Mary Todd Lincoln First Lady Century Too Soon

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — The First Lady was panicky.

Because of her efforts in a worthy project—refurbishing the White House—she had got herself into an embarrassing predicament.

Even before her husband had taken office she had expressed concern over the executive mansion's shabby condition and was anxious to put "new things in the place of old." As she explained: "No one has the interest of the place more at heart than myself."

Accompanied by her sister—who had disdained the White House furniture as looking "as if it had been brought in by the first president"—she made shopping forays to New York and Philadelphia.

By the time she had placed orders here and there for her satisfaction she discovered she had exceeded by a third the congressional—refurbishing appropriation.

Panicky, afraid to face her husband, she begged an administrative official to get the President's approval of the bill. She pleaded, tearfully, that she was afraid he would try to pay the excess charges out of his pocket, and he couldn't afford it. After all, it was $6,700.

For her dreams of White House beautification, Mary Todd Lincoln the distraught shopper, was First Lady a century too soon. Her great budget crisis, as detailed in the recently published "Conversations with Lincoln" by Charles M. Segal, came in December 1861.

But today the First Lady, assisted by a fine arts committee, has inspired interior decorators, organizations and wealthy families to press forward with priceless Americana for making the White House a national showplace.

Costs are cited that would have made Mrs. Lincoln tremble with disbelief. For example, redecoration of the diplomatic reception room has a $12,500 price tag.

The total 1861 congressional appropriation was a meager $20,000 which Mrs. Lincoln exceeded by $6,700 to the president's towering wrath.

Although he was considered a henpecked husband by many close to him, Abraham Lincoln rose to heights of indignation at the "monstrous extravagance" of his wife.

As reported later in a letter by Maj. Benjamin Brown French, the commissioner of public buildings whom Mrs. Lincoln had tearfully asked to intercede, the Civil War president was adamant about the $6,700 bill.

"I'd rather pay it out of my pocket first," he snapped. "It would stink in the nostrils of the American people to have it said that the President of the United States had approved a bill overrunning an appropriation of $20,000 for flub dubs for this damned old house, when the soldiers cannot have blankets!"

(The account was settled later, says Segal, apparently not out of Lincoln's pocket.)

Segal's book doesn't give the amount of the room paper bill, but it's pretty safe to assume it wouldn't hold a candle to the $12,500 just paid for the "scenic America" wallpaper put in the diplomatic reception room.

Printed in 1834, the wallpaper is an expensive item now. But Mrs. Lincoln can be excused for not picking it up at the mid-19th century going price. To us it may shine with the patina of history; but to her it wasn't antique, it was probably just old hat.

'Trick-Treat' To Be Held For UNICEF

"Trick or Treat" for UNICEF will be observed in Greenville Halloween night, October 31, between the hours of 5:00 and 7:00 p.m.

Children from various Greenville churches, under the sponsorship of the United Church Women, will knock on doors all over town, asking for coins to help sick and hungry children all over the world.

Mrs. A. L. Whitehurst, chairman of the local drive, states that, "All participants in the program will have proper identification. Only children wearing the UNICEF symbol are authorized to collect contributions to the fund."

At the same time on Halloween evening over 11,000 other communities will hold a similar program, sponsored nationally by the U.S. Committee for UNICEF. Last year the small coins collected trick or treating for the Children's Fund totalled $1,750,000.

For $1.00, UNICEF can ship enough dried skim milk for 500 glasses to areas where it is most needed. Assisted governments match the aid received at least two and a half times.

"In Greenville, as well as in all parts of the 50 states, we shall have good reason to be proud of our children," Mrs. Whitehurst said. "The 'treats' of coins they collect will help to chase the goblins which plague most of the world's children—the ghosts of hunger, disease, and fear. Please welcome these children, and give generously when they call."

Sportiest British Princess Expected To Wed Irish Lord

By HELEN DENVER
LONDON — (WNS) — A handsome, dark-haired Irish baron is expected to become the Royal Family's next in-law.

He is Raymond Arthur Clana- boy, 4th Baron O'Neill, 27, whose engagement to Britain's most eligible princess, Alexandra of Kent, will probably be announced shortly.

This has been an on and off romance for more than 10 years, with both parties grimly protesting they are "just friends."

Now the question appears to be not "Will Princess Alexandra and Lord O'Neill announce their engagement?" but "When will they announce it?" Rumors appeared to be confirmed when O'Neill recently paid $20,000 for an engagement ring at a London jeweler's.

It seemed hardly likely it would be for anyone else when he and the princess have spent the last two weeks holidaying together on the Hebridean Island of Islay. They have been guests of mutual friends, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morrison, whose parents own the island.

Alexandra, 24, is a tall, slim, glowing girl whose looks put her Royal cousins, the Queen and Princess Margaret, in the shade.

She has had a much more liberal upbringing than either of them, went to a boarding-school, Heathfield, and has never been swamped by Royal protocol.

With this, she has a charming and informal manner and shows a genuine interest in other people. It is a temptation to call her "Alex" after a few moments conversation—and she's probably the only British princess who would not mind if you did.

Her friendship with O'Neill began one day when he visited his sister Fionn at Heathfield. She introduced him to her best friend, Princess Alex, then an effervescent teen-ager suffering from baby fat.

He was still at Eton and used to visit Heathfield occasionally for concerts. The friendship grew until he chose her to be his guest on "open day" to be shown over his school.

Since they grew up they have been frequent guests at the same dances and weekend house parties. There was a slight hiatus in the acquaintance last year when O'Neill, asked about the romance, said incoherently: "It's all in the air," instead of using the "just friends" formula.

The princess's mother, Princess Marina, promptly ordered her daughter to cancel plans to visit him at his home, Shane's Castle, County Antrim, and sent her off on a trip to Germany. Marina is strong on matters of protocol and was determined her daughter's name would not be linked with any man until she had made up her mind.

Since that lesson, O'Neill's behavior has been impeccable. To all questions, even from his closest friends, he has returned a poker-faced: "No comment."

But it has long been obvious they preferred each other's company to anyone else's and it was expected an engagement would be announced early this month. This was scotched when the Royal Family had to go into mourning for the Queen's uncle, Sir David Bowes-Lyon, who died September 9.

Now it is possible the announcement may be delayed until after Princess Margaret has had her baby towards the end of October. The Royal Family tries to space out occasions for public celebration and knows the engagement of the young princess, who is among the family's most popular members, will attract considerable attention.

It is a match which, unlike Princess Margaret's marriage to photographer Tony Armstrong-Jones, will have the entire approval of the Queen. O'Neill is a descendant of the old kings of Ireland, with a much longer lineage even than the Royal Family.

He inherited his title 17 years ago when his father died. At that time, he also came into possession of a legacy of $300,000, a property in Northern Ireland and another in Leicestershire, England. He has a London house and drives a 120-miles-per-hour Alfa-Romeo sports car.

After leaving Eton he studied agriculture and now runs his own estates. He also has interests in a car-distributing firm and another business which manufactures turbo-jet motorboats.

His background has just the slightest touch of unorthodoxy to lift him from the usual, in-bred, aristocratic rut, for his mother, widowed, then divorced from her second husband, is now married to thriller-writer Ian Fleming. His books, all best sellers, have been described as combinations of "sex, sadism and snobbery."

For Alexandra, one of the nicest things about becoming engaged is that the gossips will no longer be able to attempt to marry her off to any man at whom she even smiles.

This has exasperated her so much that when she was at a cot races in June she was heard to say in a loud, irritated voice: "I do wish people would stop marrying me off! Can't they discuss anyone else?" There was an embarrassed silence around her, as a number of people who obviously had not been discussing anyone else stopped talking.

Marriage will not mean that she will retire from her "job" as a member of the Royal Family, which entails many public appearances and tours abroad representing the Queen. She is due to visit Japan in Mid-November, and her engagement book is already full for the first few months of 1962.

How To Win An Argument Without Raising A Hand

By DENNIS MURRAY
Women's News Service

In the course of a lifetime I have won many, say three, arguments with my wife. My victories have always left me dejected if not bloody.

At that I won a dispute without a single aggressive word on my part. I didn't even raise an eyebrow in defense.

Jenny had been having a go at me because of my weight and figure. "You're not the lad I married," she said one night. "He had only two jaws." Another night she said, "From between which of those folds are your eyes leering?"

Other time: "I've heard of spilled houses, but never one with overhangs front and rear." And again: "My Uncle Muldoon had a bay window but you have a sort of oceanic spread."

I take these things in my stride—or should I say waddle?—but of late she has been bringing Joe Delaney into the picture. "Why don't you stand straight like Joe she would ask me. (The answer is that if I stand straight in back, I'm not straight in front.)"

"Joe Delaney looks ten years younger than you," she would remark. (Joe was born ten years before I.) "Delaney, there's a broth of a boy! So lean, so straight, so virile." (Broth? More of a consume type, I think.)

So things were going when Jenny announced, "Madge and Joe Delaney have asked us to dinner Tuesday night. I told them we would go."

"Well, I might pick up some pointers," I said, weakly. When we arrived, Madge said, "I know Dennis will insist on a cocktail, so I have prepared a little drink." Cocktail? It was pale vermouth and soda. Warm yet.

After we had smacked our lips in the vain hope of promoting a second one, Madge led us to the table. First there was a round of watercress soup. This was followed by romaine salad with mineral oil, vinegar and capscum seeds.

Then came the main course. "I think eating meat is almost cannibalistic," Madge said. I saw what she meant. The piece of resistance—and there was: damned little resistance—was spinach moulded in the shape of a lamb chop, sprinkled with bran and fried in peanut oil. Accompanying it was a pot of pat cheese—I was confused by that time—some raw, sliced mushrooms and a spot of tomato aspic. The drink was water, chlorinated, tap.

This was followed by servings of yogurt and a bowl of apples. "I put knives on for the apples," Madge explained. "You should not cut off the skins, of course, but I thought some of you might not want to eat a whole apple because it contains so much sugar."

"You are so thoughtful!" I murmured. This was followed by decaffeinated coffee with saccharine tablets.

When we left, somewhat early after a few desultory remarks about television, weather and Barry Goldwater, I said to my good wife, "Now I understand why Joe Delaney is such a fine figure of a man. All those vitamins, all those minerals, all those enzymes—"

"Shut up!" said Jenny. "If we hurry we can get down to Pete's before he closes and gets a couple of steaks, a mess of hash-browns, coffee and some apple pie, you big, lovely slob!"

The meeting was called to order by John Moore, the President. The American pledge and 4-H pledge was then said. Linda Allen gave the devotional, taken from Psalms 100 and led in the Lord's Prayer, Harper Manning, the song leader, led in "America." The secretary then read the minutes at the last meeting.

Four new members were: Earl Killebrew, Linda Allen, Kenneth Allen, and Jimm, Wooten. Then the club appointed Linda Allen and Margie Dunn for the next demonstration. Mrs. Moore gave a demonstration on safety. Members were served ice cream and cookies by Mrs. Moore. The meeting was then adjourned.

American Teens Dream Up Versions Of Couture

By ARTHUR UNGER
Editor and Publisher of Datebook Magazine

NEW YORK—(WNS) — Paris and Rome may be the headquarters for high fashion styling for the sophisticated women of the world. But when it comes to teen fashion, some of the best and most original ideas come from small towns where the haute couture news from Paris never quite gets delivered.

Here are some of the latest trends and clothing crazes making the rounds in teen circles, as reported by Datebook magazine correspondents.

FLINT, Mich.: To cope with the popular large handbags, girls are using plastic bags as purse liners. Instead of groping in the purse, they just lift out the whole transparent bag to find the objects immediately.

ARLINGTON, Tex.: Girls who wear bobby socks to school are pinning several small scatter pins around the cuffs.

MARION, Ill.: If you have two pairs of old leotards around the house—a red pair and a blue pair, for instance—cut the seams of both apart, then sew them together putting one red leg and one blue leg together.

DETROIT: Make yourself a wild brass belt by using a door hinge for a buckle. But if at any time store. Either sew the two halves of the hinge to the ends of a belt or attach them by pushing paper fasteners through the holes.

HOLLAND, Mich.: Girls are driving everyone mad by cutting off their blue jeans to strange lengths—one leg Bermuda length and the other Jamaica length.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.: Latest craze is making a sweatshirt into a cardigan. Take a sweatshirt, cut down the front and cut off the cuffs on the sleeves and around the bottom. Hem and sew on trim, usually rickrack.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.: Girls are knitting really long neck scarves, big enough to wrap around two people.

WHIPPANY, N.D.: Want to look real far out? Buy three skating skirts, each about two inches longer than the other. Then, put them on from the shortest to the longest and dig the attention you attract.

CHICAGO: Add something to a plain blouse or sweater by choosing an interesting key from your house or attic. Give it a coat of gill paint or black enamel. Hang it from a length of velvet ribbon and pin it to your collar or wear it round your neck.

HASTINGS, Minn.: Latest fad here is the clutch bag made from a plastic-lined make-up case—the kind with the zipper closing. Stitch about a quarter of a yard of scraps from your fall fashions onto the case. Make several to match every costume.

ST. THOMAS, N.D.: Take an inexpensive hairband and cover it with velvet. Spread a thin layer of glue, then sprinkle sequins, stars, hearts or even your boyfriend's initials on it. For Valentine's Day, use white velvet with red hearts; for Christmas, use green velvet with red bells.

BAYONNE, N.J.: For the festive holidays, the girls here put bells on bobypans and fasten them under the layers of their hair (especially good under teased hair). Everyone wonders where the sound is coming from. It's called "Bells in Your Belfry."

Keep Safety Car Shoes Scrubbed
Even shoes have safety features these days—that is, the new driving slippers with special grip soles to prevent feet from slipping off the pedals, and insulated inner soles to protect against heat or cold.

These shoes, made of car upholstery fabrics, can be washed like any upholstery—by sponging with thick "dry" soap or detergent suds and rinsing with a damp cloth. Do it often, to keep them clean as well as safe.

Cooking Is Fun

FAMILY DINNER
Try seasoning wax beans this way if you want your family to eat them all up!

Meat Loaf Baked Potatoes
Wax Beans Frances
Bread Tray Marinated Cucumbers
Apple Pie Beverage

WAX BEANS FRANCES
1 pound wax beans
¼ cup boiling water
¼ teaspoon salt
4 large scallions
3 tablespoons butter of margarine
¼ cup minced parsley
Pepper

Cut tips from beans; scrub in cold water; drain. Cut crosswise into slanted 1-inch long pieces. In a 2-quart saucepan cook beans rapidly, covered, in boiling water and salt just until tender—12 to 15 minutes; stir beans once during cooking. Drain off any liquid. Meanwhile clean scallions and slice thin crosswise, using all the green part. Cook scallions gently in a small skillet in the butter. Mix beans, scallions and parsley; add pepper to taste. Makes 6 servings.

These tuna sandwiches hold a pleasant surprise: butter-browned nuts.

TUNA/Walnut Sandwiches
Salad
Fruit Compote with Frosted

Cookies
Tuna Walnut Sandwiches
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1-3 cup coarsely broken walnuts
1 can (7 ounces) tuna
¼ cup finely diced celery
¼ cup (about) mayonnaise
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
Salt and pepper to taste

Melt the butter in a small skillet over low heat; add walnuts and toast, stirring—be careful not to scorch butter. Turn tuna (including oil in can) into a bowl; add the walnuts (including the browned butter), celery, mayonnaise, vinegar, salt and pepper; mix well. Makes about 2 cups filling for sandwiches; use at once so walnuts will be crisp.

Baby's Equipment Should Be Clean
Dairy scientists at Purdue University caution that equipment for feeding baby calves must be thoroughly washed with soap and water after every use.

This is an important reminder to mothers that equipment for human babies also needs to be carefully washed in hot soap or detergent suds and rinses after every feeding. In fact, everything baby touches should always be clean—to protect his health and to increase his comfort.

The Changing Picture In Congress

The traditional picture of the relative "liberalism" and "conservatism" of the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States Congress is undergoing a period of transition and may well emerge as exactly the opposite from what people have come to accept.

For decades the Senate has been looked upon as the more conservative house of Congress, while the House of Representatives was viewed as more liberal in its majority opinion. To a great extent the records of the two bodies bear this out although exceptions may be found in each session.

During the most recent session of Congress, however, the two houses of Congress appeared to swap traditional positions. The House appeared to be the more conservative of the bodies, while it was the Senate which followed the more liberal course. On several occasions during this year's session, the Senate concurred in programs advanced by President Kennedy's administration only to have the House kill or drastically water down the proposals.

With speculation now turning to the coming session of Congress which begins in January, there appears a growing feeling that President Kennedy will have greater difficulty in getting the more liberal proposals of his administration passed by the House than by the Senate.

Both houses of Congress are dominated by the President's party members, and in the House the Democrats have a greater edge than in the Senate. These factors would normally suggest that the House may be more inclined to follow the President's proposals than the Senate. The House, with its members up for election every two years, would appear to be more sensitive to pressure groups and to the feelings of their constituents at the grass roots. Normally the members might be expected to be more interested in specific legislation from the smaller areas from which they are elected than the broader scope of legislation which members of the Senate, representing states, would have.

As the political scene of the nation changes—and it does so constantly—perhaps it is the Senate which is becoming most sensitive to specific pressure and minority groups which hold the balance of power in state-wide elections.

From many sources are coming many theories about the change which apparently is taking place in the outlook of the two houses of Congress. Whether the pattern that apparently began to develop in 1961 will continue in 1962 in Congress remains to be seen. If it does the influences which brought about and sustained the changing pattern will be recognized as important factors in American politics.

Opportunity For U.S. Propaganda Attack

It is generally agreed among scientists that the huge nuclear blast set off by the Soviets this week was not of the 50-megaton magnitude of which Premier Khrushchev spoke some days ago. International reaction to this latest Soviet explosion in the atmosphere, however, has brought severe protests against the Soviets for exploding the weapon.

There can be little doubt that a subsequent nuclear explosion by the Soviets of the 50-megaton variety will only serve to intensify the international reaction that is building against the Soviets for their current series of nuclear tests. It must be further assumed that these explosions of unprecedented power in the atmosphere will create increased fallout over various parts of the earth for many months. This factor, in turn, will mean that the protests that have come on the heels of the explosions will be echoed again months from now when, scientists say, most of the fallout will begin to rain down on the earth.

By this series of nuclear tests the Soviets have developed a new propaganda campaign creating the image of the Soviet Union as the nation with the most destructive weapons on earth. Through this, they apparently expect to use the threat of force to gain that which they dare not attempt by actually using force.

At the same time adverse reaction to the fallout resulting from Soviet tests is undermining the prestige of that nation and will continue to do so in the months ahead after the initial shock of huge explosions have dimmed to a degree in the minds of people of many nations.

The United States, in its own propaganda program, should not overlook the possibilities of increasing its own prestige at a time when the Soviets have made themselves vulnerable by seeking to create an image of invincibility.

As the political scene of the nation changes—and it does so constantly—perhaps it is the Senate which is becoming most sensitive to specific pressure and minority groups which hold the balance of power in state-wide elections.

Very Rough Talk To Soviet Boss

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy administration has now talked very rough to Russia but whether this is just a flash-in-the-pan or the beginning of a new policy of toughness remains to be seen.

For months Premier Khrushchev, while demanding the Allies back up on Berlin, has waved his nuclear weapons and cut loose with a whole series of tests. He has been the tough one.

President Kennedy, by comparison, has been mild. In the past couple of months some Republican critics have complained he wasn't firm enough even suggesting he was an appeaser. This, reportedly, cut under the President's skin.

Last week Khrushchev topped things off by announcing Russia soon would explode a 50-megaton nuclear bomb which would dwarf previous blasts. Monday Russia exploded two nuclear devices—one of them described by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission as possibly as high as 50 megatons but more likely about 30 megatons.

American officials—Secretary of State Dean Rusk for instance—professed to see no practical reason for such an explosion although one simple explanation seems to be reasonable enough: Khrushchev is doing this as a terror tactic.

Saturday night, as if replying to this tactic, Roswell L. Gilpatrick, deputy secretary of defense, made the toughest speech delivered by any Pentagon official since Kennedy took office.

The speech was first approved by Rusk and the White House. The administration took pains beforehand to let newsmen know the speech had this approval to show Gilpatrick was talking for the administration. Gilpatrick not only said the United States is superior to Russia in nuclear weapons—he went into some detail to explain why—but warned the Soviets that if they start a nuclear war, even with a sneak attack, this country's nuclear resources would still be powerful enough to wipe them out.

This kind of talk would have had a much greater impact here and abroad if someone higher up the official ladder in the administration—like Kennedy or Rusk or Defense Secretary Robert McNamara—had delivered it.

But, even though it came from a lesser official like Gilpatrick, the fact that the administration let it be known he had full approval got the point across.

This speech serves to try several kinds of fish:

1. Just in case Khrushchev has any doubts about American power—and officials here don't think he does—the Gilpatrick speech would set him straight.
2. Khrushchev has been making propaganda hay—in trying to impress the world with Russia's power—and the Gilpatrick speech may take some of the edge off it.
3. It is also a nudge to American allies, particularly in Europe, if they suspected American weakness because Kennedy didn't try to match Khrushchev in waving nuclear weapons.
4. It may take some of the steam out of the complaint by some Republicans that Kennedy hasn't been tough enough.

Unless the Gilpatrick talk is the beginning of a consistently tough Kennedy policy this one effort isn't apt to mean much since Khrushchev can be expected to continue with his

Strength For Today

Probably the best way to approach the problem is to accept the fact that we have a revelation and a system of beliefs and morals which are suited to us and our needs. What God, and Christ, and the heavenly powers have in store for people of other planets—if there are such beings—we do not know and perhaps may never know. Let us attend to our own spiritual business as God has set it before us and let us be assured that God will be able to handle the matters of cosmic importance without our help, and that we need not worry too much about them.

Space exploration may raise interesting theological problems, but we shall wait until we can reach and the heaven they hope to reach the same place?

Story Of An Elm Tree

This may not be worthwhile at all, but perhaps someone will grasp the meaning of this little story that I heard lately. If not, then I apologize.

(But, before beginning, let me confess that its meaning I failed to understand, still I sensed something.)

The seedling of an elm tree had taken root squarely in the middle of the path leading to the door of the cottage.

"The old man sat idly on the porch of the isolated little house every day. He watched the function of nature from very close at hand. He worshipped it, in a way.

"At the very beginning, he noticed how well the elm seedling was thriving in the hard-packed soil of the pathway. He was quietly impressed by the seedling's vitality. Still, it alarmed him in his own quiet way that the insignificant little growing thing had selected such a spot so close to his front door for its life.

"Day after day the old man watched the seedling. He chewed his tobacco and rocked his rocking chair. It amused him to rock slowly and spit his tobacco juice first to one side, then to the other of the young elm. Occasionally he spat directly at the sapling, but not often.

"All around the calendar for the young tree's first year the old man sat, rocked, spat and watched. While he was indeed an old man, he realized that very little effort would be required, even from an old man like himself, to rise from the rocking chair, walk the few feet that separated the elm from the front door and pull the tender, young sprout from the ground.

"Perhaps the old man would have considered such an urge. But he had loved nature for his entire life. His own life was nature manifest and his deepest respect for nature's life dictated that his was not the task to alter her development.

"And so, the years passed. The old man, growing older all the time, sat and rocked and watched. He became fascinated by the tree. He could account for each phase of the sapling's growth into a mighty tree—if he should live that long.

"And every minute during the years the old man watched the tree grow, something inside told him the young seedling, while it appeared as healthy and thriving as any tree, had taken root in the wrong place. The old man listened to that inner voice, but in only with a passive ear. The elm had grown tall and straight, as tall and as straight as any other elm in the old man's memory. To him, this fact justified the elm's existence, even if it blocked his front door.

"Whenever the old man was obliged to leave his cottage for an hour or so, it caused him no concern that he was forced to go around the tree. It was inconvenient, but only mildly so, and he was unperturbed.

"But, then one day, the progress of the centuries visited the old man's little world. The old man was taking an afternoon nap just inside his cottage. Progress took one look at the cottage with the huge elm tree standing squarely in front of the door. The elm whispered falsely, but convincingly, to Progress that its very existence in that location served notice that the cottage had been abandoned for years.

"And so, to hasten progress, the elm and other trees around the cottage were quickly hewn down without an investigation of the little house's insides. When the huge elm crashed through the roof of the cottage, the sleeping old man was crushed."

Other Editors Saying The Real Fight

(Washington Daily News)

Perhaps the average person might have his world picture out of focus today. Perhaps people are looking at the struggle among world powers today to be merely one between communism and capitalism.

Perhaps new media have contributed to the fact that too few people really understand the full implications of the challenges before the world today. Too few people really know that communism itself is a religion—a religion dedicated to the destruction of Christianity.

Then, might not the real struggle be one between the Christian religion on the one hand and communism on the other? We must never forget that one of the basic tenets of communism is atheism. Nikita Khrushchev, in a recent answer to Pope John took the occasion to reaffirm his atheism.

Marx, Lenin, Trotsky, and Engels have all set the pattern for communism. And this pattern denies the existence of any Supreme Being. The Russian communist looks upon us as a sort of superstition and using religion and prayer as crutches to alibi away our deficiencies.

By Graham, world evangelist, says that Khrushchev deep down inside is not an atheist. John Wilkinson, before a couple of church groups in Washington in recent days, takes the position that if Christianity can be destroyed, then that very act of destruction will also destroy every political and economic fact except that of the victor—his communism.

Some might look up communism as a philosophy or a way of life. It makes little difference how technical we wish to become. The argument as to what communism stands for, what it will do, and where it would put those of us in a Christian world are far less important than what the Christian peoples of the world must face up to in order to prevent spiritual chaos.

We'll have to look at communism and say that if Christian peoples over the world were as dedicated to the disciplines of their religion as communists are to their anti-Christ religion, then the real fight is not between economic ideologies but between religious concepts.

It has been pointed out many times that communists say "religion must go." They of course mean the Christian religion.

If we look at the mess in the world today in its true perspective, we might not be able to detect where the communistic fight against religion starts and the fight against capitalism starts. That area of definition makes little difference. If one is destroyed, the chances are that both will fall. Capitalism and Christianity stand together. If one falls, both fall. We can be sure of that fact.

So when we look at communism realistically, it makes little difference whether we think in terms of Christianity or democracy—both are targets.

Opinions In Brief

"This country has been greatly blessed and we have been recipients of the greatest gift of all times—freedom. But at the present rate, it's slowly ebbling away with the lack of character, respected work and working for self-respect." — Moulton (Tex.) Eagle.

"Science has conquered virtually all questions of everyday life except the matter of getting four legs of equal length on a coffee shop table." — Indianapolis News.

"A doctor says there may be a link between baldness and heart attacks. Well, both of them usually come in middle age." — Raleigh Times.

"Castro claims the Cuban churches are hiding dynamite. There's dynamite in them all right, but not the kind he thinks." — Fort Myers (Fla.) News-Press.

"The relationship of the job to skill does not appear in all this. If an assistant professor in a university receives a smaller compensation than one of Hofa's dues-payers, it is because, as an economic proposition, that is all the job is worth. Even if professors were to unionize as New York school teachers have attempted to do, the wage situation of teachers on any level would not improve greatly because the supply of competent persons in this field is presumably greater than the demand. I say presumably because if the whole truth were told, there are too few competent teachers which explains why a student majors in a subject and knows little or nothing about it.

The subject of public welfare or social welfare does not enter into this discussion at all. It is true that a musician adds to the culture of a nation but no nation places the value of the musician above that of a missile worker. Even in Soviet Russia, where cultural workers are better paid than in many countries, a musician is not paid more than a factory worker or

Wages In The Picture

By GEORGE S. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Joseph O'Sullivan of San Fernando, in a letter to me about musicians, makes a most interesting observation on the law of wages. He says:

"What these musicians want, as does every competent workman—be he an electrician, a bricklayer, a plumber or even a fiddler—is pay commensurate (sic) with his contribution to the public welfare."

Wages are paid with four factors in view:

1. The purchasing power of the dollar.
2. The supply of the particular wage-earner.
3. The willingness of the worker to accept the offered pay.
4. The advantage of wages over unemployment insurance.

I shall deal with this in detail:

1. and 2. A stenographer in New York will demand about $30 a week. In 1961, she is not likely to be as competent as in 1920 although she apparently gets more money. The reason is that the purchasing power of the dollar is worth less and the possibility of earning more as a manicurist or a receptionist is greater. Therefore there is a shortage of stenographers and more has to be paid for them. Similarly, there is a shortage of nurses and other skilled workers. For many purposes, the unskilled worker is just as good.

College graduates must often be classed as unskilled workers because what they have learned in college is of no advantage to anyone but to themselves. They have not gained a saleable skill. On the other hand, a plumber has an unusual and valuable skill. Under the system of education now in vogue in the United States, less than a Master's Degree is indicative of little specialized skill.

3. There was a time when the worker accepted any wage that he was offered. In the McKinley campaign of my childhood, the phrase, "A dollar a day and a full dinner pail," represented great progress. Workers did a minimum of a 54-hour week and the early labor unions of Sam Gompers demanded an eight-hour day.

Today the worker has the mass protection of labor union which means that he does not accept pay or the hours of employment offered. The unions negotiate for the workers and if an employer is unwilling to bargain with the union, all the workers go on strike which can damage a business.

If a worker is dissatisfied, his union will get him a job in some other company. From the standpoint of the worker, he is no longer a part of the industry in which he works; he is a member of the union which fights for him, for the dues it receives from him.

The worker therefore can accept or reject the wages offered, regardless of the needs of the employer for workers or the needs of the worker for a job.

4. This brings us to the fourth factor in this situation, namely unemployment insurance which, whatever its virtues, has worked out to protect the lazy, the incompetent, the impudent. In fact, a worker who wants to be fired so that he can get unemployment insurance will create issues with the object of being dismissed.

Record Year In Electing Judges

By LYNN NISBET

JUDGES — Next year will set a record for the election of judges in North Carolina. The terms of 20 Supreme Court Justices—W. H. Bobbitt and William B. Rodman—expire December 31, 1962. They will be on the ballot for re-election next year.

As of now 22 vacancies will occur on the Superior Court bench at the same time—and there may be additional changes before election day. Prior to 1955 there were 21 elected Superior Court judges, and terms were staggered so that ten were elected at one time and eleven at another. Under that schedule eleven terms would have expired next year. The 1955 General Assembly added eleven judges to the regular list, and specified that although they would not be appointed and take office until midsummer of 1955, their terms should run concurrently with those which began on January 1 of that year, and will expire on December 31, 1962.

There have been surprisingly few changes in the judiciary since 1955. Albert Cowper was appointed to succeed Judge Paul Frizzelle, retired, in the 3rd district; Herman Clark succeeded O. K. Nimocks, retired, in the 12th district; Henry A. McKinley, Jr., succeeded Malcolm Seawell when he was appointed Attorney General in the 16th district, and Eugene Shaw succeeded Richardson Preyer in the 18th district when Judge Preyer was named to the Federal bench. These appointments have been subsequently elected, except Judge Shaw, who took his oath of office just this week. All four will be on the ballot for full eight-year terms next year.

BALLOT — All of these incumbents are expected to be candidates for re-election and up to now there is no indication of opposition. For the Supreme Court positions the ballot will show that the candidate is seeking the seat held either by Bobbitt or by Rodman. For the Superior Court places the candidates will file by districts. The list of vacancies to be filled includes:

Chester Morris, first district; Malcolm Paul, second; William J. Bundy, third; Henry L. Stevens Jr., fourth; Rudolph I. Mintz, fifth; Walter J. Bone, seventh; Albert W. Cowper, eighth; Hamilton Hobgood, ninth; Herman Clark, 12th; Raymond B. Mallard, 13th; Clarence W. Hall, 14th; Leo Carr, 15th; Henry A. McKinnon Jr., 16th; Allen H. Gwyn, 17th; Walter Crissman, 18th; and Eugene Shaw, 18th; Hubert E. Olive, CHANGE — good deal was said around the League of Municipalities convention at Durham this week about changes in municipal officials because of election turnovers, about changes in administrative staff and in other phases of relationship between the people and their municipal governments—the closest level of government to them.

Perhaps no more significant "change" could be noted than the fact that the North Carolina League of Municipalities has its keynote speaker the United States Ambassador to the Organization of American States. The fact that DeLoepps S. Morrison was first invited to speak to the N. C. League when he was mayor of New Orleans, does not reduce the significance of his appearance now as the official representative of this nation to a group of other nations—about as far removed from the purely local municipal level as one can get.

And yet, in his address Sunday night Ambassador Morrison showed a direct connection and relationship. He said he was trying to show to the people as well as the government—in Latin-America that the "foreign aid" money sent into these areas was not a handout from a rich government, but was an offer of help from the common people in this country—the salesmen and clerks, the truck drivers and farmers, who were willing to share their good fortune with others.

As of now 22 vacancies will occur on the Superior Court bench at the same time—and there may be additional changes before election day. Prior to 1955 there were 21 elected Superior Court judges, and terms were staggered so that ten were elected at one time and eleven at another. Retail Sales Curiously Lagging

By ELMER ROESSNER

Despite the fact that the economy seems to be emerging from the recent recession, and that employment appears to be gaining, retail sales are curiously lagging.

Sales in September were $18.2 billion but, after adjustments for seasonal variations and trading-day differences, the total was almost unchanged from that of August this year and September a year ago.

This is even more curious because in September, 1960, the total personal income was at an annual rate of $405.5 billion dollars; in September, 1961, it was at a rate of $420.2 billion.

In September, 1960, retail spending was $17.9 billion, and in September, 1961, it was $18.2 billion.

In short, income rose by around $15 billion a year, but retail sales rose only $300 million—no more than the possible statistical error.

That leaves the question: Why are Americans, making more than $1 billion a month than a year ago spending only $300 million a month more?

One of the reasons—and perhaps the most significant—is that the wave of unemployment and strikes drained consumer spending.

CATCHING-UP PERIOD

Thousands of families were victims of the decline in employment between the fall of 1960 and the summer of 1961. Thousands more were cut off from income because of strikes.

Many of these families were unable to keep up installment payments. Commerce Clearing House reports that in the year ended June 30 an all-time high of $4,643 bankruptcies were filed in Federal courts. Six out of every seven of these cases were personal or family bankruptcies—and of these, many were the result of over-extension of installment credit.

The hundred thousand families who went through the wringer are, of course, wiped out of the installment market. Their credit is dead—at least for a while.

But there are hundreds of thousands of others who refused to take "the bath"—who kept up payments somehow or other even though papa was laid off or on strike.

Neither of these two groups—the bankrupts nor the chinup unemployed—are now able to add much to consumer spending. Those who went broke cannot charge purchases; they must buy only as they have the cash to pay for it. Those who fought their way through are burdened with debt and cannot rush to buy more.

So that is why retail sales are not rising as fast as personal income is going up. The public is simply catching up with itself.

DURABLE SALES LAG BUT TOTAL INCREASES

The Department of Commerce report on September sales, still incomplete, shows that while durable-goods stores were lower than a year ago, sales on nondurables were slightly higher.

Durable sales in September, 1960, were $5,613 million, while in September, 1961, they were $5,330 million—largely because people were buying fewer new cars this year.

Nondurable sales a year ago were $12,285 million, compared with $12,887 million in September this year. The biggest reason was that Americans were eating and drinking more. Spending for food and drink rose from $3,911 million in September, 1960, to $4,419 million in September this year.

Lion In The Hills

By JOHN B. PRESCOTT

CHAPTER 23

This time, the lion's bloody mask was kept on the ground. All the sounds gave instant voice and leaped wildly. Smitten with sudden terror at the outburst, beneath him, Rusty half lost his footing in a clawing, scratching scramble to draw back tightly against the trunk.

And in that second of revived terror, Alec felt his old love for him come back and, in a rush of pity, knew him for no willful killer, but only a hunted animal obedient to instinct.

Behind him on the trail, a third Shivers hound came into view; then a fourth, further back. And now, Shivers himself, bounding toward the tree on his calico horse, Sam was nowhere to be seen.

The sight of Shivers filled Alec with a dread so crawly that his mind went fuzzy; yet there was a clear part, too, like the eye of a hurricane that knew what to do at last and set him toward the doing.

Still he'd thrown Sandy out on picket and had sought his holds on the trunk of the tree before he clearly remembered Sam's cryptic comment that he hoped Rusty would know him when the time came.

It stood foremost now in Alec's mind as he began to climb. Reaching and grasping and pulling with hands that seemed unfeeling of what they touched, yet managed to do his bidding, he made his plea to the lion above.

"Oh, Rusty, it's me," he said. "It's me, Alec, that found you orphaned... and look you home, and fixed your hurt foot and fed you."

Overhead, Rusty glared down, foaming. At the base of the trunk, the hounds bayed and howled and tumbled over each other. From afar, Shivers, who saw him now, yelled.

But Alec paid him no heed. He kept on climbing upward, branch on branch, talking always, seeking always some crack or opening.

shot. But the shot was never made. Sam's voice, sounding out as he dismounted, stopped Shivers rifle midway to aiming point.

Sam said one word—"Whoa!"—and Shivers held fast.

From above, Alec looked and saw Sam draw near, moving slowly and looking old and played out. But the way that Shivers stood made his spine tingle; Shivers' eyes narrowed and then widened again, and while Sam's face was hidden to Alec, he knew what Shivers saw there. For a moment Sam's age and grief and knowledge of defeat were gone, and there looked on Shivers now the man who once had faced a bear with only a killing knife away up on Maroon Mountain.

Looking down, Alec knew; and he knew that Shivers knew, too, and when it came to Shivers that Sam also knew, he broke—broke, dip down, and then sent his eye searching along the earth, as before his betters.

Which was true, for he was only a money hunter, after all, who hadn't even been living in the time of Sam's youth, the time of the great silvertip bears, when those who went to the wild went less for money than for reasons that made your blood freeze to think of, and did so as stealthy and yellow-eyed as the beasts they slew.

And then it changed. Having broken, Shivers now grew petulant; he made a complaint.

"But what about my pay? I got to live, don't I? That cat's mine as much as yours!"

"He's nobody's," Sam said, slow and calm and easy. "He don't even belong to Alec any more. He's his own; he belongs to himself. To my thinking, he's earned it."

"But I been hired!" Shivers fussed and fretted. "Fred McMahon's going to pay for his hide! He told me so to my face!"

Rusty's fate is decided as "Lion in the Hills" continues here tomorrow.

Pay $25,000 In Wheat Program

A total of some 230 Pitt County wheat farmers have diverted wheat acreage under the 1963 wheat stabilization program, according to county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office manager Livingston Roberts today.

Roberts said advance payments to the 230 farmers have totaled about $25,000 for some 2,100 acres of wheat diverted under the program. Total payments, to be completed next spring, to the 230 participants will reach about $65,000, Roberts said.

He urged more of the 768 Pitt County farms eligible for participation to divert wheat acreage under the 1962 plan. The office manager said the program is designed to save the federal government a total of $258 million in surplus grain storage costs. At least $50 million, he said, will be saved during the 1962 crop year.

Payments to farmers, Roberts pointed out, range between a minimum of $21.50 per acre diverted to a maximum of $38.70. Payment rates are based upon past production and land use records.

Roberts said farmers participating in the program are being paid at the average rate of $1.31 per bushel for unproduced wheat. This cost to the government, he pointed out, contrasts with the average $3.85 per bushel the government is obliged to pay for storage and eventual disposition of produced surplus wheat.

Stepped Up Radiological Emergency Team Measures Urged For State

By REESE HART

RALEIGH (AP)—When an Air Force B52G bomber crashed and burned in Wayne County last January members of an emergency team were on the scene within 52 minutes.

Armed with sensitive instruments, they quickly determined no radiation had resulted from two nuclear weapons being transported on the plane.

This is one of the functions of the 12-member State Radiological emergency team headed by Dr.

Farmville Rotary Backs Project

FARMVILLE — Farmville's Rotary Club Tuesday night unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the community's fallout shelter association organized at a meeting here last Thursday.

The Rotarians gave their support to the movement that has been spearheaded by local Civil Defense officials in an effort to provide adequate protection for all Farmville area residents.

Officials have reported that available basement space in Farmville's public, institutional and private buildings would serve as potential fallout shelter space for only about half the area's population. The fallout shelter association is aimed at affording protection for the other half.

Subscriptions to the shelter plan are available to interested residents at $125 per person.

W. L. Wilson, head of the Radiological Health Division of the State Board of Health.

The possibility of accidents involving radioactive materials in North Carolina prompted the formation of the team about two years ago by the Board of Health. The team is composed of trained personnel of North Carolina State College, the University of North Carolina and the State Board of Health.

"We work closely with the highway patrol," Dr. Wilson said. "If an accident should occur involving radioactive material the patrol would notify us immediately. We're on call on a 24-hour basis."

Dr. Wilson said North Carolina is lagging behind several states in occupational health radiological work.

"Even if we were provided sufficient money to carry out our program," he declared, "it would be two full years before we could put it into operation because we would have to train the personnel to use and maintain the scientific equipment."

Dr. Wilson's division is comprised of himself and three staff engineers.

More than 300 individuals, firms and industries in North Carolina are licensed to use radioisotopes under regulations of the Atomic Energy Commission.

"Our mission," he added, "is to make periodic checks to determine what exposures there might be to the public from radiation and other health hazards in the air, water and food. It is our duty to advise the people how to control any hazards that might occur."

The 1959 legislature enacted a law placing responsibility on the State Board of Health to protect the public against radiation. The law authorized the governor to appoint a 35-member Advisory Committee on Atomic Energy.

He noted that the level of radiation in the air had increased in North Carolina since Russia resumed nuclear tests, "but not enough to alarm the public."

The U.S. Public Health Service issues daily reports from a station at Gastonia on the amount of radiation in the air.

Dr. Wilson said a local milk sampling station in Charlotte collected samples of commercial milk in that area once a month to

Traveler Gives Car To Porter

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Edward D. Parence, a porter at Buffalo International Airport, helped a customer unload four pieces of luggage from an automobile Tuesday. The customer then told him "the car is yours."

Jack E. Teehan of Auckland, New Zealand, handed over the keys, signed the title transfer, waved goodbye and took off with his wife for the long flight home.

Teehan, who said he was a broker and real estate man, had been touring the United States for several weeks. He said he bought the car, a 1955 Oldsmobile, in Florida for $750 but had no further use for it.

"We're a three-car family," said Parence. He said he and his wife probably would sell one of the three.

determine any radiation. Beginning this week the samples will be collected once a week, he said.

"We need to wake up now and get moving on a stepped up program of radiological work," Dr. Wilson said. "The big need is more money. If we can get that we can train the personnel and get the needed equipment."

Helicopter Lands In Robersonville

ROBERSONVILLE — The Marines have made another landing. But this time it was Robersonville instead of Tripoli. And this time the navigator was considering outerspace while the pilot was only considering fuel.

That's what can happen if you're a little off course, say a hundred miles, and the fuel gauge on the helicopter that you're in has zeroed in on the empty zone.

A U.S. Marine helicopter, of the type used by the Mercury project, which is a type of rescue "chopper," landed in a vacant lot in Robersonville Sunday at 3 p.m. The lot was adjacent to Stalls Brothers' Esso Station on U.S. 64 in town.

On board were five officers, one captain and four first lieutenants, and two enlisted men, both corporals. They were en route from Quantico, Va. to Pope Air Force Base in Fayetteville.

With the fuel almost exhausted and the officers having no actual idea of where they were, they decided to land and to try and find out where they were and to obtain some fuel.

Efforts were made to obtain the fuel locally by the Robersonville Police Department but the closest the 115 octane fuel could be found was Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro. The Air Force Operations Officer was notified of the predicament somewhat sheepishly by the stranded marines and a tanker was sent to Robersonville for refueling.

The marines were able to resume flight at 6:45 p.m. Searchlights from the Robersonville Police Department but the closest the 115 octane fuel could be found was Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro. The Air Force Operations Officer was notified of the predicament somewhat sheepishly by the stranded marines and a tanker was sent to Robersonville for refueling.

House Burns To Ground Tuesday

ROBERSONVILLE—A one-story frame house burned to the ground in Farmville about 4 p.m. Tuesday. The home belonged to Esther Little, Negro, and all of the contents were destroyed except for a few pieces of furniture.

Firemen were able to save the home next door to the Little house, but were unable to cope with the main fire because it had been well underway when they arrived. Although the exact cause of the blaze is unknown, Robersonville Firemen report that it started in the attic of the Little home.

SCENE OF ROBBERY . . . Wachovia's West End Branch bank on Dickson Ave. at the intersection of Watauga Ave.

Pack House Lost To Fire Sunday

BETHEL — Fire destroyed a pack house, with building and contents valued at $8,500, at 3:15 a.m., Sunday. The pack house was located on the old Whitehurst farm in Bethel and belonged to M. K. Bout of Greenville. Beck Briley resided at the farm at the time of the fire.

Briley stated, "The dog's howl awoke me, but by that time it was too late to save the pack house as the fire was well underway."

Bethel Fire Chief George Abe-younis said that this is the second pack house to catch fire this year. Total loss of the building was estimated at $2,500 with the contents estimated at $6,000. Inside the pack house fire destroyed four barns of tobacco, four tons of lime and a new tractor with harrow, disc, bottom plow and other equipment.

Cause of the fire was not known, Bethel firemen reported.

Two hundred and fifty community leaders attended a one-day institute on Mental Health sponsored by the North Carolina Mental Health Association and the Pitt County Mental Health Association this year. The Pitt County Mental Health Association is a part of the Pitt County United Fund.

Credit Specialist Reviews Impact Of New FHA Law

Families living in small towns and rural areas and on farms now can have housing comparable to that of city families, a credit specialist said here today.

"The recently enacted Federal Housing Act of 1961 now brings a home loan program within the reach of thousands of rural families," said Locke Holland, Raleigh, North Carolina, program loan officer for the Farmers Home Administration.

"Domestic farm labor including migratory laborers stand to benefit also," Mr. Holland said, "since for the first time the Farmers Home Administration may insure loans to provide them with better housing."

A group of 36 Farmers Home Administration credit leaders from 17 counties and area officers are meeting here at Buck Overton's Baroque Restaurant, Rocky Mt.,

North Carolina, for two days to get new instructions for carrying out the broadened program and other lending authorities which the agency administers.

More than $400 million has been authorized over the next four years for the rural housing loans, and loans totaling $100,000,000 for farm labor housing may be insured.

Rural housing loans are limited to farm owners of non-farm tracts in rural areas and small rural communities with populations of not more than 2,500.

This credit may be extended to construct, improve, or repair rural homes and related facilities, or farm service buildings, or to provide water for farmstead and household use.

In addition to major construction, funds are available to modernize homes — add bathrooms, central heating, modern kitchens, and other home improvements, as well as to enlarge or remodel farm service buildings and put in related facilities such as paved feedlots, yard fences, and driveways.

The interest rate is 4 per cent per year on the unpaid balance of the loan. Loans may be scheduled for repayment over periods up to 33 years.

The proposed housing must be adequate to meet the family's needs yet modest in size and design.

The Farmers Home Administration does not compete with regular commercial lenders and applicants must be unable to get the credit they need from other sources.

Applications for loans are made at anyone of the county offices of the Farmers Home Administration which are strategically located across the state.

The agency officials review the building plans and inspect the housing construction as it progresses in order to guarantee that the borrower obtains sound and acceptable construction.

In addition to housing loans, the Farmers Home Administration also makes loans to farmers for farm and home operating expenses, buying and developing family farms, carrying out water development and soil conservation work, developing small watershed projects, and for emergency credit needs in cases where farmers are hit by a natural disaster such as floods and droughts.

Information of FHA programs and services is available to Pitt County at the county's FHA branch office on the second floor of the County Office Building on Johnston Street in Greenville.

No Problem Getting A Dinner Speaker

By JACK STILLMAN

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — There is no problem in getting a dinner speaker in Alabama these days. Just ask your congressman.

Alabama's congressmen are hungry—vote hungry, and the first in next May's Democratic primary elections will be different from any they've ever had.

Alabama is losing one of its nine representatives because of population shifts, and the May elections are to decide, in effect, which one goes.

The Alabama Legislature, failing to redistrict the state came up with what is called the "9-8 plan" in a quick special session last summer.

The plan calls for each of the present nine districts to nominate a candidate in the first primary. The nominees then must run in a statewide primary. The top eight in the statewide vote will be in; the ninth will be out. Nomination as a Democrat is tantamount to election in Alabama.

The congressmen—all eager for re-election—aren't exactly pleased with the "9-8 plan" but they agree firmly on one thing—they all plan to campaign over the entire state.

Frank Boykin of Mobile, the senior member of the Alabama delegation with 26 years in Congress, proposes that the runoff candidates campaign together and share the expenses, "since we're all close friends."

He calls the "9-8 plan" the "most asinine thing I ever saw."

George Huddleston Jr. of Birmingham represents the state's most populous district. He is the freshman member of the Alabama delegation with seven years in Congress.

He says he's not counting on his vote-heavy district to tide him over in a statewide race. "As far as I'm concerned," he says, "my district is now the entire state of Alabama."

Armistead Selden Jr. of Greensboro said he believes it will be a very polite campaign. He said all nine candidates know that one has to go and the other eight will have to live together after it is over.

Robert E. Jones Jr. of Scottsboro said he believes the statewide election will show the congressmen more of the state's problems than they have known before.

Alabama's other congressmen are Kenneth Roberts of Anniston, George Andrews of Union Springs, Albert Rains of Gadsden, George Grant of Troy and Carl Elliott of Jasper.

Scheidt Asserts Must Improve Safety Program

RALEIGH (AP) — Motor Vehicles Commissioner Ed Scheidt says North Carolina must constantly improve its traffic safety program in order to stand still in the fight against highway fatalities.

Scheidt, speaking Tuesday to a meeting of lower court solicitors, said the actual death rate for the state has been on the decline, but total deaths per year have remained constant.

He said between 1,000 and 1,200 persons have been killed in North Carolina traffic accidents each year since 1935, while vehicle registration and travel miles were increasing rapidly.

Scheidt estimated that 6,000 persons would be killed each year if the death rate had climbed with the increases in cars and mileage.

He told the solicitors, "Our view is that we are not content to hold the line."

Students Assist Stadium Drive

The East Carolina College School of Business has just completed a drive for $1,000 for the fund now being raised to build the James S. Ficklen Memorial Stadium on the campus. Both faculty members and students of the School made contributions during a three-day period.

Collecting the $1,000 contribution was a joint project of four student business organizations on the campus. Members worked under the leadership of the presidents of the groups: Thomas Reese of Rocky Mount, Delta Sigma Pi; Jean Flake of Greenville, Pi Omega Pi; Mary Helen Mumford of Kinston, Future Business Leaders of America; and James T. Mustian of Warrenton, Society for the Advancement of Management. Dr. William H. Durham of the faculty acted as coordinator of the project.

Plans for building a new stadium at the college were announced by East Carolina President Leo W. Jenkins October 7 at a meeting of the Society of Businessmen, alumni organization.

A steering committee of eight Greenville business men, headed by W. M. Scales, Jr., is in charge of the drive for funds.

Sold 22 Acres For $4,252,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Twenty-two acres on Red Rock Hill near Twin Peaks were sold at auction Tuesday for $4,252,000 — nearly $206,000 an acre.

The winning bid was made by Peninsula Apartments of Beverly Hills, Calif., a syndicate of New York, Los Angeles and San Diego developers and financiers. The seller was the San Francisco Redevelopment Agency.

Irvin J. Kahn of San Diego, who acquired the hilly, undeveloped section for the syndicate in bidding against five other groups, estimated it will take at least $20 million more to complete an apartment house development in the Diamond Heights area.

British Building A Nuclear Sub

LONDON (AP)—Britain has begun building a second nuclear submarine called the Valiant, the Admiralty announced Tuesday night.

Britain's first nuclear sub, the Dreadnought, was launched by Queen Elizabeth II a year ago. Built largely with American know-how, it is expected to be commissioned early next year.

Nationalist China Maybe Dropping Bar To Mongolia

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Prospects brightened today for a break in the Security Council deadlock barring Mauritania and Outer Mongolia from membership in the United Nations. Nationalist China appeared to have abandoned its intention to veto the Mongolians.

A Nationalist spokesman said his delegation did not expect to get voting instructions until just before the council meeting this afternoon to consider the two membership applications. But reports from Taipei said Chiang Kai-Shek's government had reluctantly concluded it would have to change its hitherto rigid position and the Nationalist Parliament had given its tacit assent.

A double-barreled resolution covering both candidates was being considered to get around a dispute between the Soviet Union and the West over which application should get priority.

The Soviets have been insisting that Outer Mongolia be considered first. Then, if Mongolia was blocked by a Nationalist veto or failed to get the required seven approving votes, the Russians could retaliate by vetoing Mauritania.

Western delegates in turn were suspicious that the Russians, if they got Outer Mongolia accepted first, might then veto Mauritania to curry favor with Morocco, which claims the former French territory.

To get around this, some delegates suggested including the candidacies of both Mongolia and Mauritania in a single resolution. There would be a separate vote on each applicant, but if either failed to make the grade, both would go down when the resolution was voted on as a whole.

The Soviet Union vetoed Mauriania's application last December, partly in support of Morocco and also on the ground that if Mauritania got in, so should Mongolia.

The Nationalists threw the veto against Mongolia in 1955, provoking a Soviet reprisal veto that blocked Japan's admission until the following year. This year, the Brazzaville group of 12 former French African colonies indicated that if Mauritania was kept out as a result of Nationalist action, seat Red China when the Chinese representation question comes up in the General Assembly later this year.

'The Dispossessed' Saw Much Talk, Little Action

By CYNTHIA HOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—"The Dispossessed," Tuesday night's special on CBS, was that rare and prized commodity, an original TV drama. It was based on a true incident; it was high-minded, and it had point and purpose.

But it was also slow-moving, completely devoid of action and consisted almost entirely of courtroom oratory, ornate, formal and static.

Saul Levitt, the author, was interested in the tragedy of American Indian tribes confined by 1872 law to reservations. Those same laws were construed to mean that the Indian was not a person and had no status as a human being.

The drama was about a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of Chief Standing Bear of the Ponca tribe, held in the custody of the Army, testing his status. Earl Holliman played the impassioned young lawyer representing the Indian cause. Ralph Bellamy was government counsel, and Albert Dekker, the judge.

Most interesting performer, however, was Juano Hernandez, who played the Indian chief, an actor of such skill the program stirred to a little life when he spoke.

Some half-hearted attempts were started, then dropped, to develop the character. Mostly the actors strove around a courtroom making long flowery speeches about human rights. The crowning irony of the court battle came with Standing Bear's victory; he could no longer stay with his tribe because when he was adjudged a person he became an exile who had to live with the white men.

"The Dispossessed," was based on a fascinating, shocking bit of history. But it just wasn't a good dramatic show.

Says Civic Pride Is Mostly Hurt

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A Civil Aeronautics Board lawyer argued Tuesday that Winston-Salem's civic pride has been hurt more than its business and industry might be injured by a CAB order to halt trunk service to its airport by Eastern and United airlines.

Arthur R. Schor asked the U.S. Fourth Circuit Appeals Court not to stay the CAB order that would consolidate trunk service at Friendship Airport for three North Carolina cities — Winston-Salem, High Point and Greensboro.

Friendship is 16 miles farther from downtown Winston-Salem than the city's Smith Reynolds Airport, Winston-Salem interests have asked the court to stay the order—which is to go into effect Sunday — and review the entire case.

The court took the case under advisement.

Schor told the three-judge court that 31 per cent of people in Winston-Salem who use trunk line service now travel to Friendship.

Eastern and United supported the change. Greensboro - High Point argued that Smith Reynolds is the state's busiest airport and that United and Eastern flights make up only eight per cent of its activity. Piedmont Airlines will continue to serve Smith Reynolds.

H. Garner Hudson, attorney for the Winston-Salem interests, contended that the CAB had judged the case in the light of a regional airport policy announced after the case had been heard. The CAB said the case was considered on its merits.

Milton Berle, of all people, played a dealer in a gambling house in an extremely well-done show on NBC Tuesday night. He proved a gifted and interesting serious actor in "Doyle Against the House" on the "Dick Powell Show."

The story concerns the dealer who decides to cheat his tough boss to get the money for a needed operation on his child. Things got much more violent than necessary at the windup — beatings and torture—but it was a tense, attention-holding show.

Terms of the new ABC deal to take over "Wagon Train," a top NBC show, next fall also includes 189 old shows. "Wagon Train," which has been consistently in TV's top ten for the past four seasons, will move to ABC in the fall.

Thomas W. Moore, ABC vice president in charge of programming said that although ABC had bought the 189 old programs for re-use along with new ones, no definite plans for them had been made. Reports in the industry persisted, however, that ABC was planning to run old "Wagon Trains" in a daily day-time spot, and was also considering using them in a late evening position against whatever is left of NBC's "Jack Paar Show."

Recommended tonight: "Perry Como Show," NBC, 9-10 (EDT) — with Tony Bennett as guest star; "Seasons of Youth," ABC, 10-11—musical special with Barrie Chase, Fernando Lamas and Paul Anka; Circle Theatre, CBS, 10-11—a dramatized documentary on the tense situation in Berlin today.

Pays Tribute To Men In Politics

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—The best men in politics "are more selfless and dedicated" than their like in private business or law practice, Mayor Richardson Dilworth told the North Carolina League of Municipalities Tuesday.

Dilworth, speaking at the closing session of the group's 52nd annual convention, declared there is "no truer test of a man's character than his ability to use his political skill for the benefit of community he serves, rather than for his own aggrandizement and enrichment."

The Democratic mayor remarked, "I would venture to say there are more bodies strewn in the path which leads to the presidency of a large corporation than there are in the path which leads to high political office."

On municipal topics, he said the growth rate of cities is creating "tremendous problems. Lawmakers, state and federal, must be made to realize that cities are now straining their resources and don't have the tax resources to provide services being demanded in urban civilization."

The 700 delegates elected C. L. Lineback, Salisbury city manager, to succeed Mayor W. G. Enloe of Raleigh as league president. Enloe was named a director.

Tehran Students In Demonstration

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Tehran University students demonstrated Tuesday for elections soon and shouted anti-government slogans.

The students pounded the car of Premier Ali Amni, who had attended United Nations anniversary celebrations at the university.

Dr. Amni said later that the demonstrations were instigated by Communist agitators and that the situation was under control.

Non-Farm Employment In State Goes Higher

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's non-farm employment increased last month by 19,000 jobs over the August total and was 4,200 jobs higher than in September, 1960.

Labor Commissioner Frank Crane credited the boost to large seasonal job increases in tobacco stemmeries and public schools and smaller gains in several other categories.

Crane, in his monthly employment report released today, said average hourly earnings were up in several industrial groups, as a result of new federal minimum wage rates which became effective Sept. 24.

Crane said the state's total non-agricultural employment climbed to 1,219,600 in September. Factory employment totaled 515,100, up 9,300 from the August level, but still 4,200 below the September, 1960.

Non-manufacturing jobs last month totaled 704,500, up 9,200 above August and 8,400 higher than September of last year.

Gains last month were reported in tobacco, textiles, furniture, chemicals, lumber, machinery, fabricated metals, transportation equipment, public schools, retail trade, transportation and federal government.

No change was noted in primary metals, electrical machinery, dyeing and finishing plants and paper and allied products industries.

There were slight decreases in stone, clay and glass products, food, cigarette factories, seamless hosiery, apparel, printing, mining, construction, communications and insurance and real estate and state government.

Hourly earnings of the state's factory workers advanced 2 cents during the month to an average of $1.58. The factory workweek re-

NEW YORK (AP)—A panel of governors was told today Eastern railroads were mired $122 million in the red as of Aug. 30, presenting a "real public crisis."

Leading rail executives, in prepared statements, blamed "artificial handicaps" imposed by government, including what one called "constructive fraud" by some states in property tax practices.

Presidents of five major roads and the head of a regional railroad group spelled out industry problems and recommended solutions, at a conference of 16 state governors and their representatives.

Later in the day, eight spokesmen for railroad labor organizations were slated to advance their views—some conflicting with management, especially on the question of mergers.

The session was called by Gov. Wesley Powell of New Hampshire, chairman of the National Governors' Conference.

Invited were the governors of New York, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and West Virginia.

"Many important lines (are) in worse shape than during the depression of the 1930s," said Allen Greenough, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the nation's largest.

In the late 1930s, nearly 40 major railroads were put through the bankruptcy wringer, many of them among the 30 lines represented today.

In his prepared remarks opening the session, Greenough said, "This is not a temporary condition. It threatens not only railroad employees, customers and investors, but also the entire economy of our section of the country."

"It will not miraculously disappear. The whole problem demands prompt and effective attention."

Greenough hit on "what he termed restrictive federal transportation policies and pointed to government subsidies that he said gave unfair advantage to competing forms of transport—trucks, airplanes, barges and pipelines.

Jervis Langdon Jr., president of the struggling Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, said subsidy of rival forms of transport, unless corrected, likely would force nationalization of the railroads.

David I. Mackie, president of the 35-member Eastern Railroad Presidents' Conference, assailed state property taxing practices, saying 31 states in 1957 exacted

"The crushing burden of this penalty is utterly indefensible and intolerable," Mackie declared.

He singled out Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, New Jersey, Ohio, Virginia and West Virginia as responsible for $53,402,354 of the alleged overpayment.

New Jersey, Mackie said, assessed rail property at nearly four times the rate of non-rail property, placing a "staggering $13 million discriminatory tax burden on New Jersey railroads."

Four of the presidents head lines that so far this year have rolled up a combined deficit of about $80 million—the B & O, Erie-Lackawanna, New York Central and Pennsylvania.

The fifth making a formal protest, the prosperous, bustling Norfolk & Western, a coal-hauling line about $40 million in the black.

Perry W. Shoemaker, chairman of the Erie-Lackawanna (nearly $24 million in the red for nine months), urged the governors to help lift the burden of commuter service deficits from freight shippers and railroad security holders.

Alfred E. Perlman, president of the New York Central, argued for lifting of federal restrictions on railroad freight rates and curbs against railroad entry into truck, barge, air and pipeline service.

Prison Terms To Auto Theft Ring

GREENVILLE, S. C. (AP)—Prison sentences ranging from two to four years were handed out here Tuesday to seven men who took part in auto thefts in three states.

The seven were charged with being accomplices of William R. Sanders who took his own life Monday shortly before a federal grand jury indicted him and the others.

Federal Judge C. C. Wyche sentenced Atley Godfrey, Glenn Edward Norman Jr. and William Yancey Hooker Jr. to four years each. Billy Joe Whitaker, Edwin Coker, and Clarence Owens got three years. Joe Harold Gears was sentenced to two years.

Auto theft charges have also been brought against Virgil Clifford Godfrey, now serving a sentence in another case, and Charles Edward Hollis Jr., who is not in custody.

The seven all entered pleas of guilty. They will serve their time at the Federal Correctional Institute at Petersburg, Va.

Officers say the theft ring in which the seven were involved operated in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

ST. PAUL (AP)—Students at Hamline University gave a grinning reception to signs around the campus proclaiming HUGS. No embracing involved, they learned—just an abbreviation of the Hamline University Guide Service for freshmen.

Thomas Jefferson was the first Secretary of State, serving under President George Washington.

Soviets Getting Another Chance In The Congo; Could Bungle It Again

EDITOR'S NOTE—Down in the Congo, beset by chaos since its own independence, the Soviet Union sees a chance to establish an important bridgehead for communism in Africa. But all is not clear sailing for Moscow, as this dispatch, second of a series on the Congo today, discloses.

By LYNN HEINZELING
LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (AP)—The Soviets have been given another chance in the Congo, but they may be bungling it again.

Patrice Lumumba, the power-hungry Congolese leader of last year's independence disaster, gave them their first chance. He invited them to help him crush all resistance to his high-handed rule.

The Russians responded enthusiastically. They sent in 10 Ilyushin planes to ferry his troops around the country. They sent 100 trucks to move the ammunition, plus a horde of propagandists disguised as technicians.

Lumumba was delighted. Two of the trucks stood in front of his house for a day or two. A special Ilyushin stood available for his use for months. The Soviets pumped money into the country to create confusion and doubt, but they overdid it.

Col. Joseph Mobutu, then a 29-year-old army officer, climbed on a barroom table in a downtown hotel and announced he had given the Soviet, Czech and Polish embassies 48 hours to close down and evacuate their personnel. They went out in the Ilyushins, leaving the trucks behind.

Now, the Russians, Czechs and Poles are back at government invitation. They came here from Stanleyville, where they had been recognizing and supporting the rump government of Antoine Gizenga. Gizenga claimed to be Lumumba's heir. But in August he gave up this pretension and agreed to join the central government as second vice premier.

The Soviets hadn't been in Leopoldville long when Congolese officials noted that huge sums of money were being distributed. The Soviets would like to see Gizenga, a moody, malleable man, or some other Lumumbist back in power.

The Communists have spent a great deal of money trying to create an image of Lumumba as the first Congolese martyr. They have named streets, libraries, universities and youth clubs after him.

Operating under his name, their potentialities for creating trouble are endless. To millions of black Africans, who understand the events in the Congo only dimly, Lumumba is a martyr and the greatest Congolese.

Even in the moderate Western-oriented countries of Africa, Lumumba is accepted as the father of the Congo Republic and an authentic martyr to the cause of black progress. This belief is carefully nurtured by left-wing organizations.

First order of business for the Communists in the Congo, therefore, must be to get Lumumba's National Congolese movement back in power.

With apprehension, veteran diplomats, old Belgian residents and United Nations officials watch the Cyrille Adoula government's efforts to prevail and rule. While they think the moderate, Western-oriented Adoula is firmly in control, something bizarre always happens in the Congo to change the course of events.

Left-leaning Christophe Gbenye, interior minister, controls the police. He is a powerful Lumumbist and many believe he would become prime minister if the Adoula government should topple.

Riots and trouble could bring about Adoula's fall. Riots and trouble appear to be what the Communist-supported Lumumbists are seeking.

The Lumumbist paper in Leopoldville, Le Matin, blasts continuously against the West, the government, missionaries and European spies. Referring to slowness in solving the Katanga secession problem, the paper said the government should adopt an old proverb: "It is necessary to kill a few to save the majority."

Everything seems to point to a large Communist operation in Leopoldville. But the intense behind the scenes trouble-making already observed could put a crimp in the plans.

None of the Communist diplomatic missions has been recognized by the Adoula government. Too much enthusiasm by the Soviets could cool off the government's earlier decision to accept the Red diplomats.

Two East German Communist diplomats, who came here from Stanleyville, were ordered to leave the Congo within 48 hours. Some of the Congolese who attended the Belgrade conference went on to Berlin afterward and had a look at the wall erected there by the East Germans.

Russian, Czech and Polish representatives were advised to return to their capitals and apply for accreditation through normal channels.

The formal channel of approach for accreditation would be through

Foreign Minister Justin Bomboko, and Bomboko does not like Communists. Gen. Mobutu, who moved the Communist missions out of the country last year, has made no public statement about their return. His disapproval seems obvious.

Adoula also may want to inquire why the Communist governments are so eager to be accredited when they have contributed not one dollar to the United Nations effort to put the Congo on its feet.

Once installed in the Congo, the Soviets and satellites would have a wide field of operations. No other country in Africa is so ideally located for Soviet purposes.

The Congo has borders with eight other African states or territories. These include such tense racial trouble spots as Angola and Northern Rhodesia. As yet the Soviets have no formal relations with any of these territories. A foothold in the Congo would provide a convenient backdoor to them.

Polk Will Play With Symphony

Tasker Polk of Warrenton, senior of music at East Carolina College, will appear as soloist with the N. C. Symphony Orchestra during the 1961-1962 season. A pianist, he won the Adult Auditions conducted recently by the organization. On tour with the orchestra, Polk will perform the Ravel "Left Hand Concerto."

This is the second year that this honor has been won by an East Carolina student. Last year Emily Vinson of Aultryville, also a senior music major won the Symphony Auditions.

As well as this latest honor, Polk won the State Piano Solo Division of the National Federation of Music Clubs in 1959; the State Division of Student Musicians Biennial Award in 1959; and the State Division of the Marie Morrissy Keith Award in 1960.

A student of Dr. Robert Carter of the East Carolina faculty, Polk studied under Dr. Rudolph Ganz, at the Chicago Musical College during the summer of 1960.

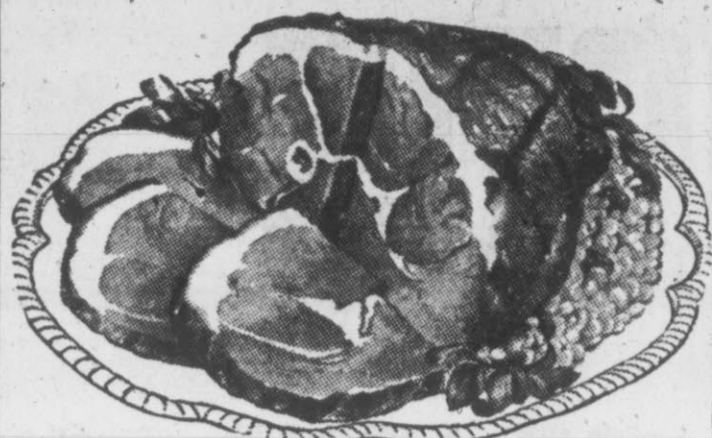

Other honors Polk has received was the winning of the International Bach Festival in 1961, which entitles him to a paid debut recital in Washington, D. C., November 25.

Conservation Notes

ERIC WHICHARD of the Station Mill Community has just completed seeding 22 acres of oats and fescue grass to be used in his tobacco rotation.

Whichard is planning to clip the oats next Spring, so the land will be eligible to put in the feed-grain program next year. He also is planning to leave the fescue grass for two years instead of the normal one year. This will give him extra root penetration on stiff land and enable him to put this land in the feed-grain program both years.

Seeding oats and fescue in his tobacco rotation is only a part of Whichard's Soil and Water Conservation farm plan developed a few months ago with assistance from the Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District through the Soil Conservation Service.

W. C. EAGLES, Soil Conservationist, is assisting Mrs. Anne McPherson Pike in the Littlefield Community in developing a Soil and Water Conservation plan for her three farms.

Mrs. Pike is a district cooperator with the Coastal Plain Soil and Water Conservation District. The McLawhorn farm, one of the farms owned by Mrs. Pike, is badly in need of erosion control practice. As part of carrying out the plan on this farm, she plans to install immediately two grassed waterways of one-half acre each.

The farm road will be plowed up and smoothed, the sides and shoulders will be seeded in fescue. A critical area along the side of a main canal will be seeded in fescue grass to prevent gullies from forming, and soil from washing in the ditch. One 14-acre field will be planted in fescue. In 1963 this field will be contour-strip cropped.

M. K. BLOUNT of Greenville says farm planning is a sound way of controlling soil and water loss because it has been tested and proven scientific. He further states that he would like to have a plan on each of his farms as soon as the assistance from the Soil Conservation Service is available.

ALL OF THE permanent personnel of the Soil Conservation Service attended a two-day statewide meeting in Raleigh last week. Among the principal speakers were Soil Conservation Service Administrator D. A. Williams and Gov. Sanford.

Roy R. Beck, Pitt Work Unit Conservationist, was on the panel on Information Activities in Soil Conservation Service. He served as moderator for this panel.

New Officers Are Installed By Club

Miss Joyce Paramore was installed as president of the Greenville Credit Women's Breakfast Club last night at the regular meeting.

Other officers for 1961-62 are: Mrs. Peggy Sawyer, first vice president; Mrs. Martha Mills, second vice president; Mrs. Polly Dail, recording secretary; Miss Rosalie Moore, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sally Broughton, treasurer; and Mrs. Dorothy Copeland, parliamentarian.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The Senate was in a raucous mood.

The senator from Old Bighty, Charles Laughton, was exchanging insults with the senator from Hyannis Port, Peter Lawford. These were in the script of "Advice and Consent."

Sen. Guy Gillette began a speech comparing performing in the U.S. Senate and acting in movies; he has done both.

Other senators, including Walter Pidgeon, Don Murray and Edward Andrews, arose to seek recognition from the chair. They were rapped down with cool authority by the vice president, Lew Ayres.

I advanced to the chair to renew acquaintance with Ayres.

No One Wants To Be Councilman

BLOUNTSTOWN, Fla. (AP)—No one in Blountstown seems to want a $1-a-year job for $12.50.

Blountstown City Clerk Joe Plummer, who has two vacancies, said no one has filed as yet for councilman of Wards 1 or 2.

The qualifying fee is $25 and the annual salary is $1. The term is two years and the deadline is 4 p.m. today.

The city clerk said he didn't know what would happen if no one files.

"Yes, it's been a long time since I made a picture, quite a long time," he mused.

The records show that his last was "Donovan's Brain" eight years ago. Never one to remain idle, he has done TV dramas, lecture tours with his films of the world's religions, plus a multitude of other activities.

Lew made his film debut 40 years ago, but he still looks youthful enough to have just come out of surgery as Dr. Kildare. I asked him if he had seen the new TV version of the movie series he played successfully with Lionel Barrymore.

"Yes, I've seen it and I think it's very good," he answered surprisingly. "The young man who plays Kildare (Richard Chamberlain) is a good actor; he's in line with the new school of underacting."

"You know, we used to get away with murder in the old days. I mean the way we used to overact. I've been watching the old pictures on TV a great deal in the past year. It can be painful sometimes," he said.

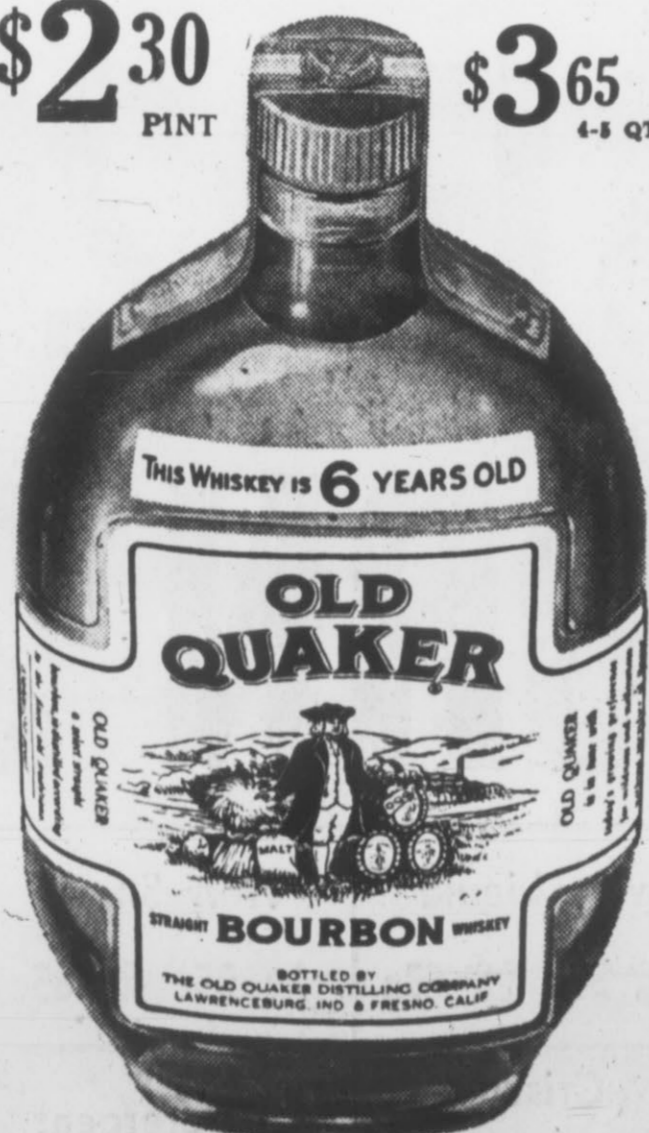

"Styles change, and actors have to change with them. I'm learning," he said.

One-third of the budget for the Pitt County Chapter of the North Carolina Association for Retarded Children is spent on children living outside Greenville. This is an agency of the Pitt County United Fund.

Service Field Is Fastest Growing Area Of Industry

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—You know you're spending more for services these days. Your bills tell you so. But few know how big a part services play in their lives today nor how fast is the growth of the industries that cater to their needs, whims and convenience. Steadily increasing personal incomes and greater leisure time for most Americans offer the service industries a tempting target—and their aim grows surer every year.

When most people think of personal services, they think of beauty parlors, medical clinics and hospitals, commuter trains, gas, electricity, phones and the repair men that nurse a growing array of appliances.

But personal services go far beyond that, important as is the role of the above items in today's way of living.

There's someone to furnish artificial snow for ski runs when nature doesn't, and to keep city rinks iced when the temperature soars.

Others will take over all or part of entertainment problems, manage money, decorate or clean the home, teach almost any kind of game, help toward the social graces, rent a car or a washing machine, or insure against the chance your heart will give out before the payments on your installment debt do.

Banks and finance companies and credit card agencies will help get almost any product or service on the basis of enjoy now, pay later.

Those who sell various services—and there are more of them all the time—are pleased that this year Americans are spending about $140 billion with them, or about 40 per cent of all consumer purchasing.

Bolestering personal appearance is a $6 billion-a-year business. Beauty parlor chains span the nation now, and some of them sell stocks to the public.

Religion and welfare also are classed as services and the public spends $4.7 billion on them. Americans kick in $6.4 billion for recreation.

Private education accounts for $4.5 billion with an additional $2.6 billion of consumer spending going for that broadening experience foreign travel. Both of these services have expanded rapidly in recent years.

Service is as much a part of home life these days as togetherness. There are companies that will provide any type of servant from cleaning woman to butler. Renting of cars is well-established, and some predict that leasing of household equipment is the wave of the future.

Lending the money to finance purchase of the home in the first place rates as a service, no matter what you may call the monthly payment. Then there's a growing horde of decorators who will purchase anything you can pay for, another group that will landscape the grounds. And yard boys are in a service industry, whether your own sons or young businessmen with a string of clients.

If you have any money left, there are specialists to serve you. Investing consultants, managers of trust funds, mutual fund salesmen, stock brokers.

And your newspaper is in there with services, too. Many carry advice on heart problems, how to put a husband in his place, or a mother-in-law, or a penny-pinching suitor.

And on another page you may find advice on purchasing or investing, either in general terms or in specific ways to spend your money or, hopefully, to double it. Service? If you aren't getting it, that's because you don't want it or can't pay for it.

Came Close To Instant Death

SPROUL, Pa. (AP) — Rodney Burket, 12, suffered a severe brain injury when a pair of pliers flew off an electric motor and lodged in his skull.

Kenneth Burket, the boy's father, explained that Rodney and he were cleaning the father's sporting goods store when Rodney switched on the electric bench motor. The pliers flew off.

One of the grips pierced Rodney's skull just above the right eye. It penetrated about three inches.

A surgeon removed the pliers. Rodney remained conscious the whole time.

The elder Burket—quoted the surgeon as saying, "The same wound in another spot would have killed him instantly. It's a miracle he's still alive."

Bacteria To Aid Electricity Flow

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Times says the Navy will soon conduct ocean tests of a new kind of battery in which bacteria help promote the flow of electricity.

The Times said the "bio batteries" have been operating in laboratories for more than a year but most details are classified by the Navy. The project came to light, the Times said, when similar experiments were done for an unclassified Interior Department project.

The bio batteries, the Times said, could make possible production of electricity from fuels now unusable, such as sugar, potatoes and sewage. The ocean itself could provide unlimited fuel or oxidants, the Times noted.

ACCIDENT VICTIM
TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—A cement power pole which workers were removing fell across a jeep in which Maj. Gen. Chang Shu-King was a passenger Monday night. The general died this morning.

Science At Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Clams on the whole shell, new power plants for submarines and monkey ovaries that broadcast their secrets are subjects for science at work:

DINNERWARE FOR STARFISH

For the starfish, the fact that the clam is in a vacuum-sealed shell poses no problems. Scientists now have discovered exactly how the starfish gets inside the clam shell and devours the clam alive in its own dinnerware. The starfish, huddling over the clam, actually forces the clam shell to open just a tiny crack. Then the starfish emits its stomach from out of its mouth—and the stomach slips into the crack and digests the clam.

The starfish stomach has such powerful digestive chemicals that it can digest the clam even although greatly diluted by sea water, writes Dr. Allison L. Burnett of Western Reserve University in the magazine, Natural History.

NEY PEP FOR SUBS

The U.S. Navy expects to begin converting its diesel-powered submarines to a new super-quiet power plant in two years. The new power plant will use fuel cells those remarkable devices which borrow electricity directly from chemical reactions.

Fuel cells are up to 80 per cent efficient, twice as efficient as current engines.

Later the Navy hopes to power small attack submarines with fuel cells. Like nuclear power plants, the fuel cell power plants don't need air and will enable submarines to remain submerged for longer periods.

Will Represent Judicial District

Albion Dunn, Greenville attorney, is scheduled to represent the Third Judicial District when the 28th annual meeting of the North Carolina State Bar convenes in Raleigh Friday.

Dunn, one of 30 attorneys representing the state's 30 judicial districts, is a member of the Council of the N. C. State Bar. He has a Thursday session on schedule to hear the report of a special committee appointed by the Council to inquire into the activities and practices of the so-called "shell homes" operations and problems of "casualty" title insurance companies.

Appearing at the Friday meeting will be Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. and Chief Justice James E. Livingston of the Alabama Supreme Court, as featured speakers. Others on the program include Ralph Moody, assistant attorney general; Charles Gold, commissioner of insurance; Associate Justice Emery Denny of the Supreme Court; Judge J. Will Pless, chairman of the Conference of Superior Court Judges; and "freshman" Superior Court Judge Ed Clark.

First Vice President Bryan Grimes of Washington, N.C., will preside at the Council meeting Thursday due to the death of office of President R. P. Reade Aug. 24. At Friday's session, the lawyers will participate in a memorial service for Reade.

PONY EXPRESS REMEMBERED

MARYSVILLE, Kan. (AP) — Days of the Pony Express will not be forgotten.

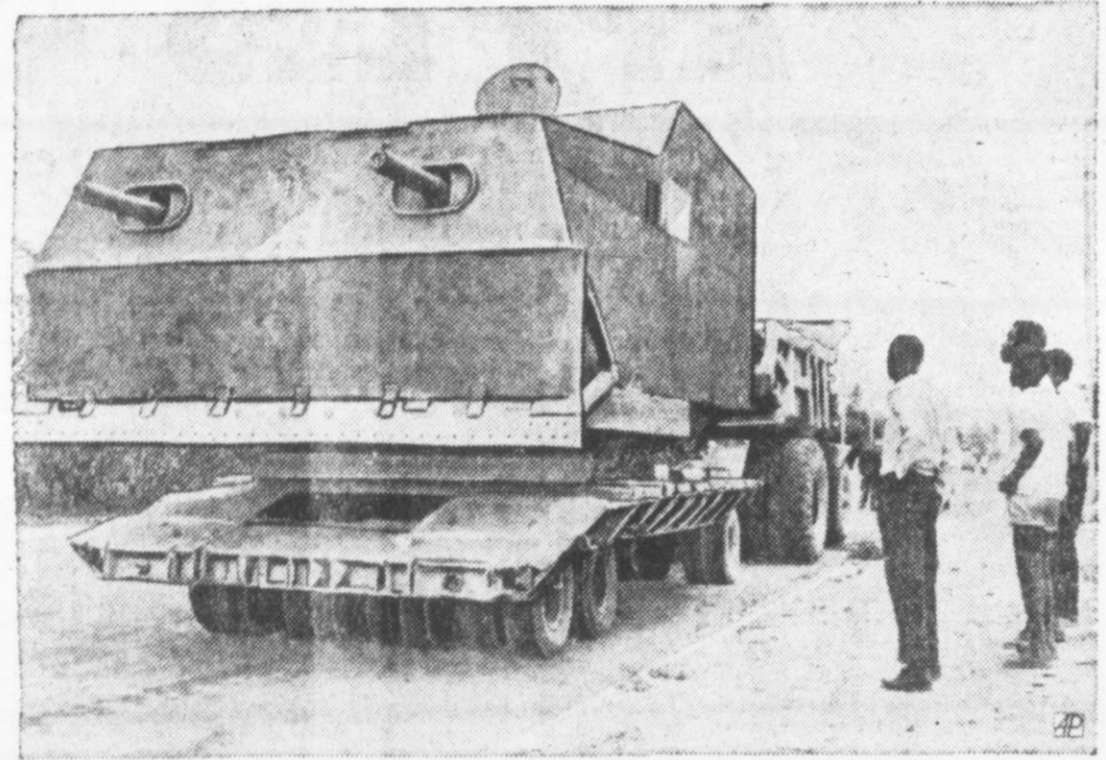

Some of the original metal markers that outlined the route are still left and will be presented to schools along the route.

STATION O-V-A-R-Y

Scientists have opened three new broadcasting stations — each in the ovaries of young rhesus monkeys.

Sooner or later there will be 75 monkeys so equipped. University of Pennsylvania scientists will use the signals to find out exactly the moment when ovulation occurs, when the egg is released from the ovary.

By studying the state of the body at that moment, scientists may be able to learn more about how ovulation and fertilization occur, and may even find a test to determine reliably when ovulation occurs in the human.

IMPROVED 'TANK' — Katanga civilians view armored bulldozer being hauled through area near Jadotville. The vehicle, originally designed for building roads, was converted by mechanics for the military forces of the secessionist Congo province.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market made its first advance of the week in moderate trading early this afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up 1.10 to 257.70 with industrials up 2.30, rails unchanged and utilities up .30.

Gains of key stocks went from fractions to around 2 points.

Aircraft-missile stocks were mostly higher, possibly helped by current publicity about space age efforts at home and in Russia.

Steel, motors, chemicals, electronics, tobacco and electrical equipments moved to the upside, drugs and building materials were mixed.

A rise in the consumer price index combined with gains in consumer, borrowings for 1962 autos and record paperboard production to help create a more bullish atmosphere. At the same time, there seemed to be a lull in tax selling.

International Business Machines, touching successive new highs, rose about 5 points to more than 600. Zenith spurted half a dozen points. Texas Instrument continued on the comeback trail.

Ladies' Night Is Set For Nov. 2

The Pitt County Scottish Rite Club will hold its annual Ladies' Night Banquet on Thursday night, November 2, at 7:00, in the dining hall of the Greenville Moose Temple.

Approximately 350 Scottish Rite Masons and their guests, which include their ladies and prospective members, will be entertained. Many prominent Masons throughout Eastern Carolina are also expected to be present for this occasion.

The banquet will be presided over by J. Edward Ricks and the invocation will be given by Joe H. Goodson. Following this, James S. Wells will deliver the address of welcome.

A musical program will be furnished by selected talent from East Carolina College, William J. Bundy, Past Grand Master of Masons and a 33rd Degree Mason, will introduce the speaker, Rev. Lauren B. Sharpe 32 Degree, from Kenansville.

This annual affair highlights the Scottish Rite Reunion which will be held in New Bern, November 14-16, 1961, and is for the purpose of honoring the ladies and Master Masons who are prospective members for Scottish Rite Masonry.

Living Costs Up To Record High

WASHINGTON (AP)—Higher prices for new fall lines of clothing pushed living costs to a record high in September.

The Labor Department reported today that its index rose two tenths of 1 per cent between August and September to 128.3 per cent of the 1947-49 base period.

Clothing prices, rising more than seasonally, were up 1.1 per cent from the late-summer bargains of August.

Robert J. Myers, deputy commissioner of labor statistics, said another slight rise is expected in October. But he emphasized that the price level has remained unusually stable and is expected to continue to register little change from month to month.

"We see nothing in the picture that appears to suggest a take-off to substantially higher price levels," Myers told a news conference.

The index standing of 128.3 in September compares with the previous record of 128.1 in July. For August, it was 128.

Civitan Cake Sale Is Tonight

A fruitcake sale will take place in the eastern part of Greenville between 7 and 9 p.m. tonight, sponsored by the Civitan Club.

Members of the organization will be making house calls and selling one, two, three, and five-pound cakes. Proceeds go to benefit the Trainable School, the high school band and other local projects.

Membership In Fallout Shelter Ass'n Is Approaching 100 Mark

FARMVILLE (AP)—Membership in the association to construct a community fallout shelter is approaching the 100 mark.

The steering committee, appointed last Thursday night, has met and drafted the bylaws for the association.

They will be presented to a meeting at the Farmville High School Monday night, Oct. 30 for adoption by the membership.

Officials said interested citizens in the Farmville area are welcome to attend the meeting.

All members of the association are urged to attend the meeting for election of officers and adoption of bylaws.

Those wishing to join may pick up pledge cards from Charles Joyner at Joyner's Mens Store, Johnny Williams at Williams Jewelry Store or H. M. Allred at the Town Clerk's office.

Cards must be in not later than 5 p.m. Monday in order to be eligible for voting.

The $125 membership fee will be used to provide medical facilities, water supply, shelter space, radio sending and receiving equipment and food supply for emergency use.

Officials said all of the buildings in town that offer safety from radiation have been measured and space adequate for about one-half of Farmville's population has been found.

Officials say the solution to the problem is to start a community movement for shelters so that everyone will be offered protection in the event of nuclear war.

Bob Scott Voted Grange Master

BOONE, N.C. (AP)—Robert W. (Bob) Scott of Haw River was elected Tuesday as State Grange master, a post held some 30 years ago by his late father, W. Kerr Scott, who later became governor and U.S. senator.

Scott succeeds Harry B. Caldwell of Greensboro, Grange master since 1937 except for a brief period when he worked in Washington. Delegates chose him on the closing day of the Grange's 33rd annual convention.

Named to succeed Scott as Grange overseer was A. C. Lawrence of Wake County.

The Leicester Grange of Buncombe County was announced as winner of the $10,000 national prize in the annual community service contest conducted by the national Grange and Sears Roebuck Foundation.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman A. Randall, master and community service chairman of the Leicester Grange, were here to receive the $300 prize and plaque the grange earned as state winner. Leicester, which also won a $1,000 prize when it was announced as one of the top 10 national finalists, will get the championship award Nov. 16 at the national Grange convention in Worcester, Mass.

Other North Carolina winners of the national award were Schley in Orange County, Arcadia in Davidson and the old Richmond Grange in Forsyth.

In the business session, Marilyn Hardson read the minutes and projects were selected. Shirley Meeks gave the devotion. The club was led in songs by Jeanette Farmer and Elaine Buck with Miss Meeks playing.

Given Bouquet At Homecoming

RALEIGH—Miss Gloria Nimmo, senior at Shaw University here and a resident of Greenville, received the traditional bouquet as "Miss Shaw University" on Saturday as part of homecoming.

The bouquet was presented to her by President Strossner.

Among the nine marching bands who participated in the homecoming parade was South Ayden of Ayden.

Projects Picked At 4-H Meet

The Stokes Senior 4-H Club met recently, with President Diane Whitehurst presiding.

In the business session, Marilyn Hardson read the minutes and projects were selected. Shirley Meeks gave the devotion. The club was led in songs by Jeanette Farmer and Elaine Buck with Miss Meeks playing.

Grifton Acquires New Policeman

GRIFTON—A new policeman, Jimmy Lewis, 25, formerly of Middlesex, has joined the Grifton Police Department as a replacement for John Bates, who recently resigned.

Police Chief Luther Lewis announced the position had been filled as of Saturday morning.

Lewis, a graduate of Middlesex High School, was honorably discharged from the U. S. Army after three years' service as of August. Prior to his service, Lewis was a furniture salesman.

He is the son of Chief and Mrs. Lewis and is presently making his home with them in Grifton.

Optimists Urge Support Of State Ports Bonds

Greenville Optimists Monday unanimously adopted a resolution calling for support of $13.5 million in State ports improvement bonds in the state-wide bond election Nov. 7.

In its resolution favoring voter approval of the port bonds, the Optimists reasoned: (1) the improvement of ports would directly improve the state's overall economy, (2) state-owned ports benefit rather than compete with free enterprise, (3) development of Tar Heel ports in spite of the state's agricultural and industrial growth, (4) expansion is necessary at the ports to "accommodate present demands as well as close the gap behind our neighboring states."

The Optimists heard a report that tickets for the club's annual Christmas tree sale had been printed and were available. The tickets, to be sold at a moderate rate, may be used by purchasers toward the purchase of a Christmas tree from the club when the Canada balsams arrive around Dec. 4.

Optimist President Tom Money assured the membership this year's trees "are promised to be in good condition." The advance tickets are currently on sale by local Boy Scout troops and the Optimist membership.

Proceeds from the annual tree sale are used by the Optimists for youth work programs including sponsorship of an oratorical contest for teenagers (under 16), sending Boy Scouts to summer camp, sponsorship of the Junior Rifle Club, promotion of Youth Appreciation Week and other activities.

President Money today urged Greenville citizens to make plans to purchase their Christmas trees from the Optimists.

At Monday's meeting, Optimist Gene Ward announced the Junior Rifle Club has been reorganized and is scheduled to resume its weekly Thursday meeting scheduled tomorrow at the U. S. Army Reserve Armory at 7:30 p.m.

Solicitor Favors Safety Courses

RALEIGH—Greenville's Municipal Court Solicitor Eli Bloom, speaking to a group of lower court solicitors here yesterday, presented suggestions to help curb highway deaths.

Bloom suggested first that a full course on driving safety and rules should be compulsory in junior highs, high schools and colleges; that traffic violators should not be allowed to pay off fines by pleading guilty without appearing before a judge in court; and that each driver's license should include on the back a record of the driver's convictions for traffic offenses.

He told the group that "The judge of my court is a fanatic on safety." The Greenville court has won an award for its efforts in cracking down on driving violators.

Bloom suggested further that all driving cases be tried in a court of record, and that lists of the disposition of every traffic case, including acquittals, be run in local papers. He noted that this procedure had been very effective in Greenville.

In the Greenville court, evidence is presented by officers in all cases, whether the defendant pleads guilty or not, he said.

Rites Thursday For Mrs. G. F. Bullock

MAYSVILLE—Mrs. Annie Gillette Bullock, 56, wife of George F. Bullock, died early Tuesday morning in Augusta, Ga.

A former resident of Winterville, Raleigh and Charlotte, she has made Augusta, Ga., her home for twenty five years, and was a member of the Methodist Church of that city.

Funeral services will be from Clark's Maysville Funeral Home Chapel Thursday at 4 p.m. with the Rev. John T. Smith, Methodist minister of Maysville, officiating. Interment will follow in the family mausoleum located in Maysville Cemetery.

Surviving in addition to her husband are two sons, Dr. Eliza Van Bullock of Houston, Tex., and Douglas Bullock of Georgia Institute of Technology; four grandchildren; and two sisters, Mrs. Ruby Rogers of Maysville, and Mrs. Rena Taylor of Havelock.

IT'S WAITING FOR YOU NOW AT WACHOVIA...
READY MONEY
... money for anything you want—
... anytime you want it—
... as often as you want it—
... simply by writing a check!
(AND YOU DON'T EVEN NEED TO BE A REGULAR WACHOVIA CUSTOMER)

WHAT IS READY MONEY?
It is a continuing supply of credit, ready for you at Wachovia. You simply write checks... whenever you need quick cash... against your Ready Money credit account. No need to have money on deposit with Wachovia—it's your credit that counts.

READY MONEY IS A "REVOLVING CREDIT ACCOUNT"
Every time you make your monthly payment, you reduce your loan and therefore increase again the amount of READY MONEY credit available to you. Thus you may use your credit again and again... indefinitely.

IT'S EASY TO OPEN YOUR READY MONEY ACCOUNT
Stop at your nearby Wachovia office as soon as you can for a simple application. We'll tell you the whole READY MONEY story in a few minutes. Anyone over 21 may apply. Take your choice of a single or joint account.
