schools exercising more selectivity.

This has brought a more serious approach, on the part of the student, to preparation for college. It has been accompanied in the secondary schools by expansion of counseling services and more individual attention to the requirements of the aspirants.

Probably one of the most potent reasons for the college panic was the direction of student thinking toward one or another of the higher prestige schools regardless of need. These schools could not begin to handle anywhere near the number of applicants.

This trend too, is diminishing as students and parents alike begin to realize the truth of points cited by Douglas D. Dillenbeck, assistant director of Guidance Services for the College Entrance Examination Board of New York:

Several years ago the choice of college was thought to be very critical, like choosing a career, he says. Today the belief is that there is not just one school that is right for a particular boy or girl, but several in many different areas.

Mr. Dillenbeck points out that actually there is no need for a college panic; that "the problem is not one of space, but of distribution."

For students seeking the right school, help is available through counseling from local teachers. In addition, two non-profit organizations, the College Admissions Center in Illinois and the College Admissions Assistance Center of the Council of Higher Educational Institutions, 335 East 80th Street, New York, offer placement assistance.

Students may register with these centers usually at a fee of about $25. The centers are visited by admission officers from recognized colleges who review the student records on file, and then make direct contact with those to whom they wish to send admissions invitations.

Robert L. Lincoln, executive director of the CAAC, points out that 95 per cent of students registered with the center get one or more invitations. This is obviously good news to students having difficulty getting into college.

Pressure on Ivy League schools is diminishing, according to recent reports. Small colleges are expanding and there is a growing appreciation of their more intimate facilities.

Though cost of a higher education are on the rise, the growth of programs aimed at helping college students finance completion of college courses has reached the point where no determined youth need despair of completing his higher learning.

Never Too Soon To Teach Safety

Smart parents won't wait for school to begin drilling their youngsters in traffic safety. Neither will they let up after the youngsters begin to learn about avoiding hazards, from their teachers.

Here are some of the major principles of safety in traffic recommended by AAA as practice that parents should teach their youngsters.

1. Look all ways before crossing the street.
2. Keep from between parked cars.
3. Cross only at corners, especially in cities.
4. Watch for turning cars.
5. Be extra alert in bad weather and wear white after dark.
6. When there are no sidewalks, walk facing traffic.
7. Help your Safety Patrol. Obey traffic guards and lights.
8. Bicycle riders obey all traffic rules.

Finally, parents are warned against breaking any of the good traffic safety rules themselves, especially in the presence of youngsters. They have a proclivity for following a bad example.

Career Classes Teach Work, What To Wear

Most high school girls make a business of studying for business—and it shows in their tasteful attire as well as their office skills.

Career-training programs are blossoming in high schools across the country, and the great demand for graduates with a background in business education has stimulated a fresh approach in high school courses.

Among the schools where simulated, or actual, "on-the-job" training is a long-established practice is Washington Irving High School in New York, N.Y. Here, future girl Fridays who study typing, shorthand, spelling, filing and the operation of various new business machines top off their training with wise counseling on how the young white collar worker should dress for business.

The school's free placement service attests to the effectiveness of the training by pointing to a continual waiting list of prospective employees for Washington Irving students in part time, summer and after-graduation jobs.

Evaluation cards—sent to each girl's new employer—come back reflecting high praise for graduates' skills, deportment and smart appearance.

The school emphasizes a flexible program so academic courses may be combined with career training and experience.

Teachers-to-be also get a chance to practice their intended careers at Washington Irving. Student teachers from New York City colleges benefit by working with actual students in true teaching situations. Experienced teachers who observe the student-teacher give valuable training tips and suggestions.

Practice Course For Children

Many schools help children learn how to play it safe in traffic, by marking out street intersections on playgrounds and inviting the youngsters to play safety games.

Pedestrian lanes, simplified traffic signals, toy size signs are installed and the children are called upon to enact the roles of pedestrians, school safety patrolmen, and occasionally when miniature cars are available, to take the role of drivers. Play is supervised by teachers.

FOAM IN FASHION

Plastic foam, laminated to all sorts of fabrics, figures largely in back to school fashions. It's used to provide warmth and shaping for boys' and girls' jackets and coats, high school and college coats, suits and sportswear.

FALKLAND ELEMENTARY SCHOOL . . . a landmark and center of learning in the Falkland area of Pitt County, will again be bustling with excited children after three-months of rest, when classes resume two weeks from now.

New Teaching Methods Applied

Schools of today are no longer just a matter of blackboards and chalk, history books and ruled paper, with a disciplinarian presiding over classes.

There is so much more for the youngsters to learn; there are so many more children to be taught and yet too few teachers to carry the heavy load—new methods of education are developing rapidly.

Parents may sometimes be confused by reports of experiments that swirl around such phrases as "team teaching," "ungraded classes," "teachers' aides" and "teaching machines."

Teachers, however, are not. The new and some not-so-new methods now finding their way into classrooms are viewed, says the National Education Association, as their findings with the teachers who thus have more time to prepare more appropriate and challenging lessons for their charges.

Expands Principle

Most puzzling to many is the new educational technology that builds upon progress in modern electronics and automation. Yet the comparison being by television, which just expands the principle to more schools and vastly wider areas, is not difficult to grasp.

Neither is the "Language Laboratory" which resorts to use of sound recording and play back equipment to help teachers ease the learning of a foreign language.

Newest of the new methods are the "Teaching Machines," more correctly called "automatic instruction machines." There are many, from simple "page turners" to those with "electronic controls."

TELEVISION RECEIVERS move into more classrooms this year, presenting scenes such as the above captured by Carl L. Purcell, as modern teaching methods are developed to bring more learning to the children. Note teacher at the set.

Team Teaching

The aims are to free teachers from routine drills so they may devote more time to education; to make superior teachers available to more children, and to help children move forward at their own best pace.

Team Teaching, for example, provides for a "master teacher" to present the subject to a larger group of children while associated teachers follow-up before smaller groups in intimately conducted classroom sessions. This method also is seen helping less experienced teachers to become better by learning "on the job."

Ungraded Classes make way for grouping youngsters by stage of development rather than by age, thus offering teachers an opportunity to work with them on the basis of their individual needs. This works also to keep from holding up the "speedier" learners.

Teachers' Aides are being enlisted from among educated homemakers to help the regular teacher with the heavier load of paper work arising out of more emphasis on homework. They correct and grade papers and discuss ELECTRONICALLY EQUIPPED language lab spreads through schools as educators discover the advantages of recorded sound in speeding the youngsters to learn practical use of a foreign language. Note supervising teacher in background.

RANGING THE FULL SPREAD OF LEARNING are the new "instruction" machines. At the left, one for the beginner, and right, one for the more advanced students, called the auto-tutor, programmed for presentation of problems in mathematics. In all instances of use of machines for instruction, their application is to factual matter as distinguished from those aspects of education, such as stimulation of individual thinking, and application of facts learned, which are areas only the teacher can handle.

Classic Styles Will Be Favored For Back-To-College Group Wardrobe

This fall's campus wardrobe reflects the gist of regulations regarding dress issued by many universities and colleges. "neat, gentlemanly appearance" is what is called for. As a result, "conservative" will be the dress-right word on campuses around the nation.

And, the high wool crowd may be expected to follow suit! This trend is reflected in the prevailing taste for style classics. The basic suit is a three-button, notched-shoulder model, without "gimmicks" and often worn with a matching vest. On campuses where a tuxedo is not required for formal or semi-formal occasions, the appropriate suit is sure to be a dark blue or a very dark gray.

Also included in the basic college wardrobe is a suit in worsted herringbone, olive glen plaid or a conservative small pattern. Not to be overlooked for dressy occasions is the blue blazer.

Also required for the campus wardrobe: a sports jacket or two.

For these, Shetland or tweed in medium to dark tones will be favored. Next come slacks to complement the jackets. These are available in a broad range of fabrics and colors, with grey flannels way out in front.

Slacks for classroom and knock-knock-about wear generally are acceptable in tan chinos, poplins and fords.

In outerwear, two garments will tend to dominate the new season on the campus: the tan poplin raincoat and the duffer coat in navy, green, camel and black. Plenty of loden coats will also be seen.

A real "must" is the new waist-length, mid-weight jacket, with or without hood. Often this is adorned with the college crest and will be seen on virtually all sports occasions.

Prominent on any campus wardrobe list is a good supply of dress shirts—and the ties to go with them. Especially favored by college men are tab collar styles and button downs. Solid blues and stripes will be much in evidence, along with the classic whites.

Sports shirts, popular on every campus, come in madras type plaids, checks and solids in cottons and hopsacks chiefly.

COLLEGE MAN'S CONCENTRATION on his studies is enhanced by the comfort he enjoys in his bulky knit cardigan sweater, which is light in weight but adequately warming on chilly evenings. Its smart good looks is given slimming emphasis by the cleverly worked white stitching. Comes in white on green or black in "Ban-Lon".

NATURAL SHOULDER STYLING, so popular among college men today, is handsomely exemplified in this British woolen hopsacking weave sports coat.

ON-CAMPUS COMFORT is assured in this American wool tweed car coat which has wool pile collar and lining for extra warmth on wintry days.

Cameras Find A Classroom Use

Resourceful high school students have discovered that their cameras can be put to more use than just making snapshots of friends.

They are now using them to make pictures of laboratory experiments specimens studied on field trips, and to show step by step processes in learning a given subject.

Prints of the pictures help to illustrate term papers, and also to show parents just what the youngsters are doing in their class work.

Representatives of Carl Zeiss, Inc., discovered a flourishing center of this type of activity at Wayne Senior High School in New Jersey, where James Keegal, Industrial Arts Instructor, is encouraging the trend.

Mr. Keegal reports that recently his students made a picture story of the construction of a jet engine, that is now being used by other schools for display and workshop guidance.

On a still higher educational level, Kansas State Teachers College reports use of photography in seven non-photo courses and Boston University in six non-photo courses.

Fast film for indoor photography without flash simplifies classroom camera use.

YOUNG MAN on campus will find many occasions for wearing a smart, practical jacket like this one in American-made wool gabardine. Wide color choice.

Safety Test For The Bike-Riders

Out in Manhasset, Long Island, N.Y., they have a Bicycle Safety program. Pupils whose bikes are mechanically deficient, or who fail in tests of skill are denied licenses to operate their two wheelers.

The program in which school and police authorities co-operate with parents is conducted in the interest of safety. Pupils who fail the tests are given an opportunity to qualify again.

Breakfast That's Skipped Can Retard Learning

Skipping breakfast habitually will soon affect the child's learning process. Irritability and emotional instability often follow. Breakfast as well as the other meals are often hurriedly affairs, reminiscent of the quick-motion action of the silent movie days. Unless we supply our children with a more tranquil emotional environment, we cannot expect them to eat as they should.

Other bits of psychology can work wonders, too: Serving up modest-sized meal portions will allow the child to finish his plate and possibly ask for more. Letting youngsters serve themselves is also sound strategy for many children. It allows their making a decision for themselves without the parent's losing control over food selection.

EVEN THE TYPEWRITER is now making its appearance in early grades as a machine for learning. Here, fifth graders are shown developing remarkable celerity in tests with collaboration of Remington.

TOYS TEACH

Flash cards gain importance as "toys" that will help children learn, and develop more interest in learning. Strong trend to language study is evidenced by French and Spanish flash cards.

Grade School Fashions Display Earlier 'Growing' Up

Little Girls Ladylike And Boys Look Like Dad

Just as going to school is a big step on the way to growing up, dressing in a "grown-up" way is an important part of going to school, for even the youngest grade schoolers.

Now that children are studying more advanced subjects in the elementary grades and even planning ahead, as seriously as their teen-age brothers and sisters, for careers-to-come, they like to feel that their clothes reflect their new "grown-up" outlook.

Here's the Fall Picture for Girls

This fall, there's a plentiful selection of fashions to help the boys and girls of the grade school set achieve their aim of appearing more grown up, more dressed up. Girls can go to school looking demure and ladylike in dresses and separates with old-fashioned airs, brought up to date with modern colors and fabrics.

Such basics as wool, wool-blend and cotton plaids and washable corduroys in prints and solids are seen both in classic and new-this-season styles. Removable aprons and pinafores in print-and-solid combinations add versatility to school dresses.

Princess lines, always flattering to little girls, gain popularity with the adult fashion liking for the flare.

And Here's What Boys Will Wear

Little boys greet the school bell in scaled-for-them versions of the kind of wearables most popular with their Dads. "Match-ups" of slacks, jackets, shirts copy the high school set in suits—with three-button Ivy types in the lead—go to school on special occasions. Solid-color blazers lead in sports coats.

Outerwear, too, is in a grown-up mood, with such styles as fur-trimmed coats and swing coats for the girls, and a wider-than-ever variety of jackets and coats for boys.

RIGHT ON THE BEAM of his assignment is this young student, who looks as smart as he is in his junior sport coat in imported Scottish Woolen tweed in the traditional three-button style. Has breast welt pocket, patched with flaps, and vent back.

GOOD HEALTH AND GOOD GROOMING go hand in hand, as brother and sister pause for invigorating game on the way to class. Her wool jacket has wool-pile lining, convertible hood-collar. His wool tweed jacket is plaid lined. Both in American woolsens.

BUTTON-BRIGHT looking is this youngster, en route to school in a smart sport jacket which is made of 70% Acrilan 30% worsted.

RIGHT ANSWER to the question of classroom attire is exemplified by this youngster in his handsome sport shirt in fabric containing Kodol.

High School Boys Now 'Go Neat'

'Dress Right' Idea Is Winning Wide Favor

High school boys heading back to school this fall will probably be the neatest and most appearance-conscious in many a generation. In a nation-wide poll involving 4,000 high schools, sponsored by "Scholastic Magazine," 98 per cent of teachers and officials said the "dress right" movement has caused a big upgrading in student appearance, especially among boys.

Behavior Better

The same overwhelming majority noted a new improved tone of behavior where the program had taken hold, with better grades as one important result. Virtually all agreed that better dress and grooming habits among high school youngsters will have a big bearing on how successful they are when they later try to get good jobs and advance in them.

Today's high schooler aiming at college or a job early collects a sensible wardrobe that includes basic suits, sports jacket and slacks in combination, dress shirts, sports shirts, ties, sweaters and accessories.

Style-wise he takes his cue, as always, from the collegian. Right to his taste are Ivy models in virtually every garment he acquires. This season it is classic Ivy without "gimmicks" or off-beat touches.

For The Classroom

For the classroom he'll elect a sports jacket in shetland or tweed to be worn with slacks (beltless models favored) ranging from grey flannel to washable man-made fibers. Knitted sport shirts are enjoying a boom among the high school set.

Young people everywhere are going in for ensemble outfitting: complementing jackets, slacks, and shirts.

Help Your Child Pick Safe Route Home To School

One of the most highly recommended practices for parents of school children, as a step to helping them to safety in traffic, is to check the route the child takes to and from classes.

First, pick the safest one, which means the one with least vehicular traffic, or the one best covered by traffic lights or by policemen or by corner guards.

Then take the walk with your child, is the advice to mothers or dads, gently pointing out the dangers and how to avoid them.

This is especially important for the youngsters going to school for the first time. Chances are the subject will be taken up in classes by teachers for the benefit of the children.

Students Want Smart Luggage

Ranking right along with "What to pack for college?" as an important question in the minds of college students is "What to pack the wardrobe?" Luggage that must serve through a busy four years of trips home, week-end and overnight trips should, college students insist, be roomy, sturdy and smart looking too.

Basics recommended for the college girl are a pullman or hanger case, a train box or fitted case for cosmetics and a matching week-end bag. Hat and shoe cases or bags help keep packing well-organized.

Basic luggage for the college man is the two-suit in which bulky coats and suits travel between home and school. Actually it will hold far more than its traditional "two suit" rating would indicate, especially if it is one of the new soft-sided expandable leather cases.

The student will also need at least one companion case and a bag for train or car. A club bag has the convenience of top-packing, and places everything at fingers' tips.

For short trips, there is a brand new 21-inch weekender that weighs just 16 ounces. Compactly designed, this "carry on" case readily tucks under a plane seat. Easy-to-tote, skyway leather luggage is rugged enough to take a beating on train, plane or in a car trunk.

The attache case, with separate compartments, and often an accordion file section, helps a student keep reports and texts organized.

CHECK ON FASHIONS

Since "preferred fashions" vary from campus to campus, the girl going away to college for the first time should check on fashion preferences at her college before choosing her wardrobe. College-girl advisers in local stores and friends who have attended the same college are two good sources.

Get Support

Local traffic authorities help in training the youngsters and frequently "back up" the youngsters in those rare instances where motor vehicle drivers fail to cooperate with the patrols.

So successfully have the patrols acquitted themselves, that new units assigned to helping keep order, as well as concerning themselves with safety in loading and unloading, have been organized for service on school buses.

Safety Patrols To Go On Duty Soon

Somewhere in the neighborhood of 770,000 lads and lassies, wearing white Sam Browne Belts identifying them as members of the School Safety Patrols, will be going on duty soon, near the schools they attend, to help safeguard their school mates from the hazards of ever mounting motor car traffic.

This "youth corps" operating at the neighborhood level will go into action against a great record of performance. Though traffic accidents continue to be the single greatest cause of death among children aged 5 to 14 years, the broad sweeping battle for safety has cut the toll by almost 50 per cent during the past 40 years.

Curb Is Limit

School Traffic Patrols have played an important part in this work despite the fact that their area of operation is limited to the safe side of the curb. Safety education in the classroom, support of parents and motorists, and effective police work have all made major contributions.

More recently, the introduction of "Crossing Guards," enlisted from among adults, mostly women, adds to protection for the youngsters. Crossing Guards work only during required hours, and take over where the Safety Patrols are prohibited from acting, to complete the chain of protection.

School Patrols, restricted to operating on the safe side of the curb, where it is their duty to hold the other youngsters in check until it is safe to cross, may, however, be found operating in areas and at crossings where there is neither Crossing Guard nor regular policeman.

Here is where the responsibility of the individual motorist is greatest. For without the co-operation of the motorist, over whom the Safety Patrolman can exercise no authority, much of the good work might be fruitless.

The Safety Patrolman's job is to persuade the children from attempting to cross a street until it is safe for them to do so.

Only the motorist can make it safe by keeping his car under perfect control, by stopping when the youngsters are moving into the danger area.

School Safety Patrols are an extra curricular activity of youngsters carefully selected by school authorities with parental permission, and supervised by designated teachers. They have full co-operation of police.

Classroom In Their Home Solves The Study Problem

Now the children can each have a room of their own. That should make it easier for them to do homework. With this thought in mind, Mr. and Mrs. George Martabano of Yonah, N.Y., were particularly happy when they and their family of six children moved last fall to a new and larger home. But some surprises were in store for the Martabanos. "We gave each of the children a private study area, with their own desks and bookcases," Anna May Martabano says, "but we found that the private study areas created a problem we had never had before. Although the five schoolagers had been doing very well in school, it developed that, when they went to their own rooms to do homework alone, there was sometimes too much temptation to neglect reading or written assignments. Mrs. Martabano felt that prompt action was called for. She came up with an ingenious solution—a classroom at home.

In the "class" are John, 15, who will be a junior at Archbishop Stepinac high school, White Plains, N.Y.; Susan, 13, known at school and home as "Tuckie," who will enter high school this fall; and Chris, 11, Jim, 8, and Tom, 7, who will be sixth, fourth and second graders at St. Mary's of Assumption school in Katonah.

To create the classroom, Mrs. Martabano used the family recreation room. Now the students do their homework around a large "desk"—a former picnic table—and their mother is always at hand to see that the studying goes smoothly.

Joan, nearly 3, has her own little desk where she can join the "grown-up" study group by coloring or painting. The results have been all and more that Mrs. Martabano hoped for. The students not only keep up with their homework, but they enjoy it, entering into the study period in a spirit of family fun.

In decorating the classroom, Mrs. Martabano followed the suggestion of Jessie Hutton, Singer educational director, who recommends cool color combinations for a tranquil atmosphere. Mrs. Martabano chose draperies in a blue and yellow-green "Colonial Antiques" print by Waverly.

The Star Spangled Banner was designated the National Anthem by Act of Congress, March 3, 1931.

CLASSROOM AT HOME answers study needs of the Martabano family. Students do homework quietly together with helpful guidance of Mother. Around the table are Jim, 8; Chris, 11; John, 15; Mrs. George Martabano, the mother; Tuckie, 13; and Tom, 7. There's a "nursery school" desk for nearly-3 Joan, too. Draw draperies for windows of the former recreation room assure privacy.

BIG SISTER Tuckie helps brother Jim with homework. Chris is hard at work, too. Tuckie often assists her younger brothers when Mrs. Martabano is busy helping one of the older boys.

Parents Can Aid A 'First Timer'

Parents can help a child get ready to start school by following these suggestions from the National Education Association:

1. Make sure the child knows the basic minimum of self care—how to wash his hands, dress himself, get a drink of water, climb stairs, perhaps tie his shoes.
  2. Encourage him to use his hands in coloring, painting, pounding, building blocks.
  3. Let him hear music so he'll learn about rhythm and marching, running or hopping to it.
  4. Take him places so he'll learn more words and have more experiences.
  5. Set up regular routines of eating, bedtime and playtime.
  6. Teach him the minimum facts for personal safety—his name, where he lives, not to cross streets alone.
- The above are basic principles easily followed by any parents. It also is suggested that parents of beginners become acquainted with teacher from the start and that they make it a point to show enthusiastic interest in the child's own reports of his new day to day school experiences.

HANDWRITING SKILL

The peak of an average student's handwriting ability is reached in the sixth grade, according to a recent study. After this, it frequently deteriorates in quality as speed in writing increases and specific attention to the skill decreases.

BULLETIN BOARD aids study, and to aid good grooming are sweater, pleated skirt, seamless stockings. Ensemble, Bernard Altman; stockings, Miss Hanes.

Homework Trends Veering Toward An Increase In School Assignments

Parent-Student Attitudes Far More Favorable Than You Might Think, Survey Shows

Trends in homework appear to be in the direction of more assignments, as the school year of 1961-62 dawns, after a period of fifty years during which the educational system, almost continuously, reduced its demands on the youngsters.

The upward trend in homework, just as the pressures for long school terms, grows out of the fact that there is so much more for youngsters to learn to prepare them for life in these modern times, and because there is so much need for stimulating them to think independently. This is why modern homework assignments veer strongly from drills to study and preparation of papers requiring research and creativity.

All He Could Handle!
There is, of course, the case of the father who grumbled that his boy was given "all the homework a parent could handle."

There also was the case of the mother who said: "I wish my kids had more homework to do; then maybe I would know what the school is trying to teach them."

Remarkable was the frequency with which the mother's view of homework—as a means of communication between teacher and parent—recurred and occurred. Through homework, the teacher tells parents what she thinks it is important for the child to be learning and how she's trying to teach him to think independently, and to be practical.

"As a whole they (parents) believe in homework activity," surveys report. "But they want homework to be reasonable in amount, a kind that is geared to the child's abilities, and a kind that takes the family living into account, and a kind that really teaches."

What Students Think
What do students think about homework? To parents they may all appear to be griping about it, but the NAEA surveys show that gripes have to do with the kind of homework assigned and not much with having to do it. Most frequently expressed reactions were as follows:

- (A) Some homework is necessary.
  - (B) One assignment shouldn't take too much time; after all there are assignments from other teachers.
  - (C) Teachers should make clear what's expected.
  - (D) It should include assignments for those who find it easier to use their hands than their heads.
  - (E) It should never be used for punishment.
- What do teachers hope homework will accomplish? At this point it should be remembered that they don't assign homework just to be mean; after all they must correct and grade the work that is turned in.

Three Keys To Healthier Diet For School Child Are In Balanced Meals

Good Breakfast Opens Door to Bright Day For Youngster

Food helps make a student—and for an alert student, it takes a good breakfast, a well-balanced lunch and dinner, plus nutritious snacks. These are among the keys needed to build healthy citizens of tomorrow. And in most homes, all that's needed to use them is a little time for planning—and for eating.

The first key is the "good breakfast," which really unlocks the door to a bright day. The body needs food in the morning to give fuel for energy and the materials needed to build body tissues. Studies show that children who do not eat breakfast do less well in school, have less energy for physical tasks and may even be more irritable and emotionally unstable than children who eat a good breakfast.

Dislike Monotony
A wise mother includes one-fourth to one-third of the day's nutritious foods in the breakfast meal, according to Borden Company home economists. Studies show that nutrients missed at this meal are not made up at other meals. And poor breakfast habits, begun in youth, are difficult to correct in later years.

Many children dislike the monotony of foods served at breakfast. Variety in the menu can awaken morning appetites. A toasted Cheddar cheese sandwich, an egg-nog, a double malted milk drink or a cream soup, such as cream of tomato, give the needed protein and energy necessary for starting the day off with.

A good breakfast consists basically of a protein-rich food such as egg, meat, fish or cheese, energy foods such as enriched bread or cereal, milk to give added protein, vitamins and minerals and a vitamin C-rich fruit such as orange or grapefruit, cantaloupe or strawberries.

The "well-balanced lunch and dinner" is the second key to student success. All three meals together should contain all the essential nutrients necessary for the growing student. Careful planners will choose from the following four food groups.

In First Group
The first group, the milk group, includes fluid whole milk, evaporated, skim, dry and buttermilk as well as cheese and ice cream which may replace part of the fluid milk. Milk is the leading source of calcium, and also provides high quality protein, vitamin A and riboflavin. Children and teen-agers should have from three to four glasses each day.

The second group is the meat group which contains protein-rich foods needed for growth and repair of body tissues as well as iron, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin needed to help keep the body functioning properly. Included here are meat of all kinds, poultry, fish, eggs, legumes such as dry beans and peas and nuts. Growing children require two or more servings from this group daily.

The vegetable-fruit group, third vital food group, includes vitamin C - rich foods needed for healthy gums and body tissues and vitamin A-rich foods needed for growth and for healthy skin and eyes. Four or more servings should be included in the daily menu of children and teen-agers. The final group is the bread-cereal group, contributing protein, iron, vitamins and energy. Four or more servings, including whole-grain and enriched bread, should be had each day.

Lunch is an important meal in the school day. It gives children a chance to "refuel." Through the school lunch program, subsidized in many schools by the Federal government, children receive well-balanced lunches at school for a minimum price.

Snacks—Third Key
"Nutritious snacks" is the third key. Active children require additional foods for energy. Studies show that these children often consume from 10 to 17 per cent of their total day's calories in the form of snacks. These are eaten at home or away from school, after school while doing homework, or at bed-time.

APPETITE TEMPTING LUNCHES for those youngsters who carry theirs to school should be mother's aim. Something as pictured above, furnishes balanced nutrition with its sandwich of egg and cheese to which has been added a dash of French mustard, a surprise sweet in a wedge shaped box, and some fruit.

Instruction Machines Make Students Think

Introduction of the new "instruction machines" has brought complaints from some youngsters, some suspicion on the part of parents who seem to feel they may do away with teacher, and a quiet experimental acceptance from many teachers.

The machines are definitely not designed to substitute for teachers, who alone can carry on with the educational processes. They instruct and drill on the basis of information "programmed" into them specifically for the children who use them. All are characterized by the capacity for asking questions or posing problems, with the opportunity for the pupil to learn almost immediately whether he is right or wrong—instead of having to wait for the return of a test paper.

Psychologists applaud the basic principle. Some children, however, may have doubts about the Teaching Machine, on the basis of the reported complaint of one lad: "It makes me think too much," he said.

Teachers generally are not fearful that "Teaching Machines" will mean "technological unemployment."

Automated material, they generally agree, takes pretty good care of drill work and mastery of fact. But, as P. Kenneth Konooski, head of the Center of Programmed Instruction, puts it: "Automated devices can only instruct—only teachers can educate."

The aim of all progress in teaching methods, in this modern era, is to allow the teacher more time for individual attention to more pupils so they may be educated in accordance with their capabilities.

Some Changes Being Effectuated In Physical Education

By GEORGE BRYANT
Reflector Staff Writer

A brief survey of the Greenville City School's physical education and health programs and that of the county schools, shows that local educators have been aware of the physical fitness problem and had been trying to improve it prior to President Kennedy's recent message to school administrators on the situation.

The local programs on the whole appear to be adequate, but a few changes are being made which can be attributed to the President's feeling on the matter.

The President says, "The strength of our democracy is no greater than the collective well-being of our people. The vigor of our country is no stronger than the vitality and will of all our countrymen. The level of physical, mental, moral and spiritual fitness of every American citizen must be our constant concern." These were his main reasons for great concern over the problem. However, Kennedy added that young people are fundamentally healthier than the youth of any previous generation, the majority have not developed strong, agile bodies.

In the first booklet sent out by the President's Council on Youth Fitness there are four recommendations which schools should follow. They are:

1. Pupils who have a low level of muscular strength, agility, and flexibility should be identified by a screening test as part of the health appraisal. Pupils so identified should be required to participate in a program of developmental exercises and activities designed to raise their physical performance to desirable levels.

2. Objective valid tests of physical achievement should be used to determine pupil status, measure progress, and motivate pupils to achieve increasingly higher levels of physical fitness.

3. At least 15 minutes of vigorous exercises and developmental activities should be included in the daily physical education period.

4. While giving priority to the three basic recommendations above, the school should strive to provide a comprehensive program of health education and physical education for all pupils.

Earlier it was mentioned that the majority of today's young people have not developed "strong, agile bodies." What is the reason for this? J. H. Rose, superintendent of the Greenville City Schools, says that one reason for the lack of physical development is the civilization and way of life to which Americans are accustomed. He added, "Life today is boring. There is no struggle." Thus people are bound to get soft.

Today's children live on 50 foot lots on busy streets and do not have the chance to do the physical things which kids could do at one time. Formerly children had room to play and do together without money. For example they could get together and build a swimming hole, climb trees and hundreds of other things.

Rose added that in addition to suburban living, automobiles, soda shops, power mowers, and television sets have added to the soft civilization we have today. Young people ride to school, even two or three blocks, ride to the soda shop after school, ride home, get something to eat and lay on the floor in front of a television. If they should have to mow the lawn the mower does all the work. They can even ride on some mowers.

In trying to have a good physical fitness and health program, the Greenville City schools are "one of the few schools in America that require a record of immunization shot," according to Rose. This is not only for the first graders, but is required of all students in the school system. A health card is kept on each child and referrals are often made to family doctors when the need arises.

The high school program includes the one year of physical education and health required by the state with an extra year which has been added by the city. The classes meet for one hour a day, five days a week.

Of course, Rose High also has a complete interscholastic program which includes seven sports. In addition, there is an intramural program for all students who are interested.

Students participating in the interscholastic program are required to have a physical examination prior to beginning to practice. Also the health department examines one full class every year, usually the ninth grade.

O.E. Dowd, principle of Rose High, said that if there is a student who is disabled in some way and parents and doctors will permit, we try to work out a program in which he can participate. "We think the program is very good and is far reaching, but we wish we could do more," Dowd added. The only way to improve the program would be to lengthen the school day and parents and students would be against this.

The Greenville Elementary Schools have been working with a physical education program for several years now. Mrs. Ellen L. Carroll, Director of Instruction says the elementary school program is right along with the president's physical fitness program. She said they gave tests last spring to each child in grades three through six and the results showed the children need more work and a more constant program in developing physical fitness.

Of course most of the program in the lower grades is left up to the teachers. They must try to conduct an organized recreation period so that the children can get more out of it than just a free recess period.

In the county school system at Farmville, Principal Sam D. Bundy says that the elementary grades, 1-8, have a supervised recreation period similar to that of the Greenville schools. However, it might not be as intense as it could be.

Bundy says he hopes to include some calisthenics in the program this year. At least from the fifth grade through the eighth. He said they had been considering his for some time, but the President's recent emphasis had a great deal to do with the decision.

In the Farmville School all ninth grade students are required to take physical education and health. Three classes a week are devoted to physical exercise and two are used for classes in health.

Beyond the ninth grade in Farmville physical education is offered as an elective. "We had about 80 students beyond the ninth grade this past year who took physical education as an elective," Bundy said. He also hopes to get Elbert Moyer, physical education instructor, or one of the student teachers under him to help with the supervised recreation in the lower grades this year.

Bundy also hopes to take those students who do not participate in band, glee club or some other activity during the activity period, and give them calisthenics several times a week in addition to the regular physical education classes. This plan would include between 40 and 50 percent of the high school student body. Previously students not in an activity had a study period which is probably somewhat misnamed.

On the whole, it appears as though the physical education and health programs in the local area schools are as adequate as possible under the space and time limitations. Kennedy's concern has at least caused a few changes, but generally the local educators were already aware of the existing problem and working on it.

Fashion Presents School Children With Trim, Sturdy New Footwear

Wider Range of Styles In 1961 Collection For Children

Heel and toe and back to school they go — in gleaming leather shoes that are slimmer, lighter and brighter than ever.

Pretty little misses and neat young men, from the first grade through junior high, will find a wide range of styles and a bright array of fall colors in smooth, brushed and grained leather shoes. This fall's shoes boast built-in ruggedness with newly developed leathers that add wear without adding weight, reports Shoe Fashion Service of Leather Industries of America.

Slimmed Down Toe Skipping through school corridors, girls will wear slender laced oxfords, foot-flattering strap shoes and easy-walking slip-ons. The slimmed down toe, which girls of every age are eager to wear, has been proportioned to give growing feet plenty of toe space now and in the months ahead.

Leading the grades are laced oxfords in smooth and brushed leather—cookie brown, Mountie red and London grey. Vividly colored leather "patches" on the sides and vamps single out the youthful fashion pace setter. Colored laces or white metal eyelets—circles, triangles and squares—add a chipper note to the shoe wardrobe.

AT LEISURE

Leisure wear for college girls is offered in variety, to meet the demands of current trends on any campus. Long, colorful puffers and patchwork shirts are among the top tops, while the bottoms can be anything from tapered jeans to knee tickler skirts to culottes.

As birthday party dates crowd the fall calendar, your miss will be in step with young fashions in shell pumps or strap shoes. Now black patent leather Mary Janes stay shining longer and resist cracking in wet, wintry weather.

Heels Remain Low

Heels remain low for little girls, but are varied in shape to make the youngster feel grown up. Interesting heel shapes this year include half-inch ovals, squashed heels, princess and pancake heels.

This year there are dozens of strap styles. Single and double instep straps help supple leather uppers provide comfortable, healthful support. T-straps and forked straps add slender length to the look of a shoe. Swivel straps worn on the instep or swung behind the heel give a smart girl fashion flexibility.

FOOTWEAR ARITHMETIC PRESENTS — Supple, colorful leather uppers and flexible soles, interesting textures and smart styling which add up to comfortable new shoes for school age youngsters. Boy (above) wears black, smooth laced oxfords by Jumping Jacks; holds buckled black moccasin by Child Life and brown oxford by Kall-sten-iks. Girl holds brown leather moccasin slip-on with white stitching by Miss Sandler, gummetal patent leather pump with rhinestone detailing by Dress-Ups by Alexis, and red smooth leather oxford by Simplex Flexies. She wears double-strap red leather oxford with red snakeskin saddle and straps by Kall-sten-iks.
