Negro Farm Agent Fired, Home Ec Agent Suspended By Pitt Commissioners

Pitt's Negro Farm Agent James M. Goode was fired yesterday afternoon and Negro Home Economics Agent Mrs. Amelia Capehart was suspended.

The action was taken as the county commissioners adopted a resolution submitted by the Agricultural Extension Service.

H. M. McNeill, district agricultural agent, appeared before the commissioners to submit the resolution calling for Goode's dismissal.

McNeill pointed out that his investigation concerning the home economics agent had not progressed to that point. He suggested that she be suspended pending the investigation.

Goode's dismissal, according to the resolution, was due to his "failure to maintain the high standards required in fulfilling his job responsibility through precept and example as outlined and implied in his job description."

The resolution sets Sept. 15 as the date for "the separation of James M. Goode from the position of county Negro agricultural agent."

McNeill said the action was the result of an "appraisal" of the Pitt County situation. He told the commission that the extension service had "given consideration and thought to it for some time."

Following presentation of the resolution, Vance Perkins, said that in talking with extension service officials, he had suggested, "if you are going to ask for the resignation of one you ought to ask for the resignation of both."

Commissioner Vance Perkins told the board that he was in favor of discontinuing the use of county funds to make repairs and changes in the offices at the old hospital building occupied by state and federal agencies.

Chairman Robert Little presented a petition to the board signed by 168 fishermen in the Grimesland area to request the state highway department to reopen an old road which had been taken off the state system.

Highway division engineer Charles Snell told County Attorney W. W. Speight he could reopen the road if the petitioners would post a reasonable amount of bond.

The board also made the final approval of an advance by the county to the school board for the

Picks Cowan For U.S. Attorney

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy today announced that he will appoint Robert H. Cowan, counsel to the House Merchant Marine Committee, as U.S. attorney for eastern North Carolina.

Cowan, 46-year-old Democrat, would replace Julian T. Gaskill in the $17,500 post.

His nomination will go to the Senate.

McNeill said he felt such action would indicate guilt by association. "We are in so much better shape to handle them separately rather than lump them together."

agent for the present. Pitt's office is authorized two farm agents and two home economics agents. However, the assistant home economics agent, Miss Gracie Cheek, submitted her resignation yesterday to take a position with Richmond County. This leaves Warren Barnes, the assistant farm agent on duty.

McNeill said after yesterday's meeting that the extension service would make some arrangement to handle the home agent situation during the interim period. "We are obligated to do that," he declared.

The home and farm agents work under the supervision of the extension service with that agency empowered to determine the qualifications of the agents.

McNeill is supervisor for the local farm agents and generally for the home agents.

County pay records show that Goode began working with Pitt County in Sept., 1953. Mrs. Capehart began full time employment in Aug., 1943, according to the records.

The county pays Goode $3,108 annually and Mrs. Capehart, $2,437. However, this represents only approximately 40 percent of their salaries. The state and federal governments participate in payment of extension service personnel. The amount of their incomes from federal and state sources was not available today.

Yesterday's action represented the second shake-up in the Negro farm agent's office in five years. In March, 1956 the assistant farm agent, Talmadge Mitchell was fired. This resulted in tragedy when Mitchell later shot and killed his district supervisor in the farm agent's office with Goode and Mrs. Capehart present.

Mitchell was subsequently tried, pleaded no contest to a second degree murder charge and was sentenced to 25-30 years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lifting its three-year lid on atomic tests, the United States will set off underground nuclear explosions in the next few weeks to develop more advanced weapons.

"We have no other choice," President Kennedy announced Tuesday after getting word of the Soviet Union's third atomic blast in five days.

The American tests will start this month. Authorities indicated the first explosions will be small by atomic standards.

The aim: (1) to improve battlefield arms like those now in the hands of U. S. troops in Europe and (2) to gain know-how for anti-missile rockets.

Because they will be below ground and in laboratories the U. S. tests will not produce the fallout of radioactive air particles, potentially dangerous to all life.

Kennedy still held open last Sunday's U.S.-British offer to Moscow to sign a pact by Sept. 9 outlawing tests in the atmosphere.

John J. McCloy, the U. S. disarmament administrator, planned to meet in New York today with Valerian Zorin, Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, to resume talks on setting up a multilateral disarmament conference.

Kennedy's announcement drew applause from Congress, where many members of both parties have been calling for a resumption of U. S. tests and dismay from non-Western foreign capitals, where the Soviets have been criticized for ending their atomic moratorium.

Disarm also was registered by Japan, target of America's World War II atomic bombing. Foreign Minister Zenro Kozaka strongly urged the United States not to carry out the tests. He said "we have long considered, from the humanitarian view, that the ban on nuclear weapon tests is the first step toward the abolition of nuclear weapons as a whole."

The President's decision, announced by White House press secretary Pierre Salinger late Tuesday, swept away a ban adopted by the United States when the U.S.-British-Soviet parley on a treaty to forbid nuclear testing began in November 1958. The last U. S. test was Oct. 30, 1958, in Nevada.

The Soviets and British also declared self-imposed moratoriums in 1958. Some military men in all three countries pressed increasingly for tests. This year the Soviets showed declining interest in the Geneva talks and last Wednesday announced they would resume tests. The British have not resumed.

Kennedy said Tuesday: "In view of the continued testing by the Soviet government, I have today ordered the resumption of nuclear tests in the laboratory and underground with no fallout.

"In our effort to achieve an end to nuclear testing, we have taken every step that reasonable men could justify.

"In view of the acts of the Soviet government, we must now take those steps which prudent men find essential.

"We have no other choice in fulfillment of the responsibilities of the U. S. government to its own citizens and to the security of other free nations."

Salinger said Kennedy made his decision only after word reached here of a third Soviet atomic explosion in central Asia.

Reminded that Kennedy last week had pronounced the U. S. nuclear arsenal wholly adequate for free world defense, Salinger said "nevertheless important advances can be made by further scientific development."

While Salinger did not give further details on why Kennedy made his decision at this time, other sources offered this combination of reasons:

1. By its quick reaction, the United States is serving notice on the Soviet Union that it will not give in to Moscow's "atomic blackmail" pressure on Berlin or other issues.

2. By delaying longer, America would have come under increasing pressure from neutralists abroad and at the United Nations, to continue to hold back on testing indefinitely regardless of Soviet actions.

3. The United States had scored what major initial propaganda gains it could from the Soviets' breaking the moratorium, although the impact against Moscow disappointed U.S. expectations. Now Washington will stress that U.S. blasts produce no fallout and that the Reds were the first to resume testing.

4. Premier Khrushchev, by failing to halt the Soviet tests after Sunday's U.S.-British appeal, showed he does not intend to agree to a test ban.

Battleship USS North Carolina Is Turned Over To State In Ceremonies

By NOEL YANCEY

BAYONNE, N.J. (AP) — The Navy turned the once mighty battleship North Carolina today as a state memorial to all men who have died fighting for liberty in all the nation's wars.

And North Carolina's Gov. Terry Sanford, in accepting the huge ship for the state, said: "We will hold it and enshrine it as a lasting warning to those who would attack human liberties, as a lasting beacon of hope and good will and as a memorial to the men who dared the deep for freedom's sake."

The ceremony, which took the North Carolina off the Navy's role of fighting ships, was held on a dock beside which the ship was moored overlooking busy New York Harbor. Her bow was pointed almost squarely at the Statue of Liberty.

The North Carolina is scheduled to leave her dock at the Navy Supply Center here next Tuesday — weather and other conditions permitting. On Sept. 18, she is scheduled to arrive in Wilmington, where she will be moored as a permanent memorial.

In sharp contrast to her launching in June, 1940, which was attended by 54,000 people, only a tiny handful was present, in addition to dignitaries, for the transfer ceremony — a ceremony that was both sad and happy.

Navy Chaplain Karl Karpa set the tone in his invocation as he said the ship would become a symbol and a commemoration to all the men who had given their lives in this country that freedom be preserved.

Adm. James S. Russell, vice chief of naval operations, formally presented the ship to the state, saying it would become "a significant memorial to all Americans who gave their lives in past wars."

In addition to Sanford and Russell, some of the dignitaries on hand included: Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges and Mrs. Hodges; Kenneth Royall, former secretary of the Army and native North Carolinian now practicing law in New York City; Maj. Gen. Claude T. Bowers, North Carolina's adjutant general; Mayor O. A. Allsbrook of Wilmington; and Hugh Martin of Wilmington, chairman of the Battleship North Carolina Commission.

Commentator Lowell Thomas, who helped serve as master of ceremonies for the program, told the group he understood that only two battleships will be set aside as war memorials—the Texas, already enshrined in Texas, and the North Carolina.

In his speech, Gov. Sanford said the purpose was to set the battleship's course "on the first leg of her permanent and continuing voyage as a shrine of American remembrance of courage and valor."

"Thanks to the full cooperation of the United States Navy, the determined campaign of the North Carolina Battleship Commission and the contributions of men, women and children across North Carolina, this ship is not headed for a 'mothball fleet' nor for a scuttling yard," Sanford said.

"Instead, she is 'steaming home' to North Carolina, where she will become a living memorial to the courage of the men who fought on her decks. In a broader sense, the U.S.S. North Carolina will stand as a monument to the valor of all the men and women of all the services of all the nations, who fought freedom's fight in World War II," he added.

Sanford also was registered by Japan, target of America's World War II atomic bombing. Foreign Minister Zenro Kozaka strongly urged the United States not to carry out the tests. He said "we have long considered, from the humanitarian view, that the ban on nuclear weapon tests is the first step toward the abolition of nuclear weapons as a whole."

The PTA: Pro and Con

Are PTA's Guilty Of Applying Politics, Pressure And Power?

Betty Carrollton, an experienced newspaper reporter, spent three months probing the value of Parent-Teacher Associations. During that time she interviewed more than 200 teachers, principals and parents. While she found much that was good, she also found much to criticize. Miss Carrollton, never a member of the PTA, is a daughter of a school teacher and her sister-in-law is a teacher now. This is the first of five reports.

Women's News Service

Politics and pressure aimed at parents through their children are primary factors that have helped to disillusion many women about the value of the PTA.

Of the two, pressure in the classroom is more often condemned by mothers. They believe their youngsters are intimidated for the sake of achieving an attendance goal at PTA meetings.

Such pressure, reports one mother, caused her son's first heartbreak. "I was working all day—often 12 hours a day—to support my children," she said. "Every month my boy brought home the notice of a PTA meeting. It always met in the afternoon, and I couldn't ask for time off to attend. It was the same story every month."

Her son was in the fourth grade the day he brought home a final PTA notice. Once again, the mother told her son she couldn't not go to the meeting. "I hate you!" he flared. "Miss B— says you're the only mother who never comes to the PTA."

"That incident," his mother said, "made me realize that though I was providing my children with a good home, they thought I was failing them. My son soon forgot the incident. But it was years before I could forget his words and his unhappy little face."

To prevent another such scene, she called the boy's teacher, asked that he not be given any more PTA notices to bring home.

Exaggerated? No, according to many other mothers. "Just last week," one said, "my daughter nearly choked on her breakfast, turned to me and asked in a scared voice, "Mother, could you have gone to the PTA meeting last night if you'd known about it?" When I said no, her face lit up and she said: "Then I don't have to let them know I forgot to tell you, do I?"

The mother added that it is "terribly unfair for our children to have to worry about our going to PTA meetings. They have enough trouble with their own school affairs."

A matron who has children in two schools declared that the "bargaining process" is a regular part of her family's routine when PTA meeting dates conflict. "And when both schools have PTA the same day," she continued, "it's really a crisis. It happened once just before one of my girls was to be in a school play. She told me it would be all right if I didn't see the play if I'd go to the PTA meeting at her school. I knew there was no way to settle it peacefully, so I didn't attend either meeting. But my daughters resented it a lot more than they would resent punishment for something they'd done."

Where does all this pressure originate? No one seems to know.

Most mothers believe it stems from the local PTA president, who pitches it to the school principal. The principal, they think, relays it to the teacher, who in turn badgers students in her classroom.

But— "It doesn't come from us," declared the presidents of more than 30 local PTA chapters in different districts.

"Of course," one added, "the PTA cannot survive if it is not supported by the parents. Certainly all women should be aware of their duties to the community, and this includes active participation in their PTA. But we certainly don't try to exert any form of pressure to get them to attend the meetings if they don't want to do."

Teachers and school principals say the pressure definitely does not come from them.

"We send notices to parents, but it is simply a reminder that there is to be a meeting," one teacher explained. "I don't know of any teacher who has ever tried to make members of her class strike bargains with their parents to get them to attend the PTA meetings."

"Teachers have to attend, too," another observed. "I've been teaching for nearly 15 years and going to every PTA session is as much a part of my job outside the classroom as grading homework papers at home. It's not always convenient to go, and there usually something else I'd rather do, but to the PTA I go."

She joined more than 100 fellow teachers, however, in declaring she is not under any pressure, "organized or otherwise," to attend.

"It's just another extra part of my job, without any extra pay," she said.

New Faculty Members Entertained By Jenkins

New members of the faculty of East Carolina College and their wives and husbands were guests Tuesday night at a reception given in their honor by college president and Mrs. Leo W. Jenkins at their home on East Fifth Street.

Present to enjoy the occasion were 145 people, including directors of departments of instruction and their wives.

Dr. and Mrs. Jenkins greeted guests as they arrived and extended a welcome to them as the college opened for the Fall quarter of the 1961-1962 term. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Duncan and Dr.

and Mrs. Robert L. Holt assisted the host and hostess in receiving and entertaining those attending the reception.

The Jenkins home was decorated with arrangements of white chrysanthemums and gladioli and colorful fall flowers.

Refreshments were served from a table centered with an epergne of yellow rosebuds and candles matching in color. Miss Ruth White, Mrs. Agnes Barrett and Mrs. Douglas Jones served frosted coffee, cheese straws, cakes, sandwiches, mints, and nuts.

Guests were interested during the evening in art work, including oil paintings, water colors, and wood cuts, done by students at the college and hung in the reception rooms of the home.

Music for the social event was provided by an instrumental quartet of faculty members of the college department of music.

Miss Page Bride Of Donald Tripp

In a ceremony of beauty and simplicity, Miss Peggy Joyce Page became the bride of Donald Gene Tripp Sunday afternoon, September 3, 1961, at 4:00 in Memorial Baptist Church, Greenville. Rev. Percy B. Upchurch performed the double ring ceremony.
 The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis Worthington of Greenville. Mr. Tripp is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Mark Tripp of Ayden.
 A program of nuptial music was presented by Mr. Ralph Mills, organist, and Miss Patsy Jones, soloist. Miss Jones sang "Whither Thou Goest" and "Because."
 "The Lord's Prayer" was sung as the benediction. The traditional wedding marches were used as the processional and recessional.
 The vows were spoken before an altar centered with a spiral candelabra interspersed with white bridal flowers and cathedral candles. On either side were baskets of white gladioli flanked by emerald green palms, huckleberry and plumosa greenery and seven-branched candelabra holding cathedral candles. Family pews were marked with white bridal ribbons and greenery. The couple knelt on a white wrought iron prie-dieu for the wedding prayer.
 Given in marriage by her brother, Roger Page, the bride wore a gown of rosepoint Chantilly lace and tulle over bridal satin designed with a portrait neckline outlined with lace scallops and embroidered with seed pearls. The full skirt featured a pleated cascade of misty tulle in front and extended into a regal train. Her fingertip veil of French illusion was attached to a crown of seed pearls, and she carried a white prayer book topped with a white hybrid orchid and showered with bridal ribbons and lilies-of-the-valley.
 Miss Nell May of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a street-length dress of yellow organza over taffeta featuring a wrap-around sash of yellow taffeta and matching headband. She carried a Fall cascade bouquet of bronze pom poms centered with yellow Fuji mums and showered with variegated yellow and bronze ribbons.
 Miss Patsy Corey of Greenville and Miss Diane Whitehurst, cousin of the bride, Stokes, were bridesmaids. They wore mint green dresses identical to that of the honor attendants. They carried Fall cascade bouquets of bronze pom poms centered with green Fuji mums and showered with variegated green ribbons.

 Marshall Tripp of Ayden attended the bridegroom as best man. Ushers were Willis Manning of Ayden and Merle Paramore of Greenville.
 The bride's mother was attired in a blue sheath dress featuring tiny embroidered flowers. She wore a powder blue satin cummerbund with matching accessories. Her corsage was of pink carnations.
 The bridegroom's mother wore a princess style dress of white lace over yellow featuring a matching brief jacket. She wore matching accessories of white and a corsage of yellow carnations.

 The bride is a graduate of Rose High School, Greenville, and Baker's Business College, Greenville. She is currently employed by the Greenville Police Department.
 Mr. Tripp is a graduate of Ayden High School, and has served four years in the United States Air Force. He is employed by N. E. Moore Pest Control Company of Greenville.

 For a wedding trip to Western North Carolina, the bride wore a sheath dress of moss green featuring a fitted bolero. She wore a matching green feathered hat and the orchid lifted from her prayer book.
 Following the wedding trip, the couple will be at home in Greenville.
Cake Cutting
 Following the wedding rehearsal Saturday night, the bride's parents entertained the Tripp-Page wedding party and guests at a cake cutting in the parlor of the Memorial Baptist Church.
 Fall flowers decorated the parlor. Centering the table was an arrangement of yellow pom poms flanked with white candles.
 After the bride and groom had cut the traditional first slice of the three-tiered wedding cake, the mother of the groom served the guests strawberry punch and the mother of the bride served the cake.
 The bride and groom presented their attendants with gifts.

Mrs. Donald Gene Tripp

Recent Bride Feted

Mrs. Alton Moore and Mrs. Cary Gaynor honored Mrs. Wayne Creech of Tarboro, a recent bride, with a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Moore's Sunday night, September 2. Mrs. Creech is the former, Miss Geraldine Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Little of Fountain.
 The home was decorated with summer cut flowers and flower arrangements. The guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Gaynor, Mrs. Moore, and Mrs. Creech.
 After the gifts were opened, the guests were directed to the dining room where Mrs. Little, the bride's mother, presided over the table. The guests were served lime ice, cookies, open-faced party sandwiches, nuts, minis, and cheese wafers. Assisting in the dining room were Misses Fay and Pam- lie Moore.
 Mrs. Creech wore a light blue cotton dress with an embroidered bodice.
 Upon arrival she was presented a white carnation corsage.
 There were 40 guests present. The out-of-town guests were Mrs. J. R. Satterthwaite, the groom's mother, Misses Hilda and Catherine Satterthwaite, the groom's sisters and Mrs. Sadie Griggs, his aunt, all of Tarboro.

Commissioners Set New Precedent

A new precedent in Pitt County was set yesterday by the Board of Commissioners as they voted to participate in the cost of extending utilities services to the site of a new industrial plant just outside the corporate limits of Farmville.

It was an action which will certainly leave the County Board of Commissioners open to similar requests in the future, and one which may become a source of controversy. On the basis of the tax return the county will receive from the new million-dollar plant, however, it appears a reasonable move for the commissioners to help encourage industrial development in the county.

According to information received by the County Commissioners from the Town of Farmville, the town is extending its present water and sewer lines to their corporate limits to provide services to the new plant site. The commissioners, in cooperation with Farmville agreed to appropriate $3,066 to extend the services from the Farmville city limits some 400 feet to the plant site. When the new plant is completed, the county will receive approximately $5,000 annually in ad valorem taxes from it, while the town of Farmville will receive no tax revenue directly from the plant which is located outside its corporate limits.

Several years ago the County Commissioners were approached by the Town of Farmville with the proposal that the county help defray a portion of the cost of extending utility services to another plant which located just beyond the corporate limits of the town. At that time, however, the Commissioners refused to participate because the utilities lines to be extended were within the corporate limits of the municipality.

Certainly the precedent set by the Commissioners yesterday cannot be interpreted as meaning that the County Commissioners will be willing to underwrite the expense of extending utilities services from the corporate limits of any community in the county to a plant site outside the corporate limits of a municipality regardless of the distance. We presume that the Commissioners will weigh each case on its individual merits and determine whether the proposed expenditure for such services for new industries is justified on the basis of the return the county may expect in tax revenues. Otherwise, the cost to the county government for providing such services to new industries could become prohibitive.

The action taken by the Board of Commissioners yesterday in response to the request of Farmville indicates another step in the cooperation between the county - municipal governments in Pitt in seeking to provide services to attract new industries to Pitt County.

Tougher Enforcement Is But One Of Factors

There are probably some Tar Heels who will take exception to the blunt words of Gov. Sanford in instructing Motor Vehicles Commissioner Ed Scheidt "to develop a get tough policy against violations of the laws and deaths on the highways."

For the most part, however, the vast majority of North Carolinians will agree with Gov. Sanford that "We cannot tolerate the increase in highway deaths." If tougher law enforcement will help cut down on the terrible toll being taken on the highways of the state, we are confident the citizens of North Carolina will support these stricter enforcement measures.

In the years since Ed Scheidt took over the post of Commissioner of Motor Vehicles in North Carolina, there has been a steady improvement in the calibre of highway safety program carried out in the state. The safety program has included educational devices to encourage safer driving, and likewise more stringent enforcement practices as a part of the overall effort. There can be no doubt that the stricter enforcement practices have contributed a great deal to coping with the increasing number of violations as the number of vehicles on the highways increase.

If even tougher enforcement policies by the Highway Patrol will make the highways of North Carolina safer for the people of the state, we're all in favor of it.

Do-It-Yourself Revolution Book

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Maj. Ernesto Guevara, Cuba's economic chief, has produced a tidy little do-it-yourself book for revolutionary handymen on how to wage guerrilla war.

Although it is based on the tactics Fidel Castro used to demolish the dictatorship of Fulgencio Batista, the instructions are not likely to be on Havana's best-seller list and were not intended to be.

Castro's grip on Cuba makes it difficult anytime soon for anyone to make guerrilla war on him. But the book should be useful to groups considering revolution in any of the other Latin-American countries.

Castro himself some time ago announced publicly that he expected to see the Andes Mountains become the birthplace of new Castro-style revolutions in South America. Guevara's book was made to order for that.

Guevara, an Argentine physician and revolutionist who was one of Castro's right-hand men in the war on Batista, is no dope, as he demonstrated a few weeks ago at the Inter-American Conference at Punta del Este, Uruguay.

His book shows extraordinary clarity and is written in a way that any peasant, who could read at all, would be able to understand. At the same time, it avoids talking down. This isn't easy to do, but Guevara managed it.

In his book the guerrilla is a heroic figure—and in many cases he may well be—but while Guevara dwells on death and destruction and sharp reprisals he leaves out much of the unpleasantness that accompanies guerrilla war.

For instance: Stories drifting back from South Viet Nam, where Communist guerrillas from the north are trying to take over, tell of guerrillas driving nails into boards and then covering the boards with earth in the rice fields but leaving the nails sticking up for the peasants to step on.

They get blood-poison, lose a leg, die in agony. Or the guerrillas assassinate uncooperative village head men.

Guevara doesn't go into details about terrorism but suggests: "Terrorism should be considered a valuable tactic when it is used to put to death some noted leader."

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
DON'T JUMP TO CONCLUSIONS

Are you in love with love? Some people think they are in love, when as a matter of fact they are simply in love with love. They pick out someone and say "I love that person." As a matter of fact they have a deep longing to love and to be loved. They are not necessarily in love with that particular person. They are in love with love.

Now all of this has a certain amount of good in it, but it also has mistake and error which may involve a person in later suffering. Romance is a very beautiful thing. It is one of the most important things in life, especially between the sexes.

er of the oppressing forces well known for his cruelty, his efficiency in repression, or other quality that makes his elimination useful.

"But the killing of persons of small importance is never advisable, since it brings on an increase of reprisals, including deaths."

But he advises an "absolute inflexibility" toward all the "despicable elements that resort to informing and assassination."

That covers a lot of ground, doesn't make any distinction between facts and suspicion, and doesn't mention trials or juries. In short, Guevara has written a rough book.

For Guevara the ideal age for a guerrilla fighter is between 25 and 35 and he thinks no one below 16 should be accepted.

If you had the idea a guerrilla force has to be pretty big starting out if it hopes to overcome a government army, Guevara disagrees. He thinks a guerrilla can be started with 30 to 50 men.

With that nucleus he says the people of the countryside can be won over—and more recruits obtained — particularly if the peasants are land-hungry and the guerrillas promise to take the land from the big owners and give it to them.

This isn't pleasant reading for anyone who thinks maybe trouble in Latin America will just go away by itself. The man who wrote these guidelines for trouble is thinking in terms of many years.

"Soon after the wedding the bride gets bushels of kisses. Later they dwindle to mere pecks." —Elberton (Ga.) Star.

"Rugged individualist: One who can eat chicken with his fingers without making any excuses." —Buffalo News.

"A Congressional committee, after diligent study, decided that the White House should continue to be called the White House. The decision makes sense, since that's what the people would call it anyway." —The Raleigh Times.

Strength For Today

of fifteen and thirty. But some people are fascinated with the whole idea of being involved in romance. They must be loving somebody and having somebody love them.

Then you will see clearly.

Turn Back To Saturday

The best factual story (well, that's what the man said!) I've heard since the opening of the new school term concerns a little girl starting her first year in school.

An uncle, teasing her, asked "What grade are you in?" And the little girl responded, "I don't know exactly. . . but it's somewhere between the third and fifth grade."

Turn back the calendar a few days—back to Saturday, when the circus was here. A lot of people didn't attend the matinee. The seats may have been less than half-filled.

Still, the performers performed with creditable interest; and all hands displayed a mighty preoccupation with maintaining a hefty margin of profit.

And that "maintaining a hefty margin of profit" can be disturbing if there are two youngsters accompanying you, and both have a bad case of the "I wants."

After the show we were making our way back to the car when a boy appeared with a box of dirty clothes and a question "Where is the nearest launderette?" He didn't have means of transportation, so I told him to climb aboard and we'd find a place that was open.

We talked. He was from Illinois, had been travelling with the circus since June, and had really covered a lot of miles. . . . How did Saturday's matinee crowd compare with others? It was a good one, he told me.

(Which was a bit surprising. It seems afternoon shows draw light turnouts as a general rule.)

What kind of pay do the featured circus performers get? He didn't know. . . . but some weeks, he made more money than they did.

His line? Selling a popular soft drink in a paper cup. Some days, with a lot of hustling, he could clear as much as forty dollars. That's a lot of drinks.

What was he going to do at the end of the season? Buy a new car (he could afford it then), drive home, probably just wait for the next circus season. He wasn't overly concerned.

Anything unusual happen since he has been traveling with circuses? Once, the big top settled down over an audience. Nobody hurt. . . . nothing broke. . . . His impression was that in driving stakes they had been just a little bit out of their proper position and wouldn't hold up the canvas.

Fact or not, it made a good story. I've sometimes wondered if something like that ever did happen.

We found a launderette open and busy before any more questions arose, and he left us. The ride to town was brief; thanks to our interesting company.

Other Editors Saying Peace Corps No Holiday

(The Henderson Dispatch)

Dozens of young people left Washington early in the week for the new republic of Ghana in Africa as the first contingent of the hundreds of boys and girls who will be going overseas soon as members of the newly created Peace Corps. This is a new gimmick in the effort of the United States Government to win friends and keep them in foreign lands.

They have our best wishes in the hope that they will be able to accomplish everything, and more, that is expected of them. Their job is cut out for them and it is a tremendous one.

We will keep our fingers crossed while awaiting reports in the months ahead as to just how they conduct themselves, how they are received in the strange lands to which they are assigned, and the extent to which they are winning friends for their own country. They have been briefed in detail as to what they are supposed to do.

It is difficult to escape the feeling that these young people look upon their assignment as more or less a government all-expense-paid holiday overseas. They are thrilled with the idea of how observing how the other side lives. But it is more than adolescent enthusiasm they are supposed to impart. They are charged with the responsibility of creating an image of America in the minds of the underprivileged peoples among whom they will live and strive to help during their two-year stay.

One purpose of the Peace Corps is to offset some of the communist propaganda that is spread abroad among the newer nations yearning for liberty as they regard it. They will match wits with the trained personnel of the Kremlin in attempting to convince their hosts that the American way of life is better. And if they can do it after a mere few months of training here at home they will deserve the plaudits of Americans generally. If they succeed in their task they will have justified the confidence of those who hatched the idea in the first place and who are placing so much store in the merits of this undertaking.

Heaven knows the United States needs all the good will ambassadors it can send abroad. And when they get there they should divest themselves of any air of superiority, or the idea that they know all the answers. The utmost patience will be necessary, and it remains to be seen if these boys and girls are willing to accept the sacrifices they must make in order to place themselves on a level with the backward people in order to win them over. These young people should know, and if they do not will not be long in learning, that an individual cannot be snatched from the jungles today and transplanted into a qualified citizen of a free nation tomorrow. If, however, they can offset communist propaganda and lead their associates to a new and better way of life, their mission will have been fulfilled to that extent and their efforts justified.

Always Other People

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The other fellow is always a crackpot. That seems to settle the argument for all time. It used to be that men sat around a cracker barrel arguing this way and that and out of such arguments developed the policies of the nation. But these days, under the terrific pressures of public opinion, there seems to be little time for honest debate. For instance, my good friend, John T. Flynn, in a foreword to a pamphlet says:

"It is incredible what mischief a few dedicated crackpots can wreak upon a great free society before its citizens can be alerted to the danger."

The dedicated crackpots are those who disagree, who have another point of view. Apparently nobody has any sense but me and thee and I doubt about thee. The current intolerance is symptomatic of the nervousness which affects our people. The nervousness comes from the fears which wars and great changes engender. It leads to pessimism, to a sense of frustration, to an assumption that the jig is nearly up. It is neurotic defeatism.

The truth of the matter is that history never ends. It goes right on, creating events and meeting new facts century by century. Today instead of dealing in centuries or decades, we are dealing in seconds. The arguments of the 1930's do not apply in the 1960's. The changes that have taken place universally make it impossible to reach final conclusions on policy because always something unexpected and impendable jumps up to upset the plans and purposes of even the best of men.

There are those who are never affected by events. Their minds are made up about everything and facts do not alter postulates. Some doctrinaire persons are sincere and honest but lack historic background and reject displeasing data.

For instance, it is possible to believe that bomb testing should never be done. It is even possible to believe that the various bombs should not have been tested. The fact is that the bombs do exist; that Soviet Russia has resumed testing; that an increasing number of countries are making bombs and that the United States cannot afford to ignore these facts.

There are those who are not so sincere in the pursuit of doctrine. Particularly offensive are some who call themselves former F. B. I. agents, thus giving to themselves labels which provide the appearance of special knowledge. The question arises, if these persons were so vital to the work of the F. B. I. why did they leave that organization and how can it survive without them?

I have learned that a former F. B. I. agent is generally just a former. There are few who enjoy continuing relationships and those few are holding down jobs in the same general field of work as the F. B. I.

Naturally it is an advantage to a man to have served in the F. B. I., but like all organizations, it has men on top and men who never rise; it has men who have to be let out because they do not make good. Employment by the F. B. I. is not a permanent badge of efficiency, knowledge or responsibility. When a fellow advertises himself as a former F. B. I. agent, the proper inquiry should be, why former? If he says that he was an Administration Assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, it might only be one that no such position exists in the F. B. I.

The reason I emphasize this point is that there is an upsurge of conservatism in this country and there are many opportunists who jump on the conservative bandwagon and who claim special knowledge and special advantages. Many conservative causes have been wrecked by those who seek to earn a living out of them. The cause ceased to be important; the primary motive became the living; the goal became the contribution.

Many movements switched from an ideal and faith to the excitement of the moment and they jumped from one hate to another, until all that was left to their effort was hate and the hunt for dollars. This has also

Music For Workers Questioned

By ELMER ROESSNER

It has been said so often that music increases workers' efficiency that most people believe it. Even those who suspect that music will distract the creative workers assume that it speeds up those with automatic, repetitive tasks.

Now comes Richard S. Uhrbrock, a psychologist, who questions the value of music while you work.

Writing in "Personnel Psychology," Mr. Uhrbrock reports that while music at work has been tried for almost 50 years, and there have been many attempts to demonstrate its positive effects, few of these tests can stand scientific scrutiny. Most of the popular reports, he said, are unsupported by statistical data. Statements that "the results have been phenomenal" and "output has definitely improved" turn out to be the unscientific opinions of managers — in many cases the men who were responsible for introducing the program.

WANTS FACTS
The belief that music is an incentive is usually strongly entrenched among managers questioned, he found, but there are never any facts or figures to prove it.

His analysis of before-and-after measurements found that dubious statistical procedures were employed. Some inquiries have merely demonstrated that any change in a work situation is likely to have temporary favorable effects.

Some studies have been scientific, he reported. He cited three that showed young, inexperienced employees engaged in simple, repetitive tasks, produced more when music was played during working hours, while a fourth showed that music had no effect on the work of experienced factory workers whose work patterns were stabilized and who were performing complex tasks. This suggests, he added, that the improvement in young workers might be due as much to the natural increase in skill as to the playing of "Mack the Knife."

"DON'T PULL THE PLUG!"
Mr. Uhrbrock concludes that the case for music does not automatically increase output.

However, he concedes, young workers like music and companies now providing it might let their piped-in music contract lapse.

But those companies who have not yet turned on the sweet decibels, he said, might ponder the case of one Leona, who figured in one of his studies.

She said working to music was "quite pleasant"—a fact that did not prevent a 4.4 per cent drop in her output over the period studied.

Just who loses when a lost credit card is found and used by someone else has not yet been thoroughly adjudicated.

But one case indicates that if the card is lost of stolen without the knowledge of the holder, he may not be stuck with the bills.

In a recent Oregon case, a thief stole a car and a gas company credit card. The owner did not realize his card was missing for a while, but as soon as he did he notified the gas company.

The card carried the statement that the customer guaranteed to pay the charges of anyone presenting the card, until the company received written notice that the card was lost or stolen.

The gas company (Union Oil) sued for the full amount of the fraudulent purchases. The jury granted no judgement. The gas company appealed to the Oregon Supreme Court, which ordered a new trial. It held that the customer was not relieved of liability solely by using "due care," but it added that the gas company could recover only if it could show that its outlets used "due care" in granting credit. The company would have to prove, apparently, that service-station men asked for signatures or identification when the cards were presented.

This does not mean that users can be careless with credit cards. They should keep them safe and, when they disappear, they should notify the issuing company immediately.

Atmospheric Nuclear Tests By U.S. Are Indicated

By JACK BELL
 WASHINGTON (AP)—The possibility that the United States will have to resume atmospheric nuclear tests if the Soviets continue such shots was voiced today by influential members of Congress. Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said President Kennedy's order Tuesday for resumption of underground explosions "doesn't mean that we won't have to test in the air later."

Dirksen was one of the congressional leaders of both parties Kennedy informed of his decision before the White House announced it.

The Illinois senator said it was his understanding that while underground experiments might provide valuable scientific information it may be necessary to detonate warheads in the air in the final series of tests.

This would involve fallout. Much of the world has condemned the Soviet Union for loading such nuclear debris in the atmosphere over central Asia in its new tests. Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., said in a separate interview that as much as he dreads the possibility he fears that if the Soviets continued their atmospheric shots "we may find it necessary to undertake tests in the air, too."

Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., a member of the Senate House Atomic Energy Committee, said that if the Soviets persist in tests "in the atmosphere reaching into the megaton range, we will be required to resume atmospheric tests, too, as deplorable and regrettable as we may find it."

Gore said there is "one overriding theoretical possibility; the development of a defensive mechanism that would neutralize nuclear warheads on incoming ballistic missiles."

Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., chairman of the Senate House Atomic Energy Committee, told the House that the resumption of testing could provide information on lighter-weight warheads, development of small-yield weapons, and the production of an antimissile missile.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., another committee member, said he is more than ever convinced that the Soviets have been conducting underground tests during the moratorium that has been in effect since November 1958.

"I think they came to the point where they felt they had to have atmospheric tests to prove out what they were doing," he said. "The rapidity of these tests shows that they are a well-organized series which must have taken months to plan."

"It utterly destroys their pretense of good faith in the Geneva talks and shows their total insincerity."

Jackson said the Soviet tests could be for one of three purposes or some combination of the three:

1. To develop the component parts of a new weapons system. "This could be a big qualitative jump for them, something they would announce to the world as a big breakthrough and claim they are ahead now on warheads as well as missile thrust."
2. Development of an antimissile missile. "We know the Russians have been doing work in this field."
3. Development of tactical (battlefield) weapons, more efficient weapons, and weapons of smaller size. "The Russians want to reduce the size of their warheads; in this, we're way ahead of them."

Members of Congress who commented on the President's decision to resume U.S. tests were unanimous in endorsing it.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said that the President "had no choice but to go ahead with underground tests, which, as everyone knows are not harmful to mankind."

Dirksen said he thought Kennedy walked the second mile with Khrushchev.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., called the President's decision "entirely sound."

In the opinion of Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., the United States "could not stand by and let Khrushchev take his own good time about developing weapons to wipe us off the face of the earth."

FREED — Jomo Kenyatta, aged African nationalist, has been given his complete freedom. He was imprisoned for nine years for leading the anti-white Mau Mau rebellion.

Probable First Tests For Battlefield Atomic Arms

WASHINGTON (AP)—Relatively small bang warheads for battlefield nuclear weapons may be the first tested under President Kennedy's go-ahead orders.

The Defense Department and Atomic Energy Commission were silent on test plans.

But military officials suggested today that tactical nuclear weapons ranging from the explosive equivalent of 100 tons of TNT to 20,000 tons of TNT soon may be tried underground in Nevada.

Among these are warheads for bombardment rockets like the Honest John, Little John, Lance, Crockett, Corporal and Sergeant, the Davy Crockett bazooka-like weapon and a nuclear shell for solid fuel missiles like the U.S. Minuteman ICBM and the submarine-launched Polaris.

Under terms of Kennedy's order, it would not be possible to test a Nike-Zeus antimissile missile against an intercontinental rocket.

However, such a test could be held if the President should broaden his order to permit nuclear experiments in space.

The Nike-Zeus, which still is being developed, is intended to intercept enemy ICBM in space or the edge of space—perhaps 90 miles up—to minimize the danger of radioactive fallout on areas being protected by the antimissile.

An official close to the Nike-Zeus project said there might be some value to detonating a Nike-Zeus warhead in an underground control test.

District Enters Nat'l Program

The Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District has entered the national Soil Conservation Awards program sponsored by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio. It was announced today by District Chairman A.C. Edwards, of Hookerton.

Members of the Coastal Plain District will compete against the other soil conservation districts in the state. Non-partisan judging committees, selected from North Carolina's outstanding exponents of the soil conservation movement, will determine the state's outstanding district for the period May 1, 1961 to April 30, 1962 on a basis of total points scored in performance of regular duties.

Grand award for one member of the winning district governing body in each of the 52 competing units, and the top cooperating farmer or rancher named by that district, will be an expense-free, vacation trip to Goodyear's fabulous winter resort, the Wigwam Guest Ranch on Goodyear Farms, Litchfield Park, Arizona in November or December, 1962.

Officers of the Coastal Plain district governing body who will compete for the Goodyear award are A.C. Edwards, chairman, and Arch J. Flanagan, Farmville, secretary-treasurer.

National winners of the Goodyear Soil Conservation Awards will be honored at the seven regular area meetings of the National Association of Soil Conservation Districts. Plaques will be awarded at State Conventions to the first and second place winning districts.

Soviet Alpinists Die In Mishap

MOSCOW (AP)—Three of the Soviet Union's top alpinists have been killed in a mountain accident on the Red Chinese border.

The Tbilisi newspaper Dawn of the East said the three, all from the Caucasus, were killed while attempting to scale Mount Pobeda on the border between Kirghiz and Sinkiang. They were identified as D. A. Medzhamazashvili, T. M. Kukhianidze, and I. N. Gabilani.

Watershed Plan For N.C. Still Awaits Approval

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House and Senate Agriculture committees must approve a $1 billion watershed project in Hertford, Northampton and Bertie counties in North Carolina before work can actually begin.

A House Agriculture subcommittee Tuesday gave its approval to the project on Ahoskie Creek in the northeastern area of North Carolina.

Such projects are aimed at halting floods and preventing erosion by increasing the flow of water into creeks with the aid of dams and improved channels. A pond is formed in front of each dam, and under law the pond becomes the property of the landowner. Local authorities must secure right-of-way from landowners involved before the federal funds can be sought.

The subcommittee approved Ahoskie Creek program would cost $1,182,886.

U.S.S. North Carolina Earned 12 Campaign Stars In Pacific War

WASHINGTON (AP)—The battleship North Carolina spent 40 months in the Pacific in World War II and earned 12 campaign stars.

Her first star was for the Guadalcanal-Tulagi landings Aug. 7-9, 1942. When she started for that battle area, hardly anyone aboard had heard of Guadalcanal where a few Marines, with fleet support, were about to stem the surging Japanese tide.

The North Carolina operated as a screening unit for the carriers supplying the air cover for the troops landing on Guadalcanal and Tulagi. Due to her position she was not in the first battle of Savo Sound. But she saw action on Aug. 24. Steaming with the carrier Enterprise between Malaita and Stewart Islands, the proud battleship underwent her first Japanese air attack.

This action became known as the battle of the Eastern Solomons. While Japanese planes dived over the big ship, 4 cruisers and 11 destroyers, the North Carolina proved her worth to the fleet, and earned her second star Aug. 23-25, 1942.

In this action the mighty battleship threw up such a barrage of anti-aircraft fire that the carrier Enterprise inquired of her: "Are you afire?" As the smoke settled, the battleship's verified score was seven enemy planes, many probable and assists. The Japanese were all but stripped of carrier support and broke off the fight even though their surface forces were largely intact.

The North Carolina's 10 other stars for engagements in the Pacific were earned in this order: Third star: Gilbert Islands operation Nov. 19-Dec. 8, 1942.

Fourth star: Marshall Islands Operation, Occupation of Kwajalein and Majuro Atoll, Jan. 29-Feb. 8, 1943.

Fifth star: Truk attack, Feb. 16-17, 1944; Marianas attack, Feb. 21-22; Palau, Yap, Ulithi, Woleai raid, March 30-April 1; Truk, Saipan, Ponape raid, April 29-May 1.

Sixth star: Western New Guinea operations, Hollandia operation, April 21-24, 1944.

Seventh star: Marianas operation, capture and occupation of Saipan June 11-24 and Battle of Philippines Sea, June 19-20.

Eighth star: Leyte Operation, Luzon attacks Nov. 13-14, Nov. 19-25; Dec. 14-16, 1944.

Ninth star: Luzon attacks Jan. 6-7, 1945; Formosa attacks Jan. 9, 15, 21; China coast attacks Jan. 12, 16; Nansai Shoto attack Jan. 22, 1945.

Tenth star: Assault and occupation of Iwo Jima Feb. 15 to March 1, 1945. Fifth-Third fleet raids against Honshu and the Nansai Shoto, Feb. 15, 16, 25, and March 1.

Eleventh star: Fifth-Third Fleet raids in support of the Okinawa Gunto operation March 17 to April 27, 1945.

Twelfth star: Third Fleet operations against Japan July 10 to Aug. 15, 1945.

While patrolling and scouting for enemy surface craft after the action in the eastern Solomons, the North Carolina caught an enemy submarine's torpedo in her bow and suffered an 80-foot hole. She sealed off the flooded compartments to overcome the list and retired to Pearl Harbor under her own power for repairs. These were completed Dec. 7, 1942, and she was back on patrol duty in late December.

In March, 1943, she returned to Pearl Harbor to go into dry dock. At this time her fighting edge was sharpened with the installation of new and better gunnery, fire control and radar gear. By mid-April she was back at Noumea for two months of patrol before launching the New Georgia campaign.

On May 14, 1944, she had to retire to Pearl Harbor for rudder repair. In 10 days she was on her return trip to Majuro.

Shaft trouble in July sent her first to Pearl Harbor and then to Bremerton, Wash., for her first major overhaul since she had left the United States 25 months earlier.

Two months in Bremerton, with leave for the crew, gave the ship and crew new life. She was ready to fight again and steamed off for her next action.

Then came the typhoons, the worst enemy of the fleet at the time.

In the South China sea area the Third Fleet including the North Carolina was assigned to strike bases while the Sea Bees were setting up bases and air facilities on Luzon. On Jan. 12 this strike cost the enemy 41 ships and 112 planes, plus damage to docks, oil storage and airfields.

On Feb. 10, 1945, the North Carolina steamed with the famed 5th Fleet enroute for air strikes against shipping and shore installations on and near the Japanese home islands. Four hundred enemy planes and an assembly plant were destroyed Feb. 16. The next day the planes penetrated farther over Tokyo Bay and struck at Tokyo, to destroy 104 planes.

The North Carolina pulled into position Feb. 19 for the bloodiest campaign of the war. The "showboat" poured hot steel into the enemy installations on Iwo Jima to support Marines moving ashore. This was one of the greatest bombardments in naval history; the entire ammunition supply in magazines was depleted in four days.

The North Carolina then participated in the "good measure" raid on Tokyo and Hachija Jima before returning to Ulithi's fleet anchorage March 1. She swung at anchor until March 14 after replenishing her fuel and ammunition supplies, then took off with a carrier force for Okinawa.

On March 24 she joined other battleships to bombard the southeastern coast of Okinawa in a diversionary move.

While shelling the beaches to support the Marine troop movements on April 7, the North Carolina received a shell hit. Three men were killed and 44 wounded. In spite of the damage, she continued her shelling. Her tour of duty off Okinawa came to an end April 30 after 46 days in the midst of Japanese kamikaze attacks. Ten U. S. ships were hit by suicide planes in sight of the North Carolina.

The weary battleship and crew welcomed the sight of Diamond Head Point at Pearl Harbor May 9, 1945, after seven months of continuous operations. There she put in for repairs and general overhaul.

fast Third Fleet at Eniwetok. On June 28, the proud ship was ready for rendezvous with the fast 3rd fleet at Eniwetok. On July 8 this force set out to conduct air strikes and bombardments of the Japanese home islands in the pre-invasion softening up. The North Carolina, in company with the Wisconsin, Missouri and Alabama, bombarded the Hitachi industrial area 65 miles from Tokyo.

By July 30 the Japanese fleet had been almost annihilated and shore installations had been damaged severely.

On Aug. 15, 1945, came the news everybody had been awaiting. Orders were received to cease all offensive operations. Planes in the air were recalled before reaching their targets. As the planes returned and jettisoned their bomb loads, Capt. B. H. Hanlon, the commanding officer, addressed the crew. It was indeed a proud ship which had borne her crew from war into peace.

On Sept. 5, the North Carolina, in company with several other battleships, four cruisers and four destroyers, steamed into and anchored in Tokyo Bay. The next day she started for home by way of Okinawa where passengers were taken aboard. Then began the longest and happiest voyage of her career, the trip to Atlantic waters and home. On Oct. 17, the showboat entered the Boston inner harbor amid whistles and sirens.

The North Carolina had steamed 307,000 miles and entered 26 different ports. She was credited with 24 enemy planes. She sent one merchantman to Davy Jones' locker. On nine different occasions she bombarded Japanese strongholds. Although damaged twice in battle, only nine men aboard her were killed.

Relation Of Profits To Prices, Wages Raised

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—Profits—how big they should be, how they should be divided, their relation to prices and to wages—are rising to the top of the day's news.

The auto and steel industries are in the forefront, but all companies are involved by implication. And the argument may get angry.

That's because almost everyone has his own idea about profits. Labor thinks profits shouldn't rise unless wages do too, and first. And if profits do rise, more and more unions are wanting to share in them.

Management thinks profits should rise from present generally low margins in relation to sales. It says it needs higher profits to finance greater business activity it sees just ahead. Stockholders agree, only they mostly want higher profits to mean bigger dividends.

The consumer looks on rising profits with a questioning eye, often wondering if the increase means that he paid too high a price for the company's products.

And the government ever so often takes a stand on profits, by indirection. The stand changes from time to time, now seeming to favor labor's view that rising wages needn't hamstring management, now seeming to favor management's view that higher wages would mean profits would disappear altogether. And sometimes the government backs the consumer, whose eye is on what higher wages or higher profits mean in terms of prices.

At the moment government spokesmen are coming out against higher prices, although many in the steel industry, for one example, say increases are necessary to protect profits when labor costs rise next month.

The government has another stake in profits. If they rise that means a greater return for the Treasury from corporate income tax collections. And the Treasury will need higher receipts in the months ahead as government spending increases.

Corporate profits before taxes, according to the Department of Commerce, came to $43.1 billion in 1955, and to $45.1 billion last year. The five-year gain was 4.6 per cent. The low point was $37.2 billion in 1958 and the highpoint $46.4 billion in 1957.

While corporate profits were gaining by 4.6 per cent in the five years, total compensation of employees rose by 31.2 per cent, advancing each year. Employees got $223.9 billion in 1955 and $293.7 billion in 1960.

Those are the figures management cites when it protests that it must maintain or expand profits if it is to provide the new plant, machinery and jobs that the goals of economic growth demand.

Goulart Begins Organizing New Brazilian Government

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ
BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Vice President Joao Goulart began talks today with a wide range of political leaders to organize a new government for Brazil. Some were reported urging a coalition regime to give a voice to all parties. Although the date for his inauguration as a figurehead president was not yet fixed, Goulart landed Tuesday night at Brazil's modern capital in the interior after his personal safety had been assured and military chiefs dropped their active opposition.

Bethel Zoning Action Discussed

BETHEL—Most of the Bethel Town Board's September meeting last night was devoted to discussion of the process and procedure to follow in zoning a town, with explanation presented by Jim Burgess of the N.C. League of Municipalities.

However, Mayor of Bethel Joe Butterworth stated that the Town Board has made no decision regarding zoning. He said members were "taking under advisement" the information that Burgess presented. "The board has decided to wait and think it over," he said. Bethel has never had a zoning ordinance, he said. The matter, which has been mentioned at board meetings before, probably will be brought up at the October meeting.

In other business, payment of town bills was approved. Members welcomed Mrs. C. M. Burton, registrar, back to her job following illness. Mrs. Herbert Brown had served as her substitute.

Goulart, assailed by military leaders as a dangerous leftist, is to take over the position but not the power relinquished by Janio Quadros, who resigned as president Aug. 25.

Quadros' resignation caught Goulart on his way home from a visit to Communist China, and the heads of the army, navy and air force said they would not let him return to the presidency. Civilian troops and civilians in south Brazil and the rest of the nation's armed forces, but the military chiefs gave way after congress transferred most of the presidential powers to a premier responsible to congress.

Goulart's major function as president will be to pick the premier, who then must be approved by Congress. Arriving from Porto Alegre, capital of his home state of Rio Grande do Sul in the south, Goulart praised the new parliamentary system. "I think it will calm people and pave the way for the establishment of an ideal regime," he told newsmen.

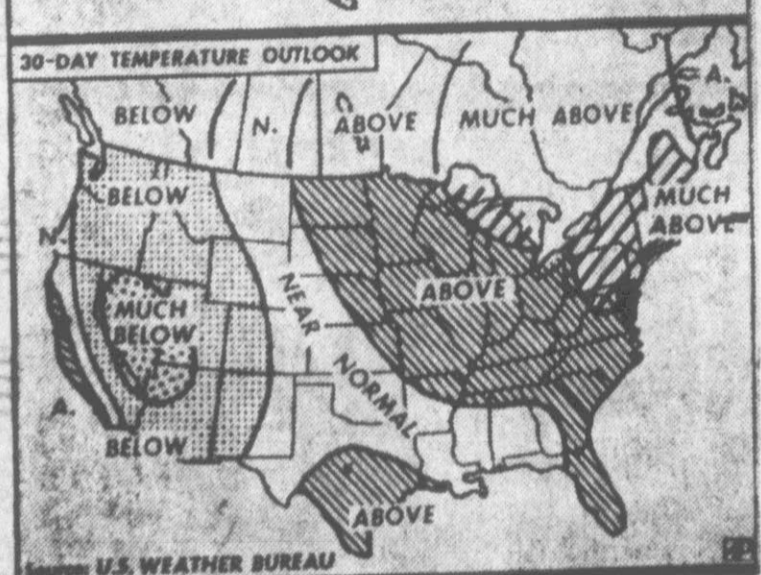

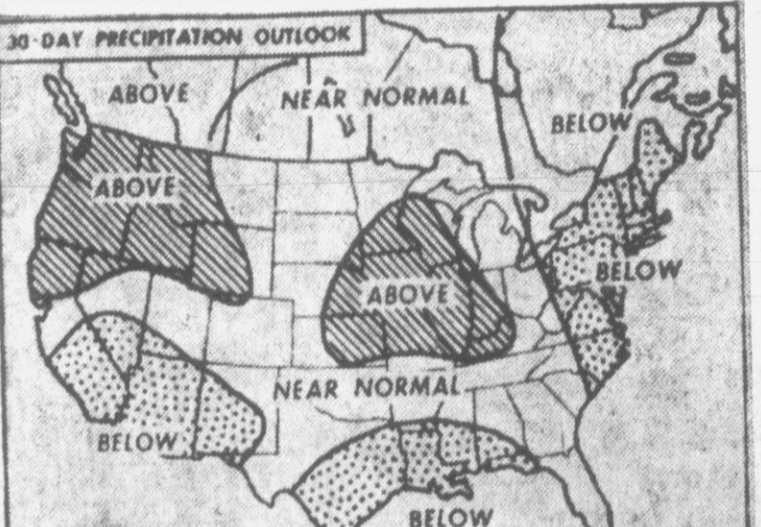

After a warm welcome at the airport from almost every civilian dignitary in the capital—the military leaders had quietly left town—Goulart drove to a farm he owns 36 miles from Brasilia.

He was accompanied by Ranieri Mazzilli, president of the Chamber of Deputies and interim president of Brazil since Quadros' resignation, and Senate President Auro Moura Andrade.

In quick succession he also saw Ernani Amaral Peixoto, chief of the Social Democrats, the largest party in Congress; Gov. Mauro Borges Teixeira of Goias State, where civilian militia had been forming around the capital district to support Goulart, and former President Juscelino Kubitschek, under whom Goulart had also served as vice president.

Social Democrat sources said Peixoto urged Goulart to shape up a coalition government taking in all shades of political opinion. But Goulart said he would confer with leaders of his own Labor party today before making any commitments.

DRIVE GETTING RESULTS
GLORIETA, N. M. (AP) — Southern Baptists have started 12,796 new churches and missions in the last five years as part of a drive to start 30,000 new churches by 1964. C. C. Warren, director of the denomination's "30,000 movements," reported at a meeting here.

Colonialism Phobia Distracts 'Nonaligned'

BELGRADE (AP)—The conference of 25 nonaligned nations ended today with an appeal to the United States and the Soviet Union to halt "war preparations" and start negotiations at once to head off nuclear destruction.

A communique summing up the five-day parley was unanimously approved at a windup meeting that ran until 1 a.m. Besides calling for peace, it dealt chiefly with colonialism and—

1. Declared the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay "affects the sovereignty and integrity of Cuba."
2. Called Algerian rebel claims to French-held Sahara Desert territory "just and necessary" and offered to aid the Algerians in their struggle with France.
3. Demanded immediate evacuation of French armed forces from Tunisian soil.
4. Demanded immediate freedom for Portugal's strife-torn African colony of Angola.

Nothing was said about Soviet dofination of Eastern Europe, Chinese Communist occupation of Tibet or India's refusal to permit a plebiscite in Moslem Kashmir. Indian Prime Minister Nehru left for Moscow today on a visit he had scheduled before the Belgrade conference, but Indian diplomats said their leader would carry to Soviet Premier Khrushchev the conference's appeal that he meet urgently with President Kennedy. Conference sources said earlier that Nehru would also urge Khrushchev to agree to the U.S. British proposal for a moratorium on nuclear weapon tests in the atmosphere.

President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana also left for Moscow to pick up his family, vacationing in the Soviet Union. He was expected to talk to Khrushchev about the conference peace appeal, but Nehru reportedly wanted to keep his own visit a personal mission and did not associate himself with Nkrumah's trip.

Nkrumah was still at the Belgrade airport when Nehru arrived, but in a noticeable display of coolness the two men did not speak. Indonesian President Sukarno and President Modibo Keita of Mali were delegated to deliver the appeal to President Kennedy in Washington Sept. 12.

Never before, said the conference appeal, has the world been threatened with so "ominous a prospect" of conflict, a war that would "inevitably lead to devastation on a scale hitherto unknown, if not to world annihilation."

It called on the United States and the Soviet Union to "resume negotiations for a peaceful settlement of any outstanding differences between them, with due regard for the principle of the United Nations charter, and continue negotiating until both they and the rest of the world achieve total disarmament and enduring peace."

The rest of the communists was appered with compromises reflecting the wide differences of opinion brought out repeatedly in the five days of discussions. A delegate who attended the closed-door final session said there were arguments over nearly every clause.

Cuban President Osvaldo Dorticos managed to get into the record a hands off warning to the United States as well as the rebuke on Guantanamo. The communique said the "right of Cuba, as any other nation, to choose freely its social and political systems should be respected."

Fallout Defense Films Now Available From Library

Two "interesting and informative" films relevant to Civil Defense are now available for viewing by clubs and organizations in Pitt County. The films have been obtained by Sheppard Memorial Library from the state film library at Chapel Hill. Librarian Elizabeth Copeland identified today the films as being produced by the Office of Civil Defense, and their titles, "Fallout—When and How to Protect Yourself," and "Rural Community Defense." The latter was produced in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Registration At ECC Under Way

Registration of students for the fall quarter at East Carolina College kept both students and staff members busy Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. On both days during morning and early afternoon hours the Wright building was crowded with students paying fees, consulting with advisors, and scheduling courses for the winter quarter. Classes are scheduled to begin Thursday, September 7.

The number of students is expected to top by a considerable margin last year's total for the fall quarter of 4,599 men and women. Earlier this week 2,174 freshmen and transfer students, a peak record during a pre-registration period, had completed requirements for admission to the college. No official count of this fall's enrollment will be available for the next several days, Registrar John H. Horne stated.

The Thirty-second Annual Orientation Program for new students at East Carolina has been in progress since September 1 and will be concluded when class work begins Thursday. Otis P. Strother III of Wrightsville Beach, president of the Student Government Association, has headed student activities during the Orientation Program. A large group of upperclassmen who arrived early at the beginning of the term has assisted him in welcoming new students and helping them make initial adjustments to campus life.

plains the danger of the H-bomb as one of the major facts of our time. If war should come, farmers are expected to play a critical role in providing America with life-sustaining food, fibers and shelters. This film tells how the family can meet emergencies and describes needed cooperation of neighbors in developing local action in concert with the over-all community survival plans.

These films have been obtained from the state film library for one week's usage in the Greenville area. Miss Copeland explains that if the demand and interest should require it, one or both of the films might be retained another week. "This is not customary," she says.

"However, if local clubs or organizations wish to book the films for showing at meetings later in the month, it is entirely possible they will be available . . . as long as the bookings are made far enough in advance."

Arraigning 2 In Bank Robbery

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Doris Faye Chandler, 23, of Richmond, Va., and her boy friend, James Everett Smith, 28, formerly of Laurinburg, are scheduled for arraignment in Federal Court at Rockingham next Monday on charges of bank robbery.

The pair is accused in the July 31 robbery of the Gibson branch of the Commercial State Bank. Miss Chandler, whom the FBI said carried out the actual robbery, is the first woman in modern times to be charged with bank robbery in North Carolina.

Miss Chandler and Smith have admitted the robbery in affidavits. Smith, the FBI alleges, waited for the woman in a car on the outskirts of Gibson while she carried out the holdup.

Mrs. Roosevelt Enters Hospital

NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, 76, has entered Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center for a general checkup that should take several days, her secretary says.

The secretary, Miss Maureen Corr, said the former first lady went to her doctor Tuesday morning and he ordered an immediate checkup.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N. C.
Temperatures through Monday will average 2 to 5 degrees above normal in the mountains and near normal elsewhere. Cooler in the east portion during latter part of 5-day period. Rainfall will be above normal and occur as widely scattered showers during first part of period and more general rain during latter half.

Once-Hot San Francisco Stumbles To Another Loss

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Curfew or no curfew, the Giants shoulda stood in bed. After getting the bed-check lifted for one night—allowing a reported $1,950 fine spread over 13 players by Manager Al Dark for curfew violations—once hot San Francisco stumbled to a 10th defeat in 12 games Tuesday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Giants 4-2.

It was the sixth success in eight games for the second-place Dodgers, who stayed within two games of front-running Cincinnati in the National League race, after the Reds beat St. Louis 5-2.

Bob Hunter, Los Angeles Examiner baseball writer, reported that Dark socked 13 of his players, including three veterans, with fines ranging from $250 down to $100. Hunter said Dark then lifted the curfew—normally two hours after a night game on the road—for one night after the Giants lost 4-0 at Los Angeles Monday.

Dark, a devout family man who neither drinks nor smokes, said the $1,950 figure was excessive. He said the fines were slapped on 7 players, not 13, and that it happened 10 days ago in St. Louis.

That's when the Giants, after winning sit straight and recalling memories of their little miracle of 1957, had lost three in a row at St. Louis. That dropped them 6½ games behind.

Then they were third. Now

Even Youngsters Traded Away By Yankees Getting In Record Books

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

That American League is so dominated by the New York Yankees that even youngsters they've traded away are muscling into the record book. While Mickey Mantle belted his 51st home run and New York opened a 7½-game bulge in the pennant chase with a 6-1 breeze against Washington, Lee Thomas, who started the season with the Yankees, tied the major league record with nine hits in a double-header Tuesday night for the Los Angeles Angels.

The rookie outfielder did it with three home runs, one a grand slam; a double and five singles in 11 at bats. It wasn't enough. The Angels lost the two-night pair at Kansas City 7-3 and 13-12.

Second-place Detroit continued a skid out of contention by dropping a 4-1 decision in the completion of Monday's suspended game at Baltimore before the Orioles handed the Tigers their sixth straight loss, 1-0, in the regularly scheduled game.

Chicago and Minnesota played a 3-3 tie in a game called after nine innings because of fog at Minneapolis-St. Paul. Cleveland belted Boston 9-5.

Thomas, 25, was 5-for-5, with a double and four singles in the first game for the Angels. He ran his consecutive hit streak through seven, with a single and home run, before striking out in the fifth inning of the nightcap. He had eight RBI in the second game. He brought the Angels a 9-9 tie with his sixth-inning slam, and put them ahead with a three-run homer in the eighth.

The A's won that second game on Bobby Del Greco's two-run homer in the ninth off Ken McBride (12-12). A five-run second inning, in which Jerry Lumpe, another ex-Yank, hit a three-run homer, wrapped up the opener against Ryne Duren (6-12). Jerry Walker (7-11) and Bob Shaw

(10-12) were the winners. Mantle, after missing two games because of an arm injury, gave the Yanks a 1-1 tie with his second-inning home run off loser Joe McClain (8-16). Elston Howard's 16th homer, in the fifth inning, broke it up and the Yankees then added four more runs, two unearned, in the seventh for their sixth straight success. Right hander Jim Coates (10-5) checked the Senators on four hits as they lost their sixth in a row and 20th of 21.

Mantle stayed even with Babe Ruth's record-60 pace of 1927. Teammate Roger Maris, the major league leader with 53 home runs, was 0-for-4 and now is only four games ahead of Ruth's pace. Maris hasn't had a hit in 15 at bats.

The Orioles wrapped up the carry-over game from Labor Day with just a half-inning of work, then bopped the Tigers again behind the three-hit pitching of Chuck Estrada (12-8) and Steve Barber. Estrada struck out 11, but needed Barber for the final out when Rocky Colavito singled and went to second on an error in the ninth. Barber nailed it by getting Norm Cash on a grounder to first.

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A heavier bat and a lighter swing are responsible for catapulting Mickey Mantle back in the home run race for Babe Ruth's celebrated 60. The New York Yankees' No. 1 glamor boy—Roger Maris is still No. 2 despite his edge in homers—in a dramatic return to the lineup Tuesday night, hammered the first pitch served to him by Washington's Joe McClain for a tremendous home run. It was Mickey's 51st of the season, putting him even with Ruth's record pace of 1927.

Maris, the other half of the slugging twins, again went hitless and his homer total remained at 53. He is now only four games ahead of the Bambino's pace.

In three other times at bat Mickey flied deep to left, singled and drew his 110th walk of the season to help the Yankees defeat the Senators 6-1. The Yankees' sixth straight triumph, coupled with Detroit's 4-1 and 1-0 defeats in Baltimore, widened their first-place lead over the Tigers to 7½ games.

Although Maris leads by two homers, the guess here is that if Ruth's record is to be broken, Mantle will do it. Despite a pulled muscle of the left arm, suffered last Saturday, Mickey is as hot as the weather while Maris is as cold as an ice cube.

Tuesday night's homer was Mantle's fifth in his last six games, not including a ninth-inning appearance last Sunday. Maris has gone hitless in his last 15 times at bat. In his last 20 games, Maris is batting .137 although he has hit five home runs.

Mantle's appearance in the lineup was a surprise even to Ralph Houk, the Yankee manager.

"I didn't think he (Mantle) would play," said Houk. "The reports I received were that he'd be out for several days. I know his arm was real sore Monday. He couldn't swing a bat at all. That fellow sure heals quickly."

"Normally, I use a 33 or 34-ounce bat," Mantle said. "But after I hurt the arm, I found that the pain became more severe when I missed a swing. So last Sunday, I borrowed Bob Cerv's 36-ounce bat, the heaviest on the club. I was forced to swing easier because I couldn't get it around as quick."

Mantle smashed two home runs with Cerv's bat Sunday and decided to use it again. "I'm going to stick with Bob's bat until I stop hitting, even after the arm is fully healed."

Maris, oddly enough, was not overly depressed by his latest batting slump.

"That's Maris," he declared. "One week, I'm going great, the next week I'm horsefeathers."

Desperate U.S. Tennis Brass Find New Hope

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)—Donald Dell, a tall, methodical Yale graduate from Bethesda, Md., loomed today as the newest hope for the desperate United States Davis Cup brass.

Dell, 23, who plans to enter the University of Virginia Law School in two weeks if he doesn't hear the call from Davis Cup Capt. David Freed, crushed Frank Froehling of Coral Gables, Fla., the No. 6 seed, in the third round of the National Championships Tuesday, 11-9, 10-8, 6-1.

"I'm available," said Dell. "But I've got to know whether I'm being considered before I enter school at the end of the month. If they want me, I'll put off going to school."

Froehling, 19, a fellow with a big service, created something of a sensation during the summer circuit when he reached the final in both the South Orange, N. M., and Merion, Pa., tournaments. He was being hailed as a coming great.

"I hung back behind the baseline," said Dell, of his match with Froehling. "and took his service there. I didn't try to hit it back hard because that would be too risky. I just tried to keep it in play. "He is very bad on the back hand and he is too tall to get to balls at his feet. He beat a lot of guys this summer on his service."

Dell wasn't bragging. He is a pretty good analyst of the game. He had studied Froehling's weaknesses and practiced his own service a half hour before his match.

Mike Sangster, No. 4, of Britain, and Bob Mark, No. 5, of Australia, were the only other two seeded players to get into action Tuesday. Sangster downed Kingman B. Lambert of Charlottesville, Va., 6-3, 7-9, 6-2, 6-4, and Mark turned back Ronald W. Fisher of Houston, Tex., 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

Chris Crawford, a big blond from Piedmont, Calif., and Crawford Henry of Atlanta, both unseeded but tournament dark horses, advanced to the fourth round. Crawford toppled Adrian Bey of Rhodesia, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3, and Henry eliminated Bob Bedard, Canadian Davis cupper, 5-7, 11-13, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2.

Patterson Could Benefit From Change In Rules

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—Heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson would be the immediate beneficiary of a proposed change in the National Boxing Association's title defense rules.

Paul Sullivan, chairman of the NBA World Championships Committee, Tuesday proposed modification of the rules even while saying Patterson "hasn't lived up to his responsibilities as champion."

Under present NBA rules Patterson could be stripped of his title for failing to defend it by Sept. 13. Patterson has not met any acceptable challenger since he regained the title from Ingemar Johansson last March 13.

The rule states that a champion must meet one of the six top ranked challengers within six months.

Practice Briefs

East Carolina

The East Carolina football team saw about 45 minutes of scrimmage yesterday afternoon with most of the boys looking good according to Cecil Heath, sports promotion director at the college.

Some of the most outstanding players in yesterday's scrimmage were quarterbacks Cary Parker and Vince Eidjke. Fullback Nick Hilgert of Elizabeth City and halfback Tommy Matthews of Hertford also played excellent ball Heath said. Other outstanding players were Pete Thorell and Tom Michell.

The freshman ball players, who have been involved with orientation so far, were on the field on their own yesterday for light conditioning work. However, they will not appear in pads for the next couple of days according to Heath.

The Pirate squad will begin one-a-day practice sessions today as the college year gets into full swing with registration today and classes beginning tomorrow.

The only injury in Tuesday's scrimmage was a broken nose for Ricky Jarrell. Heath said he thought the injury occurred when Jarrell was hit on the nose with Dick Richardson, 206½, England, 10.

Azalea Tourney Plans Ironed Out

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)—The Wilmington Athletic Association has ironed out final details for the 1961 Azalea Golf Tournament, which will be held here next March 29-April 1.

The four-day, 72-hole medal play tournament will carry a $20,000 purse next year—the largest in its 14-year history.

J. B. (Bunny) Hines, president of the WAA, announced Tuesday that he had wired Tom Crain, legal advisor of the Professional Golfers Association, approval of the tournament's dates and purse.

Fabulous Summer For Art Thieves; 78 Works Stolen

By BERNARD GAVZER
NEW YORK (AP)—It's been a grand summer for art thieves. In all, 76 important works have been stolen in the United States, France and England, with a market value of at least $5 million. Does this mean the underworld has gone aesthetic?

"If professional thieves are involved, they're after one thing—money," says Huntington T. Block, vice president of the McLaughlin Company of Washington, D.C., a brokerage firm specializing in fine art insurance. "These works are too well known to be offered to a reputable dealer or collector, so the probability is that ransom would be sought."

Ransom figured in the latest theft to flabbergast the art world, the snatching of a Goya portrait of the Duke of Wellington from London's famed National Gallery. "The set is an attempt to pick the pockets of those who love art more than charity," a ransom note with Robin Hood overtones said. It asked $392,000—the amount paid by the gallery and a foundation to an American collector.

Insurance companies dislike talk of ransom.

"I have never run into a situation where a member company of this organization dealt covertly with art thieves or fences rather than pay the appraised value of stolen paintings," said Brendan P. Battle of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, which is a sort of special detective agency for more than 200 stock insurance companies.

But an agent for Austrian insurers of eight Cezanne paintings stolen last month from the Vendome Pavilion at Aix-en-Provence, France—market value $2 million—has declared: "We want those paintings back and we're willing to pay—no questions asked."

Possible payoff: $300,000 or about one-fourth of the insurance coverage.

Millionaire collector G. David Thompson, whose house in the South Hills section of Pittsburgh suburbs was looted of six Picassos, two Legers, a Dufy and a Miro—estimated value $365,000—twice that amount—late in July, has offered $100,000—no questions asked.

One possible market would be among greedy collectors.

"I can think of collectors," says a top museum official who has been with several leading museums and galleries, "who would knowingly purchase stolen works. They are like misers. They would be satisfied to hide a painting and then gloat over it all alone."

While there is substantial feeling the Cezanne paintings were taken by professional thieves, there is equally strong suspicion that another $2-million theft in France was the work of thrill seekers. In July, 37 works by Matisse, Utrillo, Dufy and other moderns were stolen from an exhibit at St. Tropez. The reasoning is that professionals would have known the paintings were not insured and that there would be no way to enter what is called "delicate negotiations"—that is, a deal.

Vandals sometimes get involved. In 1968, the Columbus, Ga., Museum of Arts and Crafts was raided by vandals who built a bonfire of 165 pieces of work.

A third group of potential art malefactors includes screwballs motivated by political passions, or who hate the things others love, or who become obsessed in weird ways. The priceless Mona Lisa was taken from the Louvre Aug. 21, 1911 by Vincenzo Peruggia, an Italian mason. He gave up two years later and explained he took the picture because he wanted to return to Italy what Napoleon had stolen. Napoleon did grab Italian treasures, but not the Mona Lisa. It went back to the Louvre.

More than 2,000 years ago, Galus Verres, a Roman magistrate who became governor of Sicily set a course record for crooked collecting. What he didn't confiscate, he got by blackmail. Cicero prosecuted him, seeking an indemnity of $25 million for thefts in Sicily alone.

Another grand collector of sorts Nazi Hermann Goering, got most of his masterpieces through plunder though occasionally he paid for a painting. There was poetic justice in the fact that a Vermeer canvas he bought from a Dutch painter, Hans van Meegeren, turned out to be one of Van Meegeren's expert forgeries.

Promotions Announced At East Carolina College

Six promotions of faculty members have been announced by the Department of Art at East Carolina College.

Francis Lee Neel has been promoted from assistant professor to associate professor. Mr. Neel is the oldest ranking member of the department in point of service. In September, he begins his 14th year in the Department of Art.

Mr. Neel has, for the past four years, been in charge of the program in textile design and weaving which has been developed at the college. His major responsibilities are in the field of art education.

Mr. Neel received his baccalaureate and Master's degrees from the University of Missouri. Prior to coming to East Carolina College, he was associated with the public schools in New York.

M. T. Gordley, head of the painting program at East Carolina College, has been promoted to the rank of associate professor. Mr. Gordley has been associated with the Department of Art for the past two years. Before coming to East Carolina College, he was associated with the public schools of St. Louis, Missouri.

Mr. Gordley holds the B.F.A. from Washington University, St. Louis, and the M.F.A. from the University of Oklahoma. In addition to this he has a year's study on the doctorate at Ohio State University. Mr. Gordley has a reputation as an exhibiting painter. This past year he exhibited at the N.C. State Art Gallery in Raleigh, and in North Dakota, Tennessee, Virginia and Illinois.

Also promoted to the rank of associate professor is Wesley Crawley, who is in charge of the sculpture program in the Department of Art. Mr. Crawley has had a long association with the public schools of the state of Oregon and came to the Department of Art from the University of Oregon where he taught sculpture in the School of Fine Arts. He received his A.B. and M.S. from the University of Oregon.

Mr. Crawley has exhibited widely on the West Coast, and during his stay at East Carolina College at the N.C. State Art Gallery in Raleigh and with the East Carolina Art Society in Greenville. His work "The Black Thing" created a stir on the campus a year ago when it was exhibited for a month in front of the Rawl Building.

Dr. Leon Jacobson, in charge of the art history program at East Carolina College, is promoted to the rank of associate professor. Dr. Jacobson received his A.B. from the State College of New York, and his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Southern California.

He came to the Art Department from the public schools in the southern California area. He has previously taught in the public schools in New York City; San Diego and Los Angeles, California; and at Woman's College, Greensboro and Compton College in Compton, California.

Dr. Jacobson has distinguished himself as a writer and a producer in art. His studio area is basically graphic arts with a major interest in serigraphy.

Two promotions to the rank of assistant professor are also announced. Donald R. Sexauer is promoted from the rank of instructor. He has the B.S. degree from the Edinboro State College and the M.A. degree from Kent State University. During the coming year, Mr. Sexauer takes over the graphic arts program of the Department of Art.

He has been an exhibiting painter and lithographer since his association with East Carolina College. Prior to coming to East Carolina College, he was associated with the public schools of Paynesville, Ohio.

Also promoted from the rank of instructor is Thomas E. Mims. Mr. Mims did both his B.S. and M.A. work in the Department of Art at East Carolina College. He has a major interest in Art History and has taught appreciation and studio classes in the department. Mr. Mims has exhibited his paintings and sculpture locally and in Virginia.

He was the first graduate assistant employed in the department and was one of the first two candidates to be awarded the Master of Arts degree in the department. He is the only native Tar Heel on the staff.

Science Affirms Old Army Truth

WASHINGTON (AP)—Army scientists, solemnly investigating the effects of sleeplessness, have discovered what many GIs long have known—that a loss of sack time makes a wreck of a man.

Making public results of the study, the Army said scientists at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research learned that:

"Under prolonged sleep loss the nervous system begins to behave something like a motor in need of a tuneup. It alternatively misfires, runs normally for a while, and falters again.

"These misfirings include lapses in attention and fleeting visual illusions which make floors seem to tilt at a dangerous angle or roll like a wave."

BURNWOOD MEN

CHAPTER 22

Tam Barrie felt himself hesitating. The tempting thought came—Dove Demarest had made her bed. Let her lie in it. I owe these half-savage people nothing. Why should I put my head into the lion's mouth for a mere matter of principle?

Then he knew it would not do. There were more than forms of ritual in the making of a man. At home, form and ritual might serve. Out here, in the Whoop-Up, the measure of a man cannot be skimped. And with a strange insight, it came to Tam that he was merging his own objectives with those of the Metis, that their wrongs had suddenly become very real and grave to him. Now this gay, brave people was embarking on a course of deadly danger. He felt that he must do whatever he could to prevent disaster from reaching them.

"I'll go," Tam said simply.

"Good! But play it cautious, you two. Don't go asking too many questions; work with Sophie, Tam. She'll likely have the answers for you," Colly Devoe said.

"May luck be with you," Gabriel Valter said. "We must stop this supply of arms. For LaCroix said the first object of Strike was to kill all of the Mounted Police. LaCroix is not afraid; he says we will have the upper hand before we can suffer reprisals. But I am afraid—me, Gabriel Valter—for the Queen will never forgive such a deed. And the arm of the Queen is long, m'sieu's. There will be no limit to the forces she will send in to revenge her men in scarlet tunics, if Strike has them murdered."

"Right you are, Gabriel," Colly said. "Wish some of your people felt the same way."

"A few good, serious men do think that way," Valter said. "Enough to ride with us against the arms shipment, when we have learned by what way it comes. And I think many of the Metis, deep in their hearts, are not anxious to do murder, whether it is called a revolt or insurrection or rebellion."

Colly put a hand on the shoulder of Tam and his daughter Stephanie. "As Gabriel said, luck be with you. And keep out of the hands of that devil Strike. He would pay anything to get hold of either of you."

Dove Demarest had not seen or talked to Pierre LaCroix. Her husband had explained to the Metis governor that Dove was ailing, which was true enough, but it also served Strike as an excuse to keep Dove from blurring out anything about his plans.

Dove was too ill to eat supper, nor did the scowls of her husband make her feel any better. She undressed and went to bed before the long twilight had gone. Though the narrow canvas cot was uncomfortable, Dove fell into a fitful doze, finally dropping off into sleep.

She wakened to a silver of light around the canvas partition. She heard a low hum of voices, and raised up on an elbow.

"...the whole country will be up," she heard Cleo Strike say. "We'll stick to the back roads, and turn north on the old smuggling trail across the Marias. It'll be safe enough. We'll come through night after next."

Chance Flagg's deep voice asked a question. Dove, unable to make out the words, stealthily put one bare foot, then the other, to the cool boards. Shivering in her thin nightgown, she tiptoed over to the partition. She bent her head close to the canvas, crouching low.

"You're the only other man who knows this, Flagg," Cleo Strike was saying. "I've told the Metis, and this gang of range rats I'm paying good money to, that the arms are ready in a cache not far away. Heaven knows what they'd do if they knew they were on a stinking little freight boat between Carroll and Benton."

"Why've you waited so long to deliver them?" Flagg asked.

"Hell, Chance, men who run guns have just one cash—on the barrel head. And with that fool of a Barrie around, I didn't draw bank funds for payment. Since I got rid of him, I have been able to draw out cash for the guns."

"They must be costing you a pretty penny."

"My dear major, guns on this frontier are literally worth their weight in gold. But with an empire at stake, who will stop to count the cost? This opportunity will never come again. I will not miss it. Mark my word, Flagg, they'll remember the name of Cleo Strike in the Northwest, in the world, for a long time."

Strike's voice had an intensity that was fanatical. Dove, shocked and faint at the knowledge of Tam Barrie's death, choked back a sob.

"I believe you," Chance Flagg said. "Was there a touch of irony in his tone? 'How many men will we take to guard it?'"

"Not you, Flagg. Since you are the only person I trust, you will stay here. I'll ride south at dawn with twenty men, men I have chosen myself. God help you, Flagg, if you betray my trust."

"I have few virtues," Flagg said drily. "One of them is that though I can be bought, I stay bought. I suppose your wife stays here?"

There was a trenchant pause. Strike asked flatly, "What is that to you?"

"Nothing. Except, mister, this is a damned wild and ugly place for a young girl, one raised in luxury. You ought to send her back to Benton, to safety."

Strike said in a cold voice: "Flagg, I bought you because you are the kind of villainous and unprincipled rascal that I needed for my desperate enterprise. But I do not now, nor will I in the future, require your interference in my personal affairs. My wife, Dove, is a pretty little featherhead, and I'm breaking her to my ways. But I'm still not sure she knows how to keep her mouth closed. And, Flagg, she is virtuous—she'd damned well better be. So don't go trying any gambits along those lines."

"Strike, you insult your wife. She's a damned charming woman, and I like her. She's a deal smarter than you think. So let me give you just one piece of unwanted advice—don't ever let her hear about a pretty little Cree girl named Maria Easy Walker."

Strike ripped out an oath. "Where the hell did you get that? Are you trying to blackmail me?"

"Don't be asinine, Strike. Half the country knows you married that Indian girl at the point of a rifle and that it was legal and has never been dissolved. Just keep it from your wife. She must not be hurt by it."

Dove turned Flagg's words over in her mind, trying to comprehend them. He had said... Then the import of it struck her with the harshness of a blow. The shock was almost physical. She staggered back to the cot, dizzy and sick. So this was the man she loved, this was the gay cavalier of the prairie, this was the prize she had worked on so hard to snatch from under the noses of her rivals in Philadelphia! This man, all the while, had been married to an Indian girl.

Lying there, feeling recurrent waves of illness, Dove had to meet the facts head-on. She tested her own bitter logic, and knew it must be true. Cleo Strike would ever do what he wanted, take what he wanted. If it furthered his own ambition, he was like a machine driving toward a distant goal, a merciless juggernaut. She had been in his path and been crushed. She lay still, face buried in the pillow, crying silently.

She did not know how long the two men talked. She did hear them when they left the tent, with the lantern still burning. A desperate resolve shook Dove. She arose from the cot and went to her small trunk. Dizzily she searched out her riding habit, and, with little regard to appearance, managed to struggle into it. She wrapped a wool mantle around her shoulders and forced her feet into riding boots. Moving as quietly as she could, she went to the rear door of the tent. Her hand was on the knob when the door was thrust open, forcing her back. Her hand went to her mouth. Cleo Strike came in.

Can Strike be a worse villain than he has already shown himself to be? Yes! Continue the novel tomorrow.

Most arms and ammunition obtained from Europe by the American colonists during the Revolution were shipped through the Dutch West India Island of St.

Co-Author Book On Visual Aids

Jane F. White of Central Washington State College and Thadys J. Dewar of the East Carolina College School of Business are authors of "200 Ideas for Visual Teaching," a book for teachers which is slated for release this month by J. Weston Welch, Publisher, of Portland, Maine.

According to the preface, the work "attempts to bring together some of the best work in this field (visual aids), as now practiced by leading teachers in various parts of the country. . . each of the ideas presented. . . is accompanied by a picture, showing the idea exactly as its author carried it out in his own classroom."

The authors gathered the material included in the book from a wide variety of classrooms and schools. About sixty subjects, from driver education to chemistry and from Latin to wood working are covered. A 246-page volume, the book deals with the display and exhibit type of visual aids.

Miss White and Mrs. Dewar are the authors of a previously published work for teachers, "Successful Devices in Teaching Clerical Practice."

Dr. Kenneth Bing To Be Included In Who's Who

Dr. Kenneth L. Bing, director of the department of industrial arts at East Carolina College, has been chosen by the editorial board of "Who's Who in America" for inclusion in the next edition of the nationally known publication.

Dr. Bing joined the East Carolina faculty in 1949 and has acted as director of the department of industrial arts since that time. Under his leadership the department has grown in number of students and in its equipment and course offerings and is performing a valuable service to North Carolina education through its training program for industrial arts teachers.

A native of Mount Vernon, Iowa, he holds degrees from Nebraska Wesleyan University, the University of Minnesota, and the University of Missouri, where he received the doctorate in education.

Un Official In Congo Said Dead

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United Nations has received word of the death of Brig. Joseph E. Michel of Ghana, recently appointed chief of staff of U.N. operations in the Congo.

Michel was killed in a plane crash in Ghana Sunday. He had been appointed to the U.N. post only last week.

Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld sent a note of sympathy to Ghana President Kwame Nkrumah.

CHICAGO (AP)—Traffic accidents during the long Labor Day weekend killed 386 persons, 34 below preholiday estimates, and the death rate was a record low for the holiday period. The National Safety Council, which had estimated the death toll of 420, said some 16,000 persons suffered injuries during the 78-hour holiday period from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday. Based on deaths per 100 million miles of travel, it was the safest Labor Day holiday on record with 6.6 deaths in traffic. The old record was 8.1 set in 1954. The traffic death toll compared with 415 for the Labor Day holiday last year and the record of 461 in 1951. Women were forbidden by law to practice medicine and pharmacy in 17th Century England.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market was up sharply in moderate trading early this afternoon as the United Auto Workers extended the deadline for a strike against General Motors.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up 1.40 at 255.90 with industrials up 2.80, rails off .10 and utilities up .50.

Motors and steels paced the advance of key stocks which went from fractions to about 2 points.

Auto and steel shares rebounded from sharp losses Tuesday when hope dwindled that the strike set for 10 a. m. today could be averted.

Coppers, chemicals and electrical equipments followed along in the advance.

Electronics were mixed, oils were a bit higher and rubbers and drugs were irregular.

Ford and Chrysler, advancing around 2 apiece, touched new highs. General Motors gained about a point while American Motors and Studebaker-Packard made fractional gains.

Boeing was up more than 2. Republic Aviation and Douglas Aircraft were up about a point each. IBM also touched a new high as it spurted 8 points or so.

Among the casualties were Beckman Instruments, down around 3 points, and Litton Industries, off a point.

Lukens Steel recovered Tuesday's 2-point loss. U. S. Steel and Jones & Laughlin rebounded more than a point apiece.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 5.59 at 724.31.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange moved generally higher in moderate trading.

Corporate and U. S. government bonds were mixed.

May Apply

All those interested in substitute teaching in the Greenville city schools have been asked to put in application with Mrs. Ellen Carroll, director of instruction, in her office at the city schools building on Fifth Street.

Those interested may apply between 9 and 10:30 a. m. any morning within the next week or two, Mrs. Carroll announced. Prospective substitute teachers need to take their Social Security numbers.

Board Approves Bridge Motion

AYDEN—Town Manager Cleveland Paylor reported yesterday that members of the Ayden Town Board have approved a resolution requesting the State Highway Commission to approve construction of a Roanoke River community bridge.

The resolution was approved in idea form at the board's meeting last month. The bridge has several purposes, among them "to develop the natural resources and the agricultural and economic and industrial life of eastern North Carolina and especially the Roanoke River basin areas in Bertie and Martin Counties."

The resolution requests the State Highway Commission "to approve and construct a bridge across the Roanoke River between Williamston and the Scotland Neck-Rich square Highway and a primary highway across the new bridge to extend N.C. Highway 11 north from the general areas of Bethel and Hamilton and Oak City to the traffic arteries coming South from the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel at Norfolk, Va. with the exact location of the bridge to be determined by the Highway Commission Engineers.

Complete Work On Storm Sewer

GRIFTON—Utilities Superintendent Luther Lewis reported yesterday that workmen had completed work on a storm sewer on Pitt Street here last week.

Lewis said the new storm sewer was of 15-inch pipe, and the original storm sewer on the street had been enlarged from six-inch to 12-inch pipe.

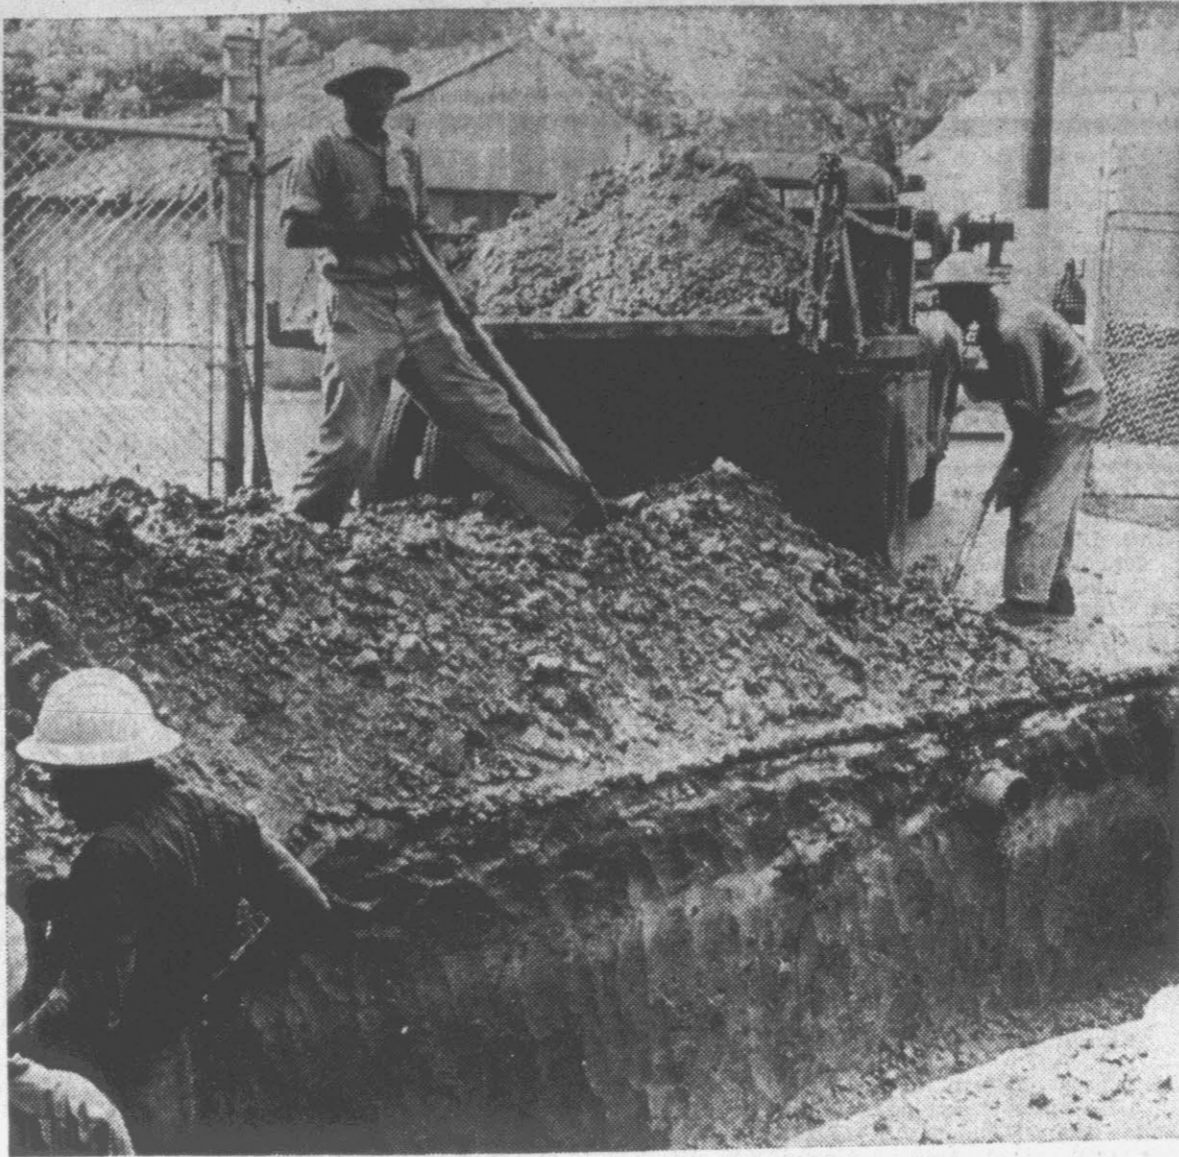

The original six-inch storm sewer was unable to adequately drain water from the streets following heavy rains.

The Town Board authorized the work sometime ago. Similar work on DuPont Street had already been completed, Lewis said.

GRIFTON LODGE HOLDING STATED COMMUNICATION

GRIFTON—Grifton Masonic Lodge No. 243 will hold a stated communication Wednesday at 7 p. m. at the lodge.

The Grifton Scottish Rite Club will hold a short meeting immediately after the lodge meeting.

INSTALLATION OF UNDERGROUND STORAGE TANK . . . was being completed in Ayden this week. Workmen in the above picture are digging for installation of a second of two tanks, the first of which was installed last week. Gasoline for town vehicles will be stored here and can be bought at a savings for the town, providing for more economical management, Town Manager Cleveland Paylor stated. (Reflector Staff Photo.)

Four Collisions Are Reported For City

Heaviest damage in four collisions reported yesterday by police resulted when a vehicle struck a utility pole on Fifth St. near the intersection of Elizabeth.

The Norfolk car collided with a vehicle driven by Thomas Hattan Langley, 39, of Route 1, Greenville, causing an estimated $300 damage to the Langley vehicle.

Damage to the Norfolk auto was placed at $200. No injuries were reported.

Sixty dollars damage resulted when two trucks collided on Atlantic Ave. near the intersection of Dickinson Ave. about 4:05 p. m., officers said.

They reported a vehicle driven by William Buck of 2704 Edward St. struck a truck, parked on Atlantic Ave., by William Dennis Harrell of 1011 Grove St., Wilton, causing an estimated $50 damage to the parked vehicle.

An estimated $10 damage was done to a canvas cover on the Buck vehicle, officers said.

No charges were made.

An estimated $20 damage was caused to a car driven by Charlie C. Powers, 44, of 2402 Jefferson Drive, when it was involved in a collision on 10th St. about 8:12 a. m.

The driver of the second vehicle was identified as Tommy Haddock, 46, of Route 2, Greenville. No damage was done to the Haddock car, investigators noted.

Neal Funeral Plans Not Yet Complete

Johnnie Neal, 27, of near Greenville was instantly killed early Tuesday morning in an automobile accident near Falkland. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

He is survived by a brother, Elbert Neal of Tarboro, and two sisters, Mrs. Jasper Dail of Belhaven and Mrs. Martha Joyner of Wilson.

Credit Women's Breakfast Club Elects Officers

Miss Joyce Paramore was elected president of the Credit Women's Breakfast Club at the monthly meeting held last night.

Other officers elected for 1961-62 are: first vice president, Mrs. Peggy Sawyer; second vice president, Mrs. Martha Mills; recording secretary, Mrs. Polly Dail; and treasurer, Mrs. Sallie Broughton.

Board members for the new year include: Miss Ellen Maske; Mrs. Louise Carrigan; Mrs. Wilma Garis, all for one year terms; and Mrs. Mildred Porter and Mrs. Emma Schmidt, for two years.

New sponsors were also elected.

Plans were discussed for Bosses' Night that will be held in early October. Installation of the new officers will be held during the latter part of next month.

Soybeans are one of the world's most versatile crops. A new fire-fighting material is a foam made from soybeans.

Ayden Club Plays Host To District Rotary Governor

AYDEN—Making an official visit to the Ayden Rotary Club, District Governor William T. Ralph of Belhaven discussed the four avenues of service of the club.

He compared each service as being the pillar of a structure, stating that if any one showed weakness, it could cause the Rotary program to become unbalanced.

Ralph called attention, also to the fact that Herbert Taylor, author of the four-way test of Rotary, will visit the Kinston club soon and urged as many members as possible to attend that meeting.

"The Rotarian" magazine, published by Rotary, was brought into discussion by Ralph who said it was 50 years old and had a subscription of 450,000. He estimated that over a million people read the magazine each month. It is a much quoted and copied magazine, he said.

Reviewing projects for clubs, Ralph said it is better for a club to do one little thing than to "dream" about many large things.

He also called attention to the annual district conference to be held in Fayetteville March 25-29 and to the institute to be held in November at a date to be announced.

Speaking directly to the Ayden club, he commended members on their achievements and made special comment on the fact that all the chairmen and subchairmen had submitted written reports which gave the club 100 per cent achievement on that project.

President Gwynn Merritt presided at the meeting. Visitors were Alton Johnson of Greenville and Hilliard Kinlaw of Chadbourne.
