

New 'Robot Observer' Put Into Far Reaches Of Space In Greatly Elongated Orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—A new robot observer sped through far reaches of space today to find out just what kind of sailing for astronauts is created when the solar winds of radiation blow over earth's magnetic fields.

Eleven hours after the launching of the "Windmill" scientific package from this missile test center Tuesday night, officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported on the basis of radio signals that the satellite experiment "looks good."

Gray reported nearly two hours after launch that the vehicle was well on its way into space, transmitting clear signals. With four large paddle wheels extending from its body and a 32-inch rod protruding from the top, the payload resembles the spinning vanes of a windmill.

NASA scientists, however, reserved final judgment. That was because the elongated orbit—perhaps well beyond 54,000 miles out at the far point—would take so long that second-pass readings would be late. Those would show whether orbit was achieved, and the shape of the path.

The space agency reported the payload instruments were to make the most extensive probe yet attempted of the earth's magnetic fields and other fields in space and their interaction with solar winds—great clouds of ionized gases which burst from the sun and zip through space, distributing cosmic rays, electrons, protons and other energetic particles.

Many earlier satellites charted magnetic fields and space radiation, but Explorer XII is the first to investigate them simultaneously. During periods of high solar flare activity, billions of charged particles bombard the earth, causing magnetic storms and upsetting radio and television communications.

Named Explorer XII, the package is expected to tell scientists more clearly than ever before how solar radiation influences conditions on earth and how great a hazard it is to manned space travel.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration was reluctant today to label the space messenger a satellite, but there was every indication it was in successful orbit after its launching from this rocket center Tuesday night.

The launching was the fifth straight success for the reliable Thor-Delta. On previous firings, the three-stage Douglas-built booster hurled into orbit the Echo balloon communications satellite, two Tiros weather satellites, and Explorer X radiation satellite. It has several more space assignments in the future.

Murder Charged To 11-Year-Old

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—A 13-year-old girl was shot to death here Tuesday and an 11-year-old girl was charged with murder. Police said they had been arguing about use of a telephone.

Brenda Williams, daughter of Mrs. Ethel Mae Williams McHenry, died of a .22 caliber bullet wound in the heart, said Dr. W. D. Vreeland Jr., assistant coroner. Police picked up Iris Marie Thomas and turned her over to Domestic Relations Court authorities on a charge of murder.

Both are Negroes. Mrs. Mary Wunder, chief probations officer of Domestic Relations Court, said the Thomas girl, a seventh grade pupil, will be given a hearing first in Domestic Relations Court. If the judge sees fit, she said, the child could then be bound over for trial in Superior Court.

Personal Income At All-Time High

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government said today a July boost in payrolls pushed the total personal income of individual Americans to another all-time high. The Commerce Department said personal income last month hit an annual rate of $112.2 billion—an increase of $1.9 billion over June. Not counted in this calculation was a $218-million special dividend paid on veterans life insurance policies.

This was the second prosperity report in as many days. The Federal Reserve Board said Tuesday that industrial production last month had capped a five-month rise by exceeding, for the first time, its pre-recession high.

The board's production index increased from 110 in June to 112 in July. The previous peak was 111 in January, 1960. In this index, 100 represents average output in 1957.

Border Patrol Manning Planes

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Border Patrolmen have been riding as guards on flights out of San Antonio since last week when President Kennedy announced he would order such a move. The San Antonio Express said Tuesday. Most airline spokesmen were mum about the move.

One-third of the gain was in manufacturing, another third in service industries, and the remainder in construction, trade, transportation and government. After approval at a conference plenary session today, both will be signed Thursday when the conference closes one day behind schedule.

There was speculation whether Guevara would sign for Cuba. But other Latin American delegates said even if he did, the U.S.-controlled agencies that will handle the bulk of the financing won't advance any funds to Cuba. Guevara said his country cannot fully support the program until it gets a "clear and concise answer" from the United States whether Cuba is in or out of the alliance family. U.S. delegates steadfastly refused to commit themselves.

Cuban Tries Get Communists Into Progress Plan

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP)—Cuban economic czar Ernesto Guevara tried to open the door today to Communist advisers for President Kennedy's $20-billion Alliance for Progress but ran into a stone wall.

Delegates from the other 20 American nations at the Inter-American Economic Conference brushed aside Guevara's proposals and in committee unanimously approved a 1,000-word "Declaration to the Peoples of America" summing up the new program of economic aid and self-help for Latin America. Cuba abstained.

The declaration is an abridgment of the 3,000-word Charter of Punta del Este which sets forth the principles of the program in detail. The shorter declaration was drawn up with the idea that it could be more easily understood by Latin America's masses.

Allied Note Of Protest Scorned By Soviet Commander In Berlin

By CARL HARTMAN BERLIN (AP)—Soviet Col. Andrei I. Solovyev told Western military commanders today they "cannot be taken seriously" in their efforts to do anything about easing the plight of East Berliners. The Soviet note came as indignation swept West Berlin because of Allied opposition to drastic action against Communist closure of the divided city's border.

The commander of the small Soviet garrison left in East Berlin replied to a protest made nearly two weeks ago against harassment of East Berliners commuting to work in West Berlin. He has yet to take notice of the three Western military leaders' protest of Tuesday that a new Iron Curtain across Berlin has stopped the commuters entirely. The protest said Communist measures have turned the city into an armed camp in the most flagrant violation of four-power agreements since the 1948-49 blockade.

In a letter to Maj. Gen. Albert Watson II, U.S. commandant in Berlin, Solovyev said: "The attempts of the commandant of the American garrison in Berlin to interfere with measures of the German Democratic Republic are completely inappropriate. These measures are exclusively within the competence of the government of the GDR and serve the rightful interests of the republic and its citizens."

The Soviet colonel said Watson was trying to extend to East Berlin "the out-lived occupation regime artificially supported by the American authorities in West Berlin." Reports of Western reluctance to counter the Red closure with economic reprisals came in the wake of an East German threat to retreat the 1948-49 blockade if Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany cuts off trade with the East German regime.

West German border guards reported the first sign of Communist interference with travel between East and West Germany proper. Guards at Bebra and Lauenburg on the border said East German travelers were taken off trains when they reached the checkpoint. At Helmstedt, the chief crossing point for highway traffic, guards reported remarkably little traffic from East Germany. At Luebeck, where normally six cars arrive from East Germany in a morning, none arrived today.

Philpott Ailing

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—Lt. Gov. Cloyd Philpott of Lexington was admitted to Baptist Hospital at 8:55 a.m. today suffering from what doctors said were "terrible abdominal pains." His condition was listed as serious. It had been earlier reported that Philpott had suffered a heart attack and that his condition was "critical" but hospital spokesmen said an electrocardiogram showed his heart to be normal.

The spokesman said doctors were unable immediately to pinpoint the source of the pain. The lieutenant governor was admitted "for study and observation," a spokesman said. Philpott told doctors he was at his place at High Rock Lake when the attack came about 8 a.m., the spokesman said.

He is reported to have said he felt as if something hit him in the face. He then lost feeling in both legs. A doctor at the hospital issued the following statement: "I should not term it a heart attack. He is quite seriously ill. A cardiograph was taken . . . it looks normal. I won't say it is normal. It just doesn't show a change over a year ago."

Gen. Bruce C. Clarke, commander in chief of the U.S. Army in Europe, arrived in Berlin for a conference with American troop commanders and had a talk with West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt. The British ambassador to West Germany, Sir Christopher Steel, also arrived today. U.S. Ambassador Walter C. Dowling is coming Friday.

In Bonn, Adenauer met for an hour with the Soviet ambassador, Andrei Smirnov. West Berlin officials predicted that outbursts against the cautious Allied stand might erupt at a giant rally Mayor Willy Brandt called this afternoon to protest the Communist squeeze. At least 200,000 were expected to turn out.

Airliner-Boat Swap Completed

HAVANA (AP)—A $2.5 million Eastern Air Lines passenger plane swapped for a $50,000 Cuban patrol boat in the aftermath of a hijacking wave may return to Miami, Fla., today. A 10-man airline crew arrived in Havana Tuesday to fly back the Lockheed Electra hijacked to Cuba last July 24 with 38 persons aboard.

The patrol boat, seized by Cuban refugees four days after the plane was hijacked, left Key West, Fla., for Cuba under a plane-for-boat deal. Three Cuban sailors manned the 38-foot craft. The Coast Guard escorted the vessel to America's three-mile limit and returned several guns that were aboard the boat when it reached Key West.

A Miami lawyer tried unsuccessfully to attach the boat for Terry Kane, an American whose Cuban tractor business Fidel Castro's government seized. A Florida court awarded Kane a judgment of $833,998 against the Castro regime.

Another American creditor of the Cuban government, Miami advertising man Erwin Harris, relinquished a court claim to the boat. Harris already has seized a number of Cuban airplanes in the United States to apply toward a $429,000 judgment.

The U.S. government said the boat was not subject to court seizure because it is a government naval vessel.

Says Red China Threat To Grow

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Australian ambassador to the United States predicts that Red China will have a vast army with nuclear weapons within 25 years. Sir Howard Beale, addressing a Town Hall meeting at the Billmore Hotel Tuesday, said Red China would have a population of a billion people and the third largest industrial output in the world by 1986.

Progress on development of the countermeasures, reported to include economic sanctions against East Germany, was slower than had been expected when the work started Monday.

Although a wide range of countermeasures were under consideration, top U.S. officials said no strong steps will be taken at this time because the blockade applies to the Communist East rather than to West Berlin.

President Kennedy and Secretary of State Dean Rusk arranged a breakfast conference at the White House early today and though the purpose was not announced, it was assumed they intended to review the Berlin crisis. Rusk spent about 35 minutes with Kennedy in the President's living quarters.

Newsmen had no chance to question him as he left. The Allied diplomatic planning group was to meet with Asst. Secretary of State Foy D. Kohler in Caracas in June.

Nearly $100,000 Returns To Pitt

A total of $99,874.32 came back to Pitt County and its municipalities in intangible taxes this week. The county government received more than half of this. Its check from the state amounted to $60,864.41. Greenville received the next largest amount of $25,924.38. Other Pitt municipalities and their amounts are: Ayden, $1,113.08; Bethel, $1,655.92; Falkland, $72.91; Farmville, $5,138.53; Fountain, $502.37; Grifton, $1,691.87; Grimesland, $91.88; Winterville, $820.97.

Martin County's total for the county and eight municipalities was $35,137.94. Greene County received a total of $15,441.47 with three municipalities sharing. The moneys are distributed on a formula which takes into account local ad valorem tax rates.

Representatives of the three Western powers and West Germany were to meet at the State Department today to work on the draft and to continue efforts to develop other measures which may be taken because of the refugee blockade.

From various statements made at the conference, however, it is apparent that U.S. officials regard the flight of thousands of East Germans from Communist rule and the closing of the East-West Berlin border as a black eye for Soviet Communist prestige and propaganda all over the world. The significance of this development is judged to be twofold:

1. It should make easier the task of the United States in putting across to the leaders and peoples of the newly independent countries in Africa and Asia the contention that communism has been a failure in East Germany and that it is not the "wave of the future."

One-third of the gain was in manufacturing, another third in service industries, and the remainder in construction, trade, transportation and government. After approval at a conference plenary session today, both will be signed Thursday when the conference closes one day behind schedule.

There was speculation whether Guevara would sign for Cuba. But other Latin American delegates said even if he did, the U.S.-controlled agencies that will handle the bulk of the financing won't advance any funds to Cuba. Guevara said his country cannot fully support the program until it gets a "clear and concise answer" from the United States whether Cuba is in or out of the alliance family. U.S. delegates steadfastly refused to commit themselves.

In the late night committee session that finally shaped the declaration into shape, Guevara made his pitch for Red technicians with an amendment saying that "experts"—could assist Latin American republics in their development schemes. This was interpreted as an attempt to give the Soviet bloc and Red Chinese experts a foothold in countries that will receive U.S. aid under the program.

Guevara also proposed an amendment substituting a promise to promote all sectors of a nation's economy for a pledge to stimulate "private activity." This was an obvious effort to favor Socialist development and remove official support for private enterprise.

Both amendments failed for lack of a second after U.S. Treasury Secretary C. Douglas Dillon warned that it would be "very difficult" for the U.S. public to understand a change eliminating the stimulation of private enterprise. A U.S. spokesman announced today two reports from the U.S. Embassy in Caracas, produced by Guevara earlier in the conference as evidence of U.S. interference in Latin America, were stolen from the automobile of U.S. Ambassador Teodoro Moscoso when a leftist mob burned it in Caracas in June.

One of the documents, prepared by the labor attaché at the Caracas embassy, criticized certain administrative procedures and tax systems of the Venezuelan government. The other, reviewing Latin American feeling on Cuba after the abortive April invasion, said the United States probably could not persuade a majority of the Latin American states to join in a quarantine of Cuba and that even if it did Mexico and Brazil would refuse to cooperate.

Moscoso at the time of the attack on his car was attending an art exhibit at Caracas University. The spokesman could not explain why the brief case was left in the car or what precautions had been taken to guard it.

Brandt Wants Allies To Act

BERLIN (AP)—Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin announced today he has sent a letter to President Kennedy telling him "Berlin expects more than words, it expects political action." Brandt told a cheering rally of 200,000 West Berliners about the letter.

"I said what we think in all frankness," he said. Brandt said he wanted "high Western representatives to come to Berlin to see the situation for themselves, but did not name them.

To cheers and thunderous applause, Brandt declared that by sealing off the border in divided Berlin, the Communists were using the old capital as a lever to split the Allies.

"If the Communists are not stopped at the Brandenburg Gate they will not be stopped at the Rhine," he declared, referring to the famous gate standing as a marker between East and West Berlin.

The following day the bloodmobile will set up shop at the Greenville Moose Lodge from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Whichard said Tom V. Wheelis, chairman of Ayden's Bloodmobile Committee, his assistant, Grady Dixon Jr., and a corps of church and civic organization workers have done "an excellent job in organizing for this visit."

In urging Pitt Countians to donate to the Blood Bank next again be used.

Whichard said, "a total of 107 units of whole blood was required at our hospital alone. This does not include blood furnished to other hospitals outside Pitt County for Pitt residents."

He cited figures: "The 81 patients at Pitt Memorial Hospital who have received blood, in quantities ranging from one to 12 pints, since the bloodmobile last visited this county are ample testimony of the value of the program to all of us.

Bloodmobile Visiting Ayden And Greenville

A two-day quota of 250 pints of blood faces Pitt County next week when the Red Cross Bloodmobile visits Ayden and Greenville on Thursday and Friday.

County Blood Program Chairman W. K. Whichard, in announcing next week's two-stop visit to the county, said the bloodmobile will be in the county to "collect Pitt's share of the blood urgently needed during the summer months to keep the Blood Bank solvent."

Thursday, Aug. 24, the mobile blood-collecting unit will be at the Ayden Community Building from 12 noon until 6 p.m., Whichard said.

The following day the bloodmobile will set up shop at the Greenville Moose Lodge from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Whichard said Tom V. Wheelis, chairman of Ayden's Bloodmobile Committee, his assistant, Grady Dixon Jr., and a corps of church and civic organization workers have done "an excellent job in organizing for this visit."

Set Inquest For Thursday Night

Pitt County Coroner F. W. Harvey who announced the inquest, said the child died at Pitt Memorial Hospital about 6:50 a.m. July 31. She had been struck by a car in front of her house on N. C. 43 about a mile West of Falkland about 7:30 p.m. July 30.

At the time of the fatal mishap, Patrolman W. L. Whitehead of Greenville quoted witnesses as saying the girl was running down the highway on the left side (headed west), and darted across the road into the path of the car which struck her.

The vehicle, which was also traveling west, was being driven by Nathan O'Berry Bass, 29, of Rocky Mount.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Wilkinson, Ruth would have been in the fifth grade at the Falkland School this fall.

An inquest into the July 31 death of 12-year-old Ruth Carol Wilkinson of Falkland, which resulted from injuries received in a motor vehicle collision July 30, will be held at the Pitt County Court House Thursday night at 7:30 p.m.

Gagnon-Hart Exchange Vows

GRIFTON—Miss Judith Ariene Hart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Milton Hart, and Robert Edward Gagnon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Albert Gagnon of Ayden, were united in marriage on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Grifton Methodist Church with the Rev. Ralph I. Epps of Weldon, a former pastor of the bride, officiating at the double ring ceremony.

Altar decorations were of large standard baskets of white mums, gladioli and pom poms interspersed with palms and cathedral candles in seven branched floor candelabras.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Roy L. Turnage of Ayden at the organ and Mrs. Frederic L. Cox, soloist, who sang "O Promise Me" and as the wedding prayer "Oh Perfect Love."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of silk organza over peau de soie, fashioned with portrait neckline and short sleeves. The dress was applied with iridescents and the midriff extended into a chapel train in the back. Her fingertip veil of French illusion was attached to a tiara of lace overlaid with iridescents and pearls. She carried a white prayer book topped with a white orchid showered with satin ribbons and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Carolyn Hart attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a dress of orchid silk organza over taffeta with portrait neckline and pleated skirt, accented in the back by a wide sash. Her headpiece was a circular veil attached to a velvet bandeau. Her bouquet was of asters in varying shades of lavender and tied with purple satin ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Miss Martha Hart of Grifton, cousin of the bride, and Mrs. Thomas M. Prather of Philadelphia, Pa., sister of the groom. They wore gowns identical to that of the maid of honor and carried bouquets of asters.

The groom's father served as best man and ushers were Joseph Milton Hart Jr., brother of the bride; David C. Gagnon of Ayden, brother of the groom; Thomas M. Prather of Philadelphia, brother-in-law of the groom; Guy McCall of Raleigh, Clifton Feather of Aberdeen and Richard Stroud of Ayden.

The bride's mother wore a green silk organza over taffeta sheath dress with green satin accessories and a purple orchid corsage.

Mrs. Gagnon, mother of the groom, wore a beige lace over taffeta with matching accessories and a purple orchid.

The bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. George B. Starling, wore a black sheer dress with a corsage of white mums and tuberoses. Mrs. Maggie Hart, the paternal grandmother, wore a navy blue sheer dress and a corsage of mums and tuberoses.

The bride is an alumna of East Carolina College in Greenville and the groom is a senior at N. C. State College in Raleigh. After a trip to the coast, the couple will be at home in Cary where the bride will be a member of the school faculty.

Reception
Immediately after the ceremony a reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bradley for the wedding party, out-of-town guests and family. White and green was noted in the decorations throughout the home. The dining table was covered with a green satin cloth overlaid with lace, centered with an arrangement of white gladioli, pom poms and fern. Three-branched candelabra with tall white candles in a ruff of net were used on either side.

Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cobb and presented to the bridal couple. In the dining room Mrs. George C. Sugg served punch and was assisted by Mrs. Ralph Dowd of Greensboro, aunt of the bride, Mrs. G. L. Tucker, Mrs. Tom Gower and Miss Mary Helen Bradley. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley directed guests to the den where summer flowers were used as decorations. Mr. and Mrs. John Glenn were in charge of the gift room. Goodbyes were said to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ottaway.

After the reception, the bride changed into an imported navy silk linen suit with matching accessories and the orchid lifted from her prayer book for traveling.

After-Rehearsal Party
On Saturday evening following the rehearsal for the Gagnon-Hart wedding, Mr. and Mrs. John Glenn, Mr. and Mrs. James Conrad Hart and Mrs. Ralph Dowd entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn for the wedding party, families and out-of-town guests.

The refreshment table was covered with a pink satin cloth over which was placed a ruffled pink net cloth, centered with an arrangement of white pom poms, tuberoses and tall white candles. Mrs. Hart, mother of the bride, served the wedding cake after the bride and groom cut the first slice. Wedding punch was poured by Mrs. Gagnon, mother of the groom.

Wedding Breakfast
On Sunday at noon Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Mack Albright and Mrs. Maggie Hart entertained at the Hart home with a wedding breakfast. Guests were seated at auxiliary tables throughout the home. The bride's table was covered with a white outwork cloth and held a silver bowl with white carnations, gladioli and pom poms. On the mantel in the living room a miniature bride and groom with a festoon of wedding bells was noted.

Miss Martha Hart and Miss Alice Lee Hart served tomato juice cocktails on arrival and later breakfast in two courses was served. Toasts to the couple were tendered by the bride's father, Mr. J. M. Hart, and the groom's father, Mr. E. A. Gagnon.

Hawaiian Luau Honors Debts

A touch of Hawaii entered the debutante scene this week as Mrs. A. C. Ruffin, Mrs. A. C. Tadlock, Mrs. R. G. Lang and Mrs. W. E. Bost, and their daughters, Margaret Scott, Carol Ann Tadlock, Ginger Lang and Stuart Bost entertained at a Monday evening Hawaiian luau honoring the debts. Upon arrival at the Ruffin home, all guests were presented leis. In addition, the boys were given Hawaiian hats and girls were given flowers.

After punch was served from a table on the terrace, guests were invited into the den which was decorated as a Hawaiian scene. The buffet table held a large hurricane lamp, which was surrounded by fruit, flowers and sea shells with the traditional low tables carrying out the theme of fruit and a hurricane lamp. Guests were seated on pillows at the low tables, after the Hawaiian fashion.

The Hawaiian menu consisted of chicken luau, curried rice and beans almonde. Dessert was a half watermelon scooped out and filled with ice covered with fresh chopped fruit on a tray covered with fresh fruit.

Debutantes were remembered with white lily desk pen sets by the hostesses.

Madge Stancill Feted At Party

Mrs. Robert L. Wolff and Mrs. O. E. Dowd entertained the Greenville debutantes Monday afternoon honoring Miss Madge Stancill at the home of Mrs. Wolff.

Arrangements of mixed summer flowers were placed on the patio and in the dining room. On the living room mantel antique china vases were filled with Vanda orchids and greenery.

Miss Stancill was presented with a Cattleya orchid by the hostess. Iced drinks and party accompaniments were served in the dining room with the guests then being seated at lawn tables on the patio. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Burke Stancill, Miss Mary Norman, and Miss Judy Webb. The debutantes were remembered with souvenirs of the occasion.

Mrs. Erving Colburn and Miss Gladys Bailey were Rocky Mount visitors Thursday.

Family Reunion
Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Everett and Mrs. Haywood Everett were hosts at a family reunion honoring Mrs. H. Everett's mother, Mrs. W.E. Page at her home Sunday.

Mrs. Page celebrated her 90th birthday. Four generations were represented.

Tables were assembled on the side lawn where a picnic lunch was served.

Many friends called during the afternoon.

Mrs. Page was remembered with gifts.

Workshop
A pre-school clothing workshop for those above school age will be held in the Robersonville High School home economic department from 7:30 until 10 Tuesday and Thursday nights through Aug. 20.

Miss Catherine Ingram, the home economics teacher, will welcome beginners and advanced seamstresses. Those planning to attend are asked to bring patterns and materials.

The workshop is sponsored for members of R.H.S. community.

Personals

Mrs. Earl Lindanger and son of High Point are visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Winstead.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion J. Brown to a visit with her uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. Claude L. Greene Jr. Miss Toni Greene left Saturday for White Lake where she will be the guest of her cousin, Donna Belche until next weekend.

He, with his wife, made the trip by ambulance and train.

Card of Thanks
We wish to express our thanks to our friends for their kind expressions of sympathy shown during the death of our mother, May God bless each of you.

Could Be Exploded At Any Minute

Closing of the borders between East and West Berlin by the Communists has set a new powder keg in the divided city which could be jarred into explosion at any moment from either side of the dividing line. If the explosion occurs, it will involve not only all of Germany, but the major powers of the world immediately.

The closing of the borders must be recognized as a desperate effort by the communist to close off the flow of refugees from their area into West Berlin. With refugees moving into West Berlin by the thousands daily in recent weeks, there can be no doubt that in East Germany there remain many thousands of people who were far along in their personal plans to flee the communist regime when the gates to freedom were slammed shut.

It must be expected that widespread unrest will result in East Berlin and throughout East Germany by the drastic action taken by the communists last weekend. On the West Berlin side of the line there already have been demonstrations against the communist action, and the high feeling over the incident will not quickly disappear.

Should the incident trigger another East German revolt, the West Germans will not stand by quietly and see the Soviets stamp it out. If the action puts East Berliners out of reach of some 80,000 jobs they have held in the Western sector of the city, unrest on the Soviet side of the line will grow even more tense; the possibilities of an outbreak in East Germany will be increased.

The Soviets have openly admitted defeat in commanding the loyalty of the East Germans by seeking to seal off their escape route to freedom. They have likewise removed the safety valve which may have been responsible for the lack of public uprisings in their sector of Germany in recent months.

No matter how one seeks to evaluate the Berlin situation today it is much more tense than it was this time last week. The immediate danger is not so much an open conflict between troops of the Western Powers and those of the Soviet Union in the divided city, but rather open conflict between citizens on both sides of the dividing line and troops under Communist control. Should an incident break out, there is the great possibility that all would be involved in a matter of hours—perhaps minutes.

Hardly In Line With The Announced Policy

The recent incident in our neighboring Wilson County in which a highway department engineer and the County Commissioners elected to discuss future highway policies behind closed doors hardly appears in keeping with Gov. Sanford's announced policy of bringing the highways closer to the people.

It seems to us that the people of every county in North Carolina should know what policies are to be followed in carrying out the highway program of the state under the reorganized State Highway Commission. It is also important that the people of each county know what their county may expect from the State Highway Commission in terms of improvements of primary highway and secondary roads.

Certainly this understanding cannot be achieved if county officials and highway officials are going to huddle in private meetings at which representatives of the public are excluded to decide policy and discuss highway operations within the particular county.

It has been our impression in recent months that the newly-formed highway commission under the Sanford administration has made a positive effort to carry out the expressed wish of the governor that highway matters be kept close to the people and that the people be kept informed about what is going on in highway affairs.

The incident which occurred recently in Wilson County casts a reflection upon the new Highway Commission and the administration even though members of the Commission or the governor had no knowledge of the fact that the public was excluded from the meeting. It is to be hoped there will be no recurrence of such meetings in Wilson County or any other county of the state. The governor and the members of the Highway Commission have a responsibility to the people of the state to see that this important phase of public business is carried on openly and not behind closed doors, hidden from public view.

Figured Taking Risk Necessary

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Premier Khrushchev— from his view—had two good reasons for slamming shut the gate on East Germans trying to flee into West Berlin.

There might be a kickback—for instance, the Allies were talking today of invoking economic sanctions against the East German Communists, like shutting off trade—but he could chance it.

He has to be credited with figuring the Allies might retaliate that way. The fact that he shut the gate indicates he thought his reasons for doing so outweighed what the Allies might do.

These were the reasons: 1. The flood of refugees to the West was draining out of Communist East Germany many of its most talented, skilled and badly needed people.

2. The sudden brake on the refugees might, if Khrushchev was lucky, split the Allies just when they couldn't afford to be split.

What Khrushchev has done now has to be considered along with what he had threatened to do later because, where there was only one Berlin problem before, there are two problems now.

Starting last June he had threatened before the year's end to turn over to the East German Reds control of those routes over which the Allies supply their garrisons in West Berlin.

Berlin lies 110 miles inside East Germany. But the West, with its 2 1/2 million people, is linked to West Germany. This island of capitalism in the East German Communist sea has been a bleeding sore to Khrushchev.

So the move he planned to make before year's end was just the first step in a series,

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

HEROISM depends not only on courage but on persistence. Many people rush into danger because they lack the judgement to keep away from such danger. Many a coward is ready to fight at the drop of a hat, and to fight because he is a coward and is trying to conceal the fact from himself and others. A true hero rushes into danger when such rushing is necessary. Above all, a true hero keeps on in the face of defeat.

That Door He's 'Keeping Open' for Us—

By HENRY HOWARD

Beware: Cycling Gang

Two friends were discussing this morning an episode over on Elm Street last night. From the discussion you'd think Greenville has its own 'cycle gang' or something.

These two were over on the Elm Street Park tennis courts last night enjoying the sport that has a way of stiffening spectators' necks.

They say they really enjoy tennis but just don't find enough time for it. They make it over to the Elm Street courts maybe twice a month or so.

Last night, they said, was the first time they'd encountered the cyclists. They described them as a group—maybe 15 or so strong—of "early teenagers."

The episode went like this: First, there was continuous loud talking and shouting over in the high school parking area where the group was gathered. That bothered no one.

Then the bicycles swung into action. They raced singly and in mass around the school area and onto Elm Street, currently undergoing paving operations. This was okay, too.

As a matter of fact, our friends had hardly even noticed the youngsters in their earlier shenanigans.

It was later, when a brief storm of rocks and clouds of clay rained down on the tennis courts that the cyclists drew attention.

After that the tennis players kept a wary eye open for what the mounted teenagers would do next. Not so much of curiosity, but of a natural urge toward self-preservation.

"We were ready to dodge the next bunch of airborne rocks and other missiles," one explained.

Happily, the second barrage never came.

Other Editors Saying... Democracy & Unanimity

(Washington Daily News)

We fear unanimity far more than we fear differences of opinion. We say that regardless of where the locale might be in government. It could be the City Hall, the County commissioners, the State Council, or the congress of the United States.

It would also be the communist congress in any given Red country. It could be Russia, East Germany, or Poland.

When we think of free peoples, we also think of democracy, of discussion, of division of opinion, and of compromise. We also think of "slowness" in the sense that democracy never works as fast as dictatorship.

Just recently we read where in the East German congress of communist deputies voted unanimously to endorse the plan for a separate peace treaty with Red Russia. Offhand, one might think and feel that the very picture of unanimity gave the endorsement a strong and vibrant flavor. Unanimity gave it neither.

It gave it only a "yes-man" approval. There was no discussion, no differences of opinion, and only one side of the argument was brought out.

Let a City Council or a County commissioner group consider some major proposition. Where there are differences of opinion, more real truths are brought out. A deeper search for additional truths usually results.

We fear unanimity more than differences of opinion because liberty, freedom, and the pursuit of happiness have been handed to us after grave differences of opinion on the part of those who gave us the heritage. Compromise looms as an ever larger word with an ever larger meaning.

We do not favor compromising truth with untruth or good with bad. But oftentimes there are several honest and upright roads which can be travelled in the search for additional truths. Which road we take might spell the difference between success and failure. But what have we gained if we realize success in some political venture and lose our own souls in the process?

Unanimity all too often means dictatorship. And dictatorship all too often means the loss of at least some of our freedoms. Let a City Council have a dictator calling the tunes, and one day people will awaken to a realization that somewhere along the line such freedoms as those of dignity, personality, leadership, and understanding have been lost.

Dictatorships do work faster than democracies. The decision in a dictatorship can be made by one man in one moment. In a democracy open and free discussion precedes the decision. Sometimes compromise of issues—not of truth—must be in order.

We might say today that Soviet Russia is great. But can any nation be truly great unless it is first free? Can any peoples be truly great unless they are first free? There must be a vast difference between greatness of a system and greatness of a people.

How much real truth do the people of communist Russia or the people of communist East Germany possess today? Do they truly know both sides of the picture? We doubt it seriously. They accept what is given to them because fear is a greater obsession with them than freedom.

We, in a free country, never need to fear freedom and differences of opinion on issues. We need to fear the forces which would destroy our freedom and our right to differ and in their place install dictatorship and unanimity.

Democracy and unanimity are not twin brothers. If there is any basic kinship, it is so far removed that it occurs by chance and not by design.

'War' On Communications Front

ELMER ROESSNER

American Telephone and Telegraph and a dozen manufacturers of civilian two-way radios are engaged in an unpublishable war for the farm communications market. It is almost impossible to estimate how many millions of dollars are at stake.

The makers of two-way radio devices are presenting their equipment as the ideal communications system for farm, ranch or other country establishment.

Mom—or the farm corporation's communications chief—sits in the main establishment and keeps in touch with pa and the hands wherever they may be, as long as pa keeps his receiver-sender set nearby.

If there is a telephone call from Orville L. Freeman or the local garage, whoever is in the house can relay the message to pa or the boys and get the answer. "FARM INTERPHONE" PLAN

The AT&T has a "farm interphone" system which it started developing in 1955. At that time, there was a variety of homemade devices on America's farms to keep in communications. Some farms used bells on rope lines and flashing mirrors to keep in touch with the world.

Now AT&T, Bell Laboratories and Western Electric have developed the interphone system. It was unveiled a year ago. Equipment includes a master operations office, linking the station telephone, usually installed in the farm house or operations office, linking the farm to the world outside, a loudspeaker for intercom and monitoring, additional telephones for use in barns and other out-buildings, speaker-microphones for use in connection with a distant phone, a long-range, two-way loud-speaker for outdoor use and special ringers that broadcast phone rings. There is also additional equipment, including "Princess telephones."

WHICH IS BETTER? There are advantages and disadvantages to these rival systems. Here is a comparative rundown:

For two-way radio: 1. This does not require lines. The central station can keep in touch with pa wherever he is, even if he is on the truck headed for market.

2. This system can have auxiliary batteries, keeping it in operation during power failure, common in rural areas.

3. This system can be effective in places where it is impractical to string wires, such as on a boat in the middle of a lake when pa is fishing.

Troops Should Be Told

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Contrived phrases often give false weights to ideas. I recently came across the phrase, right-wing fundamentalism in "Commentary". No matter how much one analyzes the phrase, it means nothing. It is just three words thrown together.

In the controversy between Senators Fulbright and Thurmond over the case of General Walker, the argument runs that the General is guilty of having taught right-wing patriotism. Was it intended that he should advocate left-wing doctrines? Or was he not to give his troops any ideological treatment?

I have before me a copy of the Pro-Bus Program which is the matter in controversy. The objectives of the program are clearly stated. On the subject of Communism, the program provides:

(1) To orient military personnel, dependents and friends in the scope of world Communism by studying the philosophies, objectives and imperialistic expansion of Communism.

(2) To educate military personnel and their dependents in the para-military technique of Communist infiltration, subversion, and propaganda in influencing legal governments, seizing power, then ruling through brutality and fear.

(3) To instruct military personnel and their dependents in the recognition of overt and covert Communist methodology in the Communist attempt to subvert military morals, esprit, prestige and leadership.

If we are at war with Communism, as both President Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev made clear enough, what is objectionable in telling our troops what Communism is and how it works?

Now let us have a look at what the program has to say about American citizenship:

(1) Origins of American Culture: To apprise military personnel and their dependents of their personal stake in American political philosophy and American concept of individual rights and freedoms, the free enterprise system and the necessity for individual belief, sacrifice and honor.

(2) The American Military Moral Heritage: To motivate military personnel and their dependents in adherence to American moral values and the precepts of individual dignity, the preciousness of every human soul, and the obligation of the conscientious citizen to his God, his country, to himself and to others.

(3) Politics, USA: To inform military personnel and their dependents of the power of the American citizen as a unique political force, to study the structure of local, state and national political organizations, to review methods of assessing issues and candidates, to examine the techniques of socialist-communist action, and recognize how the American citizen can exert his power in the fight for freedom.

(4) Morale and Mission: To indoctrinate military personnel in those aspects of body, mind and spirit, which have a material bearing on morale and mission in the 24th Infantry Division: To examine physiological and psychological factors which affect (sic) individual, unit, and Division efficiency, i.e., morbidity, serious incidents, court martial, and board action rates; to create a military environment which will produce tough, aggressive, disciplined and spiritually motivated fighters for freedom.

For this, a general of the Army is relieved of his position? As a matter of fact, this is precisely what every American should be taught in the public schools. Actually, when I went to school, there were courses in civics which were similar to these.

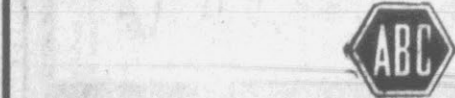

Then the program deals with NATO:

(1) Agreement of Forces: To give military personnel and their dependents a working knowledge of the purpose and objectives of NATO, to review reciprocal legal obligations and areas of responsibility, to identify NATO as a disciplined force for freedom and to note the accomplishment of NATO members in halting Communist aggression.

I cannot give the entire program in this space allotted to me, but I have not found a word (Continued on page five)

Air Of Unreality Hovers Over East Berlin

EDITOR'S NOTE — Lynn Heinzerling first went to Berlin in 1939 to report the first stages of World War II. He has spent the last 20 years in various parts of the world, and this year won the Pulitzer Prize for his reporting from Africa. Now he is back in Berlin—a far different Berlin. This is his story of the way the split city looks today.

By LYNN HEINZERLING

BERLIN (AP)—The police and troops of Communist East Berlin went about their somber task of mutilating this great city under a matching sky today. Dark, forbidding clouds lay over the city. Communist tanks and armored cars lurked behind an arbitrary dividing line.

The people's army, the people's police, the factory militia and the railway police barred some 80,000 East Berliners from their jobs across the line.

On Friedrichstrasse, one of the city's great business arteries, the Communists have put down what looks like a permanent barrier. Great slabs of concrete are laid across the street in five knee-high barriers. Motorists must zigzag through the small openings as in an obstacle race to cross the line. Nobody in a hurry would make it.

There is an air of unreality about this business of trying to quarantine a major portion of a huge, modern city. It is difficult to believe it is happening. But there is the barbed wire on front of the stately Brandenburg Gate to prove it.

The secret policeman on Friedrichstrasse took one look at U.S. passports and politely waved reporters into the Communist section of the city.

Some of the people's police were less polite. One waved down the car just behind the Brandenburg Gate.

"Where do you think you're going?" he inquired angrily with the familiar worldwide expression. A voice said the small party of newsmen wanted only to view the ruins of Adolf Hitler's old office down the street.

"You can drive anywhere except where it says 'no through traffic!'" the policeman shouted. In East Berlin it seems that wherever there is a "no through traffic" sign, a collection of tanks or armored cars is nearby. There was one on the Wilhelmstrasse.

A Queen's Doll House Slated To Be Reproduced

LONDON (AP) — The Queen has decided to lift a little the secrecy shroud surrounding a house where she and Princess Margaret spent many happy hours as little girls.

She has consented to permit the construction of a replica of the Little House for display at this year's Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

It was the first time the Queen had granted permission for a replica to be made.

The Little House nestles under the old oaks on the lush lawns of the gardens of the royal lodge in Windsor Great Park, near Windsor Castle. It's the size of a large living room—22 feet long, 8 feet wide and 16 feet high—yet it has four rooms, a kitchen and bathroom.

The people of Wales gave it to the Queen on her sixth birthday.

It is a faithful copy of a cottage considered modern in the 1930's. The only difference is that everything is scaled down to fit a girl of 6.

The Little House sometimes called the Dolls' House, was the center of the few private hours in the life of the Queen. There she and later Princess Margaret escaped from the public eye to play house and to give tea parties for their little friends.

The Princess' privacy was considered sacred in the Little House. Hardly anything was written about the activities of the girls at play in their private home. Only those nearest the royal family looked in occasionally.

The shroud of secrecy still is maintained. Now Princess Anne plays house in the cottage. No one will say what it looks like now, but it is reported—unofficially, of course—that it has been redecorated. And it's believed that Princess Anne has prevailed on her parents to install a television set.

Probe Deeper In Telephone Costs

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Utilities Commission heard more testimony today in its probe designed to find out why it sometimes costs more to make a telephone call within North Carolina than it does to call a comparable distance across state lines.

Cross-examination by Asst. Atty. Gen. Kent Burns Tuesday tried to show that one firm, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co., puts more of the cost burden on interstate services and less on interstate operations in figuring rates.

However, J. D. Porter of Atlanta, an assistant vice president of Southern Bell, said the company follows uniform principles and procedures in separating its intrastate and interstate investments. He said these procedures have been adopted by the Federal Communications Commission and state regulatory bodies.

"Unless uniform procedures are followed by state and federal regulatory agencies, there would be the possibility of a double return on some property, or else no return on certain property," he said.

Kennan Confers With President

WASHINGTON (AP) — George F. Kennan, U.S. ambassador to Yugoslavia, visited President Kennedy at the White House Tuesday. Kennan came home last week for consultations.

The White House gave out no information as to the nature of Kennan's report to the President.

The Communist police and troops were huddled under the gate to escape the rain. On the Western side, a West German television crew had a camera with a two-foot lens focused on the gate and the modest military activity beyond.

Foreigners and West Germans could still enter East Berlin today.

The Linden trees still grace Unter den Linden, the old imperial and Nazi show street. But behind them are ruins or mostly gray, lackluster buildings—with the outstanding exception of the immense Soviet Embassy.

The State Opera, where Hitler shouted, still stands. A small group of Communist militia sheltered under the portico today.

Great banners meet the eye in East Berlin: "Not a powder keg,

Grifton Board Allots Sum For CD Program

GRIFTON—Grifton's Commissioners have appropriated $200 to participate in a proposed county-wide Civil Defense communications network.

At the board's regular meeting last week, the commissioners voted unanimously in favor of participating in the radio program and also a series of proposed classes to be conducted by the Pitt County Civil Defense program.

Mayor Wiley Gaskins reported to the board on a county-wide

Ready To Resign If Called Upon

NEW YORK (AP)—Three more members of the city's Board of Education decide today whether to resign at the pleasure of Mayor Robert F. Wagner. Five of the nine members already have agreed to step down if he demands. Another is in Europe.

The entire board faces a quandary when the legislature convenes in special session at Albany next Monday, called by Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller to consider the city's school problems.

The board, beset by charges of construction fraud and inefficiency, has been asked by Wagner to resign. He said he was acting on recommendation of a special board of inquiry which he set up.

The mayor said the five who offered to resign would continue in office at his discretion while he set up the machinery to appoint a new board.

He also declared that the city administration would fight in the courts any attempt by the legislature to abolish any Board of Education established by the city.

The five who agreed to waive their rights to serve out their terms were the board president, Charles H. Silver; former Police Commissioner Francis W. H. Adams; Andrew G. Clauson Jr.; the Rev. Gardner C. Taylor; and Charles J. Bensley.

Charles F. Rank, Vito F. Lanza and Cornelius J. Walsh asked Wagner for more time to consider.

The board member vacationing in Europe is Cecile Ruth Sands. All nine members were appointed by Wagner. They serve staggered seven-year terms and receive no pay.

Wagner, a Democrat, is seeking re-election. Rockefeller is a Republican.

No Barges For This Cleopatra

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Cleopatra entered Caesar on a royal barge. Elizabeth Taylor will portray the Queen of the Nile on a galley.

Producer Walter Wanger says he's taking some liberty in the filming of "Cleopatra" because barges have fallen into disrepute in the last 2,000 years. They're being used to carry coal and other prosaic things.

Salary Prospect Luring Teachers

RALEIGH (AP) — The prospect of improved salaries apparently has whetted the interest of experienced school teachers in securing jobs in North Carolina.

A 50 per cent rise was reported Tuesday by State Department of Public Instruction officials in applications from: teachers trained in North Carolina who want to return from jobs in other states; teachers trained in other states who want to work in North Carolina; and inactive teachers who now want to go back to work.

D. R. J. P. Freeman, director of special services for the department, credited the rising interest to pay scales approved by the 1961 General Assembly.

There was agreement from Dr. Charles F. Carroll, state superintendent of public instruction.

He said the salary boosts are bringing nearer the time when school boards will be able to exercise selectivity in employing teachers. To do so, he noted, it must have more applications than jobs available. "In order to get a variety of applications we have to have competitive salaries," Carroll pointed out.

Freeman based his figures on a survey of applications covering a 10-day period beginning July 24. "The interest in out-of-state teachers in getting jobs in this state is becoming more and more noticeable every day," he said.

A popular morning newspaper in West Berlin came out this morning with the headline: "The West does nothing."

But not all West Berliners expect the West to go too far in the present situation. One, who has lived through both wars and 16 years of a divided Berlin, said he did not expect the Western powers to risk a war over the artificial barriers separating the city's two parts.

"We're even getting used to it," he said.

Report On United Fund Given At Ayden Rotary Club's Meet

Triple Loss

WINTERVILLE — The Rotary Club of this small Pitt County community was dealt a triple blow at its meeting last night.

Before the meeting adjourned, the club's president, its chaplain and its pianist had resigned.

The reason? Rev. Henry Melvin, pastor of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church near here, announced he is moving to New Bern.

What difference does that make? The Rev. Mr. Melvin held all three offices.

AYDEN — A program on the United Fund was presented to members of the Ayden Rotary Club at their Friday meeting by Walter Jones of Farmville, who is president of the Pitt County United Fund.

Jones was presented to the club by Corey Stokes. Dr. Sully Nelson was in charge of the program for the evening.

United Fund is a unified program covering many agencies which are non-profitmaking, Jones said. The local UF is in its fourth year and actually is an outgrowth of the old Community Chest.

During the short life of the UF in Pitt County, Jones said, it has not met its objectives up to this time. Until it does meet its objectives, citizens should not be too surprised that some national agencies have not joined the United Fund. However, Lenoir, Wayne and Edgecombe counties have consistently met their goals in recent years, he pointed out. Citing figures, Jones said that last year's goal was $110,000; however, Pitt raised only $92,000. He stressed the point that the Pitt County United Fund is not just a "Greenville" project, but is a county responsibility.

The goal for the coming year is $91,270 with Oct. 20 marking the conclusion of the drive. The budget includes two parts: the "A" budget, or major agencies; and the "B" budget, or community service. It was pointed out that the "A" budget must be raised by the individual community before the "B" budget, which would come back into the community, could be realized.

Concluding his talk, Jones passed out resolutions showing the major agencies of the United Fund and asked each Rotarian to mark beside the agency the amount which he would ordinarily give that agency. Then he asked that each member give the total to the United Fund, rather than treating it as one individual fund.

Leslie Stocks, vice president, presided over the meeting in the absence of President Gwynn Merritt.

Optimists Plan Christmas Sale

Greenville Optimists Monday began laying plans for the third annual Optimist-sponsored Christmas tree sale and a pair of youth activities.

Club members discussed tentative dates for beginning advance ticket sales for the Optimist Christmas trees, sold to raise funds for the club's youth and boys' work projects.

Two youth programs were discussed by the membership. One of them, the Stay-In-School program, is a new Optimist International endeavor and is sanctioned in North Carolina by Gov. Sanford.

The other, Youth Appreciation Week, is an annual Optimist project. The special observance is scheduled this year for mid-November.

President Tom Money reported to the club on the Optimist Zone Nine meeting held in Greenville last week.

Monday's program, presented by Optimist Don Freeman, included a film strip explaining the mechanics and details of life insurance and specific types of policies.

If he is responsible for the Defense Secretary's attitude, the public is entitled to an explanation. A general of the Army is, in effect, cashiered for being a patriot. Secretary McNamara is too competent a man to be involved in this sort of thing. Only a congressional public hearing of General Walker and the Pro-Blue Program will quiet the outrage which too many citizens feel.

Newspaper Advertising Hits the Mark with a Large and Constant Audience

There's nothing hit-or-miss about the newspaper audience—it's a constant audience that varies little throughout the year. That's because newspaper circulation remains constant with little variation from month to month. There is no summer slump in newspaper reading habits. Furthermore, readers can pick their own time—day or night—to enjoy the paper. And they do—over 107,000,000 of them every day in the U. S. For sure-fire results, advertise consistently in the daily newspaper.

Two Gunmen Rob Jewelry Store Of $200,000 In Gems

GREENVILLE, S. C. (AP) — A pair of bold robbers, each armed with a gun, held up a downtown jewelry store here late Tuesday. Police said they carried off diamonds, pearls and other jewelry items with an estimated retail value of $200,000 in paper sacks. Police today pressed a search for the two white men. One of the men, officers were told, sustained a bad cut on one hand when he broke the glass of a display case. Two men, who appeared to be customers, entered the Smithwick Jewelry Store in downtown Greenville Tuesday 45 minutes before closing time. Within 20 minutes, the pair had looted display cases, forced seven persons to lie on the floor in a backroom and bound the arms and feet of three of them with adhesive tape. Outside, shoppers and workers streamed by the store. Police said descriptions of the bandits resembled two gunmen who robbed two Columbia businesses of $2,000 last week. Mrs. Olive Smithwick, wife of the Greenville store's owner, said the bandits called each other "Jimmy" and "Tooley." Tooley was described as tall with a very thin mustache, olive complexion "and something like white paint or polish on his hair to make him look gray." Tooley raided the place of "all the diamond jewelry and every pearl in the store," said Mrs. Smithwick. Jimmy held the Smithwick's jewelry repairman Hoyt Dowis, a woman clerk, a maid and two customers into the back room. Mrs. Smithwick described Jimmy as more stocky than his companion. But, she said, he was "nice and innocent looking." The customers, Mrs. B. A. Long and her teenage son, entered the store right behind the bandits and were in the building when the men locked the front door. "Tooley cut his hand in smashing the diamond case before he got the key," Mrs. Smithwick said. "And blood dripped on my dress while he was taping me up." Mrs. Smithwick said the men took diamond rings, watches, brooches, pendants, bracelets and necklaces and more than 30 strands of pearls. Some of the items were valued as high as $5,000. The gunmen fled by the back door after warning everyone to give them a 10-minute head start or a third person outside "would blow us to bits," Mrs. Smithwick said. She said no one saw a third man and they gave the alarm as soon as the bandits had left.

Focus On Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The last illness, the human confusion of racing the sun, and operating on hearts packed in ice are subjects with a focus on health.

DEATH IN OLD AGE

What of the last weeks and days of life? British researchers have made a study of death as it came to 220 ailing old people, aged 60 to 101, in a hospital.

At least a quarter of the patients were aware they were dying. And most of them met this awareness without fear or misgiving, even with calmness. In seven of the patients the premonition of death came within a few hours of the fact.

Only 13 per cent of the patients complained of moderate to severe pain during this last illness. Oddly the pain was more prevalent with diseases like rheumatoid arthritis than in other ailments including cancer. Less than a quarter of those with cancer suffered moderate to severe pain.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

The jet airplane and its rapid transit across the oceans and continents have added an element of confusion to the traveler's adjustment problems.

Picture this: You leave Paris at noon and arrive in New York at 3 p.m. local time. You've been in the air seven hours. But jet speed racing the sun has saved you four. Now if you work an eight-hour day, you are working a 12-hour day. Even dinner will be late, four hours late.

Air Force researchers point out that some 70 per cent of jet travelers are so sensitive to such shifts in phase that they may develop some disorder or other trying to adjust.

Two obvious solutions: Adopt the living and time patterns of your destination before you leave. Or arrive early enough so you will have time to adjust.

COLD HEART

Doctors are now actually packing the heart in ice for some prolonged heart operations.

Bottles of saline ice crystals—a sort of salt water slush—are prepared before the operation and the crystals are packed around the heart as they are needed, arresting the heart's action while the surgeon works.

British researchers tested the method reported last year in the United States. It was useful in cases where the heart muscle has to be arrested for longer than 15 minutes.

The heart is warmed and starts normal action when resupplied with warm blood promptly after the operation without signs of impairment.

CRITICAL DAYS

Most deaths from heart attacks come in the first few days after the attack. That observation and the fact that heart attacks are the leading cause of early human deaths have led to a new study.

New York Medical College researchers will try to find some way of resting the heart during this critical period, giving the heart a chance to repair its damage caused by the cut-off of blood during the attack.

Among possible answers: cooling the patient's body temperature to below normal to reduce heart activity; or possibly taking the load off the heart by using heart-lung machines.

DYING TOO SOON

Most Americans live to retirement. But at least a third of all U.S. deaths occur before the age of 65. And the death rate in early life is almost twice as high for males as for females.

For the ages of 15-24, accidents cause three-fifths of all male deaths, one-third of all female deaths. And the second highest killer for the ages 1-24 is cancer, mainly leukemia.

ALTON, Ill. (AP)—Virginia Coons was still trying to determine today how her son Michael Edward, 5, got that big bathtub faucet stuck in his mouth. His removal necessitated the use of police, firemen and a doctor. It also caused her to go into shock. "I just don't know how he did it," she said. "I saw him put his mouth around it once and told him not to do it again. "I turned around for a moment and when I turned back around there it was." She couldn't get it out, and neither could police. Firemen arrived and cut it off the tub with a hacksaw. "Faucet in mouth, Mike was taken to St. John's Hospital where a doctor had better luck.

Mayor Appoints Warren Kinlaw Ayden CD Head

AYDEN—The appointment of Warren Kinlaw as Civil Defense director of Ayden was announced this week by Mayor S. F. Peterson before the Town Board of Commissioners at their monthly meeting. Kinlaw, who is in the insurance business here, is formulating plans and naming his committees with the idea of having an active Civil Defense program in Ayden in the near future. He is the Chamber of Commerce president for Ayden. Kinlaw attended the recent meeting in Greenville of the Pitt County Council on Civil Defense, which included mayors and persons connected with Civil Defense from every town in Pitt County. In connection with Civil Defense, the town of Ayden has authorized purchase of a two-way radio to tie in with the Greenville Civil Defense network, which in turn will tie in with the area system in Washington, N.C. State headquarters will be located in Raleigh. Town Manager Cleveland Paydor has pointed out that the town has mobile radio units in use by the Utilities Department, which could be used in some way during an emergency if necessary.

President Said To Have Ruled Out Resuming Nuclear Testing This Year

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy is reported to have decided against any resumption of nuclear testing this year, regardless of whether the Russians demonstrate at Geneva they want no foolproof agreement. The President's position, as outlined to congressional leaders, is that the United States should do nothing to prejudice the case it expects to make in the United Nations that the West is ready to accept a self-enforcing ban while the Russians insist on an inspection veto. Kennedy is sending his chief negotiator, Arthur H. Dean, back to Geneva next week to find out if the Soviet Union is still sticking to its troika demand for unanimous three-power inspection control. If they are, he said, Dean will come home quickly.

There is little, if any, hope within the administration that Moscow will change its position. Accordingly, the plan is to dramatize this last-chance rejection when the U.S. General Assembly meets in September. The U.N. timetable usually keeps it in session until December. Kennedy is represented as reluctant to announce any resumption of tests while the international organization remains in session.

by waiting a few more months before it moves into the field of perfecting types of smaller-scale nuclear weapons. This is contrary to the way Republican congressional leaders view the matter. Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and House Minority Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana called at a news conference Tuesday for resumption of testing. They said stalled negotiations with the Russians should not be permitted to "sand-bag the nation's safety."

Halleck and Dirksen said they have "quite authentic information" that the Russians have been testing all along. This view seems not to be shared by Kennedy administration leaders. Pressed for the source of this information, the Republican chiefs said they couldn't give it. They added that the same information is "known to our highest government officials."

When Halleck was asked if Kennedy put the same evaluation on the reports that the Republicans do, he replied: "I don't know."

FBI Director Points To Evils Of Smut 'Business'

By JOHN EDGAR HOOVER
Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation
United States Department of Justice

America's young people are today the targets of vile smut peddlers—those who would distort young lives by degenerate sex pictures, literature and movies. The manufacture and circulation of obscene material are today big business in America. These purveyors of filth are parasites of the most deadly variety, interested only in making a monetary gain at the expense of the moral health of innocent victims. The time has come for the parents of our nation and other interested adults to wake up—to see what is happening and to take firm action in order that the influence exerted by these vicious hucksters of degeneracy can be eradicated from public life.

How can one judge the extent of pornographic pollution pouring forth upon our nation?

Some measure of the extent of this pollution and the effects of it is to be ascertained by a perusal of the average daily newspaper. One recent incident, in which more than 300 pornographic items reportedly were located, was headlined in two different papers as follows: "Raid Smashes Lewdness Club for Marrieds" and "Nip 40-Pair Wife-Swap Ring." Another news item referred to a smut probe on the campus of a well-known college and the resultant arrest of three professors on charges of lewdness and possession of obscene matter. Still another set forth details of what the paper termed a "Smut-of-Week" mail-order business in pornography.

Another effect is visible in public standards and public taste. Very recently a drama critic indicated that audiences "are now tougher." He expressed his belief that they can "take more." Today's audiences, in this critic's opinion, like violence in their drama. Playwrights of the last two years, he said, went casually into such matters as miscegenation, incest and homosexuality. This critic felt that certain well-known dramas dealing with currently daring subjects would be dated within a few years.

I do not quarrel with the critic's conclusion; indeed, I think he is correct. But the implications which one must read into such a conclusion are frightening. What will it take to entertain the still "tougher" audience of tomorrow? How far can the canons of decency and good taste be thrust into the discard altogether? What are we to expect of our youth in the future when the standards set by the public are continuously being lowered?

The theater is by no means alone in serving up an increasingly heavy fare emphasizing violence and sexuality today. Television and the movies are doing their share in "toughening the audience." But even the most flagrant offerings of television, theater or cinema seem less outrageous when they are compared with the nauseating ofal of perverted minds which is flooding the country in the form of films, decks of paperbacks and pictures. These are the unquestionably obscene. Only a few degrees less deadly is the even vaster deluge of vile and indefensible material which falls into what might be termed the "twilight zone." This is the brazen, vulgar and salacious material which is just short of being "hard-core" pornography. It includes photographs, slides, movies, magazines and suggestive articles. While it does not meet the definition of "hard-core" pornography, it is not fit for the discriminating mind of juveniles. It can appeal only to the adult with the immature type of mind which feeds on the loose, the salacious and the immoral. Unhappily, this material has been reaching the hands of growing numbers of juveniles over the past years and, as those warped by it become adult, they form a growing circle of customers who patronize the most despicable of creatures, the smut merchant.

This kind of corruption is no simple nuisance dealing in meager returns. He is in a business in which millions of dollars annually are involved.

In a recent address, a high official of the Post Office Department made the following statement:

"Mail order obscenity has become a racket of gigantic proportions. There are no more dangerous, unprincipled criminals in existence than those exploiting this racket. Their overriding goal is to extend the vast market for their filth among the children of America. Already, we can estimate that one million children a year are receiving pornographic filth in their family mail box."

This official stated before a congressional committee that the Post Office Department is flooded with more than 50,000 complaints annually. We in the Federal Bureau of Investigation receive scores of similar complaints each month. We forward them immediately to the Post Office Department which has jurisdiction in such matters. The following excerpt is typical of these letters:

"My son, who is 16 years old, received this unspeakable filth in his mail. It was entirely unsolicited. Perhaps his name was taken from someone else's mailing list as he has sent for several magazines on magic."

"You have asked for anyone who has received this type of mail to report it."

"I hope by my doing this it will protect other boys of my son's age."

Can a child be corrupted and ruined by the stream of filth now being circulated surreptitiously on an immense scale? Of course he can! The moral degenerates engaged in merchandising smut draw no line as to the age of their customers. They are seeking to develop new customers and the curious adolescent—and, in growing numbers of cases, the pre-adolescent—whose standards of judgment are unformed and whose knowledge is limited, is a natural target.

What is the likelihood that this child "target" will be prone to experiment on the basis of the perverted activities so graphically portrayed? Isn't it very probable that the child whose home training is not sound will be tempted to indulge in the practices exposed to him?

I believe there is no question in the minds of law enforcement officers as to the harmful effects of obscenity. The chief of the juvenile division in the police department of one large southwestern city has repeatedly made this clear. He obviously is convinced that the all-time high number of sex offenses on the part of juveniles is due in large part to the poisonous literature passing through the hands of children. In a published news feature he indicated a belief that suggestive or obscene literature which may make only a passing impression on one youngster would trigger an entirely different reaction in another. He pointed up his convictions by citing local cases.

In one instance, he indicated, a 14-year-old youth who committed immoral acts on 4- and 5-year-olds said he did so after viewing obscene playing cards with a homosexual theme making the rounds of his neighborhood. A 16-year-old youth—this one 15 years of age—dragged a 9-year-old girl into heavy brush and attempted to rape the child. He had committed similar offenses on two prior occasions in other cities. In each previous instance, investigation showed that the offense occurred after the reading of pornographic literature.

The officer citing the above crimes referred to a case in which a 14-year-old boy made improper suggestions in telephone calls to more than 200 women, most of them housewives, after being excited by a package of pornographic literature. The officer also discussed an incident in which four small boys, ages 6, 8, 10 and 12, committed homosexual acts after viewing lewd pictures.

Inspector Harry Fox of the Philadelphia Police Department, formerly commanding officer of the Juvenile Aid Division of that city, testifying before the congressional committee which was mentioned earlier, indicated his unqualified belief that pornography is a major cause of sex violence. He added that he was sure practically all police in the nation believed that this is so. He said:

"I believe reading the material is going to stimulate them for the various sex acts for which we apprehend them. When we apprehend juveniles, we search them. I wish I could lay before you all the obscene pictures that have been ripped out of magazines and valued as cherished possessions by these boys."

This officer cited numerous instances in which he found lewd and obscene material and played a motivating role in sex crimes which had been investigated by his department.

The jurisdiction* of the FBI with relation to pornographic material in general covers only one phase—transportation interstate except by mail. Juvenile involvement in this area is generally of concern to local authorities. There are, of course, many individual cases in which an investigation in connection with the violation of a law under our jurisdiction necessitates delving into the background of earlier crimes and delinquencies on the part of a suspect. This is particularly true in those cases in which the Federal violation is incidental to a more brutal crime such as rape or murder.

We are currently investigating a kidnaping in which a small boy was brutally murdered by a vicious sex pervert. Scores of suspects have been, and are being, questioned. In the course of this questioning, one admitted pervert, burglar and safecracker advised that he had begun his criminal career with the breaking and entering of a garage, from which tires were subsequently stolen, when he was 13. This man was questioned concerning his activities just prior to this first offense which he remembered so well. He recalled that he and a friend of about the same age had engaged in reading pornographic material. Becoming excited by this stimulus, the boy of 13 had thereafter committed the initial violation in his long and depraved criminal career.

In the light of such data and the experiences related by local officers, each time I am asked if there is a relationship between the flood of filthy smut which dealers of pornography spew forth and the current high incidence of crime, I am forced to say what I have said on many prior occasions:

I believe pornography is a major cause of sex violence. I am convinced that if we can eliminate the distribution of obscene matter among impressionable school-age children we can reduce the current sex crime rate.

There was, during the first 9 months of the year 1960, an 8 percent increase in the crime of forcible rape as compared with the same period for the prior year. At the same time, a 3 percent increase in aggravated assault occurred and a 4 percent rise in murder was noted. Even more frightening—encompassing, as they do, portents for the future—statistics for the full year of 1960 reveal that young people under the age of 18 accounted for 18.8 percent of all arrests for forcible rape.

How can we account for this rise in vicious crimes against the person—to say nothing of a far more startling rise in crimes against property? To my knowledge, there is no yardstick by which the reasons for an increase in a specific crime can be measured with exactitude. Too many factors enter the average crime picture for any sensible person to say, "This alone is responsible." At the same time, only the extremely short sighted will close their eyes to contributing causes. And, let me emphasize my belief that this sharp increase in the incidence of brutal sex crimes very well may be occasioned by the flood of nauseating obscenity currently deluging these United States.

Edwin Hubbell Chapin, an American clergyman, once put it: "This is the essential evil of vice, that it debases a man."

It is, in almost all instances, the debased individual who commits crimes. Where and when does the process of debasement begin? It is not, of course, the law enforcement officer's responsibility to ascertain this, but in instance after instance he finds clear evidence of moral debasement having preceded commission of a crime of violence. Such evidence, in the form of quantities of obscene material, was found among the effects of a badly wanted fugitive with a long criminal record just after he had shot and killed a special agent of the FBI.

Not long ago I noted a news item setting forth details of a car theft. Five youths—four of them 16 and one 17—and two 14-year-old girls reportedly advised arresting officers they had taken the vehicle and were en route to visit relatives in another State. According to the item, the girls received sentences for vagrancy and the five youths were held for a grand jury on charges of possessing a stolen auto. The news item also indicated that two of the youths had received 6-month sentences for possessing obscene pictures.

It cannot, of course, be said that the obscene pictures in this instance, were the direct cause of the car theft. Their existence, however, is evidence of the kind of debasement which such destructive filth promotes, thus opening the way to immorality and crime.

There are many things that you can do to protect your family and your community from the corrupting influence of obscene matter. Give your local police department sound and workable laws regarding smut are stern enough to discourage pornography salesmen.

When you find obscene material for sale in your community, make your voice heard. Complain to the adults involved. Notify your local police. Don't be reluctant to criticize those who put dollars before decency.

Make sure that penalties for smut peddling are realistic. Ascertain whether or not penalties for second and third offenses are increasingly severe.

Remember your courts will decide what is obscene based on the standards of your community.

Place your support behind those who are striving to raise the level of community morality. Add your voice to public opinion in support of your public officials and legislators who are seeking sound means to stem the current tide.

Strive to make objective judgments in differentiating between liberty and license. Join, or otherwise support, those sound and reasonable organizations in your community which are working to eradicate the sale of obscene matter.

Should your child receive smut through the mails, notify your local postmaster. If you have reason to believe that obscene matter has been transported across State lines other than through the mails, notify your local FBI office.

Help provide a sound environment for young people in your community. Make sure that your own children acquire a healthy knowledge of sex facts in your home. Encourage them to expend their energy through normal, wholesome, creative outlets.

The English poet, Robert Southey, said:

"As surely as God is good, so surely there is no such thing as necessary evil."

The torrent of obscene material currently being spewed across this land by amoral muck merchants is most certainly evil—but just as certainly we do not have to allow evil to triumph. We can preserve the traditional spiritual and moral principles which undergird our nation. We can refuse to countenance the merchants of filth.

Inter-American Program Facing Internal Obstacles

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst
PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP)—It is winter in Punta del Este. Cruel, mighty tides wash bewildered little penguins ashore to face a frightening unknown. They are somehow symbolic of the fateful conference of Punta del Este.

Here the men who represent the rulers of the Americas find themselves facing a frightening unknown. They, too, have been tossed on this shore by mighty tides—the tides of political change, of revolutionary unrest.

Here begins a struggle for survival of free democracy. What they have undertaken to do at this hemisphere meeting seems almost impossible in the light of Latin America's history.

The men engaged in this enormous effort are only remotely representative of the abused and depressed lower classes and of the revolutionary young men who demand overnight change. They represent, for the most part, the people who always have ruled—the wealthy people who now are called upon to make significant sacrifices.

In their final declaration here, the representatives of Latin American governments dedicate themselves "to demonstrate to the poor, the hungry, the despairing of our countries and of all lands that the creative powers of free men hold the key to their progress and the progress of future generations."

Now they must go back to their respective capitals and undertake the formidable job of convincing the wealthy, ruling elements that they must reform themselves, give up some of their privileges, surrender vast landholdings, get in the habit of paying taxes, forego their habitual pursuit of swift, huge profits and invest their capital in the future of their own countries.

All this is contained in the final declaration, in the stolid, careful words employed by statesmen approaching radical change.

The most urgent task is redistribution—or at least more equal distribution—of national wealth. The document pledges the nations to try to increase the economic growth of all the countries by "not less than 2½ per cent per capita per year."

The declaration promises an effort to make the benefits of economic progress available to all economic and social groups through "more equitable distribution of national income."

To do all this, and to stave off the twin threats of communism and Castroism which could engulf the continent, the Latin American leaders must bury their old rivalries and suspicions—and most of all, must convince the impatient rising generation that the job can be done.

Ten years is a long time for impatient young men to wait for change. They want change today, not manna.

Highway Commission Starting Two-Day Tour

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP)—The state's 19 new highway commissioners start off today on a tour designed to give them an on-the-spot look at some of their problems.

The two-day trip will take them to bridge sites and ferry operations in the central coastal area.

First stop will be proposed sites for a Morehead City-Beaufort bridge to replace the present out-moded span.

The highway commission which served under former Gov. Luther Hodges put its stamp of approval on a location near the present bridge.

A strong campaign is being waged by a number of Morehead City folks to place the bridge further north, leaving room for port expansion.

Chairman Merrill Evans will lead the touring group. Highway officials expected to be in the party include Highways Director W. F. Babcock, Secondary Roads Director Ben Roney, Hydrographic Engineer W. S. Winslow; Ferry Operations Director D.W. Patrick, and division highway engineers.

Also to be visited today is the Emerald Isle-Carteret County mainland ferry, now in private hands. There have been requests that the state take over.

The schedule Thursday calls for a trip to Ocracoke on the state-operated ferry, Sea Level. The group will travel up the Outer Banks, inspecting ferry operations at Hatteras Inlet and Oregon Inlet.

The Outer Banks leg of the tour will end at Manteo. Then the party will look over the new bridge across the Alligator River, before ending their travels Thursday evening.

Market Behavior Being Studied

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP)—Most grades of Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco, subject of a congressional investigation, were lower Tuesday after the general average rose $1.01 a hundred Monday.

Senate Agriculture Committee Economist Henry Casso, who set out at Moultrie to check grower complaints about a sharp break in prices last week, presumably was still in the belt Tuesday continuing his study of the market's behavior and the probable causes.

Some farmers said they felt price fixing by buyers might be partly responsible, although there were other factors to consider. Casso's inquiry was clothed with a degree of secrecy.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported around half the grade averages declined from Monday. The losses amounted to $1 to $4 a hundred pounds with the largest decreases chiefly in lower quality offerings. Several grades of smoking leaf, cutters and lugs continued to sell for $66 a hundred.

Volume of sales was fairly light at a number of markets. However, a few reported full sales on hand. Poor to fair leaf offerings made up around three fourths of the marketing.

Jasper, Fla., and Pearson, Ga., held final sales Tuesday. Live Oak, Fla., will close Thursday. High Springs, Fla., will close Wednesday. Valdosta, Quitman and Pelham, Ga., close after Friday's sales.

Gull Painters Are Discouraged

BOSTON (AP)—Massachusetts gull painters are getting discouraged.

It all seemed so simple when the Massachusetts Audubon Society began spraying sea gulls with harmless colors to trace their nesting habits.

The ultimate idea was to find means to make it unattractive to gulls to nest in areas which would make them a menace to planes at the big Logan International Airport.

So many reports of red gulls came in that it became obvious somebody else had been painting sea gulls red.

By an amazing coincidence, it turned out that the U.S. Navy Hydrographic Office had been using the same dye as the bird painters. The Navy was using the red dye in a study of tides off Portsmouth, N.H. The birds swam in the water and came out red.

Nationalist Wins Control In Vote

BLANTYRE, Nyasaland (AP)—Pfiery nationalist leader Hastings Banda, outspoken opponent of the white-dominated Central African Federation that embraces this British protectorate, won control of the new Legislative Council in Tuesday's general election.

With results still incomplete, Banda's Malawi Congress party had taken 17 of the council's 33 seats. The United Federal party of Premier Sir Roy Welensky had won five seats, and the independents had taken one.

The outcome means African rule of Nyasaland for the first time. Banda has said that after winning the election the next step will be secession from the federation and then total independence for the protectorate.

Dr. Browning Selected For Who's Who Inclusion

Dr. Elmer R. Browning, dean of the East Carolina College School of Business, has been selected by the editorial board of "Who's Who in America" for inclusion in the publication and a biography-in-brief will appear in the next printing.

Dr. Browning, native of West Virginia, has been at East Carolina College since 1936 when he began as a faculty member in the Department of Business Education. He has headed this department since and has seen it grow from two instructors to the present staff of 31 full-time instructors and professors. The name of the department was changed in May, 1961, to the School of Business of East Carolina College and Dr. Browning was elected dean. Last year the department had near 1,100 students.

Dr. Browning holds these degrees: B.C.S., Bowling Green College of Commerce; A.B., Marshall College; M.Ed., Duke University; and Ed.D., Colorado State College.

Active in civic affairs in Greenville, Dr. Browning is a director of the Planters National Bank, past president of the Greenville Rotary Club, and president of the Pitt County Executive Club. He is chairman of the Business Education Division of the State-wide Conference on Teacher Education and is a member of the Co-operative Research Committee of the North Carolina College Conference.

Dr. Browning is a member of these professional organizations: Pi-Omega Pi, Phi Delta Kappa, and Delta Sigma Pi.

A Western Historical Novel The BURNWOOD MEN

BY ROBERT STEVENSON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED
The first of the succession of disturbing sights that began for Tam Barrie at Fort Benton in Montana Territory when the riverboat arrived that summer in the Seventies was his cousin, pretty Dove Demarest, debarking with the man she married, Cleland Strike. Tam's immediate hatred for Strike made him wonder if he could now carry out his assignment with fair judgment.

Tam had been sent from the Philadelphia bank owned by Dove's father to check on Strike, who had borrowed heavily on his word and his new family connection. Tam's orders had been: see that Strike launches a successful cattle operation or bring back the money, intact.

Tam decided immediate action was necessary, and visiting the Strikes, told Cleland what he was up to.

CHAPTER 4
After practically throwing Tam Barrie out of his house, Cleland Strike went out the back door and down the path to the long bunkhouse. Three men were playing cards at a deal table. They didn't bother to finish the hand.

"I'm surprised that you had the guts to come back here, Smith," Strike said coldly.

The big man, shaggy as an unkempt bear, seemed ready to cry. "I didn't go to do it, Mr. Strike," he whined. "But that dam' Injun kid needed killin'. At that, I jest had my knife out, ticklin' him a little, when he moved sudden."

"Small loss, but it makes talk in the town," Strike said. "But I'll give you a chance to make it good. There's an Easterner in Benton, name of Tam Barrie. . . . He gave terse, clear orders. . . . and don't fail me, Dirty Nose. Make it tomorrow at sundown. You botch this, and I'll have your gizzard, raw."

"I won't miss, Boss," Dirty Nose Smith said.

The dark man, Lisbon Frank, spoke then. "This pilgrim carry a six-shooter, Mr. Strike?"

"No. But we can remedy that," Strike took a little pistol, almost a toy, from his pocket. "Frank, you take this. After Dirty Nose has downed Barrie, you be the first to reach the body. Slip this into the dirt alongside him. Con, you cover it from the sight of the crowd. Then Dirty Nose can say Barrie drew on him."

Con Aleff nodded. "Is the little peashooter loaded?"

"Call it a peashooter if you like," Strike said. He pointed it at the dirt floor in the corner of the cabin and pulled one trigger. The noise crashed in the small room. He handed the pistol to Lisbon Frank. "Makes quite a hole at close range. It's a forty-one caliber double Deringer. Frank, always watch the little points. Now one barrel has been fired. You can patch up a story from there."

Tam ate a late breakfast. Afterward, he walked through the dusty lobby of the Centennial. On the porch, he looked down the street. The July heat was oppressive, but it did not slow the teeming traffic on Front Street. Tam went down the steps and shouldered his way through the press until he reached the Benton National.

The banking room was empty and quiet, in contrast to the hurly-burly of the street. Beyond the wooden railing that divided the room, Aran Hausbird, the cashier, worked at a desk. He dropped his work and came forward as Tam reached the railing.

"Mr. Barrie, I'm happy to see you," he said. He glanced nervously around. "Give me your letter of credit," he said in a low tone.

Tam looked at him, puzzled. Since he had presented his letter of credit his first day in Benton, he had gotten to know Hausbird. They had enjoyed their shop talk, comparing the free and easy ways of the frontier banking with the operations of a great firm like Seaboard & Continental. He had learned to respect the man.

He did not hesitate. He handed the cashier the letter of credit. Hausbird disappeared into the strong room. He returned with a sheaf of greenbacks and a sack of coin. He dumped gold pieces from the sack, counted them with swift expertness, and dropped them back into it. He flicked through the bills, penned notations on the letter of credit. He knitted the string around the neck of the bag and handed it to Tam, with the letter.

"Put this inside your coat, and hide it," the cashier said. "Cold-well, our bank president, asked about your letter of credit, first thing this morning. I told him you'd drawn on it. He scowled at the ceiling, hemming and harrumphing like the old walrus he is. Then he hurried out. I can read the man like a book. When he gets back, he'll have orders not to honor your letter of credit any further."

"And whose will be the orders?" Tam asked.

"A certain powerful merchant. The grapevine has it that you have offended Cleland Strike. Strike just happens to be one of the biggest stockholders of the Benton National."

He flicked a thumb toward the bulge of the moneybag under Tam's coat. "But ahead of those orders, you have enough cash to keep you from being broke or stranded."

"I'll take care of it," Tam said.

"My thanks, Aran. You're a real friend. Hope it doesn't get you in trouble. I could have presented the letter at the Miners' and Drovers' down the street."

"You'll find Strike falling the tune there, too," Hausbird said. "No, cash is safest, Mr. Barrie. Just so the rough element doesn't learn of it."

"I won't tell them," Tam said, smiling. "Because I would be easy meat—I can handle a rifle a little, or a fowling piece, but I'm scared to death of these short guns. In this land of experts, I'm better off unarmed, I figure."

"Perhaps you're right," Hausbird said. "But be careful." He reached across the railing to shake Tam's hand. "Good luck, Mr. Barrie. You'll need it—Strike is a powerful enemy."

Leaving the bank, Tam cut through the alley and up the back stairs of the hotel. In his room he buried the sack under dirty clothes at the bottom of his small trunk. He did not trust the strongbox of the hotel, and besides, Clell Strike might own part of the Centennial also.

Now, since Strike had made an overture against Tam Barrie, Tam felt no qualms about coming out in the open to check Strike. The business card of Seaboard & Continental opened to him the counting rooms of the leading Fort Benton merchants, but these men were guarded in their answers to questions he tried to keep discreet.

All of them agreed that Strike had made much talk of driving cattle from Oregon; that he had set up some buildings on land he owned in the shadow of the Highwoods, a quarter-section of patented land with good water; that Strike had registered a brand Rafter 5, with the local Association.

Concerning Strike personally, Tam could get little satisfaction. These men, he felt, did not consider the trading methods of Strike & Company either admirable or ethical. But they would only hint that Strike was an exploiter, an opportunist. As for Strike's claim that he was hiring cowboys, they said quite a few men had been coming into Benton, inquiring for Strike, and shortly thereafter moving on. A grizzled trader said: "Cowboys—maybe. But they sure as hell didn't look like no cowpokes to me!"

When Tam ended his quest and turned toward the hotel, Front Street was much quieter, the long shadows of evening slanting across the river and road. Things don't fit well, Tam thought, as he went down the street. Strike should have his herds well on the way to Montana by this time, but he seems curiously inactive. Tomorrow, he decided, I'll find a guide and ride to this so-called rancho of Strike's. I'll look it over for myself.

Ahead, from a saloon door, a man came lurching, the batwing doors flapping indecisively behind him. The man fetched up against a porch post and leaned against it, cursing. He was big, surly, ragged, dirty. He pulled a pistol from a worn holster and dangled it from a big hand. He did not look back toward the doors.

Because he had no real reason to retrace his way, Tam walked on toward the man. The man brushed futilely at the dirt on his dirty shirt, and spat, and looked up slyly at Tam. His eyes were empty, not even surprise in them. His lips curled back from broken, yellowed teeth. The hand with the pistol raised.

The pistol came to waist level. The muzzle pointed at Tam's belly. The forded thumb drew the hammer back. Shocked realization came to Tam. He read the hot eagerness that now filled the man's empty eyes, and he knew, with stark horror, knowledge that was past belief—in the next few seconds this stranger was going to kill him where he stood!

HIGH SOUND—The concrete bell tower, with its spiraling steps in full view, rises above the new parish church of St. George in Stenavene New Town, England.

Winston-Salem Attorney Will Serve On Council

Calder Womble, a Winston-Salem attorney, will represent the Pitt County Red Cross Chapter for the next three years on the Southeastern Area Advisory Council, according to F. Richard Atkinson county chairman.

Womble succeeds Dr. H.H. Stovall of Greensboro. The 15-member council serves as liaison between chapters and Southeastern Area management and also the organization's national board of governors.

A member of the board of directors of the Winston-Salem Red Cross Chapter since 1950, Womble served as chairman of the chapter from 1953 to 1955.

Currently he is a member of the board of directors of Winston-Salem's United Fund. He was regional fund chairman in North Carolina for the national Red Cross from 1956 to 1958.

The setting for Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Treasure Island" was the Isle of Pines off the coast of Cuba.

Oddities In The News Of The Day

By PIERCE LEHMBECK
Associated Press Staff Writer
Some Franciscan priests get credit cards. Congressional constituents get a lesson in "Capitolese." And it's proved again: "You can't fight City Hall." These are among oddities in the news.

Canadian members of the Franciscan Order are carrying credit cards these days. But they've got more reason than most folks.

When one enters the order, he takes a vow of poverty and, an official explains, isn't supposed to handle money.

The Rev. Irenaeus Herscher, O.F.M., treasurer of the Franciscan Education Conference, disclosed the development at Loretto, Pa.

Will Franciscans in America start using credit cards?

"They afford a certain convenience," he said, "but we don't seem to need them yet."

You can't talk to the natives unless you know the language, says Sen. Stephen M. Young, D-Ohio. And to make sure his constituents are in the know, he has mailed them a "capitolese" translation sheet.

For instance, if someone in Washington tells you "I was up the hill all day," Young explains, it doesn't mean he was mountain climbing—he was at the Senate or House Office Building or the Capitol.

And if he mentions "the S.O.B.," he means the Senate Office Building.

When Thomas Chittick of Sunset Beach, Calif., christened his 20-foot cabin cruiser The Drifter, he didn't realize the truth of the matter.

Chittick, 29, and his wife, Janet, 22, took Mr. and Mrs. Bill Rankin of Surfside, Calif., on an outing in the craft the other day.

When they got about 20 miles out in the Pacific, everything out in the Pacific, everything knocked out the electrical system. Then the steering system went out.

The Drifter drifted for 44 hours, when a submarine happened along and took its passengers aboard.

The Drifter? A Coast Guard cutter hauled it in.

It's an old saying, but it apparently never wears thin.

There was a softball game in San Luis Obispo, Calif., between teams made up of city government officials and members of the local radio, television and newspaper mediums.

City government won 8-7, and it brought this comment from Mayor Clay Davidson: "This should show you guys. You can't fight City Hall."

New Patrolman Assigned Here

W. L. Whitehead, a native of Wallace, has been assigned to the Highway Patrol in Pitt County, according to Troop "A" headquarters here.

Whitehead, 27, joined the patrol in 1957 after serving in the Army as a sergeant in a tank training battalion for two years. He was stationed in New Bern until 1960 when he resigned from the state law enforcement agency to enter private business at Fort Barnwell.

The officer was assigned to Pitt County when he returned to duty with the Patrol July 17. He will be stationed in Greenville.

Whitehead is married to the former Patsy Kilpatrick of Fort Barnwell. The Whiteheads are members of the Methodist Church.

Uncommon Man Needed On Farm

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — It takes an uncommon man to farm these days in the opinion of a midwestern farm editor.

Rod Turnbull, farm editor of the Kansas City Star, spoke here recently listing capital, skill and common sense as needs for the modern-day farmer.

"In fact, it takes the uncommon man—the better man than usual," he said. "Evidence is real that despite what you hear, some farms make money, good money."

Citing records of the 240 farmers in the Northeast Kansas Farm Management Association, Turnbull said the top 60 farmers in that group have been making as much the last few years as in the boom-time war period. But the lower 60, he said, are going in the hole every year.

LEFT THEM STRANDED (LONDON AP)—A private British airline announced today, it had gone broke and was suspending operations, leaving 6,000 vacationing Britons on the continent with worthless return tickets.

New List Of Non-Fiction And Fiction Added By The Library

A new list of fiction and non-fiction books has been recently added to the shelves at Sheppard Memorial Library.

The fiction includes a variety of authors, such as John Steinbeck and "The Winter of Our Discontent," while the non-fiction list features varied subject matter.

Fiction books are: "A Crew of Two" by Beth Eberhart; "The Fleet Rabble" by Frank B. Hanes; "The Edge of Sadness" by Edwin O'Connor; "Saturn Over the Water" by J. B. Priestley; "My Master Columbus" by C. Bellfrage; "The Operation" by Russell Bolivar; "The Wilderness-Stone" by Robert Nathan; "Hear Us O Lord

From Heaven Thy Dwelling Place" by Malcolm Lowry.

Also, "The Off-Islanders" by Nathaniel Benchley; "The Road to the Snail" by William P. McGovern; "The Secret Gift" by A. E. Johnson; "The Devil Came On Sunday" by Oswald Wynd; "Six Impossible Things" by Elizabeth Cadell; "The Morning and the Evening" by Joan Williams; "Sweeney Squadron" by Donald J. Plantz; "The Great Wave and Other Stories" by Mary Lavin.

Non-Fiction
Continued interest in World War II is evident in the non-fiction books, "The Man Who Saved London" by George Martelli, the story of Michel Holland, a spy in World War II; and "One Hundred Children" by Lena Kuchler-Silberman, an unusual true story of the second world war.

For those who followed a prisoner's battle with the gas chamber for many years, the library now has "Ninth Life" by Milton Machlin and William R. Woodfield, the life of Caryl Chessman. Crime finds its way into another novel by James F. Johnson, entitled "The Man Who Sold the Eiffel Tower," the life of Victor Lustig and his incredible career in American crime.

Other non-fiction books are: "What To Tell Your Children

Each Spoon Has Its Own Story

MORRISTOWN, N. J. (AP)—James A. Crotty has collected over 1,000 spoons in the last 14 years, each with a history.

One commemorates the coronation of William and Mary in England in 1689, another is a rare French spoon made in 1412, the year Joan of Arc was born, and a third was made in Arabia in 1313. Asked which is his favorite spoon, Crotty replied: "That's easy—the one I eat with."

Hard Work And A Welcome Await Peace Corps In Philippines Republic

EDITOR'S NOTE — A tropical Eden, but plenty of hard work, awaits the Peace Corpsmen bound shortly for the Philippines. There they'll help rural schools, and seem assured of a cordial reception. This is the first of four articles on various countries where the corps is about to start its mission.

By RELMAN MORIN

SANTO DOMINGO, Albay Province, Philippines (AP) — At the foot of a live volcano in southern Luzon, there is a gray frame house which will soon become the landmark of a great new experiment in American foreign aid.

It awaits four members of the Peace Corps. They are coming to the Philippines to begin operations on one of the corps' first projects. The first contingent is scheduled to arrive in October. Early in November, four of these—as yet unnamed—will be assigned to Santo Domingo, population 15,000. They will enter a tropical Eden. The volcano, Mayon, rises in a perfect cone, partly veiled by the clouds. Around its base, tall graceful coconut palms march almost to the edge of Kalayukail, a black-sand beach.

But the house where the four will live is something less than Eden. It is a two-story dwelling with weather-grayed walls. It has no electricity, no gas, no water. Public utilities have not yet come to Santo Domingo.

The bath is a shed in the garden, fed by hand-pumped water piped in by a length of split bamboo. In the kitchen, there are clay vessels and a wood fire for cooking. The rooms are large but nearly bare of furniture. The roof is thatched with nipa. There are no screens on the windows. "The wind from the sea is too strong here for mosquitoes," a Santo Domingan tells you.

Why these living conditions? "It is the intention of the Peace Corps," says a brochure, "that a volunteer will live on a standard similar to that of his counterpart in the host country."

The "counterparts" of the Americans are the Filipino teachers in the elementary schools.

Provincial supervisors of schools will assign corpsmen to the towns and small barrios (villages). There, they will work with the Filipino teachers—largely but not entirely to help as instructors of English.

The Filipino teachers in Albay Province receive a little over 200 pesos a month in salary. The Americans will receive exactly 200 pesos, paid by the U.S. government.

"They should be able to get along on that," says a Santo Domingan.

There are about 40 children in the average classroom—somewhat crowded but not seriously so. They watch the teacher with eager, button-bright eyes. When a question is asked, dozens of hands go up.

In the first two years of school, Tagalog or some regional dialect is the language of instruction. Then, in the third year, they start learning English.

In the schools, along with the three-R's, they are taught manners and conduct, health, elementary science, music and writing—and English. They are desperately anxious to learn English. This, primarily, is where the four Peace Corps volunteers come into the picture.

They will not actually teach the language. Of the 150 in the first contingent, only a few have teaching experience. Peace Corps official Stanly Baranson said.

They will organize playground games and musical groups, hold little seminars about the United States and other parts of the globe, converse in the classrooms with the regular teachers.

In these ways, the children will hear English as it is pronounced by Americans.

The government of the Philippines wants English to become the "second language" of the people. It is by no means widely used, nor well, despite the many years that Americans have lived and worked in the islands.

So, spreading English through the country is the first objective of the Peace Corp's first project in the world.

Later, the volunteers may help in teaching science and other subjects. But language comes first. "We want to improve our English because it is a language of communication in the world," said Jose Romero, secretary of education.

The weight of opinion toward the project seems, extremely favorable. President Carlos P. Garcia said, tersely, "It is good." A teacher said, "It is a wonderful project. The children don't know about it yet. I am anxious to be able to tell them."

Peace Corps officials pointed out that, for many reasons, the Philippines are an ideal locale for this pilot project. The four Americans in the gray frame house, and all the others, will be ground-breakers—and the house itself a starting point.

Reports On Meet Of Witnesses

Jehovah's Witnesses of Circuit 36 held a successful circuit meeting at Durham last weekend, according to F. N. Richardson, local presiding minister.

Three hundred and nine were present for the opening session Friday night for the model ministry school. There were 317 present for Saturday's session which featured a baptismal talk (9 baptized) and a demonstration on "Starting New Ones in the Ministry."

The climax of the assembly came Sunday at 3 p.m. when 503 filled the Civic Center Building to hear H. L. Brissett deliver the keynote address, "The Twentieth Century in Bible Prophecy."

Applications To Play-School Will Be Accepted

Applications for the fall term of Play-School will be accepted during the week of August 21-25, according to Director of Recreation Gordon Goodman.

The Play-School Program is sponsored by the Recreation Department at Elm Street Park and is held for three terms of twelve weeks each during the school year, with the fall term beginning on September 12 and September 15.

Pre-school children three and one-half years of age and over are eligible to attend. Each child enrolled is assigned to either the Tuesday or Friday group, with a total of 24 children accepted for each day's group.

The Play-School activities program includes supervised free play indoors and on the playgrounds, stories, games, songs, rhythmic play, and simple crafts.

There is no charge for the play-school, but each mother is required to act as co-hostess in furnishing refreshments and serving as helper one morning during each 12 week term.

Applications may be submitted by telephone to Mrs. Terry Agner at the Elm Street Recreation Center beginning August 21. Enrollment will be done on a first-come-first-serve basis, with the first 48 children being accepted for the fall term.

Cutting Off Red Trade Could Upset Projects

By SAM DAWSON
 NEW YORK (AP)—The threat to cut off Western trade with the Red bloc could upset the plans of a number of American companies, both importers and exporters. But its total effect on U.S. world trade would be slight.

Its effect on the trade of some of our allies would be much greater, since they have cultivated the flow while we often discouraged it.

And the threatened embargo could hurt the economy of Soviet satellites such as Poland, Czechoslovakia and East Germany most of all.

The threat was voiced by West German Chancellor Adenauer, whose country would feel the embargo most of any of the Western group. He said a complete trade stoppage is one of the moves the West is considering to meet increasing Soviet restrictions in the Berlin crisis.

The word from Washington is only that such trade suspension is under consideration. London seems reluctant at the moment. All along, the United States has blocked any trade by American corporations with Red China but let the Soviet Union get goods regarded as of no or little military use, on an export license basis.

American exports to the Soviet Union and its European satellites increased in 1960 to a 13-year high of $193.4 million. Much of the jump was accounted for by agricultural sales to Poland. Imports held unchanged at $80.9 million.

We sent wheat, cotton, iron, some types of steel, soybeans, chemicals and some industrial equipment. We got from them meat, furs, platinum. The Soviet Union produces about one-fourth of the world's new platinum supply each year.

Until the Berlin crisis, American businessmen had looked for a further increase in two-way trade with the East because of Soviet Premier Khrushchev's promise to increase Russian consumer goods consumption.

America's allies have been doing much more business with the Reds, and some of it in goods and materials we hold to have military value.

Adenauer's West Germany—whose big market in the Red bloc is East Germany—exported to the Communist world machinery, chemicals, and steel worth $336 million in 1960. In return it got $472 million worth of farm products and lumber, among other things.

High shipments to the Red bloc have been increasing this year, the total is still too small to make much of a dent in our foreign trade as a whole.

The $193.4 million export trade with the Reds last year barely shows in the overall figure of $26.6 billion of commercial goods and services—that is, excluding those involving military or other government backed transactions.

The $81 million of imports from the Reds compares with a total nongovernment inflow of goods and services of $23.6 billion.

American enterprises that would feel any embargo of trade with the Communists include farm products and such consumer goods as the tightly run economies of the Soviet Union and its satellites will admit.

To increase this trade in American products, both the U.S. government and private corporations have taken part in industrial and other fairs in Red nations. But American businessmen knew all along that the trade they might generate would be subject to any changes in political policies by either the Red governments or their own.

Door Is Opened To Active Duty

As part of the build-up to a 190,000-man Marine Corps authorized by Congress, local Marines reservists in the grades of corporal and below can now apply for active duty tours, of two, three, and four years with the regular Marine Corps, Staff Sergeant Leo Smith, Marine Recruiter, announced today.

"This is strictly a voluntary program," Sgt. Smith stressed, as applies to all Marine reservists regardless of whether they are in an organized unit or not.

The regular Marine Corps door opened to reservists on August 1 when Marine Commandant General David M. Shoup announced that 2,500 reservists up through corporal rank could apply for extended active duty. Until the commandant's announcement, reservists generally could get active duty only by vacating their reserve status and joining the regular Marine Corps for four-year tours.

Sgt. Smith pointed out that local Marine reservists desiring active duty should contact him at County Court House in Greenville on Mondays, between the hours of 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. or check with the Marine Corps Reserve Training Center in Raleigh.
