Goal Of 16,000-Seat Stadium For College

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector City Editor

Goal for opening of the proposed 16,000 seat James Skinner Ficklen Memorial Stadium is the first game of the 1962 East Carolina College football season.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins announced plans for a fund raising drive to finance the stadium at the Society of Buccaneers meeting Saturday night.

The new stadium will cost $250,000, but Dr. Jenkins announced that, if the state bond issue is passed in November, $105,000 of this has already been met. He explained that $55,000 has been pledged to the stadium fund. The bond issue, to be voted on across the state Nov. 7, includes $50,000 for athletic facilities.

Dr. Jenkins announced the appointment of a committee, with local insurance man W. M. Scales Jr. as chairman, which will conduct the drive for stadium funds.

Serving with Scales are: David Whichard, Reynolds May, Wally Howard, Howard Hodges Jr., J. Con Lanier Sr., James T. Little and Dr. E. B. Aycock. Dr. Jenkins will work with the group in an advisory capacity.

Scales this morning said the committee has as its goal completion of the stadium in time for the first East Carolina College home game next season.

"However, this goal will be reached through the cooperation of the merchants and citizens of our community," he declared. He said the committee plans active solicitation among the community's merchants. The college faculty and students have a goal of $25,000 and $17,000 of this has already been raised. Approximately 15,000 brochures are being mailed to the college alumni with requests for contributions to the stadium fund.

Scales said, "We want everybody in the community to have a part in it. It is a genuine opportunity for the people of this community to participate. Eventually, when it is complete, all eyes of North Carolina will be focused on this stadium. We feel it will be a feather in Pitt's hat showing the dynamic progress and growth of Pitt County."

The stadium is to be built on a site west of Elmhurst School along West Berkeley Road. The site is now being graded and drained in preparation for construction.

Plans are to move the 6,000 seat steel stands at the present stadium site to the new area. These stands will be assembled on the south side of the football field. New concrete stands, seating 10,000, are planned for the north side of the field. The concrete stands are to be constructed so that the stadium could eventually be expanded into a bowl seating 50,000.

Present College Stadium site near the gymnasium would be used for a new Austin building. Funds for this are also in the Nov. 7 bond issue and plans are to demolish old Austin. This will place all instructional buildings in the Wright Circle area between women's dorms on the west campus and men's dorms south of Tenth St.

Also included in the broad re-mapping of college facilities is moving of the baseball field to an area south of 14th St. Grading for this is presently underway. There are plans for eventual construction of an indoor stadium south of 14th St. when funds are available.

Dr. Jenkins Saturday night pointed to the need for a place for large convocations. "We want a stadium not only as a place for athletic contests, festivals, musical programs, pageants, outdoor dramas, citizens rallies—important as all these are," he told the society.

"But we want a stadium which is evidence of the vitality and health of the young spirit of this college and of this state, which is only beginning to meet widening challenges that have been offered to us as a people in North Carolina."

Dr. Jenkins described the late James Skinner Ficklen, for whom the stadium will be named, as having had a "goodly heritage."

He attended Greenville city schools and graduated from the University of North Carolina. In Greenville, he was named president and chairman of the board of directors of E. B. Ficklen Tobacco Co. in 1925, continuing in these offices until his death. "He did much, he accomplished much, he helped many persons in many ways, not for reward, but because of his sense of responsibility to his fellow man, his state and his nation," the college president declared.

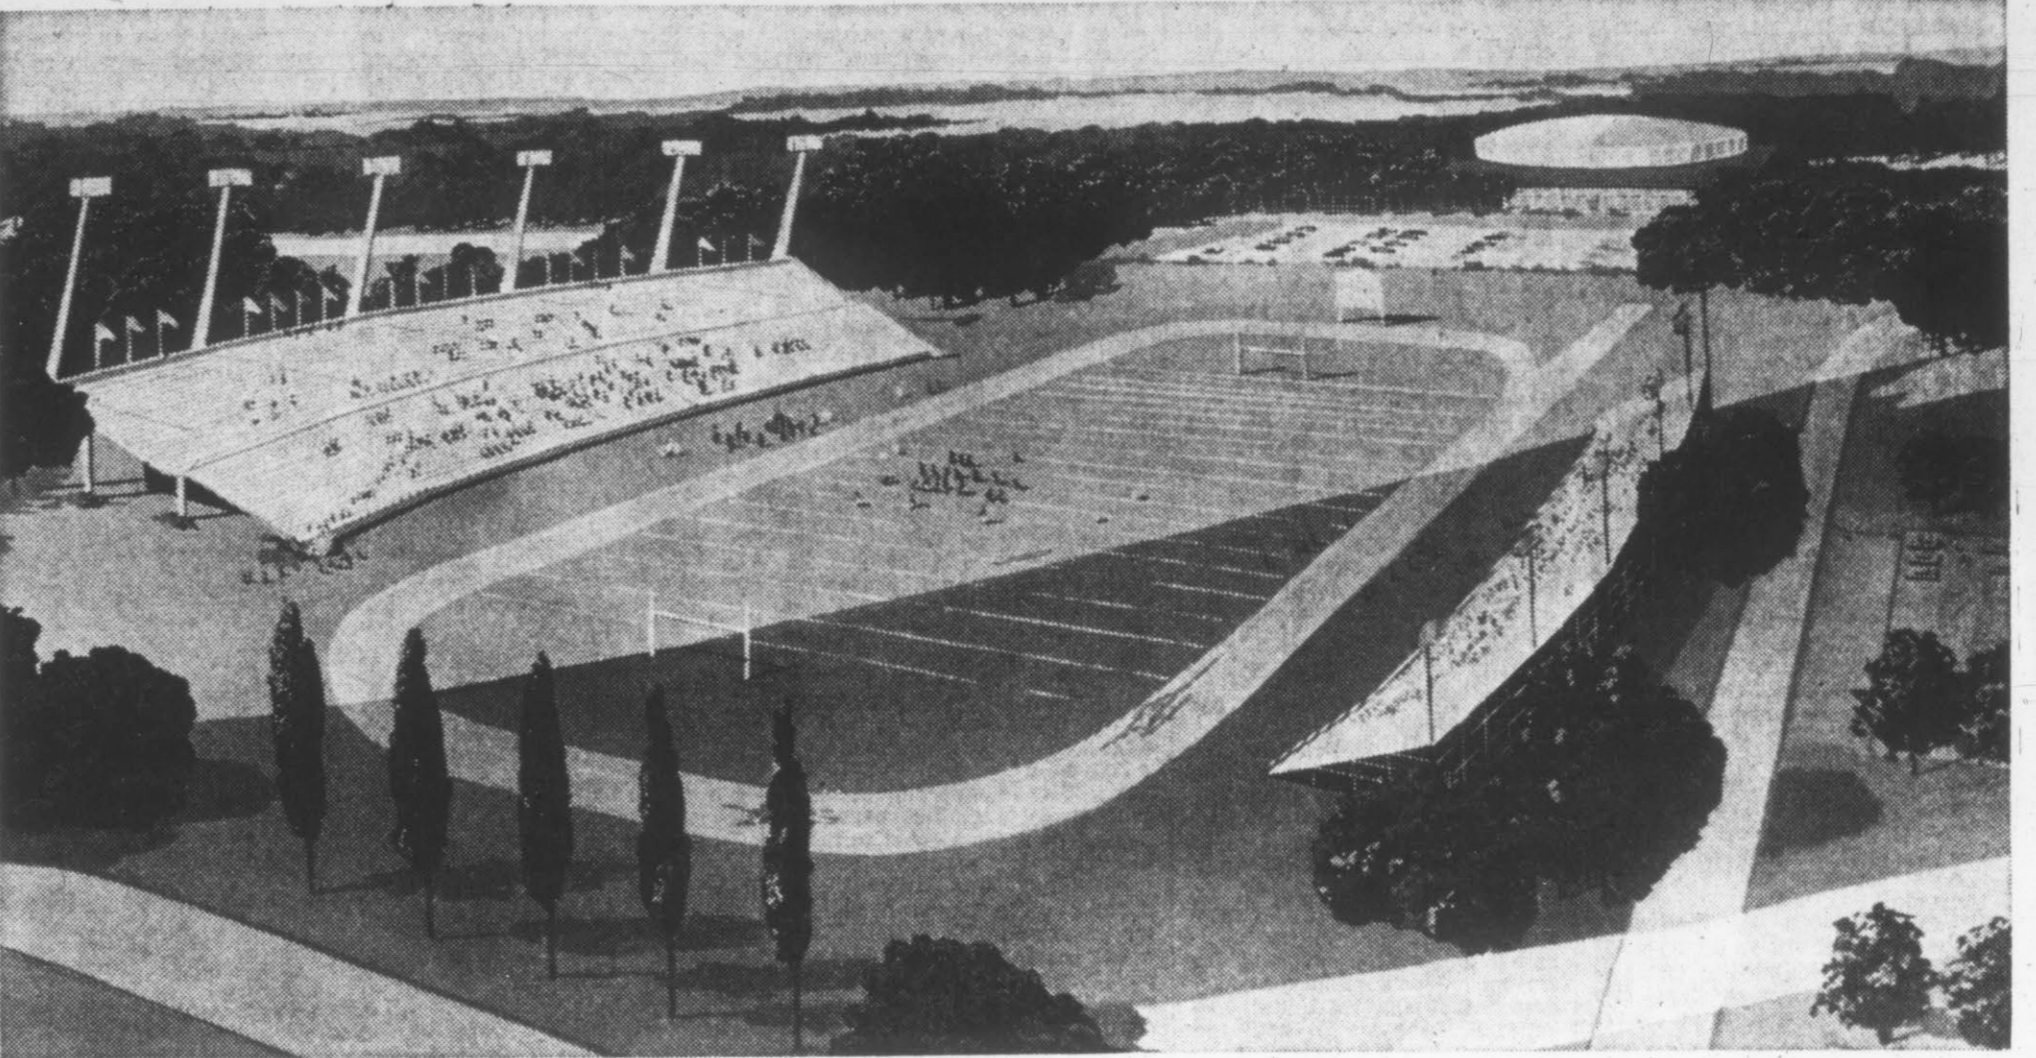

"I want to say that this is for us a great occasion, for I believe that we here present will make possible the early beginning of a structure to be known throughout the land, the James S. Ficklen Memorial Stadium, a worthy place for the memorable events of your college and town.

"With the help of the Society of Buccaneers, our alumni, our faculty and student government, which has incidentally already pledged $10,000—and our friends in Greenville and Pitt County, I have every reason to believe that we shall obtain our goal and our dream will become a reality before the year is out."

Dr. Jenkins emphasized that the stadium will be used by the Rose High School football team also. The high school presently plays its games in College Stadium.

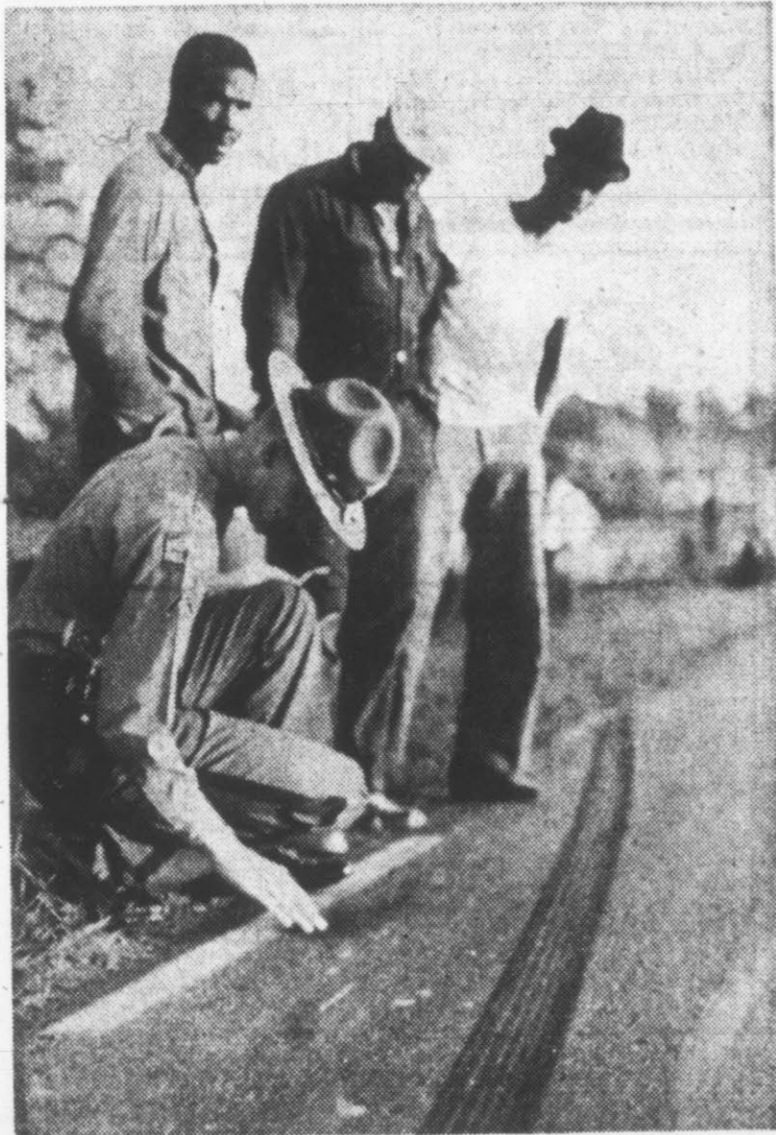

Society president James Whitfield, Raleigh News and Observer state editor, presided over the meeting Saturday night. Dr. Douglas Jones was announced as new president of the society. He is an East Carolina College alumnus and has recently been named head of the Department of Education.

Eight-Year-Old Is Highway Victim

An eight-year-old Negro youth became the seventh traffic fatality in Pitt this year when he was struck down by a car and killed about seven miles south of Greenville on N.C. 43 Saturday afternoon.

Highway Patrolman W. K. Chapman, who investigated the mishap, identified the youth as Elmer Ray Cox, Route 2, Greenville.

The child was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cline Cox.

Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey, who said investigation into the death is continuing, identified the driver of the vehicle involved as Mrs. Hanna Nelson Beasley, 23, of Harkers Island.

Officers said the auto was traveling south on N.C. 43 at the time of the mishap. Coroner Harvey quoted Mrs. Beasley as saying the child started onto the highway in front of a vehicle traveling south in front of her car but noted the child "caught himself" and returned to the shoulder of the highway. He then ran onto the highway in front of her vehicle after the first car had passed.

Officers said the car skidded a total of 148 feet before and after the impact prior to coming to a stop.

No ruling has been made in the death yet, the coroner noted.

Time of the accident was set at 4:35 p.m.

Report 'More Of Everything' At 1961 Fair

Present indications are that the Pitt County Agricultural Fair will have the largest number of exhibits in its history, Manager Norman Chambliss reported today. "Up to 12 o'clock today, we are very much encouraged by the entries made by the people of Pitt County in exhibits and livestock, and are expecting the largest number of entries ever," Chambliss said. He noted that clerks at the fair had been very busy all morning.

"There is more of everything" at the fair this year, he noted, including a larger midway.

One of the high points of interest so far seems to be a fall-out shelter, which is authentic and made of steel. Civil Defense information and literature will be distributed at the shelter, which is open for inspection to those interested. Chambliss announced that WOOF announcer Jim Bert will enter the shelter as of 5 p.m. tomorrow and will remain there until 10 Saturday night, where he will broadcast at scheduled times. The shelter was manufactured by a Rocky Mount steel cooperation and is sponsored by a local sanitation company.

Pres. Kennedy Makes Flying Visit To Sam Rayburn In Change Of Plans

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — President Kennedy undertook today a sad, sentimental journey to Texas to comfort ailing Sam Rayburn.

The President switched plans and ordered his Air Force jet to head for Dallas, Tex., instead of back to Washington at the close of a weekend in Newport.

The 79-year-old speaker of the House is gravely ill in a Dallas hospital, combatting incurable cancer.

Distinguished national leaders and politicians have been phoning or dropping in to see him. Kennedy himself has been kept informed constantly of Rayburn's condition. He has been checking for several days to find out whether it would be wise for him to visit the speaker's bedside. The decision was reached this morning to make the trip. As the man who served longer than any other as speaker, as "Mr. Demoral" to both political friends and foes, Rayburn was a powerful ally of the President in Congress. He left Washington a month before Congress adjourned to go home to Texas and try to get rid of what he said was lumbago in an aching back. Rayburn has not been told by his doctors that cancer is striking down his long lustrous career in politics.

Kennedy's plane will leave for Dallas at 2:30 p.m. (EDT) and arrive at Love Field at 3:35 p.m. (CST) after a trip of three hours and five minutes. He was expected to leave Dallas at 5 p.m. (CST) and reach Andrews Air Force Base at Washington at 9:15 p.m. (EDT).

Kennedy is trekking westward again next month on a different kind of trip. It will be a mid-November speaking tour.

It could wind up with his lending a personal hand to Cabinet officers and other administration executives in reporting to the people what Congress accomplished and what more he would like it to accomplish.

Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, announced Sunday Kennedy will speak Nov. 16 in Seattle at the 100th anniversary of the University of Washington and again Nov. 17 in Phoenix at a dinner honoring Sen. Carl Hayden's 50 years in Congress.

Hayden, who was elected to the House of Representatives in 1911, first took his seat on Feb. 19, 1912—five days after Arizona was admitted as a state. He has been in the House or Senate ever since.

Piled with questions, Salinger said that after the Phoenix visit, Kennedy has "some other stops under consideration."

Asked whether the trip is shaping up as a speaking tour, he replied that "we've already got two speeches. Anything over one makes it a tour."

Nov. 20 and Los Angeles Nov. 21—just a few days after Kennedy flies to the coast.

Kennedy, who flew here Saturday for the weekend, scheduled a return to Washington by jet today.

Mrs. Kennedy and the Kennedy children are staying on at the Newport estate of her parents.

The chief executive and First Lady attended Mass Sunday at St. Mary's church, where they were wed eight years ago. A little later they boarded the White House yacht, Honey Fitz, with some friends and daughter Caroline and were off on a 40-mile trip that lasted more than three hours.

The Honey Fitz lurched through cool, cloudy, breezy day, but the Kennedys and their guests were on deck most of the time.

Bloodmobile Will Seek 250 Pints From Pitt

Quota for each day's visit of the Red Cross bloodmobile the latter part of this week will be 125 pints of blood, making a total of 250 pints for two days, Blood Chairman Kenneth Whichard said today.

The bloodmobile will be stationed at the Farmville Armory on Thursday, from 12 noon until 6 p.m., with Frank Allen and Tommy Willis in charge.

On Friday the bloodmobile will move to Greenville, where it will be stationed at St. Paul's Episcopal Church from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Statistics show that Greenville is again behind in its collection of blood and deposits in the blood bank program, having used more blood than has been deposited. Whichard pointed out that the county's people are using an average of four pints, or a half gallon, of blood in Pitt each day. The collection should meet these needs.

Financing of the collection of blood is borne by the local chapter of the Red Cross, the local hospital, National Red Cross and other contributing sources. The local chapter of the Red Cross is a member of the Pitt County United Fund.

Each pint of blood collected here costs about $5.50, which totals some $8,000 in a year's time.

The only fee for a person using blood from the blood bank is for laboratory and administration. The blood itself is free, Whichard pointed out.

Two Injured As Car Got Out Of Control

TWO PERSONS were injured about 11 p.m. Saturday when this car went out of control on a curve and traveled over 300 feet out of control before coming to rest in this ditch just South of Ballards Cross Roads. Driver of the car, identified as Hilton Ross, 18, of Route 2, Ayden was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital for observation but later released. A passenger in the auto, Marvin Gaskins, 30, of near Grimesland, suffered severe leg, back and lower abdominal injuries. He was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital and later transferred to Duke University Hospital. Ross told officers that he lost control of the auto while trying to find a station on the car's radio. Investigation is continuing in the mishap. Patrolmen said.

Early Emphasis On Ability To Read As Most Important Foundation Of Learning

(Editor's Note: Following is the first in a series of six articles dealing with selected areas of the curriculums of Greenville and Pitt County Schools. The first article discusses the most important foundation in learning—reading. The other five will deal with science, physical fitness, social studies, special education, and college preparation and vocational education, all areas of re-emphasis or meriting special consideration.)

By PATRICIA MOORE Reflector Staff Writer

Reading is a key to learning. It can well be a key to success and a key to pleasure. The importance of reading in everyday living should never be underestimated.

The assistant superintendent of Pitt County schools, Arthur S. Alford, explains the importance of reading this way: "Reading is something that every individual must be able to do in order to get the most out of life. The person who cannot read will not know what is happening in the world. He will not know whether Jane Arden (of the comic strip) is married or single. This person will not be able to tell you HOW it was that the Yankees managed to win more games than any other team. These people may be able to read the scores in figures, but not the "why." "They will not be able to read a road map to guide them wisely in travel on the roads. They may miss many benefits that would be available through retirement, Social Security, insurance and other means. "When reading processes have not been fully developed, then one of the most important means of communication has not been utilized. The individual is not fully able to enjoy the surroundings in which he lives. "Further, a great reading difficulty in school could keep a child out of college later."

Both the Greenville and the Pitt County schools place an emphasis on teaching the child to read when he is ready. Mrs. Ellen L. Carroll, director of instruction for Greenville schools, says the child needs to be ready emotionally, physically, socially and mentally to read.

It takes some children longer than it does others. For instance, some are ready to read when they begin school; some it takes six months or longer to be prepared for reading, Mrs. Carroll pointed out.

As for physical readiness, "We are learning a lot about physical needs," Mrs. Carroll said. The eyes must be fully developed so that the child can use them to their fullest extent in learning to read, for instance. The Greenville schools have regular programs which they take the child through; the text book companies have programs also. Each child should have a physical examination before school to see that he is physically ready, and other materials in school help provide readiness, such as pictures and tests.

Four Reasons Children need to learn to read for four different reasons, primarily, Alford states. These include:

- (1) Learning to read for details, for something specific
 - (2) Learning to "skim," or rather, to find a certain part in the material.
 - (3) Reading to get the main ideas, regardless whether they are reading newspapers, magazines or stories.
 - (4) Learning how to read so that they may read orally on occasions that demand it.
- The child reads from sight, from memorization, by phonics approach, and according to word structure and from context. All these methods are used to help the child read and gather meaning from his reading. Alford pointed out that reading calls for many exceptions to the rule. "An individual must be conscious of the fact that the context in which the word is used determines the meaning that the word has," he says. For example, there are some 140 different meanings of the word "come." Many people learn to read through the context method, by getting the idea of a sentence and determining the word meaning. This method was popular during the period when phonics were not taught in school. A child should be able to analyze a word, thus getting the word meaning.

What can your child do to read better? There are several things that the child and the parent can do to aid in this important area.

First of all, the child needs good eyesight. This helps him to distinguish between words that look alike, or between similar letters such as "o" and "a."

He needs to hear well. He gathers a meaning from the printed page in proportion to his own experiences which he carries to the page, much of which he has heard.

He needs to speak well. Children learn new words and learn from speaking to each other. Language skills are another necessity for reading. This involves knowing meanings of many words before proceeding to higher steps in learning to read. The student needs to know the common words and their meanings. Another need is for parents to be conscious of these points and to do what is required in regard to them. Parents can lay groundwork at home which will make the school easier for the child who, for example, has learned to obey, to assume responsibilities and to pay attention.

A desire to read is essential. Parents can do much to help this attitude.

Other particular skills are helped, such as the parents' answering questions of inquisitive children and encouraging them to express interest in things. The parent who is understanding and answers questions may lead to the child's understanding things.

Very important for the child is that he is able to distinguish likenesses and differences between people and things.

The child carries these abilities to the printed page and uses them, or is not able to use them. They may affect his reading. Both the Greenville and the Pitt County schools use grouping to facilitate reading. Mrs. Carroll says in the city schools, "We group children in reading instruction according to their needs."

In fact, the ungraded system used at Elmhurst Schools is based on levels of reading. Almost all grades have three groups of reading, which are flexible and geared to the child's needs. The grouping is continued all the way through junior high school in Greenville, Mrs. Carroll says.

Grouping is practiced in county schools for about the same reasons. "It is necessary to have groupings within a class of students because it is the best way for a child to learn to read or learn at his own rate of progress," Alford stated.

Four is the maximum number of groups within a grade level for the county, he says.

The grouping may be according to special needs of certain students; partner grouping; tutorial grouping, where a progressed student may help several others who are behind; and interest grouping.

The grouping generally depends on the makeup of the class, the ability of the students and the needs of the students, so that their individual needs may be met. It continues in the county from about the first through the eighth grades, as in the city schools.

More advanced grouping can be worked out only where there is a great concentration of students.

Four main factors may keep a child FROM learning to read well. These are: irregular school attendance, which is a big factor; Alford says; poor eyesight, hearing or speaking; emotional problems—a deep seated emotional problem can hinder concentration, understand other factors; limited mental ability, also a big factor.

However, these reasons, no matter how big, don't lessen the importance of reading as an instrument of daily living for any child, whether he is very bright or prefers to play ball.

Two Case Histories Prove Alcoholism Can Be Halted

This is the fourth of five reports on alcoholism and marriage. Miss Reef has been the only reporter permitted to examine case histories and researchers' conclusions in a new study by the National Council on Alcoholism.

By BETTY REEF
Women's News Service
NEW YORK — (WNS) — What makes an alcoholic stop drinking? "A snap out-of-it lecture from some well-meaning authority has little effect," says Dr. Margaret B. Bailey, research chief at the National Council on Alcoholism. These are the churchmen, judges, guidance counselors, even doctors, who share the public's uniform opinion that men and women become obsessive drinkers purely through lack of moral fiber. All an alcoholic really needs, one hears, is will power. Actually, he needs that and much, much more.

Many a problem drinker stops for a while—just to prove he can. Having proved his point, he resumed drinking. "Alcoholism is never actually cured. It is only arrested," said Dr. Bailey. "Complete abstinence from liquor is the only recourse. Problem drinkers can't take even one mild drink at a party, because the first one puts them beyond rational control and feeds a combined physical-emotional compulsion which does not end until they are drunk."

Cure depends on motivation the drunkard to give up all forms of alcohol. He has to want sobriety more than anything else in the world, and want expert outside help.

Such assistance comes most often from Alcoholics Anonymous, but alcoholism clinics, which combine medication specialist when supported by understanding at home.

For many drinkers, the turning point from alcoholism is a threat to something they hold dear, liberty, sanity, or security. A judge may threaten prison, a boss may threaten firing, a wife will leave and take the children.

This is borne out by case histories from the files of NCA's Family Research Project. More than 250 wives of alcoholics were interviewed to gather data to provide diagnostic clues for the future.

The success stories of Jane, a young mother in her twenties, and Mary, a long-married grandmother, illustrate how a strongly threatening situation becomes the critical "moment of truth" at any stage of alcoholism. Jane, a headstrong 18-year-old, made up her mind to marry "to realize the full meaning of being a woman." She also wanted happiness and security, she said. She chose Bob, 20, a clerk, because he seemed "fatherly and dependable."

Jane married in face of opposition from parents and friends, who pointed out that he earned little and he drank. But Jane countered that he "wasn't a bore or a wise guy" and that his getting high several times a week wasn't serious.

Less than a year later, Bob had become a full blown alcoholic, jobless, angry and bewildered. Jane, who had just borne a son, was evicted for nonpayment of rent.

His first year of marriage had been a boozing nightmare. In the fifth month, Bob began to drink steadily. While drunk, he struck her often, hurt her seriously once, blacked out repeatedly and couldn't remember what he had done or said.

"I still didn't know he was alcoholic," said Jane. "I thought my figure bothered him. The bigger I got, the more he drank. I know now he couldn't face the responsibility of a baby."

They fought. She tried to hide his whiskey but he found the hiding places. He drank outside. He lost his job. Yet in morning-after remorse he would brokenly tell Jane that he "didn't deserve" a girl like her.

Jane's obstetrician lectured him and suggested he try medication to curb his appetite for alcohol. Jane's minister suggested that she leave her husband. But she stayed until the baby came, when lack of money forced her back to her mother's home. When she sued for child support through Domestic Relations Court, the judge told Bob to sober up or face jail.

Under this threat, Bob stopped drinking. He joined AA. When he stayed sober for a year, Jane and the baby came back.

He has been on the wagon now for four years, adores his son, holds a good job and is on his way to promotion. He and Jane get along better than they used to, partly because of her membership in Al-Anon, an association of family members of alcoholics.

"I went at first just to get out of the house," she reported. "But I've learned so much there about marriage, as well as understanding the nature of alcoholism—that it's a sickness, a kind of allergy to alcohol."

The story of Fred and Mary, a couple in their sixties, could have been lifted from an F. Scott Fitzgerald novel. Their courtship and early married life carried them through the roaring twenties, when bootleg liquor was the fare of the smart set. Though her long married life has been shrouded in an alcoholic fog, Mary considers herself happy, counts her achievements in the love of her now-grown son and daughter, her grandchildren, her al-long-last sober husband, and a successful little bookshop she now runs for a living.

Yale-educated Fred didn't work because he didn't have to. When he had run through the money inherited from his father, he always found another inheritance, as various aunts and uncles crossed the bar.

This couple first met as teenagers in the company of their wealthy parents at a resort hotel. "Fred," recalled his wife, "did everything well. He was generous, sweet, handsome, athletic, intelligent and such fun to be with—an altogether attractive person."

After they married, they ran around with a gay drinking group. They fell into the habit of daily cocktails before dinner. Fred seemed reasonably well controlled at home but foolishly garrulous at drinking parties.

In the early years he tried working in his father's business, in the firms of friends. But he was soon bored and quit. He stopped working altogether when his father's death gave him a fortune. He began to depend more on alcohol to numb his sense of failure.

His alcoholism reached its depths in the fourth decade of the marriage. He suffered frequent memory lapses. The couple's social life, always active, fell away as invitations stopped coming. One year he was in and out of a rest home half a dozen times to "dry out." Another year he was picked up repeatedly for drunkenness, landing in Bellevue's psycho ward.

Frightened, he joined AA, where the success stories and company of other men who felt they had been failures helped him achieve sobriety. He maintained it for a while, then slipped back.

Through it all, Mary, "an incurable optimist" who loved her husband, stuck by him. In the 37th year of their marriage, he began drinking steadily for 24 hours a day. Memory and control were gone. Their few remaining friends urged Mary to have him committed.

But she found notes written in Fred's few sober moments, begging her to help him, pleading that she stop him from drinking. "Then, of course, I'd find him drunk!" she said wryly.

The turning point came through violence. In drunken fury one morning, Fred began to throw kitchen utensils. Then he threatened her with a carving knife.

When he came out of this bender, he was so shocked by his own behavior that he immediately accepted Mary's suggestion to rejoin AA. She accompanied him to a new group. A long-time atheist, Fred joined a church again. Since then he has remained sober.

"I realize he will never work, and I accept it," Mary said, "even though we now have economic worries."

Through both groups, this elderly couple has developed a new circle of nondrinking friends. "Wives I've met at Al-Anon introduce Fred to their husbands, and I introduce them to mine. We get together over coffee after meetings. Makes it just like a party," she said gaily.

Next: More help is available to problem drinkers whose mates can seize the psychological moment.

Mills Marriage Solemnized Sunday

In a candlelight ceremony, Miss Anna Kay Mills and Clarence Earl Mills were united in marriage Sunday afternoon in Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church with Rev. Floyd B. Cherry, pastor of the bride, performing the double ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with bridal greenery consisting of palm-branches and areca palms in a variety of heights. Large baskets of white gladioli and white mums in between seven branched candelabra with myriads of cathedral candles. Candelabras were covered with dark green huckleberry and bows of white satin.

At the altar was a brass Prie Dieu where the bride and groom knelt for prayer. Extending out from the altar were two pyramidal brass candelabras with tall cathedral candles. Pews were marked with white satin bows and plus signs.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Miss Peggy Jean Dixon, pianist, and Mrs. Ollie Ray Padgett, soloist. Mrs. Padgett's selections included "Because" by Hardelot, "I'll Never Walk Alone" and "The Lord's Prayer" by Mendelssohn. The traditional wedding marches by Wagner and Mendelssohn were used as the processional and recessional.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of Chantilly lace and tulle, fashioned with a Sabrina neckline with scattered seed pearls and iridescent sequins. Her full skirt of lace and tulle extended into a chapel train. Her veil of illusion fell from a cap shaped headpiece of pearls and satin.

She carried a prayer book covered with white satin and a white orchid showered with carnations.

Wilene Stancill, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She was dressed identically to the bridesmaids. She carried a white satin basket filled with rose petals.

Danny Stancill, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. He carried a white satin pillow and sprays of pink roses.

Serving as honorary bridesmaids were Miss Judy Mills, Greenville, Miss Linda Mills, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Marty Dixon, Greenville, Mrs. Philip Smith, Greenville, Miss Mary Louis Hudson, Greenville, Miss Nancy Jo Dixon, Norfolk, Miss Lois Ann Mills, Greenville, Miss Sandra Gaskins, cousin of the bride. They wore wristlets of yellow mum corsages.

Dennis Mills served his brother as best man. Ushers were Donald Cannon, cousin of the groom, Bobby Harris, Ayden, Brooks Mills, cousin of the bride, Wiley Stancill, brother-in-law of the bride.

The mother of the bride chose a blue lace ballerina length dress, fashioned with a round neckline, sheath skirt. The matching lace bolero had three quarter length sleeves with patent leather accessories.

The bridegroom's mother wore a blue and white brocade, ballerina length dress fashioned with a portrait neckline, basque fitted waist, with a sheath skirt and with matching accessories.

Mrs. Lester Mills and Mrs. Beulah Mills both wore white carnation corsages.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Mills, is a graduate of Chicod High School.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mills, is a graduate of Ayden High School. He is now employed at Fieldcrest Mills, Inc.

For her wedding trip, Mrs. Mills selected a blue wool plaid suit with matching accessories. She wore the orchid lifted from her bridal bouquet. Following their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Mills will be at home at Route 3, Greenville.

Mrs. Wiley Stancill and Mrs. Patsy Weathering, sisters of the bride, entertained the Mills-Mills wedding party and families of the bride and bridegroom at the bride's home. The table was centered with an arrangement of white carnations with white pom poms and flanked candles in silver candelabras. The table was decorated with white wedding bells at each corner and covered with a white cutwork tablecloth. After the traditional slice was cut by the bride and the bridegroom, the cake was served by Mrs. Stancill and punch was poured by Mrs. Weathering.

Mrs. Wiley Stancill, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was dressed in a pink ballerina length dress, fashioned with a portrait neckline, cap sleeves, cummerbund at waist, full skirt, with bow in center back. Her nose length veil of illusion fell from a headpiece of pink leaves. She carried a bouquet of pink and blue mums tied with blue satin.

Bridesmaids were Miss Evonne Keeter, Greenville, Miss Linda Gay Mills, cousin of the bride, Miss Ida Lynn Harris, cousin of the bride, Miss Betsy Smith, Greenville, Miss Judy Mills, Greenville, Miss Marty Dixon, Greenville, Mrs. Philip Smith, Greenville, Miss Mary Louis Hudson, Greenville, Miss Nancy Jo Dixon, Norfolk, Miss Lois Ann Mills, Greenville, Miss Sandra Gaskins, cousin of the bride. 1961 Buccaneer Queen Chosen At East Carolina College

Selected from an array of 44 campus beauties sponsored by East Carolina College organizations, Nancy Lockwood of Hampton, Va. will reign as Queen of the 1961 Buccaneer, college yearbook.

Selected on the basis of the freshness and naturalness of her features, her sincere smile and sparkling eyes, the enthusiasm displayed in the photograph submitted for judging, as well as her photogenic qualities, Miss Lockwood was chosen as the typical American college girl.

Nancy Lockwood

Miss Lockwood, who is a sophomore English major and who was the 1960 Homecoming sponsor for Umstead Hall, was sponsored by Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity.

Preliminary judges selecting five finalists were James Chestnut of Turkey, representing the SGA; Julius Grimes of Washington, Rebel Editor; Patricia Elliott of Herford, East Carolinian Editor; Tony B. Bowen of Goldsboro, Sylvia Robertson of Greenville, John Garriss of Clinton, and Walter Faulkner of Henderson, all representing the Buccaneer, and Dr. John Ellen, faculty advisor.

Final judging was handled by three members of the Greenville Camera Club: James Gilliland, an employee of the Federal government and a top amateur photographer; Stuart Savage, photographer for the Greenville Daily

Presbytery Will Gather Tuesday

The New Bern First Presbyterian Church will be the place of the 14th Fall Meeting of the Presbytery of Albemarle Oct. 10 at 10 a.m. The Reverend Joe Amory, pastor of the North Wilson Presbyterian Church, who has served as moderator for the past six months will call the meeting to order and preside until a new moderator is elected.

A highlight of the meeting will be the special Centennial service set for 11:30 a.m. with the Reverend Welford Hobbie, pastor of the Howard Memorial Presbyterian Church of Tarboro delivering the Centennial address on the Heritage and Mission of the Church. This is a part of the Centennial Celebration which has been carried on throughout this year over the Presbyterian Church, U. S., culminating with the Centennial Sunday in local churches on October 15. The special program has been arranged by the Centennial Committee of the Presbytery of which Dr. Thomas Hamilton of Kinston is chairman, assisted by the Reverend J. Murphy Smith, host pastor in New Bern First Church, the Reverend Joseph W. Amory, moderator of the Presbytery and church, and the Reverend Thomas M. Davis, General Secretary of the Presbytery.

Two new ministers will be received into the Presbytery. The Reverend Adolph Oterson Jr. from Rocky Point will be received to become pastor of the Bear Grass and Roberson Churches of Williamston. The Reverend Charles M. Voyles from China Grove will become pastor of the Hollywood and Chicod Churches of Greenville.

Committee reports will be made by the Reverend R. Murphy Williams Jr., pastor of the Wilson First Church, on Church Extension; the Reverend Richard R. Gammon, pastor of the Greenville First Church, on Christian Education; Dr. C. Irving Lewis, pastor of the Goldsboro First Church, on Stewardship; the Reverend William D. Morton, pastor of Boyd Memorial and Johnson Memorial Churches, on World Missions, and the Reverend Edwin S. Coates, pastor of the Farmville Church, on nominations.

The public is invited to the Centennial Service to be observed at 11:30 a.m.

Participating In Richmond Study

RICHMOND, Va. — Billy R. Churchill, formerly of Winterville, is one of five men participating in the first phase in a Community Renewal Study here.

Churchill, of the city's Department of Public Works, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Churchill of Winterville.

Richmond Redevelopment and Housing Authority officials say the study will be the first of its kind in the nation when completed. It will be the blueprint for redevelopment in all areas of the city.

Abnormally High Radiation Level

TOKYO (AP) — Radioactivity over Japan registered highest today since the Soviet resumption of nuclear testing Sept. 1, the Central Meteorological Agency announced.

Officials said the abnormally high radioactivity count of 3,800 per liter per minute was detected in rain samplings in the Tokyo area.

The previous maximum was 3,620 counts in Kushiro, 550 miles north of Tokyo, Oct. 5.

Prize-Winners Named In Homecoming Parade

Prize winners among the 20 floats entered in East Carolina College's 1961 Homecoming Parade have been announced by the Student Government Association. All entries were based on the "Glorious Days" theme of Homecoming at the college.

First places went to Phi Mu Alpha, music organization, for their "Basin Street, Swinging at Elton"; to the Phi Kappa Tap fraternity for "Guns"; and the Alpha Delta Pi sorority for "Gone with the Wind."

Runners-up to Phi Mu Alpha among floats entered by campus organizations were the Delta Sigma Pi business fraternity, second place, and the Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity, third place.

Social fraternities winning awards for their floats were Sigma Phi Epsilon, second place, and Lambda Chi Alpha, third place. Among sororities winners included Alpha Xi Delta, second place, and Alpha Phi, third place.

Cotten Hall for freshman women received top honors among dormitories decorated in the Old South theme of Homecoming Day on the campus. "Southern Hospitality at Cottendale" was based on the Pitt County home of the late Mrs. Sallie Southall Cotten, for whom the dormitory was named.

Umstead Hall's "Cotton Gin" and Fleming Hall's "Cotton Field" second and third place winners, developed the "Beat Elon" idea through the use of scenes from plantation life in the South.

"Don't Strong Cleaning Chemicals Ruin Draperies?"

—Mrs. N. E. N.

Dear Mrs. N. E. N.: Believe me when I say dry-cleaners do not use "strong cleaning chemicals" on anything. They use the utmost care cleaning draperies in tested, safe detergents, based upon many years of experience in handling similar fabrics. I do not blame you for being distressed when draperies which you send intact to your cleaner come back in shreds. It is natural to wonder how they were cleaned. However, your drycleaner is seldom at fault.

A recent survey by The Textile Research Laboratory at Ohio State University on breaks, splits and holes in draperies revealed two main causes for these conditions: (1) Environmental factors which contributed to weakening the fabrics, and (2) the fabrics themselves.

The first condition included the effect of light, heat, moisture, fumes from burning fuel, abrasive wear, repeated flicking, air-borne soil, mold, mildew and other microorganisms. The second condition related to fiber content, yarn and fabric structure, dyes and finishes. The survey concluded that "whether the used and soiled curtain or drapery fabric is going to break, split or go into holes, has been determined almost completely, as far as today's research has determined, before the drycleaner ever touches the fabric."

While a drycleaner can mishandle draperies or curtains, damage from mis-handling is different from deterioration damage and "strong cleaning chemicals" are not used by responsible cleaners. Remember, too, that fabrics do wear out even when they simply hang in the home.—(Adv.)

Economic Growth Must Continue

The fact that tax collections for the state in the first three months of this fiscal year are in line with legislative estimates presents an encouraging picture for North Carolina during this period of highest state spending in history.

It must not be overlooked, however, that the projected increase in revenues for the state during this biennium was not based solely upon the additional tax levies approved by the legislature. The total increase in revenues anticipated for the state was based both on the new taxes and on additional revenues expected from an expanding economy in North Carolina. Unless the economy of the state continues to grow at a steady pace, the new tax levies written into law by the 1961 legislature will not produce sufficient revenue to finance the programs that state has undertaken.

It is important, therefore, that North Carolina not sit back and assume the job is already done just because revenues for the first three months of the fiscal year are in line with estimates. Certainly the legislature could not have anticipated a significant business gain for the state in the first three months of the year. This factor will come into play in state revenues later in this fiscal year and in the second year of the current biennium.

The job of boosting the economy of the state in order that sufficient revenues will be produced to finance the state's programs must be done jointly by

Public-Private Conflict Again

By LYNN NISBET
INFRINGEMENT — A dealer in art supplies has protested to the Raleigh city council that the ceramics section of the recreation department is operating a business in competition with private enterprise, for that the director of the projects is buying supplies at wholesale and selling them to persons who work at the ceramics center for a profit.

While that complaint was being registered at city hall the State Utilities Commission was hearing evidence in a case involving millions of dollars and controversy among big private companies and municipalities wanting to utilize TVA power in the west. The power case is now complex to attempt discussion here. It is mentioned only because it has the same conflict of private and public business.

Another instance of the same problem is found in the current campaign by the Quality Restaurants Association against the practice of public school lunchrooms, college cafeterias and other non-taxpaying facilities, serving meals on commercial basis. The lodging facilities offered by YMCA, YWCA and other non-taxed agencies also are under study by the private enterprise men with whom they compete for business.

These practices are in different categories from the Prison Enterprises operations, about which complaint has also been registered. The prison enterprises sell only to other government agencies—State institutions, counties and municipalities. And the operations afford employment for prisoners, serving the double purpose of keeping them out of mischief and making them pay a part of the cost of keeping them in prison.

NARROW — There are places where Prison Enterprises approaches dangerously close to infringement on private business. There are many communities which have no adequate facilities for public meetings, including dinners, other than the school house. And there are instances where private business claims undue, if not illegal, protection against competition because the business operation does not comply with zoning and license-tax laws. In most cases the dividing line between absolute private enterprise privileges and public rights is very narrow. Often there is overlapping.

MISTER SAM — Sam Bayburn "Mr. Democrat" to the nation, lived longer and in many respects attained wider recognition than did Robert A. Taft, who for many years was "Mr. Republican" to America. All of their prestige and all of the honors bestowed upon them could not combat the dread disease that cut them down. The type of cancer was different, but in other respects there was close similarity in the incidence of their illness. In apparent full strength and vigor one day, a slight warning of impending illness the next, and soon thereafter the final verdict.

U. S. 70 — North Carolinians generally think of US-70 highway as the main street across North Carolina, a lineal descendant of the old NC-10 which ran from Beaufort to Hot Springs and on into Tennessee. Next week, Sunday through Tuesday, the National U. S. 70 Association is meeting at Atlantic Beach. The president of this association is from New Mexico, the vice president from Arizona, and visitors are expected from every state between California and North Carolina traversed by this 3,300 mile long main street of the nation.

POLICY — The State Highway Commission has reversed policy established by the commission during the Hodges administration in two main points. The concept of statewide policy has been changed to a system which every paving project and ferry will be considered on individual merit basis. The Hodges 7-member commission set up criteria of so much travel, so many residents, so many school houses or churches, and other data as basis for determining priority in selection of secondary roads to be paved. The Sanford 19-member commission retained most of these criteria but added another factor of discretion for the highway commissioner and the county commissioners which to considerable degree voids the point credit system.

The Hodges commission adopted a policy on toll ferries which provided roughly that if the ferry was the only means of motor access to an area it would be toll free; if it was an extra convenience only it would carry tolls sufficient to pay operating costs. The Sanford commission last week rescinded that policy and adopted one under which every ferry project will get independent and individual appraisal with respect to tolls. So tolls remain on the ferry between the main land and Ocracoke, but the new ferry between Emerald Isle and the main land will be toll free.

the state and by local organizations dedicated to further economic development. The economic gains made by North Carolina in recent years have furnished momentum for the state to continue to move forward in this direction. The momentum will not be maintained, however, unless considerable effort is put into the economic development program at both the state and the local levels.

The tax revenues the state needs to finance the programs undertaken for this biennium will not be up to the needed level unless North Carolina continues to show significant gains in its economic activity.

Final Responsibility Is The City Council's

It is well, we think, that the City Council study the progress which has been made on programs financed by the half-million dollar bond issue approved by the city slightly more than a year ago.

The Council should be careful, however, not to jump into the old game of buck-passing if the study shows that everything that was hoped for out of the bond issue has not or cannot be accomplished. As the governing board of the city, the Council has the final responsibility for administration of city affairs. It may delegate portions of this responsibility to other officials as it sees fit, and as provided under the city's charter. The Councilmen, however, cannot escape the fact that the final responsibility is theirs.

If the anticipated revolving fund for street paving is not effected because the council failed to provide sufficient debt service funds in preparing the city's budget for the current fiscal year, they have no one to blame but themselves.

Obviously, if as has been implied, the property-owners' share of payments for paving work is to be used to pay off the indebtedness on the bond program, there can be no revolving fund. Under such a proposition, there would be nothing left to spend for paving after that initial amount had been spent, and these would be nothing left to "revolve" to bring about more paving programs.

If, on the other hand, the paving bonds are paid from taxes for debt service, a is the normal procedure on bonded indebtedness, the repayments to the city by property owners for paving work could be plowed back into future paving projects and thus create a revolving fund.

If, through an error, the Council has failed to provide in this year's budget for retiring the paving bonds from tax revenues, they can still salvage a revolving fund for street paving by subsequently correcting this situation.

Constant Trend Of Price Index

By RALPH ROBEY
Changes of one-tenth of one per cent in the Consumer Price Index are not important unless they continue month after month. When there is a decline of this amount, therefore, as there was in August, it does not indicate that the general trend is changing.

This index is compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. It is the nearest thing to a cost of living index that we have, but actually it is based upon the spending habits of only urban workers and has only an accidental relationship to what it costs anyone else to live. However the figure is used in all labor contracts which contain a wage escalator clause. This means that no other figure compiled by the government, with the possible exception of that on unemployment, has such far-reaching effects within the economy.

In common with all indexes of the government, 1947-49 is used as a base, or equal to 100. The base is going to be changed for all indexes in a few months in order to have it more recently, and the Consumer Price Index is being completely revised with a view of making certain that it reflects the goods, services, and spending habits of today. Such a revision is an enormous job and it will be more than a year before it is finished.

For the past year as a whole the index has risen a little over one per cent. That is not much, but unfortunately the index has been on an uptrend for the past six years. The item which has contributed most consistently to this persistent increase has been services—rent, medical expenses, electricity, gasoline, barber and beauty shop prices, and so forth. Almost every month the aggregate of these services shows a rise.

Food is the most unstable large item in the index, and necessarily it is assigned a heavy weight. It was largely responsible for the drop in August and it was the primary cause for the increase of four-tenths of one per cent in July. From the middle of 1958 until March 1960 there was a general downward trend of food prices, and since then, except for a few months at the turn of this year, there has been a gentle upswing.

All commodities other than food increased in prices as a group from 1958 until the end of 1959, then declined until a few months ago, and recently have shown a slight rise. All of these changes have been most moderate, and the index for such items is no higher today than it was at the end of 1959. All of this is history. Does it give us any indication of what to expect in coming months and the next few years?

Fortunately it does. It clearly indicates that there is no basic for expecting a sharp run-up of consumer prices in the next few months. The most rapid increase in the index we have had in recent years was from 1956 to 1958, and that amounted to less than 10 points. But the history also gives us no warrant for assuming that we shall have appreciable lower prices. The last time the index declined from one year to the next was between 1954 and 1955, and that was a period when federal government expenditures were being reduced.

Today, of course, government spending is growing by leaps and bounds, and all signs point to a continuation of this unfortunate trend. It will take some little time for such outlays to work through the economic system—at least to have a direct effect upon consumer prices—but it will be only a matter of months. Our judgment, therefore, is that the Consumer Price Index will remain substantially stable through the remainder of this year, and perhaps through the first quarter of 1962, but about then we shall see the beginning of a rise of disturbing proportions.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
AT IT ALL THE TIME
We have great admiration for those people who have lived lives of lurid and devastating sin turn from their evil ways and become upstanding and useful citizens. Occasionally this comes about through a mere exercise of the will. Usually—in fact almost always—it is the working out of a profound religious conviction.

But there are people who, like the great preacher Phillips Brooks, can say: "I never knew what it was not to be a Christian. From my earliest moments I was trained in the things of faith."
This is ideal state does not always obtain. A Christian home means a home in which the parents are constantly aware of their responsibility to keep the process of Christian nurture in operation and in which the children feel themselves in a fellowship of love and religious faith. There may be some protest on the part of the children, but this is not serious. What is serious is the continuous program of Christian nurture continuously carried out.

It takes time to develop moral character. It involves sacrifice. But it is worth all its costs.

End of Building Project

Contribution To Future

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The other day, a childhood friend, Judge Jonah Goldstein, was in my house discussing work scholarships in which the Grand Street Boys Club, of which he is president, is interested. While all the great men are concerning themselves with what is happening in the Congo and Laos and such places, Jonah is concerning himself with what was happening on the block, to the neighbors.

That night his wife died. She had been one of the first women lawyers and a public accountant to boot. It had been her idea that when Judge Goldstein's judgeship reached its terminus and he had to retire, he should not hang out a shingle and practice law which in a big city like New York could mean getting receiverships and other favors. She preferred that he devote himself to the public benefit. So for 27 years, he has been president of the Grand Street Boys Club and of the Grand Street Boys Foundation which does so much that is worthwhile in an intimate way in a big city.

In a small town, if a bright boy is stuck because his father dies before the boy's education has been sufficient for him to go out into the world, somebody will help. In a big city like New York where there are 8,000,000 people, it is easy to get lost. Many do get lost.

The principal of a high school may discover a genius but how does he finance his education? The smart boy cannot keep up his marks if he has to work while he goes to school. There is too much homework to do these days, to much concentration is required. The best colleges require very high marks for admission and the boy who is sleepy because he has had to work after school may not get those high marks although a keen teacher knows what the boy really can do if he has a chance.

So, Jonah Goldstein, who worked his way through high school and college, has developed the concept of a work scholarship; that is, a boy works in the school, where he is being taught, clerking for the principal, washing test tubes in the laboratory, putting books back on the library shelf, and so on.

The idea is not altogether new because many of us, who had to work our way through school and college, found such jobs, but this is different. It is so arranged that it does not interfere with the studies. It gives a boy ample time to do his school work under proper supervision.

It is not only a matter of bread; in a big city, a young fellow may not have ample clothes and his morale is lowered by comparison with other boys. Or he may find living conditions so awful at home that he cannot do his work there adequately. He may live in an atmosphere of constant quarrelling and bickering that he finally throws in the sponge.

The psychologists call this a character defect but Jonah Goldstein and I, who were brought up under unsatisfactory circumstances, know that it can be fatigue rather than character defect, that it can be weariness rather than distress that drives one to defeat. We had seen it in boys. We had seen these forces of evil turn brilliant minds into racketeers.

And so Jonah Goldstein is doing something about it. He has the Grand Street Boys Foundation to work with and he finds co-operative high school principals who discover the bright boys and give them a chance by providing proper and supervised work in the school where they study. And if a boy needs a telescope or a slide rule or a suit of clothes the money is found to help him become a person of great value.

This is noble work done in a quiet way. I do not know but this may be the first story written on the subject, because the Grand Street Boys Club does not advertise its good work. Why should it? Most of works. When I first met Jonah Goldstein, he was a boy managing the game room of the Educational Alliance; I borrowed my first tuition money for Columbia University from a fund in the same Educational Alliance. We both know what a little help at the right time can do if it is gently given.

Other Editors Saying U.N. Snag Remains

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Although the U. S. government has agreed with reservations to acceptance of the U. N. secretary-general, it is doubtful if that post will ever be filled to the satisfaction of all concerned, and it is equally doubtful if a man of the stature of Dag Hammarskjold is ever allowed to take the job. The Soviets will see to that.

The way things look now the U. N. post may go to the Grand of Burma. The U. S. attitude on acceptance of the Soviet plan increases hope that a way will be found to break the deadlock with its threat of paralysis for the administrative arm of the world organization. The U. S. agreed to Soviet insistence that the secretary-general be picked by the Security Council. The reservations are that the two big countries and his powers.

There hangs the trouble. The candidate may pose enough of a problem; his powers could prove even more of a stumbling block for the Soviets want a man with virtually no authority, such as that exercised by Dag Hammarskjold. The U. S. had previously indicated a desire for Dag's successor to be chosen by the General Assembly thus avoiding a veto by Russia in the Security Council over a possible choice. The Soviet has also softened its position somewhat on the matter. Originally the Reds had demanded a so-called troika plan for a three-man secretariat to replace the one-man secretary-general post. They changed this to the provision that the secretary-general be selected by the Security Council and they would agree to a temporary officer with three advisers, rather than the troika concept.

The preference now growing in the United Nations, for the Burma official, U. Thant, to be secretary-general, indicates growing determination of the 47-nation Asian-African neutralist bloc to have a voice in U. N. affairs. This could have a profound influence on U. N. operations in the future.

One naturally wonders, too, just how neutral U. Thant would be should he win the important post of secretary-general. Burmese government officials are not as neutral as the West would like to think. Some are decidedly pro-Communist. Others are not too happy about the West. This leads one to doubt whether the West would get as fair a shake under this man as it did under Dag Hammarskjold, a decidedly neutral and just man from a definitely neutral country.

A Company That Has No Strikes

By ELMER ROESSNER
In the midst of strikes and threats of strikes, members of the American Management Association will meet at the Astor in New York tomorrow and hear about a company that hasn't had a strike in 23 years.

The company is the Rogers Corp., a manufacturer of specialty materials, with plants at Rogers, Manchester and Willmantic, Conn. The expositor will be Saul M. Silverstein, president of the company, who was last week awarded the 1961 Human Relations Award by the Society for the Advancement of Management. Previous winners have included Henry Ford II, Cyrus S. Ching, Clarence A. Wimpfheimer and J. C. Penney.

One of the keys of the Rogers' peace record is its monthly labor-management meetings. The corporation and the United Papermakers and Paperworkers International, AFL-CIO, hold 12 contract talks a year. Ten are to settle current differences, the eleventh is to put the next year's contract into final form, and the 12th to sign it.

When the latest contract was ratified last week, Silverstein and his personnel director, were made honorary life members of the union.

As the A. M. A. members will hear, the company has done considerable pioneering in labor relations. In 1942, six years before General Motors and the United Auto Workers had agreed on a cost-of-living clause in their contract, Rogers granted the benefit.

"If a grievance is brought in to a labor-management session, we appoint a two-and-two committee on the spot and send it out to bring back a report in 20 minutes, if possible," Silverstein will tell the A. M. A. meeting.

Other points he'll make (we've seen a synopsis of his talk) are: "Management needs more social scientists rather than mechanical technicians; more attention to 'why' than to 'how'." "There are still too many managers who think of good human relations as Chapter 17 of a textbook on management. Good human relations is the whole book."

"All too often managers who emphasize social and moral responsibilities of industry are castigated as 'do-gooders.' For the life of me, I see no evil in doing good. It seems to me that

Babies Versus Bonds

By ROGER BABSON
BABSON PARK, Mass.—As I look back upon a long and active life I have come to an important decision. Furthermore, this is in connection with investments, of which I should have excellent knowledge; my entire life has been devoted to the study of them.

BABIES VERSUS STOCKS
Babies are probably the world's oldest investment, having survived many thousands of years of wars, massacres, plagues, and revolutions. In many nations even the largest families are believed to be the richest, while a family with no children is looked down upon.

Stocks are only two hundred and forty years old. The first big promotion was that of the Mississippi Bubble, sponsored around 1715-1720 in France by a Scotsman; while the second great stock promotion was the South Sea Bubble, which followed in England under the leadership of Robert Harley and later under Robert Walpole. Other than in the United States, the sales of stocks (new issues) reached a maximum just before World War I, when London was the world's center of stock trading. World War I gave the London market a great blow; while World War II put New York ahead of all the world's centers.

BABIES VERSUS BONDS
Stocks offer a speculative profit which bonds do not. Stocks also benefit from inflation. Interrupted with a few years of deflation, the inflation of currency has been going on for centuries, since money was first used in Persia and Babylon 3,000 years ago. Bonds suffer through inflation, though long-term bonds should usually be avoided.

Of a given corporation, however, the bonds should be safer than the stock, provided the bonds are due, provided the company and, in case of trouble, interest on the bonds comes before dividends on the stock. The safest investments of all are healthy, well-trained children. To be doubly safe, take out an insurance policy on each child as soon as it is born.

BABIES AND COMMUNISM
Stocks, bonds, and other "pieces of paper" such as we recognize as wealth have no value in Russia. Only in bank accounts in the Russian Government Bank can one save money in Russia. Even then, Russia devalues the ruble (or Russian "dollar") whenever it suits her convenience. Savings are not encouraged under any communist government. The Russian government is supposed to own all land, factories, stores, etc. Well-trained children are the only assets considered.

In view of the above, those of us who have property dread communism. All property would be taken away from us; we would all work for the state, buying our food, our rent, clothes, and entertainment from the state. On the other hand, Russia is gradually becoming capitalistic, while the United States is gradually becoming socialistic. If we can continue fifty years without a World War III, there may not be much economic difference between the East and the West. This especially applies to those here who are living on inherited money and are not actual workers. The income of non-producers will gradually be taken away by taxes of various kinds.

HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND RELIGION

This brings us back to our original thought, that well-trained children are the best security and insurance. Our President Kennedy, seeing this change whereby the family could get a tax reduction, directly or indirectly, on each baby born. With the growing importance of babies, some inducement should be given for the expenses connected with their birth and early years. To bring this about is a basic purpose of the Isabel Babson Memorial, in which I am much interested.

Lion In The Hills

By JOHN B. PRESCOTT

CHAPTER 11

The woman who crawled out of the collapsed tent was large and red in the face. She seized a broom and quickly brought forth from the downed, squirting tent yelps of surprise; and when the man began to lay about him with a thin but whippy limb of firewood, there were cries of real pain.

"The Temple arrived at last. He ran up puffing for breath and shouting at them to stop.

"Don't hurt them! They're only people! They don't mean any harm!"

"But he might better have talked to the trees. As if he'd come from a fever world, the two people turned and stared at him. Then they went back to raising more dust and bewildered cries from the canvas.

"His pleas in vain, Alec ran past them and seized the edge of the tent. Throwing it up, he was instantly drowned in a vast bill of dust, and from the middle of this bill Rusty and the hounds came at him like cannon fire. Knocked from his feet by sheer mass, he went down on his back on the earth with Rusty clutched in his arms and the hounds swarming over him.

Then, strangely and suddenly, it was over. However dead the things now were as they always were in the clearing, when the game was played and came to its end in a seething tangle of legs and tails and flews, of hounds and lion.

Now, with Rusty brought to bay and Alec on hand, or underfoot, the hounds one by one pulled themselves free of the snarl and sat down to scratch, to lick their fur, or simply to pant for breath with their tongues run out long and red.

Finally only Alec lay there with Rusty piled on top of him and Rusty's tongue licking his face, as in gratitude. Slowly he grew aware of people and voices, and then he looked up and saw the man half bending over him.

His eyes, rimmed in white, showed fright; in his hands he held an ax raised high—but, with the scene at that strange angle, the meaning was a moment in reaching Alec.

"Just lie still, sonny," the man said, "and I'll get him in the head."

Alec knew then and shouted, "No!"

Rolling over violently, he got to his knees with Rusty held close. The man stood rooted, staring at them with the ax lifted.

"He's a pet!" Alec said in a breath. "It's only a game they were playing. It's all in fun; he's not wild at all!"

"Fur!" the man said. Slowly the ax came down. The man started at the woman, who still grasped her battered broom. Together they stared at the shambles of their tent, then at Alec and Rusty.

"That wild beast is a pet? You mean you let that creature run wild through here for the fun of it?"

The man had been frightened before; now that his fears were over, he was groundless, he was angry.

Alec gathered Rusty closer and began to stand up. Unused to adult rages, he felt apprehensive.

"No," he said, "it wasn't like that. They were playing in front of our cabin. Then Rusty grew scared and lit out. The hounds kept chasing him, like they would any lion."

The woman raised the side of the tent and looked beneath. Letting it go again, she began to wring her hands and cry.

"My dishes. And all the bedding dirty. And the food strewn about."

The man, stormy and ruffled-looking, turned his head about, searching.

"Where's the ranger?" he said. "I'm going to report this to the ranger."

By now, a crowd had gathered around the ruins. Among them, someone pointed at Alec, and a voice spoke up. "Ask him; his pa's the ranger."

The man with the ax swerved around and stared again at Alec.

"You the ranger's kid? And he's letting you run a wild lion through a public campground? I'll see about that! I'm a taxpayer!"

"I'll pay for any damage," Alec said. "We didn't mean any wrong. Rusty was only scared and trying to find help, that's all."

"I'll say you'll pay for it," the man said. "And that's not the end of it. I'll write my Congressman, too."

Alec was really frightened now. Holding Rusty close, he began to back away. The hounds, too, grown aware of the man's anger, gathered together and edged toward Alec.

The crowd behind him parted as he backed through, still facing the man. All at once the man's words filled him with a sick apprehension.

"Don't worry, please; I'll pay for everything somehow. Rusty's only a cub. He didn't know any bet-

Tokyo Alerted To 'Direct Hit'

TOKYO (AP)—The heavily populated Tokyo area was alerted today for a possible direct hit from Typhoon Violet, one of the season's most violent storms.

A U.S. Air Force weather bulletin warned that within the next 24 hours winds of over 98 miles an hour would lash Tokyo and vicinity.

Spain Detaining French Rightists

MADRID (AP)—Spanish security police today held 17 former French army officers and politicians who have been waging a campaign from exile against President Charles de Gaulle's Algerian policy.

Police named only five of those in custody. Ex-Gen. Raoul Salan, regarded as the master mind of the rightist European underground army in Algeria, apparently was not among those rounded up.

a glass of beer means many things

All over North Carolina county fairs are in progress in October. This historical phenomenon is symbolic of carnival time in rural America—a period of relaxation after the harvest is gathered.

Another symbol of relaxation that goes along with this time of year is a glass of beer, the light refreshment of moderation which also produces important tax revenues particularly to the benefit of those areas where its "legal sale" is permitted.

East Carolina Edges Elon In Homecoming Game 22-20

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS North Carolina, South Carolina and Duke will run into tougher situations than they expected in Saturday's football games for Atlantic Coast Conference clubs.

The Tigers rolled up 341 yards total offense, 207 yards on the ground and 134 in the air. And they held North Carolina to a total of 98 yards.

Wake Forest's next opponent is resurgent Clemson, at the home of the Tigers.

By GEORGE BRYANT Reflector Sports Writer

The East Carolina Pirates edged the Elon Christians Saturday afternoon 22-20 after the visitors perked up in the second half and threatened to tie the score before an overflowing homecoming crowd estimated at 8,500.

The Pirates recovered a fumble and headed for paydirt. However, Elon managed to intercept a pass by quarterback Dan Rouse on their own five yard line stopping the third Buc threat.

drives by the Christians. Both touchdowns were made in the fourth quarters with two extra points on the first one and had the next try for two points been successful, the Christians would have tied the ball game with less than two minutes to go.

The Pirates threatened the Christians once again during the first half of the game, but were unable to break through for the score. With about a minute to go in the second quarter a pass by Rouse was intercepted by Elon's Jim Short on the Christians' five yard line. On the next play Elon fumbled the ball and the Pirates recovered, but the ball was ruled dead on recovery.

However, Elon recovered fast with the aid of a 55 yard pass by Wooten to Cooke and fullback Clements went over from the one yard line. The Christians tried for two points, but failed.

At this point the Pirates got excited as the visitors were back in the ball game and a touchdown and two extra points would tie the score. The Pirates failed to make a first down after receiving the kick and freshman Gene Isenhour booted a long one to the 30 yard line. Elon took over and with the aid of a pitch-out and a completed pass from Wooten to Kelly, they drove to the East Carolina one foot line. Cooke went over for the touchdown, but a pass by quarterback Tyrone McDuffie was incomplete and the extra points try failed.

Two Winless Teams Came Out Winners Saturday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS West Virginia's Gene Corum and William and Mary's Milt Drewer, two coaches with something in common surveyed the wreckage of the Southern Conference football race today with mutual delight.

Jenkins To Speak At Pirate Club Meeting Tuesday

The East Carolina Pirate Club will hold its regular weekly meeting Tuesday night at 7:30 in the Buccaneer Room of the main campus cafeteria.

Practice Begins At Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Practice runs begin at the Charlotte Motor Speedway this afternoon to begin a week of activity that precedes next Sunday's National 400-mile stock car auto race.

Ladies Night At Touchdown Club

Tonight is ladies night at the Rose High Touchdown Club meeting in the school cafeteria at 8 o'clock.

College President Leo Jenkins will be the main speaker after a short business session. Coach Jack Boone will then take over and show the films of the Elon game or the pregame films of Western Carolina, the Pirates' opponent next weekend. The coaching staff will do the commentary.

Another scoring attempt was stopped by the Christians when Elon's first score came in the middle of the third quarter aided by a 15 yard penalty on the Pirates. Quarterback George Wooten completed a pass to halfback Ken Cooke on the East Carolina four yard line. After a three yard loss fullback Burl Clements went off-guard for the score. The extra point attempt was stopped by a strong EC line.

Elon took over and with the aid of a pitch-out and a completed pass from Wooten to Kelly, they drove to the East Carolina one foot line. Cooke went over for the touchdown, but a pass by quarterback Tyrone McDuffie was incomplete and the extra points try failed.

Reds Wondering Who Said Yank Hurlers Just So-So

By CLAUDE WOLFF and HAROLD HARRISON
 CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds, down 3-1 in the World Series, are wondering who passed out the word that New York Yankee pitchers—except for Whitey Ford—were just so-so. They have been so-so to date all right—so, so good they have shutout the National League champions twice. The Reds had to go against Ford again Sunday and also able relief pitching by Jim Coates.

Fred Hutchinson, baring a grin that just covered chagrin, said after Sunday's 7-0 defeat that it was the old, old story—failure of his better hitters to come through. "We went through that several times in the regular season but had time to come back," he said. "Now, we have to win three games to come out ahead."

In the next room, as Hutch talked with newsmen, his tamed Reds glumly contemplated locker doors, hurried through their baths or sat in small groups discussing their plight. Hutch said he planned a club meeting before the fifth game today.

"Are you going to try to stir them up," he was asked. "No, just the opposite," he replied. "They are stirred up now I'll try to quiet them down."

Hutch said he would not change the lineup. "We'll stick with the same players," he said stoutly, "after all, they are the ones who won the pennant."

Joey Jay who put the Reds back in the running by winning the second game from New York 6-2, will go for Cincinnati. Ralph Terry will do the chores for the Yanks. The Reds hope they find him as comfortable to bat against as they did last Thursday.

Hutchinson just can't get over the fact that his star hitters—Frank Robinson, Vada Pinson and Gene Freese aren't hitting. In four games Robinson has gotten one hit. Pinson has gotten one hit. Freese has yet to get a safety.

Pinson said that Hutchinson was right when he said he was not swinging well. Robinson also agreed with what his manager said about him—that he was getting plenty of wood on the ball but "I'm just not hitting them in the open places."

Hutchinson referred back to Saturday's game when Bob Purkey lost although coming through with a fine pitching performance. "It could have had an effect on us," he said.

There was general agreement among the Reds that Ford was not as tough Sunday as he was Wednesday although the Cincinnati still didn't score against him.

"He was not as good as he was in New York," said Hutchinson. "He wasn't as tough as Wednesday but he changed his pitching pattern completely," said Gordy Coleman. "In the other game he was throwing us curves and breaking stuff and today he was throwing that hummer."

Written for The Associated Press
 CINCINNATI (AP)—You have no idea what it means to play behind a pitcher who can take charge and gain the respect of the other team. You could see what the Reds thought of Whitey Ford in the first inning. They knew he'd be hard to score on when they tried to bunt.

After Whitey struck out (Elio) Chacon with four pitches, Eddie Kasko and Vada Pinson both tried to bunt sinking curve balls. Whitey had so much stuff they couldn't drop one.

You always feel good when they try to bunt on Ford. It's right down his alley. Not only is he one of the greatest competitors in the game, but he is also a pretty good fielder.

And beating the Christy Mathewson (28 1-3 straight scoreless innings) and Babe Ruth (29 2-3 straight scoreless innings) records couldn't happen to a nicer guy. That's why we made him our player representative.

The Reds haven't gotten a run off Whitey in 14 innings and he had 18 scoreless innings in his two shutouts last year against Pittsburgh.

But in the fourth it looked like trouble when Kasko singled with none out. We were leading only 1-0. When Pinson came up I was playing a bit deep and I just caught his short fly at my knees after a long run. That's one fly I wanted. Then Whitey showed his best stuff to Frank Robinson but with two strikes he hit him on the foot. Two men on, one out. Then Whitey pitched out of the jam by getting dangerous Wally Post to hit a double play ball to Tony Kubek.

Outside of Whitey, everybody on the Yankees seems to have a hand in this series. Bobby Richardson picked up where he left off against Pittsburgh last year and now has hit safely in his last six World Series games. In this series he is 8 for 17 with five of them off Jim O'Toole a fine pitcher.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Few trading features appeared in a mixed stock market which showed a tendency to the downside early this afternoon. Trading was moderate.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off .10 at 258.50 with industrials up .10, rails off .30 and utilities unchanged.

Most key stocks showed fractional gains or losses. A few blue chips, however, took fairly sharp losses, dampening the overall average.

Ford was soft in a spotty motor group as the strike drabbed on with no immediate prospects for settlement. Steels edged off as little improvement was reported in steel production, dampened first by the General Motors strike and now by the Ford walkout.

Stock market comment was cheery, however, and forecasters looked for better prices in view of the continued business upturn and the apparent lull in international tensions.

Retail shares were mostly higher and aircrafts leaned to the upside while most other major sections were irregular.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 89 at 707.36. Prices on the American Stock Exchange moved generally higher in moderate trading.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U. S. government bonds declined slightly in moderate trading.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — Hog markets steady. Tops of 18.25-19.25 at Wilson, Nahantia, Kinston, New Bern, Benson, Mount Olive and Newton Grove; 18.50-19 at Rocky Mount; 18-19 at Smithfield; 18.50-18.75 at Bethel and Murfreesboro; 18.25-18.75 at Spring Hope; 18-18.50 at Pembroke; 19 at Clinton, Fayetteville, Elizabethtown, Pink Hill; 18.75 at Tarboro, Enfield and Scotland Neck; 18.50 at Dunn, Rich Square, Albertson, Greensboro and Goldsboro; 18.25 at Castle Hayne, Kenly, Burgaw, Lillington and Siler City.

Wilson cash cattle prices steady. Steers and heifers, choice 22.50-24.50, good 21-23, standards 17-20; beef cows 13.50-16.50, heavy cut, 13.50-15, light, 13-15, heavy bulks 16.50-18.50.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — North Carolina poultry markets: Fryers and broilers steady. Base farm price 9 1/2 to 10, mostly 10, f.o.b. plant price 10.25 to 11.75.

Hunting Poison Source In Deaths

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Police Chief W. D. Blake said Sunday the cyanide poisoning deaths of two University of North Carolina students found dead in their rooms were "either double murder, a suicide pact or murder-suicide."

Police are continuing their investigation, while waiting for an analysis report on the contents of two milk shake cups found in the room shared by the two, James Michael Barham, 20, of Burlington, and William Harrison Johnson Jr. of Statesville.

Their bodies were discovered Friday morning in their dorm room, after they failed to report for self-help jobs in the dining hall.

An autopsy report received Saturday said the deaths resulted from cyanide poison. A six-man coroner's jury received the report.

Chief Blake said, "If we can locate the source of the poison, I believe we'll be a long way in clearing up the mystery."

Mercurocyanide is used as a cleansing agent prior to firing and baking porcelain teeth restorations.

The chief said that during the course of the investigation it was learned that a university student had deadly mercuric cyanide pills in his possession, but that the arrest of the student Sunday was not connected with the deaths.

Chief Blake identified the student as Ralph Sargent, 20, a junior from Plainfield, N.J., and said he was released under $400 bond on a charge of dispensing poison drugs. The chief emphasized that Sargent cooperated fully with officers, and told them he didn't even know the two students who died.

The course trains those taking it to use instruments to detect radiation, as well as offering instruction as to the dangers of fallout.

Marriner of Roper and Richard M. Marriner of Plymouth; 28 grandchildren, and 11 great grandchildren.

the building, and a sledge hammer, used to open the unit, were also at the site.

Officers noted the metal box had been rolled down an embankment behind the school and into a small creek.

Investigation into the theft is continuing.

Stolen Safe Is Found In Creek

A metal safe, taken from the V-C Fertilizer building September 13, was found yesterday in a creek behind South Greenville School.

Police detectives said the safe had been "busted open with a sledge hammer."

Part of the contents of the safe, including dynamite caps and papers, were also found at the scene. Investigators said a hand truck, used to roll the safe out of

Russia Claims Fastest Fleet Of Nuclear Subs

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union claimed today it has the world's fastest fleet of nuclear submarines, faster than the swiftest Atlantic liners.

A writer in Izvestia, the government paper, reported all are armed with long-range nuclear rockets.

The paper hinted that Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov was fired as defense minister and from the Presidium of the Communist party on Nov. 2, 1957, for opposing construction of the atomic sub. It said Premier Khrushchev made the decision to go ahead with building them and that he is known to Soviet sailors as "the father of the nuclear fleet which today guards our Soviet state."

Farmville People Urged Contribute

FARMVILLE—Farmville citizens last week received letters urging contribution to the Pitt County United Fund drive.

Farmville has been assigned a quota of $9,000 for county, state and national agencies and has assumed a quota of $3,500 for local projects such as the band, local scout needs, emergency relief and other funds.

Farmville's $9,000 share is 10 per cent of the Pitt County-wide goal for 1961 of some $90,000. Agencies, other than local projects, depending upon the Pitt United Fund include the American Red Cross, Boy and Girl Scouts, Mental Health, Association for the Blind, Association for Mentally Retarded Children, Salvation Army and Carolinas United that includes 12 more agencies.

Bryant Speaks To Ayden Lions

AYDEN — Sherrill Bryant of the Agricultural Department of Washington presented an illustrated discussion of the North Carolina Agribusiness Caravan at the Ayden Lions Club meeting on Friday night.

Showing a film of the caravan, Bryant stated that there is a continued need for production efficiency in producing cotton, tobacco, peanuts, corn and other crops that farmers already have, together with the production of livestock that will provide a steady market and stable prices for the produce. It would also offer more job opportunities with better wages, he said.

The caravan travelled through Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas to study the modern agricultural techniques used so that those techniques could be explored in the agribusiness of North Carolina.

Chairman Van D. Hatch reported that the Calendar Drive had been completed and the order of the calendars had been mailed, with the receipt acknowledged. Some 928 listings and 298 calendars have been sold in Ayden. The calendars are expected to arrive in December, when they will be distributed to appropriate parties, he noted.

President Kermit Surrrell presided at the meeting. The invocation was delivered by Lion Ben Phillips.

Julius A. Gaskins Funeral Wednesday

Mr. Julius Albert (Billy) Gaskins, 55, was killed in an automobile accident near Greensboro early Sunday morning.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Kit Swamp Christian Church near Vanceboro Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock and burial will be in the church cemetery.

Mr. Gaskins, son of the late Elree and Ruth Arnold Gaskins, was born and reared near Vanceboro and attended the Vanceboro School. He was a veteran of World War II. For the past several years he worked as a watchmaker and at the time of his death was employed in Winston-Salem.

Surviving are four brothers: Elree Arnold Gaskins of Fayetteville, Arthur Gaskins of the U. S. Army, now stationed in Europe, Thomas A. Gaskins of the U. S. Army, now stationed in California; and Gene Gaskins of Fayetteville; a sister, Mrs. Thurman L. Smith of Fayetteville; and his grandmothers: Mrs. Julius Arnold and Mrs. Katherine Gaskins of Vanceboro.

Tobacco Sale Is 'Not Quite Full'

Today's sale on the Greenville tobacco market was described as "not quite full" while growers continued to receive higher prices than in other seasons here, according to sales supervisor W. L. Whedbee.

Whedbee noted Greenville during last week's five days of sales sold a total of 5,495,424 pounds for $3,528,499 and an average of $64.21 per 100 pounds.

Quality today, Whedbee said, was about the same as Friday's "with a substantial amount of immature, nondescript and damaged tobacco" on local floors.

The supervisor described as "still outstanding today" the fact that "many customers from over 100 miles away are still selling on our warehouse floors." He added, "They are pleased with their sales and expect to return with more tobacco this year."

Mixed Term Of Superior Court

Pitt County Superior Court convened today for a one-week mixed term. Presiding was Judge J. William Copeland of Murfreesboro.

The calendar for today's meeting of the county grand jury totaled 19 cases. Sixteen of 33 cases docketed for trial during the week were scheduled to be heard by Judge Copeland today.
