Miss Escolona Club Speaker

On Tuesday afternoon, the Chlores Book Club met at the home of Mrs. Roger Mann. Mrs. James Cheatham, Mrs. Paul Reinartz, Mrs. Guy Smith Jr., and Mrs. William Steele were guests for the afternoon.

After a snack plate was served, the business meeting was called to order. Mrs. Richard Stokes, III, a book club member, who will be moving to Charlotte, was remembered with a gift.

Mrs. Charles White Jr. was elected to fill the vacancy in the office of treasurer.

The program for the afternoon had to do with U. S. relations with South America.

Mrs. John Farley began the program by outlining the series on Latin America which appeared in Life. She gave the book club an overall look at the conditions in South America and added that Castro-type revolution may help relieve them of their troubles.

Miss Julia Escolona, the guest speaker for the afternoon, attended the University of Chile where she majored in English. She came to the United States last year on a student exchange program and is attending East Carolina College.

Miss Escolona gave the South American view of the relationship. She agreed that the chief issue in the relations between the United States and South America is the fact that we gradually lost prestige after World War II. The United States made their big mistake when they supported the dictators; therefore, lowering the average people.

After being in the United States, Miss Escolona said she realized our intentions were good but while in South America it seemed as if we were giving so we could receive more.

The ideal solution to her was an "education program in every field" so we may be able to break down the barrier in communication between our countries.

"We must understand one another's intentions," she concluded.

After the books were distributed, the meeting was adjourned.

President Elected At Meet

The first local Belvoir-Falkland district N.C.A.A. meeting was held Oct. 9. This meeting began with the nomination and selection of a new president, Mrs. Ralph Tyson. The voting was conducted by the acting president, Mr. E. N. Warren, who called the meeting to order.

Following a brief discussion of club business, the members were divided into two groups. The high school group, under the leadership of Miss Elizabeth Edwards, county high school supervisor, discussed some methods of awakening the students' interest in their studies, and some characteristics a good teacher must possess. Miss Edwards then explained the grading and plotting of individual scores on the Iowa Test of Educational Development, for high school students.

Sweet Potato Quality Is Good

BETHEL—"The quality of the sweet potatoes for market in this area is quite good this year," said J. M. Butterworth, manager of the Bethel potato market, "and prices are good—about $3 per bushel." The Bethel potato market opened officially Oct. 9.

Manager Butterworth said that the potato market should be in full swing by the end of next week. He explained, "As soon as the peanuts in this area have been harvested, the potato market will pick up."

"The acres planted this year are rather small but the yield per acre appears to be pretty good," Butterworth said. "It is recommended that farmers use new baskets when they bring their potatoes to market and that they try to fill them to a weight of about 60 pounds."

Government inspectors are present each day to grade for the buyers. Buyers in the Bethel area are Culliver Potato Company, Bethel Storage Company, Bunting and Taylor Potato Company, E. G. Ward, all of Bethel, and Corbett Erother's of Wilmington.

J. L. Brown is serving as auctioneer and Mrs. Herbert R. Brown is bookkeeper.

The Bethel market has storage facilities for a half-million bushels of potatoes. The produce is generally shipped by truck to the northern market and the eastern seaboard.

praised the grouping from a scholastic viewpoint. about the progress of their offspring while grouped in this manner" as far as she has been able to ascertain.

As a teacher, she stated, "I am thoroughly convinced that more children can be taught better under a grouping program such as ours."

There is an important factor not to be overlooked in this type of grouping. While much emphasis is being put on the children's talents, the fact that it may as much benefit the teacher and the student in another way has not been so publicized. Mrs. Holmes notes this point: "Grouping in this way can not only help put a child where the teaching may be directed more nearly at him, but it can also utilize the special strengths of the individual teachers."

Pitt County, on the other hand, was the only center in the state to use the itinerant teacher idea last year. This year, vast changes were made.

Mrs. Mary H. Faber, in charge of the program for the county, said this year, "We are trying to work with the children within the framework of their classrooms." Teachers in the classrooms themselves will seek to enrich the instruction of those students who qualify. Acceleration has been omitted from the program, and the itinerant teacher idea has been shelved.

The difference between the two programs is this: the itinerant teacher last year served two schools out of all Pitt County. Working within the classroom, children all over the county will benefit from the program.

There are two other programs of special education which are as important to the people concerned as the program for the talented. Greenville, again, has been a forerunner in trying to educate those not as talented as the above.

Greenville and Pitt County were one of the few school systems in the state which offered education to the trainable when the Trainable School was first established here five years ago at Third Street School.

The school now occupies its own building, located on the grounds of Junius H. Rose High School in Greenville, and has an enrollment of 21 students. Financing of this school is facilitated by the Pitt County United Fund, and materials and supplies often have been given by the Civitan Club, which has adopted that school as a special project. The state aids the local school, also.

Here students have learned to read and write and to enjoy the companionship of each other and their teachers. It is a state requirement that a teacher must be especially trained in this field of education.

The educable special education program which provides for still another type of student, is conducted at Wahl-Coates School in Greenville, as a part of the Greenville school system, and with three sections: primary, elementary and intermediate. There are about 60 students enrolled in this program now. Mrs. Ellen Carroll, director of instruction for Greenville schools, has stated. No child is placed in any special education grouping without parental consent and consultation.

A detailed study is made for each child considered for such grouping. This "information" consists of the child's name, birth-date, individual psychological test given by a psychologist, and a group intelligence test. The remarks are sent to the State Department of Public Instruction in Raleigh, whose officials give guidelines. If the local school wants to deviate from the guidelines, a psychologist must make a recommendation as to what should be done.

Conferences also are held with the parents before any child is placed in a special group, regardless of test results or teachers recommendations.

Mrs. Carroll stated that the tests and checking by the State department, as well as that done locally, assure the parents that their children are getting fair treatment.

It is logical to assume, from the information given, that all these programs are based on a type of grouping, using as bases the intelligence quotient, chronological age, personality, personal needs, emotional stability, and wishes of the parents as far as each child is concerned. Other criteria also are used.

"Education, then, as Dr. Charles Carroll, state superintendent of public instruction, has stated, is certainly "a personal matter."

"Quality education may be defined as affording each child the kind of instruction most commensurate with his abilities and interests and most compatible to his personal needs and the needs of society."

"The term 'quality education' acquires meaning only when it is defined in terms of what happens to an individual child. . . . Dr. Carroll stated in the North Carolina Public School Bulletin for September.

Backward, turn backward
O' time in thy flight!

" . . . Thrift seems to be a forgotten virtue. It is the proper thing nowadays to be living beyond your income. He who economizes and opens a saving's bank account is the exception. In all our cities people are spending money upon foolish extravagances and are looking to the income of the next year to pay their debts. One thing is certain. If the American people will not live within their incomes, the capital supply of the country will not increase, new industries will not be created, and the wages of labor will fall. Saving is a cardinal economic virtue. Without it, material growth and prosperity are impossible."

The above quotation is an excerpt from an editorial in The Journal of Accountancy, October 1911.

The 'Common Market' Affects Us

Too many people have the casual and erroneous opinion that seemingly far-removed things such as the emerging Common Market of European nations should be of little, if any concern to people in this country or this community.

The impact of this new economic arrangement in Europe, however, may have a very real impact upon the economy of Eastern North Carolina and Pitt County just as it may on the economy of other sections of the nation.

It offers another case-in-point of the fact that the world is constantly becoming a close-knit community of nations and what happens in one section may have repercussions in many other areas.

The economy of Pitt County and Eastern Carolina is stiff largely dependent upon agriculture, and tobacco is still the mainstay of agriculture in North Carolina. Approximately one-third of the flue-cured tobacco produced on farms in North Carolina finds its way into foreign markets, and a considerable amount of this is consumed in the European nations. Policies and tariffs set by the European Common Market in future years on tobacco imports from the United States will directly affect the position of American—of Pitt County—tobacco with respect to nations which are a part of the foreign market. They will, to a large degree determine whether tobacco from Pitt County farms will be able to compete with that produced in other countries for sale to nations within the Common Market. They will directly affect the imports of American flue-cured tobacco by European nations, and this in turn will have a direct bearing upon the economy of Pitt County.

It is only natural, perhaps, that most people living in Pitt County consider themselves far removed from the economic experts who are shaping the structure of Europe's Common Market. In reality, however, the economic future of the farmer, the merchant, the professional man in Pitt may be influenced by decisions which are reached around the conference tables concerning the Common Market.

More perhaps than many other sections of the United States, the economy of Eastern Carolina is greatly affected by the position of its chief product in the world markets. And policies adopted by the European Common Market regarding American tobacco will have repercussions—favorable or otherwise—right here in Pitt County.

When The Chips Are Down, Elders Called

A sharp contrast in key figures has developed in the New Frontier administration of President Kennedy as he has found it advisable to call on several "old soldiers" to serve in important positions.

When the administration of President Kennedy began to take shape the President surrounded himself with some of the youngest men in history to hold high posts in the administration of the United States. It was natural, perhaps, since the President himself was the youngest man elected to the highest office in the land. The administration was dominated by young men whose hair had not turned gray and whose physique had not yet rounded with the proverbial middle-age spread.

In recent months, however, the growing international crisis has brought about an apparent change in viewpoint of the administration at least so far as special military assignments are concerned. With the coming of the crisis on Berlin, one might have expected the President to tap some promising young general to become his special adviser on-the-spot in Berlin. Instead, the President called on retired Gen. Lucius Clay, a hero of World War II and the commander of American forces in Berlin during the blockade of 1948-49.

When the President felt the need for a part-time consultant to the Army on special warfare training and readiness of National Guard divisions, he again passed over the field of younger men in the military and tapped Gen. James A. Van Fleet from retirement to handle the important task.

Perhaps these may be isolated cases. But perhaps they represent a new trend in the administration of combining the skills and ability of bright young Phi Betas with those of Old Soldiers for whose experience there is no substitute.

The old soldiers who recently have taken their place in the forefront of the New Frontier administration offer a provocative ground for speculation on things to come.

Conclusions For The Jump-Prone

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Jumping to conclusions, and how many do you agree with?

Most books on how to achieve success are written by people you never heard of before.

A woman will believe any man who flatters her beauty, but always doubts a man who praises her choice of hats.

If science ever perfects push-button weather control, the guy who pushes the button will be the most hated man in America. There just isn't any kind of weather that pleases everybody.

Any goal in life is still possible for a teen-ager who studies in a home that has neither TV set nor telephone. We might never have heard of Abraham Lincoln if he had been born after Alexander Graham Bell.

The only admirable trait I know of in heavy gamblers is that, unlike the occasional bettor, they rarely complain about their losses. It seems to be part of their unwritten code to take the blows of chance in silence.

A poor man always pays his grocery bill first; a man living ostentatiously beyond his means generally pays his grocer last—if he ever does.

The surest way to lose a girl you are courting is to send her fresh flowers every day. The surest way to keep from borrowing her is to borrow money from her. No woman can ever lose interest in a man who owes her money.

It takes more real courage to learn to eat raw oysters than it does to rob a bank.

FAITH IS THE ANSWER

We can be sure of one thing—God is always ready to give. The Epistle to the Hebrews tells us that faith is the giving of substance to things hoped for; that is, it is the power within us that enables us to cooperate with the Holy Spirit that God can give us the things He has always wanted to give us. Faith tells us that there is a victory which overcometh the world—even our faith.

If people only knew what faith could do for them in the solving of their problems, the quieting of their minds, the fulfilling of their desires, the achieving of their tasks, they would stop leaning on their own powers

On the surface we like the companionship of those who share our vices, a comradeship often born of necessity. Deep within us, however, we despise them for being as weak as we are.

A boss may be telling the truth when he says he doesn't want to be surrounded by "yes men"—but he does want to be partly surrounded by them. There is nothing lonelier or more frightening than to be in power without someone around to assure you that you are wise.

Many of us take pride in keeping up with what is going on in the world. But no one man in five over 40 years of age can name three new popular tunes written this year. Most can't even name one.

It takes more than honesty for grownup person to keep a completely truthful diary of what he does and thinks. He has to be pretty foolhardy, too.

The poorest investor in the world is a man who deliberately seeks happiness by marrying a wealthy woman.

For some reason, a left-handed girl holds a mysterious fascination for a right-handed man. He thinks she may be different from other girls. She isn't.

Churchgoers who read astrology books and also carry a rabbit's foot for good luck are merely trying to play both ends against the middle.

Optimism never dies. Even in such a cynical age as ours there are still people who believe the pictures they see in seed catalogues.

which are broken reeds and would begin to lean on the everlasting power of God. The experience of devout believers has furthermore been that they can pray for others, people in far distant places, and have things happen in their lives which are simply beyond any explanation other than that the power of God works where and how it will. Religious faith is the greatest blessing any man can have. It raises the mediocre into the realm of achievement, the sorrowing into comfort, the despairing into triumph, and the wicked into forgiveness. Greater blessings than these do not exist on God's fair earth. Faith is the answer to most of life's questions.

Wonderful Wizards and the Wheat

Pyramid Of Know-How

Like it or not, everybody that pokes his head outdoors nowadays is caught up in the whirlwind progress and advancement of scientific know-how, methods and accomplishment.

It's unquestionably phenomenal that some scientific products become developed and then completely outmoded, all within the same decade. Progress of the sciences, obviously, is directly proportional to the population growth. Both are geometric.

This is terrific, we say. It's a boon to mankind that its members can display such tremendous ability to construct such a mammoth inverse pyramid of knowledge.

Just think how many thousands of years man sat on the river bank wishing he could soar through the air. Then, in little more than a half-century, he got off the ground, perfected his flying machines, then went into orbit around the earth. Before long he'll be selling tickets to the moon.

But, to back up to that inverse pyramid. What about it? How many larger and overhanging layers can be safely constructed upon smaller ones before the whole 'bang topples sideways from its apex?

Perhaps it can be safely done. But the very idea maybe presents a new line of logical reasoning. Under existing popular physical rules, it can't be done with stones. Maybe the intricate balance that can keep this top-heavy pyramid on an even keel has little to do with physics. Remember there's a human element as yet undefined in precise terms by the sciences.

This element, inherent in everybody but actually explained by nobody, perhaps may be the equilibrium for that pyramid. It's the protoplasm of man's achievements. It, too, must keep pace with the geometric advancement of technical progress.

Far be it from any classicist on philosopher (or intellectual quack) to advocate a lull in man's progressive mastery of the elements; however, a topic of this type brings to mind an old story, often (but apparently less often nowadays) re-told:

An aged and well-experienced mountain guide who had escorted thousands of sight-seers through the Swiss Alps embarked on another such mission with a group of London noblemen his charges.

It was the usual trek up the well-beaten path, graded somewhat to allow more rapid and less tiring ascent to the magnificent view from the three-mile-high peak.

The old guide, whose muscle-and-bone was perfectly attuned to his routine climb, had spent the bulk of his 60-plus years under none but God's roof. It was every-day business—with him. Still, every climb, every view was a new one.

As was his custom, he called a halt to the hike only minutes after the party had stopped for lunch near the peak. He sat quietly, almost reverently, on a huge stone that marked the last bend in the trail, less than 100 feet from the peak that spread before it one of the world's most beautiful mountain scenes.

The sight-seers were impatient. They chomped at the bits. Almost angrily they demanded of the old guide: "Why have you stopped here? Only five minutes more and we'll be at the peak."

The old man answered quietly in a reverent tone: "We'll go in a moment. But it's always so much better up there if you stop here to let your spirit catch up with you."

Other Editors Saying Into The 'Thicket'

(Greensboro Daily News)

Mr. Justice Frankfurter was right to describe it once as a "thicket," even if the Supreme Court should now decide it is not "political." We mean, of course, the question whether citizens of urban areas in the various states, denied due representation by legislatures that refuse to reapportion, should have relief in the federal courts.

The question is now squarely, inescapably before the Supreme Court; and the attorney for three Tennessee cities, Charles Rhyme, centered his opening arguments this week on the proposition that cities "are at the end of the road. The only way we can get relief is through this court."

The evidence, sadly enough, is overwhelmingly on Mr. Rhyme's side. The parody of constitutional government has reached monstrous proportions in states all over the country, where the quick-flowing shift of people from the land to the city has far outrun the capacity of state legislatures to act against their own vested interest. North Carolina's Senate reapportionment problem, through grave, is minor in comparison to the problem in some New England states, where the representation of mere square footage of territory classes many counties and congressional districts with the famed "rotten boroughs" of before 1832 in England. It could be said in extension of the pre-Reform Bill days in England that democracy was still at best an experiment, and at worst a radical nostrum which the best people shunned. That is no longer true—at least in theory—in 1961. But the rotten boroughs abound.

It is really too bad that the Supreme Court has been called upon to deal with reapportionment. If it refuses to overrule the Tennessee court from which the test case arises, it will, in effect, issue a writ to every dallying legislature in the country to go on dallying and putting a brave face on its bland refusal to reapportion. If, on the other hand, the court overrules the Tennessee decision and rules that the under-represented city folks have been denied due process under the 14th Amendment, problems of implementation will arise: For instance, can it be maintained that if the malapportionment of a legislature is "unconstitutional" every piece of legislation affecting a citizen it has passed since that malapportionment became a legal fact is also "unconstitutional" and is thereby rescinded? If so, a decision that is right from the constitutional point of view may be an engraved invitation to chaos.

But before the legislators complain, let them reflect that the tragedy is of their own making.

Flow Of Savings To California

By ELMER ROESSNER

The crackdown on savings and loan association premiums may end one of the maddest eras of American financing. But it will not stem the amazing flow of savings from East to West, largely to California.

California—as they are beginning to teach even in the schools of Florida—is growing faster in population than any other state. This is creating an unprecedented demand for housing, whipped up by real estate promoters that make Florida promoters look like boys. Demand for housing is so great that prospects will pay 6 1/2 percent and more for mortgage money. For various reasons, the big finance companies and savings banks have been unable to supply the money. One reason is that laws of many states restrict savings banks' lending to the state itself, another is that lenders fear that a drop in the interest rate would induce many mortgagors to refinance their indebtedness. One never knows what the Kennedy Administration will do in the home-loan field.

But California mortgages companies can and do lend money at 6 1/2 percent. And to get this money to lend, they offer depositors 4 1/2 percent considerably more than almost all savings banks and most common stocks pay. Savings banks in New York, for instance, are limited by law to 3.75 percent interest, and A. T. & T. pays less than 3 percent on current market prices.

The 2 percent difference between the cost of borrowed money and the cost of loaned money is lush and tempting. Assets of savings and loan associations in California totaled $10 billion at the start of this year; which mean an interest collection of up to $650 million dollars. Of this, $450 million was due depositors and the remaining $200 million for rent, services, payrolls, premiums, advertising, and salaries and fees. PREMIUMS GALORE Not satisfied with the magnetic power of 4 1/2 or more percentage points, the California s&l association offered a vast array of premiums to depositors. Carving sets, toasters, desk sets, dishes, ice bucket, car cushions and bric-a-brac were offered.

Five years ago, the Federal Home Loan Bank board reined these giveaways. It declared that of the 6,302 s&l associations, the Federally chartered 1,885 could give away nothing more than $2,500 worth of loot for every $1,000 placed on deposit. Since the Federally chartered agencies do the far greater part of all business, this would severely limit premiums. But the board reckoned without California ingenuity. The s&l associations started offering discount coupons good for large reductions in the price of television sets and other major appliances. When this dodge was ruled out, they started offering door prizes—such as Cadillacs. To avoid lottery laws, anybody who stepped in to an s&l office, whether to deposit or not, was given a chance. A FRANKENSTEIN'S MONSTER But eventually the competition became a burden on the s&l associations. A study by the Stanford Research Institute showed the California companies were paying up to 12 percent of the

Value Of UN Proven

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

For many years, beginning with the San Francisco Conference, I wrote numerous articles opposed to the organization and the existence of the United Nations. Some of the reasons for my opposition have been justified by the course of events.

But there can be no satisfaction in that. Many unhappy prophecies prove to be true and one must be very unhappy that it should be so. It would have been more satisfactory if the United Nations had proved to be a grand success and that those of us who prophesied failure were shown to be frauds. And perhaps we shall be in the end.

Taking the situation as of 1961, the existence of the United Nations is of tremendous importance to the United States. And that in what counts so far as the American people are concerned. We cannot build policy without regard to the essential necessities of this country. Why is the United Nations of value to the United States in the year 1961? The answer is that we need a forum where our representatives can speak directly to the world. President Kennedy's recent speech before the United Nations did more to clear the atmosphere than miles of propaganda releases could do. He defeated Soviet Russia in Africa with one speech. This will not happen every time. We face a very tough period in our history and we are likely to fail as often as we succeed, but our chances will be better if the instruments available are beneficial to us.

It is true that Soviet Russia has used the anticommunism issue to build an Afro-Asian opposition to the United States. Soviet Russia did not invent anti-colonialism; it established that the anti-colonialism issue was ripe prior to World War I; that President Woodrow Wilson and Premier Jan Smuts of South Africa brought the issue before the nations at the Paris Peace Conference; that it was incorporated in the concept of a League of Nations; that the Gandhi movement in India supported by the United States; that at Teheran and Yalta President Franklin D. Roosevelt was clearly antagonistic to colonialism and that United States policy was designed to free the colonial countries and to recognize them as soon as possible.

It is a tragedy of history that the one nation which has consistently held the doctrine of self-determination throughout its history, the United States, should be regarded as pro-colonial. This is so because our principal allies have been and are the great colonial countries. On the other hand, Soviet Russia, which has pursued a policy of expansion, is universally regarded as anti-colonial. This paradox is the result not of Soviet propaganda, which could not have accomplished so much, but rather of more than a century of antagonism between the colored and the white peoples. The Western whites are lumped together, as we erroneously lump all Latin-Americans together, or as most of the world lump all who live in what is called China as one people. Ethnical complexities cannot be simplified by giving a people a title.

In the United Nations, the newer countries, many of which have been freed by American assistance, can, by experience, learn the truth. Most of the new countries are not prepared for self-government and have no economic basis for stability. It will take them a long time to discover what their position in the world really is and that they cannot stand on their own. However, as long as the United Nations continues to exist and we are in it, these newer countries cannot be gobbled up by the great Powers. The battle for the ownership of the Congo is an example of the period that faces the small nations. For here is a struggle between Soviet Russia and Western Europe for control of a nation not ready to govern itself and not possessing the economy to maintain its people on a rising standard of living.

The Congo would have been gobbled up by now were it not for the existence of the United Nations. The alternative would

Reflecting On SPORTS By George Bryant

Phantoms Seek Comeback

Tonight the Rose High Phantoms will seek a comeback from last week's downfall to the Tigers of Tarboro. The Greenville eleven departed by bus about 3 o'clock this afternoon for the long journey to Elizabeth City and what could be one of the toughest games of the year for the local boys. The Phantoms need to win this game in the worst sort of way if they are going to stay in the race for the conference championship. Both teams have one conference loss to their credit when they come face-to-face tonight. Last week the Elizabeth City boys broke an 18-game winning streak for the Edenton eleven and will be hard to handle this week.

Coach Bud Phillips of the Phantoms said that his boys will have to play the best game they possibly can to win this one, especially on offense. Few touchdowns have been scored against the powerful Elizabeth City defense this season. Coach Honey Johnson has been building this team for several years now and his efforts have proved successful. However, if the Phants put forth an effort like they have on the practice field this week they should be able to overcome the home team. At least we hope they can, even though it is FRIDAY THE 18th.

In other local high school games tonight Ayden will remain at home to host the LaGrange eleven. Coach Stuart Tripp's club has an undefeated record this season and they are determined to keep it that way. Over at Farmville the Red Devils will take on the second-place boys from Bath. The visitors have come out conference champs for the past two years in two different leagues, both six-man and eight-man football. This year they are trying hard for the eleven-man Coastal Conference title.

East Carolina

The Pirates come face-to-face with Western Carolina College Saturday night in what has been defined as a "grudge battle" by the ECC coaching staff. This game should be one of the more exciting contests of the season in the ECC Stadium and a capacity crowd is expected to be on hand. The Marines will also be out in full force with a marching band and a drill team to add to the night's attraction. The visitors have a 1-3 record so far this season and they undoubtedly will be trying hard to improve this record and mar the clean slate in the loss column for the local Pirates.

The Pick Sheet

Last week was the first attempt by this columnist to pick the winners. We feel like the outcome was not too bad for a beginner. Out of nine games we called six of them right. This week we are shooting for an improvement. Our choices are as follows:

Rose High over Elizabeth City, Ayden over LaGrange, Bath over Farmville, Robersonville over Plymouth, East Carolina over Western Carolina, Appalachian over Catawba, Tampa over Elon, Lenoir Rhyne over Guilford, and Newberry over Wofford. In the Atlantic Coast Conference we are going to pick Maryland over the University of North Carolina, Clemson over Wake Forest, Duke over Georgia Tech, North Carolina State over Alabama, LSU over South Carolina and VMI over Virginia.

Bucs Meet Western Carolina Saturday

By GEORGE BRYANT
Reflector Sports Writer

The East Carolina eleven will meet the Catamounts of Western Carolina College here Saturday night at 8 o'clock in hopes of gaining their fifth win of the season.

The visitors this week are bringing a 1-3 record with them with two of the losses being conference games. The Cats, as they are often called, won their opener with Carson-Newman. Then on successive weeks they lost to Appalachian, the University of Tampa and Catawba-East Carolina at the present time has an undefeated record with four wins to its credit.

Grudge Battle
Assistant Coach Sal Gero of the Pirates said today that the battle between these two ball clubs is more or less a grudge contest and that both teams would be up for the game. The grudge is probably a result of the fact that both schools are state institutions with about the same name and were both teachers colleges in the early days.

Coach Gero scouted the Western Carolina eleven last week against Catawba. He said, "They are a young scrappy club with a lot of hustle." Gero added that their quarterback, Ken Morgan, is about the same type ball player as quarterback George Wooten of Elon. "Morgan loves to run the ball and has gained a lot of valuable yardage for the team this season," he noted.

Cats Make Mistakes
The East Carolina scout also pointed out that the Western Carolina eleven will make a lot of mistakes during the course of a game. But he added, "They always manage to make up for these through hustle."

Head Pirate Coach Jack Boone said today that the main problem for his boys will be to stop the Cats' quarterback, Morgan. He added that to stop Morgan his boys would have to do a better job of pass defense than they did against the Elon Christians last week. "We expect the visitors this week to pass a great deal, but not for distance. Morgan throws primarily for the short yardage," Boone added.

In general, the Pirate coaching staff feels like the boys are in good physical shape for the coming game. There were a few minor scrapes in the Elon game, but nothing serious and all of the key players should be ready for a hard game Saturday.

Young Pirates Improving
Coach Boone commented that a lot of his young boys were improving and that the Pirates have a good bit more depth in the backfield than during the early part of the season.

However, Boone said, "We are not going to play Western Carolina by its record. They have a much better ball club than the won-loss column shows." The Cats started the season with a lot of young boys with little experience, Boone added.

The Pirate mentor stated that if the East Carolina offense this week is as good as the first three quarters against Elon the boys should be able to come through in good shape. At the present time the Pirates are the leading rushers in the conference, according to Boone, and they are also leading in the won-loss column.

Review Day Thursday
Thursday's practice session for the Bucs was mostly a review and running day. Some emphasis was put on the passing defense along with some work on punt returns and punting. Today the boys were scheduled to have a pre-game warmup and work on kickoffs and kickoff returns.

Rouse At Quarterback
In the backfield Boone plans to have Don Rouse calling the signals at quarterback and Nick Hilgert at fullback. Left halfback will again be Tommy Matthews and the right half will be handled by either Thomas Michel or Larry Rudisill. Both Michel and Rudisill are freshmen.

Western Carolina Backfield
In the backfield for the Cats will probably be Ken Morgan calling the signals at quarterback, Lew Bost at fullback and Jimmy Bryant at left half. The right halfback will either be Bruce Peterson or Frank Campbell. Peterson was injured during the Catawba game last week and it is not known whether or not he will be back in action Saturday or not.

At any rate, the game should be an interesting one and according to reports, another capacity crowd is expected. Saturday is Marine night at East Carolina and the Second Marine Division Band and Drill Team will be present. Also about 500 other Marine guests are expected to be present.

Citadel Will Not Be Caught Unaware

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
William and Mary's Indians, who mopped up the Southern Conference football race last week by upsetting Furman, try to mess it up some more Saturday — but this time they'll be lacking a secret weapon.

The secret weapon against Furman was surprise — an offense of unexpected ferocity, a defense of unexpected sturdiness. Obviously the Paladins hadn't thought the Indians would be that good.

One fellow who wasn't surprised, though, was The Citadel Coach Eddie Teague, who takes his Cadets into Williamsburg Saturday afternoon for a crack at the reviving Indians.

"I don't know how we'll do, but I can tell you this much — however good they are, we won't be caught unawares," says Teague. "All our scouting reports — even when they were losing — told us William and Mary had a team with a fine potential. They always hit hard."

Teague's team goes into Williamsburg in a three-way tie with Furman and George Washington for the conference lead. Each has a 2-1 league mark.

"We think we have a good chance at the championship, as anybody," says Teague. "But we're not looking far ahead. We've got three more conference games, and we're worrying about them as they come up. We think we've improved a lot in the last few weeks — but so have the others."

The W&M - Citadel skirmish, which could project W&M into the conference title picture should the Indians stage another upset, is one of seven Saturday games on the schedule for the nine conference clubs.

The only other game matching conference rivals finds George Washington (2-1 in league play) flexing its new-found muscles at Richmond (1-2) in a tilt set for 8:30 p.m. (EST).

Non-conference action in the afternoon sends West Virginia to Pitt, VMI against Virginia at Norfolk, and Presbyterian to Davidson. After dark, Virginia Tech takes on Tulane at New Orleans, and Furman is at home to Howard (Ala.) College.

Houk Reveals New Plans For Yankees' Blanchard

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Blanchard, the New York Yankees' bench ace, will work out at both first base and the outfield next spring as well as at his usual catching job.

Ralph Houk, 42, revealed his plans for Blanchard Thursday after he signed a new two-year contract to manage the Yankees at a reported $45,000 annual salary.

"Blanchard is a very pleasant problem," said Houk at a news conference. "I intend to use him as a catcher and also work him in the outfield and at first base, in case anything should happen to Moose (Skowron)."

"Nobody noticed much but we worked him in the outfield practically every day this year. He used to be an outfielder, you know. He always was a good judge of a fly ball. In our judgment he can be an acceptable outfielder."

Blanchard was used in right field during the World Series with Cincinnati when Mickey Mantle was out of the lineup. Houk moved Roger Maris to center. With Elston Howard doing all the catching, there was no room for Blanchard back there. Still Blanchard came through with a pinch homer that tied the third game and hit a homer, double and single in the finale as the Yanks won in five games.

"You always like to improve your club," said Houk, who just finished his first year as Yankee manager. "We'd like to strengthen our bench. I don't anticipate any big changes. I would like to get one more starting pitcher but we wouldn't give up front line men, so we may not get one."

"Of course," Houk said, "you can't expect (Whitey) Ford to win 30 or 40. If he does as good (25) we'll be satisfied. (Luis) Arroyo proved he is a big league relief pitcher. (Ralph) Terry improved. (Bud) Daley will be a mainstay next year either as a starter or in relief. (Jim) Coates showed great improvement, too."

"I am satisfied with the club as of now but maybe things might happen like the Army. You can't say you won't trade."

Small College Offense Leader

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Arnone, Cal Poly (Pomona) quarterback who accounted for 311 yards last weekend, takes over as the nation's small college total offense leader, the NCAA Service Bureau said today.

Arnone, who had his big day against Redlands, increased his total yards to 729 and supplanted Billy Connors of Salem (W. Va.), who was held to 81 yards.

Connors dropped to fourth with 694 yards. Sophomore half Bobby Lisa of St. Mary's (Kan.) is second with 708 total yards and leads the rushers with 691. John Giles of Louisville has 701 total yards and third on the list.

Jan Lloyd of Occidental completed 21 of 30 passes for 293 yards and took over the passing leadership with 46 completions.

Other leaders are defending small college punting champion Joe Roy of New Mexico Highlands who has averaged 48.2 yards on 17 kicks and scoring leader John Nachtsheim of the University of Minnesota at Duluth, who has 68 points.

Shorts Is Underdog In A Welterweight Fight Sat.

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Matchmaker Teddy Brenner keeps Cecil Shorts' address handy. Whenever he needs a welterweight on short notice he knows he can call on Shorts.

As for Cecil, he's anxious to fight whenever he can get the payday. So for being the available guy on other occasions, Shorts was rewarded with the sub role against aggressive Jorge Fernandez of Argentina in the television ten-rounder at Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

The Cleveland boxer-puncher, 22, is a 2-1 underdog but it doesn't faze him one bit. He's happy in getting the shot at the No. 3 contender, his first Garden main event, and most important, a $4,000 purse.

Cecil got his big chance when Italy's Bruno Visintin couldn't make the overseas trip to fight Fernandez because of marital problems.

Shorts has put on some of his best fights on a sudden call. One of them was as a sub for Randy Sandy against Benny (Kid) Paret, the present world welterweight champion, more than two years ago. He outpointed the Cuban, who didn't hold the title at the time.

Cecil won't have it easy against Fernandez. Handsome Jorge is miffed because he lost a chance for the title when Paret regained the welter crown from Emile Griffith on a split decision. Fernandez was all set to fight Griffith, if Emile won, for the title on Dec. 9.

Cecil's record is 19-7-1, including nine knockouts. Fernandez, 25, has won five straight in building his record to 67-5-1, including 50 kayos.

Texas A&I Is First On Small College AP Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Texas A & I College's undefeated Javelinas solidified their hold on first place in The Associated Press' weekly small college football poll today.

The Javelinas, who didn't draw a first-place vote in the first poll a week ago, attracted five from the AP's regional board of experts by defeating East Texas State, 22-6, for their third straight victory.

Humboldt State of California moved up from fifth place to second and bagged two first-place votes by edging San Francisco State, 7-6.

Hillsdale College of Michigan, three a week ago, was upended 24-3 by Northern Michigan and dropped out of the top ten.

Unbeaten Delaware (3-0) moved into the elite group by trouncing Lafayette, 34-0.

The small college top ten (points figured on a basis of 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 from first through tenth places; first place votes in parentheses):

Tar Heels Better Be Ready

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Coach Tom Nugent.

On the eve of his team's departure for this weekend's football game with nationally 10th ranked Maryland, University of North Carolina Coach Jim Hickey was asked if the Tar Heels were ready.

"We'd better be," he replied. The Tar Heels lost to the Terps 22-19 last year with only 58 seconds to play when Maryland's brilliant end Gary Collins caught a pass in the end zone. As a reminder to Coach Hickey — if he needs it — that Collins is still around, the ace end from Williamsport, Pa., was named The Associated Press "Lineman of the Week." Collins was picked for his play in Maryland's 22-21 upset of Syracuse. In the game's waning moments, he caught a two-point conversion pass that spelled the victory for the Terps.

"The boys anticipate a real tough struggle with a fine North Carolina team," said Maryland and Virginia meeting Virginia Military in a game at Norfolk. Clemson has a 10-game winning streak going against Wake Forest in their series. The Tigers have won 18 of their meetings and Wake Forest 8. Clemson won last year's game 28-7. Clemson's overall record this year is 1-2 on a 21-17 loss to Florida, the loss to Maryland and the victory over North Carolina. Wake Forest is 6-3 with losses to Baylor (31-0), South Carolina (10-7) and Duke (23-3).

Both Maryland and North Carolina planned brief workouts today before their "Dad's Day" game in the Maryland stadium at College Park Saturday. Maryland has a 1-0 Atlantic Coast Conference record on a 24-21 victory over Clemson. North Carolina is 1-1 after beating N.C. State 27-22 and losing to Clemson 27-0.

The Maryland - North Carolina game is one of two-conference games for ACC teams this weekend. Wake Forest visits Clemson's "Death Valley" in the other game. The remaining four ACC teams meet strong non-conference foes: Duke at Georgia Tech, N.C. State at third-ranked Alabama, South Carolina host to Louisiana State.

Outfielder Gordon Windhorn was with 12 teams in 11 years before the Los Angeles Dodgers purchased his contract from Omaha last June.

Lion In The Hills

By JOHN B. PRESCOTT

CHAPTER 18
The forest fire was a thing alive; it had its own personality and character.

It was a ravening, lusty beast, mindless and insensate, yet it possessed a malign cunning, too, and all of time's primordial instinct for consuming destruction.

At seven o'clock, when the changing canyon breeze moved south, only five or six acres, mostly brush and jack pine in the extreme northwestern end of the campgrounds, were involved.

At eight o'clock, the whole northern end, except a narrow strip where the campsite access road crossed the creek, had been gutted. On the west, below the cliffs, the party of scorched, smoking ruin extended to the southern end of the grounds. Easternly from the cliffs, the ravaging flames had been temporarily brought to bay at a point about a hundred yards out, for here Claude Temple had directed that fire lanes, dividing the grounds north and south, be drawn all the way through to the timber down below.

In general, the main effort lay in keeping the fire hemmed in against the cliffs, where it was hoped that it might be brought under control before it reached the timber tract.

Falling this, the second stand would be made in the clearing where the blaze, having feasted on the timber, would have little further food to go on. Here it might be stopped dead and backfired into submission unless, by chance, it had enough momentum on the cliffside to reach the slide where the switchback trail went upward.

Once it got loose in the heavy and dry vegetation of the ancient avalanche, it would bypass the clearing and, around that, plunge back into the bottoms and on southward into renewed heavy growth.

Nothing could stop it then. From the clearing on southward, the canyon widened all the way to Redstone. In the mouth, ten miles away. And with the blaze feeding on that ever-widening front, the canyon was sure to be lost, and the village with it.

At half-past eight, the command post was burned out. The remaining equipment was moved along an edge of the timber. At the same time, cats were ordered up and a road lane was driven on toward the clearing through the dense timber tract.

If he could not save it all, Claude was bound to save what he could.

Alec, trailing in Claude's nervous wake along the fire line, gradually came to sense the fearful growth in power which the fire derived from its ever-spreading front.

Each yard of added ground increased the total output of heat.

which, in turn, increased the draft which, in its turn, gave the blaze added impetus. In this self-feeding cycle of growth, stands of brush and solitary trees, untouched by free spark or flying brand, became sudden blazing torches. The air, superheated now, seared incandescent, and Alec began to worry more actively about Rusty.

A singed-looking man named Jacobs, who'd fire-bossed a number of summer lightning strikes on the Rim, seemed to speak for several.

"This thing's gaining steam on us, Claude. She's going to take a run if we don't get hold of her soon. The air's about burning now."

Claude was uneasy himself. "I know. But our chance'll come at the clearing."

"Maybe," Jacobs said, "we could pull her away from the cliff and pinch her off at the creek."

But Claude had his plan, if it would work.

"I'm using the cliffs for that," he said. "If we let her go to the creek, she may leap over; then we're lost. We can't fight it splitting our forces."

"It's mostly alder on the water," Jacobs said. "It don't burn like pine."

Standing about, the men listened carefully, maybe remembering that Jacobs was an old hand while Claude was still new.

"Pretty chancy," Claude said. "Once over, she'd never be caught again. With no clearing on that side to slow her, she'd run straight for Redstone."

From his own view, Jacobs pushed on the point.

"Redstone'll go if she reaches the slide, too," he said. "She'll climb to the Rim, as well as then you'll lose the whole forest."

Driven home, the point held Claude at bay for a moment. In the pause before his answer, Alec wondered if Claude had thought of that possibility himself.

But Claude held his ground. And it was now as if he sensed more danger in changing his mind than in what the fire might do on the slide; and in a flash of insight Alec came to see that it was all involved with the dark, unknown happening that had torn Claude apart so long ago.

"It's a chance I've got to take," he said. "I'm counting on the clearing and backfires to break the broad front. And the cliffs to pinch it out before the slide. The cliffs are bare rock up to the point."

Still, Jacobs had something left. "There's a headland up there, with a stand of pine on it," he said. "If that crown out, the slide'll go."

But the time to sway Claude was gone. And if doubts remained in his mind, he no longer showed them to the others. All bustle and nervous energy again, he waved the men back to their posts and set off toward the line himself.

Wednesday—"Where Are The Dead?"

Thursday—"Was Judas Predestined To Be Lost?"

Friday—"Divine Dynamite"

help forthcoming for a lion gone raving mad in flaming agony.

And, however unlikely this might be, there still remained the mortal terror which the steadily searing conflagration could inspire in a chained animal.

It was enough to make him shout to Claude. Claude was several yards beyond him, striding toward a cat which churned and roared in the fire lane. Alec yelled, sending his voice against the clash of metal and engine.

Alec tried again, using his hands as a trumpet held to his mouth. He shouted one word: "Rusty!"

But Claude did not hear that time either.

Alec did not try again to pierce that vast wall, which now had swallowed Claude altogether. Nor did he run after him, for each second passed so futilely here made his thoughts of Rusty's fate more fearful and his compulsion to reach him stronger.

Now, with Claude racing off, deaf, in the opposite direction, Alec could no longer resist.

He turned, running south toward the clearing.

"Alec ran toward the small grove where Rusty's line was strung, shouting his name, and then..." Continue the story to a climax on Monday.

DON'T PLAY WITH FIRE

Fire makes a dangerous "playmate"! Treat it with caution. Don't let it menace your property or your life. Keep it under control.

Once fire gets "out of hand" the results can be disastrous to property, to life and limb. That's why fire prevention is so important to everybody. Check your home and habits for fire hazards. Stop fires before they start.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Some tobacco took sharp losses and Big Three motors were soft as the stock market headed irregularly lower early this afternoon. Trading was moderate.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off .50 at 257.90 with industrials off .80, rails off .30 and utilities off .30. Gains and losses of fractions to about a point prevailed among most key stocks but some of the tobaccos dropped more than 2. Du Pont's loss of around 3 depressed market averages.

Steels held fairly steady and aircrafts were up on balance. Airlines declined following a prediction by the president of Eastern Air Lines that the industry is heading for the largest net loss on record.

The auto stocks gave ground despite the Ford labor agreement. Auto production was off sharply from a year ago due to the work stoppage at Ford.

Building materials and rubbers were mostly steady.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off .45 at 705.05. Prices moved generally higher on the American Stock Exchange.

Rose brought before the board the situation of outside activities for school students. In view of the demand for better education, Rose noted that "youth organizations such as the Scouts and youth organizations sponsored by Civic Clubs, and the Recreation Commission, should give serious thought to the matter of not asking for any time for the children to leave school for any of the programs, however worthwhile. These same organizations ought to realize that the children in the Greenville City Schools have a lot of homework to do at night."

In other business, members of the board reviewed enrollment statistics for each of the city schools and the increasing high school enrollment. They approved further personnel appointments and approved minutes of the previous meeting.

Dr. Edward Beasley Honored For 50 Years Of Service By Pitt Society

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

"Retire? No, I'm not going to retire until I'm not able to work. I don't ever intend to retire."

Speaking was 72-year-old Dr. Edward Bruce Beasley, Fountain's physician since 1913. His service to the community — 24 hours a day and seven days a week — has been constant since then.

Dr. Beasley's only leave of absence came during the terrible influenza epidemic of 1918 when he was hospitalized for more than a month. His stamina and health since that year have been remarkably consistent.

Last night Dr. Beasley was honored by his fellow physicians of Pitt County at a dinner meeting of the Pitt Medical and Dental Society. His co-workers in the county formally recognized Dr. Beasley's 50 consecutive years of medical practice.

The local recognition followed presentation of a 50-year pin and certificate to the Fountain physician during May's meeting of the state organization in Asheville. Dr. Beasley was prevented from receiving the state-wide recognition in person by his first illness since 1918.

The honor and recognition by both the state and county organizations marks a milestone in the career of the Colerain native. But to Dr. Beasley, the 50th year of serving his patients is no different from any other. Now embarking on his 51st year as a general practitioner, Dr. Beasley is as eager as ever to perform his duties.

"I wouldn't be satisfied unless I was working," he says. "That's because I just love it. I love my patients. . . and, I guess, the majority of them love me."

Recognition of Dr. Beasley's long tenure as a physician has not been the only recognition of the small town doctor's service. Twice, in 1949 and again a year later, the Fountain physician has been named "General Practitioner of the Year in Pitt County" by the medical and dental society.

Dr. Beasley recalls Fountain's population "must have been around 300" in 1913 when he answered an advertisement calling for a doctor to succeed "a Dr. Johnson, I think, who was retiring."

The young doctor, youngest in his graduating class at the Pennsylvania University's medical school had just completed his two-year residency as an interne at Queens Hospital in Honolulu. He established his practice in Fountain in 1913 in a wooden building replaced in 1953 by his present clinic.

The year Dr. Beasley came to Fountain there were no paved roads. The going, at times, was rough. "The best I remember, though," he says thoughtfully, "I never made more than a hundred or two calls in wagons when the roads were too bad for my car."

The years rolled by and Dr. Beasley held the fort alone. He's still Fountain's only physician and manages to take care of the 496 residents now in the town along with the rural families within a reasonable radius.

One of his two nurses, Miss Nancy Pat Dozier, who has worked with Dr. Beasley for 23 consecutive years, says every day is a busy one. "Just the other day we saw something like 55 or 60 patients," she says.

Miss Dozier is a Fountain native as is Dr. Beasley's other nurse, Miss Beatrice Moore.

Dr. Beasley's virtually uninterrupted service in Fountain has reached throughout the county on occasions. He helped with medical examinations for the Selective Service during World War I.

Born in Colerain in Bertie County Nov. 11, 1888, Dr. Beasley attended high school at Mars Hill and Oak Ridge Academy where he graduated in 1906. He completed one academic year at the University of North Carolina before entering the University's two-year medical program. Upon completion of the two-year course, he entered Pennsylvania University's medical school, the oldest medical college in the country.

He graduated from the Pennsylvania school in 1911 and went to Hawaii for his two-year residency. Following two years in Honolulu, Dr. Beasley toured the Orient.

He remembers accepting the duties of Ship's Doctor on the return voyage from the Far East when the ship's regular physician became seasick.

Upon his return to the States, he settled in Fountain. He was married to Louis Xma Ferebee of Shawboro that same year. At the time of their marriage, she was a teacher at Chowan College in Murfreesboro. She later became a well-known worker in the State Baptist Convention.

50-YEAR MEDICAL SERVANT—Dr. Beasley (left) chats with son, Dr. Britton F. Beasley of Kinston, at Friday's honorary dinner. Fellow doctors—including 50-year physicians Dr. Mark Frizzle of Ayden, Dr. Henry Cutchins of Whitakers and Dr. J. G. Raby of Tarboro—paid tribute to the Fountain doctor's 50-year and still active practice.

Dr. Beasley's two sons, Edward Bruce Jr. and Dr. Britton F., were at his side at Friday's honorary dinner. Bruce Jr. operates a drug store in Fountain. Britton is a Kinston dentist.

The Fountain physician has seen many changes in the scientific medical world since he embarked on his long career. He studies constantly to keep up with the innovations that improve his profession's efficiency.

With the pats on the back that came with his 50th anniversary of medical practice, Dr. Beasley realizes he has reached a notable milestone. But a half-century of dedication to the profession, he says, cannot mark a termination or slackening of devotion.

Today, Dr. Beasley, who will mark his 73rd birthday next month, returns to the daily routine of a general practitioner, a busy day every day.
