

"Dixieland" Contributed To Parade Theme

THE BASIN STREET SWINGING PIRATES . . . was one of the many colorful floats in today's ECC Homecoming Parade.

Parade Kicks Off Big Homecoming

A colorful procession of East Carolina College celebrants—arrayed in the style of the Civil War South—took an oversized U-turn through the heart of Greenville this morning, kicking off the college's annual Homecoming Day program.

The 30-minute parade—approximately bisected by three Greenville fire trucks that raced to the scene of a burning float—loured two blocks of the city's business district as Greenville, college alumni and campus visitors lined the streets four-deep in the 77-degree weather.

The float fire, ignited by an exploding firecracker, brought a brief interruption in the long Confederate entourage as firemen rushed to the corner of Fifth and Billmore Streets to find a smoldering wire cage. Students on the float—entered in the parade by Theta Chi fraternity—were uninjured as the flames made short work of the float's tissue paper shell.

Some 20 floats, outnumbered 2-1 by ECC coeds riding shiny convertibles, conveyed the college's 1961 homecoming theme, "Dixie Days." Among the entries were traditional Southern plantation scenes, a student representing Elon College undergoing the South-born tar-and-feather routine and replicas of the Confederate iron-clad gunboat "Merrimac" followed in hot pursuit by the "Monitor."

Miss Jean C. Lasater of Sanford, ECC senior, sponsored by the college's chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha, reigned as Homecoming Queen. In succeeding Miss Eleanor Speckman of Jacksonville, Miss Lasater officially presided over the events of the day. She was selected from 41 entries by popular vote from sponsors of campus organizations participating in homecoming festivities.

ECC's 100-piece band, the Marching Pirates, added the musical note to the homecoming theme, bearing its rendition of "Dixie"

JEAN C. LASATER, senior at East Carolina College, is 1961 Homecoming Queen at East Carolina College. Selected by popular vote among sponsors of campus organizations participating in the Homecoming Day Parade, Miss Lasater represented the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity. An honor roll student, the Queen is majoring in primary education at the college. She is a member of the Chi Omega Sorority and the Association for Childhood Education, and is secretary of Fleming Hall for Women on the campus. She has served also as representative of East Carolina College at the Azalea Festival in Wilmington. Miss Lasater is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lasater of Sanford.

KU KLUX KLAN AT WORK . . . The KKK (from East Carolina College) was at work in this morning's parade "tarring and feathering" an Elon "Christian".

Soviet Fires Its 18th Nuclear Blast In Series

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Soviet Union has fired its 18th nuclear explosion in the atmosphere since the Russians' current test series began Sept. 1.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission said the test device was detonated early Friday in the vicinity of Novaya Zemlya. The AEC's statement on the explosion, coming hours after Paris and Tokyo had reported it, said the blast had a yield of several megatons. A megaton is equivalent to the energy released by a million tons of TNT.

The U.S. agency has attributed yields of several megatons to at least four previous Soviet tests, including one three days ago. French government detection services, first to report the explosion, called it the biggest yet.

All Increasing Except Ireland

PARIS (AP)—The combined population of Western Europe and the United States will show an increase of about 1 per cent between 1956 and 1976, the Organization for European Economic Cooperation reported today.

Every country will show an increase except Ireland, whose annual emigration of about 24,000 a year will keep the population in the range of 2.9 million, the report said.

U.S. And Soviet Still Far Apart On Berlin Solution

WASHINGTON (AP)—Despite a two-hour conference between President Kennedy and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, the United States and the Soviet Union were reported still far apart today on ways of negotiating a peaceful settlement of the Berlin crisis.

Informed officials here consider the East-West dispute over Berlin still extremely dangerous. At the same time hope persists that a solution short of a military showdown will be found to end the crisis.

Kennedy and the Soviet foreign minister discussed the situation in the Oval Room of the White House late Friday and wound up their talks shortly after 7 o'clock without issuing any kind of formal statement.

As he climbed into his limousine to return to the Soviet Embassy on nearby 16th Street, Gromyko told newsmen the conversation had been "useful". Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who sat in on the discussion, merely called it "interesting."

have told Gromyko in calm but very emphatic terms that the United States and its Western Allies are "fully determined to defend West Berlin against Communist pressures, to preserve their right to maintain troops in the city, and to keep open the supply lines from West Germany."

At one point, referring to Russia's Berlin demands, Kennedy said the Soviet Union is trying to trade the United States "an apple for an orchard." He told Gromyko there would be no deal like that.

Officials said the President meant that the Soviets are asking a lot and offering very little in return; they want to convert West Berlin into a "free city"—that is, free of the protection of Western troops—while offering mainly unexplained "guarantees" of Western access to the city.

Well-informed officials said today that the Kennedy-Gromyko talk was dominated by Berlin but Kennedy did warn of the dangers of conflict in Southeast Asia. The warning is understood to have covered both Laos and South Viet Nam.

Gromyko told reporters that the conversation had touched "several important matters" bearing on U.S.-Soviet relations and added: "Of course, as far as the position of the Soviet government is concerned, we stressed first of all the importance of the question of the peace treaty with Germany."

It appears that the conference at the White House covered much of the same ground that had been covered by Gromyko and Rusk in a series of two meetings in New York in the previous two weeks.

It was understood, moreover, that Gromyko still had not told U.S. leaders what Soviet Premier Khrushchev means exactly when he talks of guaranteeing Western access to West Berlin after he signs a peace treaty with Communist East Germany. Khrushchev has said that the peace treaty will establish East German sovereignty over the supply lines from West Germany and that thereafter the Western powers must negotiate with the East German regime for use of the supply line.

ended the first phase of U.S.-Soviet efforts to lay a basis for future, formal negotiations on a Berlin settlement. So far as this phase is concerned, it obviously ended in failure to arrive at an agreement. However, officials said, it was too early to speak of failure in any broad sense since more "exploratory talks" are expected.

Sales Tax Take Up To Expectation

RALEIGH (AP)—Revenue Commissioner William A. Johnson says sales tax changes enacted by the 1961 legislature are living up to estimates as far as actual collections are concerned.

In a report submitted Friday, Johnson said September sales tax collections totaled $11 million against $7.5 million in the same month last year.

To finance Gov. Sanford's school improvement program, the General Assembly placed the 3 per cent sales tax on food and other items which had been exempt. The changes were effective July 1.

However, Johnson's report to Sanford showed a decline in total tax collections last month as compared to September, 1960. This has resulted from a big drop in income tax collections last month from September, 1960, because of the effects of the pay-as-you-go withholding system.

Income tax collections totaled $11.9 million against $18.8 million in September, 1960.

Johnson said the decrease resulted from the fact that in September, 1960, the state collected about $5 million in quarterly installment payments on 1959 income taxes. Last year the old collection system and the withholding method were in effect simultaneously.

Last month, however, there were no more quarterly receipts because the old system had run its course. The sales tax increase and the income tax decline combined to set total revenues last month at $33.7 million, down $1 million from September, 1960.

General fund collections totaled $25.9 million, down $2 million. Highway fund receipts totaled $9.8 million against $9.7 in September, 1960.

A slight gain in total collections was noted for the first three months of the fiscal year. The breakdown: Total collections, $108.2 million against $106 million for same period last year.

General fund, $78.6 million against $74 million for same period last year. Highway fund, $29.6 million against $28.6 million for same period last year.

Bloxam Disputes Claim He Misled Council On Budget

Former City Manager Leonard Bloxam today disputed claims that he had misled councilmen concerning bond issue and budget items.

"The debt service when the budget was turned over to the new manager and Council included interest and principal without using monies paid in from the street assessment program," he declared.

Councilman M. W. Aldridge had said that monies collected from the street assessment program would have to go to pay off the bonded indebtedness.

Thus, Aldridge contended, there is no revolving fund as originally planned to carry on the street work.

Bloxam said no one had been misled with regard to the manner in which any of the bond issue programs had been set up.

"It is not my intention to take issue with Dr. Aldridge who I cherish as one of my best friends and always will, regardless of how we may agree or disagree.

"I do think it is fair that the citizens know the manner in which this program came about. First the program, was set up by the council and not the manager; this being a policy matter; therefore the manager could do no more than suggest methods by which these improvements could be made.

"Second, I was instructed as city manager to meet with Mr. Easterling of the Local Government Commission and outline the accepted program for his approval.

"The files, minutes and bond attorneys records indicate that the issue was established with this procedure in mind. The idea of a revolving fund for street improvements is not original to Greenville, Leonard Bloxam or the Local Government Commission but has been set up in many towns throughout the country on a similar basis.

"This program entailed the following steps which should have been clear to all concerned and, not having had any authority since the first of June, I cannot be sure of the manner in which the program is being carried out.

"Basically there was $343,000 set up for street improvements which I never led anyone to believe would improve all the streets the first year.

"The figure was arrived at by estimates made by the city engineer for certain basic streets—Elm St. and others—with the idea that as much as possible would be accomplished the first go-around. The next step was to emphasize to those people in front of whose houses such improvements had been made the importance of paying cash or bringing in street assessments promptly to continue this program.

More Tobacco To Stabilization

RALEIGH (AP)—The tobacco marketing season, which soared off to a record-breaking start, has developed trouble signs lately.

There has been a downward trend in prices and upward in receipts by the Flue-Cured Stabilization Corp. under the loan program.

Horace D. Godfrey, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said, "We are disturbed about the situation."

He added, "We do not feel there is any justifiable reason for the increased take by Stabilization."

The Stabilization Corporation receives tobacco which fails to bring the support price on the auction floors.

He said, "We do not feel there is any justifiable reason for the increased take by Stabilization."

The general manager of the Flue-Cured Stabilization Corp. L. Weeks, said loan receipts from the 1961 crop hit around the 50 million pound mark during Friday's sales.

"In other words if a $343,000 program were completed in the 1961-62 budget then the monies which came back from this program would be set up in a revolving fund which in turn should net, with Powell Bill money, sufficient money in the 1962-63 budget for another program.

"The city debt service would continue as had been the practice of the city in past years and none of this money from streets assessments would go into amortization of bonded indebtedness."

Here, Bloxam said the tentative budget he presented included debt service funds for interest and principal without using street assessment funds.

"At the time that the new manager took over, he and the governing body were advised by me that I would be happy to review with them at any time any phase of this program, the methods under which it would be accomplished and the procedures for handling this and other affairs as related to the city.

"It has been indeed a relief to have not been consulted on the problems—but not at the expense of Leonard Bloxam."

The former city manager charged, "There have been items purchased not budgeted in the bond program because of improper review of these matters."

He reminded that he served as city manager for five years "successfully administering the affairs of the city including one bond issue, the bulk of which covered drainage."

"That should be an indication that the administrative affairs had progressed satisfactorily."

Old Almanac Predicts A Winter To Remember

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP)—Squirrels will wear mink coats, rabbits will wrap up in beaver stoles, and human beings had best simply find a cozy corner and park there for the winter's duration.

On that lugubrious chord John Baer's 1962 agricultural almanac makes its bow today.

In all the 137 years history of this famed Pennsylvania Dutch standby, few weather forecasts have been more numbing.

Shivering at their own sagacity, the publishers say: "We can no longer call a spade a spade. We're not to call it a snowshovel, and, brother, will it ever get a workout this winter."

If Americans, particularly in East and Midwest, thought last winter was tough, they'd better beware of what's coming, says the almanac, for "old-fashioned winter will set new styles in snow cold and blows this season."

Trouble with all this, however, is that you have to separate the grim from the gay. Baer's, like most people who swear by it, has a playful side carby, extravagant, expensive Old-time is solemnly oracular, the next it is off on an outrageous spoof.

For example it would have you believe this winter will match one of old that was so cold a candle flame froze solid on a Pennsylvania Dutchman's kitchen table. What did he do? He threw the flame now an icicle, into the woods. Next day, the yarn goes, the flame thawed, setting the shed afire.

Before the reader can laugh off that one, Baer's is at him again, this time with an up-to-the-minute tip on what to do if he lives in a ranch-style house or drives a low-slung car—rig up tall flagpoles for easier spotting in the predicted snowdrifts.

Charles Henderson, dean of student affairs, said the two students were about average in their studies and their records did not "indicate anything except that both were fine boys."

Only Thursday, Robert S. Mauldin, 33, of Bessemer city, N.C., a dental school laboratory photographer and former graduate student, was found dead under similar but apparently unrelated circumstances. Cannady had ruled Mauldin's death due to natural causes and no autopsy was performed.

Death Ruled Due To Malnutrition

Investigators said a six-month-old Negro baby, found dead by his mother yesterday morning, died of malnutrition.

Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey reported that the child, Timothy Tatt, was found dead by his mother, Quinnie Tatt, of 709 Fleming St., in his bed, about 9:20 a.m.

Police reports on the death said the child had been a patient at Pitt Memorial Hospital for some time suffering from whooping cough, and noted that the child had been born prematurely.

Authorities Hope Autopsy To Clear Up Deaths Of 2 Students

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Authorities are depending on results of an autopsy to clear up the mystery deaths of two University of North Carolina students in the dormitory room they shared.

"We can't give any diagnosis until the autopsy is complete," acting Coroner George Cannady said Friday night.

Cannady said it probably would be two or three days before the autopsy report is ready on the bodies of William Henry Harrison Johnson, Jr., 24, and James Michael Barham, 21.

The bodies, in their beds and dressed in night clothes, were found Friday by a janitor who went to their room to investigate when they failed to appear for their jobs at the university dining hall.

Johnson, from Statesville, was a graduate student in industrial relations. Barham, a junior, was from Burlington.

The postmortem was ordered after a coroner's jury ruled that the young men had died "by unknown causes." Superficial examinations, authorities said, disclosed no evidence of foul play.

"Everything hinges on the autopsy report," said Police Chief W. D. Blake. "We have nothing to go on as of now."

Cannady said one of the dead youths, whom he did not identify, had foam on his mouth, and there were also reports one of the

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH
The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

This is the best bubble he has ever blown, big and shiny and full of rainbow lights that shimmer gaily as he blows... and blows... and blows... Inevitably, there will come the moment when he will blow too hard and the bubble will burst. And then what was a thing of bewitching beauty will have vanished into air. Some of the brightest-appearing things in life are no more stable than bubbles. They can shatter in an instant. But there are values that endure... the kind of values we learn in Church. The Church can help us achieve something solid and real, and the faith it teaches us is in no danger of disappearing today... tomorrow... or ever.

One Marriage Ruined, Another Survives Alcoholic Addiction

This is the third of five reports on alcoholism and marriage. Miss Reef has been the only reporter permitted to examine case histories and researchers' conclusions in a new study by the National Council on Alcoholism.

By BETTY REEF
Women's News Service

NEW YORK—(WNS)—Few women fully realize before marriage that the man whose wife they've decided to share is either an incipient or full-fledged drunk.

This fact emerges from a new study of wives of problem drinkers and conflicts with the popular notion that women drive men to drink in order to make them dependent, or choose weak-willed inebriates they can dominate.

Case histories were gathered among more than 250 women married to current or former alcoholics. Still only partly analyzed, these show that passivity and dependence are not what these women really sought in a man. They believed the drinking was the temporary kind which love would overcome. They had no realization that it was compulsive.

"How can they recognize it?" asked Dr. Margaret Bailey, who heads this research. "They share general public ignorance of the symptoms. The man who swallows four or five cocktails every evening before dinner is not an alcoholic until his drinking interferes with normal living."

Take the case of Eve and Harry, a couple in their fifties with a 20-year-old son and 25 years of gradually embittering experience. Harry is a lawyer with a practice now, a hopeless drunk who sacrificed income, profession, and family to his addiction.

Eve knew him for a year before they married.

"He wasn't an alcoholic then," she said, in a low voice tinged with despair. "He was a fine young man, ambitious, hard working, intelligent. And he was awfully good to his mother, so I knew he'd be the same to his wife.

"He drank only on weekends. Compared to others, it seemed a little heavy, but it didn't affect his behavior."

In other words, Harry was the kind of guy who could "hold his liquor."

The bottle didn't show up as a problem until he became an Army officer in World War II, when he regularly imbibed more than he could handle. While overseas he was hospitalized with delirium tremens.

"Tension," said Eve. "He'll stop all that when the war's over."

But he did not. He brought his addiction home with him, and year by year it interfered more seriously with his home life and his work.

He was often so drunk or hung over that he could not keep appointments with clients or appear in court. With his wife and son, he was in a semistarvation half the time.

Eve threatened to leave unless he got his drinking under control, and in the classic pattern of remorse, he promised to quit. He couldn't keep the promise.

By the 24th year of this marriage, Harry was on a constant binge. Eve consulted a doctor about what to do, got no practical help. Finally she consulted a lawyer about separation.

This couple is divorced now, with Eve a lonely, puzzled divorcee, and Harry a semi-dependent, contented couple. Their physical relationship had always been good.

"Why couldn't I find a way to help him turn back from this drive toward self-destruction?" Eve asks herself. "All I wanted out of life was a happy marriage. We had it. Then the whole thing gradually dissolved in alcohol."

The case of Enid and Jim illustrates how many difficult, wis-key-soaked years a woman will endure to save a marriage and help a man to sobriety. Enid is 40 and Jim 45. They have two sons of grade-school age. She is now an active member of an Al-Anon Family Group, partly out of gratitude for the fact that her husband has been sober for three years, and her family, not long ago at the edge of despair, is today united and happy.

Jim was a confirmed alcoholic before he ever met Enid. She had seen him drink daily and pass out completely more than once, but she reasoned that he needed solace for the breakup of his first marriage. Parents and friends warned her against marrying Jim. She wouldn't listen.

She explained to the researcher: "He appealed to the mother instinct in me. I was sure my love could make up to him for his previous misery."

Hardly a healthy start for matrimony, say the marriage counselors and psychoanalysts, and the next nine years seemed to bear this out. Jim's drinking kept them nearly broke. His boozing behavior—either bellicose or moody—cut them off from friends. He began to get into brawls at local bars. After a few beatings, he confined his drinking to home.

Between the fourth and ninth year of their marriage, he lost four jobs. Enid went to work to support their two small children.

Yet he was never violent at home and never unfaithful to her, she said. Their marital relations, satisfactory at first, deteriorated because of his drunkenness. "I think alcohol decreased his potency. Besides, I couldn't stand the smell of him as more and more often he reeked of whiskey."

After years of trying to excuse Jim's drinking on the basis of his rough past, Enid left him. It took an action of this disruptive force to change Jim. He had leaned on his wife as long as she allowed it, soaking up sympathy as well as alcohol.

Her leaving catapulted him into Alcoholics Anonymous, and in a few months he was completely off the bottle.

Since the joyous day when this family got back together again, Enid has not taken a drink. For an alcoholic even one drink means the end of hard-won sobriety.

"I joined Al-Anon to help other families," Enid confided. "Instead I found new understanding of myself and Jim. I began to see alcoholism for what it is—a sickness which is partly physical and which causes severe personality changes."

"For the first time since I married, I could stop blaming myself for somehow falling him," she said.

An open house will be held Monday afternoon from 4:30 to 5:30 at the Pitt County Home. The occasion will be to celebrate the opening of a beauty parlor at the Home for its women residents.

The open house will be given by the Pilot Club of Greenville and representatives of the Eastern Carolina Cosmetologist Association in Greenville. Mrs. Hattie Flippen and Mrs. Julia Harris, beauty operators, have been instrumental in planning and helping to sponsor this project. Some of the equipment and work has been donated by local business concerns in Greenville.

Greenville Beauty operators who are working in conjunction with the local Pilot Club on this project plan to go once a month or more often if needed to give permanents, set and style the women's hair.

Zeta Psi Chapter of Alpha Omicron Pi has had a visit this past week from Mrs. Walter C. Wylander of Stevensville, Md., collegiate director. On Monday evening the chapter introduced Mrs. Wylander to its eight new pledges at a party in the home of Mrs. Pelham Martin on Slay Drive. Wednesday Mrs. Hugh Winslow entertained at a luncheon at the Greenville Golf and Country Club honoring Mrs. Wylander. Other guests were the Chapter Advisers, Mrs. Martin, Dr. Kathleen Stokes, Mrs. E. E. Rawl, Mrs. A. H. VanDyke, and Mrs. Powell Speight.

The chapter, pledges and advisers held a dinner meeting Wednesday evening. Lou Rogers of Greenville is chapter president.

While in Greenville Mrs. Wylander was the houseguest of Mrs. E. E. Rawl at her home on Pitt Street.

Mrs. Elba G. Linck, who is the sister of Mrs. R. V. Keel and mother of Clayton Gray of Greenville was awakened early one morning recently by a racket at her private estate on Mt. Arab Lake, which is in the Adirondack mountains, found herself with the problem of what to do about an unwelcome caller.

A 300-pound black bear had battered a basement door of the palatial Linck summer home and was tearing off a strip of tin when the owner arrived on the scene. Efforts to scare the animal off with shouts failed to impress the early-morning raider, and when he turned his attention to the porch and started working on a window Mrs. Linck made a hasty phone call to the game warden in near-by Tupper, N.Y., but he happened to be away.

An experienced hunter with one bear and numerous deer to her credit, Mrs. Linck solved the problem of what to do about the hungry visitor with three slugs from a gun, which dropped him in his tracks on the porch.

Mrs. Linck, who has homes in New York and Florida, was born and raised in Pitt County near Stokes.

Next weekend when the Fifth annual state-wide North Carolina Rescue Squad meets in Greenville, the wives will be entertained at a fashion show Saturday morning at the Greenville Moose Lodge followed by a luncheon. Hosting the events will be wives of the Greenville Rescue Unit.

With Janice Laughter and Ross Clark as co-editors of the Tau, the staff of twenty-two seniors is now making a tentative layout and completing the sales of advertisements for this year's annual.

Mrs. Nelle R. White, English teacher, advises the yearbook in the editorial department. Helping Barbara Brooks and John Lanchance, business managers, is Robert G. Mulder, also an English instructor.

"This year we are giving the senior class as a whole a voice in the production of the yearbook, along with the hard-working staff," stated Janice Laughter.

Janice also commented, "Joe Waldrop and David Mosler, our photographers, have already begun taking feature and candid pictures. Photography is Joe's hobby so we should really have some pictures this year."

Other staff members are these: Sports: Johnny Reynolds, Esther Johnson, Elbert Felton, Dennis Egan.

Features: Peggy Stubbs, Linda Davenport, Joe Gaston Activities: Lena Presser, Tracie Hooper, Shirley Harrell Typists: Janet Whichard, Kay Garris

Class editors: Theresa Wilson, Gigi Guice, Ann Hunt, Judy Thigpen

McDaniel Speaks on Honor Code "Honor is more than an outward show, a code, a convenient attire for special occasions, or words on a paper," stated Mrs. Brandon McDaniel, Christian life worker at East Carolina college, during an assembly sponsored by the student council.

Mrs. McDaniel, who spoke to the student body Friday about the honor code, also commented, "The existence of honor has no importance or meaning except in the lives of those that follow it. You must remember that the most important things in life take more work, dedication, and sacrifice than others."

She pointed out that honesty and integrity are "in" in society and that society needs men that possess these qualities. "Integrity is the basic structure of humanity," Mrs. McDaniel stressed.

Billy Neal James presided at the assembly. Ross Clark and Martha Henderson introduced the speaker and gave the devotional, respectively.

Doris Phillips sold $210.03 of the $4,051.51 total sales of subscriptions to be the highest salesman for the class. Bill Green, Joyce Masten, Anne Buchanan, and Bill Moye were the next highest salesmen with $162.79, $138.44, $135.21, and $130.83, respectively.

In addition to the four top salesmen, six juniors sold over one hundred dollars. These included Donna Whitley, Barbara Minges,

Red Banks H.D. Club Has Meet

Sixteen members were present at the regular meeting of the Red Banks Home Demonstration Club Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Kari Harjee, president, opened the meeting. "Carry Me Back To Old Virginia" was sung by the group. Mrs. Hugh Hardee Jr., vice-president, gave the devotional, the theme being "God," which should have first place in our hearts. She closed with prayer.

Mrs. Sue B. May, home agent, then took charge. She made several important announcements before giving the demonstration, "Spare the Calves." Her discussion was timely and forceful. A booklet was given for effective ways of carrying out this work. Members were urged to take exhibits to the coming fair.

A clean-up day was discussed. Mrs. S. B. Tucker gave the treasurer's report and checked for members who had cancer check-ups during the past year.

The hostesses, Mrs. L. T. Hardee Jr., Mrs. Sam Adams and Mrs. Herman Adams, served refreshments. Mrs. Worth B. Hardee won the door prize. The meeting was adjourned by repeating the Club Collect.

College Trustees, Legislators Among Jenkins Luncheon Guests

Marking the 1961 Homecoming celebration at East Carolina College was a luncheon at the home of President and Mrs. Leo W. Jenkins at 12 o'clock noon today.

Approximately 100 guests including members of the Board of Trustees, members of the N. C. General Assembly, and other friends of the college from Greenville and elsewhere attended the luncheon.

Upon arrival guests were greeted at the entrance door by Dr. and Mrs. Jenkins. In the dining room, a two-course buffet luncheon was served by Mrs. F. D. Duncan and Mrs. Robert L. Holt, faculty wives of East Carolina. A committee composed of ladies of the St. James Methodist Church, with Mrs. P. K. Andresen serving as chairman, assisted with the luncheon.

Large bouquets of white gladioli and chrysanthemums interspersed with feverfew decorated the hallway of the spacious home. Flower arrangements were used throughout the other rooms of the house. One of the featured attractions was the dining room table. Colorful fresh-and-dried fruit, including apples, bananas, grapes, strawberries, and plums, topped with a pineapple made an artistic centerpiece. At each end of the table, a cornucopia of pecans and fall leaves was gracefully arranged.

Music during the entertainment was furnished by Donald Hayes, Charles Stephens, and Donald Tracy, all faculty members of the music department at East Carolina, and Al Smith of Cornellina, a graduate student at the college.

Mrs. May Speaks To Belvoir H.D. Club

The Belvoir H. D. Club met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Peter Brown. "Carry Me Back To Old Virginia" was the demonstration given by Mrs. Sue May, home agent.

A report on education was given by Mrs. Brown.

Mrs. R. F. Clark presided over the business session. The club voted Mrs. Clark as the outstanding club woman of the year.

Plans were made for contributing items to the Bazaar which will be Nov. 16 at a place to be announced later. Achievement day will be Oct. 26.

Mrs. D. M. Hollowell reported having read 12 books throughout the year.

Julia Escolona Is Club Speaker

The Chatham Book Club held its first meeting of the year with Mrs. A. C. Ruffin at her home in Brookgreen.

Members and guests were invited into the dining room, where Mrs. Charles Blair-poured coffee and Mrs. Per Andresen served apple dumplings with hard sauce from the table which was centered with an arrangement of fall flowers and fresh green grapes. Guests helped themselves to nuts and cheese apples.

Miss Julia Escolona of Santiago, Chile presented a program on her native country. She first acquainted her listeners with the political and economic life of Chile, bringing out the historical events which had chartered Chile's course from the time of the Spanish settlement until the present.

Miss Escolona followed her commentary by exhibiting a map and explaining the geography and climate. She pointed out the desert area, mountains, volcanoes, lakes and coastal region. She next showed colored slides of scenes throughout the length and breadth of Chile, most of which had been made by her on trips taken with her father.

A short business meeting followed Mrs. Ruffin, president, called attention to the new yearbooks which were decorated and lettered in silver in honor of the 25th anniversary of the club.

Doris Phillips sold $210.03 of the $4,051.51 total sales of subscriptions to be the highest salesman for the class. Bill Green, Joyce Masten, Anne Buchanan, and Bill Moye were the next highest salesmen with $162.79, $138.44, $135.21, and $130.83, respectively.

In addition to the four top salesmen, six juniors sold over one hundred dollars. These included Donna Whitley, Barbara Minges, these suggestions:

● Shop with speedy dressing in mind. Limit your wardrobe each season to one basic color and several interchangeable ones.
● Betty chose green, beige and black as her colors for fall and winter.
● Limit hats, shoes and gloves to a few which look equally well with each costume.
● Avoid dresses with size zippers, if possible. Purchase bras and foundations that fasten in front. (Betty usually always wears strapless bras and half slips to avoid fumbling with shoulder straps when switching to dresses with plenty of décolletage.)
● Arrange your closets grouping suits and dresses according to color. Place hats harmonious with each group on the shelf above, line up suitable shoes beneath.
● Arrange dresser drawer in units so that each stack contains a slip, bra, panties or girdle and a pair of hosiery. Thus by removing one stack you have all the lingerie you need at one time.
● Arrange jewelry, gloves and handbags together in separate drawers marked according to color.
● Keep garments in good condition. Check hosiery for snags before putting them away. Test shoulder straps on slips and bras. Examine underarm seams, buttons and snaps for potential disasters. Never put anything away without looking it over carefully for soiled spots. Keep shoe heels capped.
● Choose a medium length, simple hair style. It can be changed in appearance with a pin curl here and there, or dressed up quickly

How To Get Dressed In A Hurry

NEW YORK (AP) — Men weary of waiting for the woman in his life while she dresses idealizes the fashion model who can switch costumes in 90 seconds. Yet any woman can be a quick change artist if she is willing to employ the speed techniques models use, claims Betty Stewart, a blond veteran from Texas.

Taking To The Stump

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Writes Dr. O. L. Kelley of Palm Beach, Florida: "I am taking it for granted that you have the courage to read some of the answers to the so-called 'philosophy' you are paid to perpetrate on the American public."

"It would be assumed that information you disseminate through a syndicate would be either checked out by the same syndicate or referred back to you by the local newspapers who distribute this mis-information."

Apparently the Doctor is irate which is, as he must know, bad for his vascular system, his liver and his adrenal gland. What bothers him is that I wrote a piece about a young man who sought to convert me.

It is time that I do a bit of preaching in these columns but no one needs to hear me out. But the minister of the Jehovah's Witness, as many have written me that he is, set forth, on my last visit, to tell me that my forerunners, for many generations, were wrong which I found to be an indignity. Besides I feel that my religion is my private affair and that when I want to be converted to some other kind, I shall do it thoughtfully and considerably, listening to scholars of my choice and not to itinerant ministers who wander the roads imagining themselves to be prototypes of Paul on his way to Damascus.

Dr. Kelley writes me: "If you care to be correctly informed, why don't you seek the source of real truth, the Holy Bible? If you are unable to find this information for yourself, the young man who called on you as a Christian brother and seeking to help you find this information will call again. I expect you will have to ask him, though since your attitude obviously was not a brotherly one..."

Once when I lived in Shanghai, a Seventh Day Adventist missionary fell upon me and complained that I was a licentious and lewd life because I broke the Sabbath (his and mine being Saturday). I heard him out for a while during which time he quoted from Daniel to me.

From my earliest childhood I studied the Bible and by the time I was 13 years old, as is customary among my people, I knew much of the Old Testament and the language in which it was written. I do not know what translation Dr. Kelley uses, but I have read several, finding the Bible a very useful book for the study of a foreign language. Knowing what it is in the original, I can look at the translations which are not altogether exact but, on a whole, are good enough. So I told the Seventh Day Adventist that when he will be able to read Daniel in the original, we shall sit down and have a discussion.

It was a stupid, show-offy kind of reply but I silenced him, for he did not know how much I really knew but he did know how little he knew and he was taking no chances. Similarly, Dr. Kelley, M. D., has an idea of how much of the Bible I have studied, except that I tell him my first teacher in this field, used a stick to teach it and when a mistake was made, we got wacked good and hard as it is a sin, among my people, to mispronounce holy script.

And so even at my advanced age, I can, on occasion, recall a passage in ancient Hebrew and it is most delightful because it reminds me of my childhood and all the marvellous joys of a very religious and even bigoted household.

So when the young minister stepped upon my lawn to tell me how the world is going to hell because of the wickedness of man and the invention of the atom bomb, I could only think of the days of my childhood when we were told that we would go to heaven if we lived according to the Ten Commandments.

I do not gainsay any man's faith but I ask him to leave me alone with mine. If he comes on my lawn and asks me for food, I shall give him what he wants, but when he steps forward to tell me what to believe, I treat him as an invader who has assumed a right which is not his. I shall believe what I choose to believe.

I have lived in many countries, with peoples of many faiths and have long learned that there are many roads to God and that not one of them is paved with gold or with mother of pearl.

Pioneers In Business Still Abound

We seriously question the contention of Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges that, generally speaking, American business today lacks the daring and pioneering spirit it showed in the days of his youth.

To be sure there may be fewer examples of men who have built huge financial empires in a few short years. There may be a smaller percentage of companies which have grown from a small beginning into huge corporations almost overnight. But the number of new businesses which begin each year has grown by leaps and bounds. The venture capital which businessmen, small and large, put on the block of free enterprise each year has grown tremendously.

If one is to evaluate the relative daring and pioneering spirit of business today and that of yesterday, one must measure it in each case by the conditions of the times. Conditions have changed drastically since the time Secretary Hodges started in business. Many problems which confronted business in those days have been overcome today. But conversely, many of the major problems which face business today were non-existent a few decades ago.

The business daring and pioneering spirit is reflected by the man who takes his meager amount of cash and whatever money he can borrow and begins his own business, or expands his small operations into new fields. It is perhaps reflected more in small businesses than by the million dollar corporations which gamble a few millions on promising research programs. And certainly today there are more small businessmen opening new shops, new stores and offering new services than ever before.

The Secretary made his observation in asserting that American business today is not showing the initiative it did in the days of his youth. If that is so, certainly contributing factors can be found in the rate of taxes and other elements which have entered America's pattern in life in recent decades to tend to reduce the incentive for gambling against heavy odds.

Notwithstanding the statement of the Secretary of Commerce, it is our conviction that business daring and pioneering spirit are still much in evidence in American business today. But perhaps from his post as Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Hodges isn't able to see over the huge corporations to the grassroots level of small business where daring and the pioneering spirit not only opens new doors, but keeps open many others that otherwise would have closed.

Solicitors Are Being Called In

By LYNN NISBET

SOLICITORS - Governor Sanford has called a conference of solicitors of county and municipal courts to discuss traffic problems, comparable to the meeting of judges of this type which held a few weeks ago. The session will be in the Hall of the House in the Capitol on October 24. The Governor said he is highly pleased at results of the judges conference. The dividend is not so much specific recommendation or achievement, but in the noticeable improvement in the whole attitude of judges toward their responsibility in traffic violations. He thinks equal good can come from a meeting of the solicitors and better understanding that each court, however small, and every judge and solicitor is an integral part of a total state program.

In some respects the solicitors or prosecuting attorneys in these courts can have more control over the handling and disposition of cases than can the judges. The solicitor has responsibility for selecting the exact charge upon which the defendant will be tried and the vigor with which he will be prosecuted. Inferior court solicitors who are local officers do not have as much authority as superior court solicitors who are State officers, but they have very wide discretion. Governor Sanford answered questions as to whether he would grant immunity to persons involved in the basketball scandals if they turned State evidence by reminding that the Governor has absolutely no power to offer immunity. That is the prerogative of the district solicitor. He clearly indicated, however, that he thinks the granting of immunity should be limited to extreme cases.

PROBATION - Another place where the Governor hopes to get full cooperation from the judiciary is in the matter of more extensive use of probation for the handling of alcoholics. Presently about the only recourse the judges have in sentencing confirmed alcoholics is to send them to prison. Most of them are sick rather than criminal, and the prison confinement offers little aid toward rehabilitation.

The Governor commented at the swearing-in of Charles Cohoon as new director of probation this week that he hopes to use probation to much greater degree than now for rehabilitating alcoholics. Asked if that was not a court matter and if it would not be entirely up to the judges as to whether the defendants were placed on probation, Governor Sanford said of course that is true, but it is up to the executive administration of the probation commission to provide a program which the judges can use. He said several judges had told him they would welcome an arrangement whereby they could put alcoholics, on probation rather than formally commit them to prison. Such a plan will save the State a substantial amount in dollars, but the real "profit" will be in the rehabilitation of men and women whose only crime is inability to resist temptation to drink too much liquor.

CONFLICT - One of the most difficult problems involved in the selection of appointed officials to policy-making positions is embraced in the general term "conflict of interest." Any President or Governor or other government executive with responsibility for appointing administrative assistants or judges naturally wants the most capable man available for the assignment. Usually that means a man who has been successful in the general field of operations involved.

And the danger is imminent that knowledge of the operations might result in bias in favor of his own idea—which had proven successful. Less likely, but quite possible, it might result in undue favoritism to the one company in which the appointee had been interested. Even though he divested himself of ownership of several million dollars of General Motors stock the late Charles Wilson was suspected as long as he served as Secretary of Defense. Sometimes the "conflict of interest" mania is carried to extremes. That appears to be the case in the current attempt to raise question about the integrity of Brooks Peters as a member of the Utilities Commission because he has a son working for Carolina Telephone Company—one of the companies which the Utilities Commission regulates. The son is 37 years old, got the job with the telephone company soon after he graduated from State College and 12 years before his papa was named to the regulating commission. (Papa Peters disposed of some Carolina Telephone stock he owned before taking the oath as a utilities commissioner.) If the conflict of interest gimmick is to be worked to that extent, it will be very difficult to find anybody eligible to serve on any State regulatory board or commission.

SALARIES - When Governor Sanford was asked what he thought about the statement by Dr. Roy Norton, State Health Officer, that his $17,000 salary ought to be raised, the Governor quipped, "I think everybody's salary ought to be raised—including some news reporters." (The newsmen applauded that sentiment.) The Governor further said the budget and personnel folks are studying many cases with a view to adjusting salaries.

Too Early To Assume Clouds Have Passed

For the moment at least, talks between East and West over the Berlin situation have settled to quiet discussion in contrast with the harsh public statements which were issued from both sides a few weeks ago.

The probing by both the United States and the Soviet Union for grounds of negotiating the Berlin crisis appears to have made some progress although there is no concrete assurance yet that there is solid ground for negotiating the question. Talks between Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and Secretary of State Dean Rusk and President Kennedy suggest that the world's two most powerful nations are much closer to negotiations on Berlin than they have been at any time in recent months.

It must also be recognized, however, that discussions in Moscow next week when Gromyko reports to Premier Khrushchev could produce unexpected developments in the move by East and West to settle the Berlin crisis through negotiations. Recent weeks have brought at least implied concessions from both sides with the United States indicating it may be necessary for Germany to be divided for the time being, and the Soviets withdrawing their deadline for the signing of a peace treaty with East Germany.

If there have also been other tentative concessions to come out of the talks during Gromyko's visit to the United States, the first stages of groundwork for a meeting on Berlin between President Kennedy and Khrushchev may have been completed. It is a matter of conjecture, however, whether the responsible officials of each nation is convinced that something constructive can come out of such a meeting.

Faint streaks of brightness are beginning to show around the dark cloud which has hung over Berlin for the past few months. But the turn of future events will determine whether these bright streaks broaden or disappear as quickly as they have appeared. It is far too early to conclude that the East and West are well on their way to successful negotiations that will ease international tension over Berlin.

Fooling Husband Is An Old Game

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) - Everyone knows it is all but impossible today for a husband to fool his wife.

But how about wives fooling husbands?

On the evidence, it's getting easier for them all the time. "No woman can pull the wool over my eyes," brags many a husband. Such men are pitiful examples of self-delusion.

Usually a woman has pulled the wool over their eyes so long as they have become used to it. They have forgotten what a clear view is like.

Civilization ties husbands in knots; it merely gives wives more loose threads to knit to their own purpose.

A man is kept so busy trying to fool his boss he doesn't have the time to fool his wife, and attempts it only in what he regards as emergencies. As a result he usually fails.

But fooling a husband is both a game and a duty to a wife. She regards it as a marital necessity, for she feels if she doesn't keep him fooled she can't keep him happy.

The classic ways by which women fool their husbands are to act dumb and to say one thing to them when they mean something else.

Example of the first way: Husband, going over check stubs: "Here's one you wrote for $150. It looks like it says, 'frammis olescrack.' What in the world was that for?"

Wife, innocently: "Oh, dear, you know I can't read my own handwriting, but I know it was for something terribly important."

Actually, what she did write down was "frammis olescrack." To her it stands for $150 for 10 charm school lessons to lose weight and improve her personality. But she knows that if she told her husband she spent the money for this vital purpose, he'd go through the ceiling—thus creating an unnecessary repair bill.

Example of the second way: "Wife, "Dear, you're looking a bit shabby, and you really can't afford to in your business. Promise me you'll buy yourself a new suit today."

Husband, flattered by her interest in his appearance: "Guess you're right at that. I will."

Here what the wife really meant wasn't, "You look shabby," but "I feel shabby." As soon as he buys one new suit, she'll buy two new dresses.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

THIS NEW AGE

The society amid which we live today is a flur society. Individuals and families move often from place to place. Young people sometimes have to associate themselves with several different social groups before they reach their early twenties. We change jobs frequently today. We change our places of residence. We change our friends and our social groupings.

This means that today we must have a policy which we relentlessly pursue. We are meeting new people, new situations, and being reclassified into different groups all the time. This means that we must have principles upon which we operate, and especially principles upon which we choose our new friends. We shall make a great mistake if we simply take people as they come. There are some ways in which we have to take people as they come, but in the matter of our close friendships we can be, and we need to be, most careful in our discrimination. When you move to a community watch out for the high-rolling crowd, for the wet-party crowd, in business line up with the people who play the game straight. Have as many acquaintances as you can make, but remember that true friendship is very rare. Let your choice of friends be thoughtfully made. Keep your confidence largely to yourself and share it only with those whom you have through considerable experience learned to trust.

By HENRY HOWARD

Early-Morning Look-See

On an early morning tour of Greenville today (which is definitely the exception rather than the rule), we noticed items of unusual interest. While we concede we're perhaps an inexpert witness of early morning going-on in Greenville, we'll venture to say that these items of "unusual interest" are as described that way. That is, they were most likely interesting to most... and they were more than likely unusual. There was what seemed to be the very tail end of all-night bustling activity in various quarters of the city. From several large buildings there had emerged front or rear portions of huge and gaily-decorated "monsters." Well, perhaps not real live monsters, but nevertheless unusual objects for that time of day in Greenville, or anywhere else for that matter. Further, "monster" is hard to find most places and at any hour of the day or night. But, we were saying there were items, not just an item. In addition of the "monsters," or whatever-you-want-to-call-them, some corners of several of these buildings in the city were pretty badly littered with litter-bug material and the like. However, the appearance of the left-overs seemed to indicate that something constructive had taken place here. But, for the third, and probably the feature items that drew notice. These had all possible resemblance to people. At least one thing was confusing, though. They looked young, but then again, somehow, there was an aged appearance, too. This confusing feature, and others, caused this last category of items to draw more than the more-than-usual interest extended the monsters and the litter.

We yielded to the temptation and sidled cautiously to a position near one of these specimens. While most of the conversation was hardly intelligible, we learned generally what this chain of events was all about. The willing subject, with the greatest degree of enthusiasm he could muster, offered a considerably vivid explanation for the monsters, litter and half-young, half-old people.

First of all, he explained, "We're all students over at the college." We nodded (for some unexplained reason). He continued and we listened intently. He described an all-night ordeal required for last-minute preparation of his organization's entry in this morning's East Carolina Homecoming Parade. It had been a long, long night. But the job was now complete... and he was happy.

Perhaps it's a great deal of trouble... all that litter and hard work and tired eyes and other things. On the other hand, it happens only once a year, so may it's worth it.

Jefferson's advice is as pertinent today as it ever was, but the inclination is to ignore it, especially on the part of those who would stifle the voice of those who wish and have a right to be heard. Democrats should do more than worship at the shrine of the Sage of Monticello; they should also be guided by his wisdom, which is as fresh and as applicable today as when he spoke and wrote.

Other Editors Saying... Cliffs Park Record

(Goldsboro News Argus)

Cliffs of Neuse State park is growing in service to Wayne and adjoining counties. Look at this. Attendance at the park this year has increased 7,000 or 7 percent. Attendance at the state parks as a whole has decreased 2 percent.

Cliffs is the only public recreation area for 60 miles around. It is the state park for Wayne, Duplin, Sampson, Johnston, Wilson, Greene, Pitt and Lenoir counties. This region plus fringes of other counties served has a population of more than 300,000.

Not only is Cliffs the only state park in the region, but it is one of the very few public recreation spots in the counties. Fifteen years ago, for instance, a study by the Community Planning department of the University of North Carolina emphasized lack of public parks in Goldsboro. At that time Herman Park with its nine acres was the only one. Since then Stoney Creek Park and Mina Well Park have been opened. These, however, do not maintain Goldsboro's rank as to parks when growth of population is considered.

We had thought that Seymour Johnson families and personnel might account for the increased attendance at Cliffs. But we are told that while these friends do use the park, the lake, the trails, and the picnic grounds; greatest increase comes from permanent residents. East Carolina College faculty members, for instance, make the Cliffs a favorite spot for family and group picnics. As late as last weekend a group of Greenville Girl Scouts camped at Cliffs.

The park is the smallest in area in the entire state system. It totals 351 acres. Acre for acre, its total attendance probably would top all parks. Fort Macon at Morehead maintains its leadership. It is most often visited. All these facts were in the minds of Advisory Committee members when they endorsed the bond vote set for November 7. If the vote carries Cliffs will be allocated $102,000 for land acquisition and other improvements.

Jefferson's advice is as pertinent today as it ever was, but the inclination is to ignore it, especially on the part of those who would stifle the voice of those who wish and have a right to be heard. Democrats should do more than worship at the shrine of the Sage of Monticello; they should also be guided by his wisdom, which is as fresh and as applicable today as when he spoke and wrote.

Some Peeking Into The Future

By ELMER ROESSNER

Dockets of bankruptcy courts are filled with cases of businessmen who did not look ahead. Today's column may not avert failures, but it may help enterprisers to look further into the future. Costlier autos: The 1962 autos will cost, bolt for bolt and gasket for gasket, slightly more than the 1961 models. The increases will be disguised. Some models will be offered at slightly less than comparable 1961 models. Other models will be priced higher, but the buyers will be assured that there is more for their money in the new wagon.

Auto makers are paying higher wages and higher costs for materials. To expect cars to cost less, no matter what salesmen tell you, is madness. SLOW UPTAKE Government spending slow: Federal spending will underwrite a solid boom in industry, but it will be a while in coming. Bureaucrats can't flick a switch to speed spending. They must prepare plans, have them evaluated and revised, draw new plans, ask for bids and so on through canyons of red tape. Some perky government contracts will be awarded in the fourth quarter of this year, but the bulk of the new defense spending will not be allocated until the first half of 1962 - when the boom will be real.

Costlier tinned fish: If you fancy fish, turn to fresh varieties. The prices of canned varieties is rising. It has gone up, salmon, scampi, but never has almost priced itself out of the market. Even the Maine sardine catch was off this year. ANTI-RIGGING LAW No-collusion ban: Administration sentiment is strongly favoring a law to require government bidders to swear that there has been no collusion in setting prices. Many Congressmen feel strongly on the subject and the chances for a new law on this point after Congress resumes are good. Higher aluminum: Cuts in aluminum prices in recent weeks have been strategic. The industry has been hoping to increase sales while steel producers are in a quandary. But the moment steel makers decide to increase prices, aluminum makers will stiffen theirs.

More instalment credit: Official figures indicate a slowing of the rise in consumer instalment credit. It is only temporary. Current figures reflect consumer summer caution. Buying on tick is now increasing and will continue to rise through the Christmas season, setting new high marks at the year-end.

OLD PROMOTER STRIKES FOR FAT SANTAS "I think," said the Old Promoter, as he moseyed in today, "that Max Hess is off his nut!"

"You can't say that about the famous merchandiser of Allentown, Pa.," I protested. "It's treason!" "Sure I can," the old one said. "He's off his nut!" "Hess is telling other members of the National Retail Merchants Association that it is wrong to feature pot-bellied Santa Claus this year. He says Santa should meet President Kennedy's physical fitness program. They should be lean and hardy and approved by doctors and insurance companies."

"He has a point there," I said. "Point, shmoint!" said the ancient. "Lean Santas can sell hardware, but no toys. Lean Santas can't do jolly. Skinny Santas can't do the 'ho, ho, ho!' like I can. In fact, if Max Hess has his way, I won't be able to get a job as Santa this year - and how will I raise the money to buy presents for my grandchildren?" The old one has something there, Max.

TARBORO — A slick working Tarboro eleven handed the Rose High Phantoms their first loss of the season last night 20-7 in a crucial Northeastern Conference contest.

The loss drops the Greenville club to second place in the conference standings and extends to the fourth year the Tiger jinx over the Phantoms.

Excellent Backfield

A backfield combination of quarterback Billy Freuler and fullback Gus Andrews put together some of the finest running and lateral movements the Greenville Club has had to contend with all season.

The Phantoms' defense was too much for the Phantoms. Tarboro took advantage of a 40-yard run by Freuler which put them in position for the first touchdown of the night.

Greenville's only score came in the first quarter when the Phantoms picked up a Tarboro kick on their own 22 and marched downfield with Kroghle Andersen providing the scoring punch off-tackle from five yards out.

Tough Break

During the series of plays the Phantoms got their first tough break when a 45-yard touchdown sprint by Alan McArthur was called back and the Phantoms were assessed a 15-yard clipping penalty.

The Phantoms showed sparks of their highly touted offensive power at other times during the game, but were never able to muster the drive to score again.

A short while later the Phantoms again got within scoring distance on a 48-yard pass from James to McArthur. But on the next play the drive was stopped by the Tigers as they dropped James for a 21-yard loss, just before the first half ended.

First Tarboro Touchdown

The first Tarboro touchdown of the night was set up by a 40 yard run by Freuler to the Greenville 20 yardline. With Gus Andrews and Freuler doing the carrying for the Tigers they pushed to the two yard line and quarterback Freuler went through the left tackle spot for the score. Andrews ran the ball for the extra point.

Shortly afterwards Greenville evened the score when they pushed to the Tarboro five yardline and Andersen went over for the touchdown and also kicked the extra point which tied the game 7-7.

In the early part of the second quarter Tarboro hit paydirt again after marching 60 yards down the field with Fountain going over for the touchdown. On the extra point try Tarboro received three five yard penalties in a row before the Phantoms got through the line throwing Freuler for a loss and stopping the extra point attempt.

Pass Called Back

Greenville then moved the ball for a series of downs, having a 55 yard pass by James to Foley called back on a penalty before they were forced to punt. McArthur booted the ball from the Greenville 29 yardline to the Tarboro 19. The Tigers gained about six yards before Jac Bobbitt punted with McArthur receiving and being stopped on the Greenville 20 yardline. The Phantoms were aided by a 48 yard pass by James to McArthur, but the horn stopped their attack ending the first half.

Opening the second half Greenville kicked off to Tarboro. The Tigers drove right on down with the aid of a lateral from Freuler who was almost on the ground to Fountain which gained 45 yards. Andrews went through the middle of the Greenville line for the touchdown and also ran the extra point making the score 20-7.

Phant Drive Stopped

Greenville pushed the Tigers to their own 27 yardline with its fourth and five yards to go for the first down. McArthur attempted to gain a first down around the right end, but was stopped one yard short and Tarboro took over on their own 18 yardline.

Several times carried the ball for both teams during the game. Brock recovered a Tarboro fumble on the Tigers' 34 yardline. Greenville pushed to the Tarboro 35 yardline before they were stopped after several incomplete passes and an eight yard loss with about a minute left in the game.

Tornadoes Come From Behind For 20-12 Victory Over Williamston

WILLIAMSTON—A pair of pass interceptions by Linwood Rogerson threw a scare into Ayden last night, as the Tornadoes were forced to come from behind to get a 20-12 win over Williamston's Greenwave.

Rogerson, a senior end who had scored all of Williamston's points this season, continued his one-man show, picking off a Tommy Dunn pass in the first stanza on his own 30 yard line. The tall flanker saw daylight ahead, and scampered 70 yards untouched into the Tornado end zone. The extra point place-kick attempt was blocked by Ayden end, Anmitt Gibson and the Greenwave were ahead by a 6-0 score.

Clipping Penalty
Johnny Williams, a sophomore place kicker for Williamston, kicked off after the Greenwave score, and Rudolph Cannon returned the ball to the Ayden 29. A clipping penalty, however, moved the ball back to the 14 yard stripe. The Tornadoes moved the ball to their own 44, but at that point, Williamston's forward wall, led by Frank Carstarphen, Larry Speer, and David Modin, cased the door and forced Ayden into a punting situation.

The Greenwave took over on its own 32, but after three plays, only a net gain of three yards was shown, and another punting situation arose. Bill Sessoms booted the ball to the Ayden 47.

Famous Combination
Then that famous one-two combination of Cannon and William Edwards began to function. In less than ten plays, the Tornadoes were deep within Williamston territory. But once again, the Greenwave line began to show its stinginess, and stopped the Tornadoes on the Williamston 14 yard line.

The locals could not get their feet under them with their backs to the wall, and went into punting formation on their own 14. A high pass from center forced Sessoms to kick short, and the ball went to the Williamston 35, where Cannon returned it six yards to the 23. The Greenwave were penalized 15 yards on the play for clipping, which put the ball to rest right back on the 14 where all the fracas had started.

Dunn to Gibson
On the first play from scrimmage, Dunn faked to Cannon and then passed to Gibson who was a 1 alone in the Williamston end zone. Edwards ran off tackle for the extra point, and the halftime score was 7-6.

Ayden took the second half kickoff and put together its longest sustained drive of the night, a 73 yarder, to lengthen their lead to 13-6. It was the passing arm of Dunn and such-receivers as Cannon and Gibson who were responsible for setting up the score.

The little Tornado field general connected with Cannon for 18 yards and a first down to the 45, then passed to Gibson for 20 more yards to the Williamston 35 yard stripe. After a ten yard loss when Rogerson crashed through from his left end position, Dunn again found Gibson in the open, this time on a 25 yarder to the Greenwave 20. At that point, Edwards swept his left end for the remaining 20 yards for the second Ayden score. The run for the point after touchdown was stopped short of the goal line.

Fight Back
The losers fought right back however, moving to the Ayden 36 behind the passing arm of quarterback Nelson Kerley. On a first down situation from the Tornado 33, however, Kerley's aerial intended for Earl Hoover was picked off by John Bland of Ayden at his own 45. A break was in store for Williamston though, for Rogerson cracked Hoover with a tackle that squirted the pigskin right out of the Tornado's hands and Greenwave fullback Mike Martin fell on the ball at the 50 yard stripe.

But the losers couldn't move the ball an inch, and were forced to punt. The ball rolled dead on the Ayden 27 as the third period came to a close.

Clinching Score
The Tornadoes took the kickoff, and marched 68 yards for the clinching touchdown of the game. Once again, Dunn greased up his passing arm. This time his favorite target was Clem McLawhorn, who snatched one for 27 yards and another for nine yards to put the ball on the Williamston 31.

The Tornadoes were stopped momentarily on the Greenwave 20, but Cannon carried up the middle for a crucial first down on the 16. On the next play, Dunn pitched out to Edwards, who in turn threw to Cannon in the Williamston end zone. Dunn passed to Gibson for the point after touchdown.

Williamston got the ball after the kickoff, and tried a desperation pass from their own 43, but Edwards intercepted on his own 30 and returned the ball to the 41 as the game ended.

Red Devils Take Thriller From Rams By 14-13 Score

The Farmville Red Devils bounced back from a 14-12 defeat at the hands of defending Coastal Conference champions Ayden last week to squeeze by Robersonville last night, 14-13.

All the scoring in the contest came in the second period, as the Red Devils made both of their extra points to provide the winning margin.

Blocked Punt
Ben Monk set up the first Farmville score, blocking David Quinn's punt on the Robersonville 14 yard line. Four plays later, halfback Robin Rouse plunged over from the five yard line. Quarterback Dean Oglesby ran three yards for the all-important extra point.

Robersonville took the kickoff and marched 46 yards to paydirt, with Charlie Cherry, Ram quarterback, scoring on an eight yard run. The try for the extra point was stopped short of the goal line. Farmville bounced right back with a 65 yard drive of their own. Danny Dilda and Rex Hodges, halfback running mates, provided the running attack to set up the score, with the help of the passing arm of Oglesby. The scoring play was an 11 yard pass from Oglesby to Dilda. Hodges ran for the point after touchdown.

Last Score
Robersonville produced the last score of the contest in the closing minutes of the second period on a 36 yard pass from Charlie Forbes to Butch Brown to climax a 61 yard march. Forbes, beginning on his own 39 yard line, did most of the running for the Rams in their last scoring drive. After the scoring pass play, Forbes toted the pigskin for the extra point.

Rams Threaten
In the third stanza, the Rams penetrated deep into Red Devil territory, but the Farmville line held at the three yard line to stop Robersonville.

Farmville threatened once more in the third period, this time moving to the Ram 10 yard line. On fourth down, Dilda attempted a pass, but Brown leaped up and batted the ball into the arms of teammate Eddie Boone on the Ram eight yard stripe to halt the Red Devil threat.

In the final stanza, Robersonville drove to the Farmville 32 yard line, where Forbes' aerial attempt was picked off by Oglesby on his own 32.

The Rams picked up nine first downs to 15 by the Farmville eleven.

Lions Shellack Morehead, 32-0
MOREHEAD CITY—After being upset by Beaufort last Friday night by a score of 16-12, the H. B. Sugg Lions of Coach J. T. Evans returned to the coast to rout Morehead City by a score of 32-0.

The Sugg line made a successful showing after losing their left end, William Holmes, Sammy McKenzie, substituting at fullback, also played an outstanding game. Bobby Jones, Sugg right halfback, carried eight times for 75 yards, McKenzie ten times for 78 yards, and Robert Tyson, 11 times for 105 yards.

Hitting the scoring column for the Lions were Tyson and Jones with one touchdown each, and quarterback Johnny Richardson running for two six pointers. The extra points were scored by McKenzie, Tyson, and Theodore Dupree.

Suggs also scored a safety when tackle James Ross downed a Morehead City halfback in the end zone.

Defensive standouts for the Lions were Willy Ellis, Willy Kenzie, substituting at fullback. Next week the Bulldogs host Holmes, Curtis Johnson, and Joe Harris.

Next week Suggs travels to Henderson to do battle with Henderson Institute.

Eppes Downed By Atkins 14-12

KINSTON — The C. M. Eppes Bulldogs suffered a 16-12 loss to Atkins High last night for their fourth loss of the season with neither team scoring in the first half.

The Atkins eleven moved the ball down to the Eppes two yard line twice during the first half of the contest, but quarterback Willie Blount stopped the powerful home team on both occasions.

In the third quarter, after picking up three first downs, the Atkins quarterback gave the pigskin to a halfback who went over for the touchdown.

The second Atkins touchdown came in the early part of the fourth quarter when the home team quarterback completed a pass to the right end who ran down to the two yard line. A handoff to the halfback was the final blow to the Bulldogs and Atkins led 14-0.

At this point in the fourth quarter there seemed to be no hope for the Bulldogs. The Eppes eleven drove to the 35 yard line and quarterback Blount handed the ball to fullback Marvin Anderson who went over for the first Eppes touchdown. The extra point try was no good.

In the last four minutes of the game Blount, replacing Levon Little at quarterback for the Bulldogs, threw two unsuccessful passes to Alton Harris. On the third try he connected and Harris ran the remaining 20 yards for the touchdown. The extra point try was again no good.

Next week the Bulldogs host Elizabeth City for their homecoming game.

Two Southern Conference Teams Seeking Revenge

en. VMI's Keydets, pursuing a third consecutive crown, had a rugged test against George Washington in the new $22 million D.C. Stadium in Washington, D.C. VMI carried a 2-1 overall record and a 1-0 conference mark into the game. GW is 1-2 overall, 1-1 in the circuit, and is entertaining the ambitions of its own.

Richmond (1-2, 1-1), whose championship hopes were deflated in an 8-6 loss to VMI last weekend, visited The Citadel (1-2, 1-1) in the other conference game today.

Everybody, though, was keeping an eye cocked on the outcome at William and Mary, where a Furman victory would put the Paladins within easy striking distance of a perfect conference season.

After today, Furman has just one more conference test — at The Citadel, where the going could be sticky, on Oct. 21.

The Paladins play fewer conference games (four) than anybody except West Virginia, which plays only three — too few to qualify for the title.

Mounties Battle Rebounding LR

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Appalachian, in a three-way tie with East Carolina and Newberry for the Carolinas Conference football lead, takes on rugged, rebounding Lenoir Rhyne tonight in Charlotte, N.C.

The game will find Lenoir Rhyne for the past six years champions of the old North State (now Carolinas) Conference, trying to snap back from last week's loss to Newberry. It was LR's first conference setback in 20 games. The Apps are 3-0 over-all, and 2-0 in the conference.

Elon was to test East Carolina in a day game at Greenville, N.C., and Catawba is at Western Carolina in a night game in conference play. Outside games find Guilford at Emory and Henry in Virginia and Newberry visits Carson-Newman both tonight.

Undefeated East Carolina will face an Elon team that is 1-1; while Catawba and Western Carolina are both winless in two games and each is 0-1 in conference play.

How Savings Bonds help make bigger graduating classes

Typical of today's mushrooming classes, 700 students take final exams at a leading Midwestern university.

American education and the U.S. Savings Bond Program have worked hand in hand toward accomplishing each other's goals for 20 years.

One of the most important results of this partnership has been the growing numbers of graduates—from colleges, professional, and trade schools—financed by U.S. Savings Bonds.

Many of today's graduates owe their higher learning, and its priceless benefits, to the foresight of their parents who signed up for Savings Bonds on Payroll Savings or the Bond-a-month plan. Here's how it might work for you:

Start soon and stick to it. Begin putting $18.75 a month into Savings Bonds when your youngster is born. When he's 18, you'll have saved $4,000, but you'll own Bonds worth $5,600. You'll be able to get your money with interest whenever you need it. And every dollar you invest will help build a stronger America.

No wonder so many parents plan for their children's future this way. Why not you?

Stamps: Seeds of Thrift
Many of these youngsters began saving for their education through the U.S. Savings Stamp Program, carried on in the Nation's schools through the volunteer efforts of school administrators, teachers, and students themselves.

"Savings Bonds have helped broaden the base of education," says Mr. Ewald Turner, President, National Education Association.

"For twenty years, the Treasury Department has offered schools a program of thrift training, based on the student purchase of United States Savings Stamps and Bonds. Weekly Stamp Days offer students something they can do for their country, and themselves. The program helps build greater personal opportunity in the future and greater national security now. It is rich in educational benefits; I hope it will continue to flourish."

For 20 years America's newspapers have published Savings Bonds ads at no cost to the Government. The Treasury Dept. is grateful to The Advertising Council and this newspaper for their patriotic support.

Whedbee reported that the season average for the 33 day period totaled 51,182,776 pounds and sold at $3,277,297.00 at an average of $64.43.

"The quality offerings steadily declined as more and more immature, non-descript and damaged tobacco appeared upon our warehouse floors," Whedbee said.

Whedbee reported that the feature of the week was the large number of farmers from distant counties, some over 100 miles away, who were selling on the Greenville warehouse floors. "These farmers have never sold here before, but they were pleased with the sales and expect to return with more tobacco this season."

The Duel Left A Saddened Man

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

The other carriage was late. In the clearing on the Dismal Swamp Canal bank at the state line, the small group of men fidgeted around.

they were wondering about the carriage and the man that rode in it. Soon the wait was over. The other carriage, coated with dust from the South Mill's Road, rolled into the clearing.

Two men faced each other across the clearing, the rest falling back into the trees, out of the line of fire. The Two Lawyers What brought the two young Greenville lawyers, Edward Yellowely and Henry Harris to this dueling place?

Greene County? Was it because of hot words exchanged during and after a trial in a Pitt County Court-house? Or was it because of some reason, known only to the men themselves, that broke the long years of friendship and brought them on this Oct. 1, 1847 to shoot it out in the clearing on the Canal bank?

The Belle of Greene County Susan Virginia Streeter, who lived over near Middle Swamp in Greene County, was known for her beauty. She was the only daughter of a planter who had vast holdings and wealth.

The beautiful Susan had many suitors and among them were Edward Yellowely and Henry Harris. Also attentive and in the running, was Peyton Atkinson of Bensboro on the Tar River.

It was at the Atkinson home that something occurred that may have led to what happened in the clearing at the state line. Yellowely and Harris were invited to spend some time here while Susan was a house guest.

The Mirror At Bensboro During the visit, Yellowely came into the hall one night. He glanced up at the huge hall mirror. What he saw got his dander up. For the mirror gave him a good picture of what was going on in the parlor.

From then on things between the two men worsened. Little things began to add up and their friendship curdled.

Pitt County Court Room During a trial, in his opening speech to the jury, Harris criticized Yellowely's management of a case. When his turn came, Yellowely returned Harris's attack, severely criticizing him. When court was over, Harris attacked Yellowely. Before any damage was done physically, friends stopped the fight. However, a greater damage had been done; for Harris challenged Yellowely to a duel. Yellowely accepted at once, but the men were arrested and put under heavy bond for a year.

An uneasy year kept the men at a distance, but when the bond expired, Harris challenged Yellowely again. The challenge was once more accepted and place and date set.

Four Shots Harris and Yellowely faced each other across the clearing. At the signal, Harris fired first. His shot went wild off into the trees, scattering the leaves. Yellowely fired his shot up in the air on purpose and asked Harris for a reconciliation. Harris angrily demanded that the duel go on. He had come there for blood and would have it before he left.

Harris's second shot, also aimed at a distance, took him in the chest. Yellowely, taking no chances, fired true. The shot hit Harris in the forehead, "a little over the right eye."

Seeing Harris fall, Yellowely cried out to his second, Dr. Blow. "Go to him for God's sake for I don't want to kill him." But Dr. Blow, on examining the fallen man, found he was dead. A red handkerchief was placed over the dead man's face. Yellowely and his party got into their carriage and drove off toward Deep Creek, Virginia. Here, they were arrested but later released after a trial at the local inn.

The body of Harris was brought to Deep Creek and placed in a coffin bought at a local wheelwright.

Later Years Susan Streeter married Peyton Atkinson of Bensboro, thus ending the hopes of others that had come "a courtin'."

Edward Yellowely fought through the Civil War and returned to Greenville to live a prosperous, successful life. Yet, the thread of sadness woven into it by the duel on the canal bank never unraveled. For it is said he was a sad man, even until the day he died.

At Asheville on Wednesday, Sept. 23, 1885, Col. Edward C. Yellowely, lawyer, planter, soldier, and still a bachelor, died. He died eight days short of the thirty-eight years that would have passed since the four shots had rung out in the fall tinted woods along the Dismal Swamp Canal Bank.

Local Scene Today Somewhere in Cherry Hill Cemetery is buried Col. Edward C. Yellowely, a brave soldier, an able lawyer, and old school gentleman.

Close by in the old Episcopal Church Yard, Henry Harris, who at the age of thirty, had declared he had come to the dueling place for blood—and got it—his own—has lain for 114 years.

The house Yellowely lived in is now located at 415 E. Fourth St. and owned by Mrs. R. D. Harrington. In Yellowely's day, it was a "story and a jump" and faced toward Third Street. Now, it is two stories and faces Fourth Street, as if it, too, had turned its back on memories of the past.

Philippine Democracy Raw But Real

By CARL ZIMMERMAN

MANILA (AP)—With strongman rule, military coups and tongue-in-cheek democracy the rule among most of their neighbors, Filipinos go to the polls in November to elect a President.

It will be the fifth presidential election for the 15-year-old Philippine Republic, and like all the others it will be a hard-fought, exciting contest.

Elections here don't go off as smoothly as in the Western democracies.

People get killed, votes are bought, and frauds are committed. In Ilocos Sur Province in northern Luzon Island a candidate's wife has already been wounded this year in an ambush, and the constabularyman who investigated the case was killed.

But not since 1949 has there been serious question as to who was really elected President.

Philippine democracy is still raw, but it is real.

Every national election has been held on schedule. Despite a Communist-led rebellion in the late 1940s and early 1950s, the government has never been changed by violence.

Voters Aren't Awed

Voters are not overawed by the party in power. In 1953 President Elpidio Quirino was defeated by Ramon Magaysay in his bid for re-election. In 1957 Carlos P. Garcia was elected by a mere plurality of the vote, although he had succeeded to the presidency upon the death of Magaysay earlier that year.

And in the same year Diosdado Macapagal, now battling Garcia for the presidency, was elected vice president although he was with the opposition party.

This year a third candidate, Rogelio de la Rosa, former movie star and senator since 1957, is running for President as an independent. Though De la Rosa is very popular, especially among the women, experts give him little chance of winning.

Seven to 7 1/2 million voters are expected to vote Nov. 14, of a population of about 27 million. Besides a President, they also will elect a vice president, eight Senators and 104 Congressmen. In 42,000 precincts throughout the Philippine archipelago, simple farmers and fishermen, sugar-rich landowners and sophisticated professionals will enter polling booths and write the names of their candidates—a precaution against illiterates.

The Commission on Elections is charged with seeing to it that the voting is "peaceful, orderly and honest."

"I'm confident that the election will be peaceful and orderly," said chairman Gaudencio Garcia.

"I won't say it will be honest. "But then, my standards of honesty are higher than some people's."

Much Improvement

Still, Garcia believes the Philippines has come a long way from the 1949 election, when Quirino narrowly defeated Jose P. Laurel. Both men are now dead. They say in that election even the birds and the bees voted, and terrorism reached scandalous proportions.

Each polling booth—many are located in modest schoolhouses in villages of thatched huts—is in the hands of a four-man board of inspectors:

A chairman and a poll clerk, both usually public school teachers, and two watchers, one from each of the major parties, who are supposed to make sure their candidates aren't cheated.

One of the commission's big gripes is that "the watchers don't watch." Often they are uneducated people given the job by the party for the sake of their votes and those of their families.

Guns Banned

Much of the trouble in the past has come from the police and other armed official elements. The commission tries to stop this by putting the police under its direct control on election day and banning all firearms—including the police's—from the vicinity of the polling booths.

Compiling the national vote is a lengthy process, taking two weeks or more. Although major communities have telegraphic facilities, there are still places in the islands that can be reached only by five days of walking, and others that must wait for the Navy to pick up the ballots.

114 YEARS AFTER PITT DUEL WAS FOUGHT . . . gravestone of Henry F. Harris who died Oct. 1, 1847 still to be found in Cherry Hill cemetery.

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

According to the papers, President and Mrs. Kennedy have brought Shakespeare back to the White House.

What this symbolizes on a deep level of national policy we shall have to wait for some pundit like Mr. James Reston to explain in the Times. It was not very adequate Shakespeare that the Kennedys sponsored, merely 30 or 40 minutes of readings from three or four plays after a Presidential dinner party.

Before that event last week, the last presentation of Shakespeare in the White House occurred in 1910, during the Taft administration and, 1910 being what it was, it probably signified nothing very subtle.

Poindexter

and perhaps sobered Jefferson.

"The Adams-Jefferson Letters," edited by Lester K. Born in two volumes, is a rewarding book nevertheless. Reading it does much to restore in one's mind a decent image of Adams as a person, though he has been receiving a miserable press for a century and more. In this correspondence, he holds his own with Jefferson and, if anything, is the saltier and sharper of the two.

It was Adams, in spite of his reputation for crustiness, who, in January, 1812 made the first written overtures of reconciliation to Jefferson after their years of estrangement over politics. Both men are mellow as they grow old, right in the respect which they pass each other, and capable of moving the reader when they remind each other of their young, Revolutionary days when "laboring at the same oar," we rode through the storm and made a happy port."

Presidents And Shakespeare

Not all our Presidents by any means have been keen on Shakespeare. FDR once used an apt quotation from "Romeo and Juliet": "A plague on both your houses!" Lincoln was enthusiastic, but apparently did not know Shakespeare very well.

Two early, bookish Presidents, Jefferson and John Adams, were not deeply affected by the greatest of writers. At any rate, he is not mentioned in their extensive correspondence with each other. They were too busy examining French and British political theorists to bother much with pure literature. This seems a pity, since Shakespeare has some pretty keen insights into politics, and his view of the masses as an untrustworthy mob would have pleased Adams

Philosopher In Prison

Some British journalist reminded the world the other day that the seven-day sentence which Philosopher Bertrand Russell served in Brixton Prison for protesting his country's cold war policies was not his first visit to that spot.

Russell spent some time in Brixton during World War I as a conscientious objector and pacifist. Long enough, in fact, to write in his cell his "Introduction to Mathematical Philosophy." But what can a writer get done who is in jail for only seven days?

College Lecturer

An important event next week will be the visit of George But-trick to the ECC campus. But-trick, who is one of the most respected Protestant ministers in this country and a lecturer of wide reputation, is being brought to Greenville with funds from a grant of the Sperry and Hutchinson Foundation (the Green Stamp people) and Student Government at the College.

On Monday, 7:30, Austin Auditorium, he will deliver a lecture on "The Nature of Truth." Also on this program will be Professor Charles Baylis, Chairman, Department of Philosophy, Duke University. Under the terms of the foundation grant, this program is especially designed for the community-at-large.

At 10:00, the same day and place, Dr. Buttrick will lecture on "The Theological Implications of the Space Age." The general public is invited to this lecture too.

Movie To Note

Playing at the State is one of the most important movies of recent years, the Italian film "La Vita Dolce." Some of its scenes are daringly frank, but its real importance lies in the picture which it presents in about a dozen loosely connected episodes of the rotteness and sterility of contemporary Roman society—and, by implication, of European society in general.

Other Events

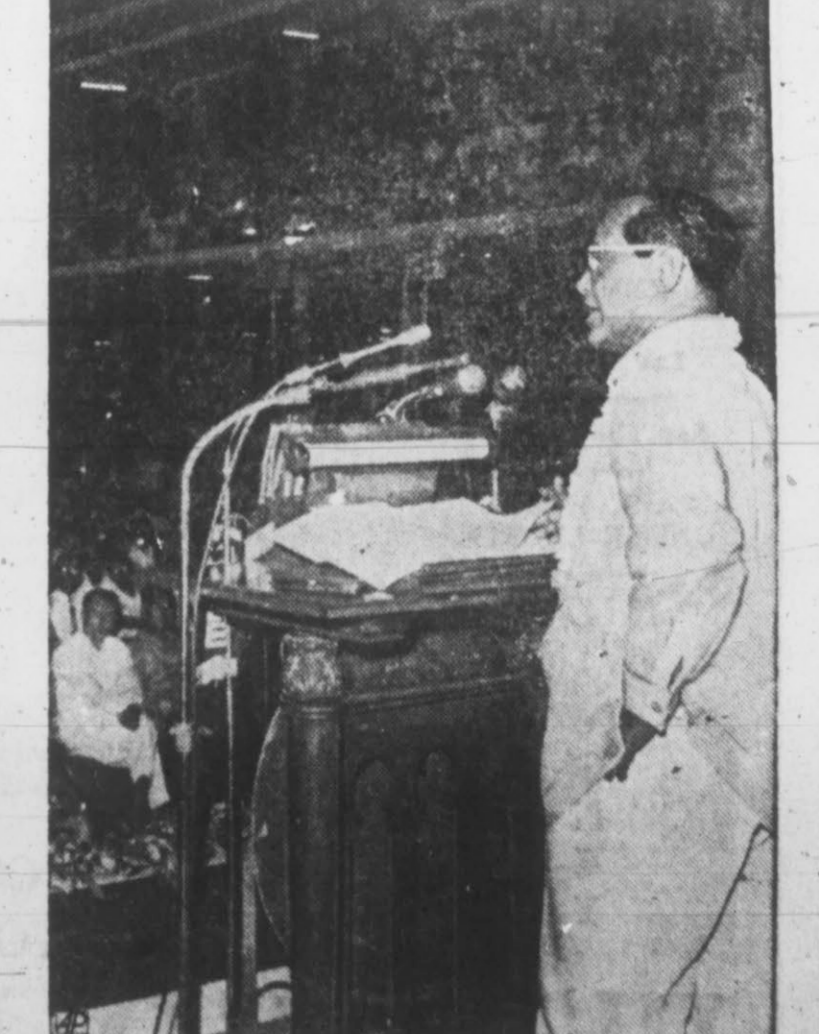

Rounding out the calendar are several other events. One is the Faculty Art Show at the Kate Lewis Gallery. Another, rehearsals for Gounod's opera "Faust," which the opera group at the College is preparing for performance in February. Townspeople are invited to try out for the chorus on October 10, 4:30, Music Building, College.

One Hurt

The USS North Carolina is safe in port after several difficult days of being shoved and coaxed up the Cape Fear. According to an old and reliable State paper, a "tug wench" was damaged in the proceedings. Maybe that explains the difficulty.

Fire Prevention Week Is Proclaimed

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK . . . Mayor Charles King is shown signing a proclamation designated October 8 through the 14 "Fire Prevention Week" in Greenville. Looking on at the signing are Fire Chief George W. Gardner and Capt. Lyman Nethercutt, head of the Fire Department's Fire Prevention Bureau.

Mayor Charles M. King has issued a proclamation calling upon all Greenville citizens to take an active part in the nation's observance of Fire Prevention Week, which starts October 8.

In proclaiming Fire Prevention Week, Mayor King also designated October 11 and 12 as inspection and clean-up days in Greenville homes and businesses.

The Mayor, in signing the proclamation, called attention to the fact that by setting aside the week devoted to fire safety, Greenville is co-operating with cities throughout the country as part of a national effort to bring to the attention of citizens the hazards of fire.

Quoting figures from the National Board of Fire Underwriters, Mayor King said that property losses from fire each year total over $1,000,000,000 and noted in 1961, 11,350 deaths throughout the nation were caused by fire.

"Great social and economic losses result to our city from the destruction of homes, businesses, industries and natural resources," King added.

He called upon all city departments and agencies of the city government to participate actively in a campaign for improved fire safety and charged the Fire Department and the city's schools with providing effective leadership in the activities of the week and educating the public to the dangers of fire, and how fire can be prevented.

Urging everyone to cooperate with the City's Fire Prevention Committee and the Chamber of Commerce, which takes an active part in the City's Fire Prevention program, Mayor King noted the Declaration of Independence was safeguarded at Fort Knox, Ky., for three years during World War II.

At first, when Rusty and the hounds had played together in the clearing, it had been an aimless, stumbling business.

Later, when Rusty's power and size increased, their frolics grew more earnest and, to Alec Temple, seemed to take on certain qualities of the race: Rusty would run as in flight from the pack and, when tired or minded to, would turn at bay and all would go down in a feisty writhing mass on the ground.

Alec, above them all on the edge of the clearing, would look downward, laughing.

But it was all in fun, of course; and five minutes later, with play forgotten, they'd all be lying down together in the shade, while their sides heaved, panting for breath.

Only when Sam Fellows' strike-hound, Jupiter, played this game was Alec aware of a difference. Perhaps because the old hound so rarely relaxed his dignity, there was bound to be a difference.

It was play, still, but less so than when the great sober hound was absent. The sense of earnestness was heightened.

Jupiter's belling seemed to inflame the other hounds with an awareness of their mission in life. It also seemed to strike to the very heart of Rusty's deepest and most primeval instincts, so that his flight appeared very real.

So it happened one day in late July when Alec came home from the trout-rearing ponds, that the game began.

It was a hot, dry, and windless day. Bored and lazy, the hounds lay about on the ground, dozing, snapping at flies, and from time to time rousing themselves to follow the slow creep of the shade from hour to hour. Rusty had been chained to his wire since early morning and was plainly weary of the limits they imposed on his movements.

At sight of Alec, he ran to the end of his wire, leaped high in the air, and when his chain drew taut, fell thrashing into the grass. Alec ran forward, laughing and calling his name, and in a moment removed his collar. Rusty got up from the ground, ran his rough tongue over Alec's hands, and rubbed his flanks against Alec's legs.

Then he stood off a yard or so and looked upward into Alec's face, as if to ask, "Well, what now, boss?"

"Well, you can run, if you like," Alec said, for he knew the glance.

He waved his arm at the clearing. Rusty followed the sweep of his hand with his head, his muscles and tendons coiling; when he sprang away, he moved as an arrow launched from a bow, leaving the earth in a leap that stretched him out to full length in mid-air and brought him down running hard.

Rusty made a circle around the open ground; but as he began a second one, he sighted the hounds sprawled out in sleep beneath the trees and, in a burst of youthful zest, ran among them, snarling and pouncing from one to the other.

The effect on them was electric. They wakened bawling, stumbling onto their feet, staggering with sleep.

By the time they began to recover themselves for action, Rusty was thirty yards away, bounding north in sleek, flowing motion. Still, they seemed uncertain as to just what had happened and what now must be done until Jupiter's mighty voice cut loose.

Then it all changed. In the way that a bugle may rally ambushed troops, so now did Jupiter's brassy trumpet rally the hounds from their aimless plunging about. One instant they were confused and disorganized, but in the next they were lined out behind him in pursuit of Rusty.

There was no sense of frolic now; in full cry, the hounds gave chase as zealously as ever they had when trailing predators in the wilderness.

It was something that Rusty knew quite suddenly, too; for as the great full chorus broke behind him in waves, it seemed to lift him out of his playful leaps and bounds into a dead run. He didn't look behind him, as he often did, to see if they were coming; he knew they were. Nor did he try to evade them through trickery; in headlong flight, he forgot about trees that might be climbed or rocks that might be leaped upon.

Of a sudden alarmed, Alec lunged after them, waving his arms and shouting for them to turn and come back. But if they heard him, which was doubtful, they paid him no heed whatever and were soon gone from sight in the fringe of the forest.

Alec was now about halfway through a timber patch, and he began to grow uneasy. A campsite was not far beyond, and he knew that if the race should last much longer, or hold its present speed, he would be roaring through the middle of the grounds at full speed.

It wasn't hard for him to imagine the panic that might easily follow with Rusty and the hounds running wild among the tents and trailers and campers.

But, as alarming as this prospect was, it hardly prepared him for the view that met him when the undergrowth began to thin and he stumbled out into cleared ground.

The turmoil of the scene before him left no room for question. It was as if a boulder had tumbled down the mountain and cut a swath through camp, along which twenty or thirty people had gathered to stare in the direction of its travel.

They weren't standing idly, either. Some were waving their arms and others were shouting in anger. A few had even climbed up into nearby oaks, as though the tide of the chase had passed too near for them to escape in any other way.

But there was no time to look long at this spectacle. In the moment that Alec took it in, the cry of the hounds changed. Now, rather than receding, it seemed to be returning. And no sooner had he grown aware of this than his eye, searching upward, picked them up.

They were storming down the middle of the grounds. Rusty was leading still, but the hounds were closing the gap rapidly. Alec, as he broke and ran toward them, could see Rusty's weary lope and the way in which he cast his head from side to side, as if seeking shelter.

It was odd, Alec thought, that Rusty didn't break for height; and then he realized that the cub, who liked and trusted humans, was trying to find protection among the people camped there.

And then, all at once, Rusty found what he was looking for. A few yards beyond and to one side of him, a wall tent loomed among a stand of pine trees.

At the instant that Rusty seemed to see it standing there, Jupiter's bay broke out behind him in fresh vigor and, willy-nilly, impelled him toward it. As if scenting the kill, the hounds swerved with him and their belling rang with new spirit.

Everything went swiftly after that. Sound and motion came together and grew to be one. Running wildly, though seeming not to move at all, Alec saw Rusty's lithe shape go bounding into the tent. Baying at his heels, the line of hounds slammed in after him.

Within the tent a woman screamed and screamed again. A man approached the stone hearth with firewood stopped in his tracks, the wood spilling down, forgotten.

The tent pole at the entrance swayed with the impact of bodies and began to topple, and dust poured from underneath.

Greenville Is Talking About The Most Controversial Motion Picture Of Our Times!

In City after City, "LA DOLCE VITA" has compiled a long list of box office records. Its rare success, however, remains in the adult public's enthusiastic acceptance of its powerful story of the bitterness and sweetness of life—a story told with dignity and integrity.

Mature minds will find it fascinating, enthralling, even inspiring. It is, however, stark and elemental in its raw force, and it is not suitable for viewing by either children or adolescents.

Pitt Sales Tax Take Up $4,000

Sales tax collections in Pitt County for the month of June climbed by more than $4,000, according to figures released by the Greenville Merchants Association. And the June figure, $91,470.34, was more than $11,000 above the total collections recorded during June, 1960—$80,317.99.

The figures showed a drop in sales tax collection in Greenville from May to June of about $200. June's total for Greenville was listed as $53,968.49 compared with $54,171.95 collected in May. However, the June total was more than $4,000 above taxes collected by Greenville merchants during June, 1960. That total was $49,504.14.

Collections in Greenville during June were below tax collection figures in neighboring cities in its population group.

The Merchants Association report showed the following June totals for area cities: Kinston—$69,572.80; New Bern—$59,463.11; Rocky Mount—$87,483.49; Wilson—$66,991.93; Goldsboro—$104,475.82; Raleigh—$362,856.82; and Wilmington—$152,552.04.

Figures showing collections during May and June for the eight cities, however, revealed a drop in the total from May to June in all but two of the cities. Wilmington and Goldsboro only among the eight saw higher June figures.

Seven of the eight showed gains over June, 1960. Wilmington dropped slightly more than $4,000.

Two of his paintings are now hung in the Sixth Annual Faculty Art Show at East Carolina College.

LA DOLCE VITA

Is Talking About The Most Controversial Motion Picture Of Our Times!

In City after City, "LA DOLCE VITA" has compiled a long list of box office records. Its rare success, however, remains in the adult public's enthusiastic acceptance of its powerful story of the bitterness and sweetness of life—a story told with dignity and integrity.

Mature minds will find it fascinating, enthralling, even inspiring. It is, however, stark and elemental in its raw force, and it is not suitable for viewing by either children or adolescents.
