Wahl-Coates Principal Named By Supt. Rose

Rexford E. Piner, 33-year-old Wilmington native and East Carolina College graduate, has been named principal of Wahl-Coates Elementary School, City Supt. J. H. Rose announced today.

Six months later he accepted a position as English teacher and baseball coach at Leland High School in Brunswick County where he remained for four years.

He left Leland for a principalship at West Bertie Elementary School in Bertie County where he also served as eighth grade teacher. He remained at West Bertie for two years where he also coached the baseball team at West Bertie High.

Piner left the Lewiston school to accept a post as assistant principal at the school in Lewiston.

He holds a Master of Arts degree in administration from ECC which he received in June 1960. He received his Bachelor of Science degree at the Greenville college in 1956 after completion of most of the degree's requirements in 1951.

He entered ECC in 1949 following completion of two years' study at Wilmington Junior College in Wilmington.

Piner attended the New Hanover public schools and was graduated in 1946 from Bushwick High School in Brooklyn, N. Y. Immediately after graduation, he entered the U. S. Army's Infantry for a two-year tour of duty that included 10 months in Japan.

Upon his discharge in 1947 with the rank of sergeant, Piner entered Wilmington College.

After leaving ECC in 1951, Piner went to work as a news reporter for the Wilmington Star-News, a daily newspaper.

East German Reds Ignore West, Drive To Enlarge Armed Forces

BERLIN (AP)—East German Communist leaders launched a gigantic military recruiting drive today. They called on the 1.7 million members of their youth organization to volunteer for the army.

The effort to swell the ranks of the troops—now estimated by Western authorities to number 110,000—came as the Western Allies protested to the Soviet Union against the Red barricades that bar refugees and other East Germans from West Berlin.

The United States, Britain and France charged that Communist restrictions in Berlin were completely illegal and violate the city's special four-power status. They held the Soviet Union responsible for East Germany's sealing of the sector border and demanded "an end to these illegal measures."

The notes, described as identical, took direct issue with the East German contention that the new barricades in Berlin mark an international boundary.

The sharp Western reaction was illustrated by an acid paragraph in France's protest:

"The French government has never agreed that any limitations can be imposed on the liberty of movement within the city. The line of demarcation between the Soviet sector and the Western sectors of Berlin is not a state frontier. The French government considers as illegal the measures which the East German authorities have just taken."

All members of the Red youth organization were called to special meetings Friday at dawn in schools, factories and collective farms to hear the appeal to volunteer. The orders were issued by Horst Schumann, 37, first secretary of the youth organization.

The young people were told that Sunday's ban on the flight of refugees to West Berlin was "a victory for peace and socialism." The appeal said "panic and confusion reign among our enemies," and "now it is necessary to secure our success and win new victories over the warmongers."

The Communist youth daily Junge Welt—Young World—carried the appeal in headlines: "The Fatherland calls! Protect the Socialist Republic!"

The East German Communist regime so far has not required compulsory military service. But young men often are put under pressure to enlist with the promise that it will help their chances for later education and advancement.

The U.S., British and French embassies in Moscow handed the Soviet Foreign Ministry notes charging that the barricades violate the postwar four-power status of Berlin and the four-power agreement for free movement throughout the former German capital. The East German Communist party paper Neues Deutschland repeated the contention that the four-power status of Berlin—established in war and postwar agreements—"has long ceased to exist."

Allies Protest Barricade In Berlin Violates Accord

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States, Britain and France protested to the Soviet Union today that the Communist barricade in Berlin is "illegal." They declared they expect the Soviet government to "put an end to these illegal measures."

Identical notes were delivered to the Soviet Foreign Office by embassies of the three Western powers in Moscow this morning and then were made public in Paris, London and Washington.

The Western powers complained that the closing of the border "is a flagrant, and particularly serious, violation" of the four-power status of Berlin. They rejected the Red argument that East Berlin is part of the territory of East Germany. "Moreover, the United States government cannot admit the right of the East German authorities to authorize their armed forces to enter the Soviet sector of Berlin," the U.S. note said.

The other Western notes used the same language except that the British note, for instance, said "Her Majesty's government cannot admit" etc.

The wording of the text was restrained and free of any threat by the West or any phrasing designed to express anger or indignation. The note was drafted jointly by representatives of the three Western powers and apparently reflected a decision on their part to handle the Berlin situation at this point with a gentle touch.

The action paragraph of the note, which State Department officials said was designed as a "strong" call for removal of the Communist barricades, said:

"The United States government solemnly protests against the measures referred to above, for which it holds the Soviet government responsible. The United States government expects the Soviet government to put an end to these illegal measures. This unilateral infringement of the quadripartite status of Berlin can only increase existing tensions and dangers."

State Department press officer Lincoln White was asked why the U.S. government "expects" the officials have been saying privately will undoubtedly remain in force for a long time.

White said the U.S. government's expectation was based on the "solemn obligation" of the Soviet Union to treat Berlin as a city under four-power control with free travel guaranteed within its borders.

East German authorities imposed the travel ban on the border Sunday night. Shortly before the action was taken, the Communist military alliance, known as the Warsaw Pact, publicly ordered the East German regime to take measures on the West Berlin border which would "put an end to the present abnormal situation—that is, halt the massive flight of refugees from communism."

The Western powers said that by the action, the Warsaw Pact nations were "intervening in a domain in which they have no competence."

Suggest Delay In Army Acts Market's Opening To Bolster Manpower

Delaying the opening of Eastern tobacco belt markets from Aug. 22 to Aug. 24 has been recommended by the Tobacco Association of United States.

J. Con Lanier, executive secretary of the tobacco association, has made the recommendation to the Eastern Carolina Warehouse Association which has the power to change the opening date.

Julian Fenner of Rocky Mount, president of the Warehouse Association, could not be reached for comment this morning.

"I have been advised by several of the larger buying companies that their buying personnel will not be available to cover the Eastern Carolina auction markets until Thursday, Aug. 24," Lanier said.

"A considerable amount of tobacco in the Georgia area remains unsold and the Georgia markets will remain open through Tuesday, Aug. 22, which will give the Georgia-Florida area the 19 selling days which were requested by the Georgia Department of Agriculture.

"In view of this situation, the Sales Committee of the Tobacco Association of the United States has recommended the East Carolina Warehouse Association that the markets in this area postpone their openings from Aug. 22 to Aug. 24 so that full sets of buyers will be on hand when tobacco is offered for sale.

"The Sales Committee regrets that the situation necessitates such a request, but feels that it is in the best interest of the growers and buyers that such action be taken."

One major tobacco firm, Imperial Tobacco Co. Ltd. announced in advertisements today that it would not have buyers available for the Eastern belt markets until Aug. 24. The company said its buyers would be required in Georgia until that time.

Fenner, Royster Voice Opposition To Step

RALEIGH (AP)—Two tobacco leaders reaffirmed today that markets of the huge Eastern North Carolina Belt will hold their opening sales Aug. 22 as scheduled.

They made their statements in answer to an appeal that the market opening be postponed until Aug. 24 — to give buyers now operating on the Georgia-Florida Belt time to arrive.

"We're going to open Aug. 22 as scheduled, said Julian Fenner of Rocky Mount, president of the Eastern Belt Warehouse Association. "That's the decision of the Sales Committee of the Eastern Belt Warehouse Association."

Fred Royster of Henderson, managing director of the Bright Belt Warehouse Association, echoed Fenner's statement. Both said a full statement on the situation is being prepared and will be issued later in the day.

Royster said in answer to question that some of the major buying companies were not represented on the eastern markets during the first few days of sales last season.

"And we got along all right too," Royster added. "It looks like we'll have the same situation this year." He said similar situations had occurred in previous seasons on both the middle and old belts as well as the east.

Inter-American Pact Is Signed

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP)—The United States and 19 Latin-American nations today signed the 8,000-word charter of Punta del Este, thus officially launching President Kennedy's $20-billion Alliance for Progress.

Secretary of Treasury Douglas Dillon signed for the United States. The 18th to sign, he was warmly applauded.

There was no mention made at the ceremony of Cuba's announcement that she would not be a signatory.

Venezuela, following an order of precedence decided by lot at the start of the 13-day conference, signed first.

Uruguay, the host country, was last. "Now our destiny is the work of all and every one of us," said Uruguayan Foreign Minister Homero Martinez Montero. "We have opened wide the doors to an immense hope."

The Alliance for Progress is intended to get the jump on the spread of communism in Latin America.

In the closing hours Dillon and Cuban economic czar Ernesto Guevara exchanged bitter words after the United States and 19 of the 20 Latin-American participants approved the charter and a 1,000-word summary to explain the program to Latin America's 200-million people.

Dillon received prolonged applause. The most extended delegates had given any speaker.

Guevara, after abstaining on the vote, said the conference had established the "first link for real peaceful coexistence in America." He asserted the United States had voted for all parts of the charter and that this was an admission "that there can exist regimes which are not committed to free enterprise."

"Those governments which are against our system shall recognize the irreversibility of the Cuban revolution," Guevara declared.

Accusing Guevara of "untruths and falsehoods . . . to give the implication that the United States somehow recognizes the permanence of the present regime in Cuba," Dillon said: "This we do not do and never will do because to do so would be to betray the thousands of patriotic Cubans who are still waiting and struggling for the freedom of their country."

French Buildup

PARIS (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle today announced a land and air buildup because of the sealing of East Berlin by the East German Communists.

De Gaulle's announcement, after a meeting with top defense advisors, said French forces both in Germany and in France will be reinforced.

His statement said the buildup is the result of tensions created by the East German Communists.

There's A Variation On Your Tax Bill In County, Depending On Where You Live

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt Countians in fiscal 1961-62 will be paying ad valorem taxes for support of local governments and schools based on cumulative tax rates ranging from $1.35 per $100 valuation in Arthur School District to $3.61 in Grifton's corporate limits.

While every taxpaying resident of the county will be assessed under the county-wide $1.25 rate adopted by the County Commissioners, special school district and municipal rates add to the total ad valorem tax notices are now being prepared in the office of Robert S.

British Agree Pull Out Troops

LONDON (AP)—Britain announced today that she has agreed to a request of the ruler of Kuwait to withdraw British troops from that oil-rich Persian Gulf sheikdom.

British military formations were sent to Kuwait on June 30 at the request of Sheikh Abdullah as Selim as Sabah who feared his country was about to be overrun by Premier Abdel Karim Kassem's Iraqi forces. The British units will be replaced by a border patrol force being organized by the Arab League.

levy. Moye, Pitt County tax collector and supervisor, for mailing about Sept. 1.

Moye's office staff calculates total personal property and real estate taxes due under the county-wide rate and each special school district levy.

In addition to the county and school district levies, residents of Pitt's nine municipal governments will be paying city ad valorem taxes based on rates ranging from 73 cents per $100 valuation in Grimesland to $1.70 in Grifton.

Each of the nine municipal governments in Pitt apply their respective tax rates to the property valuations listed and recorded by Moye's office.

Ad valorem taxes for county, school district and municipal purposes are assessed on the basis of one-third the actual valuation of personal property and real estate.

For example, a taxpayer in Greenville with property valued at $3,000 would have a total tax rate of $3.29 per $100 valuation levied against a tax value of $1,000. His total ad valorem tax payment to the county, city and school district would be $32.90.

The county-wide tax rate—two cents higher than a year ago—will raise an estimated $947,549.89 toward a fiscal 1961-62 budget for Pitt of $1,849,692.04. Funds from ad valorem revenues totals about 51.2 per cent of the total budget. The remaining 48.8 per cent is expected from county ABC profits ($130,000); surplus balances, interest, departmental revenue, fines and forfeitures and miscellaneous revenue ($251,343.71); licenses, prior years taxes, intangible taxes, beer and wine tax, poll tax and dog tax ($231,706.77); and State and Federal funds ($289,091.67).

Pitt's ad valorem tax dollar is divided among various county services like this: schools, 42.5 per cent; welfare, 21.7 per cent; debt service (not including schools), 12.2 per cent; general administration, 9.3 per cent; public health, 7.5 per cent; Hospital, 3.9 per cent; revaluation, 1.6 per cent; and industrial development, 1.2 per cent.

Special school district taxes are collected by the county tax department according to provisions brought about either by vote of the taxpayers within a particular school district or by special legislative act in the General Assembly.

School district tax rates range from a low of 10 cents in Arthur district to a high of 66 cents in Greenville and Grifton districts.

The tax rates are divided in various proportions in the county's 13 districts to finance three categories of operations—current expense, capital outlay and debt service.

Posted on the tax notices that go into the mails in September will be total real estate and personal property taxes, school district taxes and poll and dog taxes. The county's nine municipalities will send out tax notices of their own with their tax rates applied to the taxable property lists compiled by Moye's department.

(The table shows separate and cumulative tax rates for this fiscal year in Pitt County, its school districts and its municipalities. Falkland is listed parenthetically since it is the only municipality in the county that does not bear the exact name of the school district in which it is located.)

The first three columns list the county-wide, municipal and school district tax rates. The fourth column indicates the total ad valorem tax rate this year for taxpaying residents of incorporated municipalities. The fifth column lists the cumulative tax rate for rural residents.)

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN
 August is look ahead time for the gardener. It is too hot for any real activity and so the gardener looks ahead to getting ready for the month of September. September is a busy month. For the many things that should be done gardenwise during this month will show up next spring and summer. In order to approach the coming month in an orderly fashion, the wise gardener lays out a schedule for his work.

Grass Planting Time
 Take advantage of the dewy mornings of September. Plow to overseed with rye grass about the middle of the month. If you are putting in a new lawn of fescue, get it in a week or so before the middle of the month. If you have a wide sunny lawn area around your new home, plant only rye grass this fall and let natural grass take over next spring. A well fed, neatly mowed, natural grass lawn is just as practical as any other type and it doesn't cost you a penny for seed.

New Plantings
 You will do a lot of planting in September, so get up your plant lists. Use these hot days for visits to your nurseryman. Go over the plant requirement with him and get previews of the plants you want to use. Seeing a plant growing in the ground is a lot better than buying by picture. What looked good in the catalogue may not have the same appeal for you after viewing it in its natural state.

Planting Bulbs
 Take a look around your seed store for incoming bulbs. If they haven't arrived, put in your order now and find out if your dealer will have those you want. He will be glad to see that you have yours by planting time. Plan to use bulbs that will give you a longer lasting color parade next spring.

Get Areas Ready
 One of the most important garden jobs for September is getting the planting areas in good shape. If you have a new home, chances are that the builder has hidden boards, bricks, cement bags, mortar and etc., in places where you want to put a plant. So if the final cleanup is at hand, you be there and see that such mess goes to the dump. It will make your planting job a lot easier. Keep your blood pressure down and give your plants better homes to live in.

Get Down On Paper
 Put your fall garden schedule down on paper and even though you won't go by it to the exact letter, at least, it will be helpful. You will find that things to be done usually are accomplished easier if you have sort of a road map to guide you. The road to a successful garden has its start in the fall months. Mark your gardening trip well and get started on time.

Prince Rainier Of Monaco Keeps Running Feud With Lady Docker

By HELEN DENVER
 Women's News Service
 LONDON—(WNS)—A majestic yacht with seven tiled bathrooms and an open fire in the lounge sailed into Cannes Harbor this month and the shopkeepers of Cannes rejoiced.

The rumor soon spread that the most free-spending Englishwoman of them all was back. Lady Docker would soon be ashore again.

But, although the yacht was Sir Bernard's and Lady Docker's Shemara, her ladyship was not aboard. She had been left behind in Genoa while the yacht sailed around the Riviera coast without her.

This confirmed rumors that the most famous feud in Europe is still on, despite suggestions last summer that Lady Docker wanted to end it so she could return to her favorite strip of Mediterranean coast.

The feud, between her and Prince Rainier of Monaco, started three years ago when blonde, beautiful, flamboyant Lady Docker was said to have torn up a Monegasque flag while she was in Monte Carlo.

She was there because Rainier had invited her to the christening of his son, Prince Albert. It was also the birthday of Lady Docker's son, Lance Callingham, and she wanted him to take part in the celebrations. When she was refused an invitation for him, she lost her temper, ripped up a paper flag on her table and stormed out.

Rainier was furious and promptly banned her and her husband from landing in his principality. A little later the ban was extended to the whole of the French Riviera under a 1951 "good neighbors" treaty between France and Monaco.

Since then her ladyship has to make do with other coastal resorts, and she has always yearned to return to the Riviera.

At first she was defiant about it, saying there were plenty of places to go. With her millionaire company-director husband she tried Estoril, in Portugal, first. She had an $8,000 wardrobe and wore a different dress each night of her stay. When she left, she said happily: "These Portuguese give one the respect and kindness one deserves and expects abroad."

Her loyal, balding husband added: "It's not the sort of place you get banned from. In fact, it's a dashed cheap place and makes Rainier look pretty sick."

Last summer they spent several weeks cruising off Majorca, Spain, and Italy.

Occasionally, they slipped up to the Riviera, anchored the Shemara outside the shore limits and Lady Docker water-skied around the islands of Les Lérins. When any of her guests wanted to go to the mainland she had a crew-member take them. She remained aboard.

The main thing that keeps the feud going and has prevented Prince Rainier from releasing is that Lady Docker has flatly refused to apologize for her action.

Early this year, however, she said she was getting sick of the whole situation and wanted to go back.

"I'm seriously considering putting money into a plan to enlarge Cannes Harbor. I can't buy my way back on the Riviera, though, I'd still have to apologize," she said.

"We should make it up, Prince Rainier and I. It's grown into a cold war. He's stubborn and I'm stubborn. But we must try for a summit meeting. This sill, little quarrel is not worthy of the long, bitter, worldwide row it's grown into."

"He hurt me far more than I hurt him. He refused my son an invitation to his son's christening. He barred my husband because he was loyal to me. He insulted Britain. Still, I will apologize if I insulted Monaco by tearing up a paper flag—if he will apologize at the same time."

"Killing's my life. It's the most wonderful sport in the world. But my favorite water-skiing place is Cannes and I cannot go there."

Since her handsome offer to go halfway to meet the Prince with an apology Riviera society—and shop-keepers—have been anxiously watching to hear his reaction.

But the Prince has remained silent. Lady Docker must still do her water-skiing elsewhere.

"Don'ts" For Charity Giving

By Morton Yarnon
 Women's News Service
 NEW YORK — (WNS)—Think before you give!

That's the advice of the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, a non-profit group of 31 major national fund-raising concerns organized to promote ethical fund-raising activities. It's good advice at any time, but particularly now that we are heading into the season when most charities get their campaigns under way.

Here are eight basic "don'ts" about charity giving listed for you by David M. Church, executive director of the association:

1. Don't give before you know what the cause is, who sponsors it and how the money raised will be spent.
2. Don't give solely on an emotional basis. Study the needs of the cause so that you can give, if it deserves it, an intelligent proportion of your total yearly giving.
3. Don't give in response to impressive titles on a letterhead unless you know and respect the person listed and can check to see that their names have been used with their permission.
4. Don't give to a telephone solicitor unless he is willing to send—and actually does send—a complete statement of facts.
5. Don't give to a solicitor who insists on immediate cash contributions, even if he is selling something, rather than have you mail a check.
6. Don't give to a street collector unless you are sure of the cause he represents. Anyone can raise funds with a tin cup, and this is particularly prevalent during the holiday season, no matter how small or great his need.
7. Don't give to a cause unless it is registered according to the law in your state.
8. Don't submit to pressure giving merely because a friend or acquaintance urges it.

The figures show that sensible giving is necessary in America. They show we are a most generous people. The nation's philanthropic amounts to $8 billion a year, and is constantly growing. Of this sum, businessmen, housewives, employees and professional persons last year contributed more than $6 billion—more than three times the combined amounts given by foundations, corporations, business, and through bequests.

A certain amount of this gets into the wrong hands. A few years back the Better Business

Want Mink? Here's How

CHICAGO—(WNS)— If a woman wants a mink, she must talk to her husband in business language.

That's the theory of Wilding, Inc., which has produced a short film to be shown after dinner by mink-happy wives.

The film tells reluctant husbands:

- 1) A good mink, like good office equipment, won't have to be replaced for years.
- 2) Since one mink takes the place of all other coats, it saves the money that would be spent for a coat wardrobe.
- 3) Mink coats represent hard labor. It takes 10 miles of thread to sew one mink coat, each mile by hand.
- 4) Minks are delicate creatures. Since they require constant medical service and special cages, they are worth special money.

When the film ends (the theory goes), a business-minded husband will conclude he cannot afford not to buy his wife a mink coat.

Miss Harrington Feted

Greenville debts were entertained at luncheon on Wednesday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club when Mrs. E. S. Flanagan honored her niece, Miss Mary Harrington.

Guests gathered on the front patio of the club, where they were served fruit punch by Mrs. John Miller, Jr., of Williamston, sister of the honoree. The antique pressed glass punch bowl was encircled with ivy and tiny pink sweethearts.

Luncheon was served on the porch of the club. The table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of American Beauty roses and sweetheart roses in a crystal bowl. Country ham, chicken salad, parsley, potatoes, candied apple, and green beans and almond casserole were followed by a strawberry and vanilla ice cream parfait.

Ten Pounds Of Memories Readied For Son, Daughter

By CHARLIE HAMILTON
Written for The Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Ten pounds of memories are enough to thrill a son and daughter for a lifetime.

And for a popular state political figure and his wife, House Speaker and Mrs. Joe Hunt, the memories are like gold.

Bound in three bulky volumes is a complete newspaper account of the Greensboro native's recent tenure as speaker of the 1961 House of Representatives.

The 5 1/2 - month session was crammed with responsibility in Raleigh and other areas of the state. There was hardly time for leisurely family enjoyment of the honors that came to "Poppa."

But now, even though Hunt has moved continually back and forth across the state for speaking engagements since the legislature adjourned, his family is beginning to feel that they're getting "unwound" from the legislative excitement.

Two prouder children could never be than are Elizabeth Hunt, 14, and Jody, 22. Yet they saw more of their dad on TV than in person during the session.

Elizabeth explains it this way: "I sure am proud of poppa for working as hard as he has."

And Jody, who has recently been graduated from Duke University with highest honors: "I got a kick out of him. I've never seen him enjoy anything so much. It made him so happy."

The scrapbooks show why they're proud. The books are kept in the chestnut-paneled den at the Hunt residence at 3308 Starmount Dr.

The Hunt family works as a team on its projects. Pictures and clippings bear this out, with many instances of participation by the family in official and social functions.

Mrs. Hunt looks upon the recent legislative session as "our most wonderful and rewarding experience." or her, there were two major events — when her husband took his oath as speaker and Joe Hunt Day when Greensboro honored the speaker and the General Assembly. Both events are lavishly recorded in the books.

Also included are accounts of Mrs. Hunt's tenure as president of the Sir Walter Cabinet. She is the first Greensboro woman ever to be elected its president.

Looking back, she says of the session, "You meet so many wonderful people. It makes you glad you are alive."

The books quickly became popular attractions to neighbors and friends who visit the Hunt's den. "Mr. Speaker" guides them through some 300 pages, pointing out that the accounts illustrate some of his pet theories about North Carolina.

"It's easy to see here," he says, "that a continuing problem will be for different parts of the state to understand problems of other sections. It shows that no section of North Carolina has a monopoly on knowledge, virtue or problems."

The clippings reveal how sectional problems affect personal stands by legislators on legislation.

The clippings show, too, "just what we did in the legislature, a highly successful session, in such matters as education, court reform, house reapportionment, small loan laws and minimum wage, and in what we didn't get worked out, such as senatorial redistricting and highway safety," Hunt notes.

When work on the scrapbooks is completed, there will be two sets of three books, one set each for Elizabeth and Jody.

The volumes already are a family treasure. And even though they're destined to become a family heritage, for Joe Hunt they'll be an account of what he describes as "the most wonderful experience I've ever had in my life."

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

From various sources come these bits of information of interest to home owners:

A lighting authority, commenting on the "subtle, psychological effects" of lighting arrangements on home life, says that the woman of the house should not turn on a welcoming light over his favorite chair in the evening.

After a hard day at the office, the expert says, "a man needs some dim seclusion, not the atmosphere of a third degree."

A survey is supposed to have shown that, in 50 percent of the cases, husband and wife agree together on what color the walls will be; that 45 percent of the time, the wife makes the decision; and that, only 2 percent of the time, the husband makes the choice. No mention of the other 3 percent.

In advice on how to sell a home, the president of the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers, Nestor R. Weigand, includes this information: "Hang a grandfather portrait in a contemporary room or place a modern chair in a traditional house—just to show that it can be done, that various types of furnishings will fit your type."

To protect a window sill from being marred by plants, flower vases, etc., cover the sill with pre-decorated hardboard, laminated plastic or some other surface that can be wiped clean with a damp cloth.

University of Illinois researchers say there is a savings in fuel cost if the chimney is located inside the house rather than on an outside wall.

In a recent contest sponsored by the Home Improvement Council, home owners were asked to list the improvements they were likely to make in the next year or so. The installation of kitchen cabinets ranked first on the list, with enlargement of the outdoor living area in second place.

To answer a question that is asked often: a primer-sealer is a product of the paint industry that does two jobs at the same time. The primer component hides wood grain, previous colors and blemishes. The sealer component seals porous surfaces, such as bare plaster, new wood, wallboard and the like.

In discussing the influence that women have in selecting real estate, a realtor told a convention: "Many a husband is forced to spend what his wife has decided he can afford."

Ex-Underground Cypriots Slain

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Two Greek Cypriots who were prominent in the pre-independence underground (EOKA) Wednesday were shot to death by unknown gunmen on the first independence anniversary.

Interior Minister Polycarpus Yiokadis, himself a former EOKA leader, appealed for public cooperation in finding the slayers of Neocles Panayiotou, 24, and Euripides Nouras, 21. The bodies were found riddled with bullets in a car 10 miles outside Limassol.

The man in the pullover and slacks took careful aim and threw. He missed Khrushchev, hit De Gaulle. The crowd roared.

The luckless thrower blushed. He was Premier Michel Debre, vacationing in the west of France.

The Paris newspaper Aurore published the news, without comment, today.

Syria's Tourist Industry To Capitalize On Recluse

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria's department of tourism is planning a celebration for St. Simeon the Stylite, who perched 27 years atop a pillar in the desert.

Ruins of a classic Christian church now surround the base of the saint's column, 20 miles from Aleppo in the Syrian region of the United Arab Republic.

"We should attract 10,000 tourists," said Dr. Yussuf Samara, head of the department. "When Simeon was alive, thousands of pilgrims came on foot, from as far as France and India."

"Simeon is an undisputed saint, and the church is exquisite—the world's best example of early Christian architecture."

The bearded, emaciated hermit who spent his childhood summers buried to his neck in a garden or manacled to a rock, died preaching from his pillar in the year 459 A.D.

The government earlier began arrangements for his 1500th anniversary. Samara said, but canceled them because of complications and possible differences between the Roman Catholic and Greek Orthodox churches.

"But Simeon died six centuries before the church was divided," said the director. "Now we'll try again to commemorate him."

Historians say Simeon was a shepherd who entered a monastery at 13, after crouching at the gate without food for five days to gain admittance.

Seeking further solitude, he built a tiny cell on a pillar and moved into it. Crowds came to marvel and pray, and Simeon eventually moved to a lowering column 66 feet high.

Churches and rest houses grew around the base, a community of pillar-sitting disciples sprang up.

Officials of the Roman Empire consulted him on affairs of state, shouting questions from below or sending up communiques in a basket.

When he died at 68, his body was lowered from the pillar and carried to Antioch in an immense procession through the sands. The church patriarch, the Roman master of the Eastern Empire and 6,000 plumed warriors followed his casket.

Not For Fishing

FRANKLIN LAKES, N. J. (AP) — Herman Dammers raises five million worms a year, but none should ever see the end of a fish hook. Dammers sells his worms to organic gardeners from all over the world.

Worms recondition the soil, they dig tunnels which hold moisture, and their castings make the finest possible topsoil, Dammers says. Organic gardeners use the worms instead of chemical fertilizers.

Citizens Ignored Public Business?

The kind of situation which has developed in the school system of New York City should be a matter of serious concern to every citizen in every state.

There is no valid excuse for the scandal-ridden school system of the nation's largest city getting into the situation it now apparently is. Charges of construction fraud, poor maintenance, kickbacks and payoffs that have been made in connection with the city's school system must have some foundation.

There can be no doubt that officials who are responsible for administration of the affairs of the city and its schools will have to shoulder a larger portion of the blame for whatever corruption there may have been so far as the school operations are concerned. At the same time, however, the citizens of New York must likewise assume a portion of the blame for what apparently has been going on in their school system.

It could well be that there has been a prevailing attitude among the people of the city that public school affairs were the business of someone other than themselves. Too many individual citizens left it to the other fellow to worry about whether the citizens were getting their money's worth from the tax dollars that were being spent for school facilities. They were so busy with their own affairs that they didn't have time to worry about the public business. What was everybody's business gradually became nobody's business and corruption crept into the school system.

The school scandal in New York began to unfold as more people began to take new interest in what was going on in their school system. It is likely that more dirty linen will be stretched on the school lines now that Gov. Rockefeller has called a special session of the New York legislature to take emergency action to correct the situation in New York City.

In the future, there is good possibility that the people of New York City, and those of that state as well, will take a great deal more interest in their public school affairs than has been the case in the past. And there is also an excellent possibility that if the people of New York had taken greater personal interest in their public schools in the past, the present situation would never have grown to its present proportions.

Candidates See Lot Of Mileage

By LYNN NISBET

TRAVELERS — Maybe the Travel Council ought to award certificates as "Tar Heel Travelers" to Tom Woodard of Wilson and Cliff Blue of Aberdeen. In case you don't get significance of the names these are the men who are avowed and working candidates for Speaker of the House of Representatives in the 1963 Legislature.

They have not traveled anything like as many miles since the 1961 General Assembly adjourned as the Tar Heel perambulating Governor. They may not have traveled any more miles than some of the long-route rural mail carriers, who make the same trip six days every week. Most of the Governor's mileage was in the air and there wasn't much new from day to day along the mail routes and those taken by the intercity bus drivers.

The categorical statement is made that Cliff Blue and Tom Woodard have traveled more than 100,000 miles of roads, into more communities, and talked with more individuals and small groups than any other North Carolinians since July 1.

This activity represents an entirely new angle on campaigning for the Speakership. It has been common practice for years for prospective candidates to announce their purpose before the Legislature adjourned. But the statewide traveling and button-holing of current prospective members of the next House, who will not be elected until November of the next year has usually not started until there was some indication of who might run and what their chances of election might be.

Both Blue and Woodard now claim commitments from enough members of the 1961 session to elect the Speaker, but they have no assurance that these members will have a vote in the 1963 session.

PREDICTION — Your reporter is going to stick his neck out for a prediction about the 1963 membership, which admittedly has as little justification in probable fact as do the head counts of support for the Speakership candidates. Here goes:

There will be a larger turnover in membership of the 1963 House, more new names and faces, than for several sessions past. It is quite likely there will be fewer than the present 15 Republicans. Traditionally Republicans do better in Presidential election years, and next year is "out of season" for voting on a President and a Governor.

Information filtering in to your reporter is that next year the Republicans will concentrate on the county court houses, make major efforts in behalf of county commissioners and sheriffs, with a view to strengthening

Possible Significance In Making An Exchange

Exchange of a Cuban patrol boat held in the United States for the U.S. airliner held in Cuba has brought about the first bright spot in U.S.-Cuban relations in many months.

The exchange doesn't necessarily mean that there has been or will be any long-range improvement in the relationship between the two nations, but it does hold out some hope that Fidel Castro has finally realized that the United States would not continue indefinitely absorbing Cuban insults.

It is significant, perhaps, that the current exchange of the airliner for the patrol boat was suggested by Castro in response to U.S. demands that the hijacked plane be returned. So far as there being exchanged an item for an item, it afforded Castro a face-saving method of returning the airliner. So far as the relative value of the exchange items is concerned, however, the patrol boat is worth several thousand dollars while the airliner is valued at $2.5 million.

There is reason to believe that the Cuban dictator, in spite of his bitter denunciations of the United States, has come to realize that the patience of the United States has worn thin. Perhaps he is well aware that another serious provocation on the part of his dictatorship will be answered by a decisive move on the part of the United States in redress for the grievances it has against his government.

In dealing with a dictator such as Fidel Castro, the United States can never be sure what his next move will be. On the surface, however, the exchange of the patrol boat for the airliner would appear to be at least one ray of hope that suggests better relations between the United States and Cuba in the future.

Barring A War, Years Of Crises

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Berlin crisis is gruesome for more reasons than just the chance of war.

Without war this will be only one in a series of crises around the world for years between the West and communism.

Even at his inauguration President Kennedy, looking to the anxious years beyond, said there would be no finish "even perhaps in our lifetime."

And in his July talk to the nation after the Berlin crisis began—Kennedy said "That isolated outpost is not an isolated problem. The threat is worldwide."

Since the Russians and Red Chinese are dedicated to taking over the world, but can't do it all at once, they will keep trying a bit at a time.

In the future the rest of the world probably will look back on this time—when the United States and the Soviet Union alone had nuclear missiles big enough to blow each other off the earth—as a comparatively comfortable time.

More and more nations in time—particularly Red China—should have similar weapons of mass destruction.

So while two giants dominate the world now, eventually others, armed like giants, can act like them. This will simply compound trouble.

For example, at this moment the Red Chinese, still lacking nuclear weapons, are soft-pedaling their claim to Formosa which is occupied by Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists and is under American protection.

They've hanged away at the tiny islands Chiang holds close to the mainland. They haven't tried to attack Formosa itself for a simple, good reason: The island is in jeopardy. And the places mentioned here are just the obvious trouble spots ahead. There'll be others.

Does the picture look gloomy for those who dreamed of happy days? It sure does.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

A BIG QUESTION

Should we try to explore outer space or reach the moon? The estimated cost is enormous. Is the project worth what it will probably cost? Honest people differ in their opinions on this matter. Quite evidently we could not live on the moon or on any planet of which we have knowledge. So why bother? If it is a matter of curiosity, if such discovery will probably not open for us any new markets or result in biological mixing with any beings we may find on these heavenly bodies, why spend billions just for a look behind the cosmic curtain? So reason some.

It would be interesting to have our curiosity satisfied on many of these presently hidden matters, but curiosity alone is certainly not worth billions

Flight Record Reds Don't Boast About

By DON SCHLIENZ Homing Pigeon Fanciers

Meet George O. Harrington, Jr.

He's fourteen, weighs a shade over 165, stands 6'2", and looks like the kind of raw material high school athletic coaches would like to have around for football or baseball seasons.

But Junior (everybody calls him that) has another interest; and that is pigeons.

He was telling me about his hobby last night, and it was an interesting topic. His enthusiasm is contagious.

Junior started raising what he called "barn pigeons" maybe eight years ago; became interested in the racing birds, and joined the East Carolina Club of the Racing Pigeon Ass'n only recently. The local organization, he says, has thirty or forty members.

A race is programmed for the homers on September 3, from Raleigh; and Junior has one bird he thinks is ready. He tells me that for a race of that distance the pigeon should be at least six months old . . . but like people pigeons vary in their development.

To prepare for such a range, the entry is carried to the starting point and allowed to fly home . . . to familiarize the bird with the route. Junior is counting on three such preliminary trips for his bird.

He tells me that owners may enter almost as many birds as they wish.

His loft consists of about twenty birds and four or five nestlings.

Have you ever seen a baby pigeon?

I did. It's amazingly homely as contrasted with the sleek lines and proportions of older birds.

Junior's loft includes one bird that is not a homer. It's a pet he just keeps around.

There's a reason.

This pet is a "tumbler" pigeon, and it's something to watch.

The tumbler gets its name from flipping over backwards while in mid-flight. "A show-off," says Junior. This particular bird is especially liked because it is a high-flying type, as contrasted with homers who are more inclined to fly just over the tree-tops. When Junior lets the birds out of their loft for exercise, the tumbler flies up and away, often carrying the other birds with him.

This, I'm told, is a good thing. The extent of area interest in pigeon-raising and racing surprised me. The Harrington flock was the first I'd seen hereabouts; and if Junior's enthusiasm is any indication, the local fanciers must be a pretty dedicated bunch.

You learn something every day.

Other Editors Saying... Qualifications First

(Greensboro Daily News)

Governor Sanford, asked at his weekly press conference whether he intended to retain Edward Scheidt as commissioner of motor vehicles, replied that "I haven't made that decision."

This specific assertion from the chief executive, which leaves Commissioner Scheidt and some other top-level state officials in doubt as to their future followed a general declaration that he "will not be vindictive in changing people. We will change from time to time . . . but it will be in the light of providing a better government. . . I have an obligation of getting good government and running the government effectively and efficiently."

That is the kind of assurance the people like to hear from their Governor. And the test comes in its implementation.

That gets us around to the case of Commissioner Scheidt. He came into the government as a career man—a lawyer and veteran FBI member—early in the Umstead administration. So far as we know he had done a good job; he has stayed clear of politics and political involvement; and he surely must be given a substantial credit for the efficient operation of the far-flung Department of Motor Vehicles, with particular emphasis

Computers Helpful To Lawyers

By ELMER ROESSNER

The computers will keep many lawyers gainfully employed, judging from the lead article in the August issue of Management Review by Roy N. Freed, himself a Philadelphia lawyer.

The computer introduces many legal problems. Mr. Freed points out. Many of them have not been settled by courts. Examples:

An engineering firm, relying on data from a computer, designs a bridge that collapses. Who is responsible, the firm or the company that made the computer?

A computer incorrectly okays a large order of merchandise for a customer with bad credit. Who stands the loss, the company or the firm operating the computer?

A railroad uses a computer in connection with a device for inspecting for hotboxes. An undetected hotbox causes an accident. Who is responsible?

"If you are buying a special-designed computer, are you entitled to patent rights that may result from the development in its competitive position, is it liable for a stockholder's suit on the ground of mismanagement?

In addition to the possibilities of unusual cases such as these, Mr. Freed points out that the day-by-day operation of computers involve legal problems.

"The legal problems that arise from the use of electronic data processing begin when a computer is purchased or leased," he writes. "A lawyer who is intimately acquainted with the actual situation of the particular company will be in a position to recognize an array of legal questions that should be answered as the planning progresses."

He continued, "It is essential to spell out in the formal papers to exact terms and conditions. . . If the manufacturer is to provide machine maintenance, close attention should be given to the promptness with which it must respond in case of a breakdown."

World Given An Idea

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The death of Frank Buchman removed from the world a prophetic figure who adopted the idea that man can change their personalities by free will. A clergyman, Frank Buchman recognized that young people were not accepting orthodox forms of religion, even if they belonged to formal religious groups. He sought a method of solving personal problems by voluntarily changing one's personality, by personally accepting God's guidance in response to silence and prayer.

His movement started very small and I can recall when some of his followers came to my house in Sandisfield, sat on the grass under ancient maples to talk of life and personality. Frank, as he chose to be called, was then holding his house parties in Stockbridge, a suitable village for such a purpose for it was in Stockbridge and the neighboring villages that the thought and art of America found its strongest expression during the nineteenth century.

More than 20 years ago I was impressed by the sincerity and profundity of Buchman's followers. What they represented in the current history of ancient religious movements was the enthusiasm of the Esenes, of whom John the Baptist was one, who believed that "one could change from wickedness to virtue by baptism, by washing away the sins. So Buchman answered man's willfulness by willing change. Not only was vice replaced by virtue, but futility by usefulness.

The young men and women who serve in Moral Re-Armament do not sit about and pray or sing hymns. They go out into the world to battle against social and political wrongs. Whereas the Salvation Army has battled against personal viciousness, such as drunkenness and poverty, Moral Re-Armament moved toward the barricades where it fought Communism as the evil of our day.

Buchman possessed no quality of bigotry. For him, there were many roads to God and each man had to choose his own. His movement had no priests or leaders; members united into groups of usefulness and spread themselves over the Earth wherever they were most needed. They financed themselves as best they could and no great treasury was developed but those who wanted to help did and those who wanted to give, gave. And the teams went forth to preach the doctrine of peace and human brotherhood.

I knew Frank Buchman well and admired him for his utter selflessness. What he had to give to humanity were his beliefs in the essential goodness and usefulness of man and those who joined him were not abject followers but comrades in arms fighting for the better life.

Buchman was 83 when he died in a West German village. His Movement assembled each year in Switzerland to discuss problems and then went to Mackinac in Michigan for other seasons. The great and the small came and many found in these assemblages the opportunity to open their hearts and expose their souls.

To a Buchmanite, confession is not merely an admission of sin; it is a social acknowledgment that virtue is possible and can be fruitful if one is willing to serve usefully and with sincerity.

No one in Moral Re-Armament was ever told what to do. No one was given orders or instructions. No one was required to obey anyone else. No one bound himself by oath to serve a man. It is a voluntary organization in which one serves by the inspiration of prayer.

Is Moral Re-Armament anarchic? The surprising characteristic of this movement is its orderliness. No one has ever been elected to be a president or a vice president but somehow when a job had needed to be done, men and women fell into place and the team functioned with extraordinary efficiency. Will it continue in this spirit and manner now that Frank Buchman is gone?

The only comparable movement I have ever encountered is the Hasidim among the Jews. They are followers of the Baal-Schem-Tov and believe that God's law is cheerful and comes (Continued on page five)

Border Belt Leaf Prices Edge Up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A slight upgrade was noted Wednesday for several grades of flue-cured tobacco sold on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt.

About half of the grades held firm, the Federal-State Market News Service said Wednesday, while most increases were $1 per hundred pounds compared with Tuesday.

More nondescript and poor leaf was reported on market floors Wednesday as quality continued a downward trend. Volume was reported light to heavy.

Tuesday's sales on the belt averaged $64.42 per hundred pounds—$1.34 under Monday's seasonal high. Tuesday's belt sales totaled 10,725,350 pounds and growers turned 32 per cent of the sales over to the government price support program.

By states, Tuesday's sales were: South Carolina — 5,558,126 pounds at $65.72 per hundred; North Carolina — 5,137,224 pounds at $63.02 per hundred.

Auction bid averages Wednesday on a limited number of representative U.S. grades, unchanged from the previous day unless otherwise noted:

U.S. Regaining Some Lost Prestige In Latin America

By THOMAS J. STONE

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (AP)—The United States has gone a long way at the conference table here in Uruguay toward winning back prestige lost on the invasion beaches of Cuba.

It has done this by offering an entire hemisphere of 200 million people a dreamed-of opportunity for a better way of life.

It is called the Alliance for Progress, a 10-year, $20-billion aid program conceived by President Kennedy.

There is one big string attached: Latin America must do its part by breaking down age-old barriers against economic and social progress. It will not be easy.

Some observers at the Inter-American Economic Conference feel that the program, although off to a flying start, may drop to the ground with a sickening thud.

They point to the obstacles — corrupt administrations, lethargy, greedy landowners unwilling to relinquish their favored position, and tax evaders.

But the urgency of the challenge was underlined for many by the presence of Cuba's pro-Communist economic czar, Ernesto Guevara.

Although he lost no opportunity to take a poke at the United States, Guevara charmed fellow Latin Americans, especially the powerful Brazilians, the Bolivians, the Ecuadorians and even the Chileans.

His aim here was to demonstrate with a surprising display of warmth that Cuba wants to stay in the family of democratic Latin American nations, although Prime Minister Fidel Castro's regime has cast its economic lot with the Communist system and the Communist bloc of nations.

It was a plea for coexistence, and Guevara assured the delegates the Castro regime is not exporting revolution. But he said his government "cannot promise that our example is not followed elsewhere" and that the first condition for economic improvement in Latin America is to put "political power in the hands of the working class."

It was a warning that was not lost on many of the delegates. The U.S. delegation bent over backward not to offend the sensitive Latin and won respect by offering them a chance to help themselves with dignity.

U.S. Treasury Secretary C. Douglas Dillon unemotionally set out the objectives of the Alliance for Progress. He did not rise to his feet, raise his voice or pound the table as Guevara had done. Instead he quietly explained what the United States is willing to do.

Only after the work of the conference was over, the final vote cast for the plan of action, did Dillon reply to Guevara. He said his purpose was to set the record straight.

The American Cabinet officer said the Cuban had attacked the United States with a "flood of untruths and falsehoods." He singled out one, Guevara, said Dillon, had "tried to give the impression that the United States somehow recognizes the permanence of the present regime in Cuba."

"This we do not do and never will do," Dillon declared, "because to do so would be to betray the thousands of patriotic Cubans who are still waiting and struggling for the freedom of their country."

N.C. Publishers Hope Next Session Of Assembly Will Change Sales Tax

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina newspaper publishers are hoping that the next General Assembly will make some changes in the sales tax as it applies to newspaper sales.

The publishers told the legislature they didn't object to paying their share of the cost of Gov. Sanford's program of quality education. But circulation tax provisions they had agreed to were thrown out and another plan substituted in the hectic closing days of the 1961 General Assembly.

Under the new law:

1. A 3 per cent sales tax is collected from one home delivery subscriber while his neighbor across the street doesn't have to pay. Conceivably, the subscribers' positions could be reversed a week later. The tax is applied if a carrier delivers as many as 1,000 newspapers a week.

2. Most rural subscribers are discriminated against. The ma-majority of them have to pay because they get their newspapers on routes delivering more than 1,000 copies a week. The legislature, like most, is dominated by rural areas and didn't intend that.

3. Teen-age delivery boys are required to register with the State Revenue Department and to collect the tax if their weekly deliveries reach 1,000 — and the newspaper is responsible if they don't. One week they may come under the law; the next week not.

4. Newspapers have to pay the tax even in the case of subscribers who paid an annual subscription in advance — before the legislature met.

"As full of discriminations as you can think of in any one law," says William C. Lassiter, attorney for the North Carolina Press Association.

The association's new president is a member of the legislature which passed the tax program — Rep. Clifton Blue, publisher of the weekly Sandhill Citizen of Aberdeen.

"The General Assembly certainly will want to review this when it meets in 1963," says Blue. He says the tax as it now stands was enacted through a misunderstanding.

Carrying the newspapers' fight during the legislative session were publisher Ashley Futrell of the Washington Daily News, then association president, and E. A. Resch of the Chatham News, NCPA legislative committee chairman.

Both spent weeks conferring with legislators and said they reached agreement to the effect that the tax would only be applied to mail subscriptions and across-the-counter sales at newspaper offices. A few days before the session ended, they added, they were told to go home and quit worrying.

Then, according to Futrell, "the legislature cut the rug out from under us." The NCPA got word of the new amendment, introduced by Sen. John Jordan of Wake County, in time only to register fruitless objection.

Resch says the new law is causing headaches not only for newspaper readers and publishers. "The people administering the sales tax law" also are having their troubles putting the cir-ulation tax into effect, he said. These administrative headaches, he added, are the result of involving carrier boys, and requiring them to serve as tax collectors.

Diefenbaker For NATO Build-Up

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP)—Prime Minister John Diefenbaker said Tuesday that all North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations should bring their forces up to strength, "not by way of threat but as an indication of the fact that the NATO nations are serious and united."

The West should maintain unity but show a willingness to negotiate in the Berlin crisis, Diefenbaker said in an address before a Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association meeting.

Welfare Client Hailed A Taxi

NEW YORK (AP)—Most of the welfare clients who picked up federal surplus food at new distribution points Tuesday walked back to their homes in nearby low-income housing projects.

But one portly gentleman, who got his two bags of food after showing the surplus food certificates sent to him by the Welfare Department, had other ideas.

One bag at arm's length, the other slung over his shoulder, he walked to the curb, hailed a taxi, tossed his supplies inside, climbed in after them and was driven away.

By BARRY SCHWEID
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy urged the House today to reverse itself and approve long-term authorization of foreign aid loans "in this crucial hour of the nation's history."

Kennedy said Democrats had helped former President Dwight D. Eisenhower's foreign aid program, and "it is urgent that this bipartisan principle be maintained."

A coalition of House Republicans and conservative Democrats Wednesday struck at the heart of Kennedy's foreign aid program—and dealt him a severe rebuff—by slashing the long-range development loan feature from the house bill.

Helping to make the day a gloomy one for the White House, the Senate whittled more than $1 billion from the over-all program.

But the House blow hit the White House hardest. Without mentioning the Senate action, Kennedy asked a House reversal as a demonstration "that this nation is still united in its determination to meet its responsibilities and halt the spread of communism and Castroism by every available means."

The House setback was tentative. The 197-185 vote to scuttle time loan plan was on a teller count without a record vote. Administration forces have at least two chances to recoup.

1. The scuttling amendment may still go to a roll call vote in the House where 55 members were unaccounted for in Wednesday's head count.

2. The bill eventually will go to conference with a Senate version more in tune with Kennedy's original plan for power to lend $8.8 billion at no or low interest to underdeveloped countries over the next five years.

In the Kennedy statement released by the White House, the President said authority to make the long-range loans "is essential to making certain that our foreign-aid program is both efficient and effective." This has been the administration position throughout this year's congressional battle over foreign aid.

Kennedy noted that Secretary of the Treasury C. Douglas Dillon was about to sign the United States' long-range pledge to Latin American nations at the Punta del Este, Uruguay, economic conference.

He added: "When Asia and Africa are poised between economic development and chaos, when Mr. Khrushchev is probing the West for any sign that our resolve is weakening, I cannot believe that the bipartisan support always given this (foreign aid) program is at this crucial moment to be abandoned."

Kennedy said Eisenhower, his Republican predecessor, also had recommended long-term authorization of development loans. And, Kennedy said, during the eight Eisenhower years, the Democrats in both chambers gave him "overwhelming support in every major vote on foreign policy and foreign aid."

The crippling blow to administration hopes came swiftly in the House Wednesday. In a fruitless effort to head off real trouble, administration forces had moved to trim the five-year lending authority to three years.

No sooner had Rep. Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, introduced this compromise, Indiana Rep. D. S. Saund, D-Calif., introduced a substitute to authorize only $1.2 billion in appropriations for a single year.

The Republican leadership quickly swung behind him, and Southern Democrats took the floor to support Saund's move. The Republican and conservative Democratic coalition carried.

In the Senate, amendments were adopted to cut $900 million of the five-year development loan fund and to slash $250 million from the $1.8-billion Kennedy proposed as part of this year's grant for foreign military buildups.

Both amendments were sponsored by Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., a long-time foreign aid critic.

Frederic August Bartholdi not only created Statue of Liberty, the sculptor also pledged his personal fortune to defray construction expenses.

Poor Health, Poverty Of Colombian People Confront U.S. Peace Corps

By JAMES C. DEWEY
BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) —

Tucked away in a corner of Andean backlands is rural Cuatro Esquinas—onetime bustling stop-over for muleskinners and today one of several Colombian villages under consideration for an experiment in American idealism.

This all-but-forgotten farm community of some 400 persons is typical of the Colombian hamlets where 64 U.S. Peace Corps volunteers will be sent this fall to live and work with the campesinos in a two-year experimental program aimed at helping the Colombian farmer help himself.

Project officials still haven't decided where the volunteers will be sent when they arrive here the last of August for a final month of specialized training. But they'll all be used in a program of community development assistance.

Ranging in age from 19 to 27, most of the volunteers have farm backgrounds. All have undergone intensive training in the United States.

Together with similarly trained young Colombians, they will drill wells, install water and sewage pipe lines, help build schools, gardens, roads, sanitary facilities, organize youth clubs, develop health programs, and introduce more efficient farm production methods.

Peace Corps officials point out that while most U.S. foreign aid has been given for projects tending to underwrite central government operations, the Colombian program will be directed "at the bottom of the social, political and economic pyramid where the need is most immediate and desperate."

The Colombian project is under the direction of the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere, Inc., CARE, a private agency, in collaboration with the Colombian government's recently organized Community Development Department.

Care was picked to direct the operation because it has been working with the Colombian government for seven years on similar programs of community development.

The United States will invest about $786,000 in the project, and CARE will contribute $100,000. After the two years CARE officials will evaluate the program and make recommendations about its future to both the Colombian government and the U.S. Peace Corps.

Corpsmen will get $150 a month for living expenses in Colombia, plus a $75 monthly allowance which will be banked in the United States and available only on separation. They will get 30 paid leave days a year.

Cuatro Esquinas is under consideration for a Peace Corps project because the community, which is building an elementary school on its own, showed cooperative activity and willingness to work with an outside agency, a CARE official said. The outside agency in this case was CARE which is helping with the school project.

Felix A. Soler, a young teacher at Cuatro Esquinas' new school, summed up the general situation: "The people here are good people but easily led," he said. "They will follow the first side—the Russians or the Americans—that comes here and convinces them. But they don't want to be deceived with false promises. They'll all cooperate with the Americans, but they don't want projects left half done."

"The people are attached to their land," said Nicolas Olaya. "But we need someone to show us how to work it better and get a better yield. If the Americans come, we'll build them all houses, and they can teach us better methods of cultivation and raising animals."

Delfin Ramirez, sawing the thick trunk of an eucalyptus tree with a primitive saw, said he had never heard of the Peace Corps. "But," he added, "we have to sweat a lot to earn our living, and if someone can show us easier ways and help us get more modern implements, let them come and welcome."

The Peace Corpsmen should have no language difficulties. All the Colombian volunteers either have a good background in Spanish or a high language aptitude. They have been given intensive language training.

The Peace Corpsman is unlikely to encounter hostility at his base of operations. For one thing, the areas will be carefully selected. For another, the Colombian campesino is by nature friendly and outgoing, courteous and generous. There has been little anti-American propaganda in rural areas. Despite this, and the natural beauty of the country and its relaxed way of life, the Peace Corps volunteer will have his problems. He'll be up against disease, poverty, illiteracy, and troubles resulting from maldistribution of the land, misuse of the soil and intervillage feuds.

Lack of hygiene and proper diet has boosted Colombian infant mortality to about 100 per 1,000 live births. Dysentery, parasites, and endemic disease are a constant threat.

Began Skidding Outside Border

CLONES, Ireland (AP) — Barney Mullen went to court Wednesday and testified that when his tractor started skidding it was in Northern Ireland but when it landed upside down in a field it was in southern Ireland.

Thus, said Barney, it is unfair to fine him for not having his tractor insured south of the border.

The incident took place last January. Barney, who lives in the northern County Fermanagh, said the skid had landed him over the frontier in southern County Monaghan.

Despite his protests, the southern Irish court fined him two pounds—$5.60 — for skidding into the Irish Republic without insurance for his vehicle.

The Butterfield Route ran from St. Louis along a southern course to California.

Operating Big Tobacco Market Is 'Very Complex Job'

W. L. "BILL" WHEDBEE . . . Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade Supervisor.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
 "The organization and operation of a big tobacco market is a very complex job," according to the secretary and superintendent of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, W. L. "Bill" Whedbee.

A Greenville native, Whedbee attended the University of North Carolina after graduating from Greenville High School, then entered the U.N.C. Law School from which he graduated in 1926. He returned to Greenville and practiced law here until 1934. During that period, Whedbee was elected to the bench of the Pitt County Recorders Court for two terms.

Joining Faculty Of ACC Sept. 1

WILSON—Robert L. Anderson will join the faculty of Atlantic Christian College as an instructor in the Department of Business September 1, it was announced today by Dr. Arthur D. Wenger, president of the College.

A native of Wake County, Anderson received the Bachelor of Arts degree from East Carolina College in 1960, and the Master of Arts degree in 1961. His major field of study was Business and Distributive Education.

Anderson will teach courses previously taught by John Rich who has entered graduate school at the University of Indiana to continue his studies toward a doctoral degree in Business.

The Japanese coastline measures 16,565 miles.

In 1934, Whedbee accepted a position as attorney for the Home Owner's Loan Corporation which he held until 1945 when he became Trust officer for the State Bank and Trust Company.

In 1946 he resigned from the Bank post and started on his long career with the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade.

What is it like to head up one of the largest tobacco markets in the world—a $36 million industry? It's a "very complex job" according to Whedbee.

On his shoulders falls the task of organizing the market, allotting selling time to each warehouse, and scheduling the activities of the buyers, government graders, and almost everyone who is employed on the market outside of the factories.

Greenville, county seat of the largest tobacco growing county in the U.S., has five complete sets of buyers operating on the market simultaneously purchasing the farmers' tobacco. Over 50 million pounds of the blue cured leaf was produced in Pitt last year. The market, founded in 1890, has a daily allotment of 11,000 baskets, and the tobacco is sold at the rate of 400 baskets per hour, Whedbee noted.

One of the biggest jobs in the operation of the market is the scheduling of the sales and the allotting of selling time and number of baskets to be sold at each warehouse.

In preparing the "Sales Schedule" which according to Whedbee "shows in detail where each sale, each set of buyers, and each government grader, will be, and regulates all labor which operates outside of the factories during each sale day," much figuring is done.

LOOKING AT FINAL COPY . . . of sales schedule for the 1961 market season.

Basis for the schedule is an engineer-drawn floor plan of each warehouse, which gives the exact floor space for selling of tobacco. The selling time and number of baskets are allotted on the warehouse's percentage of the total floor space.

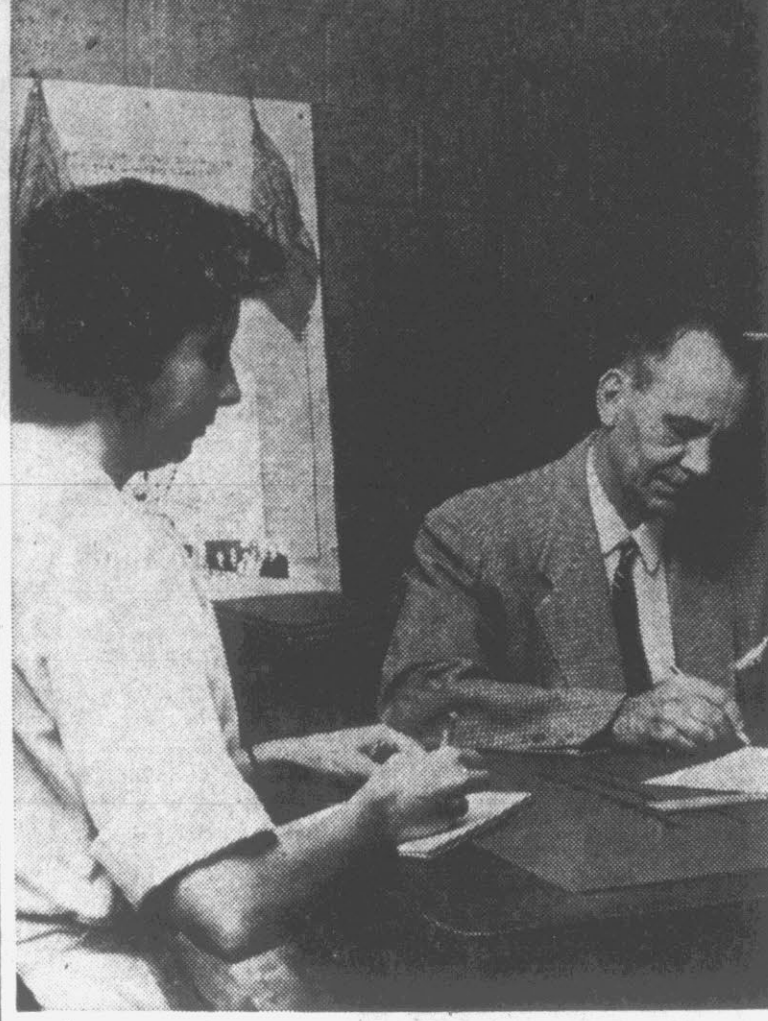

This is a large and very complex job, Whedbee said, noting that figures have to balance and be correct down to the minute (figures are carried out to five decimal places), and everyone must be satisfied.

In addition to scheduling each sale (sales run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each selling day) it falls the duty of the supervisor to regulate and direct selling of all "overage" of tobacco, in order to complete the selling for the day. He noted that this shifting of buyers "gives each warehouse equal chance to sell all overage of tobacco."

Whedbee noted that as supervisor, he is responsible for the hiring and supervision of all ticket markers on the market. He said these men must be "skilled in their job and be able to mark at the rate of 400 baskets rules and regulations of the Tobacco Board of Trade is also the duty of the supervisor.

A special court, made up of nine members of the Board of Trade, is set up to hear and punish all violators. When a violation is reported, the court is called and the accused is tried "on the spot" for the infraction, and is either found guilty or cleared of the charge within a few minutes. If found in fault, a heavy fine may be levied, or the person may be banned from the market.

Another large job is supervising the purchase and culling of all tobacco baskets used in the operation of the Greenville market. Each year, $15,000-20,000 worth of baskets are purchased as replacements in the inventory of some 60,000-70,000 belonging to the market.

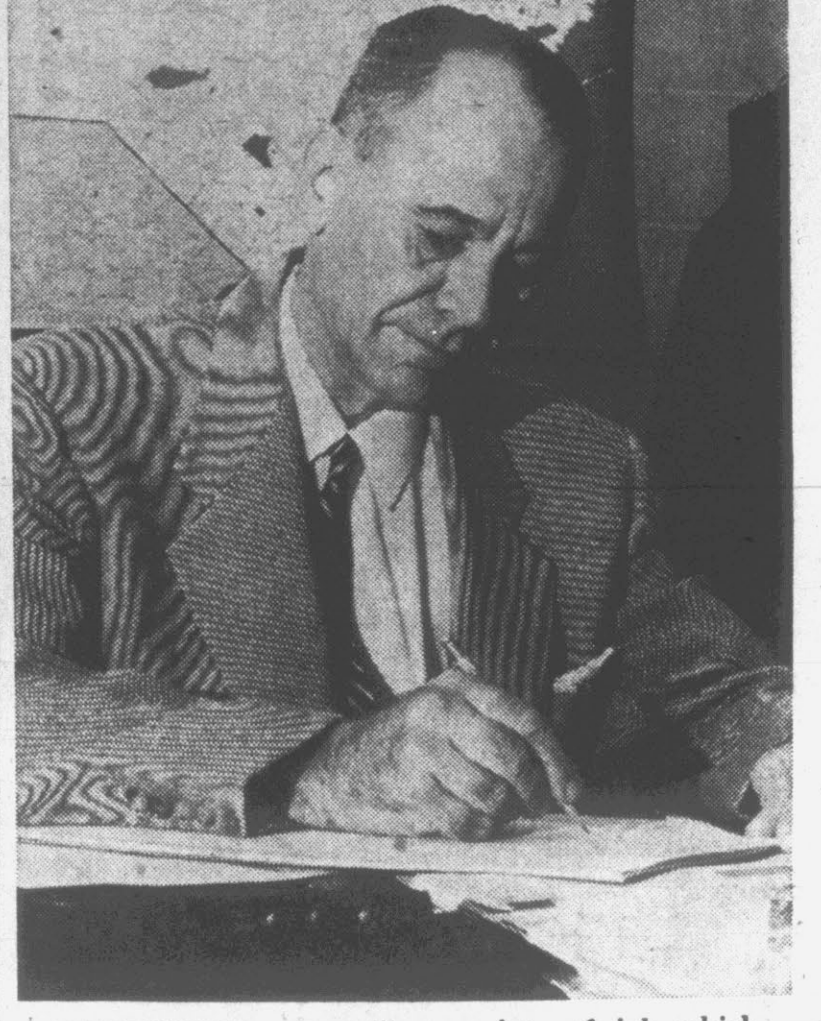

Advertising is also a great part of the job of the supervisor. Articles are written for national periodicals and tobacco journals, which are sent out for free consumption in an effort to stimulate the sale of tobacco abroad. Crop reports are also issued by the Tobacco Board of Trade to all domestic buying companies, giving the condition of the crop and prospects for the season. Promotional advertising through radio, television, newspaper and other media is done to draw farmers to Greenville and stimulate sales on the Greenville market.

Scales, trucks, and baskets used on the market have to be checked to be sure they conform to the state law; licenses are issued to speculators; and many other things are done under Whedbee's supervision.

Whedbee noted the market here differs from many markets in that it is run through the co-operation of everyone as a co-operative venture.

Last year, the tobacco market here increased 30 per cent in poundage over the 1959 season, the supervisor reported. On the "biggest day" last year (October 2), 1,964,596 pounds of the golden leaf were sold for a total of $1,293,714.42, an average of $65.85 per hundred pounds. Included in the 10 warehouse firms operating in Greenville are 19 warehouses and a total of over 3,000,000 square feet of floor space devoted to the selling and handling of tobacco.

SUPERVISOR . . . likes variety of job which makes it interesting.

"It is not uncommon to pay out over one-million dollars per day" on the Greenville market, Whedbee said, adding that last year, over $39 million was paid out for over 61,500,000 pounds of tobacco, sold here.

Whedbee, in giving the sales figures, noted that Greenville's biggest day was during the 1950's when 2,353,592 pounds of tobacco were sold on the Greenville market for a total of $1,508,571.27.

In talking of his work, the market supervisor said the "variety" of duties connected with the job, and the fact that "no day's the same" is what he likes best. "It is a challenge to run a big market like this . . . get it all set up and make it come out (right)," he commented.

Whedbee who is all "wrapped up in the job" and works at it "all the time I am awake", lists fishing, swimming and reading among his hobbies. Sports are also included in his list of "likes," especially football and baseball.

Whedbee, who served on Greenville's first city council when the city manager form of government was adopted here, was mayor for four of his six years on the council. He is a member of the Memorial Baptist Church, the Kiwanis Club and Sigma-Nu Fraternity.

Whedbee married the former Elizabeth Moore of Greenville and they have one daughter, Betsy, a nursing student at the University of North Carolina.

Choice Of Missile Fuel Depends On Mission Involved

By JACK STILLMAN
HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP)—Which method of propelling a rocket is better, with liquid or solid fuel?

Ask this question of an expert and he will tell you: It depends on what your rocket is supposed to do.

Dr. Werner von Braun, director of the Marshall Space Flight Center, says the Russians use liquid propulsion in their biggest space missions—including the return space flights. The Saturn space booster, the 1½-million-pound thrust vehicle that is the free world's largest space vehicle, also uses a liquid system.

But in space vehicles of the future, says Von Braun, liquid and solid systems likely will be combined, and some vehicles might use nuclear and electronic propulsion systems as well.

Experiments Under Way
"In my opinion, there will be in the foreseeable future important places in the science of rocketry for both liquid and solid boosters," Von Braun said.

"Undoubtedly the future will see more and more a mixture of propellants in multi-stage rockets—liquid, solid, nuclear and electric. We are conducting research in all of these areas and intend to use each to the maximum practicable extent."

The solid propellant rockets are descendants of ancient Chinese rockets. When Francis Scott Key wrote about the rockets' red glare, he was writing about solid-fuel rockets.

Rocket men refer to propellants as fuel in a general sense, since all chemical propellants are composed of two constituents—a fuel and an oxidizer.

Getting a giant booster off the ground without it blowing up is not like shooting a firecracker. One scientist said that should a rocket the size of the Saturn booster blow up, it would wreak untold havoc for many miles.

Solid propellants, which look something like hard rubber, have built-in oxidizers and are ready to go at the touch of a spark. Those working on the Saturn system frankly admit they would not relish working with such a booster filled with solid fuel.

"If it went off accidentally, you wouldn't have a chance," said one. "But that goes for a liquid motor, too, although the chances of a liquid engine exploding are considerably less."

The solid rocket comes already loaded, since the solid fuel first is liquefied and then must be cooked to its hardened state. This must be done at the factory.

Thrust Is a Factor
The advantage of solid rockets for military use is obvious. They are ready to go at a moment's notice.

But solid propellants are unable to produce the thrust that liquid propellants produce. The power of a propellant is determined by its "specific impulse." A pound of solid propellant would produce only about 75 or 80 per cent of the thrust obtained from the same amount of liquid propellant.

The second major drawback is that the entire casing of a solid fuel rocket is subjected to the full pressure of the combustion chamber. This is because the flame burns inside the entire length of the casing.

There are several arguments in favor of liquid propellants. They give a higher thrust; they are safer; they are easier to control during flight, and they are easier to make.

In a liquid propellant rocket, the fuel is stored in tanks at modest pressure. Pumps force the fuel into the high pressure combustion chamber of the rocket shortly before firing.

But liquid propellants have drawbacks, too. There are hundreds of nozzles, valves, pumps, regulators and other parts necessary to control the flow of the liquid. If they all work properly, that's one thing. But when one goes wrong, chances of a failure are high.

Looking To The Future

A nuclear rocket would be similar to conventional chemical rockets except that the fuel would be heated in a reactor rather than burned in the nozzle. This would mean a lighter rocket, since the fuel tanks or solid-fuel casings would not be needed.

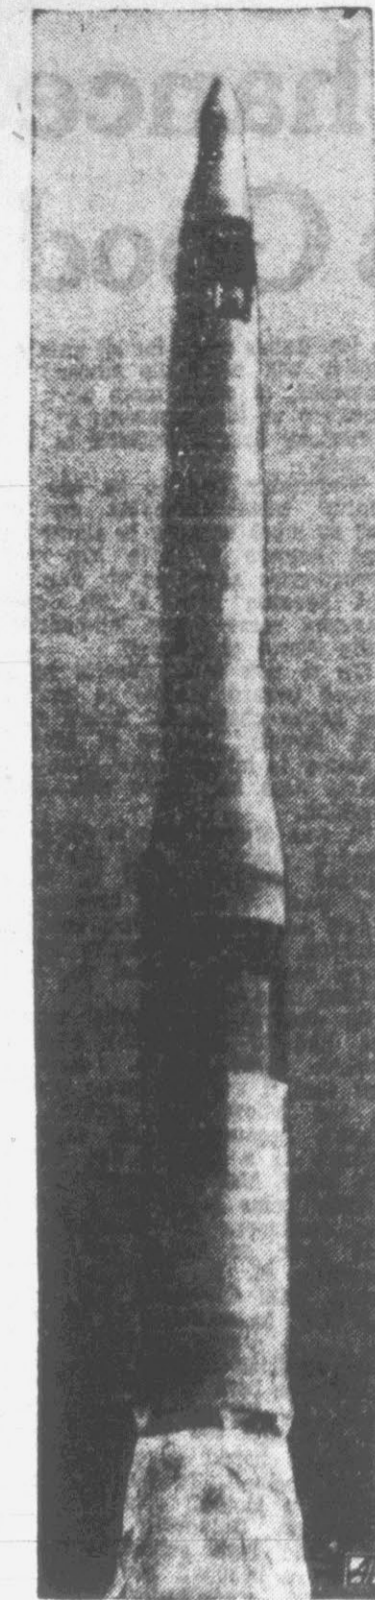

The nuclear rocket also would have a higher specific impulse. A liquid propelled rocket like the Titan has a specific impulse of somewhat over 300. But the first nuclear rocket expected to fly would have a specific impulse of about 900.

Development of the nuclear system has its difficulties, however. Revolving up a nuclear engine in a rocket would be like trying to carry a lit acetylene torch in a tin pail. The problem of carrying the engine still has to be solved.

The electron-ion propulsion system is in the distant future.

In this system, a reactor would heat cesium vapor from which electrical power would be provided. Although the specific impulse would be extremely low, once an ion rocket is in space it would build up power as it traveled since there would be no drag.

Such a system, say scientists, will be necessary if we are ever to get to Mars.

Gold Medal For 1961 Dog Hero

CHICAGO (AP)—Duke, 5, a collie, today sports a gold medal on his gold collar, symbolic of his selection as the most heroic dog of 1961.

The dog was selected from 54 canine candidates from 29 states for having helped save the life of a stricken woman named Penny Grantz, 10, March 15 by ripping a flaming skirt from the child.

Duke suffered severe burns on the mouth in the act. Penny, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Grantz, Niles, Ohio, was treated for eight weeks for burns over 50 per cent of her body.

Physicians say the dog "almost certainly" saved the little girl's life.

There was no dearth of dog heroes for judges to select from. A toy Manchester terrier from Daytona Beach, Fla., who brought aid to a stricken woman was named runner-up to Duke. A Vizsla hound from Bloomington, Minn., who led a man to a remote pond where his little master was stuck neck-deep, was third.

A dog of mixed origins from Hallsville, Mo., was fourth for having attracted his mistress' attention when her son had an accident and was slowly strangling. Another mixed breed from Brooklyn, N.Y., won fifth for tearing into an intruder's leg after he had robbed the dog's mistress and knocked her to the floor.

In addition to his medal and collar, Duke was awarded a gold-plated leash, a dog blanket, a year's supply of dog food, and a $1,000 U.S. bond in his owner's name.

Ceremonies befitting Duke's heroism marked the award presentation Wednesday.

The oldest date in the District of Columbia records from almost a billion and a half years ago.

Prize-Winning Chemist Given Asylum In Canada

OTTAWA (AP)—A prize-winning Soviet chemist, Mikhail Klotchko, remained in a secret hideout today after slipping away from a party of visiting Soviet scientists and taking political asylum in Canada.

Klotchko, 59, had been awarded the Stalin Prize and Order of Lenin, indicating he stood well in Soviet scientific circles. He is a specialist in inorganic chemistry.

In Moscow the Soviet Foreign Ministry defined comment on the defection. Spokesmen at the Soviet Academy of Science and the Soviet Academy of Organic Chemistry claimed they had never heard of Klotchko.

Commissioner C. W. Harvison of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who took Klotchko under his protection, described him as a chemist of "considerable world importance."

Harvison said Wednesday night he preferred to let Klotchko tell his own story of what motivated his defection but that the Russian wanted a good night's sleep before deciding whether to meet newsmen.

Klotchko was in a group of Soviet scientists that came to Canada early in August for the 18th

Castro Launches Literacy Drive

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro today mobilized 30,000 workers to join teachers and students in his anti-literacy campaign in Cuba. The workers will go into Cuba's countryside, teaching peasants and farmers to read and write.

He said that of more than one million Cubans who cannot read or write, nearly half are learning or have learned since the campaign began this year.

Castro has set a goal of eradicating illiteracy by the end of 1961.

Castro spoke at a meeting of the Cuban Confederation of Workers which has taken part in the campaign. The televised speech was monitored here.

Prior to the speech the assembly adopted a resolution setting stiff penalties for workers who refuse to learn to read and write.

International Congress on Theoretical and Applied Chemistry in Montreal and stayed on to do some sightseeing.

Klotchko is a widower with no family in the Soviet Union.

Dr. Alan D. Westland, assistant professor of chemistry at the University of Ottawa, said he had glanced over some of Klotchko's published work and on the basis of these doubted his defection would be of strategic importance to Canada.

The published work was largely concerned with electrical properties and a study of electrodes, Westland said.

U.S. scientists said chemistry is not one of the stronger sciences in the Soviet Union and is given a back-seat financial status to such others as space research, mathematics, physics and astronomy. There was some speculation that Klotchko was dissatisfied with conditions of his work.

Klotchko's most recent post was reported to be head of a chemical laboratory in Moscow.

Quitting Soviet Union Is Rare Thing For Scientist

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer
BERKELEY, Calif. (AP)—The quitting of the Soviet Union by a chemist is a rare if not the first defection by a prominent scientist from the new Soviet aristocracy.

For in the U.S.S.R. the scientist and teacher are among the aristocrats so far as better pay and better living go. A premier is put on education and high skills.

Dr. Mikhail Klotchko presumably gave up more than most Soviet citizens who have asked asylum. But personal reasons, or possible reverses in his career, have not been spelled out yet.

Dr. Klotchko's awards of the Stalin Prize and Order of Lenin indicate he stood well among the Soviet scientific hierarchy. So does his assignment to travel abroad.

But chemistry is not one of the stronger sciences in the Soviet Union, in the judgment of most Western scientists. Possibly it is not so well supported financially as mathematics, physics, astronomy, and space research in which the Russians are most active.

A high official of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, asked how scientific research is budgeted, said, "We don't always get what we ask for in each field. Sometimes we have to wait another year or so before we can plan certain things."

Unhappiness over chemistry's share of the research-fund melon possibly contributed to Dr. Klotchko's defection.

An American astronomer visiting the Soviet Union a few years ago draw a clue to the satisfaction of some Soviet astronomers, at least, with their blue-blood position.

He invited two of them to go to dinner with him since one of the men had entertained him at home. They agreed but on condition that they pay for the dinner because, they explained hesitantly, "We understand that in the United States scientists don't make much money."

A young physicist, writing a highly technical but valuable book which sold only 500 copies, was paid enough to buy an automobile, a rare possession for Soviet citizens.

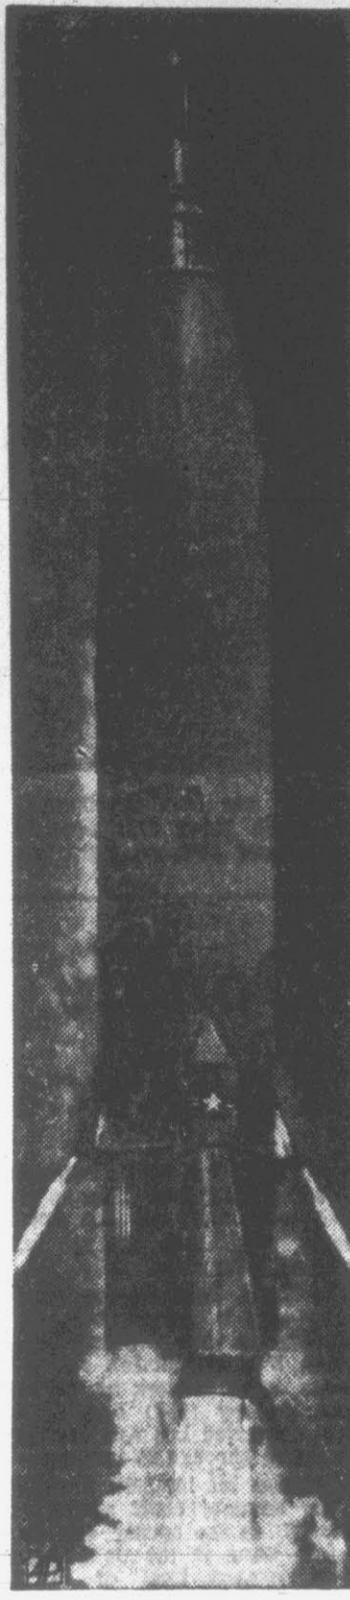

Freedom to choose his own research might have affected Dr. Klotchko's decision. For the Soviet government can powerfully influence policies.

Lightning Sets Off 1300 Fires

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP)—About 1,300 forest fires—all small—have broken out in the Pacific Northwest in recent days, touched off by lightning, the Forest Service reported Wednesday.

It said there undoubtedly are additional "sleeper" fires—which cannot be detected immediately but which might take off if wind comes.

The rash of fires is the worst of the season, it reported. Some 1,000 of the fires are in Washington, Oregon and California, the Forest Service said, while there are 300 in Idaho and Western Montana.

TAG BARGAIN

HAMPTON, Va., (AP) — Police say it looks like Alabama at the gates of Langley Air Force Base. They estimate that 600 vehicles owned by military personnel carry Alabama license tags which cost less than a third the cost of Virginia tags. Unless a service man was stationed in Alabama before coming here, or is a legal resident there, he is required to purchase Virginia tags.

Biggest Rocket Engine Flunked

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—After 18 successful secret test firings, America's biggest rocket engine flunked its first public demonstration.

The mighty F1, on which America has pinned its hopes of being first to put men on the moon, burned for only 1½ seconds Wednesday before a malfunction forced it to stop.

It was scheduled to at least equal its longest previous burning time of 20 seconds.

In even that brief period, however, instruments showed it built up a thrust of a million pounds—almost three times the power of an Atlas intercontinental missile.

When working properly the F1 engine has a thrust of 1½ million pounds. Engineers explained after the failure that the extreme vibration of the engine had damaged a switch on a fuel valve, causing an automatic shutdown.

It was the first time newsmen had been allowed to witness an F1 firing. The F1 is being developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for the Nova moon vehicle. Eight F1s, developing 12 million pounds of thrust, are to be clustered as the first stage of a 400-foot-tall rocket which is expected to boost a three-man Apollo space craft to the moon by 1967.

When the United States proclaimed its independence, Hawaii had not been discovered.

A Western Historical Novel The BURNWOOD MEN

By ROBERT McCAIG

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

The first of the succession of disturbing sights that began for Ram Barrie at Fort Benton in Montana Territory when the riverboat arrived that summer in the Seventies was his cousin, pretty Dove Demarest, debarking with the man she married, Cleland Strike. Tam's immediate hatred for Strike made him wonder if he could not carry out his assignment with fair judgment.

Tam Barrie at Fort Benton in Montana Territory when the riverboat arrived that summer in the Seventies was his cousin, pretty Dove Demarest, debarking with the man she married, Cleland Strike. Tam's immediate hatred for Strike made him wonder if he could not carry out his assignment with fair judgment.

tesquely dead, half his face shot away.

Again the feet on the sidewalk above him were running, stopping. A laugh like the bark of a dog, no amusement in it.

"Here's Dirty Nose. The — is dead."

"Good enough. Hope the fool layin' under him didn't stop any lead."

Tam felt the sudden weight of the corpse hauled off him. Rough hands jerked him to his feet. He stood up, his legs trembling.

"Is the war over?" he asked, trying to grin.

Five men, as tough as the one who lay dead. They stank of sweat and tobacco. They stood there, grinning back at him.

He turned to the watering trough and as best he could he scrubbed hands and face in the scummy water. With his handkerchief he mopped the stains from his clothing. He balled up the handkerchief and threw it away, then faced the men.

"Who killed him? he asked.

"Why I did," a bearded man said in some surprise. "Me, Colly Devoe. And not one dam' minute too soon, say I. What was Dirty Nose throwin' down on ye for?"

Tam shook his head. "I never saw the man before in my life."

"Ye ain't? Well, he was within an ace of puttin' a slug through ye. Well, I had enough reasons for killin' the coyote. Who might ye be, son?"

"Tam Barrie. Late of Philadelphia, U.S.A."

Devoe reached out a hand like a gnarled root. "Howdy, Tam Barrie. Are ye in funds? Then mebbe we could honor your narrow escape by havin' somethin' to cut the dust outen our throats. At your expense?"

"You saved my life. Will all of you join me in a drink?"

"Why, he's a sport. But not in this hog troff. The Buckhorn's jest down the street."

"But what about—that?" Tam jerked a thumb toward the trampled heap of rags that had lately been a man called Dirty Nose.

"Say, that's right. Brock, run over to the sheriff's office and tell Johnny Healey we left him a corpus to plant."

A solid small man extricated himself from the group and trotted away. The others started up the street toward the Buckhorn, the word "The pilgrim's buying!" running ahead of them. So Tam and Colly Devoe entered the saloon at the head of quite a motley crew of drifters. They lined up at the long bar.

"Whisky," Tam told the bartender, tossing a double eagle on to the bar.

Tam gulped his drink. Harsh as it was, it eased the spasms of his stomach. He refilled his glass, enjoying the adulation of these rough men, though he knew it meant nothing beyond a device to keep the whisky flowing. But it pleased him to hear a man say, "Doggone, the pilgrim's all right!"

The man Brock elbowed his way up to the bar. Devoe picked up bottle and glass and turned away from the bar, motioning the other two to follow. At a table at the far side of the room he sat down, motioning Tam to a chair beside him. He splashed liquor into Tam's glass.

"Have another, Barrie," he said. "You'll find death parches a man's gullet, if you had a hand in it or no."

Tam was appalled. He had never felt callousness and ferocity of this kind. Mayhem and murder and sudden death did not seem to touch these men. Yet he was finding in himself an odd envy. An educated, mannered man like himself should feel only disgust at these unwashed, whisky-swilling frontiersmen. Instead, he felt himself the outsider, and envied them.

Devoe filled Tam's glass again. "Drink up, Tam. That gang of raperites is lookin' over here, soppin' you'll treat ag'in. Let 'em look. If you buy more, they'll think you're a plain dam' fool, even while they drink your whisky. O' course, me'n Brock here, that's different. We'd like to sit and drink your liquor all night, given the chance. Eh, Brock?"

"You saved my life. Will all of you join me in a drink?"

"Why, he's a sport. But not in this hog troff. The Buckhorn's jest down the street."

"But what about—that?" Tam jerked a thumb toward the trampled heap of rags that had lately been a man called Dirty Nose.

To 'Dennis' A Good Show Is One Requiring A Hat

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — To Jay North, 9, star of "Dennis the Menace," the good shows in his TV series are those for which he wears a hat. The bad shows are those for which he wears a manufactured cowlick—and no hat.

This week's shooting of a new episode constitutes, for Jay, a good show. Most of the time he has performed with a cowboy's six-shooter buckled about his waist—and most important—a 10-gallon—really about 10-pint—hat pulled over his hair.

Jay has a cowlick problem in reverse. "Dennis" is adapted from a comic-strip character, and the cartoon original is a small blond boy in oversize overalls with a cowlick on the back of his head. Jay lacks a natural cowlick, so one must be made for him.

It's done with wave-set lotion, and the studio hairdresser takes a long time each morning getting the lock to stand up in a carefully casual way.

"Then she has to keep working on it all day," said Jay, wrinkling his small nose in distaste.

"About 27 times a day. But this week we don't have to go through it because I wear this hat."

The studio building where "Dennis" is filmed has been equipped for child actors. In one corner are two half-size make-up tables for Jay and the youngsters who play his pals.

Most grown-up extras, with no lines to study, read or play cards between shots. For the children the literature is a studio-supplied pile of comic books. And I also spotted on the "Dennis" set a group of four very young actors—two girls and two boys—playing cards on a packing box. Fully expecting to see a torrid session of draw poker or black jack, I was much relieved to find they were playing a game they call "War." When we played it as kids we called it "Battle."

Jay, of course, has little time to hang around. He has to learn lines, rehearse and study school lessons. Usually he is at the studio four or five times a week. What does he do weekends?

"Well, if I know my lines, I just play an awful lot," he explained, "and fool around in my swimming pool."

When a popular program leaves a network, viewers soon lose track of the performers. Remember George De Witt of "Name That Tune?" and Mike Stokey, whose "Pantomime Quiz" used to be an annual summer replacement? And Robert Q. Lewis of "The Name's the Same?"

They are all here in Los Angeles—broadcasting on local stations. Witt and Stokey are hosts on game shows. Lewis has just started a disc-jockey program.

So far, the brightest spot of summer viewing has been the Larry Blyden-Shari Lewis comedy "Watching Out for Dulie," on CBS last month. Most disappointing are NBC's "Great Ghost Stories" series and the shape its remodeled "Today" show is taking under new management—news, jazz music and heavy-handed persiflage—really a television radio program.

CHAPTER 5

Tam Barrie saw the pistol center at his belly, the man's hand shaking a little. Tam came up on the balls of his feet, his one desperate chance, he thought, to rush the man.

Down the sidewalk someone yelled, "Dirty Nose! Here I am, damn you! Turn around and take it!"

The big man lurched, and wheeled away from Tam. In an eye-wink the street exploded in a yammer of gunfire.

A bullet ripped a long gouge in the plank at Tam's feet. Behind him, a window disintegrated in a jangle of broken glass. Tam jumped into the street, a spot of dust reverberating from the roadway behind him.

At the street edge stood a watering trough, its planks green with ooze. Tam flung himself behind it, unmindful of the mud and slime. A bullet chucked into the wood, and Tam clawed himself flatter against the ground, feeling the rasp of dirt harsh against his skin. His heart was thudding with excitement. Keep your head down, he warned himself. This little war shouldn't last long, and this is as safe a place as any.

Above him, running feet pounded on the walk. A shot crashed, another. Men yelled. Then something heavy and lately alive pitched across Tam. Tam tried to slide from under but could not without getting from behind the barrier. He twisted his head to look.

The big man who had held the pistol leered at him. He was gro-

Lion-Owner Will Serve Sentence

NEW YORK (AP)—Richard E. Flynn, charged twice with harboring a wild animal in the city, has been sentenced to 30 days in the City Workhouse.

In pronouncing sentence on Flynn Wednesday, Magistrate Louis A. Cluff denounced him as a publicity hound. "Since he wants publicity," said Cluff, "he'll get it, but he'll have to spend 30 days in the workhouse for it." Flynn had pleaded guilty but contended his lion cub, 160-pound King Kado, was harmless. The lion, now in Central Park Zoo, was found first in Flynn's car in a parking lot and again in Flynn's auto—parked in a midcity garage. Flynn, 47, is from St. Louis, Mo.

Electronic Brain Helps Department Store Boss

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—A big New York department store is using an electronic brain to cut down on data for the boss. It tells him not how all items are moving each day, but what merchandise is moving faster than expected and what is selling more slowly than it should. That's what he really needs to know to manage stocks and promotions.

A Dayton, Ohio, doctor uses a computer service center to prepare automatically statement accounts for patients along with records for himself of all services performed, all fees, payments made, and a list of patients to be seen again next month.

Schools in Cleveland, San Francisco, Pittsburgh and Boston get from service centers a quick run-down on student registration, course scheduling, grade reporting, credit accumulation and student records. It leaves more time for teaching.

Taxpayers of an Illinois county have, thanks to an independent computer service center, itemized statements of their tax bills involving as many as 304 different taxing bodies. The statements show which ones a taxpayer contributes to and just how much of his total bill went for schools, water supply, roads, etc.

A Minneapolis company will get in 11 minutes a monthly production control computation, a process that formerly took three weeks.

These are some of the things the centers with their big machines point to when boasting they can profitably serve small as well as big enterprises.

Many service centers are run by the makers of the electronic wonders. Some are independent, buying or leasing their machines from the big makers. Most offer both the use of the machines and of programmers. These take the raw material—the facts and figures—from a company and turn it into data the computers can handle to produce the desired information.

One of the independents, Statistical Tabulating Corp., Chicago, with 14 centers from New York to Los Angeles, reports that a medium-sized insurance company which had expected to take 60 days to prepare a rate schedule for a new policy turned the problem over to STC programmers who did the job from scratch in 10 days.

STC says a manufacturer with five plants was able to cut transportation costs by $20,000 a year when a computer took over. An investment counseling firm bought three hours of computer time and four hours of programming service to prepare client status reports. It thereby eliminated 25 hours of sorting, 15 hours of collating, 8 hours of computing, 5 hours of reproducing and 20 hours of clerical work.

Problems don't have to be left to the nearest center. International Business Machines, with centers across the country, says it has sent 15,000 characters a second between widely spaced computers by using telephone cable, a Bell System microwave radio network, and IBM magnetic tape transmission units. The big mechanical brains can work on a business problem here, check it with data elsewhere and tell management about it somewhere else.

Proud Senator Halted Debate

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate was in full debate on foreign aid when it was interrupted for "an important announcement." The announcement came from Sen. Milton R. Young, R-N.D., who in proud tones Wednesday advised his colleagues: "Roger Maris, a North Dakota farm-raised boy, hit two more home runs today. We expect him to break the world's record by quite a few."

Young sat down, beaming. The Senate went back to work on foreign aid. Maris, a New York Yankee, with 48 homers, is running ahead of Babe Ruth's record homerun pace.

 They're traveling by chuck wagon and horseback, just as their forefathers did, on a 40-mile excursion from Friedens to Bedford.

East German Christians Have Difficult Theological Problem

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
 Associated Press Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Christians of Communist East Germany are struggling today with a tough issue of theology: Should they resist the government or obey?
 Some church leaders have advocated defiance.
 Others have counseled obedience, to a point.
 The question has been smoldering in German church life for two years. With tensions mounting over Berlin, it has become a blazing undercurrent, recent events show.
 Also at issue is whether the Easterners should stick to their homes and churches, or try to flee.
 Seeking to allay the doubts, Germany's United Lutheran Church has issued an advisory saying East German Christians should stay where they are, avoid open political resistance, but not support the regime.
 The church includes congregations on both sides of the Iron Curtain.
 Romans 13:1, of St. Paul's epistles, was cited as prescribing civil law-abiding, even in a police state. The verse says: "Let every person be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and those that exist have been instituted by God. Therefore he who resists the authorities resists what God has appointed."
 It is this passage that has stirred the theological soul searching, as well as some sharp conflicts among German Christian leaders.
 Bishop Otto Dibelius of Berlin, 81, the doughty Christian warrior who retired last spring as head of the Evangelical Church in Germany, previously ignited the fuse by saying the East German regime didn't qualify as a God-ordained authority.
 It is "blasphemy to regard the rulers of a totalitarian state as powers" in a Biblical sense, he said. "Paul's words are set aside."
 Even an East German traffic sign has "no binding power for Christians," said the bishop, who had hurled similar challenges at nazism. To him such regimes are in the class of the "beast" government of Revelations 13.
 A church furor erupted about the matter.
 The bishop, since barred from the Communist Eastern Sector of his Berlin diocese, was disputed even by the managing board of his own church, which said: "The obedience required of us by Holy Writ in respect to govern-

 The church includes congregations on both sides of the Iron Curtain.
 Romans 13:1, of St. Paul's epistles, was cited as prescribing civil law-abiding, even in a police state. The verse says: "Let every person be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and those that exist have been instituted by God. Therefore he who resists the authorities resists what God has appointed."
 It is this passage that has stirred the theological soul searching, as well as some sharp conflicts among German Christian leaders.
 Bishop Otto Dibelius of Berlin, 81, the doughty Christian warrior who retired last spring as head of the Evangelical Church in Germany, previously ignited the fuse by saying the East German regime didn't qualify as a God-ordained authority.
 It is "blasphemy to regard the rulers of a totalitarian state as powers" in a Biblical sense, he said. "Paul's words are set aside."
 Even an East German traffic sign has "no binding power for Christians," said the bishop, who had hurled similar challenges at nazism. To him such regimes are in the class of the "beast" government of Revelations 13.
 A church furor erupted about the matter.
 The bishop, since barred from the Communist Eastern Sector of his Berlin diocese, was disputed even by the managing board of his own church, which said: "The obedience required of us by Holy Writ in respect to government authority applies also to the governments presently existing today."

 Dr. Kurt Scharf, an East Berlin theologian who succeeded Bishop Dibelius as head of the Evangelical Council, has taken a similar approach but says the church faces a critical situation, which must be solved.
 Germany's United Lutheran Church, in trying to give some stabilizing guidance, said the Eastern Christian "can only accept the fact that he lives in an atheistic state and put up with it; but he must never approve or support it."
 "In all cases of conflict between the state's demands and God's orders, God's word remains valid that one must obey God rather than men," the statement said.

 This mandate, to "obey God rather than men," was St. Peter's reply when hailed before the Sanhedrin and ordered to quit preaching about Jesus Christ.
 Bishop Hanns Lilje of Hannover, head of the United Lutheran Church, at first took a more moderate position than Bishop Dibelius but recently has indicated he sees no room for getting along with the East regime.
 Asked on a recent television show if Christians in the East Zone of his church should actively oppose their government, he said: "I do not wish to endanger my brothers over there by simply saying 'yes'. But that is what I think."

At the peak of its 19th century golden age, Sierra Leone was called the Athens of West Africa.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market resumed its advance in brisk trading early this afternoon. The Associated Press average of 50 stocks at noon was up .70 at 254.30 with industrials up .80, rails up 1.10 and utilities up .20. Gains of fractions to a point or more outnumbered losers.

Rails continued to buttress the advance of industrials. Aircrafts, drugs and oils turned in some solid gains.

The trend among motors was mostly higher with Studebaker-Packard a runaway favorite.

An easing of worry over the Berlin crisis and recognition of the definite upturn in the business cycle were cited as factors for the rise.

Studebaker-Packard showed a gain of about a point. American Motors were fractionally higher. Chrysler and Ford also gained fractions. General Motors was about unchanged.

Revlon and Pfizer were 2-point gainers. Texaco, Lockheed, Boeing and MGM rose more than a point each. Du Pont shed a couple of points.

Fractional gains were made by Chesapeake & Ohio, Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania Railroad while New York Central climbed about a point.

Triokel, Douglas Aircraft and American Tobacco were other 1-point gainers.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 1.62 at 719.82. The rail component was up 1.43 at 142.53, just clearing the July 6 peak of 142.48.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange moved generally higher.

Corporate and U.S. government bonds were mixed.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our beloved wife and sister, Mrs. Martha Graham, who departed this life Aug. 16, 1957:

God is too wise to make a mistake. He saw fit to take you from us. And left our hearts sad indeed. Words cannot still the sorrow. Nor dry the falling tears. Or tell in any sense the loss we feel in one so dear.

But blessed thought, the Lord has power To comfort in our darkest hour.

Minor Injuries For 5 As Trucks Collide

Five persons received minor injuries in an early morning collision today just inside the Pitt-Craven County line on N.C. 43 in which two trucks were demolished.

Patrolman W. L. Whitehead, who investigated the wreck, said a sixth person jumped from one of the vehicles just before the two collided and escaped injury. The officer said a truck operated by Franklin Kirby Haddock, 16, of Rt. 1, Vanceboro, was traveling on a dirt road and stopped for a stop sign at its intersection with N.C. 43. He then pulled out into the highway and collided with a north-bound pick-up truck being driven by Letrew Strong, 32-year-old Negro of Route 1, Vanceboro.

The strong truck was carrying laborers, the officer said, noting that two of the persons riding in the back of the truck were thrown out.

Injured were Strong, Andrew Jones, Atlee Coates, Vance Phillips, and Noah Harris, all Negroes of Route 1, Vanceboro. Their injuries included bruises, lacerations and abrasions. Ptl. Whitehead noted. Only one, Coates, was hospitalized with his injuries.

According to Whitehead, a passenger in the Haddock truck, 17-year-old Theodore Penn, Negro, of Route 1, Woodland, jumped from the vehicle seconds before the two trucks collided. The officer explained that the Haddock traveled side-by-side for a short distance before they collided, and it was during this brief period that the two were an estimated three to four feet apart, that Penn made his exit.

Ptl. Whitehead said it was a "miracle" that he escaped injury. Both trucks were declared a total loss by the investigating patrolman, who listed the value of the Strong truck at $300 and estimated the value of the Haddock vehicle as $500.

Haddock was charged with failure to yield the right of way, the officer reported.

Pitt Dairyman On Commission

RALEIGH—A Pitt County today was named to the North Carolina Milk Commission by Gov. Sanford.

Charles L. McLawhorn, of Route 1, Winterville, was picked by the governor to serve on the board policy-making board.

McLawhorn, 34-year-old Pitt native, is one of the prominent dairy farmers in the county.

In announcing the appointment, Gov. Sanford said, "I am happy to have a farmer and dairyman to serve on this important state agency. I know he will represent the dairy farmers across North Carolina well."

McLawhorn, born July 13, 1927, is the son of R. H. and Janie Tyson McLawhorn. He attended the public schools at Winterville and Ayden before attending Oak Ridge Military Academy near Greensboro. He is a graduate of N. C. State College in Raleigh.

The Winterville farmer is a Baptist, a member of the Pitt County chapter of the Young Democrats Club and is a member of the Jaycees.

He served as a seaman in the U.S. Navy during World War II and is married to the former Brownie Dail. They are the parents of three children, Charles Jr., 13; Dale, 11; and Steve, 8.

Disarmament Figures Called

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy called in field advisers today for what was described as a top-level review of disarmament matters.

Arthur H. Dean, one of the listed participants at the late afternoon White House session, plans to leave next Wednesday for Geneva. There, Dean will have what Kennedy has termed a probably "decisive" meeting with the Soviets on a treaty to ban nuclear weapons tests. The two sides have failed to agree during meetings over 2 1/2 years.

Another participant at today's review, U.S. disarmament chief John M. McCloy, resumes disarmament talks with the Russians in New York Sept. 5 and is working on what he terms a dramatic, far-reaching and significant arms cut plan.

Barring unexpected progress with the Communists, both the nuclear test and general disarmament questions are likely to come before the U.N. General Assembly for debate at its fall session.

Others tapped for the White House gathering include Secretary of State Dean Rusk; Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara; Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Donald Wilson, deputy director of the U.S. Information Agency; Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, and McGeorge Bundy, Kennedy's adviser on security affairs.

To Collect Data On School Needs

RALEIGH (AP)—Information on school building needs in the state's 100 counties will be gathered by Gov. Sanford in the coming months.

He reported to his weekly news conference Wednesday that he is rounding up data on school building needs.

The governor said he hoped counties would "make all possible efforts to meet their needs this fall and that we can determine what needs are beyond the capacities of the counties to meet."

Thomas Clayton James, 58, of Hillcrest Drive, was charged with failure to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the collision this morning.

Officers said the James vehicle, a truck, collided with a car being operated by Elsi Stocks Cash of Route 1, Farmville.

Damage to the James vehicle was set at $100 while damage to the Cash car was estimated to be about $200.

Report Philpott Slightly Better

WINSTON-SALME, N.C. (AP)—Lt. Gov. H. Cloyd Philpott was reported slightly improved but still in critical condition today from an illness which struck him Wednesday.

A spokesman at Baptist Hospital reported after the 52-year-old Lexington furniture manufacturer underwent an examination this morning that the lieutenant governor was resting comfortably and was being given oxygen and sedation.

Physicians tentatively diagnosed the trouble as a dissecting aneurysm of the aorta, or separation of the layers of the aorta, the main artery that takes blood from the heart into the body.

A spokesman said yesterday that the condition was inoperable, but the hospital said today "an operation is not ruled out."
