BERLIN (AP)—American and Russian tanks trained guns on each other from a range of 200 yards in the explosive center of Berlin tonight.

Also standing between the forces were a few East German police Vopos — who brought the tense Berlin situation to a head last Sunday when they started demanding identification from American civilians moving between the two halves of the city.

The Red tanks lined up with their guns pointed at the American sector of Berlin. They remained there slightly under 30 minutes, then departed.

The British officer said the tanks included four new model T54s and three old T34s. The Communist tanks moved toward the U.S. sector within an hour after three U.S. Army jeeps bearing military police escorted a small gray car carrying American civilians into the East sector.

He told a Moscow audience the West is threatening war to back up its position here. He insisted, however, that the Soviet Union has no designs on West Berlin. The main issue in Berlin at the moment was the right of the United States and its allies to pass civilian officials into East Berlin without identifying them to the satisfaction of the East Berlin police.

U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson filed a protest on this issue with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Moscow, and got in turn a protest over U.S. actions at the wall separating the East and West sectors.

On the Communist side of the border, Vopo — people's police — patrols carrying submachine guns were posted at every corner in the immediate vicinity of the checkpoint. An armored personnel carrier and a water cannon were behind buildings, out of sight of the American checkpoint on the West.

Three times this week, the U.S. Army has used force to enter Communist territory to reassert the war-won right it maintains it has for free access throughout Berlin.

Library Award For J.H. Rose

Junius H. Rose of Greenville, long-time member of the Sheppard Memorial Library board and superintendent of city schools today was presented the 1961 Trustee Award, given to a North Carolina trustee for distinguished service to public libraries during the past biennium.

The North Carolina Library Association, meeting at the Jack Tar Hotel in Durham, presented two trustee awards this year during a noon luncheon.

Library records show Rose has been active in behalf of the library almost since his establishing himself in Greenville. He was instrumental in selection of the present Sheppard Library site, after the old Evans Street School burned about 1928. The library formerly was housed in the school building.

He became principal of Greenville High School in September, 1919, following conclusion of his military service. A year later, he became superintendent of Greenville schools, a position he has held now for 42 years.

Saturn, Mightiest Rocket Of All, Flies Perfect Test At Canaveral

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Saturn, the world's largest known rocket, scored a not-wholly-expected success on its first flight test today and gave new impetus to the U.S. drive to land astronauts on the moon in this decade.

Only the first stage was tested today. Two dummy upper stages were filled with water for ballast. The historic flight, although brief, signaled America's intention to race Russia to the moon, a pledge made earlier this year by President Kennedy.

There were very few who expected such overwhelming success today. Dr. Kurt Debus, head of NASA's launch operations and top man in the launch control center today, said before the shot that he would consider 60 seconds of flight time "100 per cent success with anything above that 150 per cent."

engines, which are movable to help control flight, burned for 115 seconds. Both figures were within two seconds of the intended time.

Designer Names New Silhouette 'Unicorn'

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor
NEW YORK (AP)—The unicorn, that favorite mythical beast of the Middle Ages, was supposed to have looked like a white horse with a long horn on his forehead. It seems somewhat unlikely therefore that a fashion designer, who knows better than anyone how touchy women are about being equated with equines, would name her choice new silhouette after a horse's relative, however imaginary.

Mrs. Spilman Club Speaker

A review of the controversial novel, "The Ugly American" by William Lederer and Eugene Burdick, highlighted the regular meeting of the Delphin Book Club at the home of Mrs. John Howard Tuesday.

Members and guests were greeted upon arrival by the hostess and Mrs. Robert Messner, president of the club. Two new members were welcomed into the club, Mrs. Charles Stevens and Mrs. Joe Ward. Following a short business session, Mrs. Warren Aldridge, program chairman, introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. J. B. Spilman.

Mrs. Spilman prefaced her review of "The Ugly American" with an account of the impact of the novel and of a wave of critical acclaim. The authors, experts on Southeast Asia, used the pages of their novel to develop an absorbing but frightening story of the failure of Americans overseas to sell democracy or to appreciate the needs and aspirations of the countries in which they are located.

Mrs. Spilman read several passages from the novel to illustrate the characters and situations presented by the authors. These passages gave a vivid picture of the confused thinking, hypocrisy and missed opportunities characteristic of Americans abroad. Mrs. Spilman closed her review with an appeal to her audience to read the complete work in order that they might extract the full flavor of the novel.

Upon completion of the program, the hostess invited members and guests. Mrs. Jim Gregory of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Jerry Scudderland into the dining room made bright with fall flowers where Russian Tea, sandwiches, nuts and cheese straws were served. Books were exchanged and the meeting adjourned.

Cancer Society President Concerned Over Fallout

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Is the radiation-bearing fallout from Soviet nuclear tests powerful enough to cause cancer?

If it is, it will be evident in "Mr. Khrushchev's grandchildren and all children throughout the world" in the next 10 years, the new president of the American Cancer Society said today.

"This predication is based on the assumption that the Soviet Union's present madness does not lead meanwhile to the sudden and complete annihilation of the human race," added Dr. Thomas Carille who took office today.

"We do know that in the last 10 to 20 years there has been a sharp rise in the incidence of cancer in children and in deformed births," Dr. Carille said in a statement released to newsmen at the close of the society's annual meeting.

"The unprecedented fallout occasioned by the Soviet Union's irresponsible testing of weapons could very well present a degree of exposure beyond critical limits for safety," he stated.

Carille is chief of radiology at the Virginia Mason Hospital in Seattle and past president of the Society of Nuclear Medicine and of the Washington State Radiological Society. He succeeds Dr. John W. Cline of San Francisco as head of the cancer society.

Chief dangers of fallout to those persons alive now are cancer of the bone and cancer of the blood-forming and lymph tissue, more commonly called leukemia, he explained. For children as yet unborn, there is the danger of mutation.

Mutations usually show themselves in spontaneous abortions, stillborn children, mental and physical cripples of many descriptions, and, perhaps once in a million cases, a super-human," Carille said.

Guard Units Are Preparing Shelter

ONEONTA, Ala. (AP) — If a fallout shelter is ever needed, two National Guard units in North Alabama plan to be ready.

Two Division units at Gullman and Hanceville have leased a huge cave in Blount County.

They're spending their drill periods getting it in shape for a fallout shelter which would house up to 1,000 persons.

The cavern is Bangor Cave. Plans call for five rooms, each about 130 feet by 35 feet and with ceilings 30 to 40 feet high.

Mrs. Kerns somehow had borrowed the wrong car. It had been reported stolen but police straightened everything out with no charges.

Pres. Leon Moore appointed Louis Collier as chairman of a steering committee for conducting the campaign. Serving on the committee will be Jack Whitchard, Jim Cheatham and Tommy Key Norris.

The Jaycees plan a get-out-the-vote campaign in connection with the Nov. 7 balloting. Plans were also made for placing posters about the city.

Jaycees will co-sponsor a dinner meeting Nov. 17 observing Pitt County's 200th anniversary. The club will be working with the Pitt County Historical Society on the project. David Reide will serve as Jaycee chairman.

Claims U.S. Has 72,000 'Agents'

MOSCOW (AP) — The chief of the Soviet security police says the United States has 72,000 agents around the world and "the Soviet Union and the Socialist countries are the main targets."

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Seven girls and no boys.

That was the situation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Savage in nearby Penn Hills up until Thursday.

Calculated Risks Must Be Taken

The United States has tested and asserted its border crossing rights between East and West Berlin, but the incidents came as a result of a great calculated risk which the American officials in Berlin were willing to take.

There can be little question but that more than the right to cross the border between East and West in the divided city was at stake for the risk to be taken. Apparently American commanders in West Berlin have been instructed to challenge directly any new restrictions the East Germans or the Soviets seek to set up at the border. The incident indicates that the Western Allies are now ready to press the East Germans and Soviets on matters regarding the divided city rather than passively accepting further restrictions on movement between East and West.

It could well be that this new policy—if indeed it is a policy—is an outgrowth of recent speculation that the wall between East and West Berlin would never have been completed by the East Germans and the Soviets had the West moved to actively challenge its construction at the outset. The recent incidents at the border suggest that the Western powers in Berlin have decided upon a tough attitude—even though risks are involved—rather than mere verbal protests which have constituted the West's primary reaction to Soviet and East German restrictions on West Berlin in recent months.

The people of the United States and other western countries should be fully cognizant of the risks involved if such a new policy has been adopted by the West. Each incident—such as those at the border in recent days—increases the possibility that some trigger-happy action by an individual on either side might explode the whole Berlin powder keg. It must also be realized, however, that the time has come for the West either to stand up for what it contends to be its rights in Berlin or fall back under new and increasing restrictions prompted by the Soviets.

History clearly indicates that concessions to power-hungry totalitarian states seldom satisfy their appetite. One concession merely whets the appetite for another concession until the victim must decide whether to risk a fight by rejecting demands for further concessions, or submit to being devoured.

Tobacco Farmers Saw An Exceptional Season

Pitt County's tobacco selling season, a high point of every year in this tobacco-region of the state, comes to a close today with final sales on the Greenville market. The Farmville market ended its season Wednesday.

Generally speaking, farmers of this area are now looking at the 1961 tobacco selling season as one of the most successful they have ever had. Average prices were considerably above those of last year, and in many cases individual farmers saw their crop bring the highest average price they had ever received.

It is true that the total yield of Pitt's tobacco crop this year was lower in pounds than in 1960, but for many individual farmers of the county both poundage and prices were higher than a year ago.

During the selling season the two tobacco markets of Pitt County sold more than 81 million pounds of tobacco and paid farmers more than $52.4 million dollars, a favorable total compared with other years when one considers the overall reduction on tobacco poundage in the 1961 crop.

It is only natural for an area such as this to wish it had been a better crop year than it was, and that prices for their principal agricultural product had been a little higher. It can be truthfully said, however, that the 1961 tobacco selling season lived up to the high expectations farmers of the area had for it.

Evaluating The Months Of JFK

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has been in the White House long enough, a little over nine months, to provide some insight into the way he operates.

It would be said to have patterned himself after a model it would be President Eisenhower and not cocky, relaxed, extremely self-confident President Roosevelt or highly combative President Truman.

But what looked like the development of an unusually friendly personal relationship of Kennedy and Eisenhower may be coming to a quick end.

Throughout his eight White House years Eisenhower deliberately avoided quarrels—particularly with Congress—by refraining from attacks and feuds. Not so with Roosevelt or Truman.

Kennedy has done the same as Eisenhower. There were times in the latter's presidency when he went less than all-out for some of the legislation he asked Congress to pass. The same goes for Kennedy.

This avoidance of quarrels by both men may not create in the public mind the image of an aggressive or even very positive president. But it gives few people an excuse for building up antagonisms against them.

It may explain to some extent why Eisenhower in his time, and Kennedy now, have stood so high in public opinion polls. There has never been much reason for the general public to get steamed up against them.

In one big detail there is a difference between Kennedy and Eisenhower in dealing with Congress. Kennedy, with 14 years' service there, has a sharper understanding of the infighting, the dickering and maneuvering.

In foreign affairs the Kennedy and Eisenhower administrations each committed one obvious blunder.

With Eisenhower it was letting the U2 spy-plane fly over Russia, where it could be shot down and was, just before the 1960 summit conference with Premier Khrushchev. With Kennedy it was letting the Cuban invasion occur.

The main characteristic of both men in foreign affairs seems to be mildness—certainly in comparison with their main opponent, Premier Khrushchev.

Strength For Today

CONSIDER THE STARS

How would you feel if you walked down the street and met a Martian? Or someone from the planets Venus or Saturn?

The question may appear vain for we can be sure we shall never have such an encounter. No person from any other planet would be able to live on another planet if for no other reason than the tremendous difference in atmospheric pressure. No one knows whether the planets are inhabited or not.

The number of heavenly bodies is practically beyond computation. More and more people are coming to feel—and among them certain scientists—that some of these heavenly bodies, perhaps some of the planets in our own solar system may be inhabited. But if they are, we can be sure that these beings are quite different from ourselves.

We or some other nation will undoubtedly put a man on the moon within the next few years. There may be inter-communication on between planets but probably not much more than that. For us, the matter has scientific interest in that we want to know all there is to know about the universe. Spiritually such knowledge would lead us to a more realistic conception of the creative power of God. If it became established that there are beings even remotely resembling ourselves on other planets, the intellectual and spiritual results should be all to the good.

We should not fear invasion. Why invade this insignificant little planet when there is so much, and probably better, real estate farther out?

Stay of Execution

REG-MANNING

By DON SCHLIENZ

It Calls For A 2nd Visit

You've wondered about getting away to inspect the battleship USS North Carolina?

Fine! Do it. But plan on a second trip in maybe six or eight months, too.

The writer, in company with a small crowd from Greenville, saw the battleship last weekend. Well, . . . part of it.

There was no going below decks, and the above-deck compartments were mostly closed off. It was a Sunday, but workmen were working. Chipping paint and brushing on paint.

From the roadway approaches the North Carolina doesn't look so awfully big. But once aboard, its massiveness takes your breath away.

From a distance, and from close-up, one gets the impression that hasty paint job given the battleship before being towed to Wilmington was "make-shift". It will all have to be done over again, in my estimation.

The big guns were fixed and the turrets sealed; which is a good thing. Most of the small deck guns have been removed, but several AA batteries remain and some youngsters were having a ball elevating and depressing, and shouting "bang" at all angles. (This sort of play will have to be eventually stopped, because some tyke is going to have a hand mangled by the gears.)

Did use the word "massive" in earlier paragraphs? Never mind; that one word best describes impressions gained by the visitor. That, and an imaginative attempt to visualize the tremendous capacity for destruction the North Carolina represented in World War II. It must have been terrific.

The beholder is also apt to be awed by the main batteries, their size, their weight, their obvious cost in manufacture, the watchmaker's precision that went into those giant cannons.

On the fantail were two gun-tubs with twin mounted anti-aircraft guns. They looked awfully exposed. One companion recalled the extremely high rate of casualties suffered by gun crews manning those tubs.

Anyone standing there would be quick to sense his vulnerability.

This future shrine at Wilmington was opened to the public before it was really ready. The money was needed. It's future drawing power was much in evidence. . . the approach-road was narrow and clogged with traffic. The parking lot was not ready for service; the visitor had to walk through a long stretch of soft sand before reaching the gangplank.

All those things will be eventually remedied. The hands of people who visit the ship before it was ready receive them, will re-visit next summer or fall. There's a lot to see that could not be seen at this time.

Too, there's a hard-to-express feeling of subtle regret that such a magnificently proportioned and constructed warship is now worthless except for junk or whatever sentimental feelings can still be exacted from it.

Twenty years ago it was a mighty engine of destruction. Today it is on a par with the USS Constitution, or Adm. Nelson's Victory.

Quite a letdown from the days of Guadalcanal.

Need To Define Terms

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The logical mind cannot use words without definition. Most of the confusion of our time are due to the lack of definition of terms; thus we generally confuse socialism and communism, a free society and a democracy. One might say that it makes little difference because most people have an intuitive concept of what is meant.

Admiral Rickover is gifted with a logical mind which compels him to define his terms, so that when he refers to a subject, he and his hearer will know precisely what is meant and the argument, if any, need not be over words.

We speak of a free society by which we might mean anything from such an anarchistic society, as Emma Goldman advocated, to the government-dominated society which Franklin D. Roosevelt actually established in this country.

Admiral Rickover defines a free society in precise terms: "By 'free' I mean a political free society in which the individual possesses 'inalienable rights,' and government is instituted 'to secure these rights.' We hold it to be 'self-evident' truth that liberty is an indispensable attribute of the individual. Not absolute liberty of course, for this is not possible unless one dwells on an uninhabited island, but the broadest liberty compatible with life in society. This is accomplished by making consent of the people indispensable to the functioning of government; in other words, by associating the individual with the business of the state. In a free society the citizen has public function, hence public status. His government, to quote Madison, 'derives all its powers directly or indirectly from the great body of the people, and is administered by persons holding their offices during pleasure, for a limited period, or during good behavior.'"

It is interesting that Admiral Rickover bases his terminology on the Declaration of Independence which our youngsters are no longer told to memorize, as my generation did. The Declaration rather than the Constitution is the basis philosophic statement of American society. These days there is a tendency to refer to the so-called Bill of Rights, that is the first 10 amendments to the Constitution, as the whole of American political doctrine. By no stretch of the imagination can this be so. The first 10 amendments are, it is true, a restriction upon government, but their main function is to implement the Declaration of Independence which holds certain truths to be self-evident.

Among certain truths is government by choice which was increasing during the 19th Century and has been decreasing during the 20th Century. Since the American Revolution, country after country sought to limit government, to expand the rights of the people, to destroy every form of autocracy. Since the Russian Revolution, political development has been in the opposite direction. More and more countries have been taken over in one form or another of tutelage, either by a dictatorship or an oligarchy of a dominant political party. This trend has been justified by Karl Marx's distasteful of the proletariat. Thus the "unfree" society has come into existence.

Admiral Rickover defines the free society as follows: "I use the contrasting term 'unfree' to designate any society where the people do not have effective control over their government. A great variety of political systems fall into this broad category. They range from authoritarian countries where the ruler respects the law and does not meddle with the private lives of the people except to demand political obedience, to modern totalitarian countries where rulers acknowledge no law superior to their own will and desire, where government maintains itself in power by brute force reinforced by all-pervasive propaganda, where the individual is permitted no shred of private life in which to decide matters of a personal nature."

From the standpoint of this definition, it is impossible to make a moral distinction between Hitler and Stalin, Batista and Castro. Those in our State Department, who can discover a difference between one dictator and another, are not being fair.

Faster Write-Off Costs Money

By ELMER ROESSNER

Since the Kennedy Administration has decided to allow the textile industry faster write-offs for machinery and equipment, many people have asked, "Why not? What does the government care how fast a piece of machinery is amortized? In the long run, it doesn't cost the government anything!"

In the long run, it does cost the government something. Let's take a simplified case: A textile mill buys $1 million worth of machinery. Under the new Revenue Service schedule the machinery has a pre-amortized life of 25 years.

Under that schedule, the company can charge off $40,000 as depreciation each year. (There are other depreciation formulas, but this straight-line one makes the situation easiest to understand.)

Let's suppose the company makes a net of $100,000 a year before taxes and depreciation. It can then deduct $40,000 depreciation and pay taxes on the remaining $60,000.

Now let's suppose that under the Kennedy benediction, the company is permitted to depreciate its investment over 15 years. Then it can deduct $6,667 depreciation a year. If the net before taxes and depreciation is again $100,000, it would pay taxes on only $33,333.

At first glance, it looks as if the government could lose nothing. Under any schedule of depreciation, $1,000,000 will be deducted sooner or later. After the machinery is amortized the government will start collecting taxes on the full net. The sooner the deduction is over with, the sooner the government will collect more taxes.

A CLOSER LOOK

However, a little analysis shows that the faster the amortization, the more the government loses.

Interest is the key. If the government allows 25-year depreciation, it loses taxes on $40,000 a year for 25 years.

If it allows 15-year depreciation, it loses taxes on $66,666.67 a year for 15 years.

Under a 25-year plan, assuming net income was $100,000 a year, the government would collect taxes on $60,000 a year for 25 years; under the 15-year plan, it would collect $33,333.33 a year for 15 years and $100,000 a year for the next 10.

Under either plan, the total deduction would be $1,000,000, but by collecting more in the early years the government would have the use of the tax money earlier and would thereby save considerable interest.

Look at it this way: If the company borrowed $1,000,000, it would pay less interest if it repaid it in 15 years than in 25 years. On the other side of the mirror, if the government grants depreciation over a short period, it loses more interest.

REASONS FOR SHORTER TERM

However, even if it costs the government revenue, there are two great reasons for faster depreciation:

1. If a company can amortize its capital investment sooner, and it properly uses depreciation allowances to build funds for replacements, it will be inclined to modernize plants and machinery sooner, creating more sales and more jobs.

2. Almost all foreign industrial nations allow faster depreciation allowances than the United States does, putting American manufacturers at a cost disadvantage in world markets.

Church and Christian Growth ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—I Corinthians 12:1-30.

Paul writes from Ephesus to the members of the Christian church at Corinth, telling them that every Christian "is given the manifestation of the Spirit"—some talent—"for the common good."—I Corinthians 12:7.

These gifts are different for different people. One may have knowledge, another wisdom, another faith, another gift of healing, another prophecy, another teaching abilities, etc.—I Corinthians 12:8-10, 28-30.

Just as no man can live by himself, so the whole body of Christ—the church—cannot thrive without the best gifts of all its members. It is our duty to look to our neighbors.—I Corinthians 12:12-21.

As the human body has vital, but unseen parts, so it is that often the most treasured Christians are not obviously gifted, but have modest talents.—I Corinthians 12:22-25. GOLDEN TEXT: Ephesians 4:16.

The Church and Christian Growth

THE VARIOUS GIFTS GIVEN DIFFERENT CHRISTIANS FOR THE COMMON GOOD

Scripture—I Corinthians 12:1-30.

By N. SPEER JONES THE SUBJECT matter in today's lesson is from a letter written by Paul—probably from Ephesus about 57 A.D.—to the members of the church at Corinth, the great business center of Greece. It concerns what are known as spiritual gifts.

Paul indicates in the opening verses of Chapter 12 that he is going to speak frankly and fully because he believes that their Christian principles are sufficiently well grounded by this time that they will understand him and not be led astray, as they might well have been as pagans.

Everyone who is truly a Christian is indwelt by the Holy Spirit, Paul explains; therefore no true Christian can curse Jesus and no one other than a Christian can truthfully ac-

362). "As fast as the reigning power of heathenism is broken, those gifts which exhibited most of the miracles, became less frequent and after the 4th century, almost disappeared."

Verses 12-27 outline a comparison between the various Christians with their various talents, and the human body with its various parts. We are all members of one great body, a human but God-inspired fellowship.

We cannot exist alone, outside this great body, any more than an ear or an eye can exist alone. By the same token, we cannot truly exist without contributing freely of our own individual gifts, for without the aid of all its members a body is hampered and may even die.

This means we cannot simply "mind our own business"; we

GOLDEN TEXT

The Golden Text

knowledge Christ as omnipotent.

He goes on to say (verses 4-7) that the Holy Spirit, residing in each of us, brings forth in each of us some gift—some "manifestation of the Spirit"—"for the common good."

This gift may be very different in different people. Also, some people may have only one gift, difficult to recognize, whereas others may have many prominent talents. These gifts are also apt to change during a person's life.

Verses 8-11 enumerate some of these spiritual gifts. Four of these mentioned are so-called "miraculous" gifts— healing powers, prophetic insight, etc.

The church today debates whether such miraculous gifts are still given. The Bible gives no indication that they are to cease. On the other hand, historical Philip Schaff points out ("Peloubet's Select Notes," p.

must see ourselves in relation to the whole. We harm others as much by not doing what we ought to do as by doing something we ought not to do.

This applies to character and example as well as to actions. Those of us who think our talents may be very meager may perform a most vital service simply by being responsible, loving persons. The worst thing we can do is to say, in effect, "I can't be of service; I have no talent."

This last point is borne out in verses 22-24, in which Paul likens those whose gifts are not obvious to the unseen parts of the body, which provide it with some of its greatest treasures.

In summation, this lesson points out that one aspect of Christian growth is in the individual's responsibility to his fellow man, to exercise his God-given gifts.

Favors Resuming Nuclear Tests

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP)—Rear Adm. John E. Clark, Pacific Missile Range commander, told a news conference at Pearl Harbor Thursday the United States should resume testing both of nuclear weapons in the atmosphere and of missiles with nuclear warheads in the Pacific. "We ultimately must test our atomic weapons system in its entirety and this means actual firing," Clark said. He said the Pacific would be the only area in which to fire nuclear warheads because of its vastness and the availability of atolls for targets.

The first Nike Zeus antimissile missile probably will be fired from Kwajalein within two months, he said.

When, for instance, the State Department makes a distinction between Trujillo of the Dominican Republic and Castro of Cuba, it cannot define its terms. If one wicked, so was the other. If one left the people no choice, so does the other. Roosevelt's initial error was that he assumed that he could distinguish between a good dictator and a bad one. Admiral Rickover distinguished between a free and an unfree society.

Reflecting On SPORTS

By George Bryant

Phants Go To Hertford

The Rose High Phantoms travel to Hertford tonight for a non-conference contest with a 2-A school. However, the game could turn out to be a tough one for the local club and they might have to fight hard to come back with a win. Hertford's record this season is 2-5 which is not good, but they have a bunch of young boys who were lacking experience and by now should have gained a good bit. Coach Bud Phillips said that he is not taking the game lightly and is going to play it the same as any conference game. The Phantom record so far this season is 6-1 and they want to add to the win column and make it 7-1.

In other high school ball in the Pitt county area tonight there are two homecoming games. One is at Robersonville and the other at Ayden. The Rams take on Havelock in a Coastal Conference game and the Tornados play Beaufort in a non-conference contest. Second place Farmville is playing an away game with LaGrange tonight.

After some careful checking this week of the Coastal Conference rules we have discovered that Ayden is the conference champion for the second year in a row. However, until the rules and regulations were checked, there appeared to be a possibility that Farmville and Ayden could end up in a tie for first place. This was based on the fact that Farmville had two more conference games to play and Ayden had one with Bath. If Farmville won both of their games and Ayden lost to Bath both teams would end up with 7-1 records. However, since the conference provided that Bath could not win the championship during its first year in the conference and the games do not count toward the championship Ayden is definitely the winner.

We want to congratulate Coach Stuart Tripp and his team for their outstanding job for the second year in a row. If they can win the next two games, Beaufort tonight and Bath next week, they will have a perfect season. Much of the credit goes to two outstanding boys on the squad, Rudolph Cannon and William Edwards. However, Edwards has been injured for the past couple of weeks, but did a fine job during the first part of the season.

The College Slate

East Carolina is on the road for the second week in a row. The Pirates meet Appalachian tomorrow in a tough Carolinas Conference battle which is important to both teams. The winner will still be in the race for the championship, but the loser might as well forget it. Should East Carolina come out on top they will then have to down powerful Lenoir Rhyne next week in Greenville. All of the Carolina Conference teams have lost at least one game so far. East Carolina dropped a close one in the rain to Western Carolina and Appalachian will be played Saturday night in Hickory on the Lenoir Rhyne field.

The Pick Sheet

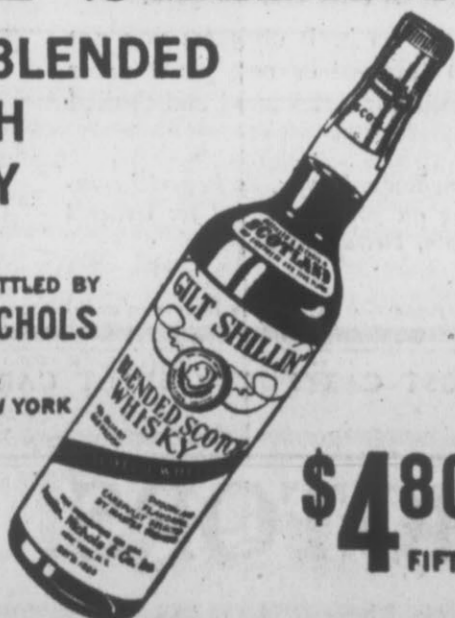

After some very successful guessing last week we are looking forward to seeing what our choices will do this time. Last Friday we picked 11 right out of 13 games for about 85 per cent. Our choices for this week are as follows:

Rose High over Hertford, Ayden over Beaufort, Farmville over LaGrange, Havelock over Robersonville, East Carolina over Appalachian, Presbyterian over Catawba, Western Carolina over Elon, Newberry over Guilford and Lenoir Rhyne over Wittenberg. In the Atlantic Coast Conference we are going to pick Auburn over Clemson, Duke over North Carolina State, Maryland over South Carolina, Miami over the University of North Carolina and Wake Forest over Virginia.

EC Pirates Meet Appalachian In Hickory

College Roundup

By JACK CLARY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Miami Hurricanes, which have won only two of five games and have lost their last two to begin the college football season all over again tonight when they meet a strong University of North Carolina team in Miami's Orange Bowl.

But for teams like Michigan State, ranked first nationally in the current Associated Press poll, Mississippi, Texas and Alabama, the winning habit, cultivated with the opening game, should continue this weekend.

For Miami, off last week, a new start is contemplated. George Mira, the flashy sophomore quarterback who has been hobbled by injuries since the victory over Kentucky, is expected to see action. As Mira goes, so go the Hurricanes for he has not played in the last two games and saw only limited action in a 25-6 victory over Penn State.

George Washington (3-3) takes on Boston University (1-4) in the night's other major action. Michigan State (4-0), after two clutch wins over Michigan and Notre Dame, takes on Indiana in a Big Ten game. The Spartans, in a four-way tie for the conference lead with fifth-ranked Iowa, sixth-ranked Ohio State and Minnesota, should make it with plenty to spare.

Ohio State (3-0-1) meets Wisconsin (3-2) in the day's national television game (ABC-TV, 2:30 p.m., Eastern Standard Time) while Iowa (4-0) plays Purdue (2-2) and Minnesota (3-1) takes on Michigan (3-1) in the Little Brown Jug game. Each of the four Big Ten leaders has a 2-0 conference mark.

Mississippi, looking to next week's crucial Southeastern Conference clash against Louisiana State (No. 7) has a homecoming date against Vanderbilt (2-3). Ole Miss is 5-0 so far and has not lost in 20 games.

Alabama, atop the SEC with 4-0, is out of the conference against Houston (2-2-1) while Texas (5-0) plays what may be its last obstacle for the Southwest Conference title when it meets Rice (2-2-1). The third ranked Longhorns, which easily beat tough Arkansas last week, are 2-0 in the SWC and Rice is 1-0.

Notre Dame, ranked eighth with a 3-1 mark, meets Northwestern (2-2), ninth-ranked Georgia Tech (4-1) plays Tulane (1-4) in another SEC game and Big Eight leader Colorado (4-0) plays winless Oklahoma (0-4) in a conference tilt.

Colonials Meet Boston University Friday Night

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Washington's football team seeks its fourth victory tonight in a game against Boston University at the new D.C. Stadium, where the Colonials have been on their best behavior this season.

GW walloped VMI's Southern Conference champions in the stadium's dedicatory game Oct. 7, 30-6, and in their second start there one week ago tonight they overwhelmed William and Mary, 49-12.

Tonight's game inaugurates a busy six game weekend schedule for Southern Conference teams, and since it's a non-conference contest, the whole league will be rooting for a victory by the Colonials.

On Saturday afternoon's card are two games that could prove crucial in the race for this year's conference championship.

One of them — the most important — sends VMI, occupant of second place in the league standings with a 2-1 conference record, to Williamsburg for a meeting with lowly but dangerous William and Mary (1-3). The other finds Richmond (2-2) at home to tallend Davidson (0-3).

Non-conference action Saturday afternoon sends West Virginia to Army. The Citadel's conference pace-setters to Xavier (Ohio) and Florida State to Virginia Tech. The latter is Tech's homecoming game.

Furman is at Wofford Saturday night.

An interesting feature of tonight's George Washington-Boston U game will be the effort of GW's superb halfback, Dick Drummond, to break the school's all-time individual scoring record.

Drummond, who ran wild with four touchdowns against W&M last weekend, now has 48 points and needs only six more to equal the GW record set in 1932 by Nig McCarver.

Camp, however, says Drummond's performance will be interesting only insofar as it helps beat Boston U, which embarrassed another Southern Conference team — West Virginia — by downing the Mountaineers 12-6 last Saturday night.

Of all the weekend games, the VMI-William and Mary setoff will be watched most closely. VMI, Southern Conference titlist the last two years, must win this big one to stay in contention for another championship. If the Keydets lose, they couldn't do better than a tie for the crown and prospects even for that high a finish would be mighty dim.

The Citadel (4-1) leads the league and needs only to whip VMI at Lexington next week to clinch its first conference championship. Pending the outcome of this game the hopefuls include VMI, Virginia Tech (1-1), Richmond (2-2) and George Washington (3-2).

Tar Heels Seeking 4th Win In Miami

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina's Tar Heels, who have already won as many games as they won during all of last season, will be looking for their fourth victory of the year in Miami's Orange Bowl tonight.

The clash with Miami's Hurricanes is the Tar Heels' first venture of the season outside the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Clemson plays at Auburn Saturday in the only other non-conference game this weekend for ACC teams. In other Saturday games, Wake Forest entertains Virginia, Duke plays at N.C. State, and Maryland plays at South Carolina.

North Carolina, 3-1 this year, could improve on last season's 3-7 record with a victory tonight. Miami takes a 2-3 record into the game, and in comparing records, the Tar Heels should be favored. Some of the experts, however, are picking Miami by a touchdown.

The Hurricanes have won the last two games in their series with North Carolina. They beat the Tar Heels 29-12 last year and 14-7 in 1959. It was back in 1957 that North Carolina last beat Miami, the score was 20-13. The two teams didn't play in 1958.

There's one thing for sure; Miami knows what to expect. Miami's scouting reports on the Tar Heels come from Assistant Coach Ed Kensler, who left North Carolina this year after five seasons with the Tar Heels.

Miami Coach Andy Gustafson says he may start his star quarterback, George Mira, who is ready for action again after being sidelined with injuries. Gustafson will wait until game time to announce whether Mira will start. Mira is rated one of Miami's best passers of modern times.

A crowd of more than 40,000 is expected for the game.

Other ACC teams, meanwhile, wound up the week's workouts Thursday in preparation for Saturday's games. Most of the teams planned limbering up drills today.

The East Carolina Pirates take to the road this week for the second away game in a row as they seek an important Carolinas Conference win over Appalachian.

At the present time the Pirates are leading the conference with a 4-1 record Appalachian is tied for second place with Lenoir Rhyne with 3-1 conference record.

Coach Jack Boone said today that a win this week is very important to the Pirates in order to have a chance at the conference title. "If we can get by this one we will then have to down Lenoir Rhyne in a home game here next Saturday," Boone said. He added that the boys know the situation and their spirits are as high as they have been all season.

Duke Injured

From the physical standpoint East Carolina is in good shape except for right tackle Skipper Duke who is suffering from a knee injury received last week in the Newberry game. Coach Boone said that freshman Bill Burton will probably start in place of Duke.

The veteran Pirate mentor said the boys have looked excellent at practice all week and that they are really up for the game. "I feel that this is an indication that the team will fight hard for this one," Boone said. He added that Appalachian is a "hard nosed" club and they will be tough. Boone noted, "We are going to forget statistics this week and hope for the score."

Mountaineers Top Statistics

The Mountaineers are presently leading the conference statistics in total offense, pass offense and pass defense. However, East Carolina is leading in the rushing yardage department.

Appalachian is playing with seven sophomores in their starting lineup, but these young boys have been doing outstanding jobs. Assistant Coach Ray Pennington said after scouting the Mountaineers that the team makes few if any mistakes and this is what keeps them going.

"Of course," he added, "they haven't really had the pressure put on them yet except for the Lenoir Rhyne game."

Pennington added that the opponents this week are very National Basketball Association By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS consistent and they like to pass as well as run. However, according to Pennington, they run more than they pass. "Quarterback Eugene Styles is a good passer, but he needs time to get the ball in the air, but he is a hard runner," Pennington said. He noted, "They have excellent team balance and work well together as a team."

Bucs Still Working On Passing

Coach Boone said that he is still drilling the team on their passing game and said that it was not yet up to what it should be, but it is coming along and is much improved.

The Pirate coach said that Clayton Piland looked good last week for the first time in several weeks. "He has been suffering from some slight injuries received in the Elon game," Boone said. Ends Jones Lockerman and Bobby Bumgardner have also been doing fine jobs along with Earl Sweet at guard. The coach added that the experience that halfbacks Pete Thorell and Richard Jackson have picked up so far this year has helped them a great deal. "Jackson and Thorell have a lot to add depth to the backfield," Boone noted.

Good Team Effort

According to the coaching staff the Pirates have not had to rely on any certain individual to break their opponent's back. Rather, Coach Jack Boone's eleven possesses several top-flight threats who may hold the key to the team's first grid title since 1954. Even more important is the fact that the Bucs have used tremendous inspirational team effort to guide them to the top of the ladder.

Another fact which Coach Boone mentioned today is that a new hero has been born in each game. The latest Pirate star was in the Newberry game when sophomore end Richard Huneycutt set up and scored the winning touchdown in the final minute of play. The Portsmouth, Va., native stole the ball from the Indians' Phil Orsini inside the Newberry ten yard line. Two plays later Huneycutt caught a pass from Dan Rouse for the winning touchdown.

Other Pirate heroes this year have been Tom Michel, Nick Hilgert, Frank Galloway and Tommy Matthews.

Pirate Starters

ingsworth at guard, Bill Burton at tackle and Jones Lockerman will handle the right end. "In the backfield for the Bucs will be Dan Rouse calling the signals at quarterback and Nick Hilgert will handle the fullback position. The halfbacks will consist of Tommy Matthews on the right and Larry Rudjill on the left.

Appalachian Backfield
In the backfield will be Eugene Styles at quarterback, Don Gardner at right half, Sandy Edwards at left half and Jim Hayes at fullback.

The East Carolina boys left Greenville this morning at 8:30 for Boone and will have a short practice session after they arrive.

rive. Saturday both teams will leave Boone and go to Hickory for the game at 8 p.m. The team will return to Greenville after the game.

Mighty New Carrier Added To Fleet Today

EDITOR'S NOTE — George W. Cornell, writer of the following story, helped cover the fire aboard the USS Constellation.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
NEW YORK (AP)—The shadow that once cloaked the USS Constellation today turns to splendor. She joins the fleet.

Born in travail, the mighty aircraft carrier comes into her own in a festival of pomp, parade and flying banners.

With her official commissioning she becomes the monarch of the Navy, the biggest warship in the line.

Top naval officers, and civilian dignitaries, were to be on hand for the shipboard ceremonies.

And New York City, which mourned the death and fire that raked the ship while under construction, is going all-out to salute her triumph.

Flashy Times Square has been renamed "Constellation Square" and a tooting ticker-tape parade up Broadway this morning marks the debut of the giant vessel.

The city is adopting her as its flagship.

It was last Dec. 19, at Brooklyn Navy Yard, that with the ship nearly complete, fire erupted in a flood of spilled fuel oil on the ship's hangar deck, rampaging through the vast interior. Steel incited Decks buckled.

The fire raged for more than 12 hours. Fifty civilian workmen, trapped in the maze of compartments, perished from flame and smoke.

But the marred ship is new again—restored, refurbished and bustling with bluejackets.

"She's the world's greatest," says her proud skipper, Capt. Thomas J. Walker, 47, a Massachusetts-born descendant of whaling ship captains.

The 75,000-ton carrier, five city blocks long and 25 stories high from keel to mast, stands at her Brooklyn Navy Yard berth, an awesome mass of gray steel.

Her soaring superstructure, and sprawling winged decks tower over nearby vessels like a gigantic bird over her brood.

Her flight deck—1,047 feet long and 252 feet wide—stretches more than four acres in size. Its four powerful catapults, which boost the planes aloft, could hurl a big automobile five miles through the air.

The hangar deck below has a capacity of about 100 planes, and four elevators combined can hoist a dozen planes at a time to the flight deck in 35 seconds.

Larger than any other naval vessel now in service, the steam-driven Constellation will hold that distinction until the atomic-powered carrier Enterprise is commissioned later this year.

The Enterprise is a little longer, 1,103 feet, and heavier, weighing 83,350 tons. But the Constellation will rank with her closely in size, and also in scientific equipment and efficiency.

She is the latest of the Forrestal-class carriers, the reigning battleships of the fleet.

The 200,000-horsepower engines of the Constellation, driving four propellers 2½ feet in diameter, give her a speed of more than 30 knots.

On the mammoth vessel's 25 levels, there are more than 3,000 compartments—an enormous hodgepodge of shops, instrument rooms, offices, berthing areas and other facilities, linked by seemingly endless passageways.

The full crew totals 4,100, and most of it already has been assigned to the ship. Pilots are to occupy forward "ready rooms," connected by swift escalators to the flight decks.

Only armament on the ship, other than the planes, are two twin-armed missile batteries at the stern, for launching surface-guided Terrier missiles against approaching hostile craft.

Cost of repairing the fire damage ran to about $48 million, the ship's total cost to more than $300 million. The commissioning, originally set for last March, was delayed six months.

Main speaker for the ceremony is Vice Adm. Robert B. Pierie, deputy chief of naval operations for air. Other high naval officers also are taking part.

It is a dramatic occasion, not only for the Navy, but in the universal sense of a victory over disaster. The "Connie" has made her comeback.

"It has been amazing the way the American people have taken her to their bosom," Capt. Walker said. "There's a special feeling among the crew that they're going to show the world that this ship has recovered completely."

Education Goal Said Challenge

RALEIGH (AP)—The purpose of quality education is to provide the challenge to bring out the best in every student, Gov. Terry Sanford said Thursday.

"I don't think we have been challenging enough in school," the governor told his news conference. "School is certainly the place to learn hard mental discipline."

Sanford gave his views when asked for comment on a speech in which Dr. Albert Edwards, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Raleigh, warned that emphasis on "quality education" carries a danger of too great a strain on children of average ability.

"I didn't understand what he was trying to say," Sanford commented.

The governor brought his 12-year-old daughter, Betsy, into the discussion. He said he asked her if she was working too hard in school, and she said no.

Meanwhile, Dr. Edwards, a native of Scotland, said the views he expressed Tuesday night to a Dunn Civic club "still represent my convictions on the matter."

Dr. Edwards, father of three children in public schools, said his interest was with average or below children, especially in the first few grades. "Underaverage children are being ignored and forgotten in a system adaptable to only a few," he declared.

Gov. Sanford's views got support from Dr. L. E. Ready, director of the state curriculum study under the State Board of Education.

"Students are not, and have not been, challenged sufficiently. The aim of quality education is to challenge each individual to the fullest extent of his ability," he explained.

Manufacturers Share In Growing Service Business

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Many manufacturers wish you'd spend more of your income on their goods. But many others see in the service industries that are getting an ever larger share of your spending money a good market for their own wares.

And an increasing number of manufacturers and producers are getting into the service business themselves, either to share in the wealth or because of a connection between their goods and services.

Sometimes the connection seems way out—like Montgomery Ward and Sears, Roebuck mail order and retail chains offering package travel tours. Sometimes the connection is obvious—like General Motors and Ford subsidiaries financing dealer sales of autos on the installment plan. Sometimes it's a wedding of convenience—like that between makers of consumer goods that sell on the installment plan and insurers of the debtor's life.

Often manufacturers get involved in the service industries as the best way to promote use of their products.

Appliance makers have been making a good thing out of laundry and dry cleaning centers, some by furnishing the machines for independent service firms, some by setting up their own chains of coin-operated devices for the serve-yourself minded.

Standard, Inc., Little Rock, Ark., began selling dry cleaning machines nearly two years ago. Norge has several thousand in operation. A. L. D., Inc., distributes Westinghouse machines. Philco is starting its own chain. Whirlpool is putting dry cleaning machines in some American Oil Co. service stations.

The fast growing recreation industry has put manufacturers of sporting equipment knee deep in the promotion of such things as bowling alleys, skiing and other resorts, company-sponsored amateur teams and leagues of all sorts.

Cosmetic makers set up their own beauty salons and chains and health ranches—some with a celebrity clientele.

Electronic companies, like International Business Machines, Remington Rand and General Electric, find the services offered smaller companies by computer centers is good business, as well as that from large companies that can buy or rent the big machines full time.

Makers of trucks and all sorts of factory equipment have found doing business with leasing companies, independent or subsidiary, to their advantage.

Rapid expansion of the school-age population, a bonanza for publishers of text books, has put some makers of school supplies in the service business. Some 32,000 vending machines now service schools in 33 states with notebooks, pens, typing paper and the like.

The increase in leisure time—whether at home or on the road—is attracting more business attention. To that end, Leisure Devices, Inc., is being set up for research, development, manufacture and distribution of labor and time saving products.

The company's aim is "To increase leisure by reducing radically the amount of time consumers as well as industry now must spend on mundane, nongratifying tasks."

Small Farm Loans Are Available From FHA

Legislation recently passed by Congress authorizes loans to enlarge small farms, James O. Buchanan, state real estate loan officer of the Farmers Home Administration, said today. Previously such loans could only be made on farms where the farm income alone was adequate to support the family.

A result farmers who have off-farms jobs and operate small family farms may not obtain funds to increase the size of their operations.

Buchanan is in Rocky Mount meeting with about 36 agricultural credit specialists from 17 county and area offices.

The new legislation also authorizes loans to buy and enlarge any family farm. Previously these loans had been limited to farms whose value was no greater than that of the average family farm in the county. The total indebtedness on such farms cannot exceed $60,000 or the value of the security.

The broadening of this credit regulation will help many young farmers, Buchanan said. In the past many young farmers were unable to obtain a loan to buy their family farm simply because the farm was worth more than the average family farm.

Insured loans for the enlargement, improvement and purchase of farms may now be made up to the normal value of the farm. Previously these loans were limited to 90 per cent of the farm's normal value. New legislation has also brought greater flexibility into the terms investors receive when they provide funds for insured farm real estate loans. This will enable the Government to adjust the return, within limits, to money market conditions. And will increase the volume of funds available for this type of credit.

Variations in the terms to lenders will in no way affect the rate the farmer-borrower pays. This rate will remain at 5 per cent.

Opposes 'Legal' Divorce Grounds

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The president of the American Association of Marriage Counselors says all legal grounds for divorce should be discarded.

Dr. David R. Mace, associated professor of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, said Thursday night that he would end marriages only after thorough examination by well-trained advisors has shown the marriage to be unworkable.

"The idea of husband and wife as adversaries is entirely contrary to all principles of marriage and should never enter divorce proceedings," he told Florida marriage counselors at a seminar.

Real estate loans are made for the enlargement, improvement and purchase of farms no larger than family farms. This type of credit can also be used to refinance debts.

Credit supplements and in no way competes with the real estate available from private and cooperative sources.

Increased supervision in farm and money management accompanies each loan.

Had No Trouble Crossing Border

BERLIN (AP)—Two attractive young American red-haired sisters breezed into East Berlin in a little red car for a night at the opera. They got out only minutes before Soviet tanks lumbered into position near the Communist opera house.

"What a panic," giggled Mary Barber, 19, surprised at all the border fuss on their return to the U.S. checkpoint Thursday night.

Mary and her sister Nancy, 22, from Joliet, Ill., went into the Communist zone to catch a performance of Handel's "Ezio." They got salutes from the East Berlin police who waved them on after they showed their passports.

"Friendly, not antagonistic at all. Nice and sort of fun," Nancy recalled in describing the Communist police.

And the girls had a wonderful time at the opera, they said. The Soviet tanks didn't pull up until shortly after they left for the Western zone. Newsmen at the border gave them their first word of how close they came to getting caught in a traffic jam.

It was their second sightseeing foray into the Communist zone of the day. The first trip over was to buy tickets.

The sisters are studying French in Paris and came to Germany last weekend in a rented car. As tourists, they were not involved in the official U.S. ban which prohibits American government personnel from producing identification at the demand of East German border guards.

Claim Bodies Of Accident Dead

TOKYO (AP)—The Japanese cities of Oita and Beppu were plunged into gloom today as relatives and parents came to claim the bodies of 31 passengers killed in a one-coach train buried under tons of mud and rock.

The accident was the worst in a series which swept the main islands of Kyushu and Shikoku in the wake of torrential rains. National police said they left 44 dead, 38 missing and 45 injured.

Many of the train victims were high school students. Thirty-six others were injured, 12 seriously. Police said rain loosened a 50-foot embankment.

Advises Knowing Cancer Quacks

NEW YORK (AP)—Learning to spot and stay away from cancer quacks is second in importance only to cancer itself, the president of the American Medical Association said Thursday.

The AMA's department of investigation has one of the largest files of cancer nostrums, gadgets and machines said Dr. Leonard W. Larson.

"From these, plus our analysis of hundreds of proposed cancer drugs, we have developed a picture of the cancer quack," he asserted in a speech for the annual dinner of the American Cancer Society.

No Names On The Town's Ballot

KEOTA, Iowa (AP)—There won't be any names on the ballot here for the Nov. 7 election of city officers.

The reason: All the candidates for town offices forgot to have their nomination papers signed and notarized, as required by law.

City Clerk Jack McFadden said the mistake wasn't discovered until too late to remedy the situation. He said the citizens will have to elect a mayor and five councilmen by write-in ballot.

IMPERIAL OF 1962

IMPERIAL LE BARON FOUR-DOOR SOUTHAMPTON

A forthright challenge to everyone who plans to buy a luxury car this year

In a few days, you will receive a personal invitation to drive a 1962 Imperial. Not the usual vague "see your dealer" . . . but a specific challenge to compare your own car with the best Imperial we've ever built.

At your convenience, a dealer in your area will deliver a 1962 Imperial to you . . . for a thorough comparison-tour that you conduct by yourself.

We believe anyone planning to invest from five to seven thousand dollars in an automobile is entitled to the unembroidered facts right from the car itself.

Naturally, our dealers explain the advantages of torsion-bar suspension . . . tell you how the alternator supplies current even while the engine idles . . . quote engineering data on the superior performance of our new transmission . . . and answer any other question you ask about Imperial.

But you can find out only so much about Imperial by mere listening. To give the facts substance and meaning you must drive and compare.

So, when our invitation arrives, take us up on it. It obligates you not at all. And whether you eventually buy an Imperial or not, you'll never forget that once you drove a car which handled and accelerated and thrilled as a great car is supposed to.

R.S.V.P. Even though our invitation may somehow miss you, an Imperial comparison-tour may easily be arranged by writing on your letterhead to: General Manager, Imperial Division, 12200 East Jefferson, Detroit, Michigan.

Lion In The Hills

By JOHN B. PRESCOTT

CHAPTER 30
"Fred McMahon's come to see you, Alec," Claude Temple said. "I don't want to talk to him," Alec replied.

"I know how you feel, son," Claude said. "But he's got a side to the coin, too. Don't forget, Rusty fed on Vixen."

"But he didn't kill her," Claude said. "No. And Fred knows that, too, now—and maybe before. But you know how he is about his land and his stock and what might have been a threat to them."

Alec knew, but he wondered that Claude should try to soften Fred McMahon in his eyes.

But there wasn't time to wonder much about it, for beside the cabin stood the rickety old truck, and on the way side the two McMahons, Fred and Mildred, were standing with Sam Fellows.

They had been talking, likely about him, for now they fell silent as Alec approached them. Alec pushed up a little mound of mud with his shoe, until Mildred McMahon smiled and touched his arm.

"Hello, Alec; you've grown," she said. "It's a long time repaying your call, but the winter was long. Getting on toward lemons again, though."

"That's so," Alec said. "There was quiet again, and Fred McMahon spoke next."

"I bring you something," he said, while his hard, blue eye and his milky-white blind eye chipped alike at Alec. "I don't care about your lion. I hired his killing, and I'd do it again, for I've been at war with all that preys on me for sixty years. But Shivers told me how you clumb in the tree with the beast to shield it; and it seemed to me that a man that would do that deserved something."

He paused there, but it was less a pause than a calling up of reserves, a summoning of strength, to go on.

"So I bring you Vixen's foal, her new horse-colt. I'd not worry much about the little thing in your care."

That was all. Like a sprung steel trap, Fred McMahon's mouth closed.

Alec slowly began to understand what had happened. In his way, Fred McMahon had come to make amends, had offered him Vixen's foal. But no young horse-colt could replace Rusty in his love and affections; nor could such a gift alter his view of Fred McMahon.

Yet Alec stood hesitant, knowing that he must say something in reply, but not knowing just what.

Then Sam spoke, the words falling into his ear, unheard by the others.

"Now's the time to be kind, son," he said. "Accept it."

Hearing, Alec slowly began to nod his head, but yet knowing why, but sensing something in the mystery of Sam's remark.

"Thank you," he said clearly. "Thank you very much."

The old man jerked his head. He scowled and glared and stood up fighting-proud and higher than ever in his great mass and height; and yet there was a hint of something come undone inside him, for his movement, as he turned, was blind and unseeing—and, that he go right, Mildred McMahon took his arm and gentled him to the truck and into it.

Watching, Alec's awareness grew sharper, and the dilapidated truck, together with the archaic clothing worn and washed and pressed beyond true shape or color, now set the McMahons in a new perspective. He'd sensed it once before at Battle Mesa, though obscurely.

"Why, they're poor!" he said. "It was so simple, once you saw it; it underlaid everything. He should have the colt back. He can't afford to give it."

"In one way, yes," Claude said. "But, in another, he can better afford to give it than keep it."

"It's all in how you look at it," Sam said. "And it was him doing the looking."

Then, when the truck had clattered into life and had thrashed across the clearing into the timber, Sam smiled and said: "And now you'd best go look at your colt. He's down there in my corral."

Alec went, though less because he wished to than because he felt he ought to.

And there, by itself, as neither Sandy nor Jock was in the corral, but out on picket, the colt stood on its long, spindly legs, looking forlorn and bewildered in the empty strangeness. And Alec saw that it was like the other, his sister, or half sister.

As he had that other time, he felt his heart quicken, but as then, too, he remembered Rusty once more, and he felt the same twinge of disloyalty.

Still, he might as well say hello. Going around to the gate, he let himself in and, closing it, stood quietly just inside for a moment.

From the center, where it stood, the colt watched his every move, its ears aimed his way and its muzzle raised to sample every air current. Doubtful and apprehensive, the dark eyes watched him move their way; yet the small horse stood its ground and waited and, when he drew close, thrust out its head toward him, and the velvet muzzle pressed at his side, asking that it be touched and caressed.

And Alec, as his hand and fingers found the sea-shell ears, weaved their way through the blue-black mesh of mane and felt the warm life pulse beneath the hide, felt also the ague of trembling that dwelt deep within, and he thought, surprised, why, he's afraid.

"It's all right," he said aloud, while his hand stroked the neck. "Nothing's going to hurt you here. You're all by yourself here, alone."

And then he stopped. The spoken word loomed large in his mind.

"Alone," he said, and he looked around again, and then beyond to Claude and Sam, who stood yet as they had when he'd left them, very still, very small.

Of a sudden the aloneness of the colt, that he now understood, assumed another and new level of meaning—an aloneness that he sensed as the common, true enemy, suffered differently by all kinds and all conditions of creatures.

While he'd been lost and lonely for Rusty, it was not aloneness. It was not the aloneness of Claude, who must live out his life in the corrosive knowledge of one moment's failure, one moment's lapse. Or the aloneness of Sam, who had burned through his youth and middle years and came now into full old age, his last hunt done.

Aloneness! It was the way of lions, a fact of their nature that he now grasped—and, in obedience to its directives, Rusty had made his descent into the Grand Canyon's awful abyss.

But it was the way of few other creatures—least of all men, who made it for themselves, all unknowing.

His eye went out again to Claude and to Sam, together, yet apart, each in his own aloneness, and he grew aware that he was walking through the gate, his pace quickening.

Then, just before he ran, he heard the small colt-horse whicker behind him, and he turned and saw it coming through the gate after him, and he called to it.

"Come on! Come on, you!" Not knowing its name, not yet having thought of one. "Hurry up! Let's go!"

The three leaps the colt came up with him; together, they ran toward Claude and Sam, Alec shouting in the closing dusk—"Wait! Wait!"—as if already they were leaving forever, as if time already was running out, as if, even now, he had not enough left in which to give as much of himself as Claude and Sam might ever want or need.

Underneath the scorched, blistered cliff, and below the slow-dying fires of sunset, he ran on beside the awkward-legged buckskin colt toward the two waiting men, the two men who loved him, and whom he loved in turn, the most on earth.

Freighter Sinks In Heavy Seas

KOBE, Japan (AP)—The 6,888-ton Japanese freighter Fukuyama Maru sank today in heavy seas churned up by Typhoon Billie 220 miles northeast of Saipan.

The American freighter Dolly Turman out of New Orleans took off her crew of 47 and transferred them to a U.S. destroyer which headed for Guam.

Children Served Floor De-Waxer

MALVERN, Pa. (AP)—Seven children became ill Thursday after drinking floor de-waxer mistakenly served to them as apple cider at a Halloween party.

The children, ranging in age from 6 to 8, were treated at Bryn Mawr Hospital and released. Hospital officials said there would be no lasting effect.

Making Effort To Inform Public

RALEIGH (AP)—Every effort is being made to inform Tar Heel voters on the $61.5 million in bonds which will be at stake in a Nov 7 election, Gov. Terry Sanford said Thursday.

A citizens committee, headed by veteran State Rep. John W. Umstead of Chapel Hill, is doing a good job in campaigning for the bonds, the governor told his news conference.

Sanford said no attempt has been made to link the bond program with his "quality education" program. Actually, he noted, proposals covered by the bonds originated in the Advisory Budget Commission during the previous administration of Luther Hodges, former governor and now commerce secretary. The 1961 Legislature authorized the bond election.

However, Sanford said he has accepted all the items in the bond package. "I feel they are all necessary, and I hope they all will pass," he added.

The governor said he is satisfied the voters will approve all the bonds.

Sanford gave a plug to a "torch for education" marathon run across the state, which students of state-supported college will conduct to drum up interest in the bond election.

Capital improvements at the 13 state-supported institutions of higher education would be provided by a major part of the bond money.

The western leg of the run will start at Murphy, and extend to Raleigh. From the east, the route will lead from Wilmington to Raleigh. Seven hundred students, each running one mile, will take part in the relay. It will end at the State Capitol in Raleigh on Nov. 3.

Khrushchev Says 'No' To Appeals

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev, in a letter made public today, rejected appeals of Western liberals and scientists to end nuclear testing.

He said the security of the Soviet Union against danger of the United States and West Germany defied that the Soviet Union bring its weapons arsenal up to date.

Khrushchev outlined his position in letters to British and American labor leaders and scientists. The letter was dated Oct. 24, the day after the biggest Soviet nuclear blast yet recorded.

Block Party Planned To Celebrate Paving

No, it won't be spontaneous combustion. It'll be spontaneous friendship that'll keep the folks on Warren Street warm in sub-40 degree weather tonight.

And, to add warmth, there'll be dancing in the streets.

The occasion? Tonight, which promises to sport the lowest temperatures yet this fall, is "get-acquainted night" on Warren Street. It's also celebration night, marking the completion of paving 543 feet of E. Third Street to link with continuous pavement the three-year-old hard surface dead-end Warren to the remainder of the city's paved system.

An anonymous phone caller unveiled plans for the celebration, originated and promoted by two ladies in the area. The caller said Mrs. Tom L. Broad-

21 Gun Salute!

Fifty-four years ago, the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County voted $100,000 in bonds to establish East Carolina College in Greenville.

Last week, a committee of eight determined citizens of Greenville, headed by W. M. Scales, Jr., and accompanied by Dr. Leo Jenkins, presented to a receptive and enthusiastic business community the early anticipated need for a greatly enlarged stadium to meet the expanding athletic program of our college in its rapid growth in stature and maturity among the acknowledged outstanding educational institutions of this country.

So effectively did this committee present the case, and so vigorously was it pursued, that in these few days they were able to secure pledges of over $212,000, surpassing their goal, from scores of civic-minded citizens whose genuine appreciation of our college prompted a generous and eager response. This is certainly a demonstration of the real community of interest which marks the relation of our college and our town.

We salute the people of this community, together with Booger Scales, Leo Jenkins, Reynolds May, Wally Howard, Howard Hodges, Con Lanier, Jim Little, Burt Aycock, and Dave Whichard for their tremendous accomplishment—for their acute vision in the plan's conception and for their skill in its remarkably successful, swift execution. This dramatic outpouring of regard for our college by our community is a symbol of the breadth of vision of our citizens and one more sign of a moving spirit of progress in a new day toward a greater Greenville and a finer country.

Farm Worker Is Executed Today In Gas Chamber

RALEIGH (AP)—Theodore Boykins, 31-year-old Negro farm worker, was put to death in the gas chamber at Central Prison today for raping and murdering a Duplin County white woman.

Boykin, who had told Prison Warden Kenneth B. Bailey Thursday night he was "sorry that it happened" and was "ready to go," was led into the tiny three-cornered death chamber shortly after 10 a.m.

At 10:02, flakes of cyanide were dropped by remote control into an acid, generating deadly hydrocyanic gas in the chamber where Boykin sat strapped in a chair. After Boykin had breathed the gas for 18 minutes, he was pronounced dead by Dr. Charles Flowers, prison physician.

Boykin, a slightly-built 5-foot-7 and weighing 150 pounds, told Bailey Thursday night he wanted nothing special for breakfast, "just scrambled eggs." Asked if he wanted anything, Boykin told Bailey he was smoking his last cigarette and wanted another pack, a soft drink and a cake.

Boykin, who had a fourth-grade education, became the 362nd person to be executed at Central Prison since the state took over
