Area High Schools Prepare Pupils For Future

(Editor's Note: What the high schools are doing towards preparing students to meet the world is the subject of this article, the sixth and last in a series concerning selected areas of the curriculums of Greenville and Pitt County schools.)

system of education over the state is geared to the college preparatory courses. This in a sense may be true, but interviews conducted with Superintendent of County Schools, D. H. Conley, Supervisor Edna Earle Baker of county schools and Principal of Greenville's Rose High School O. E. Dowd show not only basic college preparatory courses, but sound vocational education courses in business and the areas of shop, home economics and agriculture, depending on the particular school and its needs.

and the county show three levels for high school diplomas: academic, general and vocational in the city; and academic, general and a certificate in the county. The certificate in the latter means a student has a minimum of 16 units but does not meet the minimum requirements of either academic or general diploma.

ing to college. However, Greenville and Pitt County, a higher number of high school graduates further their educations principally because of the nearness of East Carolina College, the availability of scholarships and the fact that many parents in this area are themselves college graduates.

Mock But Mighty Aerial War High Over Continent

By ELTON C. FAY WASHINGTON (AP) — A mock but mighty aerial war flared high in the skies over the North American continent today. At noon hundreds of jet interceptor planes began screaming aloft from runways in the United States and Canada.

What their electric eyes see is being flashed to the Colorado control center to aid in aiming the defending system at the invaders. The public of the United States and Canada will see and hear little of the mock aerial war. But they will know it is on: for 12 hours all aircraft, except military, will be grounded.

Two reasons are given for grounding airliners as well as all other civilian planes in the millions of square miles through which the warplanes will roam: 1. To avoid danger of collision and 2. The radio beacons, radar and radio communications upon which airliners rely for navigation will be closed down or "jammed" by electronic countermeasures of the defenders and attackers.

ber 1960, and this year's exercise was announced in advance, airlines and travelers were prepared for the inconveniences. Some airlines put on extra flights Friday night and this morning to accommodate passengers who decided to get where they were going before the "war" started. Other lines didn't.

U.S. Reviewing Policy Of Support For Yugoslavia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy administration is reported making an overall review of U.S. policy toward Yugoslavia, including a study of economic aid and the sale of military equipment to that independent Communist country.

Two senators urged the deal be canceled and Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., said the transaction "borders on treason."

The State Department said Yugoslavia paid cash—not credit—for the planes and the training. It was a business transaction that did not involve foreign aid, the department said.

HANCOCK FIELD, N.Y. (AP) — Combat Center deep inside the blockhouse is the nerve center for about half the nationwide activity in today's mock aerospace war.

Up To Russia To Halt Shootings

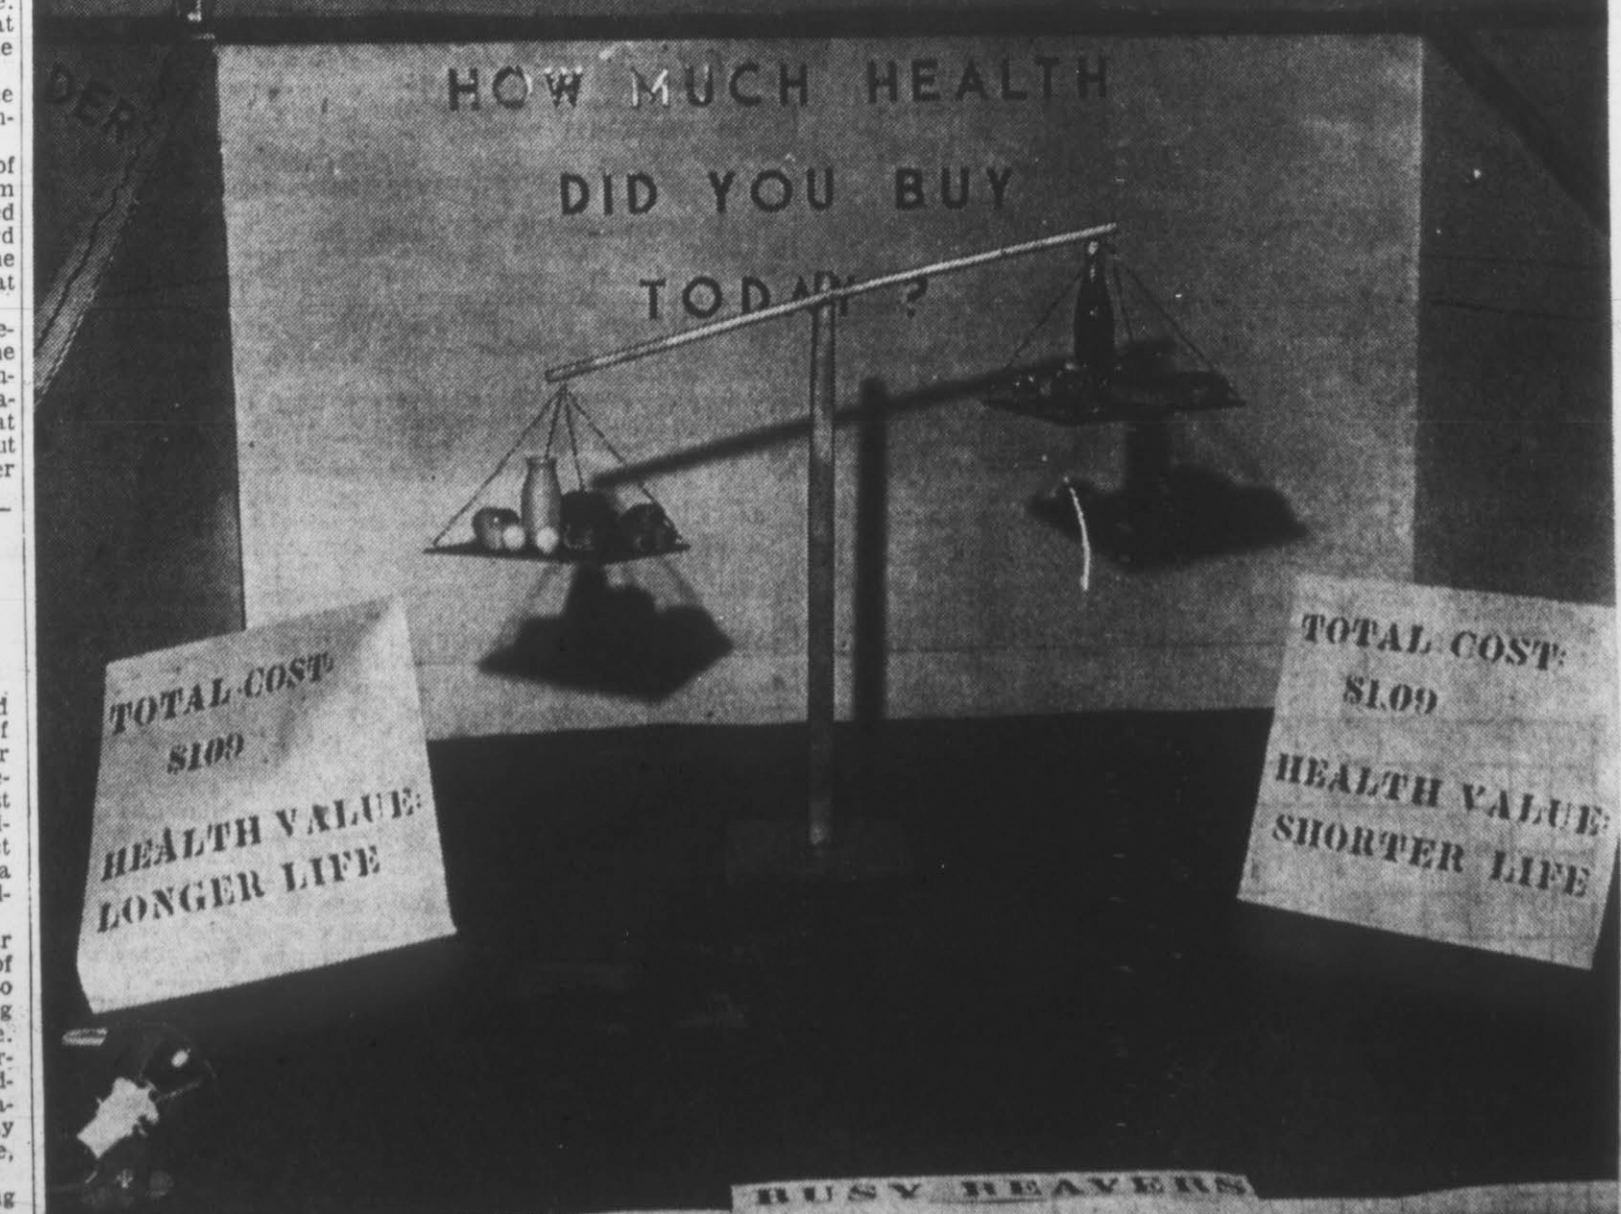

BERLIN (AP)—The U.S. command has put it squarely up to the Soviets to halt "the reckless" shooting by East German police along the East-West Berlin border.

An American spokesman said Gen. Albert Watson II, chief of U.S. forces in Berlin, personally protested Friday to the Soviet commandant, Col. A. I. Solovjev, at East Berlin headquarters.

Watson "warned against the consequences of the reckless and illegal conduct" of the East German police, the spokesman said.

The eyes-only man also knows whether the strike craft is a "faker" (one participating in the exercise)," Viccellio said from his seat at the center of the huge semicircular electronic control panel.

Challenges Are Part Of Our Past

Is it so bad to live out one's life in the face of uncertainty, peril and challenge?

In his address at Chapel Hill, President Kennedy asserted that most Americans of today are destined to live out their lives under these conditions. If his prediction proves to be true, Americans of today will live out their lives under conditions similar to those faced by other generations of free men down through the years.

Since colonial days Americans have lived in the face of uncertainty, peril and challenge. These conditions have served to make the nation what it is today; they have been part of the price free men have been required to pay year by year for their freedom. The lives of the colonists were full of uncertainty and each day brought its own perils. Wringing a livelihood from the new and rugged land presented a daily challenge.

So it was with those who lived in revolutionary times when the American colonies were emerging as a new nation far across the sea from Europe. And after the new nation gained its independence, it continued to face challenges, its future was uncertain, and the perils of the years from 1776 through the early part of the 19th century were real indeed.

And what of those Americans who lived during the gathering storm that became the most vicious and destructive conflict in our history . . . the Civil War? Life was not easy for those who survived; nor was it easy for the nation to emerge from that destructive war among its own people. Uncertainty, peril, challenge . . . these were the order of the day for the people of those times.

And what of the Americans of today? For those who are approaching the evening years of their lives, they can count almost year-by-year the peril and the uncertainty which face their nation. The Great War that we now call World War I found many of today's senior citizens bearing arms in behalf of freedom across the fields of France and the rest of Europe. To them, the uneasy days of the peace which followed are not messages from history books, but real and personal memories from their own experience.

Then there were the years of economic depression when uncertainty was the watchword and hunger, despair and cold were not uncommon. Many there were who questioned whether prosperity and economic security would ever again be possible.

With the Thirties there was the emerging of a powerful German dictator who saw himself as the man who was to become master of all Europe and perhaps the world. Again the clouds gathered not only over Europe, but from the East as well and the men and women who were part of World War I sent their sons into the battles of World War II for the same causes they thought they had secured two decades before.

In the past 16 years Americans have lived in the face of uncertainty, their young men have faced the perils of Korea and the challenges of the Red menace in every sector of the globe.

Uncertainty, peril, challenge? These are not new to the American people. They are not unique to the generations of today. Since the nation was founded they have been faced successfully by each succeeding generation, and the tension they have brought has become a part of life. They are part of the heritage which has made America great; a part of the tempering which make its people of today determined that freedom will not be lost in this generation.

Not The Same Man This Time

By LYNN NISBET
KENNEDY The John Kennedy who came to North Carolina Thursday was not the same personality who visited the state on September 17 of last year, although he was the same individual, and casual glance would discover very little difference in his looks. He is a year older according to the calendar, and a year at his time of life is not important. The events of that year have made a very great impact upon Kennedy, that is apparent even to casual observers.

Some of the differences in the two visits are due to factors beyond control of even the President of the United States. Last year he came as a candidate of the Democratic party for the highest office in the land — in fact, the highest office in the world. His itinerary then was arranged by Democratic politicians with a view to getting the most possible favorable publicity. He reacted to the cheering and bally-hoo with boyish enthusiasm. He was the shining knight who was to lead the people into new frontiers of freedom.

He came this year not as a candidate for one party, but as the President of all the people. He could not criticize how others handled the affairs of nations, because he was conscious of the sobering fact that chief responsibility in the field rests on his own shoulders. It was not an eager-beaver youth who spoke at Chapel Hill Thursday, but a mature man conscious of his obligations. And the people who heard him were not boosters for a partisan candidate, but citizens recognizing the seriousness of loyalty to their President.

For example, one of the most prominent signs in Kenan Stadium was one proclaiming "UNC-YRC WELCOMES JFK". That was the tribute of the Young Republican Club at the University to their President.

GUARDED — The President was very closely, although often inconspicuously, guarded by the secret service men with him. They were all over the place. Last year Candidate Kennedy had some protection, but nothing like that accorded the President this week. One little incident: A teevie announcer sought to move in closer to the President while giving a running commentary into his mike. He found that someone had stepped on the wire connecting the speaker with the recorder, and he impatiently tugged to get it loose. Then he discovered the man standing on it was a secret service fellow — and that was his way of keeping the newsmen from getting too close to the President.

Despite the close watch of the detectives, Kennedy slipped off to the side and shook hands with a dozen or two citizens pressing against the ropes.

WEATHER — Last year the weather did not cooperate fully with the candidate. He had to cancel his Asheville appearance because his plane could not land. The weather Thursday was as nearly perfect as mid-October in North Carolina can provide. Chancellor W. B. Aycock in presenting former Governor Luther Hodges reminded the audience that the weather bureau is in the Department of Commerce, over which Hodges now presides as secretary.

CROWDS — Estimating audiences is a hazardous business. Most estimates of attendance at the Raleigh-Durham airport range from 1500 to 1800. There were a thousand or more lining the roadside from the airport to Chapel Hill with heavy concentration at Nelson and Lowe's Grove. The crowd in Kenan Stadium was fairly easy to estimate. It was about 30,000.

COSMOPOLITAN — The audience was about as representative of all segments of North Carolina citizenry as could be imagined. Both United States Senators and nine of the State's 12 Representatives in Congress were on hand — along with most of the high level officials in North Carolina government. Millionaire business men and tenant farmers rubbed elbows in the crowd.

There was one instance which indicated that sometimes security measures can be carried a little bit too far. The folks planning the cavalcade from the airport to Chapel Hill borrowed several big black limousines from local funeral parlors. They were presumed to be somewhat classier than the highway patrol cars. The highway patrol offered to furnish personnel to drive the cars. The car owners and the secret service folks decided to let owner-company drivers handle the job. Result was one limousine got out of line, got temporarily on a side road, and the President's plane was delayed a few minutes in take-off waiting for the passengers.

MILLION DOLLARS — While President Kennedy was in Chapel Hill receiving an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the University, his office in Washington announced a contract between the University and Advanced Research Projects Agency of the Department of Defense for a million dollars to be spent during the next four years establishing a new materials research program.

The White House announcement said the contract had been awarded the University in recognition of its notable faculty and student body, and previous interest shown in this type of research.

Soviet Military Over Economy

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Associated Press News Analyst
The bulky shadow of the Soviet military will hover about the 22nd Soviet Communist congress next week as it takes up a draft economic program advertised as heralding an abundant life for Soviet people within 20 years.

There are signs that the military has placed roadblocks in the path of the program, which the Communists call a "charter for humanity" and a prospective "fatal blow" to the Western way of life.

Nikita Khrushchev, the premier and party chief, himself a man with a long record as a political rather than a career general, has put up an extreme tough front for the past year.

Only recently, according to reliable sources, Khrushchev let the West know indirectly that he espouses vast military power and the use of that power for the aggrandizement of his own nation. Power, he is reported to have said bluntly, exists to be used and he would feel himself deflected if he did not use it.

Some of his remarks in private to visiting envoys are said to have been hair-raising. He is reported to have said, for example, that the United States has been accustomed to an urban and industrial civilization for many years while the U. S. S. R. has been out of its agrarian economy only for 40 years.

Only recently, according to reliable sources, the Russians have far less to fear from the threat of nuclear war than the Americans, who would have a much more difficult time readjusting themselves to a more primitive way of life after the holocaust.

That sounds more like belligerent Red Chinese talk than the way Khrushchev himself appeared to feel not long ago. It all leads to suspicion that Khrushchev himself is on a tightrope and that the Berlin war scare was a necessary one for him, dictated by urgent needs to release pressures from the career military and the Stalinists.

Only a year ago this summer, when I was in Moscow, the Khrushchev plan to demobilize 250,000 officers and hundreds of thousands of men from a top-heavy conventional armed force was being heavily propagandized. The man power and investment instead were to go into grandiose programs for opening new lands, building villages and towns, developing vast undeveloped areas of the U. S. S. R.

Indications are that the officers didn't buy it. When the war scare was generated by Moscow through the Berlin crisis, the excuse existed for revoking demobilization orders, for beefing up conventional forces all over again, for carrying out a long series of nuclear weapons tests.

Pre-Congress propaganda justifies speculation that career marshals, generals and admirals have served notice on the party that the military's entrenched position is not expendable in any measure for the benefit of economic plans.

The tone today indicates spirited resistance to Khrushchev's projects. The party and military now seem to have reached a sort of live-and-let-live arrangement calling, among other things, for less party interference in strictly military affairs.

Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky, the defense minister, probably can be considered a Khrushchev man. He has been making pre-congress speeches to Soviet troops around the country and even in East Germany. He has been pointing out, for example, this emphasis in the 22nd congress draft program:

"Leadership of the armed forces by the Communist party and the enhanced role and influence of party organizations in the army and navy represent cornerstones of our military organization."

That sounds like party assertion of control. But Malinovsky quickly qualified it, adding:

"The defense ministry has devoted much attention to questions of one-man command. . . one-man command is a most important principle in the organization of the army and the Soviet armed forces and it is therefore necessary to strengthen further one-man command."

Khrushchev is tugged in two directions. Apparently he wants to go down in history as the man who started the U.S.S.R. "building communism." But he also is under pressure to push rapidly the territorial expansion of the Communist movement.

The two are contradictory. For the latter he needs an enormous military installation whose costs inhibit investment in the former.

If the military is satisfied for the time being—and the chances are that it is—Khrushchev probably will be permitted to let the Berlin war scare for a while, so that he can make an attempt to get his program on the road.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
NATURE OF GENIUS

The word "Genius" is derived from a Latin word which means "to begot." A genius, therefore, is a person who brings something new into being. He begets this new truth. He does not create this new thing any more than a father creates a child. A father begets a child. Parenthood only makes it possible for new life to come into the world.

The genius, therefore, is a person who begets some new thing. Columbus was a genius. Pheidias' sculpture was a genius. So were the medieval painters because they brought forth (begot) something new. Bach, Beethoven and Wagner were geniuses—that is, they brought forth something new.

There are very few geniuses born in any age. There are millions of well-informed persons in the world today, and this abundance of information has existed in some form or other in certain past ages. But geniuses are something more than well-informed persons. They are people who can use their information in such a way as to produce something new. The Wright Brothers were geniuses. Albert Einstein was a genius. There may be a few geniuses living in the world today, but we can be sure they are not numerous.

Don't go asking yourself whether or not you are a genius. Just go about doing what you are set to do, but do it well. If you are a genius, both you and the world will find this out later.

Genius is rare, almost supernatural. Regard it with awe. If you are humble and teachable, God will see to it that you are taught much.

The Dirty Smoker

Handwriting Betrays You

The words you write by hand may betray your personality. This sounds very futuristic, expressed as we have it.

Actually, analysis of handwriting can be fascinating as well as a revealing glimpse of one's personality. The dictionary defines graphology as "the study of handwriting, especially as regarded as an expression of the writer's character."

Some of the facts about handwriting analysis we gleaned this week during a Psychology Club lecture at East Carolina College by Dr. Irvine Rose, of the psychology department. We thought we would pass some of them on to you.

According to Dr. Rose, all of us have been taught to write a certain way. But we have adapted our handwriting to suit ourselves. Actually handwriting is a motor skill, directed by the brain, and thus is expressive movement. It is easier to conceive our handwriting as a key to personality than perceived in this light.

Some of the indicators to personality in one's handwriting are the pressure of the pen (to get a good sample, one should use fountain pen and unlined paper); speed; slant of writing; upward and downward movements; size of writing; rhythm, type of writing. Very interesting information is gained from inspection of the way he signs his name.

For instance, Dr. Rose explains the way a person writes his first letter of his name indicates his opinion of himself; the way he writes the last indicates his reference to sociability.

The "i's" were particularly interesting to us. A person who dots the "i's" up extremely high has an idealistic opinion of himself. A person who dots the "i's" with a big round "o" (you've seen this before) is extremely self-centered.

As for other influences of the handwriting, we understand that a person who writes quite rapidly is supposed to be intelligent. Before you begin to rationalize about how fast you write, we should warn you that this speed may also indicate abnormality.

There are three so-called zones in the writing. You make imaginary lines for middle zone (reality), an upper zone (world of ideas) and a lower zone (realm of emotion). Whether or not you attack the upper and lower zones with gusto in making the "i's" or the "y's" for instance may indicate something about your personality.

Slanting upwards is an indication that you are leaving reality. Upwards writing may indicate happiness—whereas downward writing may indicate depression.

You may deduce, as we have, that this is an art for future study. It is rare—there are not a great many experts here but graphology is being used in the United States today psychologically speaking. It is used mainly in clinical work, in personnel and it is used in the courts in judicial procedures, for comparison of signatures, for example.

Since we are using a type-writer which conforms to certain types, and since several other machines will process this type before it gets into print, we are unable to furnish any first-hand illustrations (fortunately).

We recommend, for further information, Dr. Rose or the several available books on graphology at Shepard Memorial Library. Even those little "doodles" you make on paper mean things.

Other Editors Saying Right-To-Work Laws

(Wheeling (W. Va.) Intelligencer)
Although relatively little has been heard of the subject of late, right-to-work is by no means a dead issue in the United States. In fact, according to a Business Week survey, more will be heard of this question in the months ahead than has been the case since the early days of the Taft-Hartley Act and the first subsequent flush of right-to-work laws in the south.

The battle will be fought out on two fronts. In Washington it will center in organized labor's renewed attempt to repeal Section 14 (b) which recognizes the rights of the States to enact legislation outlawing union membership as qualification for employment. Elsewhere, it will center in movements to introduce right-to-work legislation, to repeal or revise laws on the subject already in force.

Nation's Business round-up suggests these prospects: In Alabama, right-to-work bills are bottled up in legislative committees, with this state of affairs to be made a major issue in next year's campaign. In Idaho, farmers have renewed their drive for a right-to-work bill for agriculture. The measure passed the Senate last year but failed by only four votes in the House.—In Maine, a right-to-work committee has been formed, and in both Texas and Florida new groups will undertake to strengthen laws on the subject already on the books.

The right of workmen to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing is well established in the United States. It has been implemented in the National Labor Relations Act, in various state statutes, in court decisions and otherwise. Unfortunately, in their zeal to promote exercise of this right those who lead and formulate organized labor policy overlook or ride roughshod over another basic right of the workman—the right to organize, the right to bargain individually.

Wisely, we have outlawed in this Country the so-called "yellow dog" contract under which a worker, in order to obtain employment, had to sign an agreement not to join a labor union. It is just as inconsistent with the concept of human rights to require a man to belong to a union in order to obtain work, or to join one after he has landed a job in order to hold it. Eighteen States now have in force laws prohibiting this practice. All of them should have.

of ideas) and a lower zone (realm of emotion). Whether or not you attack the upper and lower zones with gusto in making the "i's" or the "y's" for instance may indicate something about your personality.

Slanting upwards is an indication that you are leaving reality. Upwards writing may indicate happiness—whereas downward writing may indicate depression.

You may deduce, as we have, that this is an art for future study. It is rare—there are not a great many experts here but graphology is being used in the United States today psychologically speaking. It is used mainly in clinical work, in personnel and it is used in the courts in judicial procedures, for comparison of signatures, for example.

Since we are using a type-writer which conforms to certain types, and since several other machines will process this type before it gets into print, we are unable to furnish any first-hand illustrations (fortunately).

We recommend, for further information, Dr. Rose or the several available books on graphology at Shepard Memorial Library. Even those little "doodles" you make on paper mean things.

This is an interesting statement because it recognizes the socializing process of production in the capitalist countries. In the United States, for instance, increasingly the worker is an owner of the industry in which he works or of other industries. Some industries are owned by labor unions. In a Marxist country, all industry is owned by the state monopolistically and the worker only participates in ownership in the sense that as a citizen, he has certain rights within the state. Furthermore in a Marxist country he worker is deprived of the most valuable fruits of production, namely, the choice of selection of consumer goods, for it is the state alone which determines what should be made and what should be used and to maintain a stiffness longer than even chilled, machine-whipped cream.

But that may be only the beginning. Soon housewives may spray pancakes on griddle biscuits into a pan or puff cookies onto a tray.

The catsup bottle which has plagued catsup fanciers for years may vanish as diners spray the red goo from a Freon-charged can. Hot dogs may similarly be laced with mustard.

SPRAYED FIZZES
It may even be possible to get Silver Fizzes and Golden Fizzes from a spray can. Until that day comes, you might try my old Prohibition recipe for those drinks:

Silver Fizz: Get a self-charging carbonated water bottle and remove the glass rod. Put in six fingers of gin, the whites of three eggs, three teaspoons of sugar, the juice of one lemon and a dash of Curacao, Benedictine, Cointreau, Grand Marnier or other citric liqueur, and fill bottle to the Plimsol mark with pure, non-chlorinated water. Carbonate, shake well. Put in ice box. When chilled, turn bottle upside down and, with gentle pressure on the trigger, pour into punch glasses. Serves six.

Golden Fizz: Do exactly the same, but use three whole eggs instead of whites only.

OTHER POSSIBILITIES
It is probable that Federal rules will interdict the aerosol-canning of silver fizzes, gin fizzes, vodkas and tonic and other effervescent alcoholic drinks. But the other possibilities are limited only by the imagination of American business. They could include jellies to be sprayed on breakfast toast, ready-mixed souffles, hickory flavor for outdoor cooking, Hollandaise sauces, anchovy dressings for canapes, foamed anything else for canapes, whipped potatoes, 101 dessert topping, foamed vegetable for garnishing meats, mushroom puree for adding zest to soups, whipped cream for borscht, and countless decorations for cakes, puddings and flams.

All To Benefit State

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Each time a Soviet Communist Party program is enunciated, thousands of words are written, which are read with the greatest care by Communists throughout the world, and by the experts in all foreign offices. The Party Congress program is canonical and deviation from it means counter-revolution and can result in expulsion from the party which often involves serious consequences for the individual concerned. For some, it has meant death.

The Congress is to be held this month and it will go all the important Communist leaders from all parts of the world. Members of the party will watch who sits on the platform, for not only does the presence on the platform but the position of the individual, the propinquity to Khrushchev, determine a man's importance and his future.

The document is a paean to Soviet accomplishments:

"The great October Socialist Revolution ushered in a new era in the history of mankind, the era of the downfall of capitalism and the establishment of Communism. Socialism has triumphed in the Soviet Union and has achieved decisive victories in the people's democracies; socialism has become a cause of practical significance to hundreds of millions of people, and the bearer of the revolutionary movement of the working class throughout the world."

Further, the Platform says: "One-third of mankind if building a new life under the banner of scientific communism. The first contingents of the working class to shake off obsolete oppression are facilitating victory for fresh contingents of their class brothers. The Socialist world is expanding; the capitalism of the world is shrinking. Socialism will inevitably succeed capitalism everywhere. Such is the objective law of social development. Imperialism is powerless to check the irresistible process of emancipation."

It is this statement which will have an enormous influence in the former colonial countries. For when the Communists associate themselves with anti-imperialism, they take in a good part of the world that has been freed from colonialism, much of it through American aid. Thus the Afro-Asian nations are included in the success of Communism whereas, as a matter of fact, they have, most of them, not yet become stabilized in any political or economic system. To Khrushchev that does not matter because he assumes power wherever he can; he accepts success wherever it suits his purposes. For instance, in the statement of the fundamental struggle, the Platform says not a word of the enormous progress that the worker has made in Western Europe and the United States. Instead, the party Platform says:

"Capitalism, by concentrating millions of workers in its factories, socializing the process of labor, imparts a social character to production; nevertheless it is the capitalists who appropriate the fruits of this social production. This contradiction of capitalism—the contradiction between the social character of production and the private-capitalist form of appropriation—manifests itself in production anarchy and in the fact that the purchasing power of society falls short of the expansion of production and leads periodically to destructive economic crises."

This is an interesting statement because it recognizes the socializing process of production in the capitalist countries. In the United States, for instance, increasingly the worker is an owner of the industry in which he works or of other industries. Some industries are owned by labor unions. In a Marxist country, all industry is owned by the state monopolistically and the worker only participates in ownership in the sense that as a citizen, he has certain rights within the state. Furthermore in a Marxist country he worker is deprived of the most valuable fruits of production, namely, the choice of selection of consumer goods, for it is the state alone which determines what should be made and what should be used and came after Rommie Brock recovered a Yellow Jacket fumble on the Greenville 26 yard line two plays after Elizabeth City gained the ball on a Phantom fumble. Quarterback Billy James rolled out to the left side to attempt a pass, but the way was clear and he ran the remaining 71 yards for the first touchdown of the night near the end of the third quarter.

Kroghie Andresen kicked the extra points after both Greenville touchdowns to top the score off 14-0.

With the first half being purely a defensive battle for both clubs the Elizabeth City eleven threatened twice during the second half. Once during the third quarter when they fumbled the ball on the Phantom 26 yard line setting up the first Greenville score and again in the fourth quarter.

Phant Defense

The Elizabeth City eleven had the advantage of a first down on the Greenville five yard line, but they could only get to the three against the tough Phantom defense.

Greenville took over on their own three with Andresen carrying for nine yards to the 12 yard line. On the next play the Phants received a five yard penalty which made it second and six to go. James carried through the middle of the Yellow Jacket line and cut to the left side for 24 yards before he was stopped and pitched out to guard Russell Fields who gained two more yards before he was stopped.

Ayden Topples LaGrange 13-0 For 7th Season Win

AYDEN—LaGrange's rugged defense had a rough time holding the offensive punch of Ayden's unbeaten Tornadoes in check last night, as the Pitt County entry toppled the visitors by a 13-0 score.

Coach Beeton Corbin and his LaGrange eleven, noted for their defensive prowess, did manage to stop the Tornadoes in the first and third quarters, but their lack of an offensive threat proved detrimental.

down on the Tornado 34 yard stripe. However, the Ayden defense dug in at that point to stop the LaGrange threat. On fourth down and a punting situation in store, Ayden end Clem McLawhorn broke through to block the kick, and the Tornadoes had another break at their own 48.

Exchange Punts
After LaGrange received the opening kickoff, both clubs failed to muster an offensive surge, and took up most of the first period exchanging punts. The Tornadoes did manage to penetrate to the LaGrange 28 yard line on one occasion in the first stanza, but the tough little visitor's line held at that point.

Cannon, who was the offensive sparkplug for the Tornadoes in the absence of Edwards, picked up a first down with a 13 yard run to the losers' 35. Freshman halfback Joe Harrington bulled his way through the LaGrange defense for eight more yards to the 27. Cannon hit the middle again for seven yards and a first down on the 20, but at that point, LaGrange refused to give another inch; in fact, they threw Cannon and Henry Jolly for successive losses back to the 24 yard marker.

With one minute left in the game, big Jack Collins, a rugged tackle, fell on a LaGrange fumble at the 29, but after a penalty, the game ended with the Tornadoes back to the LaGrange 44.

In the second quarter, Ayden got its first break of the game. William Edwards, who saw only very limited action due to a leg injury, punted from his own 28, and LaGrange's Donald Howe fumbled on his own 33, where the Tornadoes recovered.

Ayden took the second half kickoff and ran into the oft-stone-wall of a defense of LaGrange. The Tornadoes punted to the loser's 34. Three cracks at the Ayden forward wall netted exactly nothing for LaGrange, who then went into punt formation.

The C. M. Eppes Bulldogs had an unsuccessful homecoming game last night with Moore High School of Elizabeth City going home with a 22-0 victory.

On Ayden's first play from scrimmage, Joe Kinsey threw quarterback Tommy Dunn for a 10 yard loss back to the 43. Not to be discouraged, Dunn dropped back again on the next play, and found halfback Rudolph Cannon in the open at the LaGrange 25. Dunn's pitch to Cannon was complete, and the fleet back scooted 24 mere yards before he was clipped up just three yards short of the goal line. A three yard plunge by Cannon on the next play, however, produced the first Ayden score of the evening.

Cannon gathered in the kick on his own 29 yard stripe, cut to the left side line, had his helmet torn off at the midfield stripe, then scampered down the line for an 80 yard run into paydirt. Dunn passed to Gibson for the extra point to give the Tornadoes the winning margin.

The Bulldogs rallied in the second half on defense and kept the visitors from scoring again, but the Eppes offense could not cross the goal line for a touchdown.

Drive Falls Short
The visitors took the kickoff and fought right back, beginning on their own 38. Fullback Kinsey teamed up with end Donald Kernal for a 10 yard pass for a first down on the LaGrange 48. Kinsey kept on the following play for 17 yards and another first

Rams Downed By Plymouth 13-7

ROBERSONVILLE — Plymouth used a steady ground game to strike twice in the second period, once through the air and again with a steady ground game, to down Robersonville's Ram 13-7 here Friday night.

With Plymouth leading 13-0 in the second quarter, the Rams cranked up their offensive machine and rode a sustained drive to the Robersonville 40.

Early in the second period Plymouth drew first blood with a 50-yard pass play from tailback Mike Atamanchuck to Jan Wesner. Miller Warren circled right end for the point-after-touchdown and Plymouth led 7-0.

The Rams, failing to move after the kickoff, were forced to punt soon after Plymouth's first touchdown. Plymouth took over and

Farmville Mart Volume Nearing Total For 1960

PARMVILLE — Farmville's tobacco market Friday crept to the threshold of surpassing its 1960 season's total volume as 326,320 pounds brought growers $201,887.58 for a gross sales average of $61.87 per hundredweight. Through Friday, the market's 38th sales day this season, Farmville had sold a total of 24,939,880 pounds. In 48 auction days here during the 1960 season the market sold a total of 25,395,442 pounds. Total receipts for the 38 days here stood at $16,271,322.83 after Friday's sale. That figure is more than $1 million more than was paid out here during the 1960 season. The market's season sales average through Friday was $65.24. Sales supervisor Louis Williams said nondescript tobacco again dominated Farmville's market Friday. He noted a "considerable" quantity of low leaf grades and, "rather unusual for this late in the season, a large amount of low-grade primings."

Greenville Mart Average Is Up

Prices on Greenville's tobacco market Friday were higher than on any day during this week, according to sales supervisor W. L. Whedbee today. Whedbee reported for Friday's sale the highest company purchases of the 1961 season here at $97 per hundredweight. The market yesterday sold a total of 655,340 pounds for $407,803 and a gross sales average of $62.23 per 100 pounds.

For the five-day week the market posted a sales mark of $62.89 from the sale of 2,970,376 pounds for $1,868,057. The week's activity pushed the market's season volume above 54 million pounds. Season totals through Friday stood at: pounds—54,153,152; receipts—$34,845,354; sales average—$64.34. Whedbee noted the season sales average of $64.34 "is well above the previous all-time high season sales average of $59.90 recorded in 1953."

The supervisor reported still larger percentages Friday of inferior, nondescript, damaged and immature tobacco. Greenville's market is scheduled to remain open for two more full weeks, with the final sales set for Friday, Oct. 27.

First Church of Christ, Scientist

The healing and redemptive power of divine Truth will be brought out at Christian Science services Sunday in the Lesson-Sermon on the subject, "Doctrine of Atonement."

Peter's healing of the lame man as related in Acts 4:1-14 will be included in reading from the Bible, together with his reply to those who questioned him regarding the source of his healing ability. "Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole."

One of the correlative citations to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states: "The same power which heals sin, heals also sickness. This is the beauty of holiness; that when Truth heals the sick, it casts out evils, and when Truth casts out the evil called disease, it heals the sick" (p. 135).

Reviews And Reflections

By JIM POINDEXTER

The honeymoon seems to be about over for President Kennedy and the writers.

One of the most interesting signs of this is a sharp analysis of the new administration by William Shannon in the current American Scholar. Shannon claims that "the New Frontier" is one of the most unfortunate misnomers in the history of American politics.

In the first place, the major objectives of the country are, and must be, what they have been since 1945: to find ways of containing Russian expansion, to bring underdeveloped countries up to date without allowing them to fall into totalitarianism and to maintain a healthy balance in the American economy.

In the next place, he points out that no really new devices have been forthcoming from Kennedy's bright boys to make these objectives any more easily attainable than they were under Truman or Eisenhower.

What, then, is the new Harvard braintrust doing? This is a question that time may yet answer favorably. Meanwhile, there is no doubt that the LOOKS of things around the White House are different. As Shannon says, the difference between the New Deal and the Fair Deal was described as "about thirty pounds" when newsmen noted the comfortable, chubby Truman appointees who followed Roosevelt's thin, tense young men. Now they are saying that the difference between the Eisenhower and the Kennedy crowds, is "about thirty years."

Not only is there youth in Washington, but brains are there too. As one Harvard professor remarked, "From the Eisenhower to the Kennedy administration the shift has been from the 'gentlemen's C' PHI BETA KAPPAS."

In spite of this new appearance, though, as Shannon says, many of the key jobs in Washington are being held by appointees who are neither new or young: Arthur Dean, Douglas Dillon, John McCloy, and in the background, Dean Acheson.

The perennial nature of certain Washington figures suggests that maybe the US is developing an Establishment: that is, a group of powerful men who embody the best of Conventional Wisdom and who maintain the great deal of influence no matter which party is in power.

The Establishment Analyzed In the same issue of the American Scholar Richard Rovere takes a good look and concludes that there is something to this theory.

According to Rovere, the perfect figure in the Establishment would be Douglas Dillon, the Republican called on to fill a key spot in a Democratic administration — that of keeping our fiscal policies sound.

Though this group is loosely knit, according to Rovere, all its members favor a strong foreign aid program and integration. These are the two points from which there can be no deviation, though a Southern member can keep quiet on the latter issue as a matter of expediency. Senator Fulbright, for example.

In religion the Establishment is broadminded, only disapproving of extremism or aggressive positions. Economically any position between that of Walter Reuther and Ike is permissible.

The semi-official organ of the Establishment is the New York Times, whose editor, Arthur Sulzberger, is a core member. Harper's the Atlantic, and the New Yorker are acceptable and often express the viewpoint of the Establishment. Time and its editor, Henry Luce, are too unpredictable to be trusted by the Establishment.

Another interesting fact is that leaders of the Establishment are closely associated with either the Ford or the Rockefeller Foundation. For example, as Rovere is not being entirely serious, but his suggestion there is much more continuity of policy in the government when administrations change than is often assumed may be taken seriously, and this may explain the lack of real freshness in the approach of the Kennedy staff. As the French say, the more things say, the more they remain the same.

But now it should be apparent that an invaluable magazine the American Scholar is. Published by Phi Beta Kappa, it deserves a wider circulation than it has.

Coming Events Next Friday, Oct. 20, 8:30, Channel 7 will show "Macbeth." This is the Maurice Evans-Judith Anderson TV hit of last year back again and is Shakespeare presented the great advantage.

On Wednesday, Oct. 18, 8:15, Walter Caplinger, an outstanding tenor, will sing in Wright Auditorium as the first performer this year in the College Entertainment Series.

"Breaking Down The Barrier"

(Editor's Note: The following information was obtained from Ralph R. Napp, professor of sociology in the East Carolina Sociology Department. Napp and his family reside here in Greenville. He obtained the B.A. degree in sociology and psychology from the University of Alabama and the M. A. degree in education and sociology from Duke University. Presently he is a candidate for the Ph.D. at the University of Munich and at Duke University.)

By PATRICIA MOORE Reflector Staff Writer A pattern of events—consider them strange or otherwise—has guided Ralph Napp to the point he has reached today.

A veteran of World War II, he returned to Germany after the war, where he lectured and studied for six and a half years. The war was supposed to teach him to hate Germans.

This teaching of hate for one people, combined with the fact that he was of German descent with relatives still in Germany, led Napp to an intense interest in the Germans, a defeated enemy, after the war. He was interested in learning what it means to be defeated and what it means to know people.

Attempting to trace his living German relatives, Napp stumbled on some intriguing facts. An uncle on his mother's side, General Henning von Tresckow, was active in two attempts to destroy Hitler by bombs.

The second attempt ultimately led to discovery of underground work conducted in Germany during World War II by the Germans themselves and, consequently, General von Tresckow committed suicide. In Nazi Germany, that was an honorable way to save family and friends.

A second result from his active interest in the German people was friendship with those people, and a deeply embedded theory that the best way to conquer the enemy is to make friends of them, rather than to hate and kill them.

This theory, the theory of cultural relativism: the theory that cultures are generally not better than each other, but different.

Napp learned a great deal about his own family and the attempts on Hitler's life from Count Alexander von Stauffenberg, professor of ancient history at the University of Munich, and brother of the Count von Stauffenberg who worked with his uncle on the assassination attempts.

It was explained to Napp that many of the German people felt that they, as well as the Jewish people, had been betrayed by the Hitler regime. They wanted to cleanse the nation of the cancer of Hitler. They were loyal to the country and what was right, rather than to Hitler.

Napp's uncle von Tresckow participated in the first coordinated attempt on Hitler's life. He personally had the first bomb made. It was placed in a package to resemble two bottles of cognac, and was to be taken aboard a plane flying Hitler to Rastenburg. The plan was successful up to the point that a man in Hitler's escort took the bomb package aboard the plane.

In desperation, Tresckow, by a telephone call, persuaded the escort not to present the gift and a confederate flew all the way to Rastenburg to switch the packages, and get the bomb back before discovery. Thus ended the first attempt on Hitler's life in March of 1943.

However, Tresckow was not through trying.

On July 20, 1944, another attempt was made with the Count Stauffenberg personally in charge of a bomb hidden in his briefcase which he left in Hitler's office set to go off.

Things proceeded as planned even up to the point of explosion after Stauffenberg himself believed the attempt to be successful and with a confederate went so far as to hold Hitler's commander of the home army a prisoner while setting

Uncle Bill To Be 106 This Sunday

SPRUCE PINE, N. C. (AP)—Uncle Bill Keller will be 106 Sunday. He uses tobacco in all forms, takes a little drink now and then, and is in such good shape he almost feels like getting in with the wrestlers he sees on television.

His explanation for his longevity and good health: "God bears with a man. I smoke. Cigars, cigarettes, pipe. I dip. I chew. I don't mind telling anybody I drink a little, too. Fact, had a little drink this morning. A little drink never hurt nobody."

Uncle Bill, a strapping man, pointed to the heavens and said through his thick beard: "The Ole Master, that's the reason. If he hadn't wanted me to live this long, I wouldn't have."

Uncle Bill lives alone on a remote mountain side several miles north of Spruce Pine. Uncle Bill hauls out a family Bible where his birthday, Oct. 15, is listed.

He says the government takes his word for his age as far as its records are concerned. He said he remembers part of the Civil War and that he recalls seeing Yankee soldiers looting and burning. He said Yankee soldiers came to his home once.

His wife died. She was the second wife he had outlived. Returning to the subject of television, he said, "I get news on it—mostly of a night. I like wrestling, too. I'd like to get in there amongst them when they're wrestling."

Uncle Bill makes colorful wire baskets which he sells to housewives for sewing baskets and other uses. He scrapes out the rest of his living by finding mica and selling it. Uncle Bill still gets around well, but he can't hear too well. You have to practically shout when you talk to him.

Her Friday Nights And Saturdays Represent A Strenuous Kind Of 'Tithing' For Blanche

By ROSALIE MOORE Reflector Staff Writer

Do you spend your Friday nights in an unusual way? Blanche Jones of 623-B Hudson St., spends every Friday night preparing and cooking food to sell on Saturdays for the building fund of Cotton Chapel FWB Church.

When asked how she began this method of working for the church, she recalled, "A next door neighbor urged me to sell dinners for the church. After thinking about it, I knew that this was one small way that I could work for the church and the Lord." Blanche believes "this is the job that he wanted me to do—that is why I work hard and spend a lot of time at it."

Mrs. Martha Ann Jones, Blanche's mother and her cousin, Cora Jones, help Blanche with the cooking. "Sometimes we spend four to six hours on Friday nights baking cakes and fixing potato salad," says Blanche. "Whenever I get tired and discouraged, I just remember why I am doing the work and in that way, I am able to continue. We usually spend about $15 a week to buy the food that we will need."

"We started selling dinners last October. During this time we have made $340. Some donations are received, but most of the food is bought with money taken from the church treasury, which is replaced after the plates are sold. We usually average selling 35-50 plates each Saturday."

The food is served in paper plates, prepared to take out. Occasionally the meals are eaten at Blanche's home.

"I have served as late as one o'clock on Saturday nights. If someone comes by that late and wants me to cook, I am glad to do it for them," she noted. Mrs. Millie Ann Johnson and Mrs. Cillie Edwards of Farmville help with the serving.

Whenever Blanche has time, she also enjoys sewing and visiting people that are sick.

Blanche has been a member of Cotton Chapel FWB Church for 25 years. She served as an usher for 15 years and she has been a mother of the church for five.

Blanche has worked in the home of Mr. and Mrs. V. V. Joyner for 11 years, averaging 48 hours per week. Her hours devoted to serving the church represent a degree of tithing few people know.

Cotton Chapel FWB Church Cotton Chapel Church was founded in 1937 with but 20 members. Some 24 years later, there are now 50 members enrolled. The present pastor, the Rev. Hattie Mae Cobb, has been there for 24 years.

I helped build the old church by helping nail the boards together. Now I am helping build the new church by selling dinners," stated Blanche. The front foundation for the new church has been laid. "We have bought 900 bricks and cinder blocks," she said. Various rallies have also helped raise money for the building fund and the work on the new building is done by the members.

FRONT FOUNDATION . . . for the new Cotton Chapel FWB Church has been laid by members of the church. Work on the remainder of the building will continue next week.

BLANCHE JONES . . . goes through weekly routine, preparing another dinner to raise money for her church.

Area High Schools Prepare For Future

tion or vocational education, but both. That's the kind of school we try to operate."

He added, "We give those who do not go to college just as good an opportunity to work at a good job as those who go to college."

In addition to college preparatory courses, Rose High offers the commercial department, which is one of the school's largest; it prepares the student to be a bookkeeper or secretary, for instance. Its vocational home-making department and lab technician's training offer another area of interest, as well as subjects in the area of industrial arts and cabinet making.

The latter offers students training as repairmen or cabinet makers, training in sheet metal work and some in auto mechanics. For a very good job, some students would want more training in these areas, Dowd noted.

Asked if he thought vocational education was a field lessening in importance, Dowd answered, "I don't think so. We have always had vocational education in our high school."

Stating that a public school generally is created for offering work that a youngster will need in his community, Dowd said, "If you need to teach vocational education to train youngsters in the community for jobs, then you are going to teach it."

As for the college preparatory subjects, students in this area will probably take more language, mathematics, science and social studies than those working towards a general diploma. Specifically, at Rose High, English, four to five of math, four to five of science, four in the social studies and five in foreign languages. Rose High teachers instruct Latin, French and Spanish foreign languages.

Though most of the present graduates of Rose High School leave with 18 units, some have 20 to 22. "In two years we will require 20 units because the students are taking five units per year. A few are allowed to take six," Dowd said. The State Board of Education recommended last year that requirements for graduation from a four-year high school be increased from 16 to 18 by 1963, which meant Rose High already was ahead of the requirements, and will be more ahead with 20.

The Pitt County schools already required 17 credits for graduation from a four-year high school, so they will just increase by one.

Conley revealed a vast curriculum in the county schools in agriculture for classroom and shop, and in farm mechanics. Some of the programs continue four years. He stated that the program in vocational education is extensive this year. "The program has been realigned and re-evaluated and tied in with standards coming out now at State College and other technical schools."

Home economics is offered by the county in all high schools. Vocational agriculture is offered in all white schools and in two Negro schools, Grimesland and South Ayrden. Business education is offered in all county schools, the superintendent noted. Industrial arts, which is primarily a shop program, a tool skill operation, is offered at Robinson Union, H. B. Sugg and Bethel Union schools.

The home economics is supposed to prepare students for home planning, home nursing, child care, community participation, wise use of money and related subjects.

The business education course offers typing, bookkeeping and sometimes shorthand. Conley noted that the machines for these courses are expensive, as is equipment for home economics.

Vocational education is designed to objective and scientific, these days.

Overall, education in the Pitt County and the Greenville schools, is slanted towards helping the many, rather than the few.

LONDON (AP) — Why does the bee ignore the buttercup?

This burning question—every apiarist knows that buttercups are full of nectar—occupied the minds of 100 or more beekeepers gathered in their 33rd annual convention recently.

As one dedicated apiarist of 30 years standing said with a bewildered shake of the head: "There are a lot of things so common you forget to notice them—such as why bees don't go for buttercups very much."

Some beekeepers argue that the sugar content of buttercups is low compared to other flowers in bloom at the same time. But that's just one theory, the veteran apiarist will tell you. The truth is that no one really knows why the bee almost entirely eschews the buttercup. The delegates were a mixture of "honey sold here" cottage
